7656-H

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 2 | $1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY — $1.50 IN CANADA | January 7, 1946

Copyright, 1945, The CIO NEWS

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

Solid for CIO: More than 20,000 World War II vets are on strike against General Motors. They're pounding freezing picket lines like this one in N. Y. City. For what vets think, see pages 6-7.

Photos by Marian Hille

THOMAS WARNS GM FIGHT AFFECTS U.S.' ENTIRE ECONOMY

PRES. R. J. Thomas of the CIO Auto Workers took to the air to tell the nation that the strike against General Motors is a fight to protect the U. S. economy, and financial and moral support for the GM workers increased as the walkout entered its seventh week.

"The fight that we in the CIO and especially in the Auto Workers are engaged in is to protect the entire economy of the nation from despair, depression and breadlines in the not too distant future," Thomas said over the American Broadcasting network.

"If we do not win the fight that is currently being waged upon us by the great General Motors Corp. as the protagonist of limited wage earnings and a limited national economy, there is trouble ahead for all of us in this nation," he continued. "Lowered living standards for millions of wage earners will strike at the very foundations of our national economy."

UAW lost one bout with radio interests but won another. Station WHK, Cleveland, announced that it was not renewing its contract with the Cleveland District Auto Council. Meanwhile the Cleveland Union Leader reported that the station would serve GM three times a week for a national program of comments.

The Mutual Broadcasting System said that it was offering use of its network free to UAW Vice Pres. Walter P. Reuther, head of the GM division of the union, to reply to Henry J. Taylor, hired this week by GM to make anti-labor broadcasts.

Reuther this week came to Washington to confer with Chairman Lloyd K. Garrison of the GM fact-finding board, which was scheduled to make a report Jan. 3, but asked a few more days to complete its recommendations.

The Joint CIO Strike Committee of Greater New York was set up and was collecting money and food from unions and the public. A New Year's gift of more than $2,000 was sent to the strikers by the San Francisco Branch of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union, and in Tampa, Fla., members of the AFL Cigarmakers Union gave $150 after the NMU flooded the city with leaflets explaining the strike.

The committee to Aid Families of Genaral Motors Strikers was formed and included such nationally-known figures as Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, former U. S. Treasurer Morgenthau, Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, Chicago; Marine Col. Evans Carlson of Carlson's Raiders, and Walter White of the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

The Union for Democratic Action announced that over 1,000 GM stockholders, customers and servicemen have pledged their support to Ethel B. du Pont after she published an open letter to GM, urging the management to negotiate and open their books. A GM stockholder, Miss du Pont is a member of the powerful du Pont family which has controlling holdings in the corporations.

VETS BACK UAW STRIKE

"You backed us up over there—we back you up over here" will doubtless be one of the slogans on signs to be carried by ex-GIs throughout the country Jan. 12, when they show their solidarity with GM strikers on Veterans' Day.

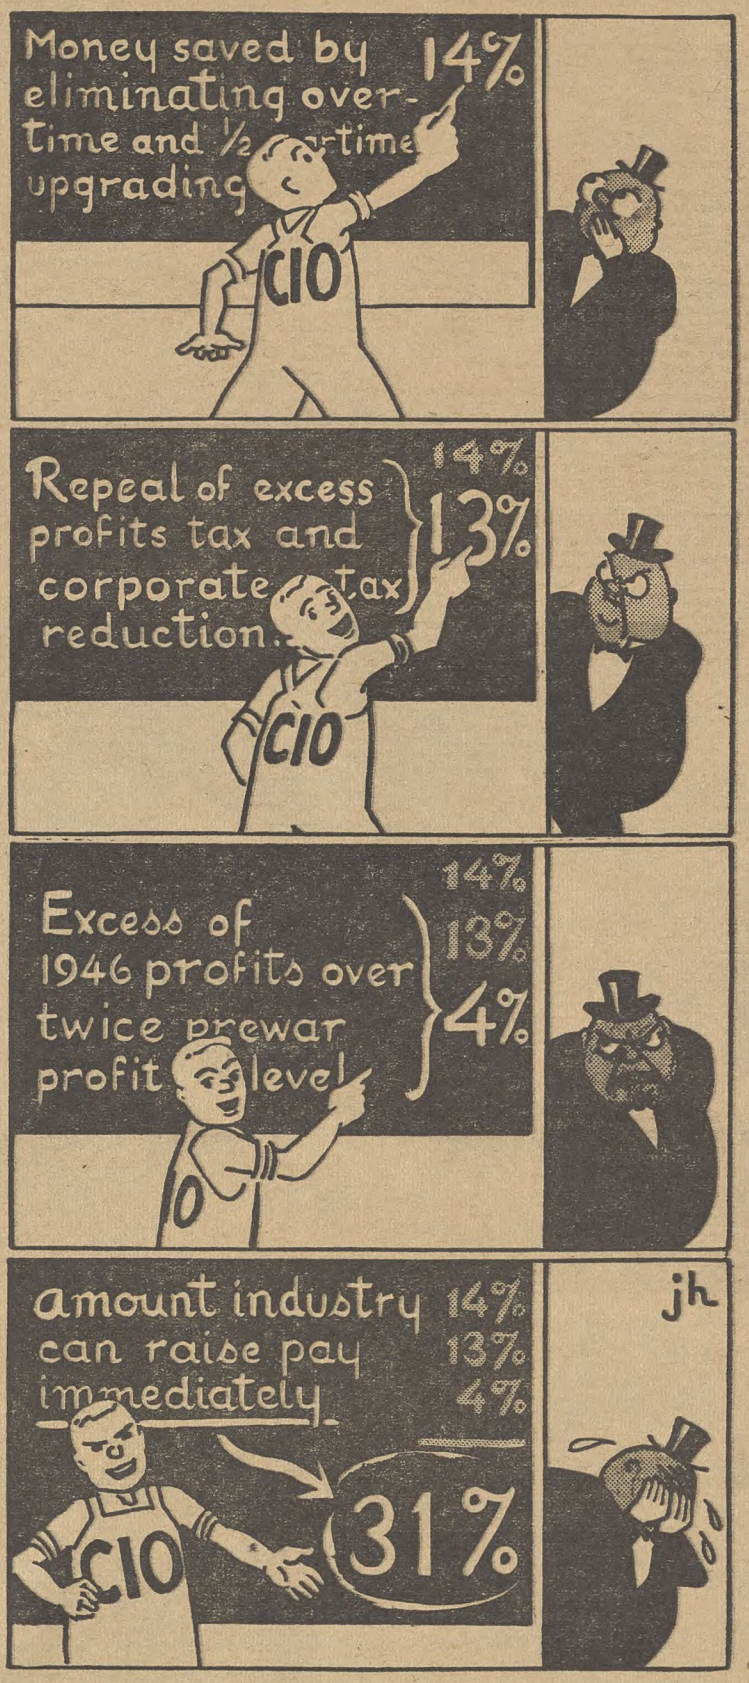
Veterans of both World Wars belonging to CIO unions as well as other progressives who served in the armed forces are expected to join in the demonstrations.

Chairman Clinton S. Golden of the CIO Veterans Committee has written to State, County and City CIO Councils urging that they cooperate with CIO Auto Workers locals and with other unions in making arrangements.

"The demonstration will be an antidote against the effort being made in some anti-labor circles to divide or separate veterans from non-veterans," Golden wrote. "Actually, aspirations and needs of both groups are the same; both groups are Americans who need the CIO organization and program."

WHY RAISE BASIC PAY

8. How Industry Can Pay the Bill



ANTI-UNION STAND DENIED BY WAR DEPT.

TRAINING of military personnel for strike-breaking, as revealed in a chart drawn up in the Chemical Warfare Service (CIO NEWS, Dec. 17), does not "represent present War Dept. policy," according to Sec. of War Patterson.

The chart, released by CIO President Murray, showed three "release lines" for smoke, tear and irritant gas, to be directed at "rioters halting war work" in front of an "industrial plant area." Writing to Secretary Patterson, Murray asked for an investigation "in order that if there are any such preparations being made by local Army officials they should be immediately discontinued."

In reply, Patterson said that the chart had been prepared "in connection with the training of military police battalions in one of the service commands prior to cessation of active hostilities."

"Incidents like this diagram may occur from time to time, but they do not represent present War Dept. policy," Patterson said. "The non-intervention of Federal troops in industrial disputes, as well as in other incidents of civilian affairs, is a settled policy."

Patterson pointed out that "troops are not to be used in any situation in aid of the civil authorities except when so directed by the President" or in disaster situations. He then added:

"Because of the Army's duties in the exception cases referred to above, where it may be called on in emergency, and also because of our duties in occupaiton of enemy areas overseas, it has been deemed advisable to give certain units a type of training designed to acquaint them with what is expected of them in such cases.

"This training, however, is not directed against labor organizations or against any particular group of persons or for any particular situation, and this fact is well understood by the service commanders in charge of the training."

In reporting the existence of the chart to Patterson, Murray said that "on several occasions in recent months information has come to my office" indicating that such training was being given, and that it looked "toward intervention in industrial disputes."

SET UP STEEL FACT BOARD

President Truman this week named a fact-finding board for the Steel industry, to deal with prices, profits and the $2-a-day wage demands of the CIO Steelworkers Union.

The President requested the Board to report its findings by Feb. 10.

The union, headed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, has set Jan. 14 as a strike date for 700,000 workers, following the industry's flat refusal either to grant a wage increase or even to continue negotiations unless the Office of Price Administration allows a steel price rise.

Truman ordered the OPA to report not later than Feb. 1 on whether a price rise would be "proper" now. A month ago OPA denied the industry a price rise under conditions then.

Named on the steel fact-finding board were:

Roger I. McDonough, associate justice, Utah Supreme Court.

Chief Justice James M. Douglas, Supreme Court, Missouri.

Nathan P. Feinsinger, public member of the expired War Labor Board and a professor at the University of Wisconsin.

Feinsinger was chairman of the WLB panel which made findings of fact in the 1944 dispute between the Steelworkers Union and 86 basic steel firms.

CIO-AFL UNITY IN STAMFORD

CIO-AFL unity against a boss' attempt to smash a union featured a one-day walkout at Samford, Conn., this week. The walkout amounted to virtually a general strike, with all but a few essential services shut down.

Object of the city-wide demonstration was to force the Yale & Towne Mfg. Co. to grant the AFL Machinists Union a union shop and a 30% wage increase. The firm has been shut down since early November, and maintains that the only way it can "satisfactorily" operate is with an open shop.

Support for the Machinists' wage and union shop demands was voiced by the Conn. CIO Council, which also protested Republican Governor Raymond E. Baldwin's use of state police in a picketing situation that has been peaceful.

NEW U.S. WAGE BOARD

PRESIDENT TRUMAN this week set up a new Wage Stabilization Board, following elimination of the Natl. War Labor Board last Dec. 31. The new board, with six members representing the public, industry and labor, will not handle labor disputes but will be responsible for approving wage increases which may affect rent or price ceilings, or costs to the Federal Government.

Heading up the WSB is W. Willard Wirtz, a Washington lawyer and former general counsel of the WLB. Vice chairman is Sylvester Garrett, former chairman of the regional WLB at Philadelphia.

Labor members are Carl J. Shipley, international representative of the CIO, and AFL Intl. Rep. Robert J. Watt. Both served as labor members of the WLB.

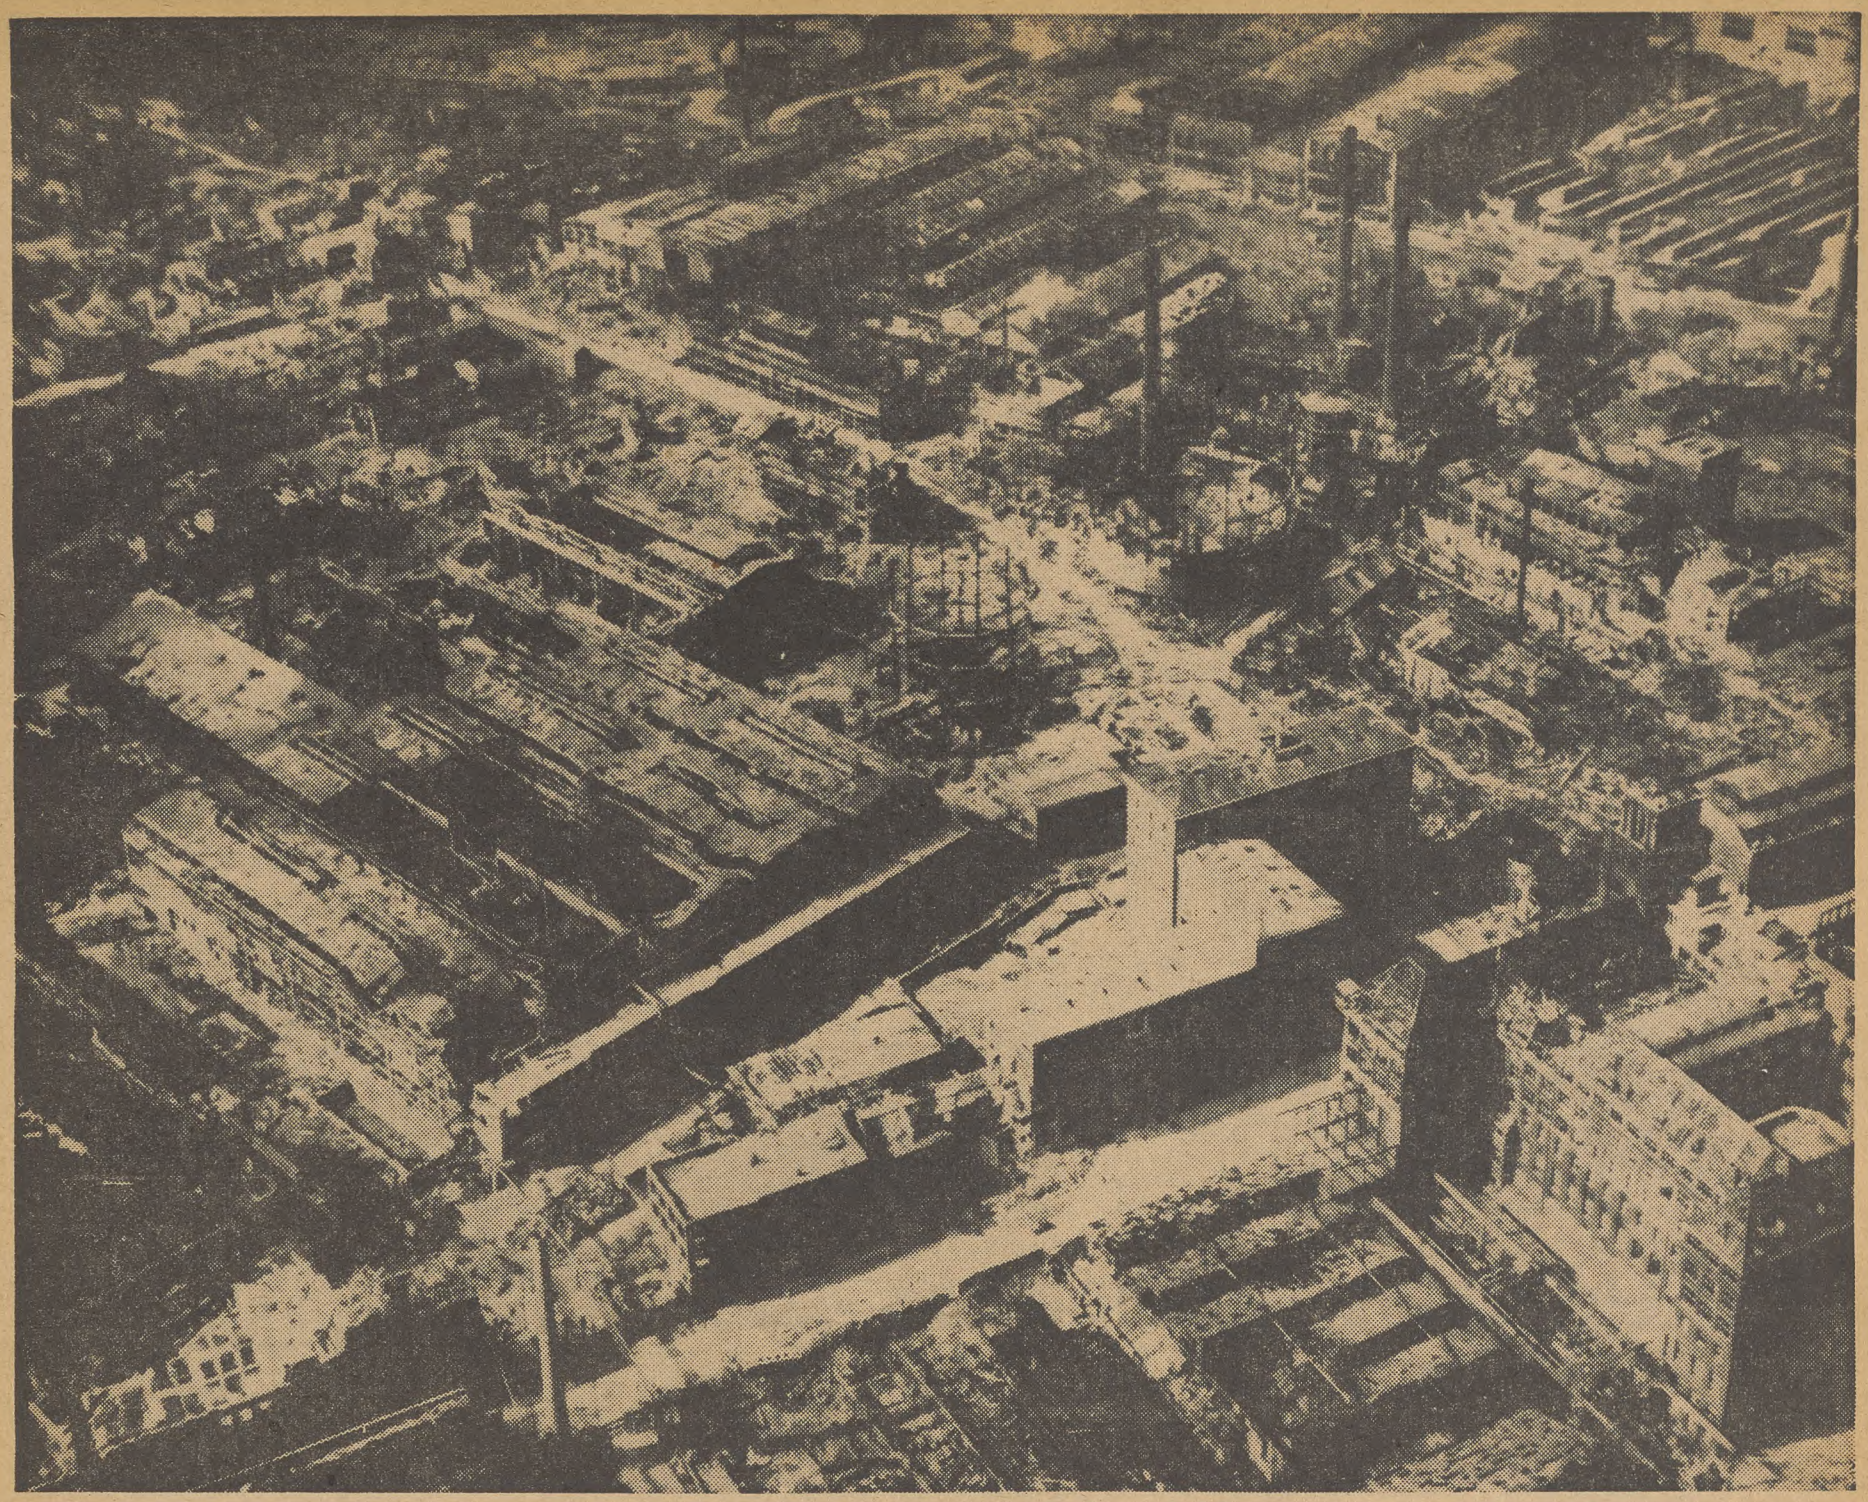
Representing industry on the new WSB are R. Randall Irwin and Earl Cannon. Irwin is an official of the Lockheed Aircraft Corp., Burbank, Calif., and Cannon is vice-president of the American Trucking Assn., Madison, Wis. Both were industry members of the WLB.

The Board will deal with applications for wage increases based on three principal conditions laid down by President Truman:

1. Increases to compensate for the rise in the cost of living in cases where straight-time hourly earnings are less than 33% more than they were in 1941.

2. Increases to correct pay inequities among plants.

3. Increases necessary to ease manpower shortages interfering with reconversion.



Pictures of Allied damage to this German steel plant at Essen give impression of total destruction of war-making potential. Fact is Germany still retains 80% industrial power at 1944 peak.

NEW BATTLE OF GERMANY

By C. W. FOWLER

(Second of a Series)

ONE of the most widely publicised stories out of the war against Nazi Germany was the picture of utter destruction of German industry by Allied bombing and subsequent invasion.

Thousands of photographs — like the one above of a steel plant in Essen—showed factories, mills and huge plants unroofed, their walls battered, their installations a tangle of twisted metal.

Thousands of American and British boys—and their comrades on the Eastern front—died to bring about this picture of destruction. There is no question that their heroism and sacrifice was a tremendous factor in the military defeat of Nazi Germany. Together with the rest of the armed forces that the anti-Nazi coalition threw at Germany, they brought the Nazi war machine to a halt in the sixth year of World War II.

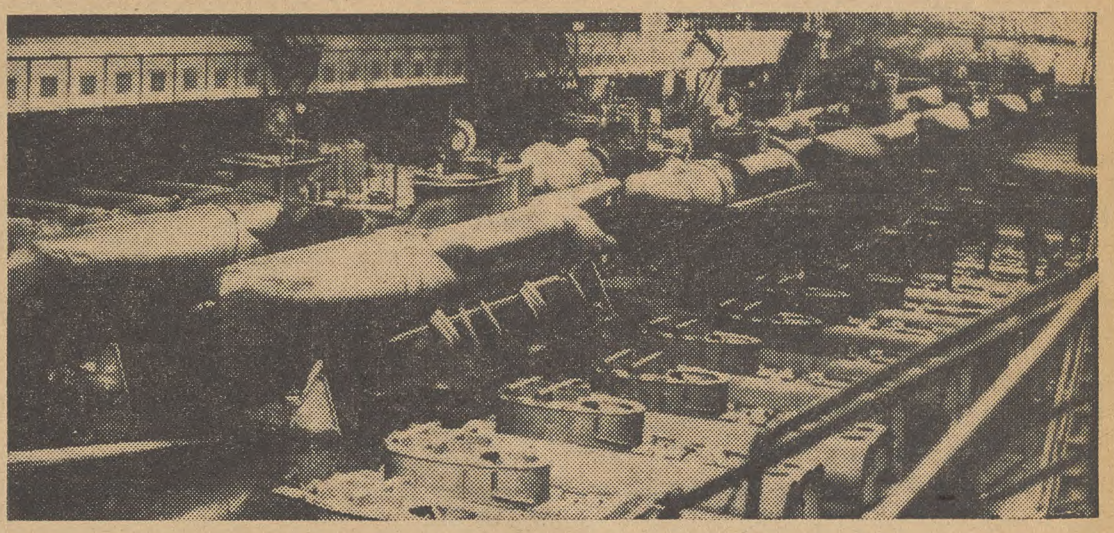
But there is a very serious question in the minds of qualified observers that the 1939-45 pounding of German industry has been sufficient to deprive German militarism of the ability to make a new world war.

Current newspaper reports that German industry is today running at seven or five or even less per cent of capacity would seem to give the lie to such a statement. Actually, the potential is still there, no matter how low the level of current operation—which is due not to destruction but primarily to lack of coal production and transportation.

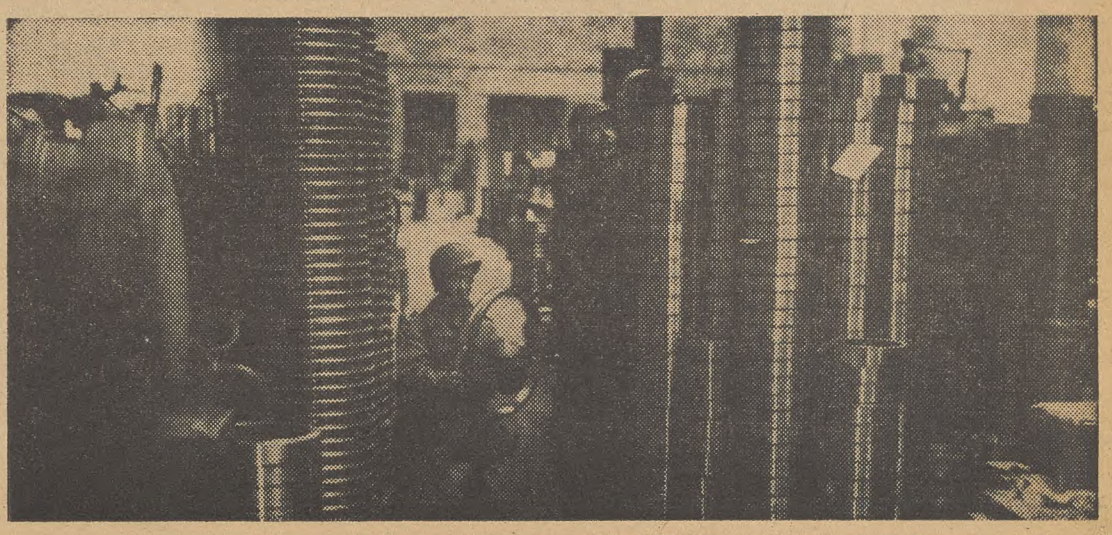
According to U. S. Army studies, not more than 20 to 25% of German industry was knocked out in the war. Yet the 75% that is left, together with capacity that can be repaired in one year, exceeds the total of German war industry potential that country possessed when it started the war in 1939.

Further, German arms production increased several fold between 1942 and 1945, during the heaviest period of bomb attacks.

(Continued on Page 10)



Deep underground plants made German midget subs. Over 100 were found in this bomb-proof factory. They can be made again for new wars of conquest, for the "glory" of Germany.



Yanks examine ball-bearing races found in German arms factory. Hundreds of plants like this can be readied for war work again.

CIO LEADS THE FIGHT

The CIO starts on the second decade of its existence, leading as ever in the workers' struggle.

Ever since its beginning as a small committee toward the end of 1935, the CIO has been in the thick of struggle, always pioneering and leading in the fight for better conditions for American working people.

First it was the struggle for industrial organization of the mass-production industries, to lay the basis for a real labor movement by unionizing millions of previously unorganized workers.

Along with this went the struggle for higher wages, shorter hours, seniority rights, vacations with pay. And as millions of workers joined the CIO ranks, improved conditions of every kind were won not only for them but for all of American labor.

Time after time, the CIO unions have set the pace and established the pattern for better conditions. They have borne the heat of the battle, and all of the workers have benefited from their victories.

During the pre-war depression, it was the CIO that held the line against wage cuts and union-busting and led the fight for jobs and security for the unemployed.

On the political field, it was the CIO that pioneered in building for the first time an aggressive and effective labor political movement that has raised labor to a new status in American national life.

When the war broke out, the CIO was in the forefront of the patriotic effort for all-out production and everything for victory.

And now again, at the start of 1946, the CIO is far in the lead of labor's struggle—this time to maintain the workers' take-home pay and, by raising wages, to lay a solid basis of mass purchasing power for the whole nation's prosperity.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

DID you ever see a dog bite its own tail?

Well, not often. A dog may chase its tail, but it's usually too smart to dig its teeth into it.

The Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, on the other hand, and some of its disciples . . .

But I'm getting ahead of my story. I was going to say that the NAM owes much to the CIO. In fact, it seems to have stolen its whole legislative program from the CIO, by just coming out against everything the CIO is for.

★ ★ ★

The last issue of the NAM News is full of the CIO's legislative program and activities.

But after a careful reading, we are forced to conclude that this does not indicate any sudden conversion to CIO's point of view.

On the contrary, the assumption seems to be that to say the CIO is for something is sufficient to arouse manufacturers to a frenzy of opposition.

There is also a distinct note of petulance at the idea of the CIO trying to influence Congress in any direction.

This is regarded as poaching on NAM's jurisdiction, and bashful manufacturers are urged "not to hesitate to express their own views" to Congress.

★ ★ ★

But to return to the dog and its tail, the bulk of the American daily press is so close to the NAM in its editorial likes and dislikes, that one sometimes wonders if this resemblance is coincidental or congenital.

And, once in awhile, it is so eager to snap at anything looking like a labor attitude that it even bites itself.

For instance, the Twohey Analysis of Newspaper Opinion reports that most of the press at once jumped to the support of President Truman's anti-strike "fact-finding" legislation.

"Dislike of labor leaders and their opposition to the plan stimulated support of the plan," the Analysis declares.

But after this support for the Truman proposal had reached the "hysteria point," the press suddenly realized that "fact-finding" might expose some facts about profits.

There immediately ensued what the Twohey Analysis calls a "highly unusual trend shift." In a single week, editorial support of the Truman plan tobogganed from 77% to 24%, and then to 12%, while opposition rose from 8% to 24%, and then to 65%, and "condemnation of labor opposition practically ceased."

★ ★ ★

We must warn the NAM and NAMish publishers that opposition to everything labor favors is not an infallible guide through life, even for them. It may often place them in the fix of a dog biting its own tail, or a man cutting his nose to spite his face.

For instance, the CIO strongly favors pleasant weather and is bitterly opposed to disease.

Also, the chief purpose of CIO's economic and legislative program is to promote national prosperity—a condition which has profit-making appeal even for NAM members.

★ ★ ★

We gather, from reading NAM literature, that it opposes (because labor favors) the following:

Substantial wage increases; full employment legislation; the 65c minimum wage bill; continuation of OPA price controls; a permanent FEPC; national housing legislation; a Missouri Valley Authority; the equal-pay-for-women bill; expanded Social Security; health insurance, and UNO control of atomic power.

By the same token, the NAM favors (because labor opposes) any legislation that will hurt unions.

★ ★ ★

If the NAM should have its way on all these issues, it could claim a great victory over labor, and some of its members might make some quick and fantastic profits out of sweatshop wages, broken unions, unemployed workers competing for jobs, and inflationary price increases.

But how about the prospects of doing business in a country where lowered wages, unemployment, inflation and social insecurity destroy the people's purchasing power and lead straight to general depression?

Might not even the most militant NAMer find such a victory over labor more painful than defeat?

As for the rest of us, let's not wait till the NAM sees a great light, if it ever does. But let's, rather, go ahead fighting for a sound program for national prosperity, whether the NAM likes it or not.

VETERANS CARRY ON

One of the worst insults ever directed against America's fighting men was the assumption made by some anti-union employers that veterans might be used to break strikes and undermine labor conditions.

Every such attempt, however, has failed miserably to date and America's veterans, as might have been expected, have proved to be the most loyal and active of unionists.

The UAW strikers against General Motors include more than 20,000 veterans of World War II. A feeble attempt to use one or two of them to break the workers' ranks fizzled like a damp squib, exciting only scorn from the striking veterans.

An earlier poll conducted by the employers' magazine, Iron Age, showed that 90% of returning servicemen favor unions. And most of those who have already returned to industry have borne this out by at once taking their place in the forefront of labor union ranks.

After all, men who have fought and licked the world's most powerful dictatorships are least of all likely to tremble before domestic industrial dictators, or to allow themselves to be pushed around as pawns in a campaign to undermine American wage and living standards.

They are going to carry on the good fight, in labor's ranks, for higher wages, full employment, democratic progress, and a country worthy of all the sacrifices they have made for it.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer
Vice-President

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson
S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum
Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 January 7, 1946 No. 2

MURRAY URGES AID IN CLOTHING DRIVE

CIO support to the "Victory Clothing Collection," aimed at collecting 100,000,000 garments for the millions of war victims in Europe and Asia, was pledged this week by President Murray in a statement which said:

"CIO men and women have always worked for international understanding and good will. In this year's Victory Clothing Collection they see an opportunity to foster good will by giving clothing to fit the physical needs of the liberated people, and by writing letters to provide the moral uplift necessary to those who have endured so much.

"As they have in the past, CIO men and women will give generously, not only with contribution of used clothing, but with their time, their services, and whatever else is necessary to put this drive over the top. They are aware of the fact that this newly liberated world still lacks freedom from want. The Victory Clothing Collection can help win that freedom."

Goals of the drive are 100,000,000 pieces of clothing, bedding, shoes, etc., together with letters of solidarity to the recipients. Clothing can be taken to local police and fire stations, city halls, churches, union halls, and similar public places.

Typical of the response from war-destitute workers is this letter received from a small town in France:

"We are very happy to have received your gift of clothing and we thank you very much, as we have been bereft of all our linen, furniture and other belongings. This is not gay at our age—63 and 69—after working all our lives."

★ ★ ★

Ask Voice In United Nations

Ending a two-day session—its first—the executive bureau of the World Federation of Trade Unions meeting in Paris this week resolved to place its demands for representation on the United Nations Organization before the UNO meeting in London, Jan. 10.

In a dispatch from Paris, Allied Labor News reports that the demand for a labor voice in the UNO will be presented to every government which has ratified the UNO charter, as well as at the Jan. 10 meeting.

The executive bureau also appointed WFTU General Sec. Louis Saillant to go to Berlin early this month to give the Allied Control Commission the views of world labor on the reconstruction of German trade unions. Another delegation is going to Greece in Feb. and a third, containing American representatives, will go to Japan and China in the interests of rebuilding labor unions in those countries.

The bureau considered the setting up of industrial departments in the WFTU, which have been the subject of lengthy negotiations with existing secretariats such as the Intl. Federation of Transport Workers.

Members at the first meeting were Saillant, Sir Walter Citrine of the British TUC, Mikahil Tarasov and M. Fallin of the Soviet Council of Trade Unions, Leon Jouhaux of the French CGT, Chu Hsueh-fan of the Chinese Assn. of Labor and Walter Schevenels of the recently dissolved Intl. Federation of Trade Unions. Next meeting is set for Feb. 28.

Finds Polish Labor United

Polish labor is united and firmly backs the present government, Leo Krzycki, vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and first U. S. delegate to the postwar convention of the Polish unions, said this week.

As reported in a special dispatch to The CIO NEWS from the Soviet Information Bureau, Krzycki told Soviet newspaperman Alexander Karpov:

"For the first time Polish labor is solidly united. Six hundred delegates represented over a million trade unionists at the convention held in Nov. Both President Beirut (of Poland) and Prime Minister Osubka Morawski and most of the members of the Polish cabinet attended the congress."

Polish trade unionists expressed admiration for the Red Army for liberating Poland, Krzycki said, and the conviction that friendship between the USSR and Poland would continue.

Krzycki visited Soviet factories in Moscow, Leningrad, Stalingrad and Saratov, where he was particularly impressed, according to the Soviet dispatch, by facilities for child care and health attached to the plants.

Wants Fund To Aid USSR

Moved to action by reading The CIO NEWS articles on destruction in the Soviet Union (Nov. 13, 19), M. L. Amos of Salina, Kans., has publicly offered to contribute $100 to a fund for purchasing lathes to help rehabilitate Soviet industry.

Mr. Amos's offer, made some weeks ago, is contingent on similar contributions of $100 from each of 100 other contributors. In his letter making the offer, Mr. Amos said that he had been moved to do it by articles of The CIO NEWS Editor Len De Caux, who went to the Soviet Union with the CIO delegation that visited there after the Paris meeting of the World Federation of Trade Unions in Oct.

These victims of German-Japanese fascism need your help in clothing their nakedness. Above, men liberated from a Nazi concentration camp. Below, left, a Greek child, and right, a little Chinese girl. Give to your local "Victory Clothing Collection." (See adjoining column).

1 More than 20,000 World War II veterans are on strike against General Motors. Vets of both wars (above) picket GM's Fleetwood plant, in Detroit. Ex-GIs who are members of the CIO Auto Workers Union have proved that the alleged wrath of GIs against labor—whipped up by the employer press and corporations during the war—was as phoney as a Tokyo Rose broadcast. Thus far the only expressions of indignation from ex-servicemen have resulted from efforts to mobilize them as strike-breakers. Two back-to-work pleaders—a non-combat Air Corps officer in Flint and a Ku Kluxer in Detroit—have drawn nothing but a lot of five-finger rejections.

2 (Left) GM striker Edmund Rogowski made 64 missions as a 12th Air Force aerial gunner. Now he has plenty of time for bull sessions with his wife and the kid brother. Rogowski, who has two brothers in service, was shot down once in Italy. The first thing he did after discharge was get married. That used up most of his mustering-out pay. When he entered the army, he was making $1.10 an hour as a vertical lathe operator; when he returned, he got $1.14. Ruth, his wife, wants to know why vets can't draw unemployment compensation. So do 20,000 other GM veterans.

3 Toivo Lakanen (1
Detroit, and Jose was a machinist's m

D-DA

St

ANY General Motor place to get a p
War II.

We soldiers who went Omaha and Utah beach ways remember those w dered if anyone had g heaps alive. Here in strikers who told me hov

They are Cass Alesiak worked at the Chevrol before the war. Their
In the Army they serv outfit together, made th came back to the Chevro hadn't changed much. T per hour.

Cass and John are ty strikers who are vetera typical as paratroopers man who ever had to li a Paris bistro knows who won the war.

The 82nd Airborne Di an outfit that believed i after being in on the in Italy and France.

One trooper who mad
Paul Brooks, a UAW me
Co. His machinegun squ on the bridge near Caren in Normandy and held it infantry. This, according tion that Maj. Gen. Ja
Paul, made possible the beachheads into a single f

Cass and John didn't they got back to Detroi were in that Army. All t on the night before D-D into gliders and went Front. By this time the Anzio under their belts.
knew enough about inva
and scared.

Cass' glider smashed tried to land in a cow
Eglise. That ended D-Da
Cass and five others cra still fit for combat. The chinegun post 400 yards

Cass, who was telling of Foreign Wars hall n said that he didn't have a was happening to buddy J akanen (1), chairman, UAW veteran's committee at Chevrolet Gear & Axle, and Joseph Velosky, co-chairman, UAW Intl. Veteran's Committee. Lakanen hinist's mate, Velosky an automatic rifleman with the 1st Infantry Division.

4 John Krawetz (1) and Cass Alesiak, former members of the 82nd Airborne Div., look at a Yank photo of Omaha Beach, Normandy. When their gliders swung over the beach the night before D-Day, it was alive with ack-ack. They're buddies again — against General Motors.

DAY—GM STYLE

Story by DeWitt Gilpin • Photos by Mike Zarro

eral Motors picket line is a good o get a personal slant on World who went up the hills that overlook Utah beaches in Normandy will al- ber those wrecked gliders. We won- one had got out of those twisted Here in Detroit I met two GM told me how they did it.

ass Alesiak and John Krawetz, who he Chevrolet Gear and Axle plant ar. Their pay was $1.12 per hour. they served in the same combat r, made three invasions, and finally the Chevrolet plant together. Things ed much. Their pay was still $1.12

ohn are typical of the 20,000 UAW are veterans—that is, they are as aratroopers can be. Any infantry- er had to listen to a paratrooper in ro knows that they are the guys war.

irborne Division, in particular, was believed in itself. It got that way on the invasions of Africa, Sicily, nce.

who made the 82nd so good was a UAW member from Murray Body inegun squad took squatter's rights near Carentan behind German lines and held it against Jerry tanks and , according to the Silver Star cita- j. Gen. James "Slim" Gavin gave ssible the joining of our Normandy o a single front.

ohn didn't know about Paul until to Detroit. That's the way things Army. All that Cass and John knew before D-Day was that they loaded and went off to make the Second s time they already had Sicily and their belts. Which meant that they about invasions to be damn good smashed into a tree when they in a cow pasture near St. Mere ended D-Day for most of the crew. others crawled out of the wreckage ombat. They got it. A German ma- 400 yards away saw to that.

vas telling me this at the Veterans ars hall near the Chevrolet plant, idn't have any idea at the time what to buddy John.

John, who was in the bull session, said that what happened to him should only happen to a scab. His glider got about 30 miles off course and crashed near Caen. The British didn't take this town until two months later, and the Germans there weren't in any mood to let John and the other Yanks wait around.

Eleven days and a lot of shooting later, John finally beat his way back to the 82nd. There he found Cass at a first aid station getting a shrapnel wound on his hand dressed. As they remember, their reunion didn't produce any epigrams. Cass said, "I thought you'd got it," and John replied, "No, still kicking."

The 82nd Division had played a big part in changing the face of Europe, but nobody had changed General Motors.

$1.12 an hour," said Cass. "What do they expect you to live on—K-rations?"

"And have things gone up," said John. "Look at this suit—almost a month's mustering-out pay."

Cass had another gripe. "General Hershey's no 'Slim Jim' Gavin," he said. "Hershey's super-seniority gives me the right to earn an iron cross by kicking some other guy out of a job."

John said that there had been plenty of jobs when they needed tanks and guns. "But because GM wanted a strike," he added, "we can't even draw unemployment compensation. There's nothing 'super' about that deal."

Everyone blew their tops for a while, and then the conversation shifted to the nicer things about war—the Moulin Rouge in Paris and that joint near the railroad station in Brussels. Then Toivo Lakanen, a Navy man from the New Orleans with seven battle stars, came in from the picket line and the talk went back to the strike.

"Did you ask them what they think of the strike now that they've won the war?" asked Toivo, who is a man who knows that no one from the 82nd ever suffers from inhibitions.

"Just aonther D-Day," said John. "Do you think GM can dish anything out that an 82nd man can't take?"

"Well," said Toivo, "I thought maybe you could use a little help from the Navy."

5 Carl A. Rogers, former 2nd Infantry Div. doughboy, now a UAW committeeman at Cadillac Motor, checks his dues with "Jerry" Gawura. Rogers, whose unit won a Presidential Citation in the Battle of the Bulge, had his GI career shortened by a motar shell, stopping von Runstedt.

6 Co-Chairman Velosky (right) of UAW Vets' Committee, shows former Yank correspondent DeWitt Gilpin (center) paratroopers' iron rations, says GM wages don't make for very much better eating at home.

Tomorrow's Citizens — By Rose H. Alschuler

FATHER'S DAY IS EVERY DAY

No one else can take a father's place in the family. His love and emotional support are a big factor in children's sound development. The father's attitude toward his wife is seen in the boy's attitude toward his mother and later toward all women, particularly toward his family. Fathers who invest love, fairness, understanding and confidence in their children are sure to get big returns on their investment.

Lib. of Congress—Vachon for F. S. A. Copyright 1946, Natl. CIO NEWS.

Making Eating Count

'BROTHER, CAN YOU SPARE A POUND?'

Prepared by Nutrition Service, D. C., Chapter, American Red Cross

DOES your "paunch" interfere with your "punch"? Do you bulge in the middle even when you're sitting down?

There is no truth in the belief that a man should expect to get heavier as he gets older. Maybe this is just an alibi for indulging in a love of eating. The life insurance companies don't subscribe to the fat and forty idea. They won't insure a man who is excessively overweight. They figure that after 50 birthdays every extra pound means 1 per cent less on your life expectancy. If you are more than 15 to 20 pounds overweight, better see your doctor.

As we get older we tend to give up sports and take to sitting instead. This lessens the need for food but doesn't change the appetite. We continue to eat the same amount as we did in our younger, more athletic days. Result—this extra food gets stored as fat.

Statistics show that trouble with blood pressure, heart and kidneys lines right up behind overweight. Before 30 years a few pounds overweight is good insurance. After 30 the best health goes with a few pounds underweight.

How can you tell if you have more pounds draped over your muscles than you need? A simple method is based on your height. An average man allows 116 pounds for his first five feet and adds five pounds for each inch thereafter. The big-boned man starts at 122 and the small-boned man at 110. Ten to 20 per cent plus is allowed for individual differences.

If you need to take off a few pounds or keep them from piling up, you should know about calories. Calories aren't magic! They're only a measure of the energy we get from food. A pound of fat in the ice box is worth 4,000 calories. A pound of fat on your middle is 4,000 calories, too. Twenty pounds of overweight means 80,000 calories you didn't work off—a big reserve of energy but NOT of minerals and vitamins. If you're in good health, you don't need a trick diet to reduce. Cut off 1,000 calories a day and you will use up your reserve fat at the rate of a pound every three and a half days. If it sounds slow, remember it's safe.

You still need your minerals and vitamins. Get them in good meals like these:

BREAKFAST—Fruit or juice; egg or cereal; slice of toast or roll; milk, coffee.

LUNCH—Lean meat or fish, green vegetable, cold slaw, slice of dark bread, piece of fruit, and a glass of milk.

DINNER—Meat (no gravy), baked or boiled potato, a green vegetable, raw carrots or tomatoes, a slice of dark bread, a dessert—either fruit or a small serving of pudding or pie—and a glass of milk.

Count a pat of butter and a teaspoon of sugar at each of the three meals. This will give you about 1,800 to 2,000 calories a day, a reasonable variety of food and will help you get rid of that bulge.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

WLB DECISION BIG HELP IN EQUAL PAY FIGHT

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

THE War Labor Board recommendation won by the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of a general 4 cents an hour wage increase for women workers of General Electric and Westinghouse is an important step forward in the fight for equal pay for equal work.

Lloyd K. Garrison, chairman of the board, said UE proved "substantial differences" between rates for men's and women's jobs in both companies. The companies, he continued "virtually conceded that the differential could not be justified on the basis of job content."

To justify the special exploitation of women workers, factory owners have always claimed that women just came to work for pin money and did not need as high wages as men.

It is easy to answer that argument. Workers are not paid according to what they need in our economy. A single man is paid at the same rate as a married man with several dependents. But women work to support themselves and dependents or to supplement the inadequate wages of their husbands.

There is still a lot of that "pin money" thinking around. Some women's organizations have expressed resentment at the fact that public funds are used for child care centers, for instance. They don't understand that the vast majority of working mothers have no choice but to work. It would cost the community far more than the public contribution to child care centers to provide them with adequate financial assistance to enable them to stay home with their children.

There are plenty of people who think that women should stop working when jobs are scarce. That's another reflection of that worn-out myth that women don't really need jobs anyway.

As long as you have women's jobs with women's rates for them there's the danger that during times of unemployment those women's rates will become general.

Mr. Emmet, manager of the GE plant at Erie, Pa., said: "At present the average weekly earnings of the men working on our factory hourly paid operation is approximately $51 per week; and of our women on similar operations it is approximately $33.50 per week."

The WLB recommendations, if carried out, will cut down that differential. We'd like to see it eliminated altogether — not only in GE and Westinghouse but in all our plants.

That's why the CIO is backing the Pepper Equal Pay for Equal Work Bill. That bill would make possible the establishment of industry committees in each industry to study wage differentials between men and women and to recommend their elimination. It would establish the rate for the job as the principle which should govern wages.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1725-41 W. North Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7818

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

UAW Dir. Paul E. Miley, reports: UAW-CIO won an 88 majority of the employes of GM Truck and Coach Co. of Cincinnati. It is interesting to note that this overwhelming majority was secured in spite of the National GM strike which is over one month old. Rep. R. J. Quinlan was in charge.

George Craig, CIO Reg. Dir. Philadelphia, announces: Weaver Piano Co., York, Pa., CIO Furniture Workers 79, against 4; Carl Lieberknecht, Inc., Laurel Dale, Pa., CIO Steelworkers 185, against 13.

George Brown, Dir. Org., IWA-CIO, announces: Friesan Box, Cutler City, Ore., CIO 14, no union 7: Fosbie, Montgomery, Ala., CIO 25, no union 3; Theiler Brothers, Camp Obenhoff, Mich., CIO 11, no union 7.

CIO Reg. Dir. Sam Sponseller, Cleveland, Ohio, reports: Hinde & Dauch Co., Sandusky, plant No. 2, CIO 69, against 37.

CIO Reg. Dir. Carey E. Haigler, Birmingham, advises: New York-Rocquemore Gravel Co., CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers 25, no union 8. Swift & Co., cotton oil plant, CIO Packinghouse Workers 45, no union 1. CIO Reps. Robert McGrude and K. G. Ingle, UGCCW Rep. Howard King, and UPWA Rep. Ada Lee Howell were the representatives responsible for the showing made by CIO unions in these elections.

Robert C. Edwards, Dir. Org. PJ&NWA-CIO, reports: Union Plate & Wire Co., Attleboro, Mass., CIO 82, against 67. Intl. Rep. Alfred Bregnard, working out of CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Carmichael's office was in charge. Hugette Jewelry Co., N.Y.C., employing 70, agreed to certification and representation of the CIO as bargaining agency. The entire staff, including Brothers Gonzales, Mirian Sample and William Hopps working under Asst. Dir. Lou Koleta, participated. Norland Toy Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., employing about 70, has agreed to certification of the CIO. Participating in the organization of this shop were Bill Hopps, Milton Gordon and Asst. Dir. Lou Koletka.

* * *

EVENTS OF THE DAY! The GM strike continues. The Steelworkers are set for the Nation's largest tie up on Jan. 14. The Elec. Radio and Machine Workers have taken strike action with an overwhelming vote of support. The Packinghouse Workers have set their strike date for Jan. 16.

The corporations involved have made unprecedented profits during the war and are now resisting the Unions' demands, in their efforts to hold on to these unwarranted profits extracted from the blood, sweat and tears of American soldiers, sailors and production workers. It is substantial wage increases now or panic and depression later.

The CIO wage program will assure the public a high purchasing power to the advantage of the farmers, small businessmen and the entire country. FORWARD WITH THE CIO!

During the latter part of December, the Paperworkers met in Cleveland and report their organization in a healthy condition, showing continuous growth, and laid plans for future activity. The Railroad Workers met this week, also in Cleveland, and they, too, have laid their plans for organizing drives in 1946.

200,000 CIO PACKINGHOUSE WORKERS TO STRIKE JAN. 16

A STRIKE of more than 200,000 members of the CIO Packinghouse Workers to back up their demand for a 25c an hour increase has been scheduled to start Jan. 16, Pres. Lewis J. Clark announced this week. The walkout will affect the five largest meat packing companies—Swift, Armour, Wilson, Cudahy and Morrell—as well as a number of smaller, independent plants.

Clark explained that the strike date is being announced out of consideration for the public and for the special marketing problems which will face livestock farmers when the companies will be unable to operate.

Packinghouse workers, one of the lowest paid groups in American industry, have not received a general wage increase since before Pearl Harbor, Clark said. "The only way they could meet the high living costs of the past four years was through excessive overtime work," he declared.

"The packers, however, are blunt in telling us that they intend to reduce the number of working hours in order to discontinue overtime payments." At present wages, packinghouse workers will earn $30 or less for a 40-hour week, Clark said.

The union is willing to accept an immediate 17½ cents an hour increase and negotiate the balance later when the general wage situation becomes clearer, he stated, but so far the highest offer made by any company is a 7½ cents an hour increase.

7,000 WU EMPLOYES VOTE TO WALK OUT

A STRIKE of 7,000 members of the CIO American Communications Assn. employed by Western Union was voted unanimously this week at a special meeting in New York City. Jan. 8 was set as date for the walkout. The action was taken in protest against a decision of the Natl. War Labor Board reducing the wage increases previously recommended by the N. Y. regional board. The decision was handed down just before the Natl. WLB went out of existence.

Joseph P. Selly, union president, declared that the National Board's directive was "deliberately misleading" in giving the impression that the revised wage order would give all the New York telegraph workers an average 12c an hour increase. Actually, he said, thousands of workers would not receive a cent under it. He accused the board of going out of its way to injure the N. Y. workers' economic interests.

The regional board's original recommendation, Selly said, provided for a 10c minimum increase for all N. Y. telegraph workers, with additional increases for many. Asserting that the union would hold to its demand that the company put the original order into effect, Selly said that the Jan. 8 strike date was set to give Western Union a chance to come to its senses.

Severance Pay In Steel Case Ordered

SEVERANCE pay for workers of five U. S. Steel subsidiaries represented by the CIO Steelworkers Union who were permanently laid off by the closing of less efficient plants was ordered by the Natl. War Labor Board shortly before it went out of existence Dec. 31.

The board also recommended that severance pay be given to workers of 44 Lake Superior iron ore mines who were permanently displaced by the closing down of war-exhausted mines.

In the case of the steel workers, the WLB directed that employes with three or more years' service receive four weeks' pay; those with five years' service, six weeks' pay, and those with ten years' service, eight weeks' pay. No specific amount was recommended in the case of the iron ore workers, the board directing that this should be settled by collective bargaining.

The board's action puts into effect the last remaining parts of an order of Nov. 25, 1944, against 86 basic steel companies and the iron ore mines. The order gave approval to the principle of severance pay by declaring that it would be fair and equitable for the companies to devote a portion of the benefits received under the carry-back provisions of the Federal tax law to severance pay for workers permanently laid off.

WOMEN'S BUREAU HEAD SAYS, 'PASS EQUAL PAY BILL'

IMPORTANCE of passage of the Federal equal pay bill for women (S. 1178) is shown by the 1946 forecast of Miss Frieda Miller, director of the Women's Bureau of the U. S. Dept. of Labor.

Miss Miller points out that some gains in obtaining equal pay for women were made during the war but they were limited in scope. She adds that only six states—Michigan, Montana, Washington, Illinois, New York and Massachusetts—have women's equal pay laws. A Federal equal pay bill has been introduced in Congress.

While the CIO is for state as well as Federal legislation, the slow progress on the state basis that has been made is a strong argument for the passage of the Federal measure, which was given a hearing by a Senate committee last October but was not reported out.

Miss Miller says that the "principal reasons" for equal wages are: "To promote the general welfare by protecting general wage levels and sustaining the purchasing power" and "to render justice to women in the different fields of employment . . ."

The Children's Bureau head also calls for enactment of minimum wage laws in 22 states now without such legislation to protect women and other workers engaged in intra-state industry. The CIO is pressing for the passage of the 65-75 cents minimum wage bill.

Guild Reports Banner Year

The CIO American Newspaper Guild reports that 1945 was a year marked by substantial wage gains. Minimums of $65 or better for reporters, with comparable minimums for other classifications, were set in such cities as San Francisco, Seattle, Los Angeles, St. Louis, San Diego, Detroit, Chicago, Washington, Cleveland and Boston, while in New York, new high minimums of $90 and $95 were negotiated.

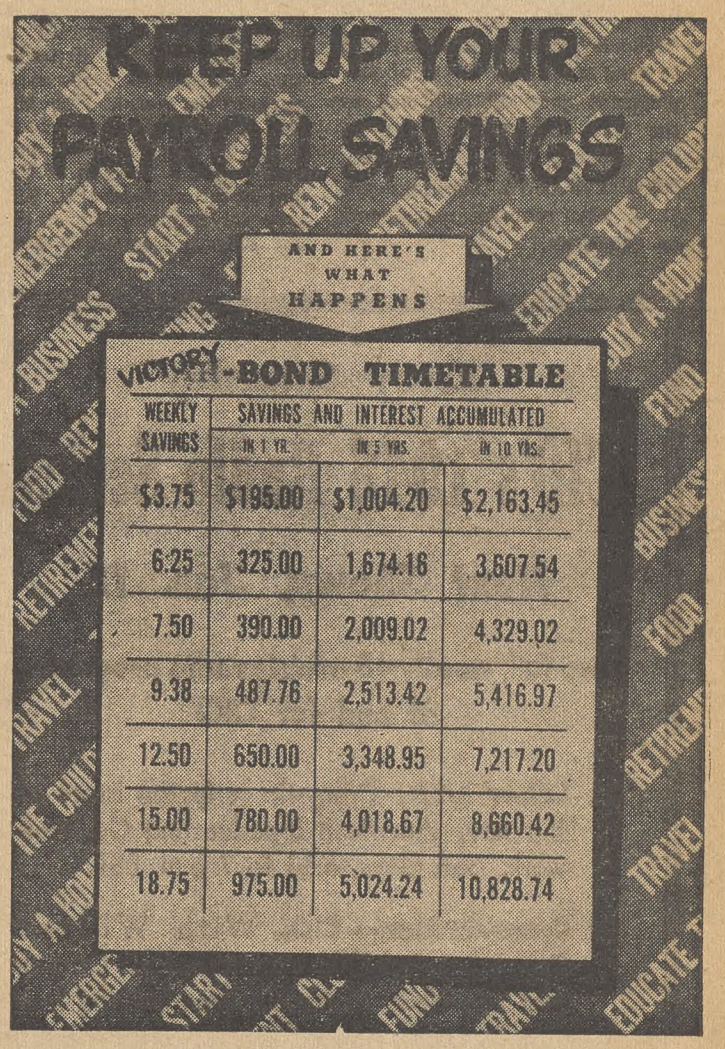
Recently the Guild won three NLRB elections in one week—at the Chicago Daily News; among editorial employes of four dailies in Springfield, Mass., and among editorial and commercial employes of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency.

Tribute To UAW Official

The death of Elwin Corbin, 49-year-old chairman of the CIO Auto Workers' top GM negotiating committee, who died last Sunday in Detroit, was called "a personal tragedy to all General Motors" in a statement issued this week by Walter P. Reuther, director of the union's GM dept.

"His death came from a kidney ailment which was caused or aggravated by his long years of work operating a drop forge hammer in the Chevrolet forge plant in Detroit," Reuther said.

"His greatest wish was to see us victorious in our current strike. Ours is a cause to which he contributed much. Our greatest tribute to him will be an early and complete victory."



This Message Sponsored By

Standard Machine Products Co.

WLB UPHOLDS CIO ON VETERANS' PAY

THE NATL. War Labor Board this week ruled in favor of granting veterans their full vacation pay during the year they return to work, thus upholding the CIO in its dispute with Major Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service system.

The decision was handed down by the board in a case in which the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers opposed the Philadelphia Division of the Bendix Aviation Corp., which did not wish to give veterans full vacation pay for the year in which they returned to work.

Chairman Clinton S. Golden of the CIO Veterans Committee recently protested to General Hershey the action of a Selective Service official at Buffalo, N. Y., who was advising employers that they did not need to give veterans vacation pay for the year in which they returned to their jobs.

"We do not know by what authority Selective Service personnel have installed themselves as supreme arbiters on all matters affecting the employment of veterans," Golden wrote.

Vets To Get War Housing

Some relief for the acute housing shortage for veterans is provided by the Veterans Housing Act, signed this week by President Truman. With the $160 million provided by this CIO-supported measure, introduced by Sen. Mead (D., N. Y.) and the $35 million under the Lanham Act, emergency shelter will be made available for veterans by moving war housing.

CIO affiliates have been asked by CIO Legislative Director Nathan E. Cowan to press Congressmen, home on vacation, to vote for the Wagner-Ellender-Taft low-cost housing and jobs bill (S 1592), and the Patman bill giving veterans priority on housing (HR 4761).

Colonel Rapped For Disunity

Joseph Veloskey of the CIO Auto Workers' Veterans' Department this week charged that Col. J. C. Campbell, commander of the 21st Replacement Depot in the Philippines, was attempting to create resentment against striking workers in the minds of overseas servicemen.

"A dispatch from the Associated Press," said Veloskey, "reports that Col. Campbell rebuked more than 4,000 GIs who were protesting against interminable delay in their shipment back home. Col. Campbell is qutoed as having said: 'You men forget you're not working for General Motors. You're still in the Army.'

"Servicemen will be quick to agree with him that working for General Motors is not the same as being in the Army. Workers fed up with brass-hat red tape and inefficiency in industry have their democratic right to protest and, if necessary, to strike. The labor movement will continue to bend every effort to see that overseas servicemen are returned to their families at once."

CONGRESS AXES VETS' PREFERENCE

CONGRESS has not dealt kindly with veterans preference. While ex-GIs are still entitled to preference under Civil Service, the system for seeing that veterans and war agency employes get a square break — including the appeals boards — is greatly hampered by Congressional cuts in appropriations, the CIO United Federal Workers point out.

President Eleanor Nelson of CIO-UFWA said:

"The net result is another example of disregard of human rights during reconversion."

But UFWA is fighting to see that veterans get raises and promotions that they would have got had they remained on the job. While U. S. agencies can grant these raises and promotions, they do nothing until UFWA steps into the picture.

Fight For Vets

The CIO Veterans' Committee and the Steelworkers' Union are seeking to have a New England steel firm reverse its policy on not paying veterans the same amount of yearly bonus for the year in which they return to work as it pays other employes. The company was paying other employes $50 a year, but veterans were receiving only $20, plus $4.80 for each month they were employed prior to June 1, 1945.

Canteen Appeals

An appeal for $2,000 a month to continue operations is being made by the Labor Canteen, Honolulu, backed by CIO and AFL unions. The canteen is carrying on an extensive program to counteract anti-labor propaganda among servicemen-guests, numbering 2,300 weekly.

JOB SERVICE MOVE HIT

CIO affiliates are urged to support President Truman's veto of a provision in an appropriation bill turning the U. S. Employment Service back to the states, in a letter from Clinton S. Golden, acting in his capacity of chairman of the Labor Committee of the Natl. Planning Assn.

"If the USES were in state control, even the present standards and safeguards to protect the workers would be eliminated and many people who are now eligible for unemployment compensation payments would be denied their benefits under state laws," Golden's letter says.

The letter urges CIO members to read a leaflet, "National Employment Service," published by the NPA Labor Committee on the subject. Order from NPA, 800 21st St. N.W., Washington 6, D. C. Five cents each; discounts on quantities.

NEW BATTLE OF GERMANY

(Continued From Page 3)

In iron and steel and chemicals Germany has more potential capacity today than in 1939. A bomb damage survey conducted by the U. S. Army Air Force after V-E Day states that far more of the damage by bombing was done to housing than to industry.

THE great Germar. trusts contributed to Hitler's Nazi party from its earliest days. They put Hitler in power in 1933, maintained the Nazi regime through contributions and through shares in ownership (Goering became one of Europe's richest industrialists), grew stronger and more ruthless with each day of Hitler's climb toward world conquest.

One such trust is I. G. Farben, with over 2,000 cartel agreements among similar trusts (British Imperial Chemicals, du Pont, Standard, etc.) in Britain and this country, as well as other parts of the world. Here is what Col. Bernard Berstein, formerly U. S. Treasury counsel and director of the Division of Cartels and External Assets, U. S. Military Government, told the Senate Kilgore Committee recently on the subject of Farben:

"As an example of an aggressive management which disregarded all human values and committed itself to a program for world domination, Farben is symbolic of the role played by the large industrial firms of Germany.

"The proposition must be recognized that giant industry, throwing all its weight behind a despotic government, actually holds the balance of power in the conduct of successful warfare.

"As of V-E Day, Farben officials themselves estimated that 87% of I.G.'s wartime (1943) capacity remained intact. That is much larger than I.G.'s war potential as of the outbreak of war in Sept., 1939.

"In order to resume large-scale operations these plants require only the necessary fuel and raw materials. Practically all of the technicians necessary to the successful operation of these plants are available in Germany."

To clinch his point, Colonel Bernstein quoted to the Senate Committee from a statement of Dr. Georg von Schnitzler, a member of Farben's central executive committee, who told his allied captors in a burst of frightened candor:

"Thus, in acting as it had done, I.G. contracted a great responsibility and constituted a substantial aid in the chemical domain and decisive help to Hitler's foreign policy, which led to war and to the ruin of Germany.

"Thus, I must conclude that I.G. is largely responsible for Hitler's policy."

Had he been still more frank, von Schnitzler might have pointed out that I. G. Farben—and the other huge German trusts can try again, if they get the chance.

(Next—Plans for permanent industrial disarmament of Germany.

New Anti-Labor Move

A new anti-labor initiative petition is being circulated in California under the sponsorship of the Committee for Political Freedom, Inc.

The new measure, entitled Political Campaign Contributions, prohibits the levying of assessments for political purposes by any organized group or enterprise, though it is frankly aimed at labor unions.

Joseph E. Matthews is secretary-treasurer of the new outfit. He says it has raised $50,000 to circulate the petition, plus $25,000 for publicity.

Every Saturday

CIO's 1946 Radio Series

Next Shows, Jan. 12

Two full, weekly 15-minute radio programs, of and for CIO

1. Labor USA. Dramatic series on issues of the day. American Broadcasting Co. Network. Saturdays, 6:45 to 7 p.m. EST.

2. Cross-Section—CIO. With William Downes, noted CBS commentator. On-the-spot interview. Columbia Broadcasting System Network. Saturdays, 3:45 to 4 p.m., EST.

GOOD LISTENING!

This Patriotic Ad Sponsored By

PRINTZ ELECTRIC CO.

Universal Button Fastening & Button Co.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with acutal persons, living or dead.

SUE TELLS JIM HOW MICKEY, JUST RELEASED FROM THE ARMY, CAME TO HER WITH A PROPOSAL OF MARRIAGE WHICH SHE WAS STRANGELY RELUCTANT TO ACCEPT! SHE CONTINUES...

TWO MONTHS AGO, MICKEY, THE ANSWER WOULD HAVE BEEN 'YES'! BUT NOW— I... I'M NOT SURE AT ALL.

WHAT DO YOU MEAN, SUE?

YOU KNOW, WE WERE JUST KIDS WHEN YOU LEFT FOR THE ARMY, AND WE'D NEVER EVEN GONE OUT WITH ANYBODY ELSE, AND...

AND NOW YOU HAVE. IS THAT IT, SUSIE?

YES, MICKEY, BUT...

NEVER MIND THE BUTS. WHO IS HE?

IT.. IT'S STEVE DENTON.

NOT THE STEVE DENTON, SON AND HEIR OF THE ROTOR CONSTRUCTION COMPANY?

YES, THAT'S THE ONE MICKEY. BUT DON'T THINK...

LET ME BE THE FIRST TO CONGRATULATE YOU, SUSAN. YOU'VE SHOWN MIGHTY FINE PRACTICAL JUDGMENT EXCHANGING A POOR SUCKER LIKE ME FOR A GENUINE 24 KARAT ROMEO IN THE HIGHER INCOME BRACKETS!

I SPEND TWO YEARS IN A FOXHOLE, DREAMING, AND WHEN I COME HOME-- WELL, IT DOESN'T MATTER. MAYBE WHEN YOU MARRY THE ROTOR CONSTRUCTION COMPANY YOU CAN STRAIGHTEN EVERYTHING OUT AND GET THE BOSS TO SEND ME A CHECK FOR MY DREAMS... TIME AND A HALF FOR OVERTIME!

OH, MICKEY!

WELL, THAT'S THE STORY, JIM. HE'S CUT ME COLD EVER SINCE.

MMM, I CAN SEE HIS POINT OF VIEW. AFTER ALL, HE'S BEEN THROUGH EVERYTHING THE WAR COULD OFFER, JUST LOOKING FORWARD TO THE DAY WHEN HE COULD RETURN TO YOU, AND..,

I KNOW, JIM. BUT STILL, I HAVE A RIGHT TO FIND OUT IF IT'S MICKEY I LOVE, OR.. STEVE. STEVE'S REALLY A REGULAR GUY--- AND A UNION MEMBER TOO.

THE BOSS' SON--A UNION MEMBER?

54

SURE -- I MET HIM ON A PICKET LINE. HE'S A SWELL GUY, JIM.

MMM... SPEAKING OF UNIONS, SUE, THERE'S ANOTHER QUESTION I WANT TO ASK YOU.

DO YOU THINK MICKEY HAS ANYTHING TO DO WITH THE ANTI-UNION PROPAGANDA THAT'S BEEN GOING ON AT YOUR SHOP?

MICKEY? WHA-WHATEVER PUT THAT THOUGHT IN YOUR MIND, JIM?

Produced by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

Copyright by the NAT'L CIO NEWS

MEAT PACKING —'RUGGED DEAL'

By NORMAN DOLNICK

THE packinghouse workers, by an overwhelming strike vote averaging 20-1 and running as high as 25-1 in some plants, have indicated that they mean business when it comes to enforcing their demand for a long overdue wage increase.

One of the most underpaid groups of workers in American industry, these men and women, through the CIO Packinghouse Workers, are asking for a 25c an hour increase to meet rising living costs. This is about a 30% raise. The immediate demand is for 17½c an hour increase with the balance to be negotiated later.

Although meat production increased by more than 12% during the war and Army and Navy "Excellent" awards as well as War Food Administration "Achievement" honors were given to almost every leading meat packing company, the workers have received no general wage increase since before Pearl Harbor.

On the average, a typical packinghouse worker earned around $42 for a 48-hour week during the war. This does not include payroll deductions. The companies, however, make no bones about eliminating overtime pay as soon as additional manpower is available. For a work week of 38 or 40 hours, the average packinghouse worker will earn less than $30, not including deductions.

Negotiations with the Meat Trust for a reasonable living wage have been stymied by the companies' stingy offer of a 5½c increase. This, in the face of nearly a 50% rise in living costs during the war, is a deliberate provocation. The increase offered by management would amount to about $2 a week, and in no way would begin to give the workers an income which would adequately provide bare necessities for their families.

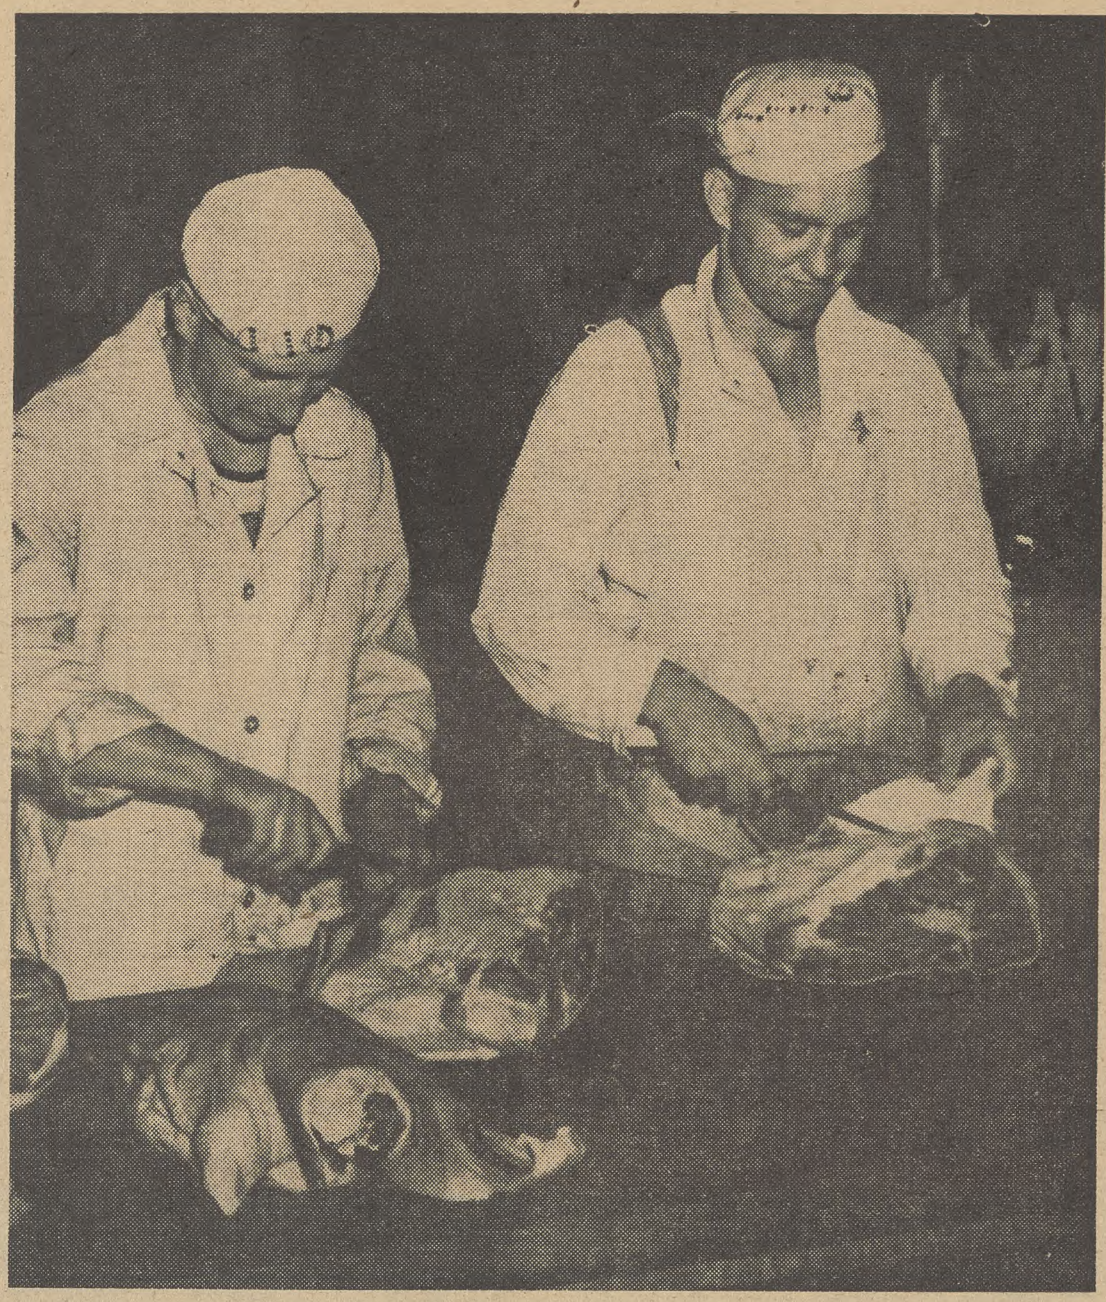
If there is any kind of a wage increase, the packers are certain to head for Washington, howling for price relief—but the facts are against them. Wage increases can be given to the packinghouse workers without raising consumer prices or reducing livestock prices to the farmers.

In 1944, the Big Four meat packing companies paid $70 million in excess profits tax. The big companies, so far reporting in 1945, have continued payment of excess profits, even when their hog slaughter was more than halved. With Congress repealing the excess profits tax and with a high volume of slaughter coupled with strong retail prices assured for the coming year, the packers' tears are strictly phoney.

Other important factors glossed over by the companies are that labor productivity has increased during the past few years and that time and a half for overtime will be eliminated at their first opportunity. These two factors considered by themselves can absorb the major part of the wage demand.

In no other industry are working conditions so intolerable as they are in meat packing. Workers put in long hours in departments which have temperatures as high as 120 degrees above zero to 40 below zero.

→



Work in a packing plant is not pleasant. The accident rate is second highest in American industry. Last year accidents cost packinghouse workers more than a million and a half dollars' pay. The skilled ham boners, shown above, who handle sharp knives all day, are paid 77½ cents an hour. In other departments workers have to smell hot animal flesh, slog through bloody floors and work in rooms with temperatures varying from 120 degrees to 40 below zero.

Pres. Lewis J. Clark of the CIO Packinghouse Workers says that the big packing firms can well afford to pay decent wages out of $70,000,000 excess 1944 profits.

Theodore Kolobos, father of three earns $42 for a 50-hour week at the Wilson Packing Co. This will drop to less than $30 when the company goes back to only 38 or 40 hours work a week.

Elias Sowell, who has worked for Armour & Co. for 30 years, earns $31 for a 40-hour week, even after his union got 2½ cents an hour pay adjustment for him two months ago. After deductions, not much is left for food for his wife and three children. He lives in the overcrowded, restricted southside Chicago, in a home typical of thousands' of other packinghouse workers.

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 3 | $1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY — $1.50 IN CANADA | 82 | January 14, 1946

Copyright, 1945, The CIO NEWS
WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

No. 1 Problem—Steel: With Jan. 14 as strike deadline, the CIO United Steelworkers this week were in showdown negotiations with United States Steel, the giant of the industry. News story, page 2. Picture feature, pages 6 and 7.

KAISER PACT TOPS—UAW

See Page 3

STEEL TALKS ON; STRIKE STILL SET FOR JAN. 14

(Why Steelworkers Need a Raise—See Pages 6-7)

WITH THE CIO Steelworkers' strike still set for Jan. 14 as The CIO NEWS went to press, direct negotiations were resumed this week in N. Y. City between the union and U. S. Steel, largest producer in the industry. The outlook was reported "good" for a satisfactory wage settlement.

The union, headed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, has demanded a $2-a-day raise in wages, with the industry flatly rejecting it so far, maintaining that a steel price increase is necessary. The government has been reported as ready to allow a $4-a-ton steel price hike, contingent on a satisfactory wage settlement.

Tied in with the steel wage case, which affects 700,000 workers, are the pay fights of CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers and the CIO Packinghouse Workers.

More than 250,000 UE workers were slated to strike the Big Three of the electrical industry Jan. 15 and 200,000 packinghouse workers were slated to go out Jan. 16 unless their wage demands are met (see other stories, this issue).

In N. Y., President Murray conferred with Pres. R. J. Thomas and Vice-Pres. Walter Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers about the General Motors fact-finding panel report, which recommended a raise of 19½c an hour for more than 300,000 GM workers who have been on strike for nearly two months (see other story).

In Washington, the steel fact-finding panel headed by Nathan P. Feinsinger, reported that it will continue probing the steel case, in announcing resumption of direct negotiations between union and management.

"The Board," Feinsinger said, "is under an obligation to plan its procedure in this dispute in such a manner as to assure a report to the President on or before Feb. 10, unless a final settlement of the dispute has been reached in the meantime."

Score for Vets On Steel Vote

Why veterans joined with other members of the CIO Steelworkers Union in voting for a strike is spelled out in the quarter-million edition of the union's new pamphlet, "Ex-GIs and the Steel Wage Fight."

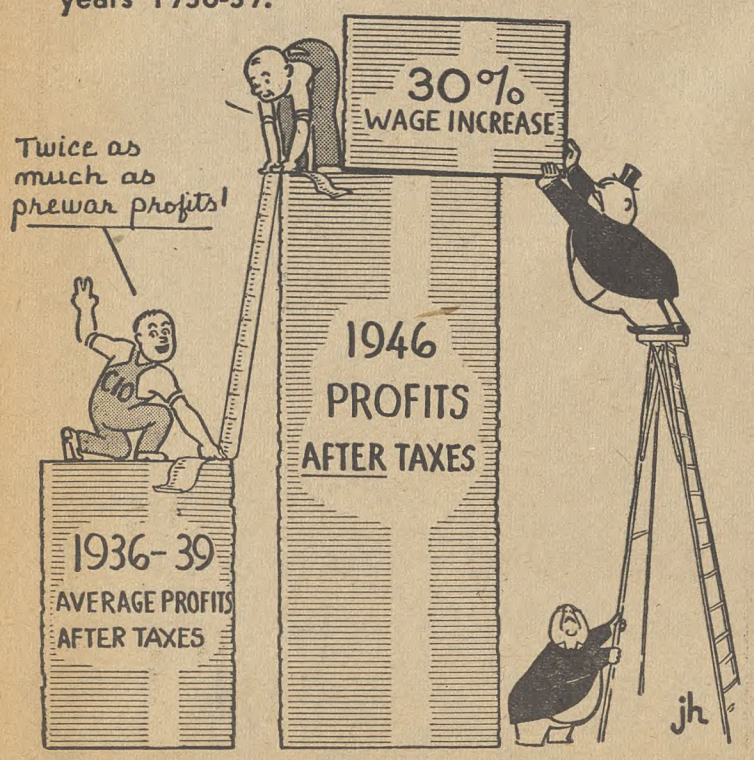
The pamphlet tells "in a nutshell why the ex-GI voted for a strike." It was written by Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee, who before his stint of two and one-half years in the Pacific Theater was a member of the Steelworkers research staff.

Asserting that "industry is paying less than the armed forces put out for the GI," the pamphlet says that counting allotments for a wife and two children and necessary clothing, the average enlisted man in the European theater was paid $2,460.38 a year.

WHY RAISE BASIC PAY

9. Can Industry Raise Wages And Still Make 'Fair' Profits?

Yes! Manufacturing industry can pay an increase of 31% in basic wage rates, and still earn 100% more—or twice as much—take-home profits after taxes than in the prewar years 1936-39.



Typical Manila Street Scene These Days: Angry GIs protest demobilization slow-down as other tens of thousands of their comrades did throughtout the world.

GI DISCHARGE SNAFU FORCES SENATE PROBE

A SPECIAL Senate Military Subcommittee to probe the demobilization SNAFU was named this week as the CIO called on Congress for action while tens of thousands of GIs in Japan, the Philippines, Germany, France and in the U. S. staged vociferous demonstrations against War Dept. orders to slow down demobilization.

Clinton S. Golden, chairman of the CIO Veterans Committee, in a letter to all members of Congress, asserted: "The high command seems unable fully to appreciate the principles and workings of democracy." He called on all members of Congress to democratize the military services and "reduce them to the smallest possible size consistent with our absolute needs and commitments."

Attached to the letter was a copy of a cablegram to Golden from representatives of 600 enlisted men at Hdq. Co., Sub Base R, Manila, requesting that "all available shipping be used to return overseas veterans from non-hostile countries" and that the demobilization program be transferred from the War Dept. to a Congressional committee. The writers of the cablegram requested that Golden send copies of it to all members of Congress. The same GIs also wired Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO Auto Workers who likewise forwarded their cable to all Congressmen.

Expressing their appreciation of the CIO's "energetic effort in behalf of accelerated demobilization," Sgt. Douglas Walker and 50 servicemen this week radioed CIO Pres. Philip Murray from Honolulu to "urge continuation of your influence on the announced Army program, which is inconsistent with the promise to the servicemen."

General Eisenhower has ordered all overseas commanders to expedite the return of any troops for whom there are no military needs, and the War Dept. has announced its intention to again revamp demobilization, but the appointment by Chairman Thomas (D. Utah) of the Senate Military Affairs Committee of the special committee to probe demobilization showed that Congress would likely decide who was to come home and when. Named to the committee were Sens. Johnson (D. Colo.), chairman; Briggs (D. Missouri) and Revercomb (R. W. Va.).

Golden's letter said:

"The army speaks in terms of a total strength of 1,550,000 men to meet our occupation and post-war needs. It calls attention to the fact that 4,750,000 GIs have been discharged since V-E Day.

"That is very commendable, but it still is only a little more than half of the peak number. What about the millions who remain? There are no legitimate tasks for so huge a force at present, and no responsible officer has ever given a satisfactory explanation as to why the surplus cannot be released now. The shipping bottle-neck has been broken.

"The signers of the cable protest against 'occupation' of the Philippines — that country not being a former enemy, but among our bravest allies."

Golden charged that many soldiers are being kept in the service "not for the convenience of the government, but rather for the advantage of their commanding officers." He cited the reported cases of a one-star general who kept for his private use two planes, requiring air and ground crews, and of a lieutenant colonel who called for his chauffeur to drive him 350 yards, where the GI waited three hours to drive him back the same distance.

The CIO Veterans Committee head also referred to the report of the priority transportation of a large cargo of beer bottle caps by the Army air forces to the owner of a brewery in the Philippines.

U.S. URGES 17½% FOR GM STRIKERS.

AS THE CIO NEWS went to press, top leaders of the CIO Auto Workers were studying the recommendation of the government's fact-finding board that the hourly wage of General Motors strikers be boosted approximately 17½%. The union has been asking for a 30% increase.

As soon as they received the board's report, UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas and Vice Pres. Walter P. Reuther left Washington for N. Y. City to confer with CIO Pres. Philip Murray, who was negotiating with officials of the U. S. Steel Corp. for a $2-a-day increase for the CIO Steelworkers.

The recommended increase would mean a 19½c boost an hour at GM. The board also asked that the strike be called off immediately, that the 1945 contract canceled by GM be reinstated, and that collective bargaining be resumed.

Thomas called a meeting of the union's international executive board in Detroit, Jan. 12, and for the next day Reuther scheduled a meeting of the national General Motors committee of the union.

Thomas said that he would let the executive committee and the union's GM committee decide what to do about the fact-finding board's recommendations.

GM is in a poor position to turn down the fact finders' recommendations, since it walked out of the hearings after its counsel, Walter Gordon Merritt, said that the company would not submit its books as it had been asked to do by President Truman, if the board found them necessary.

For 97 days prior to the strike GM representatives literally thumbed their noses at the UAW negotiators, scoffing at statistical arguments, refusing the offer of the U. S. Labor Dept. to provide conciliators and the union's demand that the public be admitted to the negotiation session.

The board failed to find anything unusual in the request of the UAW for a wage increase when the work week had been cut—as GM contended.

"The effect of these deductions, not only on the workers, but on the economy as a whole, has become a matter of national concern," the board said.

Another contention of GM before it withdrew from the Board's hearings was that the work week would be so long in 1946 that decreases in take-home pay would be wiped out. The board answered this by saying that "all things considered, the greatest range of possibility for 1946 seems to us to fall somewhere between 39.5 and 41 hours."

UAW CALLS KAISER PACT BEST IN AUTO

PRES. R. J. THOMAS of the CIO Auto Workers this week hailed the union's contract with the Kaiser-Frazier Corp. as "the best contract ever negotiated with the auto industry and as the first break in the dike of the auto industry's resistance to the demands of the UAW."

The new pact gives the 30% increase that the UAW has been demanding of General Motors and other auto companies, the UAW leader declared.

"If a new business can do it, why can't the old established companies?" asked Thomas, who led Kaiser-Frazier negotiations for UAW.

The UAW head explained that base rate of pay will be the average rate of about $1.20 an hour paid by Ford at the River Rouge plant, the highest rate in the industry by seven cents an hour. Whatever increase is won from GM will be added to the pay of the Kaiser-Frazier workers.

Another pay hike equal to a 10% increase will go to the workers through the operation of a bonus fund, to which the company will pay $5 for each car shipped. Workers participating in outlaw strikes would be ineligible for the bonus.

"The press has not sufficiently played up this feature of the contract," Thomas declared. "It is much superior to the company security proposal proposed by Ford, which would set up a series of penalties for workers participating in unauthorized strikes, the money to be deducted from their pay."

Thomas stressed that "the plan offers workers a reward and does not penalize them as the Ford plan would do. It is positive and not negative."

How much money the worker receives will be determined by three factors: Number of cars produced until Dec. 1, 1946; the number of hours he worked between Jan. 1 and Dec. 1, 1946, and his hourly rate of pay.

A worker needs these qualifications to participate in the fund: Be on the active payroll Dec. 20, 1946; have worked at least 90 days before the termination date of the plan; have worked at least 90% of the hours he was scheduled to work prior to the plan's termination, and not have been guilty of participating in or encouraging any slowdown, work stoppage or strike in violation of a section of the pact which bars lockouts or strikes during the life of the contract.

Workers otherwise qualified but not on the active payroll on Dec. 20, 1946, because they were laid off through no fault of their own will also be eligible to share in the funds from the kitty.

The contract also provides that if a worker disqualifies himself from taking part in the division of the money, he may regain good standing, the date of which will be the basis for his participation.

Three trustees will administer the plan, one representing management, another representing the UAW and the other being an impartial person.

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

I ask for the immediate repeal of the National Labor Relations Act,

3. I ask for the repeal of the Fair Labor Standards Act,

4. I ask that you repeal all federal laws for the control of prices, production, and the allocation of materials.

8. I ask for the repeal of the Social Security Act as of June 30, 1947.

9. I suggest that no appropriations be passed for federal housing.

10. There may be certain cases in which federal aid to the States is necessary and desirable. But in most cases, federal aid to the States should not be granted.

SOCIETY OF SENTINELS, Detroit

Here are reproduced excerpts from the ad of the Society of Sentinels which was headed "An Open Letter to Mr. Truman" and which audaciously proposed a speech for him asking Congress to repeal the Wagner Labor Act and all social legislation. The ad was strategically placed in some of the biggest newspapers.

GM BACKS SENTINELS, PLEADERS FOR FASCISM

By FRED ROSS

THE MYSTERIOUS Society of Sentinels, whose ads appearing in strategic papers last week-end called for the repeal of the Wagner Act and all social legislation, is the mouthpiece of some of the biggest interests in the auto industry.

The society in its audacious ad wrote a speech for President Truman on the state of the union. The speech called on Congress to repeal not only the Wagner Act but also the Wages and Hours Act, the OPA and all price regulation and the Social Security Act. For good measure, the ad asked for an end of appropriations for Federal housing and, in most cases, of aid to states.

The ad was unsigned, but a comparison of the Sentinels' ad with GM's quarter-page "Let's Talk Turkey" spread in the newspapers shows that the thinking is similar.

Pres. R. J. Thomas of UAW-CIO pointed to a GM top official as being among the backers of the Sentinels.

He said that the society "is the hard core of Fascist thought in America, and that at the heart of that hard core we find Stephen DuBrul, chief economist of America's great manufacturing concern, General Motors."

"They are making an effort to revive the discredited program of the Liberty League at two bucks a copy, holding out as bait to reactionary professional and small business men the idea that they will be able to sit in with General Motors and plan the future of America for such a small admission fee," Thomas declared.

The Sentinels' chairman is reported to be Leslie C. Allman, Fruehauf Trailer Co. advertising executive. Thomas said:

"Those who know the Fruehaufs know what they think. And it is perfectly in keeping with their trend of thought that the advertising director of the Fruehauf Mfg. Co. should be the chairman of the Sentinels. The vice-chairmanship of Ross Roy, an advertising agency owner, is understandable. He knows the leaders of the automobile industry, and he is confident that a Fascist declaration such as this will get him business."

Other board members of the Sentinels are reported to be Wayne Stettbacher of the Detroit Employers Assn. and Noble Travis of the Detroit Trust Co.

The Sentinels' ad follows a pattern of undercover reactionary publicity carried on by GM.

A GM pamphlet containing an hysterical editorial from the Detroit Free Press is being widely distributed in Washington. It tells of the reported inability of the Governor of Michigan to reach a CIO official in an effort to settle a short strike of utility workers.

It seeks to create the atmosphere for repeal of the Wagner Act and for anti-labor legislation by trying desperately to picture labor leaders as being above the law and seeking to show that they are preparing the way for Fascism.

In a foreword it is stated that the pamphlet is privately printed by Henry Grady Weaver, but the Detroit address given is General Motors'. Weaver is director of the GM consumer research staff.

"Who's Who in America, 1944-45" states that Weaver has been employed by GM since 1921. GM, of course, has denied that it is financing the distribution of the pamphlet.

Sen. Morse (R., Ore.) has called for an investigation by the Senate Labor Committee of the huge expenditures being made by GM and other large corporations for anti-union advertising to learn whether they are using tax savings, after the repeal of the excess profits tax, to pay for the poisonous barrage.

CIO's Own Radio Shows EVERY SATURDAY

Two Full, Weekly 15-Minute Radio Programs, of and for CIO

1. Labor-USA. Dramatic shows. American Broadcasting Co. network. Saturdays, 6:45 to 7 P. M., EST.

2. Cross-Section—CIO. On-the-spot interviews of CIO people by William Downs, noted CBS commentator. Saturdays, 3:45 to 4 P. M., EST.

Live Listening!

AMERICA MUST WIN THIS FIGHT

Never before in American industrial history has there been such a tremendous alignment of forces over so clear-cut a single issue as that which confronts the country as this issue of The CIO NEWS goes to press.

On the one side are millions of CIO members who have solemnly and democratically expressed their determination to strike, if necessary and as long as may be necessary, to establish adequate wage standards.

On the other side are a handful of willful individuals, controlling enormous wealth and directing the destinies of some of our greatest corporations, who have rejected genuine collective bargaining and forced a showdown with labor by their refusal to pay adequate wages.

That is the alignment in its simplest terms. But when we examine the issue and its implications, and when we look at the forces rallying to either side, we find that this is an issue and a conflict that involves the whole American people.

The wage increases which the CIO unions are seeking do not concern the members alone. When they are won, as won they must be, they will set a pattern of higher wages from which practically all American working people, in and out of the CIO, will benefit.

More than this, the restoration of American labor's take-home pay and the expansion of its purchasing power are the first essential for expanding production and employment throughout American industry.

The fruits of CIO victory will be passed on by higher-paid workers to farmers, professional people, businessmen. They will provide a solid basis for increased purchasing power for the prosperity of all the people. They will help to avert the unemployment and general depression which would otherwise result from the 20 to 30 billion dollar annual cut in total payrolls that has followed V-J Day.

In this great industrial struggle, therefore, the CIO is fighting the battle not only of all American labor but of the whole American people.

The corporation chiefs, on the other hand, who are resisting the CIO's logical, reasonable and economically necessary wage demands are also doing more than this.

Their arrogant rejections of collective bargaining, their insistence on forcing showdowns and shutdowns, provide much evidence of a concerted move by big capital not only to keep wages down but also to break the unions, if they can.

More than this, outfits like the Society of Sentinels (spawned and led by auto corporation bigshots), and violently anti-labor literature traceable to corporation sources, furnish evidence that even more long-range reactionary objectives are involved in the current conflict.

Advertisements placed by the Society of Sentinels, for instance, call for repeal of the Wagner labor relations act, the wage-hour act, the social security act and of all existing laws to keep down living costs and to maintain farm prices.

In other words, if the union-fighting corporations should win this fight, they would not only keep wages down and sow the seeds of early depression, but they would also be encouraged to take further steps to destroy the power of the labor movement, and to develop political reaction for the destruction of all the social and legislative gains which the American people have made in recent years.

CIO victory, on the other hand, will be a victory for the whole American people, in higher living standards, in expanding production, employment and prosperity, and in the strengthening of all progressive forces for democratic advancement.

This is a fight which America cannot afford to lose.

N

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

WE WERE crowded on top of each other in a day-coach, and the fellow who shared my seat wouldn't sit still. He had a newspaper full of strike headlines, and he kept fuming and mumbling until I could stand it no longer.

"Pardon me," I said, "but those are my corns you're kicking and my ribs you are digging. If you don't like the paper, why do you read it?"

"That's what I don't like," he said, jabbing his finger fiercely at a cartoon. It showed a meak little figure in a bowler hat labeled "John Q. Public," along with two burley figures labled "Labor" and "Management."

"Nobody asks me what I think," my seat-mate continued. . . .

"Well," I interrupted politely, "What do you think about all these strikes, for instance?"

★ ★ ★

"Do you think I go on strike for fun?" he retorted. "Last April, as a steelworker I was earning $56.32 a week, and now on a 40-hour week I get only $42.70 to support my family.

"Working in a packing plant during the war I made around $42 for a 48-hour week. But with hours cut to 38 or 40, I make less than $30, without counting deductions. And as an auto worker . . ."

"What do you work at anyhow?" I butted in. "You can't be in steel, packing and autos at the same time."

"Says who?" he shot back. "As an auto worker, electrical worker, Western Union employe, textile worker, farm equipment worker, glass worker, oil worker, rubber worker, it's all the same thing—about one-fourth off my take-home pay.

★ ★ ★

"Then look at it as a housewife," my seat-mate continued. "It takes $1.45 today to buy what I could get for $1 in 1941.

"With the old man bringing home less money each week, while living costs keep going up, how am I going to make ends meet unless the CIO wins the wage increases it's asking?

★ ★ ★

"As a veteran myself," he went on, "I'm all for the unions. Why shouldn't we be?

"We want America to be the kind of country we dreamed about at the front ——with plenty of jobs at decent wages.

"If the CIO doesn't win, there not only won't be good jobs, but there won't be enough jobs. It's going to take much higher wages to create enough consuming power to keep production and employment expanding.

★ ★ ★

"Everybody knows what the CIO has done to raise wages.

"So when we see big business refusing collective bargaining, and ganging up to break the unions, every intelligent worker knows what this means and is willing to strike just as long as it takes to defend the unions.

★ ★ ★

"As to the businessman's stake, look at me." ("Brother," I murmured, "I'm looking at you with more and more amazement— you certainly seem to get around.")

"As a storekeeper, I need customers who're well enough paid to buy my goods. That calls for higher wages. And if the workers' purchasing power keeps going down, there's going to be a depression from which all business will suffer.

"The same applies to me as a doctor, dentist or in any other profession. The CIO has got to win, if there's to be enough money circulating through enough hands to build prosperity for all of us.

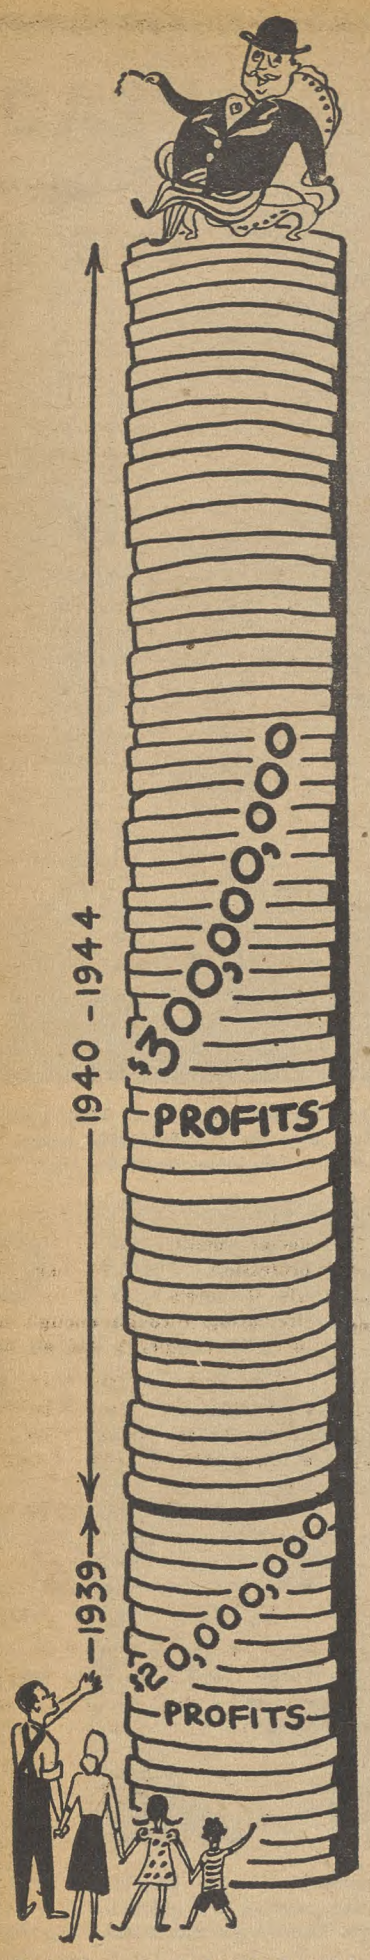
"For that matter, even as a stockholder in these corporations, I'd rather see higher wages with a lower rate of profit if this will mean greater volume of production and higher total profits in the end, than to see low wages leading to depression, stock market collapse and widespread bankruptcy.

"Then look at it as a farmer. Farm prosperity depends on enough people having enough money to eat well and to buy enough of all kinds of farm products. Now on my farm . . ."

But this was too much. "Look here, bud," I said, "you just can't be everything, worker in every industry, farmer, businessman, veteran, housewife . . ."

"Why not?" he replied. "Don't you know who I am? I'm the real John Q. Public."

The CIO News
Congress of Industrial Organizations
Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer
Vice-President
Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas
Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director
Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.
Vol. 9 January 14, 1946 No. 3



Intl. Harvester sales during fat war years jumped 250%, profits increased 300% Wages were held down to a 15% rise, while the cost of living soared almost 50%. The gap between profits and wages was further widened by increased worker efficiency, due to new machines and improved metheods... Workers now produce 30% more than they did before the war.

FE Schools

A new type of "concentrated education" is getting results in preparing union members for the current wage fight, reports Education Director Edwin J. Schonfeld of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers. The union is sponsoring nine one-week, after-work schools in various sections of the country.

STRIKE HARVESTER MONOPOLY JAN. 21

THE CIO Farm Equipment & Metal Workers Union this week voted to strike 11 plants of the Intl. Harvester Co., giant monopoly of the farm implement field, on Jan. 21. The threatened strike is of national significance, since IHC manufactures from 60 to 65% of the nation's farm equipment.

Sec.-Treas. Fielde of the UFEMWA said that "the union has been forced to take this action after cooling-off through 90 days of fruitless negotiations." We have explored every peaceful road to solution, but the McCormicks are not interested," he said.

Directly involved in the strike will be 30,000 Harvester workers, in the 11 plants where the UFEMWA is collective bargaining agency.

McCormick, Tractor, West Pullman, McCormick Twine Mill, and Deering Workers are in Chicago, employing some 15,000.

Other plants directly involved are located in Rock Island, Ill., East Moline, Ill., Rock Falls, Ill., Bettendorf, Ia., Richmond Ind., and Auburn, N. Y. Additionally, many warehouses and minor properties will be directly affected.

Other IHC properties will become involved due to material shortages within a matter of weeks.

Fielde stated that negotiations on wage increases and a new contract to replace expired agreements had produced "no acceptable results to the union" despite a long series of conferences between union and management.

"Our workers," he said, "received a drastic wage slash following V-J Day, which can only be restored through the general 30% wage increase we are seeking."

He said that Harvester workers viewed contract improvements as equally important with wage increases, and that both were involved in the threatened strike.

The Farm Equipment Workers will co-operate with a fact-finding committee established for the IHC dispute, but will not yield the right to strike nor submit to further useless cooling-off, the union said.

The Int. Harvester Co., subject of two government investigations for violation of the anti-trust laws in the past, is again seeking to use its monopoly position in the farm equipment industry to protect its wartime super-profits and to lower the living standards of 200,000 farm equipment workers whose wage scale it directly or indirectly estabilshes, the union charged.

"After extracting 15 years of prewar profits from five years of wartime business, enabling the McCormick family to draw $8,000,000 annually in dividends alone, the Harvester trust has refused to grant its employes a living wage or to establish working conditions which offer a minimum of security for Harvester workers and their union," the FE stated.

"The Harvester Co. thus is continuing its traditional policy of low wages for workers and high prices for farmers.

"The Harvester trust insists on exploiting both workers and farmers, enhancing its profits by shrinking the income of labor and farmer alike. In its avaricious rush for boom profits it is hell-bent for depression.

"The company is of the same mind as other reactionary firms in the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers combine. It is holding the farm equipment sector of the line the NAM has established to defend the swollen profits gained in the blood and misery of war.

"The union has tried every possible peaceful means to persuade the company to grant a general increase to restore lost take-home pay and to sign a new contract embodying badly needed improvements in all areas of labor-management relations.

"We notified the company four months ago, in accordance with our contract, of the changes desired by the workers. We negotiated with the company on our proposals for three months.

"When the company refused to grant a single concession, we called in the U. S. Conciliation Service to mediate the dispute.

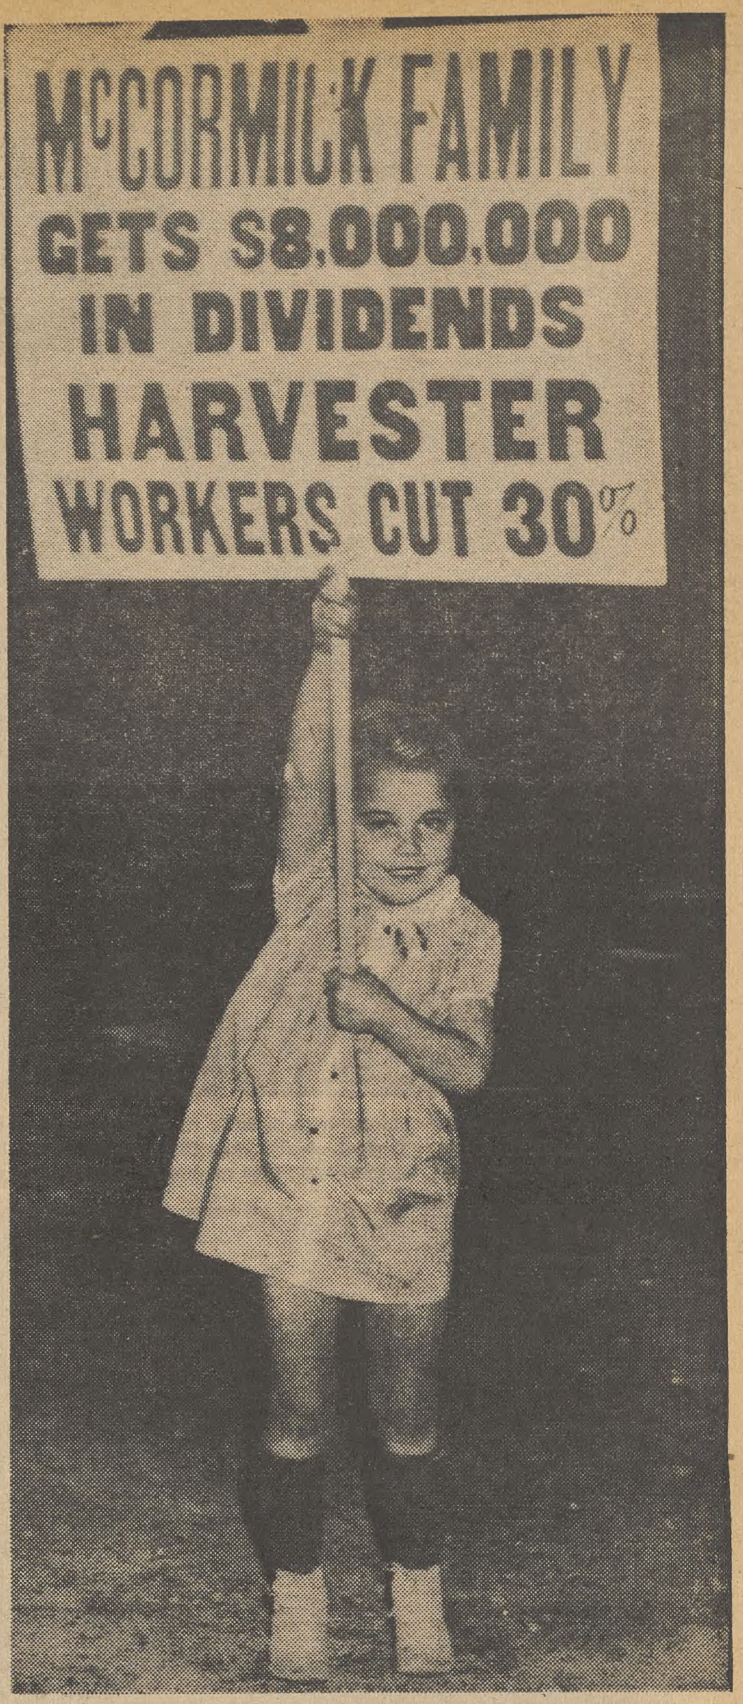
"The net result of all this effort is that the company has indicated its willingness to agree to a so-called 'company security' clause!

"The test of the company's desire to bargain in good faith is the practical result of three months' bargaining — the company has refused to agree to even one single proposal made by the union or to modifications proposed by the union in the course of negotiations.

"We have tried every means we know to avoid this strike, but those who are delegated to protect the McCormick family income against demands for living wages and decent working conditions have willed it otherwise.

"The union is unalterably opposed to higher prices for farm machinery. Implement prices are already too high and could have been lowered at any time in the last 25 years without reducing wages.

"Wages can now be raised upon the small portion of retail price which goes to Harvester workers estimated by the Federal Trade Commission as 8% without raising the price of farm equipment by one penny."



It's take-home pay that feeds the kids—and it's tough to do it with Harvester pay for a 40-hour week. Wartime pay was $40 to $43 a week, on the average, after deductions. Reconversion brought an average drop of $13—bringing scales down to $27-$30. Many get less. Big point in the CIO Farm Equipment Workers' argument for higher wages is the fact that direct manufacturing labor costs are a small part of production expense—$51.75 for a $1,150 tractor and $80 for an average of 35 farm implements per $1,000 of retail price.

THIS HORSE CAN'T LOSE!

"Any losses that we sustain in 1946 will be made up to us by Government out of our profits in 1944 and 1945."

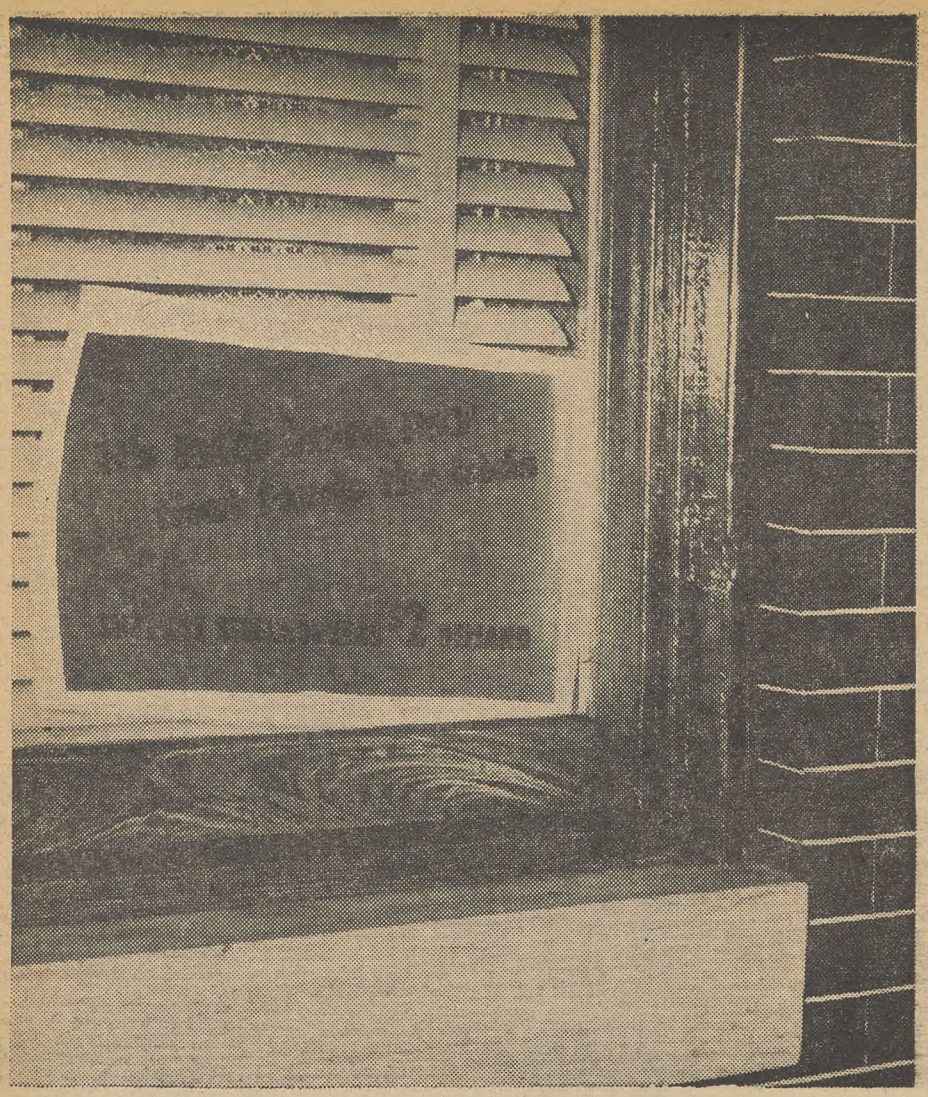
This amazingly bald statement of the carry-back provisions of the corporate income tax law was used this week by a textile company official in Georgia as a club over the heads of workers who have taken a strike vote in protest against continued refusal of the company to live up to War Labor Board directives.

It was contained in a circular letter sent to workers of the Union Manufacturing Co., Union Point, Ga., by the president of the firm, reports Kenneth Douty, Georgia state director of the CIO Textile Workers Union.

Other cotton textile mills in Georgia and elsewhere are also taking advantage of rebate features of the tax laws to defray losses sustained by strikes, Douty said, but this particular concern is the first to boast about it openly in an effort to undermine the morale of the workers.

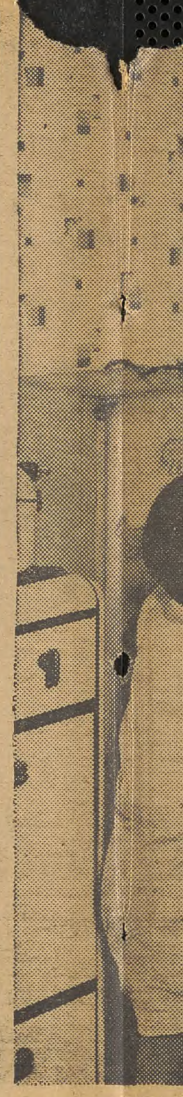
Some 9,000 textile workers are now on strike in 10 or more mills in Georgia, North and South Carolina, including 4,000 who have been on strike against the Erwin chain of mills in North Carolina since Oct. 8. Morale of the strikers is high, Douty declared. The number who have gone back to work after three months is a mere handful.

The Georgia CIO Council and the Textile Union are undertaking a campaign to bring home to Senators and Congressmen the flagrant injustice of the carry-back feature of the present tax law.

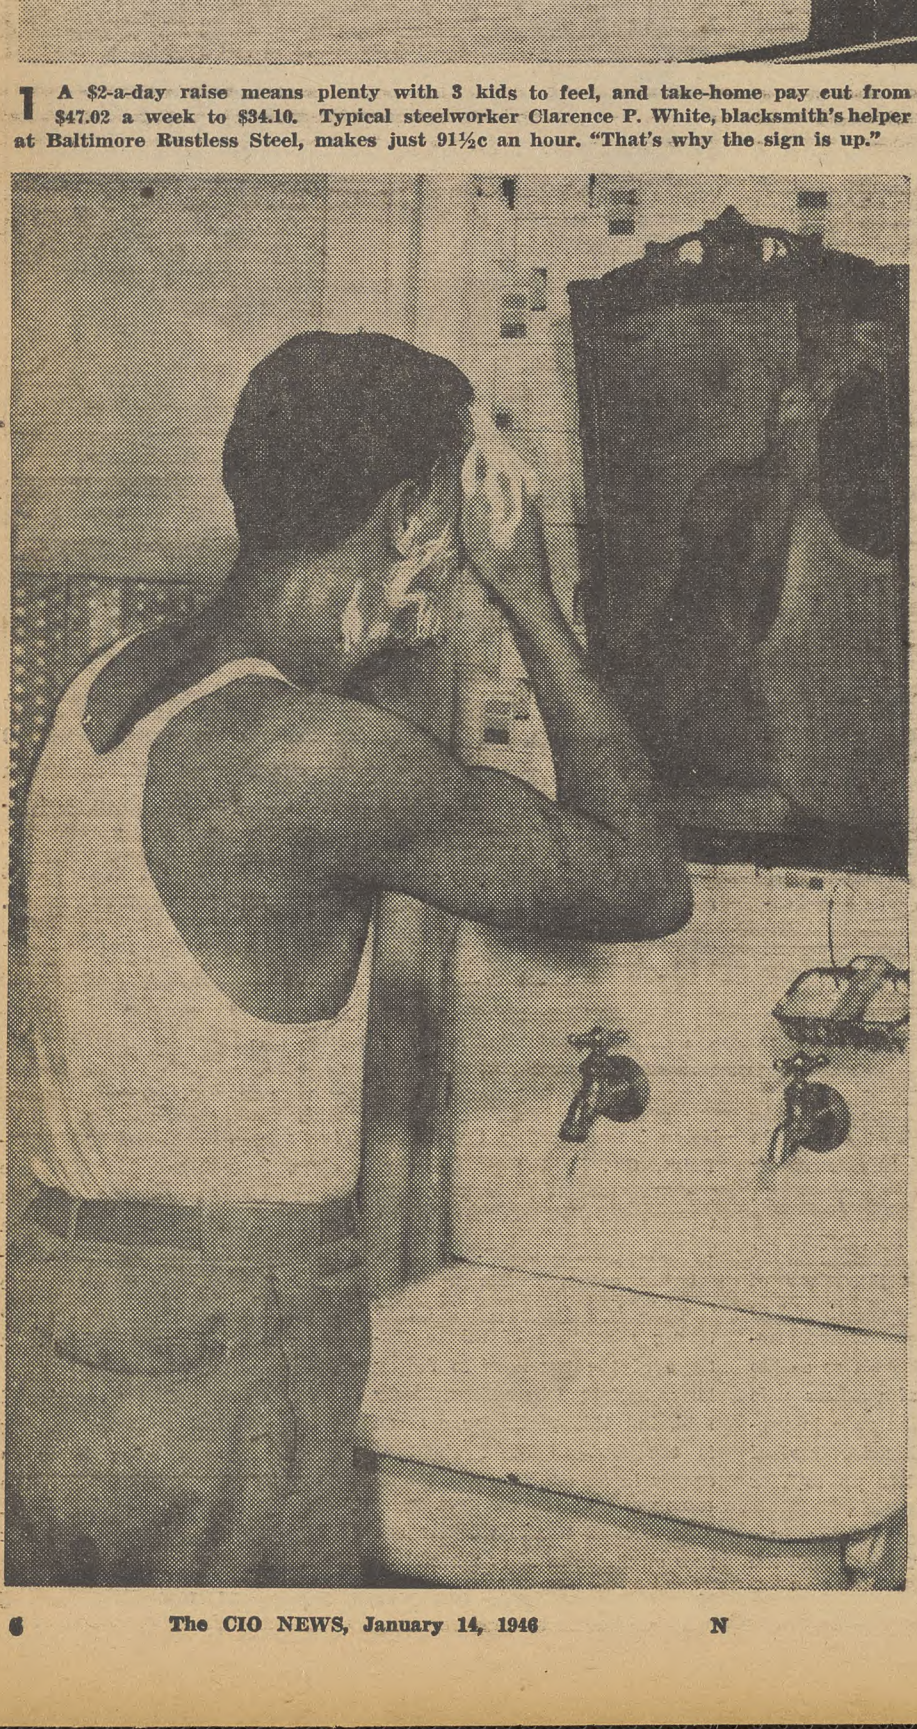


1 A $2-a-day raise means plenty with 3 kids to feel, and take-home pay cut from $47.02 a week to $34.10. Typical steelworker Clarence P. White, blacksmith's helper at Baltimore Rustless Steel, makes just 91½c an hour. "That's why the sign is up."

2 The Whites have been married six years. He made 25c an hour then. They pay $3 a week rent—half OPA ceiling, because relatives own their 15-foot-wide house. Louise is a housewife. Dolores is 2, Joseph 3. "We hope we can bring them up right."



3 Louise irons worked 48 they can't save



5 Clarence washes up after work while Louise prepares his dinner. The kids have eaten earlier. The Whites' recreation is mostly reading. "I get a lot of unions papers" he says. "Our store bill is right high. There's not much left."

ON A CA

"WHEN YOU feel like eat

When you mak three growing kids t

That's the way They are typical of Clarence is a bl $47.02—after deduction 40 hours. On a typical

"Last week," he s an additional job on or else she'll ha e to kids? We don't know.

Clarence is a me at Rustless Iron & 25c an hour at the hours a week, I reco organization. We us morning and knock get fed up? You ain

What about a st about a strike—you f FDR said, they're eith

The $2 a day rais to save $10 a week Now it's all going for the two youngest child cost $5 to $5.50 a pai On 40 hours work we

The Whites buy t route man. The pay three quarts a day mo the milk bill to build

Three winter suits ally, I haven't bought says Clarence. "We've

The Whites live in wide. They could just in the living room. T had been a bathroom.

Louise irons while Anthony, 5, watches. The Whites used to save $10 a week when Clarence worked 48 hours a week. But it soon went for coal, clothing, hospital bills. Now, on 40 hours, can't save a cent. "They used to charge $1 for extracting teeth—now $2. Doctors the same."

4 "What my husband does is OK with me," says Louise. "He provides for me and the kids. But Clarence adds: "The way it looks now, unless I get another extra job or a better full-time one, Louise will have to go to work." What to do with the kids, they haven't been able to figure.

N, 40 HOURS WORK WE CAN'T SAVE A THING

By FRED d'AVILA

EN YOU throw a 12-pound maul all day, you el like eating when you come home."

you make 91½c an hour, with a wife and ing kids to feed, you can't eat much.

the way it is with the Clarence P. Whites. ypical of thousands of steel workers.

e is a blacksmith's helper. He used to make deductions—for a 48-hour week. Now he works n a typical week he makes $34.10, net.

eek," he says, "I told Louise that I'll have to get al job on my days off or a better full-time one, ll have to go to work. Who's to take care of the don't know."

ce is a member of the CIO United Steelworkers, s Iron & Steel, Baltimore. "When I worked for our at the Gibbs cannery, sometimes 60 to 80 eek, I recognized that working men need a labor on. We used to go to work at 5 o'clock in the and knock off at any time in the night. Did I ? You ain't kidding!"

bout a steel strike? "There's one thing I like ike—you find out who's with you. It's like old hey're either for you or against you."

a day raise demanded by the union? "We used a week when Clarence was working 48 hours. l going for coal, clothing, hospital bills for when ngest children were born. Kids' shoes—good ones—$5.50 a pair. We need five bottles of milk a day. s work we can't save a thing."

ites buy two quarts of milk a day from a dairy They pay $3.92 every two weeks. "I buy two to s a day more from the store because I don't want l to build up too high," says Louise.

inter suits for the kids cost $55. "Myself, person- n't bought a suit of clothes in the last three years," e. "We've got to take care of the kids first."

ites live in a typical Baltimore row house, 15 feet could just do setting up exercises—one at a time— g room. There are three bedrooms upstairs. One bathroom.

"We needed the room when my wife's mother came to live with us. We moved out the bath tub. I take a shower at the plant. Louise and the kids use a wash tub. The toilet is in the basement."

The Whites pay $3 a week rent. The OPA ceiling is $6. "Lots of steelworkers pay $28-$29 a month. And a lot of them don't even have inside toilets."

A typical White pay check for 48 hours looked like this:

Gross pay, 48 hours	$51.70
Old age pension	.51
Income tax	2.00
Insurance	1.07
Credit union (savings)	10.00
Misc. purchases, work gloves, etc.	1.10
Net	37.02

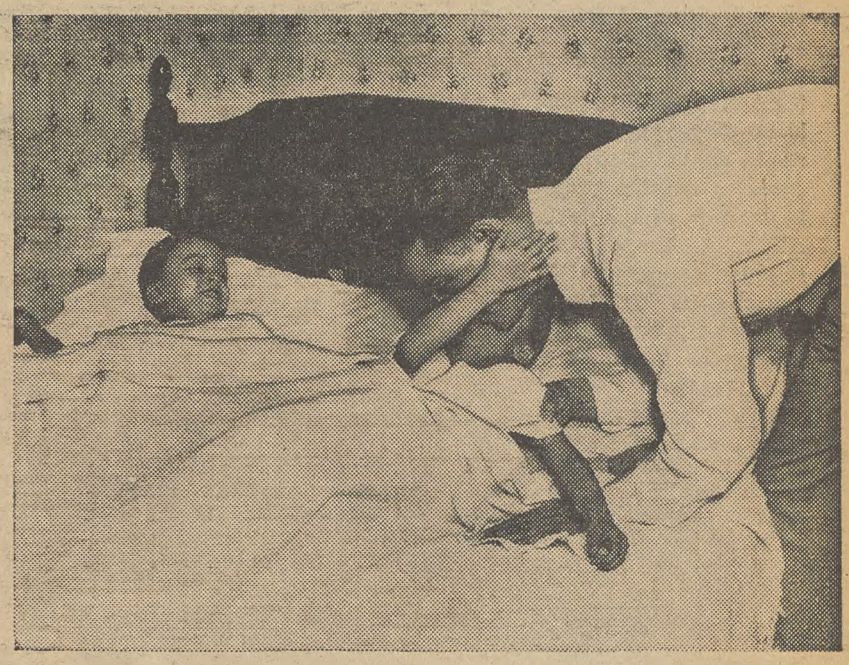
A 40-hour pay check still had a $10 credit union deduction (savings) but this has since come off because the Whites cannot afford to save on his present low net. Here's the way that check looked:

Gross pay, 40 hours	$36.60
Old age pension	.37
Income tax	.70
Insurance	1.07
Credit union (savings)	10.00
Misc.	.36
Net	24.10

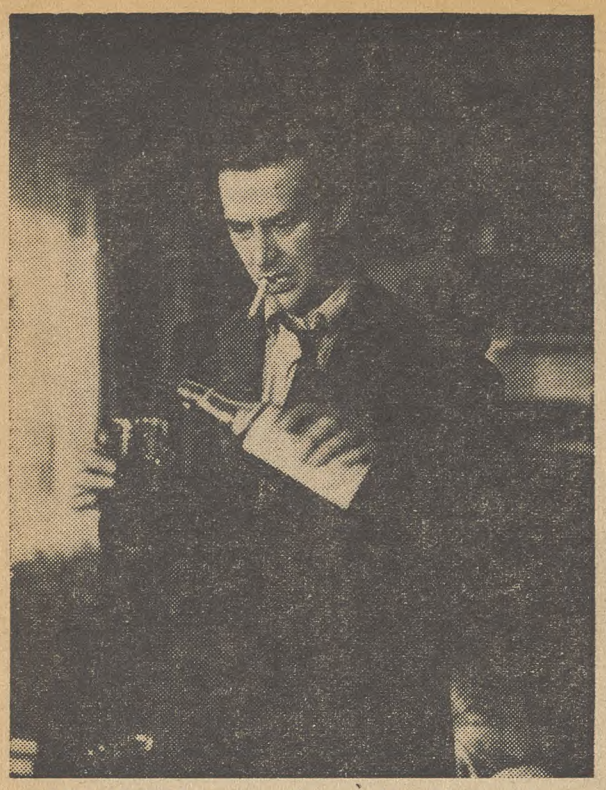
"We've been on 40 hours since December," says Clarence.

What's he going to do about it? Strike—if necessary—with 700,000 other steel workers. Write to Congress, too. "Here are some letters I got from Congressmen on the full employment bill. I enjoy answers like that. That way the working people get to know who's for them and who's against them, and you learn how to vote.

"The sign in the window? About take-home pay? My wife gets mad at me for wiping off the glass so everyone can see the sign. She says there are so few up in other windows on this block. But I tell her, 'What I get as far as wage increases go, you'll benefit by, so why squawk?' That's the way it is. We need more dough and we're going to get it."



6 Clarence kisses the kids goodnight, then (2nd from left) enjoys nickel beers with CIO Steelworkers' staff representative Ferd Bindel (left), John Loring and Fred Philips at Bender's bar. This modest fun is about all he can afford.



1 Ray Milland (as Don Birnam) does a top notch performance as the dypso in "The Lost Weekend." It's always just one more drink to quench his thirst, and that leads to still another.

2 When his money runs out, Don resorts to thievery, borrowing, pawning, stealing. He even makes a touch off of Gloria (Doris Dowling), a lady of the evening, in order to get one more drink.

3 Weakened by lack of food, Don wanders up the Bowery and 3rd Ave. in search of an open pawnshop. He'll pawn anything for a drink even—as below—his girl friend's leopard coat.

LOST WEEKEND

THE LOST WEEKEND (Paramount Pictures) with Ray Milland, Jane Wyman, Howard da Silva, Doris Dowling, directed by Billy Wider.

TECHNICALLY THE LOST WEEKEND has been classed with THE INFORMER, that all-time classic, probing the conscience of a stoolpigeon. That it is propaganda, there is no doubt. Charles Jackson wrote the novel about his own experiences, the experiences. that made him a member of Alcoholics Anonymous, a crusading group. THE LOST WEEKEND was obviously his last binge, as this was Don Birmam's. The film is much better than the book.

Ray Milland turns in a tremendous performance as the dypsomaniac, a lovable fellow, and yet so weak he constantly disappoints his fiance and his long suffering brother. The movie opens with Wick Birmam taking Don away to the country for the weekend. Don has just gotten over a 10-day drunk. His nerves are raw and he needs quiet, care and rest. But Don doesn't want to go. His whole body is crying out for another drink.

He slyly routes his loved ones off to a concert, persauding them he needs a little rest. And that is the weekend that is lost. It begins on Thursday night, and it ends Tuesday. The milk bottles accumulate in the hallway, and Don sneaks in and out, hiding from his waiting sweetheart, searching stealing, pawning, begging, anything for a drink.

Most humorous scene is his attendance at the performance of La Traviata. The chorus is drinking. Don becomes so thirsty, he can no longer hear the performance, or stay in his seat. Emotionally, he is on stage imbibing with the chorus. This scene ranks with the hunger scene in Charlie Chaplain's Gold Rush. It doesn't quite have the pathos, and sympathetic appeal of hunger for food, but it sets the tone, the insane thirst of THE LOST WEEKEND.

Jane Wyman turns in a sympathetic performance as Don's sweetheart, the girl who made him stay sober for the first six weeks after he met her. But then her parents came with questions of his job, his security, his income, and Don went on another binge. These scenes from his past come into the picture in his explanation to Howard De Silva of Nat's bar, as Don begins his lost weekend. The little rings on the table grow, as does Don's ability to tell a story. With alcohol in his belly, he ranks with the poets. He can talk his novel, but with the typewriter in front of him, he gets no further then "The Bottle," a novel by Don Birnam, for Helen.

He ends up in Bellevue's alcoholic ward. At night, he can not sleep, when the other addicts get the dt's. The nurse has told him that he'll get them too—the alcohol content of his blood shows that. He steals a doctor's overcoat and runs. At home, the dt's come, not beetles, or ants, or bees, or little annoying things as they had in the ward, but a bat and a mouse. Helen comes in time to help him through the ordeal of his first dt's.

It's hard to say how Don gets cured in the film. The sanitarium has failed. His newfound love for Helen has failed. He has gone from one drunk to another, and then suddenly it ends. That is the one unconvincing part. Nat the bartender plays his role in it, and the kindly act helps. And Helen plays her's wittily in trying to locate the gun, to prevent his suicide. These touches open up the dams in him, and he begins to pour out the whole novel, from the beginning of that lost weekend, and thus ends his sickness. It's a little hard to believe, especially when the urge has been so graphically portrayed. Perhaps the full horror of the alcoholic ward at the hospital, and the realization of all the horrible things drink has driven him to, the stealing, and the holdup, the purse snatching, and the lady of the evening, and the fall, are enough, but I don't know.

A Prof. Selden Bacon, chairman of Connecticut's Board for the Study, Care and Treatment of Inebriates told the N. Y. state conference on Social Welfare that about 2,000,000 of the nation's drinkers are alcoholics. One-third of this group are neurotics seeking self confidence in alcohol. Social conditions and shock makes others into chronic cases. It was obvious why Don Birnam was one. He'd lost confidence in his ability to write. Perhaps then the cure was convincing, with his release of words for The Lost Weekend.

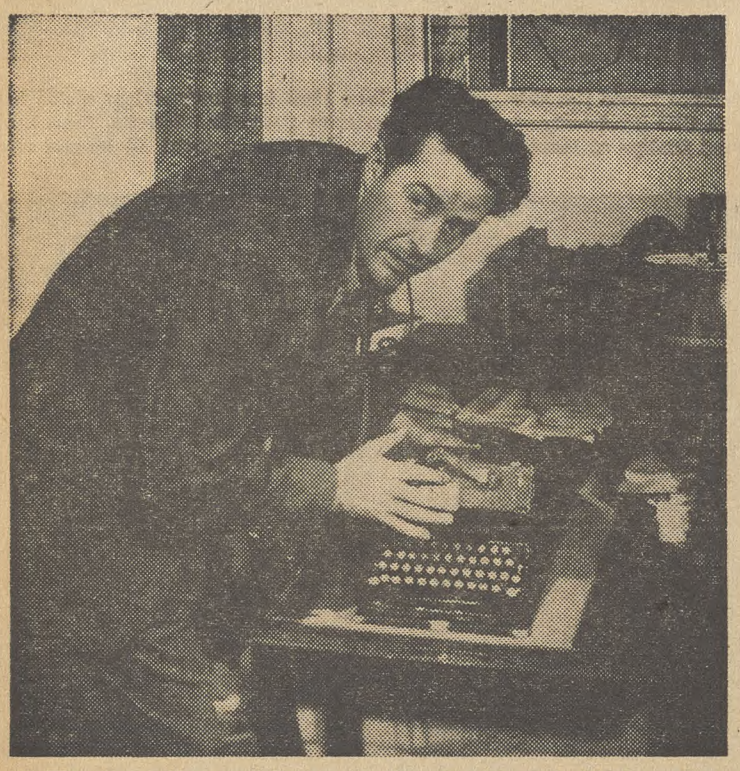
Helen Kay

LATE FILMS

Tomorrow Is Forever (International Pictures) with Claudette Colbert, Orson Welles and George Brent. It has some good lines, but the story is so improbable, they should have left it in the Ladies Home Journal. The story is built around Orson Welles, a soldier of '18 who chose to remain an Unknown Soldier, when his body is banged up. When the Nazis murder the Austrian Doctor who cares for him, he returns to America as a refugee, comes into contact with his loved ones, sends his son off to finish the job for him. Overacted and unconvincing.

It Happened At the Inn (MGM International). This French film directed by Jacques Becker won some European prizes. It starts off as satire, takes you through the insane machinations of the Goupis family, French peasants, ends up with tragedy and goodwill. You wonder how it could have gotten any prize at all, and why it was produced.

Adventure For Two (Two Cities —British Flm). Laurence Olivier plays the part of a Russian engineer, Ivan Dimitrievitch Kouznetsoff (where have we heard that name before? Of course it's only Smith), who comes to England in 1939 to see to the construction and test of his propeller invention for ice breakers. He is cocksure of himself and mistrustful of the British. He considers the British pretty stiff. It's a case where they learn a bit about each other through the years that follow in 1941.



4 The typewriter contributes to the surprise and tricky ending, one of the few weak spots in a bang-up movie.

5 Helen St. James' trust and confidence in his ability, and her love for him, helps pull him out of the dypso class.

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

A state-wide meeting will be held Jan. 12 in Atlanta, Ga., of CIO and International Union representatives, under the guidance of Paul R. Christopher, who is the CIO and PAC Southern Representative. Regional Director Charles Gillman will preside. A similar meeting will be held Jan. 15 in Birmingham, Ala., to be followed at a later date by a meeting in New Orleans. Similar meetings have been planned for other Southern states.

CIO Natl. Representative Delmond Garst will attend in behalf of the National Office. CIO directors are collecting material on organizing potentialities. It is hoped when this data is collected it will furnish the necessary information for the planning of effective and sustained organizing drives which will involve most of our International Unions.

This move is viewed with alarm by the reactionary congressmen who come from the South and the numerous institutions of bigotry that have in the past thrived in these areas. To progressive groups and liberty-loving people, it is a healthy omen. It must be remembered that many of the anti-labor congressman from these areas hold key positions on important legislative committees by reason of seniority.

Organizing and educating the working men and women is the real effective answer to this legislative bottle-neck.

* * *

One healthy sign in the industrial arena appeared this week with the announcement by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO of the signing of an agreement with the Kaiser-Frazier Corp. which has taken over the Willow Run plant in Detroit and is entering the automobile manufacturing field. The agreement provides for a union shop. The corporation will pay the highest wages in the industry and will set aside $5.00 per car built in a fund which will be applied to wages and other beneficial provisions. This agreement will be watched with great interest by the auto workers and other workers throughout the nation.

Contrast this with the campaign General Motors is waging by paid ads in cosmopolitan papers throughout the country, joining forces with other reactionary groups to support their stubborn anti-labor position. But the workers of GM remain solid—their ranks unbroken.

No settlement yet of the Steel issues. The freezing wage policy continues. Somebody spoke about "cooling off." If the U. S. Steel Corp. forces the workers out on strike on January 14 it will be the largest single industrial strike in American industry.

* * *

At the time of writing this column plans are being laid for many hundreds of thousands of workers to walk out to force a wage increase which should have been negotiated by collective bargaining.

The Glass workers strike continues and in New York City the ACA members were forced into a strike on Jan. 8. The strike in American Tobacco continues. This corporation is resorting to the old familiar tactics. Our members well know who they are—manufacturers of Lucky Strike cigarettes—and they are taking note of this. They are rallying to the support of these workers everywhere. The position of the CIO as stated by Pres. Murray with so much clarity, is endorsed by every honest working man and woman throughout the nation. It is a fight not only for the members of the CIO but for a sound American economy and against greed and special privilege.

The UE strike is called for Jan. 15 and the Packinghouse Workers will be out on Jan. 16.

This is a peoples' struggle. The interests of returning veterans, farmers, small businessmen and industrial workers everywhere are all involved. It is either back to the Harding-Hoover policies or onward with CIO and a sound, national economy and security for all Americans and the Nation.

* * *

CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Carmichael of Boston, reports: Union Plate & Wire, Attleboro, Mass., CIO-PJNWA 174, No Union 160; Barrett Division, Allied Chemical, Malden, Mass., CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers received 25 votes out of 25 eligible; L. F. Fales Machine Co., Walpole, Mass., USA-CIO 72, against 52.

W. A. Copeland, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Memphis, Tenn., advises: Union Station Baggage Handlers & Clerks, UTSEA-CIO 78, AFL 62. CIO Rep. Henry White and UTSEA Local president won this group from the AFL which had represented them for some 40 years.

E. B. Pugh, CIO Reg. Dir., Virginia, announces: Southern Aid Society (with 14 offices in Virginia and one in the District of Columbia) AGENTS: CIO 59, against 5; CLERKS: 24, against 0. This campaign was conducted by E. W. Langon, Pres. UOPWA local, with a committee from the local assisted by CIO Field Rep. Ted DuCuennois.

George Brown, Dir. Org. IWA-CIO, reports: Ruffner & Payen, Richmond, Va., CIO 46, against 0; R. E. Richardson & Sons, CIO 20, against 0; R. E. Richardson & Sons, CIO 20, against 11. CIO Rep. DuCuennois handled these campaigns for IWA Intl. Rep. R. Wray Ait, who is in the hospital recuperating from an automobile accident.

The strike of 7,000 members of the CIO America n Communications Assn. this week in N. Y. City shut down Western Union offices tight as the workers continued their struggle for a long overdue wage increase. A section of the long picket line at the company's main office at 60 Hudson St. is shown above. Signs carried by the strikers read: "Western Union Pays the Lowest Wages of any Major Industry. We Want Decent Wages!" An arbitration offer made by Mayor O'Dwyer just before the strike was accepted by the union but rejected by the Western Union Telegraph Company.

SHIPBUILDERS' UNION HOLDS ITS BIGGEST CONVENTION

THE union's wage demands, problems arising from heavy cutbacks in shipyards since the end of the war, pledges of support for the CIO Auto Workers' strike against General Motors, and the need for stronger political action by labor were some of the major subjects taken up at the 11th annual convention of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers meeting this week in Atlantic City.

Some 800 delegates from shipyard locals on the East, West and Gulf coasts attended the convention, the largest so far in the union's history. Local 1, Camden, N. J., represented by 115 votes, had the largest delegation, followed by Kearney, N. J., Local 16 with 108 votes.

Pres. John Green, in an address on the opening day stressing the need for stronger political activity by labor, told the delegates that it might be necessary for labor to form its own political party to back its legislative program, if members of both parties in the present Congress continued "to disregard the wishes of the many to serve the selfish interests of the few."

Charging Congress with "scuttling" the full employment bill and other important social legislation, Green declared:

"I say to Congress and to the leaders of both major political parties: we mean to have jobs and we mean to have an end to all forms of discrimination, either with you or without you."

Full support for the Auto Workers in their strike for a wage increase against General Motors was pledged unanimously by the delegates, following a lengthy discussion from the floor. Philip Van Gelder, the union's secretary-treasurer, who was recently discharged from the Army, called the GM strike "a test case for labor."

Pointing out that General Motors is the largest and most consistent profit maker in the country, Van Gelder said that the strike "is the key fight to raise wages and hold down prices and the only salvation of labor in this country in the immediate future."

AWAIT REPORT OF OIL PANEL

HEARINGS before the Government's fact-finding panel investigating the wage dispute between the CIO Oil Workers Union and the oil industry concluded early this week in Washington after short conferences attended by representatives of the union and only two of some 53 companies involved. These were Socony Vacuum Oil and the Atlantic Refining Co.

The panel will study the facts of the case and report on its findings when they are completed. The short hearing this week was the resumption of hearings which recessed in December for 16 days to allow the two sides an opportunity to settle the wage dispute by collective bargaining if possible.

It was hoped that an earlier settlement with Sinclair providing an increase averaging 23c an hour with an additional increase of 4c and 6c for the two night shifts, would serve as a pattern for other settlements.

But Pres. O. A. Knight of the union reported at the panel hearing this week that during the recess, the only settlements reached were with Pure Oil for its operations in Cabin Creek, W. Va., and the Texas Co. for its West Tulsa, Oklahoma, refinery, affecting several thousand members of the union.

MEAT PACKING DISPUTE STILL DEADLOCKED

HOPE for a settlement of the CIO Packinghouse Workers' wage dispute with the meat packing industry before Jan. 16, date set by the union for a nation-wide strike, appeared no brighter this week.

Efforts of the U. S. Conciliation Service to aid in negotiating the union's wage demands at conferences with union and company representatives held in Chicago failed to bring settlement any closer than when the wage demands were first presented last October.

Representatives of the Swift and Armour companies, meeting in separate sessions on Wednesday, renewed their previous offer of a 7½c hourly increase, while the union held its position that only a more substantial increase can avert the pending strike.

Meetings with Cudahy, Morrell and Wilson companies were scheduled to be held later.

The union's demand for a 25c an hour increase calls for 17½c to be put into effect immediately with the balance to be negotiated later when the wage picture becomes clearer.

In rejecting the 7½c increase, Pres. Lewis J. Clark of the union declared it was "wholly out of line with the needs of the packinghouse workers who have to meet the high living costs of today with an obsolete wage scale."

"We have no alternative in light of this attitude by the companies but to go ahead with our plans to call a strike that will shut down the meat packing industry," he declared.

Tomorrow's Citizens By Rose H. Alschuler

THEY COOPERATE BETTER IF ALLOWED TO HELP

Even in the best regulated families, children occasionally need medical repairs or a few days in bed. Allowed to help, whether with bandaging, holding the tongue depresser, medicine bottle, thermometer case or in whatever way possible, the child is likely to be cooperative and uncomplaining. Actual hospital observations indicate difficulties with children are nine times as frequent when adults take complete responsibility as when children are encouraged to help.

Lib. of Congress—Rothstein for FSA. Copyright CIO NEWS, 1946.

CWA BACKS STRIKES

By ELEANOR FOWLER

ENLIST every CIO family behind the wage increase campaign, is the keynote of the call to action issued by Pres. Faye Stephenson of the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries in the January CWA Washington News Letter.

"January 1946 is a critical month for our unions," the call begins. "Steel, UE and Packing may be forced to strike in order to win their fight for a living wage.

"The welfare of our country is at stake. If our unions win, we will have taken a stride forward towards full production and full employment for all, by lifting the buying power of the people.

"The officers of CWA call upon every affiliate to join the fight.

"If your local goes on strike your place is in the strike kitchen, on the picket line and talking to the families of your union brothers.

"If your local is not called upon strike, you still have a big job. Help in the strike kitchens and picket lines in your community, collect strike donations and do a job of getting your community behind CIO's 30% base wage increase campaign. That means letters to the papers, speeches to organizations, talks with business men and neighbors."

The Christmas activities of the auxiliaries of the United Automobile Workers in Detroit are a vivid example of how much the auxiliaries can do. Carrying out their slogan, "No UAW Family Without a Christmas," the city-wide auxiliary strike committee, chaired by Florence Kasper, collected over 500 new toys for distribution at the union's children's Christmas party.

Ford auxiliary also undertook to supply baskets for needy families of eight locals. They collected $1,732.37 for the project from various building units of the Ford local. They filled 247 baskets with all of the standard foods a family needs as well as Christmas goodies. The GM locals in Detroit have expressed great appreciation.

The Congress of Women's Auxiliaries stands ready to advise existing groups and to assist in building new ones to help in this crisis.

HEALTH INSURANCE CAN BEAT TB

By Sidney M. Greenberg, M.D.

DURING 1946, about 60,000 Americans will die of tuberculosis — a preventable disease. The needless death of so many individuals year after year is a shocking example of the failure of American medicine to utilize fully the modern techniques which science has placed at its disposal.

Each year we spend more than $100,000,000 to keep the victims of tuberculosis in sanatoria. Most of this money comes from the taxpayer.

When tuberculosis is discovered early it can usually be arrested and cured within a few months. The cost to the patient is relatively small.

If tuberculosis is discovered only after its symptoms have brought the patient to the doctor, the cure—if possible at all—may take a year or longer. During the prolonged and expensive treatment the sick person is unable to work. Usually he has to be hospitalized at public expense, and frequently his family is forced to depend on charity for subsistence.

Tuberculosis is one of the most insidious of all diseases. It sneaks up on the victim without warning, settles down in his system and goes quietly about its deadly work, then suddenly lets loose with a punch that sends him staggering.

As a result, only 10% of the patients in whom doctors diagnose tuberculosis are in the early and easily curable stages of the ailment when the discovery is made. In the other 90% the disease is well advanced before it is even noticed. About 40% of cases are not found until it is too late to begin life-saving treatment.

Is it necessary or inevitable that we continue to handle the problem of tuberculosis in this slip-shod, wasteful and inhumane manner?

Students of public health, including many progressive-minded physicians, are convinced that it is not. They insist that x-rays and other modern diagnostic procedures must be made freely available to all the people.

They believe this can be accomplished through legislation such as the Wagner-Murray-Dingle bill (S. 1050), which is now before Congress for consideration.

Under this bill, a worker would pay a small proportion of his wages regularly into a national health insurance fund. In return for his contributions, and an equal sum paid by the employer, the insured person and his entire family would be entitled to all the medical care they needed, whenever they needed it.

With such an arrangement, periodic medical examinations could for the first time become a reality for the mass of the American people. If the examination showed the presence of tuberculosis or any other disease, treatment could be started at once without any question or worry about cost.

Moreover, under the terms of the bill the patient would receive a partial cash payment to make up for his loss of earning power during his illness.

Furthermore, the bill would provide government funds for the construction of hospitals and health centers in all parts of the country. All of this would cost about the same as we now spend, as a Nation, for medical care. But we would get a great deal more for our money than we do under the present wasteful system.

MRS. TRUMAN HOST TO DIME DRIVE HEADS

Mrs. Harry S. Truman this week followed a custom of her predecessor, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, by playing hostess at the White House to women leaders of the Natl. Foundation for Infantile Paralysis at a radio broadcast and tea for the benefit of the 1946 March of Dimes. The campaign opened Jan. 13.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray urged CIO members to support the fund drive in a statement issued when the campaign was originally announced, and unions in various parts of the country have responded generously.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1725-41 W. North Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

the ADVENTURES of

JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with acutal persons, living or dead.

SUE HAS TOLD JIM OF MICKEY'S FURIOUS ANGER ON HEARING THAT SHE'S BEEN GOING OUT WITH STEVE DENTON, SON OF THE OWNER OF THE ROTOR CONSTRUCTION COMPANY. AND THEN JIM ASKS WHETHER SUE THINKS MICKEY IS INVOLVED IN THE ANTI-UNION DRIVE AT ROTOR...

I-I KNOW THAT THEIR LEADER IS A RECENTLY RETURNED YET, BUT IT.. IT COULDN'T BE MICKEY. AND YET...

HIYA, SUE!

STEVE! I'M SO GLAD TO SEE YOU. STEVE -- THIS IS JIM BARRY. WE WERE JUST TALKING ABOUT YOU.

HELLO, DENTON.

HIYA, JIM. SPEAK OF THE DEVIL, YOU KNOW...

I'M SORRY, JIM, BUT WE REALLY HAVE TO RUSH OFF NOW. I'LL BE SEEING YOU AGAIN, SOON, AND WE'LL CONTINUE OUR CONVERSATION.

OKAY, SUE. THANKS. SO LONG, DENTON.

ITEM 1, THE BOSS' SON IS A UNION MEMBER. ITEM 2, THE BOSS' SON IS SUSIE'S NEW BOY FRIEND. ITEM 3, A RECENTLY RETURNED VET IS LEADING THE DRIVE AGAINST THE UNION. I WONDER...

JIM!

I THOUGHT I TOLD YOU TO KEEP YOUR NOSE OUTTA MY BUSINESS!

LOOK, KID. I KNOW YOU'RE SORE AT THE WORLD, AND MAYBE YOU'VE GOT GOOD REASON. BUT LISTEN TO ME A SECOND, MICKEY. I DON'T WANT TO SEE YOU GET HURT-- MORE.

OKAY, I'M LISTENING.

SUSIE'S TOLD ME ABOUT YOUR QUARREL, MICKEY. SHE'S ONLY A KID AND A SMOOTH, NICE-LOOKING GUY LIKE DENTON CAN MAKE AN IMPRESSION ON HER. YOU CAN'T BLAME HER FOR BEING UNCERTAIN -- ESPECIALLY SINCE SHE HASN'T SEEN YOU FOR TWO YEARS...

GIVE HER A LITTLE TIME... SHE'LL COME AROUND--

YEAH -- SHE'LL COME AROUND... RIGHT INTO STEVE DENTON'S ARMS!

MARRIAGE IS A PRETTY SERIOUS THING AND SHE'S PROBABLY BEEN DOING A LOT OF THINKING ABOUT IT... SHE JUSTS WANTS TO BE SURE.

DON'T YOU THINK I'VE DONE A LITTLE THINKING ABOUT IT? WE DISCUSSED MARRIAGE IN EVERY LETTER... IT WASN'T SOMETHING SUDDEN---

WHAT DO YOU THINK KEPT ME GOING FOR TWO YEARS? SITTING IN A STINKING FOXHOLE DAY AFTER DAY... ALL I WAS THINKING ABOUT WAS WINNING THE WAR SO THAT FASCISM CAN BE DESTROYED AND GUYS LIKE ME CAN LIVE IN PEACE... GET DECENT JOBS AT DECENT PAY... HAVE A HOME... A WIFE... KIDS... AND THE FIRST THING THAT HAPPENS WHEN I GET HOME IS HAVE MY GIRL KICK MY TEETH IN!

JAN. 15 STRIKE DATE

UE-CIO HITS FIRMS' 'ARROGANT' STAND

DEMANDING a living wage in place of cuts in take-home pay, 200,000 workers in General Electric, Westinghouse and the electrical division of General Motors take to the picket-lines on Jan. 15—unless the companies bargain "in good faith and make a wage offer that is unconditional, adequate and uniform." The workers are members of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

This is the UE-CIO stand taken at a joint conference of local union officials from GE, Westinghouse and GM unions in N. Y. last week to set Jan. 15 as the date of a nation-wide UE-CIO strike.

The UE-CIO demands $2-a-day wage and salary increases for employes of the three companies, whose plants stretch from coast to coast in 75 cities and 14 states.

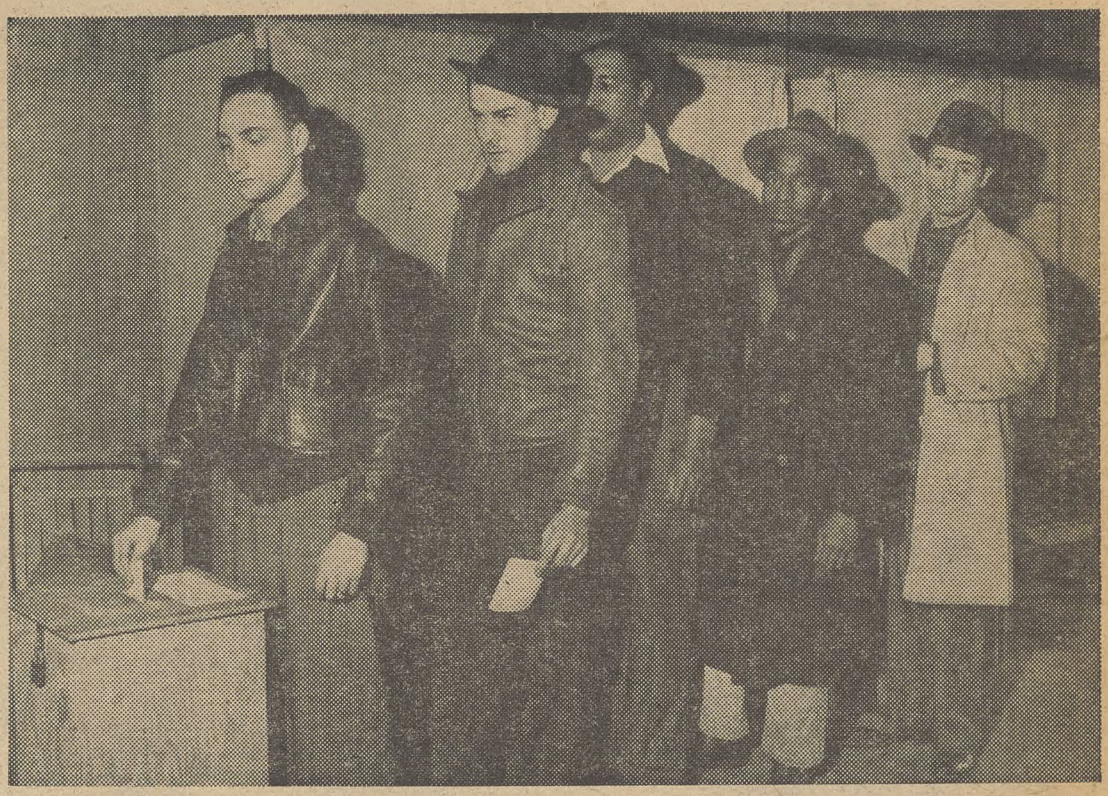
UE-CIO accuses GE and Westinghouse of having "arrogantly rejected both government mediation and collective bargaining in good faith."

According to UE Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald and Sec-Treas. Julius Emspak, "General Electric has failed to meet any of the wage essentials required by their employes. The GE offer is inadequate and does not satisfy the needs of GE employes. Furthermore, the offer is not uniform and therefore not acceptable. Lastly, the offer remains conditioned by demands of speed-up of employes, contract cancellation and wage-rate cutting, which provide other reasons for its rejection."

The strike, when called, will affect 100,000 workers in GE, 75,000 in Westinghouse and 25,000 in General Motors. More than 84% of these workers voted Dec. 13 in favor of strike action unless the three companies "bargain in good faith" on the $2 wage demand.

Setting of the strike date by UE-CIO, third largest CIO union, representing 700,000 electrical and radio workers in 22 states throughout the nation, follows a strategy conference of leaders of the CIO "big three" with Pres. Philip Murray in Washington last week.

At a recent conference of UE locals, it was reported that "solid community support" is being demonstrated by townspeople, small business, housewives and "particularly by returning veterans who see the UE-CIO $2-a-day wage demand as a necessity for their own welfare."



UE-CIO workers voted in overwhelming majorities for a strike if the electrical industry's big three—General Electric, Westinghouse and General Motors—continue to refuse to bargain in good faith. (Top) Members of UE Local 202 line up to cast their ballots in a Westinghouse plant at Springfield, Mass. (Bottom) Headed by a veteran, fresh back from overseas, this line of General Electric workers, UE Local 422, voted 3-1 for a strike at GE's Bloomfield, N. J., plant.

Discussing reasons for the impending strike action, Fitzgerald said "the General Electric and Westinghouse companies have adopted an arrogant attitude to both the U. S. Conciliation Service and to the union representing their employes as well as to the general public."

"As local union delegates have expressed it," Fitzgerald said, "our union has used extreme restraint and patience in seeking negotiations with GE and Westinghouse during the past months. Although UE-CIO has had national collective bargaining contracts with these companies for many years, the companies now refuse to negotiate in good faith with their employes.

"The arrogant and provocative attitude of these companies is a menace to the general public as well as to their employes.

"1. Both General Electric and Westinghouse rejected offers of the U. S. Conciliation Service in Washington during the past week to mediate the present differences over UE-CIO's demand for $2-a-day wage and salary increases.

"2. Both General Electric and Westinghouse refuse to comply with a ruling of the War Labor Board which would narrow unjust and discriminating differentials in wages of women workers.

"3. General Motors Corp. offers a 13½c-an-hour increase, which fails to meet the urgent economic needs of their employes. This offer has been found unacceptable by GM workers, who face rate cuts and higher prices.

"4. General Electric, after months of refusal to bargain in good faith, makes a conditional offer which in no way meets the critical needs of GE employes. The GE offer is correctly characterized by us as a 'miserable package thrown to GE employes to take it or leave it.' This offer is made in obvious bad faith. Further proof of GE's bad faith is the action of the company cancelling its contract with UE-CIO on the very day this 'miserable package' was presented.

"5. Westinghouse has maintained a consistently arrogant attitude towards its employes, refusing even to make any offer whatsoever in response to the UE demand for a $2-a-day increase. Yet Westinghouse dares to ask its employes in the face of drastic cuts in wage rates and increased cost of living: 'What is there to negotiate?'

"These companies have proven their bad faith to their government, their employes, as well as to the general public," Fitzgerald stated.

"UE-CIO accuses GE and Westinghouse of engaging in a gigantic 'hold-up' of radios, washing machines and other electrical appliances and demands a Congressional investigation.

"We accuse these companies — GE and Westinghouse — of continuing to this day this 'hold-up' of the American people.

"We accuse these companies of continuing their gigantic hold-up of the American people, seeking to cast the blame for the shortage of radios, clocks, refrigerators and other appliances on their employes.

"We accuse these companies of seeking to wreck OPA price limitations completely in order to realize vast profits at the expense of the American people, just as these companies seek to realize vast profits at the expense of their own employes."

UE READY FOR STRIKE

The CIO Electrical Radio and Machine Workers are aware of the significance of their impending strikes against General Electric, Westinghouse and the electrical division of General Motors and have made financial preparations. Several weeks ago James J. Matles, UE director of organization, told the membership: "In my past experience we have never met such determined resistance to necessary wage increases from these leading companies, and in my judgment, if the present attitude of the companies does not change, our Union will be forced into most serious conflicts with one or more of them before the wage issue in our industry is settled."

He then outlined definite financial plans for supporting the strike which UE locals throughout the land have put into effect.

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 4

Copyright, 1945, The CIO NEWS

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

82

January 21, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

Picture of the Week: Residents of Bloomfield, N. J., rallied solidly behind these CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers pickets, as more than 200,000 over the nation went on strike. See picture feature, Pages 6-7.

STRIKE HARVESTER MON.

A strike of 30,000 members in 11 plants of the Intl. Harvester Co. called by the CIO Farm Equipment Workers for this Monday, Jan. 21, will bring the CIO union to grips again with one of the most stubborn anti-labor trusts in the nation, FE Pres. Grant W. Oakes said this week.

"The IHC empire controls 65% of the farm equipment industry," Oakes said, "despite developing competition in recent years, and occupies a powerful monopoly position which has been challenged in two government anti-trust suits in the past, the last in '37."

Preparations for the strike were completed this week at the five IHC plants in Chicago, and at the six others in Auburn, N. Y.; Richmond, Ind.; Bettendorf, Ia., and Rock Falls, Rock Island and East Moline, Ill. Negotiations for a contract have been going on since October 17, with Harvester stalling from week to week.

"We have done a lot of cooling-off in that period," Oakes said. "When Harvester workers pull the switches at 11 IHC plants, they will strike at the heart of the Harvester colossus, a $400,000,000 corporation which owns coal and iron mines, steel furnaces and rolling mills, twine mills and other plants—all in addition to their tractor, truck and farm equipment plants scattered across the country.

"Harvester also owns and operates many foreign manufacturing and sales subsidiaries, and its virtually undamaged German works got on surprisingly well with the Hitler machine—at least as well as the Ford and GM plants did."

Sec.-Treas. Gerald Fielde, who is director of the union's Natl. Harvester Council, declared that although IHC had amassed huge profits, it has refused "to grant its employes a living wage, or to establish working conditions which offer a minimum of security for Harvester workers and their union."

Three months of negotiations have failed to induce IHC to agree on even one of the issues raised by the union.

N. Y. CITY SOLID FOR ACA

NEW YORK CITY CIO'ers rallied strong this week behind the strike of the CIO American Communications Assn. against Western Union. Rank and file members and officials of sister CIO unions in the city marched on long picket lines, gave financial aid and spoke at union mass meetings in support of the 7,000 WU strikers who walked out Jan. 8, after trying unsuccessfully for many months to negotiate a wage increase.

Immediate cause of the strike was a directive issued by the Natl. War Labor Board the day it went out of existence, amending a 10% wage increase recommended previously by the N. Y. regional board. ACA Pres. Joseph Selly said the amended order, which was publicized as giving a 12% increase, was intentionally misleading, and would actually have meant no increase at all for many of the WU employes.

CIO seamen, office and transport workers and members of other CIO unions joined the ACA strikers by the thousands to march on picket lines which stretched around the company's main office on Hudson Street. Picketers relieved each other in relays, keeping the lines going 24 hours a day.

As the strike entered its second week, efforts of the company to frighten employes back to work continued without success. The union countered a company move to mail telegrams received by filing charges with the Federal Communications Commission pointing out that this was in violation of the Federal Communications Act.

The FCC upheld the union's charges and this week informed ACA Pres. Selly that it had ordered Western Union to discontinue immediately its practice of mailing telegrams.

11,000 OUT IN TEXTILE

ELEVEN thousand members of the CIO Textile Workers have been fighting a courageous battle against union-destroying employers, as picket lines in the North and South keep 12 cotton mills closed down tight.

Public support of the strikes continue at a high level, especially in the South, where newspapers demanded arbitration of the Erwin Mills issue and liberal-minded citizens contributed substantially to aid the strike, as the three local unions appealed to President Truman to appoint a fact-finding board in the Erwin walkout.

Workers are still on the picket lines at three Erwin mills in North Carolina and at other mills in North and South Carolina and Georgia, as well as in the West Warwick area of Rhode Island.

Issues in virtually all of the strikes are the same—attempts of the manufacturers to destroy the union or to saddle the workers with unbearable work loads. Strikes in the southern mills started over refusal of the employers to comply with National War Labor Board directives, particularly the maintenance of membership clauses, now almost universally accepted in American industry.

The Rhode Island strikes were caused by refusal of employers to sign contracts which have been accepted by more than 90 per cent of Northern cotton mills.

In addition to the strikes, already under way, some for more than four months, more than 6,000 union members in all parts of the country, have voted to walk out.

John Edelman, the union's Washington representative, says that the present series of Southern textile strikes are unique in that it's the first time there have been almost no successful strike breaking in stoppages which have gone on this long.

STRIKE GM PARTS IF 19½c IS REJECTED

THE General Motors council of the CIO Auto Workers this week warned that unless the corporation agrees to a 19½c an hour increase the UAW would call out all employes working on GM parts and accessories. The 19½c raise was recommended as equitable by a Federal fact-finding commission.

The council set forth this declaration of intention to extend the strike in its letter to President Truman accepting the proposal of the fact-finding board until Jan. 21. The council immediately asked the strike strategy committee to have all UAW tool and die workers stop work on GM parts in jobbing shops.

A determination to fight to the finish was also voiced by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the Auto Workers in the current issue of the United Automobile Worker issued this week.

While he took encouragement from the fact that the steel strike had been postponed until Jan. 21, he declared:

"The big money, as this is written, has not yet decided whether to accept, or to declare all-out war that would involve the entire nation.

"I think they would like to wage that war right now, when they have the protection of the tax laws which guarantee a large part of their profits even if they do not operate. I think an important section of top management in the basic industries believe that this is the time to make their greatest effort to destroy labor unions."

Another development in the GM strike was the naming by the Natl. Labor Relations Board of Gerard D. Reilly, one of its members, to conduct hearings on the charge of the union that GM had failed to bargain in good faith. Appointment of Reilly was protested by the UAW, which asserted that he had an anti-CIO bias and had frequently failed to observe the provisions of the Natl. Labor Relations Act.

In a comment on the fact-finding report, the GM council's letter to the President said in part:

"Our offer to you, to accept the board's recommendation for a 19½c-an-hour increase, is made as our contribution to the national interest and with a view to achieving full production and full employment at the earliest date.

"We are constrained to say that the 19½c-an-hour figure does not grant the GM workers the increase which the arithmetic of our case proved and justified.

"We believe you should call to the attention of the American people the record of capricious irresponsibility displayed by General Motors in this dispute. The General Motors Corporation refused to bargain in good faith, refused Government conciliation, rejected arbitration, scorned cooperation with your fact-finding board and now, within 24 hours after its report was issued, and without giving it serious consideration, General Motors has rejected the board's recommendation."

Meanwhile, the UAW Intl. Executive Board met this week, but Thomas, Vice-Pres. Richard T. Frankensteen, Director Richard T. Leonard of the Ford Dept. of the union, and Director Norman F. Matthews of the Chrysler Dept. were summoned to Washington by CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

The union negotiators with Ford this week rejected the company's offer of an increase of 17½c an hour, insisting that Ford should pay as much as the fact-finding board found GM should pay.

ATLANTIC CITY MEET OFF

Cancellation of the CIO Executive Board meeting and Policy Conference scheduled for Atlantic City January 28-31 was announced this week by Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey.

In a letter to CIO affiliates, Carye said:

"Many of the top officers of our various unions are engaged in negotiations or must hold themselves available for negotiation conferences at a moment's notice. They obviously would be unable to schedule their appearance at Atlantic City with any degree of certainty that they would be present."

CIO Man Is Named Asst. Labor Secretary

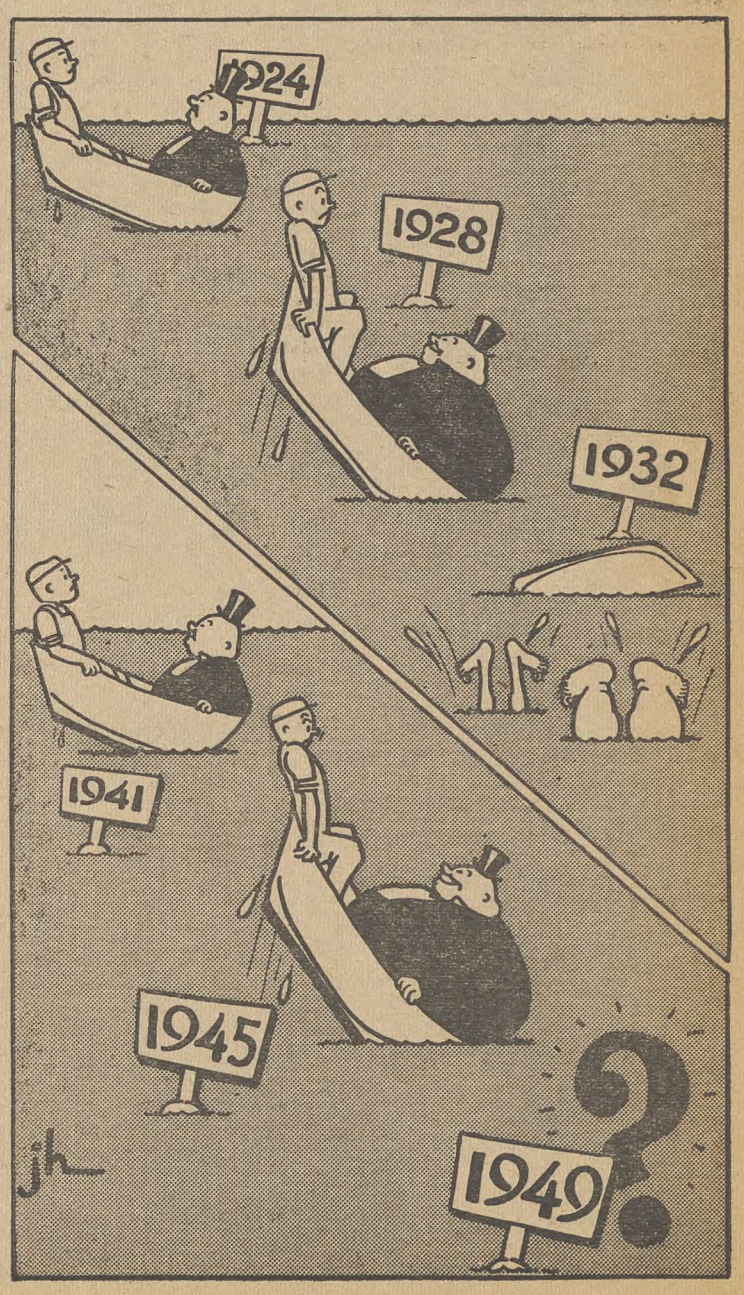
Pres. Truman this week nominated John W. Gibson, former president of the Michigan CIO Council, as second assistant secretary of labor. Gibson was head of the Michigan department of labor and industries from 1941-43, and has served as a special assistant to Sec. Schwellenbach since last August.

Dan W. Tracy, of the AFL, is first assistant secretary of labor.

WHY RAISE BASIC PAY

10. Take a Look at History

From 1924 to 1929, wages rose only 5%, while profits rose 72%. This uncontrolled swelling of profits without corresponding wage raises, upset the boat of economic stability and brought about the devastating depression of the 30's. We can't let it happen again!



MURRAY CHARGES PLOT TO WRECK ALL UNIONS

STRIKE SET FOR JAN. 21 IN STEEL

By FRED d'AVILA

(USA-CIO Statement—Page 5)

THE nation waited this week end for 12:01 a.m. Monday, Jan. 21—deadline for the biggest strike in the history of the U. S.

At that hour, more than 750,000 members of the CIO United Steelworkers of America were scheduled to shut down roaring furnaces, steel and aluminum mills from Pittsburgh's grimy heart of the industry, out to Chicago, the Pacific Coast, and down to Birmingham.

Announcement of the stoppage —which would bring the total number of workers on strike in key industries to more than a million and a half—was made by gray-haired Philip Murray, president of the Steelworkers and of CIO, at one of the biggest press conferences ever held in Washington.

Murray warned the nation that the steel industry's rejection of President Truman's recommendation for an 18½c an hour increase—which the Steelworkers accepted—was part of a "no, no, no" pattern set by General Motors, and followed by General Electric, Westinghouse, the packing companies, Intl. Harvester, and now by basic steel.

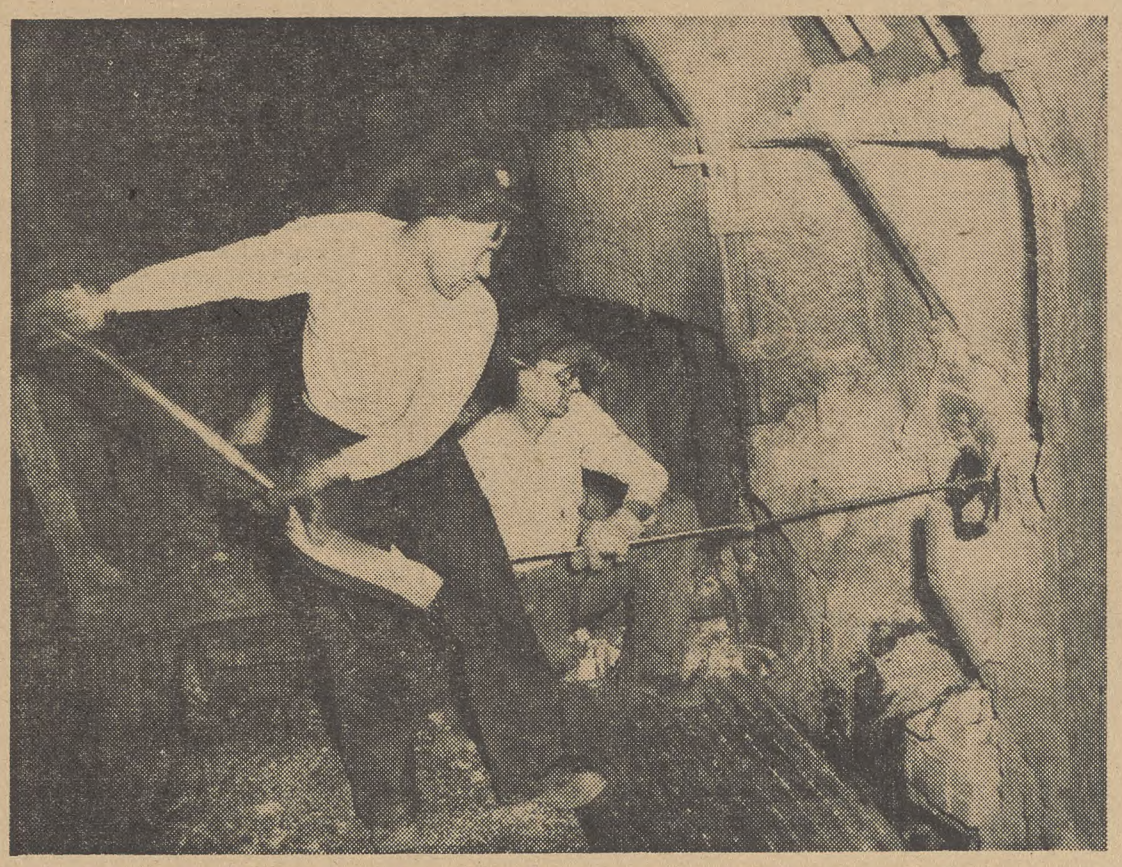
He disclosed that U. S. Steel Pres. Benjamin Fairless, in conferences both in New York and Washington, had called the union's original 19½c proposal meritorious and said he would recommend it to his people. Murray further declared:

"The net effect of the decision made by U. S. Steel in refusing to accept the decision of the President of the U. S., constitutes in my mind a rebellion if not actually a revolution on the part of big business against the people of the U. S."

Murray said that giant industry is using the people's money—through postwar tax refunds guaranteed by Congress——"for union-busting and strike-breaking funds taken from the Federal Treasury."

"Congressmen who have been so loquacious in denouncing labor unions should take pause in the face of the present situation," Murray declared. "The evil conspiracy among American big business has been unmasked.

"This action of the steel industry, combined with the action taken by the General Motors Corp. in refusing to comply with a recommendation of the President's fact-finding panel, should clarify for the American people the issues which have been drawn.



FOR POSSIBLE SHUTDOWN: Michael Zerebing, with rod, and Ray Karezewski, with shovel, seal "tapping" hole in furnace at Chicago plant of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Co., after the last heat of steel was poured, in preparation for possible USA-CIO work stoppage.

"American industry, fattened with war profits, guaranteed a high level of profits through special tax rebates under laws written at their behest, have deliberately set out to destroy labor unions, to provoke strikes and economic chaos, and hijack the American people through uncontrolled profits and inflation.

"They are determined to accomplish their objective regardless of the risk to our nation."

Murray pointed out that so-called "carry-back, carry-forward" provisions in the tax laws guarantee industry postwar profits, even if it shuts down almost completely, and asked for a Congressional investigation of a situation that "gives corporations large funds not only to destroy collective bargaining but all trade unions in the U. S."

Murray's statement came shortly after he had conferred with leaders of CIO's two other "Big 3" unions, the Auto Workers and the Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Both these unions are on strike, UAW against GM and UE against GM Radio Division, Westinghouse and General Electric.

The "Big 3," with Packinghouse, Farm Equipment, which will strike Intl. Harvester January 21, and the American Communication Assn., which is striking Western Union in N. Y. City, expect to have more than 1,500,000 members marching on picket lines by Monday.

Long cooling-off periods and protracted negotiations — four and a half months in the steel industry—led to rejection of the union's demands, and to the eventual use of the potent economic weapon of millions of workers who are defying monopoly attempts to bust their unions and turn back the country to the hungry, open shop days of 1910.

"This conspiracy," Murray declared, "must be stopped if the sacred principles for which we fought in our struggle to destroy Nazism are to be enjoyed by the American people in peace.

"The American people must now be mobilized to give President Truman our full support in the struggle which lies ahead to maintain true collective bargaining and protect our free democratic institutions which are being challenged by those in industry who desire to place themselves above all laws and rules of equity and justice."

Murray sharply criticized the stalling tactics of the steel industry and said that only after it was promised price rises of $4 a ton on finished steel did it even consent to enter serious negotiations.

He described as "gross misrepresentations of fact, diabolical in nature and issued for the purpose of deluding the public" the statements about steel wages made by Fairless in a letter to President Truman.

Fairless said the average straight-time hourly wage in the industry last October was $1.14 an hour.

Murray pointed out that Bureau of Labor Statistics figures, gathered directly from the companies, showed that the wage was only $1.087 an hour.

Murray said that the $7.40 a week wage increase recommended by President Truman would provide for a substantial but not full restoration of the loss in weekly earnings suffered by the steelworkers due to elimination of overtime, downgrading and other factors.

"The facts completely justify the President's decision," Murray declared. He added that it was only in the interests of industrial peace and reconversion progress that the union reduced its demand for a $2-a-day raise.

"In April, 1945, the last full month preceding VE-Day, the average weeky earnings of steelworkers were $56.32," Murray said.

"The Bureau of Labor Statistics, within the past few days, has reported that the straight-time average hourly earnings for steelworkers in October, 1945, were $1.087.

"It is undisputed that the steel industry is now operating on a 40-hour week without any overtime.

"This means that at present—assuming that the straight-time average hourly earnings have not fallen since Oct., which they certainly have due to downgrading and other factors — the weekly earnings for steelworkers are $43.48.

"There has therefore been a slash in the earnings of the steelworkers since April, 1945, of $12.84."

Murray declared that the cost to the steel industry of an 18½c an hour wage increase, according to the American Iron & Steel Institute's own figures, would be about $185 million—about $67 million less than the industry would gain in increased prices if the government grants its promised $4 a ton increase.

"The attitude of the steel industry in this situation is undemocratic, arbitrary, a denial of the judgment of the President of the U. S., and a defiance of the country and its people," he said.

TRUMAN 'REGRETS' STEEL REJECTION

"IT IS a matter of great regret to me, and I am sure that it will be to all of the people of the U. S., that all our efforts to avoid this steel strike have up to now failed," President Truman said this week after he had received the rejection of his wage offer by the U. S. Steel Corp.

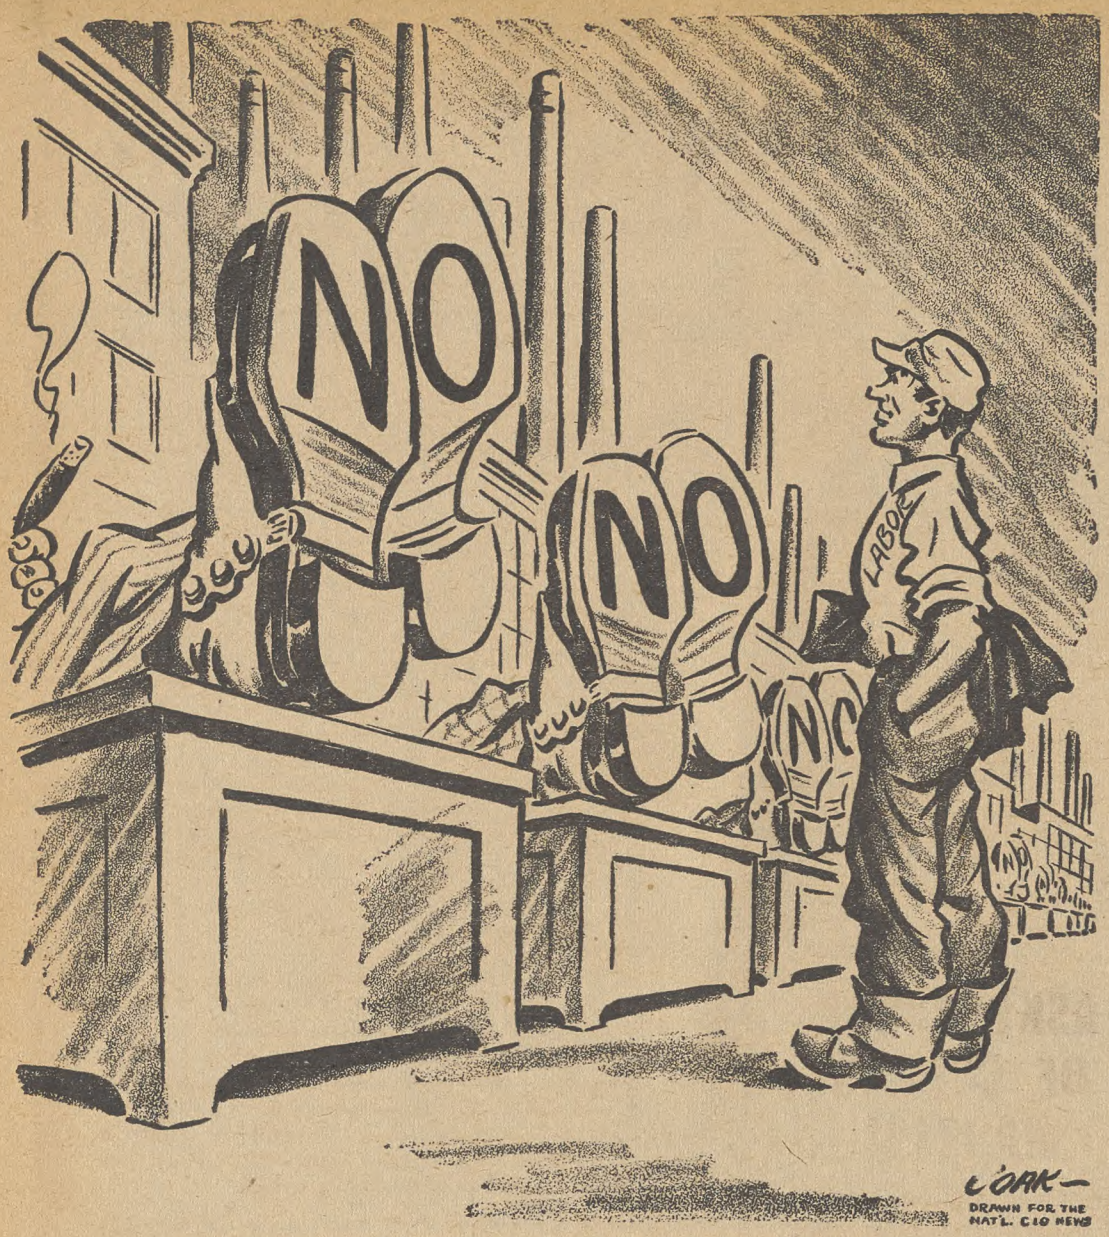
The President's proposal of an 18½c an hour increase was accepted by Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO Steelworkers.

Reviewing the bargaining between Murray and Pres. Benjamin Fairless of U. S. Steel, Truman said:

"The original demand made by Mr. Murray in this case was for an increase of 25c an hour, or about 23%. The original offer made by the U. S. Steel Corp. was 12½c per hour increase, or 11.6%. As a result of their final meeting in collective bargaining they have arrived at the following impasse: Mr. Murray had come down to an increase of 19½c per hour, or 18%, and Mr. Fairless had come up to an increase of 15c per hour, or 13.9%.

"I have studied the facts and figures very carefully. The fact-finding board in the steel industry has reported to me informally. . . . After hearing the board and after long consideration, I believe that the suggestion made by me of 17.1%, or 18½c per hour, is fair . . .

"I urge the U. S. Steel Corp. on the ground of public interest, as well as good business, to accept this settlement."



INDUSTRY'S PICKET LINE

No masters of industry are to be seen carrying placards and trudging doggedly through ice and snow around closed factories.

When you draw around $150 an hour, sleeping or waking, every hour of the day, you can do your picketing much more comfortably.

All you have to do is to sit in a swivel-chair and give orders to hold up production until you get the prices or profits you want; or to say to the unions "there is nothing to negotiate," or "there is nothing to be gained through collective bargaining."

Somewhere amid the overstuffed chairs and deep carpets of Wall Street skyscraper offices, big business organized its own kind of picket lines long ago.

Financiers whose names are hardly known to the public but who determine the policies of many of our biggest corporations, decided to hold up reconversion—and to hold up labor and the public—until they won their full demands.

Through the policies they laid down to management, they placed an invisible, but most effective, picket line around American industry.

Full production was not to be permitted, they said, until after the excess profits tax was repealed. Even after that, it was to be held up until prices were raised. And workers were to be admitted to work only at wage rates which would keep their take-home pay far below wartime levels.

Inscribed on the invisible placards of industry's picket line is the one word, "No"—"No" to the unions when they ask for higher wages; "No" to the government when it asks negotiations and makes fact-finding awards; and "No" to the public when it asks full production of consumers' goods.

HARMLESS OR HARMFUL?

The Ellender-Norton anti-strike bill has been touted as a mild and harmless "fact-finding" and "cooling-off" measure. What's wrong, its sponsors ask, with postponing a strike for 30 days and finding the facts meanwhile?

But the briefest examination will reveal this bill as a wolf in sheep's clothing, with fangs that can bite deep into labor's right to strike, civil liberties, existing labor legislation, and the workers' power to bargain for better conditions.

The bill would effectively deny the right to strike not merely for 30 days but during the entire period preceding certification by the Secretary of Labor. Employers and conciliators would be encouraged to stall indefinitely, while the union's hands would be tied by the knowledge that the Secretary of Labor could break any strike it might call.

The 30-day fact-finding period is in itself unrealistic, since questioning of employe representation, court appeals against subpena orders and other delays in obtaining facts could prolong it indefinitely.

The sweeping terms under which strikes are made unlawful not only deny the basic civil right of workers to quit their jobs, but also deny "any person" the right to discuss publicly and freely the issues in dispute—quite apart from the fact that the right to strike is meaningless unless it can be exercised at the particular time it is most effective.

The freezing of conditions during cooling-off can work only to labor's disadvantage, by forcing workers to continue working at existing wages, when they seek a raise; or at lower wages, if an employer chooses to cut wages just before the start of the dispute.

These are just a few of the many thoroughly harmful features of this viciously anti-labor measure that should fool no one.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

WHEN Americans first began to arm themselves to resist aggression, and later to win our country's independence, the tories denounced them as rebellious troublemakers disturbing the peace and inconveniencing the public.

But the plain people of America recognized these citizen-soldiers as their own. They sympathized with them and backed them up as fighters in the people's interests.

Today's tories see only public inconvenience and disorder when thousands of working people march on the picket line around the great citadels of industrial America.

But most of the plain people sense that these pickets are fighting their battles, that they are the vanguard of a people's army fighting for a free and prosperous America, and they wish them well.

★ ★ ★

After 200,000 electrical workers had gone on strike, their president, Albert J. Fitzgerald, was able to report that "townspeople and city officials from coast to coast are realizing that the strike is in their interests and are giving the strikers complete support."

The Catholic priests who joined the CIO packinghouse workers' picket line in Chicago said they did so because "these are our people."

Mayor Reed of Bloomfield, N. J., a Presbyterian minister, opened a mass meeting for UE strikers with this invocation:

"Help us so that when we pray 'Give us this day our daily bread,' the 'us' will include all people. Help these people in their fight for a decent living wage and better conditions for all people."

In all the communities affected by current major strikes, church people of all denominations, community leaders of all kinds, professional people, storekeepers, as well as workers in all industries, have taken a similar attitude that the strikers are "our people" and are fighting the battles of all the people.

★ ★ ★

A recent Gallup poll illustrates how and why the CIO and its unions are fighting the battles of the great majority of the American people.

A cross-section of the public from coast to coast were asked this question:

"What is the most important problem that you and your family face today?"

One in every four persons answered that the high cost of living was the most important worry facing his family at present—namely, how to make low income from wages or other sources cover high living costs.

The other problems named most often were closely related: how to obtain suitable housing; how to get adequate food, clothing, fuel, etc., and how to find a job.

Today's pickets are leaders in the fight to solve these basic problems of most Americans.

When the CIO unions demand higher wages for their own millions of members, they are also demanding higher living standards for all the people.

For increased wages are passed on by workers' purchases to farmers, professional people, businessmen and all others who have goods and services to sell and benefit the whole community.

★ ★ ★

Like America's early patriots, today's pickets and their supporters are moved by hatred of oppression, love of freedom and a great faith in their country and its people.

Remembering the low wages, long hours and endless tyrannies suffered by the workers before the unions brought some degree of industrial democracy, they are ready to endure all necessary hardships to defend their unions against present attempts to break them.

They have a faith in America's future that too many big businessmen seem to lack.

They believe a greater prosperity is possible for all our people, through higher wages and higher living standards and the demand these will create for expanding production; and through the initiative, energy, skill and inventive genius of our people.

The anti-union tories, on the other hand, are basing their policies on a defeatist philosophy.

They oppose adequate wages because they are fearful these will cut into their profits. They prefer high profits and high prices on a low level of production and to accept much unemployment and deflation as inevitable, rather than to raise wages, keep prices down and count on sharing themselves in the general prosperity of an expanding economy.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer
Vice-President

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson
S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum
Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 January 21, 1946 No. 4

GI's ADS BLAST DISCHARGE SNAFU

SIXTEEN newspapers throughout the United States beginning the week of Jan. 20 are to carry an advertisement protesting the demobilization slow-down and paid for by voluntary contributions from the 10,000 enlisted men and officers of Sub Base R, Batangas, Philippines.

The servicemen sent Chairman Clinton S. Golden of the CIO Veterans Committee $5,000 and the copy for the ads which will appear in the New York Times, Atlanta Constitution, St. Louis Post Dispatch and the Washington Post among other papers.

The ad is addressed to the public and attacks the demobilization slow-down, the return of empty ships from the war areas to the United States, the maintenance of troops in non-hospital areas, such as the Philippines, Australia, Guam and Saipan.

The ad urges that letters be sent to Congressmen "demanding immediate action on the clarification and speed up of demobilization," removal of demobilization from "the vested interests of the War Department" to a Congressional committee.

Citing Secretary of War Patterson's failure to know that troops overseas had stopped accumulating points last September, the ad requests "an opportunity to appear before the Senate Military Affairs Committee to present the real facts on the use of overseas troops, demobilization and shipping."

The ad will bear the following signatures: Sgt. Emil Mazey, chairman; Capt. Russell Callan, Jr.; T/Sgt. Clifford V. Stadler; S/Sgt. Robert Ewart, S/Sgt. Gordon E. Brower.

GI's WROTE AD

The ad was submitted to the papers as cabled by the committee to Golden, who said:

"We are gratified that these soldiers half-way across the world have so much confidence in the CIO they entrusted us with their project and money, which indicates utmost friendliness of troops and understanding that CIO is concerned with their interest while in service and when they get home."

CIO President Philip Murray has also received wireless messages and cablegrams urging more speedy demobilization from the Military Personnel, Philippine Wing Base A, Transport Command; 480 Enlisted Men, 3118th Signal Service Corps, Frankford, Germany, and from "CIO Officers and Men in Uniform in the Batangas Area of the Philippines."

On January 9 Golden wrote members of Congress calling for democraticization of the military services and their reduction "to the smallest possible size consistent with our absolute needs and commitments," attaching to the letter a copy of a letter sent by soldiers from the same sub base.

REQUISITION HOUSES FOR VETS -- CIO

REQUISITION of unused and unoccupied public buildings for homeless veterans was urged by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO Auto Workers in Washington Jan. 19 at a luncheon of the Natl. Emergency Conference on Jobs and Security.

Thomas, who is also chairman of the CIO Housing Committee, called for: Presidential orders to prevent all but essential construction and to release materials and land held by government agencies for future use; a top maximum of $7,500 on the cost of homes with a substantial amount of building of rental housing; a quota and allocation system on building materials, and authority for Housing Coordinator Wyatt to speed up wage-price adjustments.

The UAW head urged enactment of the Patman bill amended to provide that the 1941 price of a house shall be the ceiling.

'BUSINESS' SHUTS GI HOSPITAL

The War Dept.'s reported intention to close the England General Hospital, Atlantic City, N. J., on March 31, on complaint of civic leaders that amputees on the boardwalk depress visitors and hurt business, this week brought sharp protests to Atlantic City's Mayor Altman and Sec. of War Patterson from the American Federation for the Physically Handicapped.

Paul A. Strachen of the Federation wrote Patterson:

"Can it be that our great Government, at whose request these brave men ventured their lives, and lost their limbs . . . would place the interests of self-seeking hotel and resort owners above the interests and the welfare of the wounded, themselves?"

ASKS PROBE OF COURTS MARTIAL

THE CIO this week asked for a Congressional investigation of courts martial and the Articles of War, asserting that Army and Navy officers have been administering the articles "with contempt for our constitutional liberties and democratic ideals."

In a letter to Congressman Sabath (D., Ill.) chairman of the House Rules Committee, Meyer Bernstein, of the CIO Veterans Committee urged passage of H. Res. 460, introduced by Congressman Daughton (D., Va.), which would provide for such an investigation. The letter stated:

"There is probably not a serviceman in the U.S. who cannot cite from his own observations instances of grave discrimination for petty reasons or no apparent reason whatsoever. The average officer sitting on a general or summary courts martial is not qualified by experience, training, background or character to discharge the duties with which he is entrusted. Too often courts martial decisions are rendered in utter disregard of the evidence."

Old Glory leads the way as UGW-CIO veterans march by the general office of the General Motors Corp. in Detroit to show their solidarity with the GM strikers. This picture was snapped Jan. 12, Veterans' Day in the GM strike, when CIO veterans and members of various veterans organizations demonstrated in Flint, Mich., Buffalo, N. Y., and many other cities of the U. S.

Anti-Union Ads Used By Army

Anti-unionism and fear are being used by the U. S. Army to convince GIs that they should reenlist.

A sign on the Separation Center of the Air Corps at Westover Field, Mass., proclaims to the world and to servicemen about to be discharged:

"Since strikes, civilian jobs are scarce—the take-home pay with deductions for income tax, social security, union dues, blue cross, etc., do not compare with Army salaries and huge retirement benefits." The War Dept. was investigating.

STEEL DAMNS U.S.–MURRAY

Following the rejection by the steel industry of President Truman's demand that wages be increased 18½ cents, Philip Murray as president of the CIO Steelworkers issued the following statement:

"The International Officers of the United Steelworkers of America have advised President Truman that they have accepted his recommendation for a settlement of the current wage dispute in the steel industry and shall recommend its approval by the International Wage Policy Committee of the union, which shall be assembled forthwith.

"President Truman's decision is that there be a general wage increase of 18½c per hour to employes of the steel industry effective as of January 1, 1946.

"The facts surrounding the pending wage dispute in the steel industry have thoroughly supported the wage demand of the union and completely justify the President's decision.

"In April, 1945, the last full month preceding VE-Day, the average earnings of steelworkers were $56.32. The Bureau of Labor Statistics, within the past few days, has reported that the straight-time average hourly earnings for steelworkers in October, 1945, were $1.087. It is undisputed that the steel industry is now operating on a 40-hour week without any overtime.

"This means that at present—assuming that the straight-time average hourly earnings have not fallen since October, which they certainly have due to downgrading and other factors — the weekly earnings for steelworkers are $43.48. There has therefore been a slash in the earnings of the steelworkers since April, 1945, of $12.48. The wage increase recommended by President Truman will thus provide for a substantial, but not full, restoration of the loss in weekly earnings.

"It is to the interest of all Americans, if we are to provide a firm foundation for an expanding economy of full production and full employment, that the purchasing power of the workers of the nation be maintained and steadily increased. It is with this objective in mind that the CIO and its affiliated unions have been endeavoring for the past year to secure substantial wage increases.

"If this end is not achieved, the high level of profits of industry will prove to be illusory and our nation will inevitably be plunged into a terrifying depression with all of its consequent evils.

"Since September, 1945—a period of four months, the union has sought, unsuccessfully—to engage in collective bargaining with the steel industry over the union's wage demand for an increase of $2 a day.

"Twice the United States Government, through Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach, requested the U. S. Steel Corporation to meet with the union in collective bargaining.

"To all these efforts—the steel industry has given a cold 'NO.'

"The steel industry has now, with unmatched boldness, rejected a decision of the President of the United States.

"This action of the steel industry, combined with the action taken by the General Motors Corporation in refusing to comply with a recommendation of the President's Fact-Finding Panel, should clarify for the American people the issue which has been drawn. American industry, fattened with war profits, guaranteed a high level of profits through special tax rebates under laws written at their behest, have deliberately set out to destroy labor unions, to provoke strikes and economic chaos, and hi-jack the American people through uncontrolled profits and inflation. They are determined to accomplish their objective regardless of the risk to our nation.

"Congressmen who have been so loquacious in denouncing labor unions should take pause in the face of the present situation. The evil conspiracy among American Big Business has been unmasked. Its clear aim is to exact unconditional surrender of the American people and the United States Government. This conspiracy must be stopped if the sacred principles for which we fought in our struggle to destroy Nazism are to be enjoyed by the American people in peace.

"The steel industry now has the full and sole responsibility for the strike which must take place 12:01 a.m., January 21. The steelworkers in this fight will be combating the sinister forces which seek to stamp out cherished de-

(Continued on Page 8)

1 UE-CIO workers of General Electric and Westinghouse plants in Bloomfield, N. J., marched to a mass meeting on the town green the first day of the strike. Strike is 100% solid, with more than 200,000 workers out in 69 cities and towns throughout the nation. Here two picket lines merge at a main intersection in Bloomfield.

3 UE-CIO began negotiations for a wage increase last September 7. T that's long enough for any union to cool off. They want no more what the anti-labor boys in Congress and the newspapers may have to

BLOOMFI IN PEOP

TWO HUNDRED thous workers in more than 7 field, N. J., Pittsburgh, Ne N. Y., and Lynn Mass., against the big three of t Electric, Westinghouse an

Their strike, led by Machine Workers of Ame that confronts every Ame nity today—the issue of in take-home pay.

With these cuts in t and their families have income. That income, b needs of six million CIO of war earnings, cannot of the cost of living, higher than 1945 peaks

For an example of are striking on, take these Albert J. Fitzgerald's te Senate Labor Committee, on President Truman's Fitzgerald is talking abou Morrison, who is a machi at Erie, Pa.

"Mr. Morrison has four is $35 a month," Fitzgeral lowing figures represent th paychecks in 1943 and thr

2 Bloomfield, N. J., is con In the Rainbow Restaur owners at the service of the doughnuts. A New York sinkers to the strike, a san ember 7. These pickets feel t no more of it, no matter

y have to say.

4 These pickets are taking time out to eat in another place that's been turned over to the strikers for the duration. One worker has her small daughter along. That's the Westinghouse plant seen through the window.

5 Bloomfield's merchants know that a decent UE paycheck means better business for them. Four strikers are delivering a load of groceries to an emergency food station. Food was contributed by a neighborhood grocer, one of many helping the strike.

FIELD—LESSON
PLE'S UNITY

Story by C. W. Fowler • Pictures by Hillé, Acme

ED thousand CIO men and women—ore than 70 cities and towns like Bloomburgh, New York, Chicago, Schenectady, nn Mass., in 22 states—are on strike three of the electrical industry, General ghouse and General Motors.

e, led by the CIO Electrical, Radio &
rs of America, is over the same issue very American worker and his commuissue of restoring post V-J Day cuts
y.

e cuts in the take-home, CIO workers ilies have lost 30% of their wartime income, barely enough to meet the illion CIO families at the "high" point gs, cannot begin to meet the demands f living, which every day go even 945 peaks.

mple of the issues UE-CIO members take these brief figures from UE Pres. erald's testimony Jan. 17 before the mmittee, which is now holding hearings ruman's anti-strike "cooling-off" bill.
king about a UE worker named Robert s a machine operator in the GE plant has four small children and his rent

Fitzgerald told the Senators. The folepresent three of Mr. Morrison's weekly 43 and three in 1945 following V-J Day:

1943	1945
$48.55	$23.75
58.32	29.02
64.19	36.17

And, as Fitzgerald put it to the Senators, there is an even more urgent reason why the workers of the UE-CIO, together with the workers of USA-CIO and UAW-CIO and other CIO union members are now fighting for higher wages.

"That reason is a patriotic one. It is simply to maintain the mass purchasing power of 52 million American wage earners so they can buy food, clothing and other consumer goods and thus keep the wheels of American industry turing in full production."

The strike of 200,000 UE-CIO members is 100% solid. Despite frantic full-page ads in the daily papers by GE, GM and Westinghouse, the workers know their cause is just, necessary and economically sound.

The big three of the electrical manufacturing corporations pretend that the strike is holding up production of needed consumer goods. But consumers who tried to buy electrical goods—washers, radios, anything else—in the last six months, know better. They know that GE, GM and Westinghouse deliberately withheld making such goods available with the plan of evading the excess profits tax, hi-jacking a price increase from the government, and denying their workers needed wage increases.

That's why the citizens of Bloomfield, N. J., and three-score other towns and cities involved in the UE strike are with the workers.

And that's why the members of the UE-CIO and every other CIO union will win their fight for security, jobs and a chance at a decent life in postwar America.

. J., is completely behind the UE strikers.
ow Restaurant, one of four placed by their vice of the strikers, pickets have coffee and lew York firm contributed 10,000 dozen ike, a sample of wide-spread support.

6 The male department of this dishwashing operation is a non-striker who volunteered to help in the strike kitchen. The two pretty girls are UE pickets doing their turn on the drying end. The fellow seems to be enjoying his task.

7 What the well groomed UE picket does in Bloomfield is to go to Edmond Raimone's shop for a haircut, free to strikers from 1-4 p.m. Says Raimone: "The $2 a day demand is reasonable. An increase in wages means more purchasing power and more jobs."

HIGH COURT CLARIFIES RIGHTS OF PICKETS

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

THE U. S. Supreme Court last week added another landmark to its brilliant history of protecting the rights of the people. In this most recent decision the Court decided that the exercise of a constitutional right cannot be prevented or punished because it takes place on private property against the will of the owner and is contrary to the law of the State.

This case involved Jehovah's Witnesses who sought to distribute religious literature on the sidewalk of a company-owned town contrary to the wishes of the town's management. The town, located in Alabama, is owned by the Gulf Shipbuilding Corp. A State law made it a crime to enter or remain on private premises after having been warned not to do so.

The State Court affirmed the conviction of a member of the Jehovah's Witnesses for violating that law on the ground that the title to the property was in the corporation and because there was not the kind of public use of the sidewalk which would prevent the exercise of private control over it.

The Supreme Court accepted the idea that the property in question was privately regulated and had not been completely opened to the public. Nevertheless, the Court said that the manager of the corporation could not curtail constitutional liberties merely because they owned the property on which those liberties were being exercised since the property was frequently used by the public for other purposes.

This case has tremendous significance because it applies to all constitutional liberties, not merely the exercise of religious liberty. It plainly applies to picketing and the distribution of union literature.

Under this decision an individual cannot be punished for picketing or distributing union literature in a company town. Moreover, I believe that this decision carries us even further. Under this decision an individual who pickets in a private industrial area, such as an industrial district or a port area, cannot be punished for so doing on the ground that he is trespassing on private property, provided only that the area in which he is picketing is customarily used by workers as a means of going to and from work.

The background of this decision is worth commenting on. In Thornhill v. Alabama, the Supreme Court held that the State of Alabama could not prevent picketing because picketing is a constitutional right. The picketing in that case was conducted on company property and on a private entrance for the employes, not on any public road. But the Supreme Court did not pass on the question whether the fact that private property was involved could prevent the exercise of the rights to picket since no demand was ever made upon the men not to come upon the property.

In a second case, the Republic Aviation case, the Supreme Court held that it was a violation of the Natl. Labor Relations Act for the employer to punish an employe for soliciting union memberships on company property but on his own time. The Court held that the defense of private property did not justify punishing employes for solicitation, a right which Congress had given them under the NLRA.

The present case goes further than the Republic case and fills in the gap left open by the Thornhill case. The present case says that not only an employer, but the Government itself, may not punish an individual for exercising the right to solicit when it occurs on private property. And this case says further that the individual who is protected is not merely the employe but anyone who chooses to exercise his rights.

The case of course does not indicate how "public" the place must be before the constitutional protections will apply to activities conducted there. But the case does make it clear that the mere fact that there is a convenient public area for solicitation does not remove activities conducted on private property from constitutional protection.

In this case the activities were conducted on private property but at a point only 30 feet away from a public highway. The Court said that even though the highway was 30 feet away the constitutional protection nevertheless applied.

STATE JOB SERVICE HIT

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey this week told the House Labor Committee that to turn the U. S. Employment Service back to the states "is just as senseless as would be the proposal to break up the U. S. Postoffice and hand it over to the states to operate."

He charged that the Interstate Conference of Employment Security Agencies, sometimes referred to as the Interstate Conference of Unemployment Compensation Administrators, is persistently lobbying for the State operation of the public employment service.

He told how, even under the federal operation of USES, State administrators influenced by the conference forced unemployed persons to take any jobs they were offered "regardless of previous skill, experience, earning power, or situation in life—or forego unemployment compensation benefits."

He said that the CESA is "willing to sabotage all of the constructive social usefulness of the national program in order to accomplish this one narrow, selfish objective of reducing benefit payments out of the state unemployment compensation funds to unemployed workers."

He urged the committee to report favorably HR 4437 and S 1510, which would continue the USES under Federal control until June 30, 1947.

He said that "we will continue to support and work for permanent federal operation of both the public employment service and the unemployment compensation system, and we hope and expect this will be accomplished by the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill to amend and improve the Social Security Act."

Asserting that our national economy called for a federally-administered USES, Carey said:

"With the continued demobilization of veterans and changeover of war workers to other employment many citizens—veterans and non-veterans alike—will continue in search of jobs to improve their economic status.

"State lines will not deter these people from migrating—and should not. Unless there is some coordination and direction to the search for jobs outside the particular home state where the jobs may or may not be located, it is conceivable that we will witness a repetition of the hapless days of the 1930's."

DENY LABOR UNO SEAT

REPEATING the performance of last April in San Francisco, the United Nations Organization in London this week again denied a place to the representatives of 60 million organized workers.

The denial came in a refusal by the Steering Committee of the UNO General Assembly to allow a spokesman of the World Federation of Trade Unions to speak directly on admission to the Assembly. According to newspaper reports, the Assembly has appointed a subcommittee to look into the question.

Motion for a WFTU place in the Assembly was formally presented by D. Z. Manuilsky, Ukrainian delegate to the UNO, with support from USSR Delegate Vassili Kuznetsov, who heads the Soviet Central Council of Trade Unions, and Paul Rancour, deputy leader of the French UNO delegation.

Chief opposition came from Hector McNeil, British undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, and from Peter Fraser, premier of New Zealand.

The issue was originally raised in the formative meetings of the UNO at San Francisco last year by CIO President Philip Murray, who was opposed then by delegates of Britain, Canada, and the U. S.

CHARGE BLS STATISTICS USED TO FIGHT PAY HIKES

DECLARING that Bureau of Labor Statistics figures on labor productivity "are being used by industry to justify refusal to grant adequate wage increases," the CIO Wage Research Council today wrote to Sec. of Labor Schwellenbach to protest continued use of the BLS studies.

A summary attached to the CIO study of BLS productivity data says:

"This study presents a broad accumulation of evidence indicating that productivity as a whole increased rapidly during the war, that peacetime production in 1946 will be at a level of productivity about one quarter above the level in the last pre-war year, and that productivity will continue to increase at an accelerated rate.

"While the evidence of large increases is conclusive, no one knows exactly how great the increases have been. The Bureau of Labor Statistics, the government agency charged with responsibility for the collection and analysis of information on changes in productivity, has completely failed to measure the immense wartime advances and to appraise their significance for the immediate postwar period.

"The B. L. S. productivity index for 24 non-munition manufacturing industries is not only not representative of civilian industries, but is, in fact, grossly misleading. It covered only 16 per cent of manufacturnig employment in 1944, and by and large, was confined to those civilian industries which were least essential to the war effort, and which therefore were starved for labor, raw materials and equipment. A large proportion are low-wage industries which tried to maintain a low-wage structure and therefore could not maintain an efficient working force.

"In several of these industries, with nearly half the total employment covered by the index, no allowance was made for changes in government-procured items. These items were generally made to higher specifications and required more work than civilian items.

Steel Damns U. S.—Murray

(Continued From Page 5)

mocracy. We know that we shall have the full support of all progressive forces in this bitter struggle.

"The officers of the United Steelworkers of America extend to President Truman our appreciation for his earnest efforts to compose the dispute in the steel industry and for the equitable and just decision which he has made.

"The United Steelworkers of America in recognition of our national interest accepted the decision of the President of the United States. The steel industry damns the President of the United States and the American Government.

"The American people must now be mobilized to give President Truman our full support in the struggle which lies ahead to maintain true collective bargaining and protect our free democratic institutions which are being challenged by those in industry who desire to place themselves above all laws and rules of equity and justice."

CIO's Own Radio Shows EVERY SATURDAY

Two Full, Weekly 15-Minute Radio Programs, of and for CIO

1. Labor-USA. Dramatic shows. American Broadcasting Co. network. Saturdays, 6:45 to 7 P. M., EST.

2. Cross-Section—CIO. On-the-spot interviews of CIO people by William Downs, noted CBS commentator. Saturdays, 3:45 to 4 P. M., EST.

Live Listening!

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Reg. Dir. Walter Harris, Chicago, reports: Economy Fuse & Mfg. Co., Chicago, USA-CIO 191, No Union 84; Economy Screw Corp., Chicago, USA-CIO 7, against 5. USA Rep. Albert F. Balock was in charge.

Robert Edwards, Dir., Organizing Committee, PJNWA-CIO, advises: PJNW-CIO won recognition at the following plants: Fleischhaker & Baum Co., New York, N. Y., involving 100 employees; organized by New York staff under direction of L. T. Koletka; Joal Art Co., New York, N. Y., involving 19 employes, organized by Reps. Milton Gordon and William Hopps under direction of Asst. Org. Dir. L. T. Koletka.

John B. Easton, CIO Reg. Dir., Charlestown, W. Va., reports: Run-off election, Fletcher Enamel Dunbar W. Va., CIO 313, AFL 274. This campaign was in charge of Ed Cadle, Joe Joy and Ellwood Swisher, Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, assisted by USA Reps. Stanley Browing and Joe Lamoree, as well as the CIO staff.

Geo. Brown, Dir., IWA-CIO, reports: Memphis Box & Egg Co., Memphis, Tenn., IWA, 22, against 16. Rep. W. W. Snook was in charge.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. John J. Maurillo, Syracule, N. Y., advises: Gaylord Brothers, CIO 28, against 11.

The CIO has created a new regional directorship in the case of Chris Hennings in Alaska. Recent developments in this territory has necessitated this action. Brother Hennings will coordinate the activities of our unions already established there and cooperate in organizing other workers and will keep the National Office in close touch with political developments. There is quite a movement on for statehood for Alaska. The CIO will be in a position to meet any changing conditions, as well as taking care of the interests of the workers in Alaska. Henning's present address is Box 2531, Juneau, Alaska. We solicit the fullest cooperation of our organizations who already have members in this part of the world. Brother Hennings is a union man of a number of years' standing.

Since the last issue of The CIO News, Pres. Murray, along with Benjamin Fairless of U. S. Steel, met several times in the White House in an effort to settle the wage issue involved in the steel industry. The strike of the Steelworkers was postponed one week at the request of Pres. Truman.

The UERMWA's strike is on at General Electric, Westinghouse and General Motors electrical division. The Packinghouse Workers are likewise on strike. The GM strike continues on with ranks solid.

The writer was in Detroit this week and met with Richard T. Leonard, director of the UAW's Ford Division, and with management. The Ford Motor Co. made an offer of 17½c, which the union rejected. Negotiations are continuing.

All eyes are on the steel negotiations. This period will go down as one of the most momentous in trade union history. What is of great importance is that the members of our unions everywhere can see clearly that their interests are linked up with one another, and that they are standing loyally behind our leader, Pres. Murray, and the CIO.

Official notice has gone out cancelling the Conference in Atlantic City scheduled for the end of this month. This was brought about by the situations our movement is presently involved in. Representatives from many of our most powerful and important unions are engaged in either conducting strikes, negotiations or settlements of these basic issues.

OIL UNION QUESTIONS PANEL FINDINGS

QUESTIONING the "statistical magic" by which the Government oil panel arrived at its recommendation for an 18% pay increase, Pres. O. A. Knight of the CIO Oil Workers Union this week called it an "odd coincidence" that the panel arrived at the same figure that the union and several major oil companies have already agreed upon.

When the union negotiated settlements for an 18 per cent wage increase, Knight said it "had its arms pinioned behind it by President Truman's seizure order and was denied the freedom to use its economic power. That the fact-finding agency should now come along and recommend exactly the same wage figure casts doubt upon whether it appraised impartially the industry's ability to pay and the workers' need in maintaining their purchasing power."

The oil panel's findings, Knight said, "reduce the entire fact-finding approach in industrial disputes to an absurdity. Obviously the panel accepted the figure reached by the union and several companies as an easy way out of its job, and then supplied the necessary statistics to justify its conclusions."

The report of the oil panel issued last week by Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach, recommended an 18 per cent wage increase, which was determined, the panel stated, by taking into consideration such factors as the loss of overtime pay, higher productivity and settlements already negotiated through collective bargaining.

"On the basis of the record, the recommended increase of 18 per cent can be placed in effect without a price increase," the panel reported.

The union announced this week that the nation-wide agreement for an 18 per cent increase signed last month by Sinclair Oil had been followed by other wage settlements aggregating 25 cents an hour or $2 a day.

U. S. FACT FINDERS TAKE UP PACKINGHOUSE DISPUTE

By NORMAN DOLNICK

NOT wages but price relief and a studied plan to scrap the OPA was the big packers' theme at the first of the meetings called by Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach this week to hear the facts to the meat packing strike called by the CIO Packinghouse Workers.

Speaking for Armour & Co., Pres. George Eastwood flatly said that "any matter of wage increases is a matter of price relief."

Also appearing before the Secretary's meeting were spokesmen for big packing companies, Swift, Cudahy, Wilson and Morrell.

The Packinghouse Workers were represented by Pres. Lewis J. Clark, Ralph Helstein, general counsel, and Vice-Pres. Philip Weightman.

The AFL meatcutters union, which had announced its intention to strike two days after the CIO union had set Jan. 16 as the strike date, also attended the meetings as did the independent union, Natl. Brotherhood of Packinghouse Workers.

Chairman of the meeting was Edwin E. Witte, who was appointed chairman of the fact-finding board assigned to hear the meatpacking dispute.

The company representatives did not miss a chance to sound their hidebound economic theories. E. A. Cudahy, chairman of the board of the Cudahy Packing Co., said that he was "opposed in principles to bureaucratic (price) control" and cautioned the fact finders to keep in mind the inevitable link between wage increases and price relief.

Sec. Schwellenbach had called the unions and packing companies to Washington after some 200,000 CIO Packinghouse Workers struck approximately 140 plants throughout the country in protest of the companies' persistent refusal to adjust their wages to meet increased living costs. One of the lowest paid groups of workers in American industry, the packinghouse workers had not received any wage increase since before Pearl Harbor.

Following the Secretary's meeting, Pres. Clark stated that the CIO Packinghouse Workers union had not altered their original demand of 25 cents to be put into effect immediately and the balance to be negotiated immediately, when the national wage picture becomes clearer.

An earlier statement by the CIO meatpacking union had declared that it unequivocally "supports the position of the CIO on the need for continued and effective price control."

CIO Conventions

Official call to the second convention of the CIO Barbers and Beauty Culturists Union was announced this week by Sec.-Treas. P. Charles Di Neri. It will open Apr. 8, at the Hotel McAlpin, New York City.

Convention keynote, states the announces, will be: "Organize all the unorganized barbers and beauty culturists of America for jobs, security and peace."

Two CIO internationals are meeting this month—the Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., at New Orleans, La., Jan. 21, and the Intl. Fishermen & Allied Workers at Seattle, Wash., Jan. 22.

SHIPYARD WORKERS RE-ELECT PRES. GREEN

JOHN GREEN was overwhelmingly re-elected to his 11th term as president of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers at the concluding session of the union's convention held last week in Atlantic City. Edward Duffy, Brooklyn, who ran against him, was defeated by a more than two-to-one vote.

Re-elected with Green was Exec. Vice-Pres. John J. Grogan, Hoboken, N. J., who defeated Ray Seese, Baltimore, as was Acting Sec.-Treas. Ross Blood, who won out over Philip Van Gelder, recently discharged after two years in the Army. Van Gelder had held the office from the time the union was formed in 1934 until his induction into the service.

Delegates also elected a new general executive board of 10, five of whom were re-elected. They were Benjamin Maiatico, Camden, N. J.; Thomas Flynn, Staten Island, N. Y.; Richard Carter, Bay City, Mich.; Charles Hansen, Mobile Ala., and Andrew J. Pettis, Portland Me.

The five new members are Alfred Meyers, Philadelphia; Wilfred Moses, Camden; John Dempsey, Kearny, N. J.; Walter Oakes, Baltimore, and Lee Bailey, San Pedro, Calif.

On Friday Natl. CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey presented the union with a certificate of recognition for outstanding service to the cause of economic and political democracy in the field of race relations, awarded by the Natl. CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination.

Earlier, delegates voted full endorsement of the wage policy being followed by the union's officers and board and authorized them to use such measures as they thought necessary to press the union's wage increase demands.

The convention wired CIO Pres. Philip Murray assuring him of the union's support in the fight the Steelworkers and other CIO unions are waging for pay increases, and voted full backing to the Auto Workers' strike against General Motors.

After the close of the convention, Green and other officials went to Washington for resumption of national shipbuilding wage stabilization conferences which had recessed January 5 to permit the CIO representatives to attend the convention.

CHRIS HENNINGS TO AID CIO UNIONS IN ALASKA

CHRIS HENNINGS, newly appointed CIO regional director for Alaska, is a modest man. It took quite a time to pry some information about himself out of him, but slowly, a bit at a time, The CIO NEWS extracted enough to say that Hennings has plenty of union experience behind him to guide him on the new job to which he was appointed this week by Allan S. Haywood, Natl. CIO director of organization.

Hennings was born in Denmark and came to this country with his parents when he was four. After he got out of the army at the end of World War I, he spent his life working and organizing in West Coast industries. He's been a gold miner, lumberjack, fisherman, general construction worker and seaman, and has worked on tow boats and in saw mills, to mention a few of his jobs. For the past 17 years he has been living in Junea, Alaska.

He was one of the original organizers of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers local at the big Juneau gold mine, second largest low-grade gold ore mine in the world, and served as recording secretary of the local for several years.

During a period when he was working in the lumber industry, Hennings was secretary for two years of the Juneau Saw Mill & Lumber Workers Local of the CIO Woodwork-ers, and later was chairman of the Juneau CIO Council for three years. He belongs to the Intl. Fishermen & Allied Work-

HENNINGS

Toward the end of the interview we discovered by a chance remark that Hennings was elected in 1944 as a representative to the Alaska legislature. Among the activities he is planning in connection with his new job is the organization of a CIO Political Action Committee for Alaska.

As CIO representative for Alaska, Hennings will work with all unions having membership in the territory, with the aim of coordinating CIO organizational and political activity. His address is Box 2531, Juneau, Alaska.

Tomorrow's Citizens By Rose H. Alschuler

ARE YOU GIVING YOUR CHILD HIS CHANCE?

Some homes are happy, peaceful, well-adjusted. Others, full of anxiety, strife, insecurity. Unhappy homes often develop children who look discontented, tired, who are disagreeable, bossy, apt to criticize or attack others. Happy homes usually produce children who look bright-eyed, contented, work and play happily, have healthy relations with other people. You can generally tell whether a child comes from a happy or an unhappy home. Are you giving your child his chance?

Lib. of Congress—Rothstein for OWI. Copyright 1946. CIO NEWS.

EATING OUT ON $1.25 A DAY

Prepared by D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross

GOVERNMENT girls have found it possible to buy balanced meals in Washington, D. C., for as little as $1.25 a day, though statistics show this city is one of the most expensive places to live in the country.

Managers of residence halls, doctors and nurses were disturbed by the too-numerous headaches, colds and general poor health of the girls. They didn't know how to buy nourishment with the little more than $1 a day they had to spend for food.

A group of working girls taking the Red Cross nutrition course decided to study the problem. Each day's meals had to follow the pattern for good health. They bought many meals and checked them for nourishment value.

All the meals were eaten at government and privately operated cafeterias which featured the lowest prices available for wholesome food.

Here are the results of their study:

BREAKFAST: Fruit, cereal and milk, or fruit, egg and toast, or fruit, cereal and milk or coffee. 20c-25c.

LUNCH: (at Government or similar cafeteria) Meat, vegetable, bread, butter, milk, or meat dish, 2 vegetables, bread butter, milk and dessert, or soup, salad bread, butter, milk, or (at lunch counter) sandwich, milk, fruit. 20c-30c.

DINNER: Meat, 2 vegetables, bread, butter, beverage and dessert. 50c-75c.

(If you had meat for lunch) vegetable plate, bread, butter, dessert or salad, coffee or milk. 50c-75c.

This is adequate for girls doing office work and needing about 2400 calories daily. An average size man doing light or sitting work needs 3000 calories. These might be supplied with an extra 25c invested in the cheapest energy foods—potatoes, cereals and bread.

The girls quickly learned what foods were bargains in nourishment. These include the following: Milk, liver and kidney, tomato juice, raw vegetables and the leafy greens—cabbage, collard, kale, spinach, turnip and beet greens; potatoes, the bean family, especially soy beans, and cooked whole grain cereals and bread. Sandwich fillings of egg, cheese and peanut butter, and desserts of fruit, milk puddings and ice cream, give good food value for the money spent.

WHO'S BEHIND THE HIKE IN FOOD PRICES

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

THE threatened 18c a pound increase in the price of butter is a very good sample of the result to the consumer of government's policy of lifting of federal wartime controls too rapidly.

We're already paying 5 cents a pound more than last year because Secy. of Agriculture Anderson forced an end to the subsidy to butter producers which rolled butter prices back in 1943. Now he wants OPA to grant an immediate price increase of 6 cents a pound. The other 12 cents of the proposed increase would come in May when the dairy feed subsidy is scheduled to go. The end of that subsidy would increase milk prices, too.

The immediate 6-cent increase is necessary, Anderson says, to get butter produced. Today there is a butter shortage in spite of the release of big Army stores. This is because ice cream manufacturers can pay more for cream than farmers can make by selling it for butter. If butter prices were raised, they say, more cream would go into butter.

We had this same trouble last year because there were agricultural limitation controls which limited the amount of butter fat that could go into ice cream and other manufactured dairy products. In September, 1945, all of those controls were removed and OPA also removed the ceiling price on bulk cream. Cream prices have jumped $3 a can since then.

November butter production was the lowest in 25 years. And butter rationing was discontinued November 24. This meant greatly increased drains on butter supplies because it permitted hotels and restaurants to purchase unlimited quantities.

Anderson now says the only solution is the immediate 6-cent price boost. Chester Bowles, head of OPA, says that he is strongly against any price increase to the consumer and OPA is drafting a program of controls which would increase production without raising prices. The decision will be up to John C. Collett, director of Economic Stabilization.

Bowles has also asked Collett to reconsider the decision to end the entire subsidy propram by June 30, and is urging that Congress be asked for authority to continue subsidies for at least another year. If that were done the dairy feed subsidy could be continued and butter and milk prices would not increase in May. Extension of subsidies would also prevent price increases in meat, flour and bread, canned vegetables and some other foods.

Once again OPA is fighting the fight of the consumer, and it's up to us to see that Bowles gets the support he needs. The most important thing you can do is to write to your Congressman asking him to back OPA in preventing butter price increases.

With the cut in take-home pay working people have taken today, any increase in food prices will simply mean less food in the ice box. Ask your Congressman to urge Collett to refuse any increase in butter prices and to support continuation of subsidies.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1725-41 W. North Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

the ADVENTURES of

JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead

JIM TAKES TIME OFF FROM HIS INVESTIGATION OF A MYSTERIOUS PLOT TO WRECK THE UNION AT THE ROTOR CONSTRUCTION COMPANY TO HELP HIS YET KID BROTHER MICKEY, WHOSE STRANGE BEHAVIOR HAS BEEN TROUBLING HIM DEEPLY.

SO-O---YOUR PROPOSAL TO SUSIE WASN'T SUDDEN?

I WOULDN'T FEEL THIS WAY IF IT WAS! WHAT DO YOU THINK KEPT ME HAPPY THROUGH TWO BLOODY YEARS AT THE FRONT? EVEN AFTER THE WAY SUSIE'S TREATED ME, I STILL GET A KICK WHEN I...

"...I THINK OF THAT DAY IN FRANCE WHEN..."

HERE WE ARE PLAYING HIDE AN' SEEK WITH THEM NAZI TRENCH-BUSTERS--- AN' MICKEY'S GRINNIN' HIS FOOL HEAD OFF. WHATSA MATTER, KID--SHELL HAPPY?

NOPE. TAKE A LOOK AT THIS, TOM!

WE-ELL, SO SHE'S DECIDED TO MARRY YOU VIA V-MAIL! CONGRATS KID!

THANKS, TOM--AND THE SAME TO YOU SOME DAY!

AND THEN I COME HOME AND GET AS SWEET A BRUSH-OFF AS YOU'VE EVER SEEN. GUESS SUSIE FEELS SHE PULLED A SMART SWITCH WHEN SHE DECIDED ON DENTON, SON AND HEIR OF THE ROTOR CONSTRUCTION COMPANY.

NOW WAIT A SECOND, MICKEY. I THINK YOU'VE GOT SUSIE WRONG..

SO YOU THINK SHE'S RIGHT, TOO! I'VE BEEN DOUBLE-CROSSED BY MY GIRL, AND I DON'T WANT TO BE DOUBLE-CROSSED BY MY BROTHER. YOU PEDDLE YOUR OWN PAPERS, LIKE I SAID BEFORE, JIM. GOODBYE! I'VE GOT TO MEET SOME FRIENDS...

LOOKS TO ME AS THOUGH MICKEY'S PLAYING THIS SORE-AT-THE-WORLD GAME A LITTLE TOO HARD. MAYBE I'LL PLAY TOO...

...AND THE FIRST THING TO DO IS TO FIND OUT WHO THESE FRIENDS OF MICKEY'S ARE!

MMM... MICKEY'S ANGER SEEMS TO BE LEADING HIM INTO A STRANGE NEIGHBORHOOD. WONDER WHETHER IT'S ACCIDENT, OR...

Produced by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

Copyright by the NAT'L CIO NEWS

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Tough Times Ahead

All the signs on Capitol Hill are pointing to some pretty tough times ahead as Congress reassembles for the 1946 season.

Spurred on by newspapers headlines and editorial blasts at the "wave of strikes," the most reactionary men in public life are taking the center of the stage to spout their anti-labor venom.

Men like Rep. Howard Smith (D., Va.), who stands for everything reactionary and rotten in American politics; Sen. O'Daniel (D., Tex.), sponsor of the "Christian American" hoodlums; Sen. Taft (R., O.), who red-baits even Truman and who represents the extreme right wing of U. S. industry, have moved onto the front pages and up to the microphones to shout for laws restricting labor.

At the same time, the same men and their reactionary associates among both Republicans and Democrats are preparing long ahead of time to do the final wrecking job on OPA and price control and send the country into an inflation that will rob every worker, farmer and middle class citizen of his wages, his pension and his savings.

With this goes a new plan to put still more tax burdens on the poor and lighten the already trifling (in proportion) burden born by the wealthy.

And just to help crush any lingering resistance to reaction not crushed with the trade unions, the tory GOP-Democrat coalition aims to use the un-American Rankin Committee on a witch hunt unparalleled since the days of Mitchell Palmer and the then youthful J. Edgar Hoover.

These are the indications from the first week of the second session of the 79th Congress. The plan is to move in on the unions by such bills as the Truman anti-strike bill (S 1661, HR 4908), rob the people of their living standards, disarm them politically by such bills as May-Arends (HR 3937), and then elect an even more reactionary Congress in 1946.

This is the plan. Whether it succeeds or not is up to a handful of honest, fighting liberals in Congress and up to you, the voter back home.

The handful of honest liberals in Congress is pitifully small. Alone, they can stop nothing. They have to be backed up by other elements—ranging from the doubtful and the wavering to the honestly confused.

That's where you come in, because you as a voter can do more to cure a bad case of wavering than anything else known to science.

Your letters, your wires, your calls and visits are more needed now than ever before.

If you don't come through, then we are in for tough times on Capitol Hill.

Hit 'Pearl' Smear

The current Senate "investigation" of the Pearl Harbor disaster is nothing more than an attempted smear against the memory of FDR and should be halted at once to permit the Senate to go to work, Nathan Cowan told Senate Majority Leader Barkley this week.

Cowan wrote to Barkley: "It is time that this mockery of an investigation was stopped and the Senate encouraged to go to work on issues of concern to the people, rather than the politicians."

Evidently Cowan's letter got under Senatorial hides, for both Democrat (Lucas of Illinois) and Republican (Brewster of Maine) leaders immediately sent up squeals of anguished protest.

Cowan criticized Republicans and Democrats both, the former for smearing FDR as part of their 1946 election strategy and the latter for appeasing the GOP.

"While Senators vie for the headlines, progress on essential bills is stymied," Cowan said. "Among such measures are the repeal of the poll-tax, the 65-75-cent minimum wage bill, creation of a permanent FEPC, and many others."

Meanwhile, people trying to get to Barkley on repeal of the polltax are told he's "too busy" to see them and much too busy to talk about HR 7.

A Big Wind Coming

A big wind of inflation is blowing up on all of us—and nobody in Congress or in the administration except a tiny few in the House and Chester Bowles, head of OPA, is doing anything to stop it.

Preliminary blasts of the big wind were let off this week by Sen. Taft (R. O.), who has consistently been for inflation since 1941, and by a gang of polltax Democrats who think they've been hurt financially by an OPA threat to fix the price of cotton.

The administration is planning to end all food subsidies by mid-summer. This in itself will jump food prices several score per cent. Butter, which lost its subsidy a few weeks back, is already up 10 per cent, will double that soon.

Subsidies to producers have been in use since 1942 as a means of keeping the cost of basic essentials in line. They have been used to hold down the cost to the consumer—not to the producer—of meat, bread, milk, cheese, butter, canned goods, etc., and they've worked.

Subsidies are scheduled by the administration to end June 30. The price control act expires the same day. Tory Republicans and tory (mostly polltax) Democrats are starting their campaign to end all price control now.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Anti-strike (S 1661, HR 4908	Truman's bill to prohibit strikes by enforced "cooling-off" and "fact-finding" boards.	Hearings going on in Senate Labor Committee. CIO to testify next week. Plan to rush bill to Senate vote.	Wire Senators and Representatives to work and vote against.
Hobbs (HR 32)	Prohibits normal union acts such as picketing, dues collecting, signing up new members under disguise of stopping "racketeering."	Passed House. Now in Senate Judiciary Committee (hostile), with Sen. McCarren (D., Nev.) as chairman. Early report likely.	Tell Senators to work and vote against. Point out racketeering is already covered by State and Federal laws, and Hobbs bill is unnecessary.
May-Arends (HR 3937)	Outlaws union political action; sets jails, fines for strikes "in violation" of contract. Has no punishments for employer violations.	Move to bring on House floor defeated once but can come up again at any time.	Check Representative's record vote (CIO News Dec. 24, '45) and tell him to vote against, even if he voted right then.
65c wage floor (S 1349, HR 3914)	Sets minimum wages at 65c, then 75c, extends coverage of present act.	Sen. Ellender (D., La.), leading Senate filibuster when bill comes up Jan. 21.	Tell Senators to vote for full 65c, against any phoney "compromise" which is not compromise but a sellout.
Union registration (HR 4960)	Attempt to do nationally the same anti-union job done by State registration laws in Florida, Arkansas, etc.	To House Judiciary Committee (Rep. Sumners, D., Tex., chairman) which reported out the Hobbs bill	Tell Representatives to work and vote against.

DROP YOUR CONGRESSMAN A NOTE FROM THE PICKET LINE

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

ANTI-LABOR: In every tough situation, like the present one, all the most bitterly anti-union tories in Congress creep from behind the walls with their own special brand of union-busting legislation.

Thus men like Sen. Byrd (D., Va.), Hoffman (R., Mich.), Smith (D., Va.), Sen. O'Daniel (D., Tex.), and their like have bills in the hopper or on the way that would do an even more extreme job than Truman's anti-strike bill (S 1661).

These men don't expect to get their bills passed. They put them in for their strategic value, so that they can be used as a threat to corral votes for the "milder" Truman bill.

* * *

WITCH-HUNTS: Watch for a revival of witch-hunting on a grand scale. The un-American Committee, run by the unspeakable Rankin (D., Mass.), is on the prowl after every pro-labor, liberal and democratic organization and individual it can find.

The FBI, under J. Edgar Hoover if preparing to step in on every situation where its gum-shoers think they can smell a "red."

Witch-hunters also come out from the cracks when the situation gets tough. Remember Dies in every CIO organizing campaign and in every important election?

* * *

NAZI LISTS: While you're thinking about the Rankin Committee, you might note that it has said nothing about the lists of Nazi supporters in this country found by the U. S. Army in Nazi headquarters in Germany.

Why doesn't the un-American Committee get after these characters?

INCORPORATION: Rep. Andrews (R., N. Y.), has a bill (HR 4960) to require unions to incorporate. An analysis of the bill by CIO Asst. Counsel Eugene Cotton points out:

"The attempt to apply this idea to labor unions can have a serious crippling effect. In the process of organization the union does not simply spring up full-born.

"It starts off slowly by groups of workers meeting informally in their homes or outside, usually without the knowledge of the employer and usually very anxious that the employer not find about it until there is a really functioning organization.

"Yet under this law the minute these preliminary organizing meetings start, these workers would have to come to Washington to file a certificate, etc. . . . it would require that they notify their employes at the beginning exactly who is active and exactly what their activities are."

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee
John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 5

Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS
$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

82

January 28, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

'Smoky City' smokeless: Snow was on the roof of the open hearth at U. S. Steel's Homestead plant, near Pittsburgh, as Michael Harkovich and other USA-CIO pickets went into the second week of their industry-wide strike. See Pages 3 to 9.

Steel Pictures by Associated Photographers, Pittsburgh

BARES PLOT BEHIND COOL-OFF

PRESIDENT Truman fell into a neat trap prepared by the GOP and General Motors when he proposed his fact-finding and cooling off bill, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO Auto Workers said this week in the first of a series of CIO appearances on the bill before the Senate Labor Committee.

Linking GM, Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (R. Mich.) and Gerald L. K. Smith together in an anti-FDR and anti-union conspiracy, Thomas told the Senators:

"They (GM) laid out a plan which was as smooth as the Tinkers to Evers to Chance baseball play. This play was GM to Vandenberg to Truman to Congress. And here I trust you will pardon my neglect of Senatorial courtesy while I refer to a member of the U. S. Senate who constantly carried the GM torch in the Senate for the destruction of unions in general and the UAW-CIO in particular. I believe it is important to bring this out now because it appears to me that this Senator helped lay a trap into which President Truman has stepped."

Citing Vandenberg's repeated attacks on the UAW and CIO on the Senate floor during the early organizing days of '35, '36 and '37, and his repeated attempts to cripple the Wagner Act by amendments, Thomas went on:

"He used the Senate to build the prestige of Gerald L. K. Smith, by praising Smith's 'inspiring chairmanship' of the Committee of One Million on the floor, and by putting Smith's propaganda into the record.

"It was this same Senator who proposed that a conference of management and labor be called by the President. The President and Secretary of Labor called the conference. After the conference ended, the President proposed the legislation which you are now considering because, he pointed out, the conference had failed to agree on how to prevent industrial unrest.

"This was a trap, because the conference was never meant to solve the basic causes of industrial unrest. The Senator who suggested the conference is an extremely intelligent and practical man. He knows full well what is going on in industry, and particularly in the automobile industry.

"He knew that the automobile industry wanted the labor-management conference to fail. They wanted it to fail because they knew that failure would help their never-ending plan for anti-labor legislation.

"They wanted more strikes because, as one of their spokesmen put it, 'as industrial turmoil increases, more and more people will see the evils generated by collective bargaining, and we should look forward to the time when federal labor laws will be repealed.'"

Employers tried violence this week on the picket lines — feeling their way a little gingerly at first but with the intention of growing bolder if they see they can get away with it. Here a UE striker gets a taste of police brutality while picketing a GM electrical plant in Los Angeles.

CIO Asks Terminal Leave Pay For GIs

NEXT to the demobilizaiton slow-down, what rankles GIs and gobs most is the failure to pay them for accrued—or terminal—leave, such as officers receive.

It is not uncommon for a captain to get as much as $2,400 in terminal leave pay. The most that a GI gets is $300 mustering-out pay—if he has served 60 days or more overseas.

Present indications are that the House Military Affairs Committee will likely report out a bill similar to HR 4831, introduced last December by Rep. Mike Mansfield (D. Mont.), which the CIO Legislative Dept. and the CIO Veterans Committee are supporting.

The bill would grant each enlisted man 2½ days' pay for each month in the service at the rate he was receiving immediately prior to his discharge. The pay would be based on the "war service period,"—from the time the man joined up or Dec. 7, 1941, whichever is the earlier, to six months after the end of the war as proclaimed by the President or to the date of discharge, whichever is the later.

When hearings were held on GIs' terminal pay before a subcommittee of the House Military Affairs Committee last December, there was no opposition. A score of bills including HR 4831 are being combined by the sub-committee in one bill, preparatory to a hearing before the full committee.

CIO Legislative Director Nathan Cowan wrote Mansfield:

"We agree with your statement of Dec. 4, 1945, in the Congressional Record that discrimination now in effect against the enlisted men is unwarranted and undemocratic. We shall do everything in our power to get your bill through."

GM FLOUTS PAY PACT DEADLINE

THE CIO Auto Workers this week returned to their demand that General Motors raise wages 30%, serving notice that the nine-weeks-old strike would no longer be ended with a 19½c pay increase as recommended by President Truman's fact-finding board.

In a letter to President Truman, the union's executive board rejected the fact-finders' recommendation, which it had accepted a week earlier in another letter to the President.

After reinstating its demand for a 30% increase, the Auto Workers' board said that "GM must compensate for the added suffering and sacrifices it is imposing on its employes by prolonging the strike."

Like CIO Pres. Philip Murray, the board charged that GM and other corporations were united in defying the U. S. government and were conspiring to destroy organized labor.

Like Murray in his letter to Treasury Secretary Vinson this week, the board in a resolution called for the abolition of the carry-back carry-forward provisions of the corporate tax laws.

Support for the GM strikers widened with the formation in Washington of a United Labor Committee to Aid the UAW-GM strikers.

Sponsors included CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and CIO Vice-Pres. and Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood, and Pres. David Dubinsky of the AFL Ladies' Garment Workers.

Other sponsors are, Max Zaritsky, president of the Hat Workers; A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Sal B. Hoffman, president of the Upholsterers Union; Elmer Brown, vice president of the Typographical Union, all AFL unions; Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers, and Samuel Wolchok, president of the Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes, both of CIO.

BIG BUSINESS IN EVIL CONSPIRACY—MURRAY

(Here are the highlights of a radio address by Pres. Philip Murray of CIO and the Steelworkers over the Americai Broadcasting system Jan. 21.)

Our nation tonight faces a very serious crisis. Hundreds of thousands of American workers are on strike in the steel, automobile, electrical manufacturing and meat packing industries.

The requests of the workers involved in these disputes is for a wage increase. But the issue which has been drawn by the corporations is of much graver importance to the American people. The outcome of the present struggle will directly affect every American household.

That is my reason for bringing to you this evening a message from these workers and the members of their families who—aware of the stake involved—are prepared to endure all the hardships and the sacrifices that may be necessary in order that the common people shall enjoy their rightful heritage.

There has been a slash in the weekly earnings of the steelworkers since April, 1945, of $12.84. This means that $50 a month has been taken from the steelworker's pay envelope.

Each of you must know what it means to the steelworker—his wife—his children to suffer this kind of a wage cut—$50 less a month. It means—less food—less clothing—perhaps a hesitancy to call the doctor even though with grave risks.

This bitter experience of steelworkers has been the pattern for most wage earners.

The wage increase determined by the President would only in part restore the wage cut suffered by the steelworkers but we accepted the President's decision in recognition of the national interest to achieve a peaceful settlement of our dispute.

The steel industry, however, with unmatched boldness, rejected the determination of the President of the United States.

The President appealed to the steel industry to reconsider their action. The steel magnates did not even condescend to reply to the President of the United States.

The struggle is now one which runs far beyond the steelworkers and the steel corporations. It is of the utmost importance to every American that this fact be clearly understood.

American industry, fattened with war profits, guaranteed a high level of profits through special tax rebates under laws written at their behest, have deliberately set out to destroy labor unions, to provoke strikes and economic chaos and mulct the American people through uncontrolled profits and inflation.

They are determined to eliminate, if they possibly can, true collective bargaining between management and labor unions. They are hell-bent to place themselves above all laws and rules of equity and justice.

It is their clear aim to exact unconditional surrender from the American people and the United States Government.

There can be no question but that an evil conspiracy has been hatched among American big business. This conspiracy challenges our very basic democratic institutions.

The General Motors Corporation has, without any qualm, rejected the recommendation of the President's fact-finding panel for settlement of the current wage dispute between that corporation and the UAW-CIO. The Union accepted the compromise proposal.

The steel industry has with equal disdain rejected the decision of the President of the United States for a compromise settlement. The Union accepted.

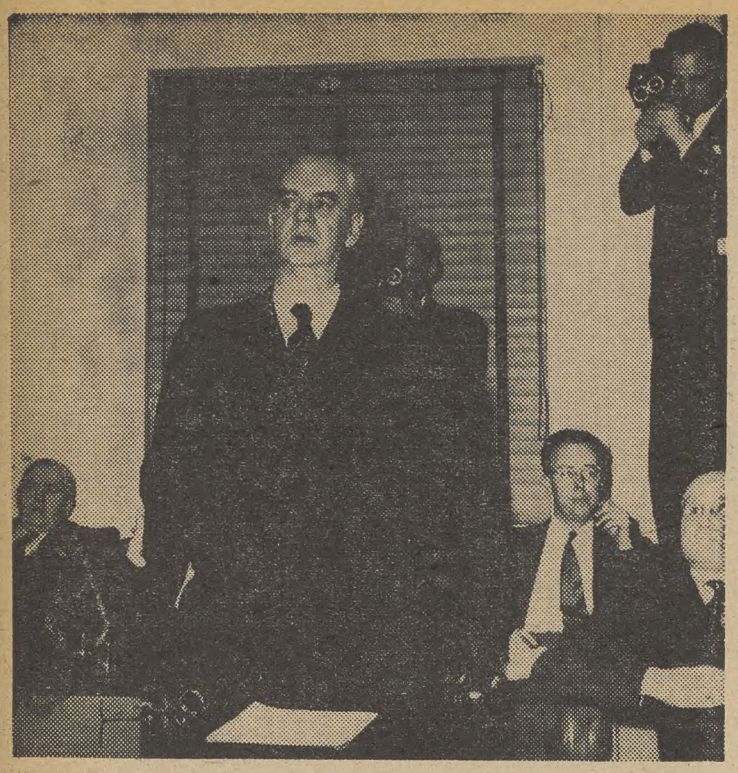
The electrical manufacturing industry with similar arrogance has rejected all attempts by the UE-CIO and representatives of the government to compose their current wage dispute through collective bargaining and mediation.

These industrial magnates do not choose to permit the people to impose any restraint upon their greed. They prefer a status wherein millions of unemployed would be available at ever-decreasing wage levels to be exploited for the benefit of these large corporate enterprises. Labor unions, as organizations of free Americans who desire to improve their standard of living in the interest of the entire nation, represent a threat to this dream of conquest.

We seek wage increases now to restore the pay cuts the workers have suffered since VJ-Day. This will mean more food, more clothing, better shelter, better medical service for the common people. This will mean a better and healthier America.

MURRAY CHARGES $20 BILLION TAX GRAB

(Other Stories—Pages 5-9 and 12)



CONSPIRACY TO BUST UNIONS: Philip Murray, president of CIO and of the United Steelworkers, as he charged in a Washington press conference that industry is conspiring, with the aid of U. S. tax refunds, to break all unions.

PHILIP MURRAY, president of CIO and the United Steelworkers, charged this week that industry is slated to reap a $20 billion tax harvest from the U. S. Treasury under provisions of the tax law. He asked Sec. of the Treasury Vinson "to terminate this outrageous condition."

Steel firms, which have flouted President Truman's strike settlement proposal for an 18½c-an-hour wage increase, will be among the largest benefactors, Murray declared.

Additional developments in the week-old strike, which has shut down all but one of the major plants of the $6,000,000,000 industry, included:

1. A union request that the Dept. of Justice investigate reported plans for "wholesale cancellation of collective bargaining agreements as the first step to provoke strikes."

2. A union recommendation that the government seize $1,000,000,000 worth of Defense Plant Corp. steel facilities, to be operated by individuals such as Henry J. Kaiser, or by the U. S. This would include U. S. Steel's largest single mill at Homestead, Pa.

3. A statement by President Truman that the best thing that Pres. Benjamin Fairless of U. S. Steel could do would be to settle the strike by paying the 18½c increase recommended by the President. President Truman pointed out that the workers could not return to their jobs without the increase. In his message to Congress, he urged "substantial" wage boosts as "good business for the country as a whole."

Meanwhile, the strike was 100% effective from coast to coast, with reports flooding the union's Pittsburgh office of solid support from virtually all elements in steel communities—businessmen, public officials, clergymen, veterans, the American Legion at Braddock, Pa., and even some newspaper columnists.

The Clairton, Pa., City Council voted to borrow $50,000 as an emergency relief fund to aid steel strikers if the need arises. Sixty per cent of the city's tax bill is paid by U. S. Steel's Carnegie-Illinois plant.

On the other side of the tax picture, Murray's charges of the big corporation's steal from the public treasury gave a detailed account of the financial manipulations involved and the results expected.

"Assuming that the steel companies in 1946 break even—that is, do not make any net profits—the U. S. Treasury will actually pay to the industry $740,000,000," Murray said.

"This represents guaranteed profits that are 29% above the level of prewar earnings.

"Under this provision the U. S. Steel Corp. will be repaid $67,340,000 though its average net profit after taxes for the prewar era was $44,732,000.

"The U. S. Treasury is being mulcted for the benefit of a privileged few bent in sinister conspiracy to plunge the country into economic chaos. This intolerable situation, if the safety and future of our nation are to be protected, cannot continue."

In N. Y. City, firm support of Truman's efforts to settle the steel strike was expressed by Chairman Sidney Hillman of the CIO Political Action Committee.

"I wish to express our deep appreciation of the firm stand you have taken in favor of wage increases to protect American workers against a drastic decline in living standards and to maintain the national purchasing power essential to a healthy economy," Hillman wrote the President.

Other support for the strike came from World War II veterans in the industry, who went on the air over USA-CIO's three-times-a-week broadcasts over ABC stations (check your local papers).

In an interview with Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee, Congressional Medal of Honor Winner Henry Erwin said:

"It is only common sense that if the wage earners of our country—who make up far the largest part of the consuming public—are not able to buy the goods they manufacture, production will soon get out of line with demand. And I think we all realize what that means—plants shut down, unemployment, depression—the same sad story of the 30's in which we were the long-suffering characters."

In Pittsburgh, the Rev. Charles O. Rice declared in a nationwide broadcast:

"The rank and file steel workers are willing to strike at this time because they see that they are waging the battle of the future.

"They are putting up a struggle so that their children won't have to sustain worse and harder struggles in another generation.

"If we repeat the mistakes of the last postwar period; if we pile up senseless profits and mounds of gold, and if we don't put enough money in the hands of the worker, who will spend it to create more wealth, we will have another and worse depression."

UE BARES $38 MILLION 'GIFT' TO BIG FIRMS

LIKE TO contribute $38,000,000 to a pair of poor, starving corporations so they can fight strikes and bust unions with it?

That's exactly what you're going to do this year for General Electric and Westinghouse, who, with General Motors (electrical division), are forcing 200,000 members of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers to strike for a living wage.

You're going to do it this year through the operation of the "carry-back" section of the tax law, which pays corporations through tax refunds for not running their plants.

Julius Emspak, UE's general secretary-treasurer, put it this way in supporting CIO President Murray's demand that Congress repeal this section of the 1942 tax law which guarantees corporations their pre-war profit levels whether or not a wheel turns in their plants:

"Corporations like GE and Westinghouse, in deliberately provoking a strike of their employes, knew in advance that because of provisions of this Federal tax law, they can break even financially in 1946 and still be reimbursed by the government to the sum of $38,000,000.

"These corporations are spending many millions in tremendous propaganda programs in an attempt to influence public opinion. Through advertising and radio campaigns, through the employment of elaborate public relations staffs, and in other ways, these corporations are pouring out money in an attempt to poison the minds of the public.

"When Mr. and Mrs. America turn on the radio and hear one of these corporations on the air with anti-union propaganda, they should say to themselves: 'I helped pay for that radio program through my taxes.'"

Congress has two bills (HR 5232 and HR 5180) now up in the House Ways and Means Committee that will repeal this biggest of all tax steals in the history of corruption.

Meanwhile, officials of UE, and of GM and Westinghouse met this week with Federal Mediators William H. Davis and Arthur S. Meyer, but as The CIO NEWS went to press, the union reported "no progress."

In Harrisburg, 600 veterans, all striking UE members, this week marched to the Pennsylvania Capitol to demand a special session of the assembly to pass a law giving ex-servicemen unemployment insurance.

A State police official told the UE veterans that Governor Edward Martin (R.) would not be able to see them because it was "physically impossible."

At the moment Martin was dining with newspapermen at Hershey, a score of miles away.

Report OKs 65c Floor

An important first round in the drive to raise minimum wages to 65c an hour was won in the favorable Senate Labor Committee report on the bill (S 1349) this week.

The report sets the rate at 65c the first year, 70c the next two years, and at 75c from the fourth year on.

It includes coverage for agricultural processing workers and seamen, but knocks out overtime for seamen and gives the packing firms a 14-week seasonal exemption on overtime for food workers.

The report now waits until the southern polltax filibuster against the FEPC bill is successfully broken, and will then go to the Senate floor.

KAISER PACT BLASTS STEEL FIRMS' CHISELING

"I CANNOT conceive that a sum of 3½c should be permitted to retard or destroy the possibility of real peace and prosperity for the nation," said industrialist Henry J. Kaiser this week as he signed a contract granting an 18½c an hour wage increase for the largest steel plant on the Pacific Coast, at Fontana, Calif.

The contract, with the CIO Steelworkers, plus the famed shipbuilder's plea for full support of President Truman's position in the steel wage battle, added up to sharp criticism of the rest of the steel industry for its refusal to boost its 15c an hour offer to nearly 800,000 workers on strike.

Kaiser, who previously had signed a contract that met demands of the CIO Auto Workers at the Kaiser-Frazer plant at Willow Run, Mich., announced that he will build a large steel mill to provide material for the auto factory.

In making public his steel agreement at the White House, Kaiser said:

"I have signed this agreement with President Murray of the Steelworkers Union because I am confident that only by integrity and fair play on the part of both labor and management can we ride the perilous seas ahead and achieve industrial harmony and security for our people.

"This is a crisis. Shall we support the President of the U. S? The people's answer will be, yes—it can be no other way. Too much is at stake not to support him.

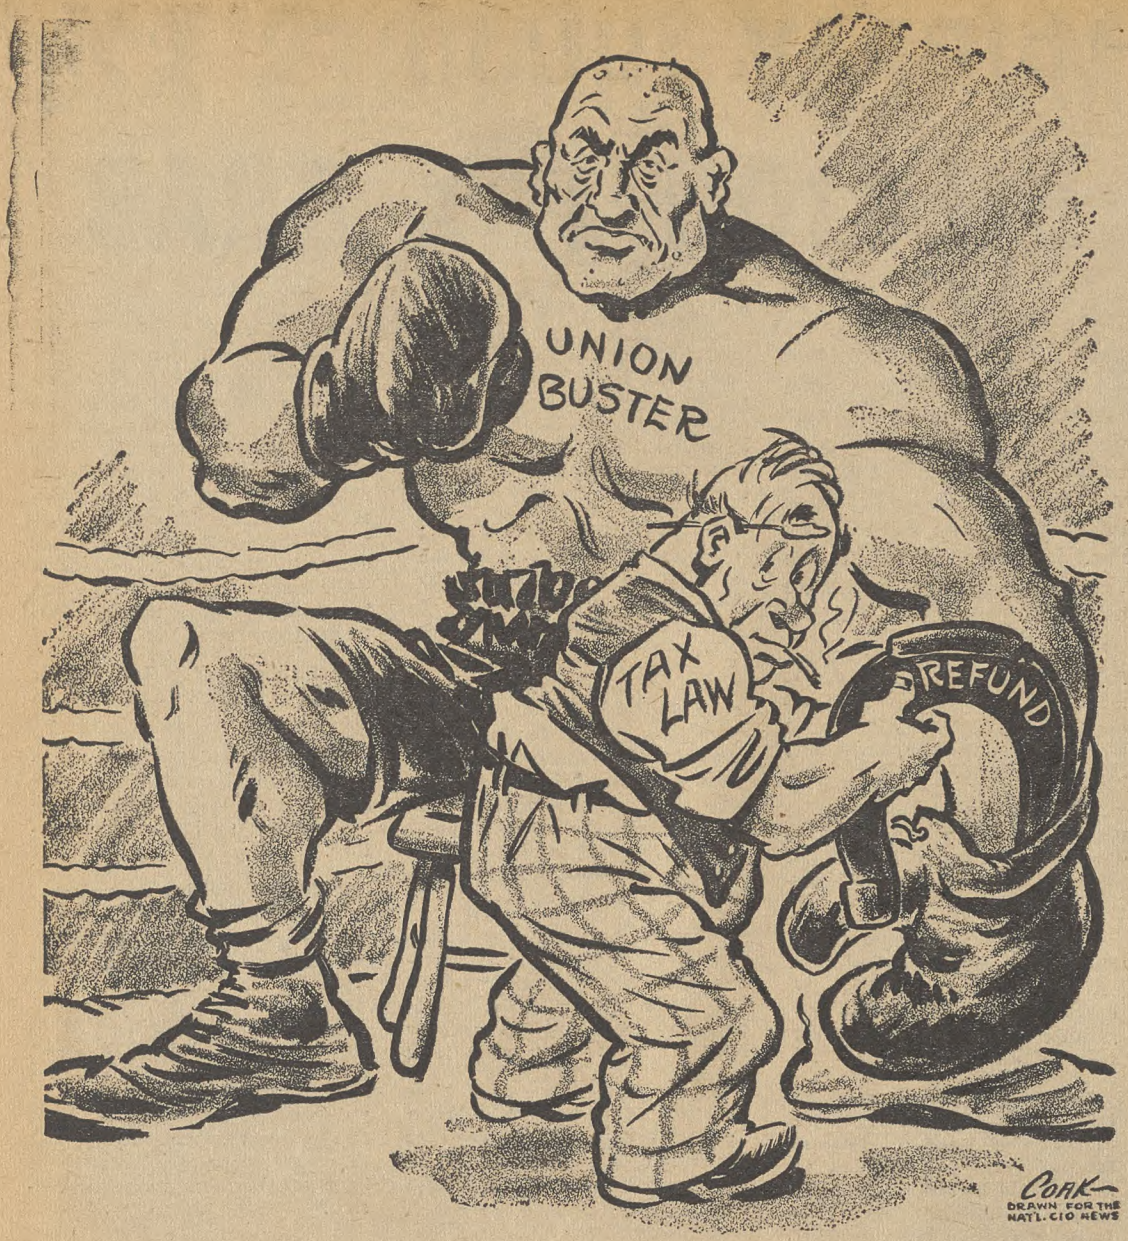
"The President's proposal which I have accepted was made by him in utmost sincerity with an understanding of the human relationship and economic factors that are essential to a prosperous nation."

COPIES OF THIS ISSUE ON HAND FOR ORDERS

Extra copies of this big special Strike Issue of The CIO NEWS have been printed to supply the demand for bundle orders. CIO members should know who the strikers are and what is at stake, which this edition pictures graphically.

Bundle orders should be sent to The CIO NEWS, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C. The rates are: 1½c a copy up to 1,000; 1¼c a copy for quantities between 1,000 and 2,000; and 1c a copy for more than 2,000.

First come, first served. Orders will be filled as long as the limited supply lasts. PLACE YOUR ORDER NOW!



INDUSTRY'S GIMMICK

Big business is pretty big, but it's not big enough to beat the United States.

Yet today we see the bosses of steel, autos, electrical manufacturing, meat packing, farm equipment, communications and other big industries entering the ring not only against labor but against the President and the whole American people.

Where do they get their gall? Why have they been spoiling for this fight? What has made them willing to shut down their plants rather than pay decent wages?

On what does their arrogance feed when they defy public opinion by rejecting collective bargaining and spurning governmental requests and decisions?

Swollen war profits have fed the strength and arrogance of these corporations, enabling them to build up huge reserves against the day of their showdown with labor and the people.

These inflated profits have not satisfied their recipients, but have only whetted their appetites for more. And repeal of the excess profits tax has opened up vistas of unlimited profiteering, if only they can prevent labor and the people from getting their share in higher wages and lower prices.

But this is not all there is to it. For even so, the corporations might well hesitate to provoke prolonged shutdowns and consequent losses of production and profits.

The secret of their audacity is that they are entering this fight with weighted gloves.

They are actually counting on the government and the taxpayers to finance them in their fight against the people—to make good their losses and to assure them of high profits for as long as they choose to keep their plants shut.

During the war, a number of extraordinary tax measures were slipped through Congress at the behest of big business. Under the pretext of tiding the corporations over reconversion, these laws provide that the U. S. Treasury shall rebate any losses and guarantee a high level of profits through direct cash payments.

Under the 10% postwar refund provisions of the Revenue Act of 1942, Philip Murray points out, the steel industry alone is entitled to a rebate from the U. S. Treasury of more than 200 million dollars.

Under the "carry-back" tax provisions, guaranteeing corporations against postwar loss of profits, the steel companies will actually receive 149 million dollars from the U. S. Treasury, if they break even in 1946. This represents guaranteed profits of 29% above the level of prewar earnings.

In the electrical industry, Secretary Julius Emspak of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers points out that General Electric and Westinghouse were able to provoke a strike of their employes with the knowledge that "they can break even financially in 1946 and still be reimbursed by the government by the sum of $38,000,000."

There are also other complicated tax provisions, relating to changes in "base period" and amortization, under which industry generally may get billions more from public funds.

Murray has called to the attention of Treasury Secretary Vinson this "outrageous condition" under which corporations are actually being paid from public funds to defy the government and the public interest and to destroy labor unions.

Moves are also under way in Congress to repeal these special privileges for union-busting corporations, which are using them not to further reconversion but to block it and to hold up the public.

It's time the people stopped paying to have their pockets picked.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

AMERICA today is feeling the effects of what CIO Pres. Philip Murray calls "an evil conspiracy among big business," "a rebellion against the people," "a sinister conspiracy to plunge the country into economic chaos."

This is strong language, but it is also an exact description of what has been going on.

It would take a long and thorough investigation, similar to those of the LaFollette Committee, to uncover all the details of the present conspiracy—the times and places of secret meetings, the big-shots participating, the private memoranda and plans, the "gentlemen's agreements," etc.

But at the present stage, the results of this conspiracy speak for themselves.

Industry after industry has refused to pay a living wage, has rejected collective bargaining, has spurned government offorts to bring about an agreement, has turned down the decisions of the President and his fact-finding boards, and has insisted on forcing its workers out on strike.

Anyone who knows the trustified control of the big industries involved, the interlocking directorates, the Wall Street interests that have the final word, would be innocent indeed to imagine that this pattern is coincidental and is not the result of secret understandings, of a common plan or, in a word, of a conspiracy.

★ ★ ★

Labor could not conspire as big business has done, even if it wanted to.

The CIO unions are democratic organizations with many thousands of members who must be consulted before any action is taken, and all of whom are asked to vote long before strikes are called.

At every stage, there are executive boards, wage policy committees, and many other union representatives to be consulted.

All issues and decisions have to be widely publicized, to inform the rank and file and to secure their essential support, as well as to enlist public sympathy.

Operating as they do in the full glare of constant publicity, CIO leaders can hardly hold a private consultation among themselves without reporters being on hand and usually getting full accounts of what transpires.

Big business leaders, on the other hand, have long surrounded themselves with a wall of secrecy.

When so few men control so much wealth and power, without recognizing any democratic obligations, they can make their decisions at private homes or clubs, over the luncheon table, or in closely-guarded offices, with private elevators and other devices for avoiding public attention.

So it happens that while every CIO meeting and decision has been given full publicity, hardly a word has been printed about the secret meetings and consultations among big business leaders in their conspiracy against labor and the public.

★ ★ ★

The CIO unions have courted the widest publicity because they know they are acting in the interests not only of their millions of members but also of all the people.

They have shown their public-spiritedness by acceding to every governmental request for conciliation, mediation, fact-finding, etc., and by accepting the wage decisions of President Truman (in the case of steel) and of his fact-finders (in the case of General Motors).

The big employers, on the other hand, have shunned publicity, because they know that they are placing their selfish interests ahead of the public interest—in fact, that their whole plan of action is a conspiracy against the public interest.

Encouraged by knowing they are guaranteed full profits, whether they produce or not, through tax rebates from the U. S. Treasury, they have chosen to force close to two million workers out on strike, to "plunge the country into economic chaos," rather than to pay adequate wages out of their swollen profits.

Their rejection of collective bargaining, their arrogant and provocative attitude toward the unions, their defiance of the President and the government in rejecting conciliation, arbitration and fact-finding awards, reveal clearly that they are engaged in conspiracy, as Murray says, "to destroy labor unions, to provoke strikes and economic chaos, and to hi-jack the American poeple through uncontrolled profits and inflation."

The CIO News
Congress of Industrial Organizations
Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer
Vice-President

Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

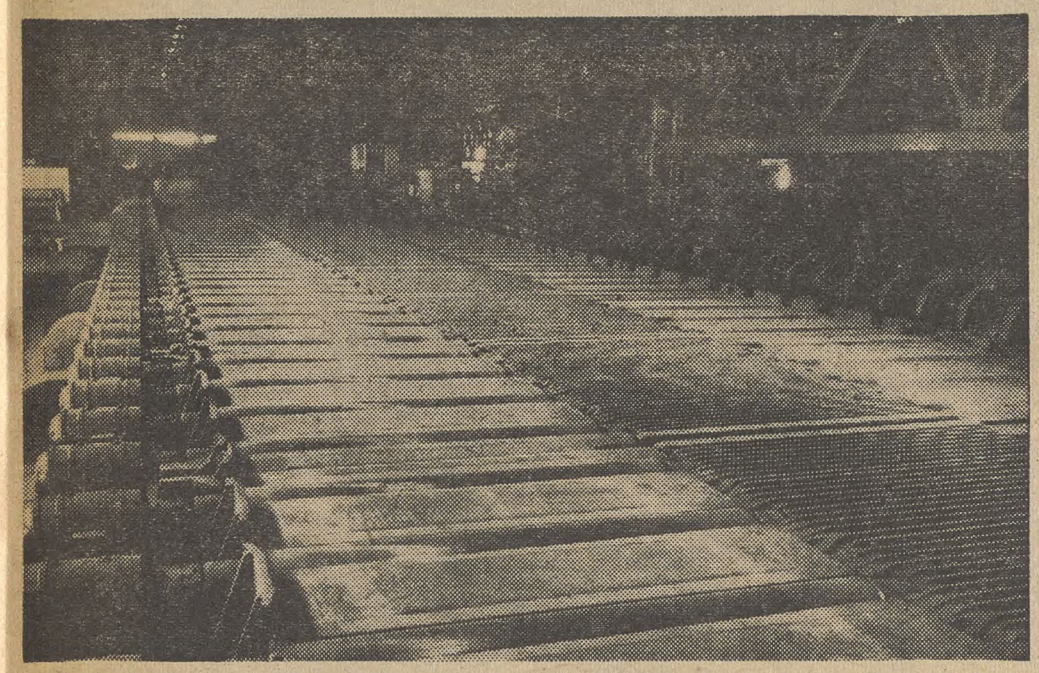
Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 January 28, 1946 No. 5

PITTSBURGH—SMOKELESS CITY

1 Pledged to strike until the industry grants the 18½c an hour raise recommended by President Truman, pickets of the CIO Steelworkers march in zero weather at U. S. Steel's Homestead plant, near Pittsburgh. The plant was the scene of a bloody battle with Pinkerton detectives in 1892.



2 It still takes men to make steel. Homestead's 100-inch rolling mill is halted by peaceful, token picket lines as 800,000 workers and most of the merchants they deal with support strike. In 1892, militia was called in after 7 strikers, 3 "Pinks" were killed.

3 Respectful Romeo, doorman of Pittsburgh's snooty Duquesne Club, welcomes W. M. Wilson, vice-president, Flannery Bolt Co., Chicago, and W. T. Kilborn, president, Flannery Bldg., Pittsburgh. Plush fittings go well with $100,000 "salaries" of some steel makers. Steel workers' salaries, meanwhile, average $43.48 a week.

4 Frozen ground makes tough picketing. Miss Frances Lewandosky, former WAC and now a Homestead sweeper, takes time out to toast her toes at USA-CIO headquarters. She makes $6.36 a day before deductions. "That's $31.80 gross a week. It isn't much to get by on these days the way prices are going up."

5 Merchants support strikers. Harry Lincoff (center), wallpaper and paint man, gave Homestead strikers his storeroom for the duration. Mrs. Pauline Harris, laborer, pours welcome coffee for machinist Charles Copeland. Pickets hit the line once a week for an eight-hour shift—two hours on, two off. It's plenty cold!

BLOODY HOMESTEAD—1892

1 Veteran of the bloody Homestead strike, 81-year-old George Ackerman helps his son, Charles, picket in this one. Some friendly advice was followed by a visit to a coke-burning "salamander" to take chill off at U. S. Steel's Duquesne plant.

"THE Pinkertons are coming!"

It was 4 o'clock in the morning, July 6, 1892, when the 12,000 residents of Homestead, Pa., got the warning.

One day later seven Homesteaders and three Pinkertons were dead, result of a gun battle that raged across the Monongahela River for hours and involved, among others, 81-year-old George Ackerman, father of a CIO Steelworkers striker.

Still spry and remarkably clear about details, Ackerman told the CIO NEWS in an exclusive interview that "it was a great day—they were some plucky buggers, those scabs, but they got licked."

Ackerman, who retired in 1931, worked more than 50 years in the steel industry and helped make the first brick for the Homestead mill in 1878.

"I was pouring steel in '92. I belonged to the old Amalgamated Assn. of Iron and Steelworkers—just a scrub member. It wasn't much of a union. The bosses were out to break it though. They couldn't dog the men around like they wanted to. And they can't do it now either."

What happened in '92? Ackerman's gray head wagged with pleasure.

"The whole town came down. The Monongahela bridge was lined with people. The barge full of scabs was coming up the river. There were some good shooters on that barge. But we had some better ones.

"The people on the bridge, on the other side of the river, everywhere were shooting at them. The shots were rattling off No. 1 open hearth just like throwing seed.

"The scabs had beds and food aboard their boat—and boy, they had the guns. They were well equipped with revolvers and everything. They would have fixed us if they had got in there."

Ackerman told how H. C. Frick, chairman of Carnegie Bros. & Co., in a frantic (and unfortunately successful) effort to break the union, had built an eight-foot fence around the plant. "Every two feet or so they had holes for the Pinkertons to fire from, only they didn't fire, they got fired!"

Management's strategy was to get the scabs inside the mill, only it didn't work.

"The union people took their guns away from them. They marched over 300 of the scabs off the boat and into old Turner Hall. Boy, they were glad to get off!

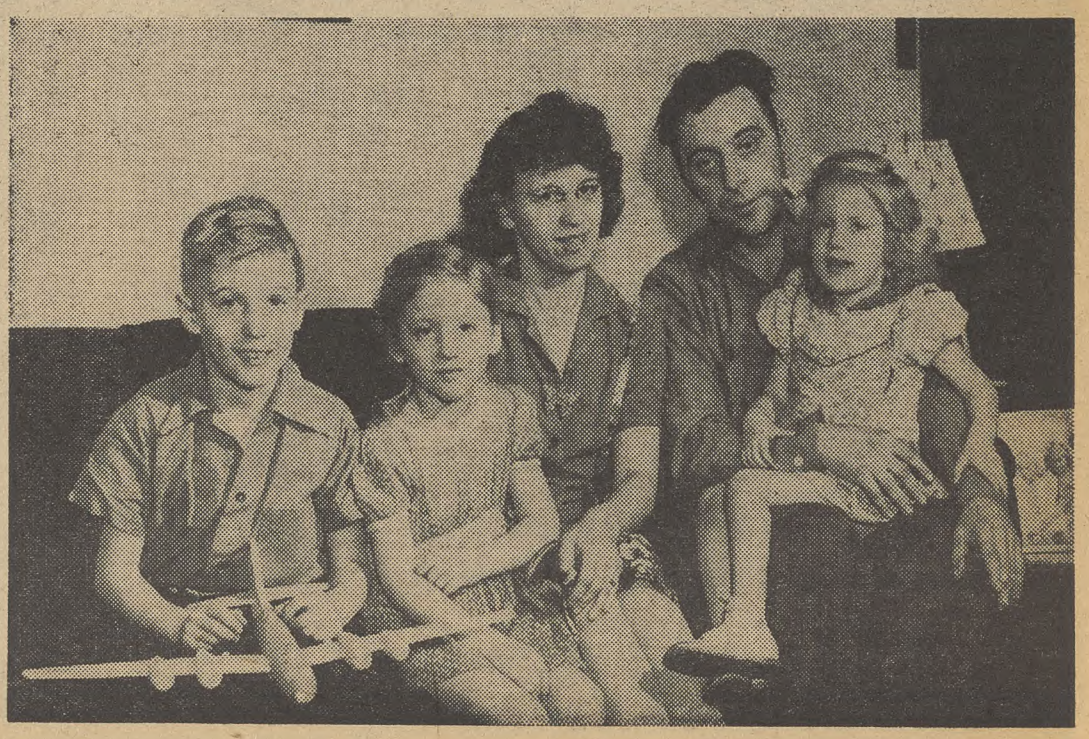
"I was helping march a Pinkerton down to the hall, when a Mrs. Bates took a whopper at him and hit me right on the head.

"They hunted for about two years for them guns we got off the scabs. But the strikers, they got next to that—they hid them.

"It took about a year or more to get all the scabs out of their jobs at the mill, but we did it."

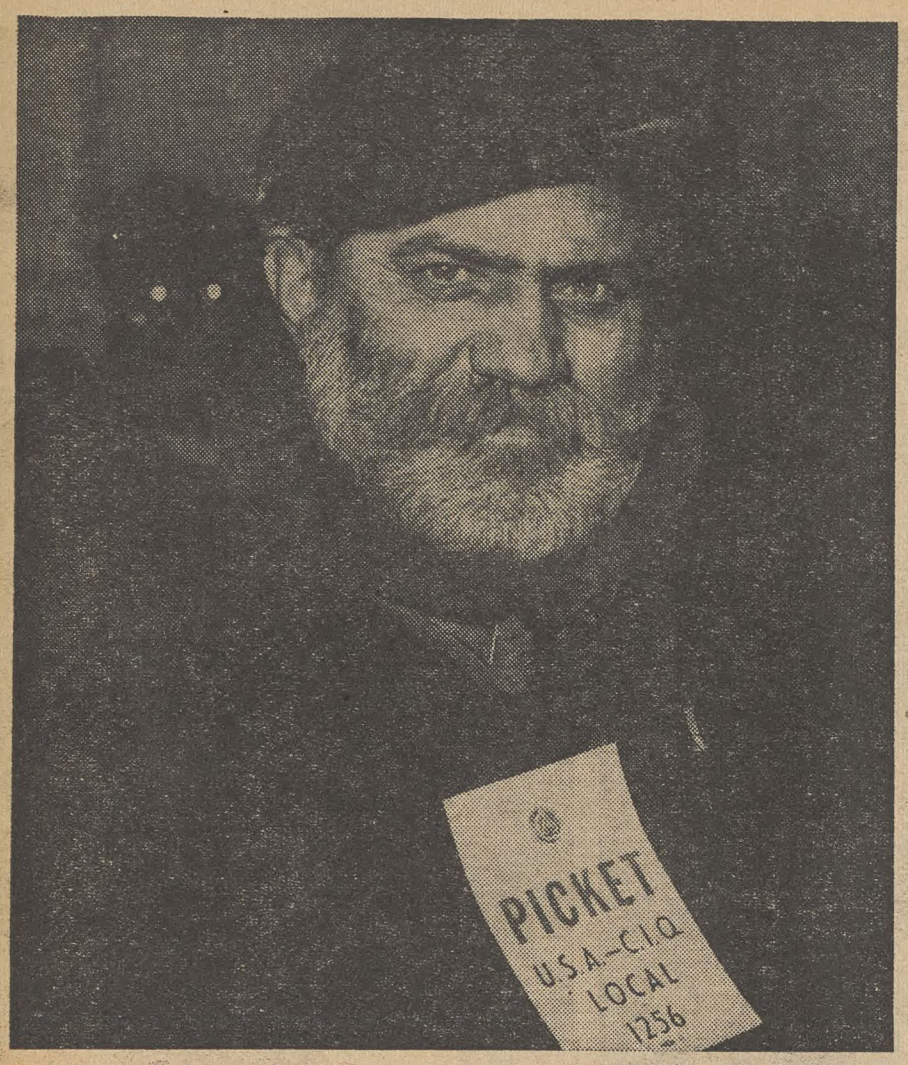
Six days after the battle the Governor sent in the National Guard. The strike lasted several weeks after that, but finally was lost. The industry continued to work a 12-hour day, seven days a week.

Today, there's some difference. A union 800,000 strong instead of only 24,000. And the people—"they think the strike's all right. We'll win it. You see."



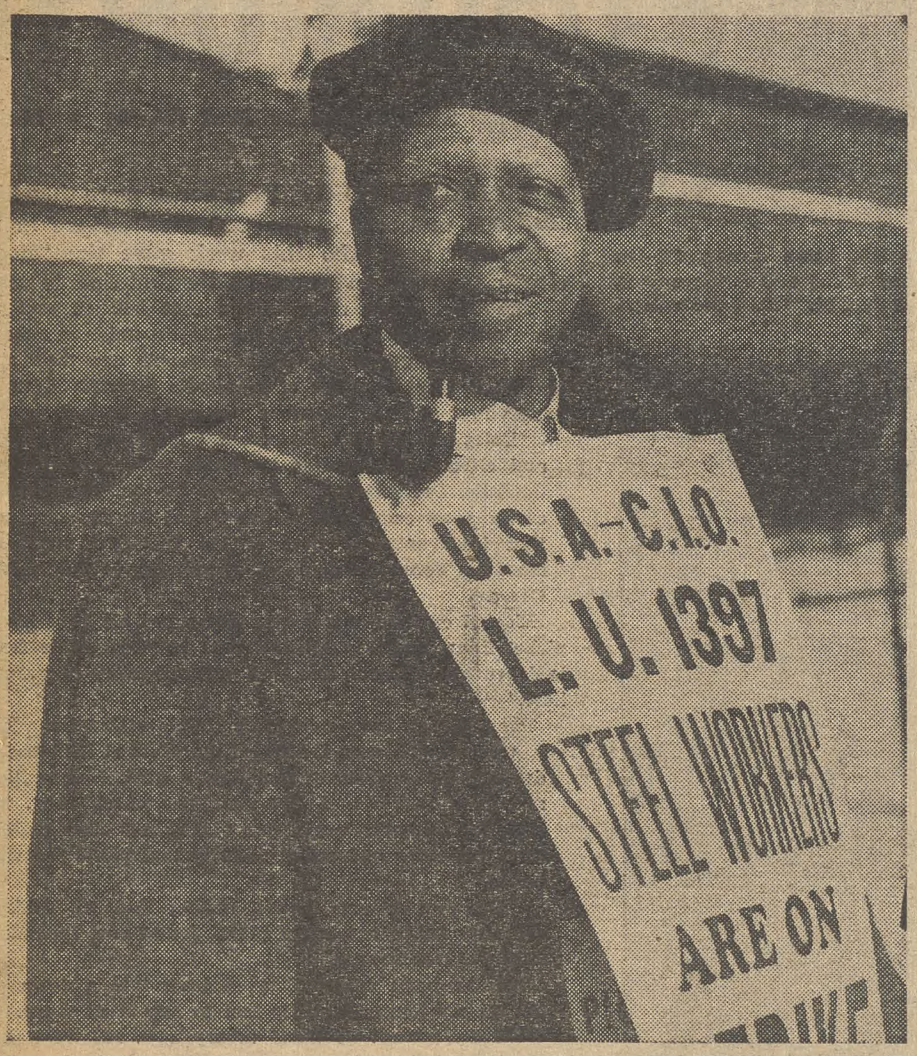
2 Charles Ackerman and family. Henrietta, his wife, with Charles Jr., 7, Bernadette, 5, and Carol Ann, 3. Charles, 38, a first helper in the open hearth for 23 years, would like "40 hours work—no more—with enough pay to get along on. They always say you've got brains before you go into the open hearth, but they get burned out generally in two years."

MEN WHO MAKE STEEL



1 62-year-old Louis Marts has worked "more than 25 years" as a general laborer in U. S. Steel's Duquesne plant, near Pittsburgh. He makes $6.24 a day before deductions. "We worked six days a week before V-J Day, now only five. The day they took off was the only day that counted—time and a half." An 18½c an hour raise would make up for the time cut, but wouldn't compensate for price rises. Marts, single, will "make out," but "it's tough on families."

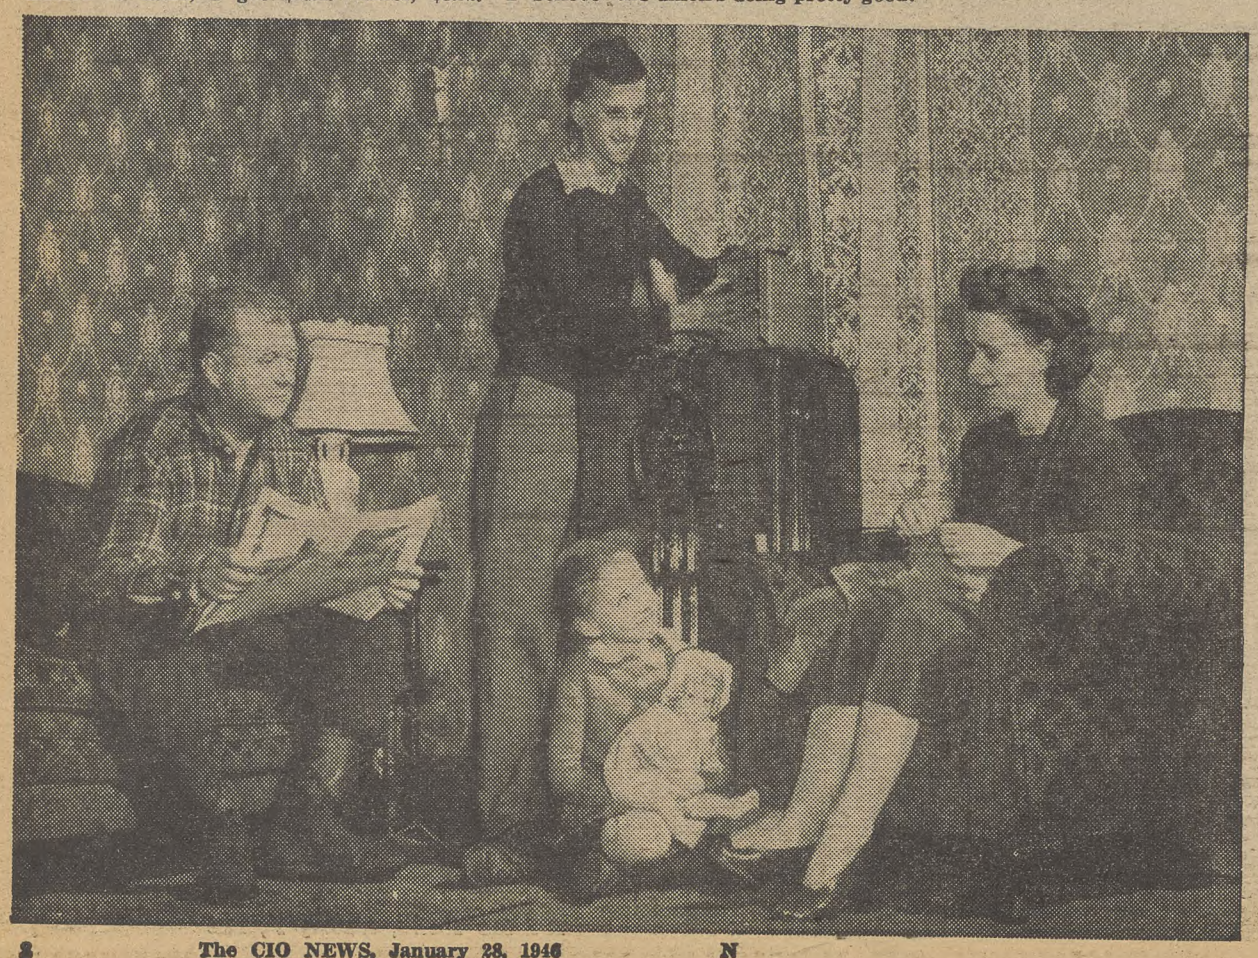
2 25-year-old George Chatlos is a stamper's helper at Duquesne. A former technical sergeant with Patton's 3rd Army, Chatlos earned three battle stars and a combat infantry badge. He grossed $7.50 a day average during November, but "what I make depends on what we roll." His wife, Julia, and 2½-year-old daughter, Judith, don't like waiting five weeks for Pennsylvania unemployment compensation.



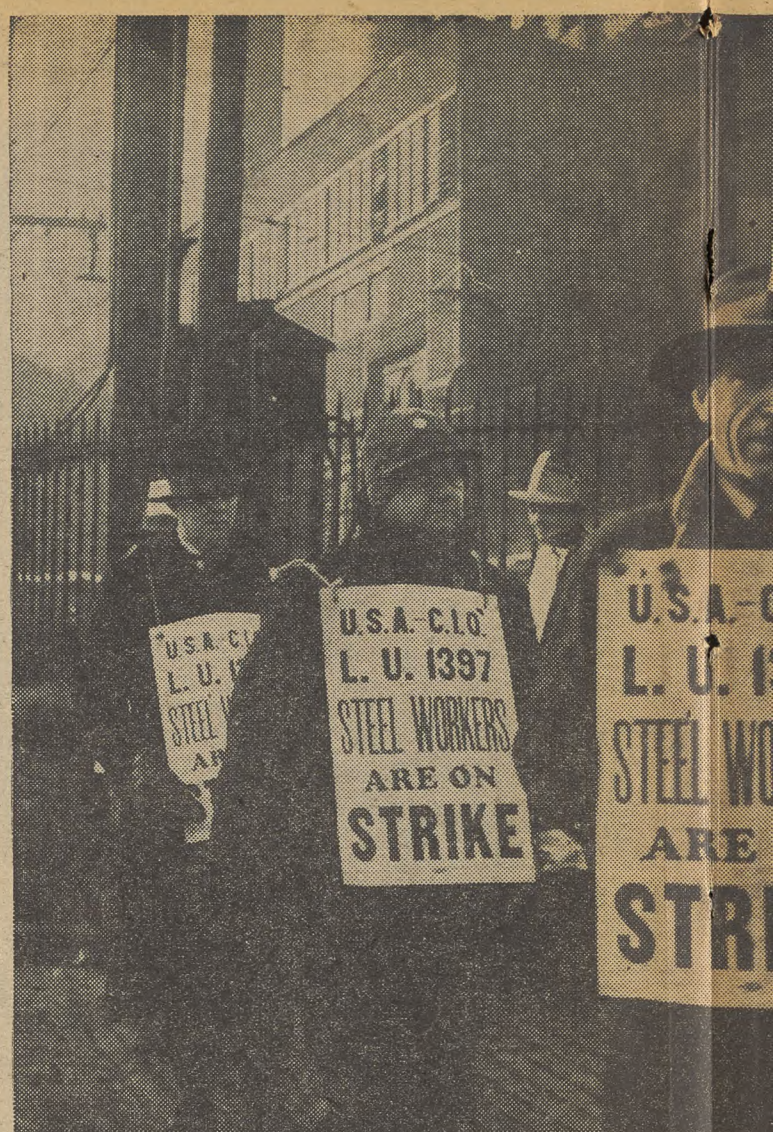
3 51-year-old John Harriston has worked five years at Homestead as a laborer. "I made $6.24 gross in 1942, the same now." Five days' work a week since V-J day adds up to a $36 check for two weeks' work after tax and bond deductions. "I'd have a hell of a time supporting a family. I'm having a hell of a time supporting myself right now." Harriston, a World War I vet, served as a corporal in the 506th Engineering Battalion in France.

4 58-year-old John "Scotty" Hailstones has worked at Homestead 31 years. He was a leveler operator, now he's a picket captain. Two weeks' pay before V-J Day was about $115 net, now it's $53 to $54. "Some weeks we've been working only two or three days. They don't allow cats to catch rats when the mill's down." Scotty has three grandchildren. His son-in-law, Philip Fornaro, is on strike with the CIO Electrical & Radio Workers at Westinghouse.

1 "We're going to hold out until hell freezes over." Thirty-seven-year-old Michael Harkovich, home owner, 125-ton crane man employed by U. S. Steel's Homestead plant for 21 years, and militant member of the CIO Steelworkers, talking. Wrapped in six layers of clothing, he's been picketing daily since the strike started Jan. 21. "Bust the union? Before it came, I got $4.24. After, $8.32. I believe the union's doing pretty good!"



4 Harkovich's wife, Mary, Michael, Jr., 15, and Betty Jane, 9, listen to USA-CIO Pres. Philip Murray. "We don't have enough money to fix the big radio, so we're using the small one."



2 Zero weather in Pittsburgh makes tough picketing. The lines are sm in scabs, there's going to be trouble. With two weeks' vacation the dues. The people want that 18½c an hour. If the settlement's good enou good enough for the big guys."

OUT UNTIL V

Steel Stories by Fred d'Avila • Pictures by Associ

MICHAEL HARKOVICH is one of more than 200,000 members of the CIO Steelworkers in the Pittsburgh area who this week gave the "smoky city" clean snow and sunshine, the first time in years.

The three great river valleys that belched soot and flame are clean and silent, as the biggest union in America tests the strength of the working people and their allies against a giant combine of monopoly determined to put profits first and the health of the nation second.

Poles and Swedes, Slavs and Englishmen, Germans and citizens of America by birth, white and Negro, Catholic, Protestant and Jew—all the working people of the steel communities—are united for the struggle that involves more than 800,000 USA-CIO members from the Pennsylvania heart of industry to the Pacific Coast.

Elected officials, merchants, clergymen all have hit the picket lines. The way Michael puts it, "Our whole family is dependent on steel, and that goes for everybody around here."

The 18½c an hour raise? It's simple arthmetic.

"During the war, I doubled up. Worked 16 hours a day, sometimes three or four days a week. Just worked and slept and ate. A two-week pay check, Aug. 25, 1945, for 64 hours work, was $171.21 net after deductions for taxes and social security and $22.78 for war bonds.

"For two 40-hour weeks, ending Dec. 15, 1945, I got only $72.23 net, after $11.85 deductions, including $8.40 for war bonds.

"All the bond money I saved went into a down payment on my house. I either had to buy it or move.

"We don't want no blood money now. All we want is the raise we're entitled to. Forty hours or even less would be enough. We don't want a big house and lot—just a decent standard of living."

Harkovich
He got a jo to be a cran

"He wen have a cha
I was 14. B for that.

"I want to trade sc

"If the pleture
This your who came

The cost

"We don the things
—took all t

"During my father,"
—the relief
d pay e with my Da
we couldn't

"We g how muc never did all for th
the letter

"The co hour. I ma an hour.

"When less' pay an

"We hea
a week. O line. Even

5 The H high, a depression
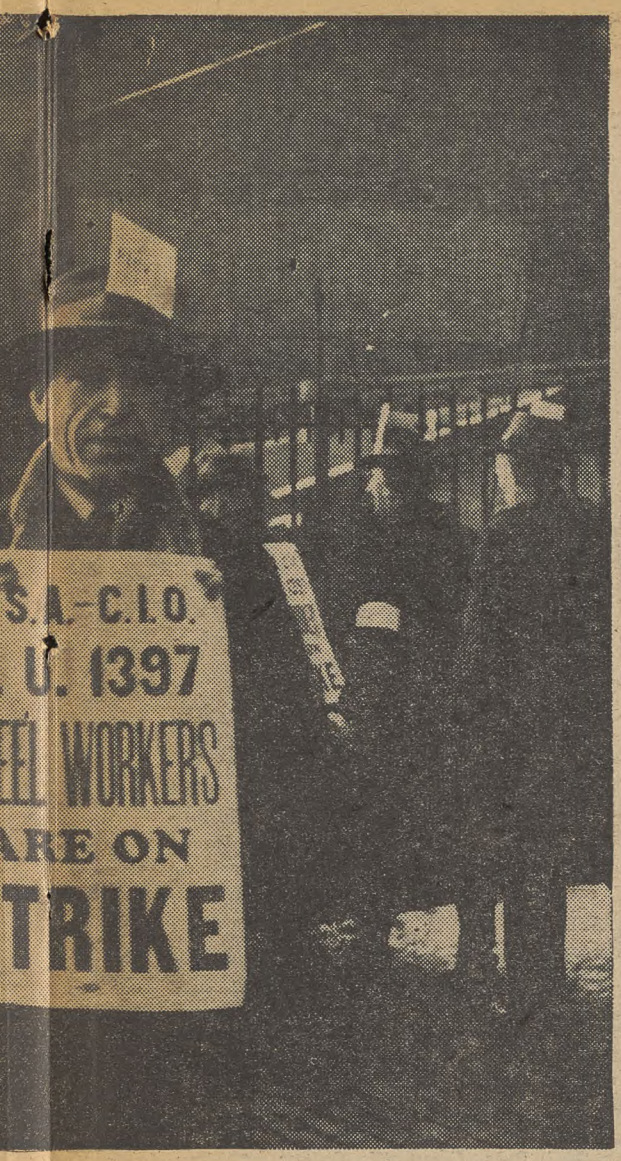
only one da



lines are small but "if they try to bust the union by running cation the union got me, it's worth alone the $1 a month s good enough for the President of the U. S., it ought to be

3 Harkovich worked double turns during the war—16 hours a day, sometimes two, three, four days a week. The $485 he saved in bonds went to start payments on a $1,600 home. It has a living room, kitchen, bath, one bedroom. He and his son sleep in one double bed, his wife and their daughter in the other. "It took all my savings. What I make at the mill is what I'm dependent on. That goes for a lot of workers, not only me."

WE WIN!

by Associated Photographers, Pittsburgh

Harkovich's father, Philip, came from Czechoslovakia. He got a job on the "bull gang" at $3.80 a day. He wanted to be a crane man. But he could neither read nor write.

"He went to work when he was six years old. He didn't have a chance to get an education. I went to work when I was 14. But the younger generation isn't going to stand for that.

"I want to give my boy a decent education. He's going to trade school, learning mechanics and welding.

"If the steel companies figure that the young people are going to work for nothing, they're wrong. This young generation is different, not like the people who came across the Pond."

The cost of living?

"We don't keep any exact budget. All we know is that the things we need—milk and meat and bread and clothes —took all that Michael was making," said Mrs. Harkovich.

"During 1931, before the union, we had to live with my father," Michael put in. "We had no milk for the boy —the relief wasn't giving any. I was averaging one or two d[illegible]ay every two weeks, at $4.24 a day. We went to live with my Dad. I wasn't paying no rent, or nothing, because we couldn't afford it.

"We got a letter from Mr. Fairless this week telling how much U. S. Steel has done for us. Mr. Fairless never did anything for the steel workers. They did it all for themselves. My wife was so mad she just took the letter and burned it up.

"The company says we make an average of $1.25 an hour. I make $1.04. The laborers make $6.24 a day—78c an h[illegible]r.

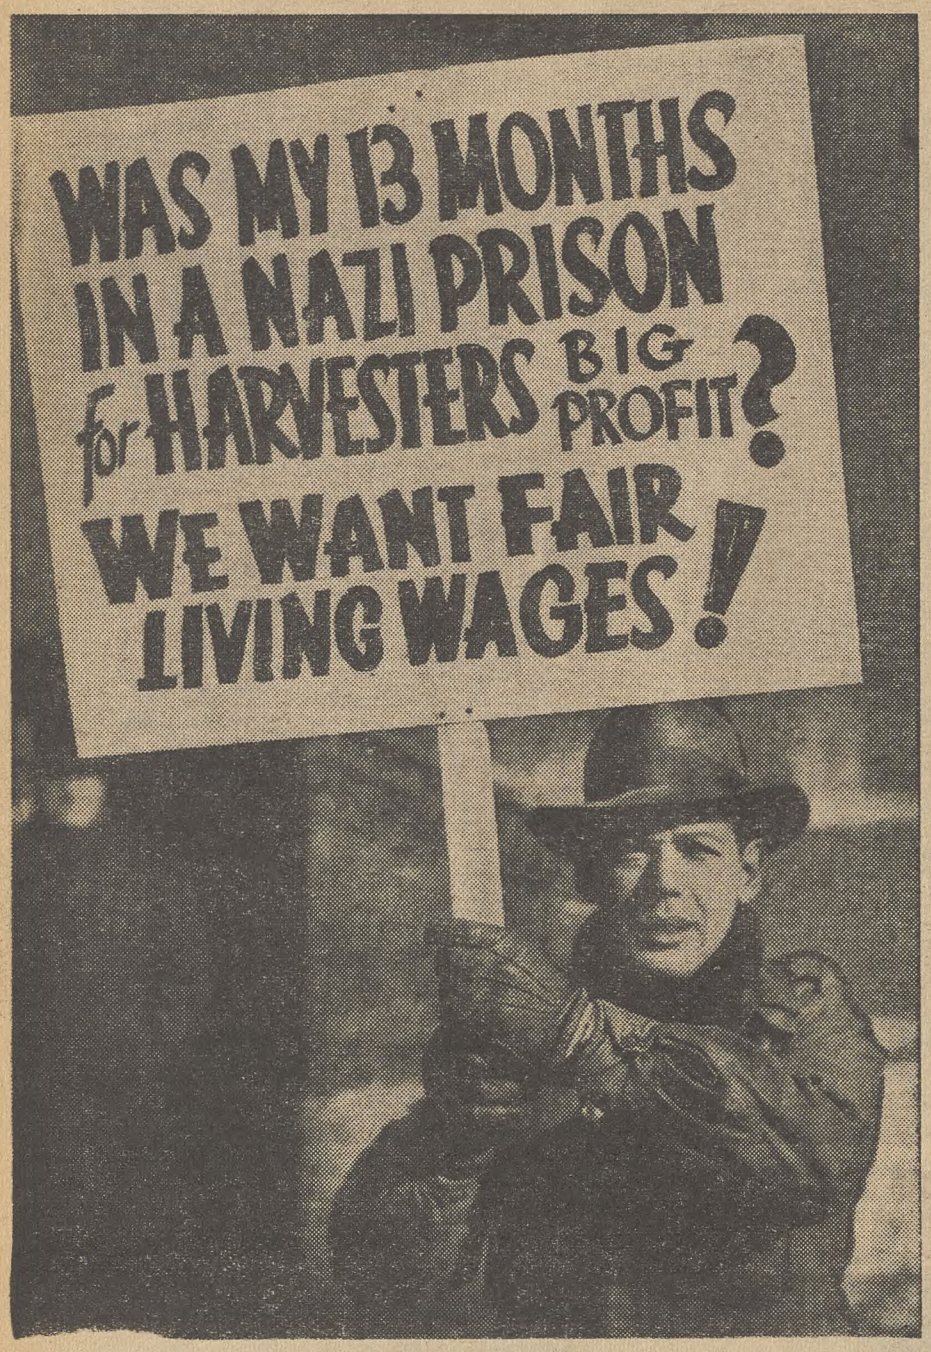
"When they figure the averages, they figure in Fairless' pay and all the supervisors and foremen's pay.

"We hear stories that some people are making $8,000 a we[illegible]. One man making that in a week—that's out of line. Even if he comes from heaven, that's out of line."

→

5 The Harkovich food bill is sizeable—"prices are so high, and Michael works hard." Michael, Jr., was a depression baby—"there was no milk from relief, and only one day's work a week."

30,000 OUT UNTIL HARVESTER SIGNS



By FORREST EMERSON

THIRTY THOUSAND members of CIO Farm Equipment & Metal Workers pulled the pin on exact schedule—10:30 a.m., Jan. 21—and struck 11 plants of the farm machine monopoly, Intl. Harvester Co.

This is the first crippling strike in a century of McCormick-Harvester history, and it brings the firm and family most closely linked with the Haymarket labor murders of 1886 up to date.

The strike took place only after three months of negotiations, and after the company had failed to send representatives to a Washington conference called by the fact-finding panel named for the IHC dispute. Even in last-minute negotiations urged by the panel, the company's best offer was mere lip service to the needs of the Harvester workers.

Issues for which the 30,000 struck include a 30% wage increase to restore take-home pay slashed following V-J Day, a national contract to replace separate contracts which have expired, broad improvements in the wage, job and piece-work structures, union security and other needed benefits.

Plants affected are located in Auburn, N. Y.; Richmond, Ind.; Bettendorf, Ia.; Rock Falls, East Moline and Rock Island, Ill., and five in Chicago, the international center of the Harvester trust.

The IHC octopus is a classic example of trust organization, the firm owning its own iron-ore mines in the Mesabi Range, coal mines in Harlan County, Ky., steel furnaces and mills in South Chicago and rope fiber plantations in Cuba. Foreign production plants are located in Germany, France, Sweden, Australia and Canada.

The firm was struck in 1941 by the same union in four plants, at which time company strike-breaking policies and the use of thugs and police led to bloodshed, particularly in Chicago and in Richmond, Ind. Union recognition and other gains grew out of this strike, and paved the way for further organization.

Harvester is directly linked to U. S. Steel, Armour, Wilson and Morgan interests through interlocking directorates. Fowler McCormick, its president, is scion of the clan which produced both the reaper McCormicks and the Tribune McCormicks.

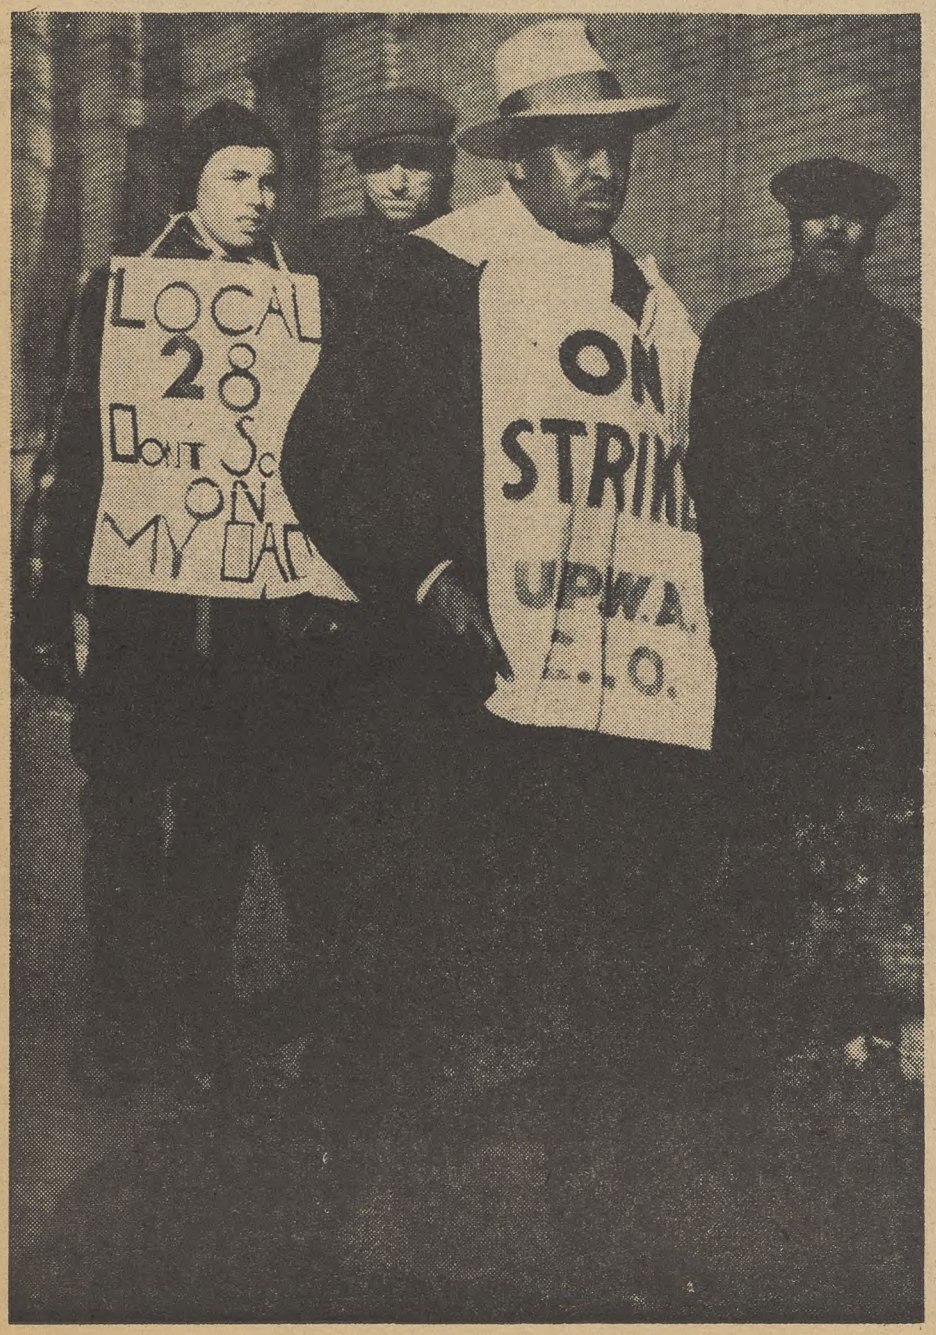
The company earned 15 years' profits during five war years without seriously cutting into its normal production. It has $300,000,000 in profits and was able to feed the McCormick family $8,000,000 annually in dividends alone at war level income, milking workers through low wages and farmers through excessive, controlled prices.

Gerald Fielde, Intl. secretary-treasurer and director of the union's National Harvester Workers Council, said in a message on the 21st: "We now go into the fundamentals of the thing—the great and invincible strength of the workers against the sheer wealth of the owners."

Said Pres. Grant W. Oakes: "Thirty thousand workers are out until the company signs an agreement acceptable to them."

Workers (below) streamed out of the Int. Harvester-McCormick works in Chicago this week as the CIO Farm Equipment Workers strike started, and immediately formed a picket line at the main entrance of the plant. (Above) Art Meyers, employe at the Chicago Tractor Works.

The Wilkes' have six children. Here are four of them at home with their parents. Wilfred Wilkes is holding the youngest, Ada, who is four. "If my wife wasn't working, I wouldn't be earning enough to support the family," he said. Wilkes, a shop steward in CIO Packinghouse Workers Swift Local 28, said he'd been putting in six to 12 hours on the picket line (below). "Sure it's cold, and we aren't asked to spend more than six hours on the line, but once I'm down I figure I might as well stick around."



Packinghouse Family

6 KIDS, $33 A WEEK

Story by Gwyn Roe
Pictures by Frank N. Henderson

PACKINGTOWN stretches for miles across South Chicago, a series of gray, squat buildings behind six-foot board fences that merge with unbroken monotony into the slums of the south side. Dingy, unpainted frame houses face the streets for blocks outside the yards. This is where the CIO packinghouse workers live.

Inside the yards, for the past four years, men and women have been putting in 50 to 70 hours a week, supplying the nation with meat. Their jobs are tough, hazardous, unpleasant. In the freezing departments, men work in temperatures 40 degrees below zero. Others who work in brine have hands grown stiff at the joints and swollen to twice normal size. In the butchering and trimming departments a slip of the hand can mean the loss of a finger.

Today all movement inside the yards has ceased, the machines are still, the cattle trains are stopped. It is very quiet back of the six-foot board fences. Outside the gates that guard the entrances into the yards there are picket lines marching. The weather is below zero and the wind from Lake Michigan cuts like a knife, but the lines are unbroken. Who are some of the packinghouse workers?

In the home of Ernestine and Alfred Wilkes there is a coal stove in the center of the kitchen that gives out the only warmth in the three-room apartment. Wilkes left a tenant farm in 1937 to come to Chicago for a job in the Swift plant, where he operates a drum dyer in the soap works.

His pay is 80½c an hour and with overtime pay he has averaged about $43.20 a week. With the return to the 40-hour week, however, his pay will drop to $33 a week. His wife, Ernestine Wilkes, has just taken a job in a rubber factory at 50c an hour to help out the family income.

The Wilkes' have six children. The youngest, Ada, is 4; the eldest, Dave, 15. The high cost of living takes all they earn. Rent is $15 a month, food about $88, gas and light $2.50, clothes approximately $6 and laundry $10. In addition there are extra expenses.

"My wife has had to take treatments for an ailment lately and these have cost us $5 a week extra. Then we've just paid off a $60 dentist bill, and Mrs. Wilkes—she's got some more dental work to be done that's going to cost $63 more," said Mr. Wilkes.

Concerning the strike: "I hope it will be over soon, but you know," and his words were slow and emphatic, "I wouldn't like to go back for the same pay I walked out on. I wouldn't like that."

Mrs. Wilkes said: "I think it'll be fine if they win. They sure need it."

"The only thing we have to fight with is a union," Mr. Wilkes added.

LABOR'S WORLD

AFL Workers For World Unity

Going back to Samuel Gompers, founder of the AFL, for their inspiration, 6,000 members of the Cigarmakers International Union of Tampa Fla., have petitioned the AFL Executive Council to affiliate to the World Federation of Trade Unions.

Gompers "believed and fought for international unity of all workers' organizations," the Tampa workers said in making their request.

"As a final result of the fight waged by Samuel Gompers and other great labor leaders for a period of generations, some 60 million workers representing trade unions of many lands and federations are now united for peace and for economic and social advancement through the new World Federation of Trade Unions."

By not affiliating, the AFL "is isolating itself from the common tasks which it faces along with its brother unions in every country and weakening its fight for better wages and working conditions at home."

Bulgarians Greet CIO Strikes

Greetings to CIO Pres. Philip Murray and expressions of solidarity in current CIO strikes were cabled to the CIO national office by the Central Committee of the General and Professional Workers Union in Bulgaria this week.

"The first congress of the Central Committee of the General and Professional Workers Union called in Sofia Jan. 19 greets you," the message read, "and through you all American workers. We wish you complete success in your struggle for the improvement of conditions. Long live the solidarity of the workers of the world."

The cable was signed by Raiko Damianoff, president of the congress.

Praise French Stand vs. Franco

Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO took time out from strike duties this week to praise the French Constituent Assembly for voting to break off relations with fascist Franco Spain.

"From my own first-hand knowledge of France and its people such a step is not surprising," Thomas said. "That is the nation that today faces in its reconstruction program hard times, little to eat and millions of homeless all due to fascist occupation and destruction of Europe.

"Faced by this, the French people could see that breaking off relations with Franco is real proof that fascism and its supporters are not wanted in Europe. Rather the French people through extending the offer of asylum to Spanish refugees have shown that they are true fighters for democracy.

"Besides congratulating the Assembly, I want also to congratulate the great French trade union movement which has demanded this break with Franco ever since they regained their freedom of organization."

Transport Workers Back WFTU

French transport workers, organized in the Natl. Federation of the Means of Transport and covering municipal and highway transit workers, are on record for speedy absorption of all European transport unions into the WFTU.

In a resolution at their December Congress in Paris they called for early affiliation of the existing Intl. Transportworkers Federation into the WFTU "so that the great family of transport workers may be, without hindrance or reserve, the most active and faithful of the groups belonging to the World Trade Union Federation."

The congress also voted to delete an old clause in their constitution forbidding political activity or holding of political offices by their officials.

Hits Polish War Relief

Sharp criticism of Polish War Relief, Inc., was made in a statement released by Jacob S. Potofsky, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, which he accused of delivering to Poland "very little relief from an estimated $8,500,000 it has collected since 1942.

"By its own admission, very little aid has been sent by Polish War Relief to liberated Poland itself," Potofsky said. "In all that time thousands of dollars and tons of material aid have gone to small groups of Poles in New Zealand, Africa, England, France, in fact everywhere but to Poland.

"Except for a recent trickle the only aid which did reach Poland through PWR went, before the war was over, to individuals living in that part of Poland controlled by the Germans, with delivery, therefore, in the hands of the Nazis."

Starvation in Greece

Desperate conditions of Greek workers are described in an Allied Labor News dispatch from London, reporting a press conference of two Greek union leaders recently held there. The leaders, Demetrios Mariolis and George Lascaris, are officers of the Railwaymen's Union and were prominent in the anti-Nazi underground.

Inflation and complete disruption of transport have brought workers' monthly wages down from a value of $12 in October, 1944, when the country was liberated, to about $2 now. This is enough to buy food for five days, while a year's wages are needed to buy a suit.

A prime need of the country, the two men said, is a representative government which "would have to put an end to continuing fascist terrorism and in that way could stimulate the workers to put all their efforts into reconstruction."

Ask WFTU Aid in Costa Rica

The Confederation of Latin American Labor (CTAL) is preparing to call on the World Federation of Trade Unions for aid in a strike involving workers on the British owned Costa Rican Northern Railway Company, CTAL News reports this week.

END TAX GRAB—CIO

In a strong letter to U. S. Secretary of the Treasury Fred Vinson, CIO President Murray this week demanded an end to the gigantic tax steal by the big corporations through the "carry-back" provisions in the current tax law.

Under these provisions, corporations are guaranteed their 1936-39 profit levels through tax refunds — whether they operate or not. This law, he said, helps the corporations, and particularly U. S. Steel, tremendously in their conspiracy "to destroy labor unions and to remain unchallenged in its determined efforts to obtain uncontrolled profits."

"The U. S. Treasury," Murray told Vinson, "is being mulcted for the benefit of a privileged few bent on sinister conspiracy to plunge the country into economic chaos. This intolerable situation cannot continue, if the safety and future of our nation are to be protected."

Text of Murray's letter to Vinson follows, in full:

During the war period several extraordinary tax measures were enacted at the behest of large corporations.

The provisions to which I make special reference were not, at the time of their enactment, discussed or analyzed either in committee reports or on the floor of Congress. Certainly the American people were not made aware of their full meaning.

The result under these laws is that the United States Treasury rebates any losses and guarantees a high level of profits through direct cash payments.

It has been conservatively estimated by one United States Senator that the moneys to be drawn from the public purse to compensate American industry may run to 20 billions of dollars.

This guarantee operates regardless of the reasons or causes for the loss which a business concern may incur.

A direct burden has thus been imposed upon every American taxpayer in order to create special and unjust privileges for the giant industrial corporations.

I shall give you but a few examples drawn from the steel industry as to how present tax laws operate.

REBATE OF $200 MILLIONS

1. The Revenue Act of 1942 provides for a 10 per cent post-war refund of the excess tax liability of any one company since 1942. In spite of the tremendous financial resources exacted by the steel corporations as their price for war production, that industry under this law is entitled to a rebate from the United States Treasury of an amount in excess of 200 million dollars.

2. Under carry-back tax provisions secretly slipped through Congress, American industry is guaranteed that if any particular company either breaks even or loses money it will receive refunds that may result in larger net profits than the particular company averaged in the pre-war years.

Assuming that the steel companies in 1946 break even—that is, do not make any net profits—the United States Treasury will actually pay to the industry 149 million dollars. This represents guaranteed profits that are 29 per cent above the level of pre-war earnings.

Under this provision, the United States Steel Corporation will be repaid $67,340,000 though its average net profit after taxes for the pre-war era was $44,732,000.

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation will be rebated $6,028,750, though its average net profit after taxes for the pre-war period was $2,375,000.

3. Under another tax provision, also slipped by without any publicity at all, industrial concerns may change their so-called base period upon which their taxes are computed by maintaining that the standard period of 1936 to 1939 does not represent a fair basis for the particular company or industry.

Representatives of the Bureau of Internal Revenue state that $3,500,000,000 worth of claims for tax refunds have already been filed on the basis of this one provision, and expect claims in excess of $15,000,000,000 worth of tax rebates.

The United States Steel Corporation very piously maintains that it did not pay any excess profits taxes in 1944. This result was accomplished through the use of the provision that I have just described.

4. Under another tax provision, facilities constructed during the war could be amortized over a five-year period rather than the customary 20 years.

In addition, the tax adjustment act of 1945 authorized the President, following the termination of the war, to issue a proclamation following which companies could amortize whatever portion of the emergency facilities which had not as yet been amortized fully.

BETHLEHEM BENEFITS

This special tax relief meant the following for the Bethlehem Steel Company:

The Bethlehem Steel Company reported that for the third quarter of 1945 its total income, before taxes, was $22,676,000. This meant that the company had $22,676,000 in profits subject to Federal income and excess profits taxes. But Bethlehem did not pay any taxes on this income.

Bethlehem took advantage of the provision to which I have referred to write off $49,894,000 for amortization of its wartime facilities. This procedure turned its actual profit of $22,676,000 into a paper "loss" before taxes of $27,218,000.

By using the carry-back provision of the Wartime Revenue Act, the company obtained a cash refund of $34,980,000 from the Treasury.

This cash refund is, of course, tax free. Bethlehem paid no taxes on its net income of $22,676,000. Thus for the third quarter of 1945 the profits of Bethlehem were $57,656,000 — on which the company paid absolutely no taxes.

This amount should be compared with the third quarter of 1944, when Bethlehem's profits after taxes were only $6,622,000, and for the pre-war era, when Bethlehem averaged $15,980,000 a year in profits after taxes.

Under ordinary conditions, the facts which are now being disclosed would arouse the deepest wrath of the American people.

But in addition, the steel industry, as the spokesman for the corporate magnates, and drunk with the fantastic financial resources accumulated during the war, has actually thrown down the gauntlet to the President of the United States.

The steel industry, boldly and arrogantly, has rejected a decision made by the President to settle the current wage dispute with the United Steelworkers of America. The issue is not the payment of an additional 3½ cents an hour.

TREASURY MULCTED

The true design of the steel industry is to destroy labor unions and to remain unchallenged in its determined effort to obtain uncontrolled profits. It is being assisted in this attempt with public funds siphoned from the United States Treasury.

The United States Treasury is being mulcted for the benefit of a privileged few bent in sinister conspiracy to plunge the country into economic chaos. This intolerable situation, if the safety and future of our nation are to be protected, cannot continue.

On behalf of the millions of members of organized labor, and progressive Americans, I am calling upon you as the guardian of the United States Treasury to take immediate steps to terminate this outrageous condition permitted to develop during the war whilst the attention of the American people was fully concentrated upon the defeat of the nation's foreign foes.

'Raves' For CIO Radio

CIO's two outstanding radio network shows (Cross Section-CIO and Labor-USA) rate tops with radio critics on Variety, leading show business weekly. By contrast, shows put on by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers draw a severe panning.

Writing in the Jan. 16 issue, Variety had this to say on Labor-USA, which is aired at 6:45 p.m. EST over the American Broadcasting Co.'s national network every Saturday:

"Labor-USA is warm, ingratiating, human. The exact antonyms characterize the 'business pitch.' You can't balance the voice of ex-NAM prexy Ira Mosher against Tom Glaser accompanying himself on the guitar for a ballad like Bob Russell and Carl Sigman's 'Money in the Pocket' and expect anyone to cheer for the NAM. It just isn't in the cards."

Cross Section-CIO, on the Columbia Broadcasting System network also on Saturdays at 3:45 p.m. EST, draws an equally warm review. Says Variety's critic:

"Here's a smart little show that knows how to apply good special events technique to plug one side of a controversial issue. The side happens to be labor's, more specifically the CIO."

CIO ALL OVER THE DIAL

CIO is all over your radio dial these days, what with the ABC series at 10:30 p.m. EST on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from the Steelworkers, numberless local programs on strike issues, and frequent spot appearances by CIO officials on news hours and on forums, debates, etc.

Matter of fact, CIO on the air is a good antidote for the anti-strike poison you get from the newspapers and from many radio commentators. It pays to listen in.

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Walter H. Harris, CIO Reg. Dir., Chicago, reports: American Can Plant, Maywood, Ill., USA-CIO 51, against 19.

Fullerton Fulton, CIO Reg. Dir., St. Paul, advises: American Transportation Corp., So. St. Paul, USA-CIO 22, no union 2.

Roy Atkinson, CIO Reg. Dir., Seattle, reports: General Machinery Co., Spokane, Wash., (stand-by crew) Aluminum Plants, USA-CIO 71, AFL 47.

Geo. Brown, Dir. Org. IWA-CIO, announces: J. A. Bently Lumber Co., Zimmerman, La., CIO 90, against 31; Martin Timber Co., Caster, La., CIO 42, against 3. IWA Org. Claude Welch was in charge. Conners Operations, Biggs City, Mich., CIO 34, against 4.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., W. A. Copeland, Memphis, Tenn., Memphis Egg Case Co., IWA-CIO 22, no union 16. IWA Rep. W. A. Snook was in charge.

Powers Hapgood, CIO Reg. Dir., Indianapolis, reports: Montgomery Ward store, Anderson, Ind., CIO Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes 19, against 4. Org. Joseph Romer of the URWDSEA conducted this drive working out of the CIO regional office.

C. H. Gillman, CIO Reg. Dir., Atlanta, reports: Gulf Atlantic Warehouse, Atlanta, CIO 40, against 0. Intl. Rep. URWDSEA James R. Cochran was in charge.

* * *

The new-born national union, Utility Workers Union of America, came through with flying colors in negotiations with the Consolidated-Edison of New York. The union officers, Brothers Fisher, Pachler, Straub and McGrath, all state that the affiliation of their union with the CIO increased its strength and influence in getting the new agreement negotiated quickly and with the largest increases ever. The wage raises range from 15c to 20c an hour, in addition to about $200,000 in back pay; a total of about $1,000,000 to increase rates of returning veterans, and an over-all gain of about $12,000,000.

The Con-Edison workers are happy to belong to a national union affiliated with the CIO. The writer attended a banquet for Brothers Fisher, Pachler and McGrath this week in New York which all shop stewards and local officers attended. Everyone was enthusiastic in their praise and determination to build their union in the utility field to represent all workers engaged in this important industry.

* * *

The CIO Steelworkers are engaged in the largest single strike in American history. Some 750,000 to 800,000 men are standing solidly behind the USA-CIO officers, executive board and policy committee. Pres. Murray and his associates did everything possible to avoid the strike. Finally Pres. Truman submitted a proposal calling for an increase of 18½c an hour. In the interests of the nation, the officers of the union through Pres. Murray accepted the proposal, only to find that the heads of the steel empire rejected it.

This act by U. S. Steel further proves its deliberate intention to put its selfish interests above the welfare of the people and of the workers who have made their wealth possible. It is an effort to destroy the CIO and to put the nation in the same position as during the Harding regime when the policies of industry in the early '20s finally brought us to the worst panic ever witnessed. The steelworkers have given their answer and are determined to fight it through. Their cause is right and just.

* * *

The UE-CIO is faced with similar resistance to its wage demands, and its members are on the line fighting a good fight. Other CIO unions also are fighting for long overdue wage raises—the Packinghouse Workers, the ACA against Western Union in New York; the Textile Workers; the Farm Equipment Workers against Intl. Harvester. The CIO Glass Workers after a stiff struggle have settled their strike. Congratulations to the officers and members of that organization.

The GM strike continues on. Ford Motor Co., already paying a higher rate than GM, has offered a 17½c-an-hour increase. The union has rejected this offer and negotiations continue. Where is the boast of GM that they want to pay the men the highest wages in the industry? Mr. Henry Kaiser has signed an agreement with USA-CIO providing for 18½c an hour increase. He maintains industry can pay it.

* * *

The steel industry is charging falsely in costly national ads that the union is violating its contract, arguing incorrectly that the wage question cannot be arbitrated as other grievances are. They hope to delude the American people, but they cannot deceive the gallant CIO members who are determined to fight on until their just demands are won. Loud-mouthed enemies of labor in the Congress also continue their onslaughts.

Pres. Murray's broadcast to the nation set forth the issues clearly. This is the people's fight—it is a fight for the nation's well-being. It now rests with the President of the United States. The steel industry has thrown down a challenge to the government. Lines are solid; men are determined, and the wise and courageous leadership of Pres. Murray and associates is being commended everywhere.

TWU Blocks Power Deal

Intervention of the CIO Transport Workers Union this week prevented a fast one being slipped over on the people of New York City when TWU Pres. Michael Quill, who is also a city councilman, revealed that a proposal was under way to sell the city's power plants to the Consolidated Edison Co.

The union's policy committee, was authorized by a meeting of 800 TWU members employed in the city's three power houses to call a stoppage. Mayor O'Dwyer's offer of a referendum on any sale proposal averted the threatened strike of 32,000 transit workers. TWU's demand for a $2 a day increase will be considered later.

UPWA OPPOSES SEIZURE

AS THE CIO NEWS went to press, the policy committee of the CIO Packinghouse Workers, meeting at Chicago, voted that its members would not return to work when the Dept. of Agriculture seizes the strike-bound packing industry.

UPWA Pres. Lewis J. Clark said the union decided to remain on strike because there was no assurance that the "equities of our case will be given consideration and that a substantial wage increase will be put into effect." He indicated if that is done the men will work.

Pres Truman had ordered seizure of the industry by the Dept. of Agriculture effective as of 12:01 a.m., Jan. 26.

Following the announcement of the policy committee's action, Sec. of Agriculture Anderson conferred with Sec. of Labor Schwellenbach and his assistant, John Gibson, former Michigan CIO Council president.

Gayle G. Armstrong, a New Mexico rancher and deputy administrator of the Dept. of Agriculture's Production and Marketing Administration, was appointed by Sec. of Agriculture Anderson to operate 134 plants of 19 companies whose workers are on strike.

Earlier in the week, the union's strategy committee issued a statement in Chicago declaring: "We feel it is totally unjust to seize the strike-bound packing industry as long as no definite agreement has been reached with the packers, and in view of their continued refusal to bargain realistically on wages.

"In the case of the steel workers, President Truman suggested a settlement of a wage increase of 18½c per hour and U. S. Steel turned it down and the industry was struck. In the case of General Motors a strike was called first and a Fact Finding Committee recommended 19½c per hour wage increase and the company turned it down.

"Nothing similar has, as yet, taken place in packing and seizure will actually be playing into the packers' hands."

The packinghouse workers, one of the lowest paid groups in American industry, have not received a general wage increase since before Pearl Harbor, although prices have soared sky-high.

The union's demand is modest and reasonable—a 25c hourly increase, 17½c now and the balance to be negotiated later when the national wage picture is clearer.

Straight time hourly earnings in the industry average 87c an hour, but two-thirds of the workers make less.

TEXTILE WORKERS GET RAISE

A NEW agreement giving a 17½c hourly increase to 22,000 employes of the American Woolen Co., largest manufacturer of woolen and worsted cloth in the U. S., was announced this week in New York by Pres. Emil Rieve of the CIO Textile Workers Union. The increase will give the workers nearly $7,000,000 more pay a year.

The new contract, which covers workers in 20 mills in eight states, provides a general 15c hourly increase, a 75c hourly minimum, time and a half for Saturdays with double time for Sundays and a modified union shop, under which all workers who now belong to the union will remain members and all new workers will join.

Later it was announced that the big mills for Forstmann & Huffman and the Botany Worsted Mills at Passaic, N. J., have settled with the union on a similar basis. These were the two largest mills involved in the bitter and violent textile strike of 1926.

The great majority of some 80 other mills, employing 60,000 workers, under agreement with the CIO Textile Union, are expected to fall in line, as American Woolen usually sets the wage pattern for the entire industry.

Strike votes previously scheduled by American Woolen locals have been called off, but at other woolen and worsted mills which have not yet settled, strike polls will be taken between now and Feb. 1.

GLASS STRIKE SETTLED

The three-month-old strike of 15,000 members of the CIO Federation of Glass, Ceramic and Silica Sand Workers employed at plants of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Libbey-Owens-Ford companies has ended with a wage settlement providing a 10.7 cents an hour increase, retroactive to October 2, 1945. An additional 7 cents an hour for some maintenance rates is also included.

A joint statement issued by President Froesh of the union and LOF Vice-President L. G. Bryan announced the settlement which ended the strike called October 19.

Arrest Selly

Neither cold weather, the arrest of their president nor the snide remarks of Western Union officials claiming that employes are "trickling" back to work dimmed the determination of the 7,000 striking members of the CIO American Communication Assn. in New York City to stick until they win their demands for a decent wage scale.

The cases of ACA Pres. Joseph Selly and eight other members of the union who were arrested Jan. 18 on "disorderly conduct" charges were postponed this week until Jan. 30. The unionists were arrested when they walked into one of Western Union's busy offices where three out-of-town scabs were working and gave one of them a telegram which said: "Everyone in this office is a scab."

CONSOLIDATED EDISON PACT UPS PAY 15 TO 20c

WAGE increases totalling nearly $12,000,000 a year for the 22,000 employes of the Consolidated Edison Co. in New York City are provided in a new agreement announced this week by Pres. Joseph A. Fisher of the CIO Utility Workers Union.

The union was certified as sole collective bargaining agency for the workers following a Natl. Labor Relations Board election won overwhelmingly by the CIO union in December.

The new wage scales set in the agrement will provide increases of 20c an hour or $8 for a 40-hour week, for 60% of the employes; 17½c an hour ($7 a week) for 10% of them, and 15c an hour, ($6 a week) for the remainder. In addition each of the 22,000 employes will get a $100 cash settlement in back pay. Some $1,000,000 will go to increase rates for returning veterans, and $100,000 for reclassification.

The increases will raise the average wage rate for 1946 from $1.16 to $1.35 an hour. A wage progression plan provides automatic progression and merit increases.

ANOTHER INCREASE FOR 6,000 LEATHER WORKERS

WAGE increases averaging 15c an hour for 6,000 New England leather workers were won in negotiations just concluded with the Massachusetts Leather Manufacturers Association and the independent plant of Winslow Bros. and Smith, reports the CIO International Fur and Leather Workers. The agreement covers 50% of New England's leather workers.

The increases, which were won after the union conducted a one-day nationwide stoppage of leather workers, raises wages of these workers to an average of 22½c an hour more than they were earning before last May, which means a 23½% increase in eight months.

Some 60,000 members of the union took part in the stoppage last November 15, closing down 250 plants in 62 cities in 16 states. The one-day strike and the negotiations just concluded were part of the union's campaign for a 30% increase to enable the workers to meet the skyrocketing costs of living, the union states.

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS By Rose H. Alschuler

WHAT DO WE MEAN "TOLERANT?"

Madame Chiang Kai Chek, Gandhi, Paul Robeson—who are we to presume to "tolerate" them? Let's be grateful for these "non-Nordics" who've helped make this a better world. Wouldn't it be dull if we were all alike? Let us remember that variety among people as in all else lends spice to life. By our friendliness and appreciation for those different from ourselves, our children's lives as well as our own will be enriched. Today is the day to start!

Library of Congress, Dorothea Langs for FSA. Copyright. CIO NEWS

CIO's Own Radio Shows EVERY SATURDAY

Two Full, Weekly 15-Minute Radio Programs, of and for CIO

1. Labor-USA. Dramatic shows. American Broadcasting Co. network. Saturdays, 6:45 to 7 P. M., EST.
2. Cross-Section—CIO. On-the-spot interviews of CIO people by William Downs, noted CBS commentator. Saturdays, 3:45 to 4 P. M., EST.

Live Listening!

WOMEN NEED THE LOWDOWN ON STRIKES

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer
CIO Women's Auxiliaries

THE opinion of women will have a great part in determining the speed and completeness of CIO's victory in the present strikes. Women are the shoppers of America. They have to stand in lines when meat is scarce. They are the cooks and housekeepers whose work is doubled without electric kitchen and washing devices. They have a big stake in an early strike settlement.

The corporations realize this. They are addressing much of their advertising to women—trying to convince them that the strikes are pure selfishness, opposed to the public interest.

Many of these women do not understand the basic issues of the present industrial struggle. They don't see that the great corporations, protected as they are by our tax laws against any loss, are out to smash the CIO. They don't see that a victory for the corporations would mean starvation wages, decreasing production and another great depression. No one has ever talked to them about such things.

It is a great pity that our trade union auxiliaries were not built strong long ago. But the same kind of thinking which leads active union men never to discuss the union with their wives, leads them to regard auxiliary organization as a waste of time.

Now we are in a crisis and the opinion of women counts. The employers will try, in traditional Mohawk Valley style, to turn the women folk in union families against the strike. They will try to frighten the wives into urging their husbands to go back.

We don't think they'll succeed; but we do think we should make it easy for the women to recognize the clever propaganda they'll be bombarded with by giving them the straight facts of the union's case and by showing them that the CIO is fighting for jobs and security for the American people.

Such a campaign could carry an understanding of the present crisis into every American home. It could result in overwhelming public support for CIO's campaign for increased wages as the basic first step to full employment, prosperity and security for all of us.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

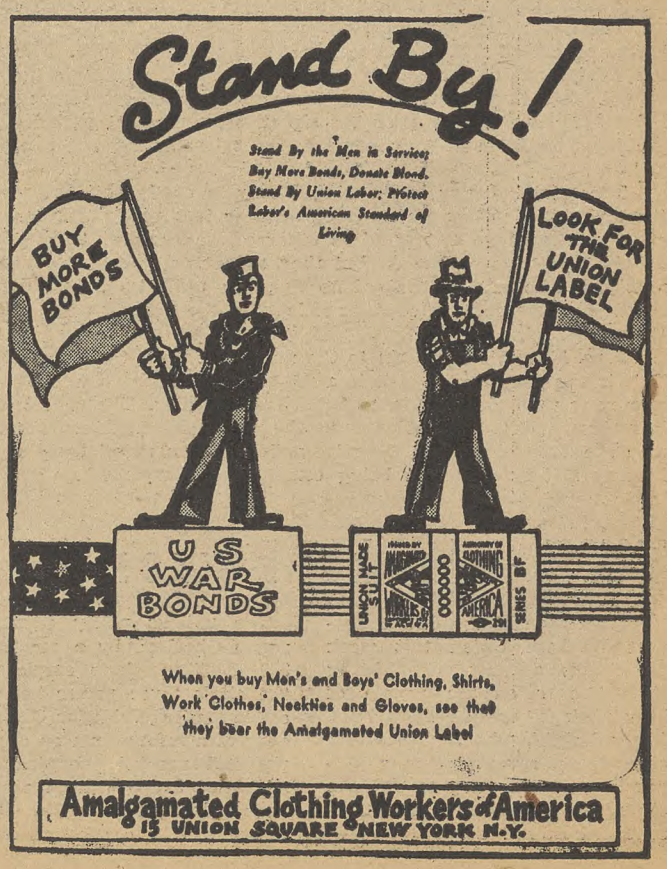
L. J. IMBER CO. QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1725-41 W. North Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES



the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story characters, incidents and dialogues appearing here are entirely imaginary and bear no relationship to any living or dead persons.

DANDY'S BAR! HANGOUT FOR THE TOUGHEST MUGS IN TOWN. WONDER WHAT MICKEY'S...

DANDY'S BAR AND GRILL

ANGERED BY JIM'S APPARENT SYMPATHY FOR SUSAN, MICKEY STALKS OFF IN A RAGE. JIM DECIDES TO FOLLOW HIS BROTHER--- AND IS STARTLED TO SEE WHERE THE LITTLE GAME OF HIDE AND SEEK LEADS!

HIYA, KID? A LITTLE LATE, AREN'T YOU?

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER, PUG. LET'S GRAB A LITTLE PRIVACY.

I STARTED THIS CHASE... AND I'M GONNA FINISH IT-- NO MATTER WHERE IT LEADS!.

IF I CAN JUST SLIP INTO THE NEXT BOOTH, WITHOUT MICKEY'S SEEING ME...

WELL, KID-- TONIGHT'S A BIG NIGHT FOR US.

OKAY, PUG. NEVER MIND THE BUILD-UP. WHAT'S ON?

RARIN' TO GO, AREN'T YA, KID? RELAX AN' HAVE A DRINK FIRST... WAITER!

THE BEST YA GOT-- FOR THE SMARTEST KID I MET IN YEARS.

NEVER MIND THE SIZZLE WATER, PUG. GIVE IT TO ME STRAIGHT. WHAT'S ON TONIGHT?

TONIGHT, YOUSE IS GOING TO MEET DA GUY FROM ROTOR CONSTRUCTION COMPANY-- DA GUY WHAT GIVES US ORDERS. DAT UNION'S ON ITS LAST LEGS RIGHT NOW!

GOOD. THE SOONER THE BETTER.

THE VET UNION-BUSTER-- IT... IT'S MICKEY!

57

Produced by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, INC.

Copyright 1948 by the NAT'L CIO NEWS

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Break The Union Busters

One of the main props of the anti-strike, union-busting conspiracy of big business will be knocked out from under the corporations when the voters rally behind a bill just introduced to repeal the "carry-back" section of the tax law now in effect.

Under this section, corporations are paid by the taxpayers for not doing business. Here's how it works: Through excess profits tax refunds, corporations that lose money or break even as compared to war yeare are given enough of the taxpayers' cash to bring them up to and beyond prewar profit levels.

In other words, the corporations can't lose no matter how much money they "lose" by not producing.

Its the neatest trick of the century for every corporation with a strike provided by refusal to bargain or by any other means.

It means that the corporation can simply sit back, keep its plants closed till hell freezes over—and make money at pre-war rates and better, all at a cost of billions to us.

At the same time, striking workers in many states and veterans are denied even the miserable unemployment compensation due them under state laws.

As Philip Murray put it in the letter to Treasury Secretary Vinson that touched off the repealer drive (see text, Page 12):

"The true design of the steel industry is to destroy labor unions and to remain unchallenged in its determined effort to obtain uncontrolled profits.

"It is being assisted in this attempt with public funds siphoned from the U. S. Treasury.

"The U. S. Treasury is being mulcted for the benefit of a privileged few bent on sinister conspiracy to plunge the country into economic chaos."

The history of how this carry-back clause got into the tax law is simple—it was sneaked in when not enough people were looking.

The people who weren't looking were the taxpayers, the voters and the members of the CIO—or if they were looking they weren't writing enough letters to their Congressmen.

President Murray pointed out to Congress the evils of the "carry-back" when it was first introduced. He warned them of precisely what is happening now—the fact that the corporations are enormously strengthened in their fight against the American people by this scandalous, legalized form of stealing.

It's up to us now to take this prop out from under the big business plot against the nation by pressing for repeal of the carry-back sections of the tax law.

(Note: At time of writing, the bill has not been numbered or referred to committee. Watch next week's Guide for details.)

America's Shame

The southern polltax filibuster against the FEPC bill (S 101) is a national scandal that must be ended with a vote on the merits of the bill and a gag on such race hate artists as Bilbo, Eastland, Russell, Ellender et al.

Writing to both Democratic and GOP Senate leaders, CIO Legislative Director Nathan Cowan told them:

"A wilful half dozen of the most reactionary men in America are defying the will of the majority of the U. S. Senate and of the people . . .

"These men represent less than 10% of the people in their home states. By their conduct, they are showing the utmost contempt for the democratic institutions of our country and for the whole principle of majority rule.

"How much longer is the majority of the Senate going to permit this outright defiance of the principle of majority rule to continue?

"How much longer must the American people wait until these men are brought up short in their shameful performance on the Senate floor?

"We urge that the Senate insist on bringing the bill to a vote and that it keep the bill before the Senate until a vote can be taken."

Technically, the parliamentary situation is this: the polltax gang is insisting on "reading the journal" and amending it. The journal is never ordinarily read.

By this device, the Senate is prevented from getting down to business on FEPC, or anything else for that matter.

So far, the filibuster gang has been having its fun discussing the chaplain's prayer. This procedure is one of the most blasphemous spectacles in Congressional history. Every minister in the country should protest the foul abuse these men are heaping on the use of prayer.

But perhaps the lowest exhibition was put on by Senator Millard Tydings (D. Md.), who got off this Hitleresque outburst the other day:

Sen. Taylor (D. Idaho): "May I ask, is not democracy predicated upon the rule of the majority?"

Sen. Tydings: "The rule of the majority. The rules of votes. Majority to Hades. The rule of petty political preference. The rule of the majority. The rule that has brought more bloodshed and turmoil and cruelty on this earth than anything I know of. Of course, it is necessary to have it as a yardstick in order to do business, but let us not fool ourselves that majorities are always right."

Straight out of Mein Kampf!

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
"Carry-back" repeal. HR 5180 HR 5232	Present tax law gives industry guaranteed profits at 1936-39 levels through tax refunds from Treasury. This bill repeals "carry-back" section.	Carryback now allows industry to defy unions, government, consumers because under it they can't lose money. You pay industry for not operating and for provoking strikes. To House Ways and Means.	Write, wire Representative and Senators to push for repeal. Every day the law stays on the books costs you money.
Anti-strike S 1661 HR 4908	Truman's bill to prohibit strikes by enforced "cooling-off," and "fact finding."	Reported out of House Labor Committee without subpena power for fact finding or compulsory cooling off.	Keep telling your Representative and Senators to oppose.
May-Arends HR 3937	Outlaws union political action; sets jail, fines for strikes "in violation of contract."	Can come on House floor any time; introduction threatened by House Military Committee.	Tell Representative to oppose even if he did vote against it (CIO News Dec. 24).
FEPC S 101	Makes FEPC permanent U. S. agency.	Polltaxers now filibustering. Cloture vote needed to gag them.	Insist on vote on merits of bill; no "deals."
65c wage S 1349, HR 3914	Ups present 40c wage to 65, then 75c; extends coverage.	Senate Labor Committee report expected this week; vote later.	Keep urging vote for 65c level; no "compromise" at 55c.

DROP HIM A LINE FROM THE PICKET LINE!

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

INVESTIGATION: Senate liberals are planning to ask for an investigation into the causes of strikes, and are reported ready to put a resolution on the floor to that effect when the polltax filibuster against the FEPC is defeated.

The resolution calls for a study of "the causes of current and threatened labor disputes, the economic and other factors, and government policies affecting such disputes" and for a report back to the Senate "as soon as practicable."

It was proposed by Sens. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), Morse (R., Ore.), and Tunnell (D., Del.) and will be backed by other liberals. Poll taxers and many Republicans will fight it, since it can be expected to expose the conspiracy of big business against the nation first denounced by CIO President Murray.

"FACT-FINDING": Here's the minority statement from the House Labor Committee on the Norton-Ellender fact-finding and cooling-off bill (HR 4908, S 1661):

"The bill drafted by the House Labor Committee offers no solution to the grave crisis facing the country.

"The rejection by the steel industry of President Truman's compromise solution of its wage dispute and the refusal of General Motors to accept the recommendation of the President's fact finding board plainly shows that the solution is not a fact finding board as provided in the bill (HR 4908) reported out today.

"The refusal has given rise to charges that a concerted plan exists to destroy labor and endanger the welfare of the American people.

"We who are interested in bringing about a workable solution of labor-management difficulties feel that a more sensible and reasonable approach would be an impartial inquiry into the field of labor-management relations to secure full and first hand knowledge for Congress and the people of the U. S. of the real causes underlying industrial strife."

It was signed by Reps. Green, Kelly (D., Pa.); Geelan (D., Conn.); Hook, Lesinski (D., Mich.); Patterson (D., Cal.); Welch (R., Cal.) and Powell (D., N. Y.).

GUIDEPOSTS: CIO supports the bill (HR 3370) for a $50,000,000 permanent school lunch program . . . it's out of Rules and on the way to the House floor . . . likewise a bill to give GI's terminal leave with pay the way officers get it, now in Military Affairs . . . and fights the phony "Equal Rights" amendment just reported favorably by Senate Judiciary . . .

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 6

Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS
$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

82

February 4, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

Something old, something new: UE-CIO pickets at East Pittsburgh's big Westinghouse plant take to the horse and wagon days for an effective demonstration of their case for a $2 a day raise to restore cuts in take-home pay. See Pages 6-7.

Associated Photographers, Pittsburgh

TRY STEEL PRICE GRAB AS TRUMAN SCANS PROFITS

THE nation's largest single strike in history wound up a fortnight of relative inactivity this weekend. There were rumors of possible U. S. seizure of U. S. Defense Plant Corp facilities operated by the steel industry, if it fails to accept the 18½c an hour raise recommended by President Truman as well as government proffers of a price increase reported at about $4 a ton.

U. S. Steel officials, however, have said that they need "more than $6.25 a ton increase" to meet the 18½c demand. The OPA has estimated that $2.50 more a ton would be sufficient, and the highest estimate from sources close to Director of War Mobilization and Reconversion Snyder has been about $4.

At the White House late this week, President Truman was conferring with other high government officials regarding steel profits and pricing policy, with news expected from here if any develops over the weekend.

Meanwhile, as U. S. Steel's Carnegie-Illinois management at Homestead, Pa., sought to limit picketing by court injunction, Pres. Philip Murray of CIO and the United Steelworkers rallied nearly 200,000 striking members of his union with the battle warning:

"You are fighting for women and children, for bread and butter and medicine and clothing and education and culture.

"All that we need to win is for you to make up your minds that this industry is not going to make one pound of steel."

The Homestead injunction action, opposed by the USA-CIO, was brought after a disagreement about the number of supervisors necessary to supervise 125 maintenance workers, with the corporation holding out for the "right" to bring in as many men as it deemed necessary.

The importance of the case, which was being heard as the CIO NEWS went to press, was its possible influence in other picketing situations. Should the management be able to restrict severely the number of pickets, moves to bring in scabs might be successful at least temporarily if the strike turned out to be of long duration.

Picketing so far has been 99.44% peaceful, with virtually no incidents reported, since management has refrained from reverting to the 1919-1937 strikes' pattern, when hired gunmen and local law officers slugged and murdered pickets.

A sidelight of the bargaining fight—which went on for months before the strike was called Jan. 21—was the statement of an "association of steel fabricating concerns" which complained that the union had not bargained with them.

Murray made public a list of 29 steel firms, small like the fabricators, which had signed with the USA-CIO, and in a letter to the association, declared:

"As you well know, most of the companies of whom you have spoken have in the past repeatedly advised the representatives of our union that they could not negotiate regarding the union's wage demand until the basic steel industry has consummated a final agreement with the union.

"It has been this position of the steel fabricating companies, to which you have referred, which has made impossible any effective collective bargaining between such companies and our union."

Why Don't You Cool Off?

SCAB HERDERS IN WIRE STRIKE

Efforts to get scabs through the picket line of the month-old strike of the CIO American Communications Assn. against Western Union in New York City continued this week as the company sought an injunction in the N. Y. Supreme Court against mass picketing.

Two more strikers were arrested and a striker and sympathizer were fined. A number of other strikers including ACA Pres. Joseph P. Selly had been arrested earlier.

But that was not enough for Supreme Court Justice Levy who was presiding on the company's request for an injunction. His order to the police that they open the way for scabs into the company's Hudson St. building caused Pres. Joseph Curran of the Greater N. Y. CIO Council and of the Natl. Maritime Union to assert that the judge had disqualified himself from sitting on the case.

When union attorneys told Levy that he had disqualified himself, he ordered ACA Counsel Neiberger before the bar to be dealt with after the case was concluded.

ACA and company representatives were brought together this week for resumption of negotiations by Federal Conciliator Mandelbaum. The strike was called after the Natl. War Labor Board rejected a N. Y. regional WLB decision granting wage increases to Western Union.

GM SETTLEMENT STILL STALLED

HOPES of early settlement of the ten-weeks-old General Motors strike which followed announcement of wage agreements with Ford and Chrysler dimmed this week when the CIO Auto Workers charged that GM was not bargaining in good faith in sessions before Federal Mediator James F. Dewey.

UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas and GM Pres. Charles E. Wilson both promised that they would attend negotiating sessions this week. Thomas kept his promise, but Wilson reneged. Thomas later announced:

"I will not go into negotiations again until there is some indication that General Motors wants to settle the strike. They are not negotiating."

The strike against GM was intensified this week when all GM tool and die work being done by UAW members in jobbing shops in the Detroit area ceased as the UAW Strike Strategy Committee had warned.

Secondary issues were being considered at the negotiations. The UAW wanted seniority to be applied to plant advancement, but GM asked that "merit" be the sole consideration.

Violating a request by Federal Mediator Dewey that it issue no statements to the press, GM asserted that it would not boost its offer of an increase of 13½c an hour and that it would not sign any contract providing for maintenance of membership.

Thereupon UAW Vice Pres. Walter Reuther, head of the union's GM dept., declared that President Truman had recommended that the old contract containing the maintenance clause be reinstated, adding:

"The corporation's renewal of the 13½c offer in the face of the recommendation of 19½c by President Truman and in the face of greater increases agreed to by other major auto companies is another indication that the corporation is not acting in good faith.

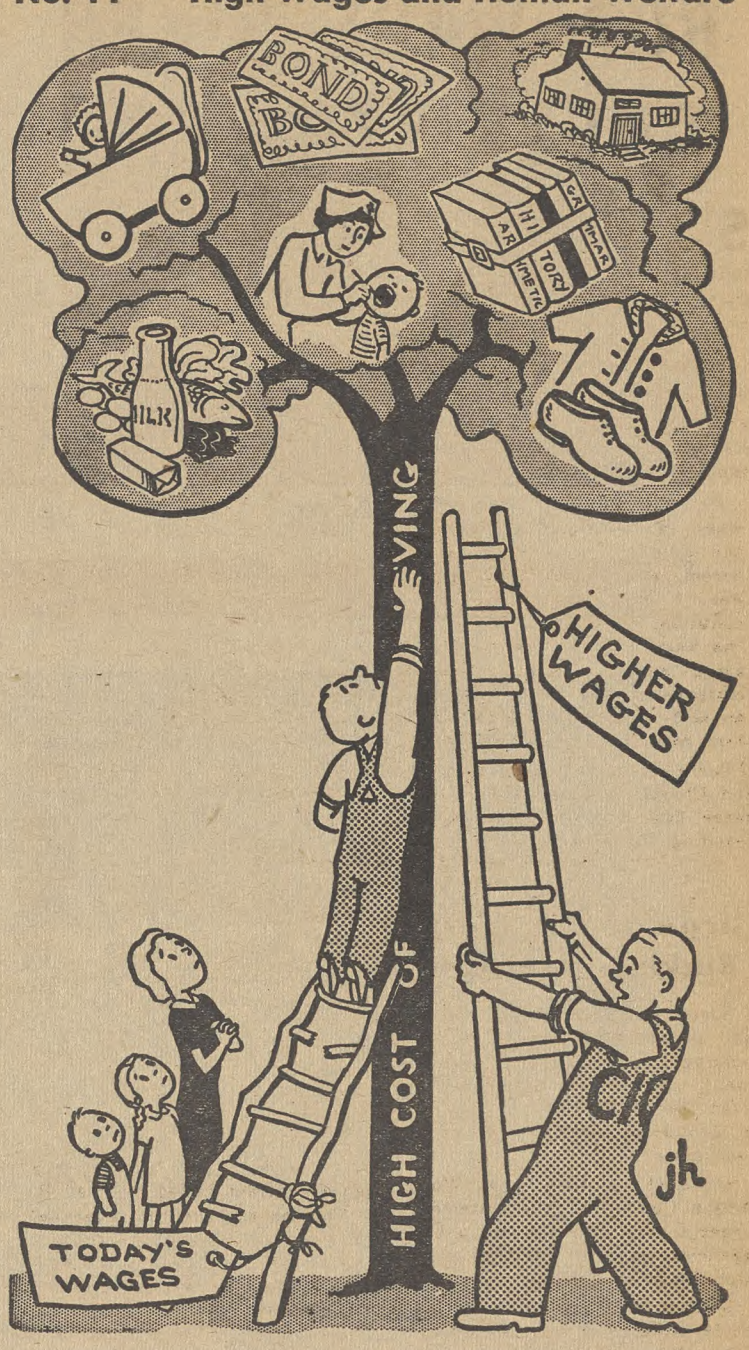
"The strike will continue until the corporation meets its public responsibilities, and bargains in good faith to carry out the recommendations of the President of the U. S."

Support for the strike continued to grow with Dr. John W. Ruskin of Mt. Vernon Pl. Methodist Church, Washington, D. C., appealing to the ministry to contribute to the Committee to Aid the Family of GM Strikers. Chairman Leon Henderson of the Washington branch of the committee announced that $2,500 had been sent for the relief of GM families in Baltimore and Atlanta.

PAC CONTRIBUTION AT WORK

WHY RAISE BASIC PAY

No. 11 High Wages and Human Welfare



The average manufacturing employe, on present wage rates, is more than $20 a week short of the necessary income to provide for a health and decency standard of living. (This standard would require $57.97 a week, according to the Heller budget.) With a 30% pay raise he would still be 20% below such a standard. Workers today are demanding, not luxuries, but milk and shoes for their children, medical care, decent homes, a chance to save.

'IF THE UNIONS WIN, WE ALL WIN' -- PITTSBURGH, '46

As the biggest steel strike in history ended ts second week, spirit of the steelworkers was heightened with mounting proof of community support for their wage increase demand.

Merchants on Pittsburgh's South Side, where the Jones & Laughlin steel plants are located, are solidly behind the strike. Almost every store window carries a sign indorsing the CIO Steelworkers fight and the storekeepers are generously keeping pickets well-fed with sandwiches, doughnuts and soft drinks.

"They treat us like brothers," said Henry Hoffnagel, a picket captain and veteran worker for 29 years at J & L. Bearing out his words, up came Nick Stojanovich, a merchant on Carson St., his arms filled with containers of coffee, bread and cigarettes.

"Sure, we're supporting the unions," Nick, an ex-serviceman, said. "If the unions win, all of us will win. If the unions lose, all the people will lose. The only ones who might gain are the large corporations."

Out at the J & L plant in Hazlewood the Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion posts are also helping the strikers. "We're 100% behind the union," Commander William H. McDonald of VFW Post 247 said. "We've offered our kitchen facilities to the union and we're always ready to give the strikers money donations."

FORD, CHRYSLER, RCA WAGE HIKES CHEER STRIKERS

STRIKES against other companies bore fruit this week in wake agreements bringing substantial increases for members of the CIO Auto Workers at Ford and Chrysler, and of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers at the RCA plant at Camden, N. J.

The increases, which will add scores of millions yearly to the workers' pay envelopes, were 18c an hour at Ford, 18½c at Chrysler, and 17½c at RCA. They will cover 120,000 workers at Ford, 65,000 at Chrysler and 8,000 at RCA.

At Ford, where the basic wage rate was the highest in the industry, the new rate will become effective not later than Feb. 1 and negotiations will continue on other matters with the union and the company issuing a joint and confident statement that "there will be an early termination to all matters remaining to be settled."

There was a race between Ford and Chrysler to see which would agree first with the union, both reaching agreements on Jan. 25 with Ford nosing out Chrysler by 35 minutes.

The Chrysler agreement included a new contract, replacing the one which expired Dec. 4, 1945, and continuing until Jan. 26, 1947. The contract will boost minimum wages to $1.07 in the Detroit area plants of the corporation, the present minimum being 89c an hour. The 18½c increase will apply to all in each of the wage classifications from the minimum upward.

A joint statement by Norman Matthews, director of the union's Chrysler dept., and Robert W. Conder, director of labor relations of the corporation, declared the settlement was the "best the union and the company ever negotiated," that it was mutually agreed that both labor and management are interested in high production.

These two agreements are not the first new ones negotiated by the UAW, the new Kaiser-Frazier Corp. having signed three weeks ago a contract hailed by Pres. R. J. Thomas as "the best ever negotiated with the auto industry and as the first break in the dike of the industry's resistance to the demands of the UAW."

The new UE-RCA contract, which like the three UAW agreements was negotiated without a strike, also brings settlement of a War Labor Board case with the result that the Camden employes will receive six days paid vacation annually and an additional $150,000.

"We're Workers, Too—Treat Us as Such" was the theme of these veterans, all members of the striking CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, as they demonstrated at the Pennsylvania Capitol at Harrisburg. They asked first that Gov. Edward Martin (R.) call a special session of the legislature to change the state unemployment compensation act so that they, like other strikers, would receive unemployment compensation. Other demands were that the special session grant them a bonus and that Congress change the GI Bill of Rights which now bars striking veterans from adjustment allowances of $20 a week for 52 weeks.

Urge Social Work Backing for Strikes

Social workers have a "special and paramount concern" in supporting the current strike movement, declares a statement issued this week in N. Y. City by a group of well-known social workers.

Initiated by the Social Work Action Committee, the statement urges that all private and public agencies give full assistance to strikers in need.

Signers of the statement include Antoinette Cannon, chairman of the Social Work Action Committee and well-known social worker; Evelyn Adler, Josephine Brown, Albert Deutsch, Dorothy Kahn, Clarence King, Philip Klein, Harry Lurie, Malcolm Nichols, Bertha Nichols and Sadie Shapiro.

SUPER-SENIORITY OUTLAWED

MAJ. GEN. Lewis B. Hershey, head of Selective Service, and his "super-seniority" theories were outlawed by two Federal court judges this week in the first court rulings directly on the question.

Following the first decision by Federal Judge Briggle in the Southern District of Illinois, Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee said that the ruling of the judge on the four cases involved had definitely answered "no" to the question as to whether a returned veteran can displace a non-veteran of greater seniority.

The judge points out that a veteran who was a temporary employe is not covered by the Selective Service Act and that a permanent employe "is not entitled to advance beyond the seniority status he would have attained had he not entered military service but remained on the job."

Bernstein recommended that the management be shown the decision, copies of which are obtainable from the CIO Veterans Committee, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C., that CIO unions request reinstatement of all employes with greater seniority who were fired to make room for veterans, and that if the company refuses, individual grievances be filed in each case under the contract.

Judge Briggle referred to two Federal court decisions in which the question of seniority was indirectly involved and then continued:

"The Director of Selective Service, charged with the duty of administering the act, has said, 'A returning veteran is entitled to reinstatement in his former position or one of like seniority, status and pay, even though the reinstatement necessitates the discharge of the non-veteran with greater seniority.' These expressions are all entitled to great respect, but I am unable to accept the reasoning of any of them.

"It should also be observed that the Director in the same memorandum speaks as follows: 'In the administration of the act, the Selective Service System takes the position that the seniority of a person in the service accumulates during such service to the same extent and in the same manner as if such person had remained in continuous employment. (My emphasis.)"

A similar decision also was handed down this week by Federal Judge Lederle in Detroit.

CIO's Own Radio Shows EVERY SATURDAY

Two Full, Weekly 15-Minute Radio Programs, of and for CIO

1. Labor-USA. Dramatic shows. American Broadcasting Co. network. Saturdays, 6:45 to 7 P. M., EST.

2. Cross-Section—CIO. On-the-spot interviews of CIO people by William Downs, noted CBS commentator. Saturdays, 3:45 to 4 P. M., EST.

Live Listening!

EQUALITY ASKED FOR STRIKING VETS

THE CIO Legislative Dept. and the CIO Veterans Committee have launched a determined effort to have the GI Bill of Rights altered so that striking veterans may obtain unemployment compensation —"readjustment allowances."

The law provides that jobless veterans may get $20 a week for 52 weeks, but bars strikers from receiving the benefits. The injustice of the law has been highlighted by the protests of CIO veterans on strike.

Several bills to change the law have been introduced, and the CIO is pressing for hearings on them before the House Veterans Committee. Opposition is expected from the chairman of the committee, Representative Rankin (Miss. polltaxer), who, aided by other reactionaries in Congress, slipped the present provision on unemployment compensation into the law. A number of Congressmen have stated that it was not the intention of Congress to bar striking veterans from the benefits of the law.

The Veterans' Committee of District 9, Steelworkers, Bethlehem, Pa., who with other workers are on strike against the Bethlehem Steel Corp., this week visited a number of Representatives and Senators and received from most promises that they would support the proposed change.

There have been numerous protests against the GI Bill bar to veterans unemployment compensation payments, including one last week at Harrisburg, Pa., when 600 veterans belonging to the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers arrived from struck Westinghouse and General Electrical plants throughout the state to stage a demonstration at the capitol.

Meyer Bernstein, of the CIO Veterans Committee, this week pointed out that the GI Bill of Rights is inequitable because in five states — Iowa, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, New York and Rhode Island — other striking workers receive benefits after waiting periods varying from three to eight weeks.

In those states, the striking veterans are barred from the payments mostly because they were in the services during the period on which payments are based.

White Collar Aid For Wage Fight

The Natl. Council of Scientific Professional, Art and White Collar Workers this week issued a statement supporting labor's fight for higher wages and placing the major blame for the continued struggle upon the companies.

The statement was signed by representatives of a dozen organizations as individuals including Pres. Lewis Merrill and Evelyn Adler of the CIO Office & Professional Workers, and Sara Walsh, executive director of the National Teachers Division of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers.

NEW DAY A'DAWNING

The fact that many corporations are now signing agreements with CIO unions granting substantially higher wages throws into sharp relief the attitude of those big-business die-hards who provoked the present strikes.

It proves there is nothing unreasonable in CIO wage demands, nothing that cannot be peacefully settled around the collective bargaining table.

If Kaiser, Ford, Chrysler, RCA and other large employers can grant wage increases satisfactory to the CIO unions, why cannot other steel, auto, electrical, meat packing, farm equipment concerns do likewise?

Why do they persist in refusing real collective bargaining, in rejecting government awards and in holding up production?

The only answer is that they have ulterior motives which go beyond the mere matter of wage bargaining; that they are engaged in a conspiracy to break the unions and to hold up the public for unreasonable price increases and outrageous profits.

But the 100% effectiveness of CIO's strikes, and the widespread public sympathy and support for labor, demonstrate that union-busting is not so simple today as it was during the open shop drive after the first World War.

So more and more intelligent employers are refusing to join the die-hards' conspiracy, leaving them in increasing isolation in their defiance of the public interest.

The newly signed agreements are the first rays of a new day of higher wages and greater national prosperity which must soon banish the dark shades of wage-cutting and union-busting conspiracy.

BILL TO BREAK LABOR

The conspiracy of big business to keep down wages and destroy labor unions has spread to the floor of Congress.

In secret and conspiratorial fashion the worst labor-baiters among the polltax Democrats have combined with reactionary Republicans to force on to the floor of the House a new and unheard bill to destroy labor's rights.

The Case bill (HR. 5262) is an open declaration of war on organized labor and the democratic rights of all the people.

It is designed to destroy the basic right to strike, and its prohibitions against assistance to strikes would condemn free speech, picketing, pro-labor community action and many other constitutional rights of the American people.

It would revive the anti-labor injunction, which was outlawed by the Norris-LaGuardia Act.

It would deprive supervisory employes and large groups of clerical employes of the protection of the Wagner Act, and transform this Act from labor's Magna Carta into an instrument to destroy labor organizations.

The one-sided anti-labor character of this act is particularly outrageous at a time when big corporations have provoked all the current shutdowns by their conspiracy to reject collective bargaining, defy the government, break the unions and profiteer from low wages and high prices.

Congressmen who are interested in promoting industrial peace will vote against this and all other strife-provoking anti-labor bills, and instead will demand drastic legislative measures against the anti-union corporations which are using public money (through tax refund privileges) to defy the government and to provoke and continue the present industrial strife.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

THE CIO is winning the battle of America. The higher-wage agreements with Henry Kaiser, Ford, Chrysler, RCA bring final victory in sight.

The battle still goes on with many of the biggest corporations. But the end result is not in doubt.

Thanks to the leadership of the CIO, the militancy and strength of its organization, the fortitude and determination of its membership, America will go forward through higher wages and higher living standards to greater prosperity for all its people.

★ ★ ★

While CIO pickets braved ice and snow, fighting the battle of all American labor, newspaper headlines related that, "AFL Chiefs in Miami Ponder CIO Strikes."

If they did any pondering, in between their sunbathing on the golden sands and their visits to the Hialeah race tracks, they must have pondered, like many other Florida idlers, how nice it is to profit from other people's efforts.

For ever since its inception, the CIO has borne the brunt of the battle, while AFL chiefs have clipped the coupons of unearned income and supped on the fruits of CIO's victories.

★ ★ ★

It was the CIO that broke the back of open shop anti-unionism in America, by organizing the great basic industries of steel, autos, rubber, electrical manufacturing, etc.

In doing so, the CIO not only added millions to the ranks of its own great movement, but it also built a strong wall of defense around the older unions of the AFL. It made it easy for them to follow in the wake of CIO's organizing campaigns and add new members to their own ranks.

Time and again, the CIO has led the fight for higher wages for all American workers, and AFL unions have profited from its victories.

Now history is repeating itself. The CIO is winning substantial wage increases in those basic industries which set the pattern of conditions in countless other related and subsidiary industries.

So the AFL chiefs may continue to disport themselves in Miami and other favored resorts, secure in the knowledge that CIO organization holds the biggest union-busters at bay; that CIO legislative and political activity leads the fight against anti-labor reaction; and that CIO unions are winning the battle for higher wages for all American workers.

★ ★ ★

Rejoining the ranks of those whom he used to accuse of "burying their heads in the golden sands of Florida," was a former CIO leader who has heaped more scorn on AFL slothfulness and "free-riding" than any other living man.

It was John L. Lewis, during CIO's early battles, who used to charge AFL leaders with avoiding the heat of the battle and sitting in the shade of a tent on the hillside "with the women."

Now he sits in the shade of Florida palms with these same slackers, while the CIO bears the brunt of the battle.

But he does not sit "with the women." For the women today are in the thick of CIO's battles, on the picket lines, in the strike kitchens, feeling the pinch in their homes and bolstering the morale of their menfolk to stand firm for a decent wage.

★ ★ ★

The Kaiser, Ford, Chrysler, RCA and other wage agreements now being won by CIO unions testify to the value of genuine collective bargaining and to the obvious fact that the CIO does not seek or desire strikes.

Other great corporations find their plants closed down solely because they have rejected collective bargaining, refused to negotiate reasonable wage agreements and joined in a conspiracy against the unions.

But at the same time, the present situation reveals the vital importance of labor's last resort, its right to strike, if proper adjustment is to be made of its wage and other grievances.

For unquestionably it is the demonstration of CIO's strength and determination, through the strikes it has called, that has convinced reasonable employers of the wisdom of settling, and that will eventually bring to reason those who are still holding out.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer
Vice-President

Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 February 4, 1946 No. 6

LAW A FAILURE

MINNESOTA PUTS COOL-OFF ON ICE

Cool-off and fact-finding "solutions" to employer-worker problems have been tested —and found wanting—in the State of Minnesota. What's wrong with the Minnesota Labor Relations Act, adopted in 1939 at the suggestion of then Governor Harold G. Stassen, is told by an on-the-spot observer.

By DOUGLAS HALL

General Counsel, Minnesota CIO Council

MINNESOTA has a record of maintaining war production uninterrupted by labor disputes which is unexcelled. In addition, the record in Minnesota of settling labor disputes after V-J Day without work stoppages has been considerably above other manufacturing areas in the country.

Recently, publicity has been given to the claim that the Minnesota Labor Relations Act is responsible for this record. The ten-day and 30-day waiting periods required by the Act are given as the reasons for these fine records. The facts, however, present an entirely different picture.

The experience under the Minnesota Labor Relations Act immediately prior to the entry of this country into war does not show that the Minnesota Act or the Minnesota Labor Conciliator made a contribution to the settlement of serious labor disputes. This is shown by three important cases, all of which occurred in 1941.

In the case of Minneapolis-Moline Power Implement Co., a leading manufacturer in Minneapolis, proceedings were held under the Minnesota Labor Relations Act in both the ten and 30-day waiting periods. The commission appointed to make findings of fact and recommendations for settlement during the 30-day period recommended a small wage increase and certain other benefits for the union.

The union accepted the recommendations, but the company rejected them. Instead of calling an immediate strike, the union agreed to submit the dispute to the voluntary procedures set up by the federal government.

Although the parties went to Washington to meet with federal authorities, a final settlement was reached between the parties themselves.

This settlement provided for an increase in wages which was just double the amount recommended by the state commission. The union secured other advantages through the final settlement which far exceeded the recommendation of the state commission.

In a dispute involving the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co., the largest metal working plant in the state, and the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers in 1941, the procedures under the state law were likewise exhausted. The union rejected the commission recommendation and this dispute was also submitted to the voluntary federal procedures. The final settlement between the union and the company in Washington gave the union considerable gains which had been denied them by the state commission.

This same pattern was reflected in a third dispute involving a smaller employer in a rural area.

Although the compulsory procedures under the Minnesota law failed completely in bringing a settlement of these three major disputes, and the disputes themselves were settled through federal agencies on a voluntary basis, the spokesmen for the State Conciliation Service have included these disputes in their statistics on situations settled, thereby claiming credit for settlements they did not contribute to.

Despite the exaggerated claims made for the Minnesota Labor Relations Law, it is based on a completely false premise.

In order to secure any real benefit from state conciliation, a strike notice must be filed first. This means that a union must act in the atmosphere of a strike before it can enter into procedures under the state law for conciliation. This is hardly a proper atmosphere in which to conduct conciliation meetings.

In addition, employers know that there can be no strike at least until after the expiration of the ten-day period and not until the expiration of an additional 30 days if the dispute affects public interest.

Many employers, therefore, do not bargain realistically and in good faith until a strike notice is filed and at the end of the mandatory waiting period approaches.

Such an employer figures that there is no necessity to make proposals in the early stages of negotiations when he is safe in waiting until near the end of the mandatory period. Such an attitude naturally arouses the resentment of his workers and makes a final settlement of the dispute much more difficult.

The Minnesota law purports to set up unfair labor practices for both employers and unions. But it fails to establish any administrative procedure for the enforcement of the provisions and unfair labor practices against employers. Such enforcement can be secured only through the courts, but this involves expensive and protracted litigation.

The inadequacy of the law on unfair labor practices is clearly shown by the fact that not more than one or two such cases against employers for unfair labor practices have been brought under this law since its enactment in 1939.

In cases involving firms in interstate commerce, a remedy for unfair labor practices is sought through the Natl. Labor Relations Board. In cases involving intrastate commerce, the unions have ignored the Minnesota law and have sought their remedy in strike action.

VET LEADER LAUDS CIO

Chairman Charles G. Bolte of the American Veterans Committee this week wrote CIO Pres. Philip Murray a letter congratulating him in behalf of the AVC for the prompt acceptance by CIO unions of the recommendations of fact-finding boards in labor disputes.

Bolte pointed out that because veterans are interested in the early achievement of full production with jobs for all at decent wages, "your willingness to agree to a fair compromise in these disagreements brings that time nearer." Bolte also wrote President Truman:

"Despite the disavowals of a 'conspiracy,' it has become too apparent that the managements of General Motors and of the organized steel industry have selected a strategically advantageous moment for a test of strength with labor."

Army Heeds CIO Protest Against Sign

Protest by the CIO News has caused the Army to remove an anti-union recruiting sign on the Separation Center of the Air Corps at Westover Field, Mass. The sign said in part:

"Since strikes, civilian jobs are scarce—the take-home pay with deductions for income tax, social security, union dues, blue cross, etc., do not compare with Army salaries and huge retirement benefits."

When the sign was called to the attention of the War Department in Washington, an investigation was promised. This week the department reported that the sign had been removed.

Any further instances of anti-union propaganda used to induce GIs or Gobs to reenlist should be reported at once to CIO Veterans Committee, 718 Jackson Place NW., Washington 6, D. C.

Just the KISS of the hops

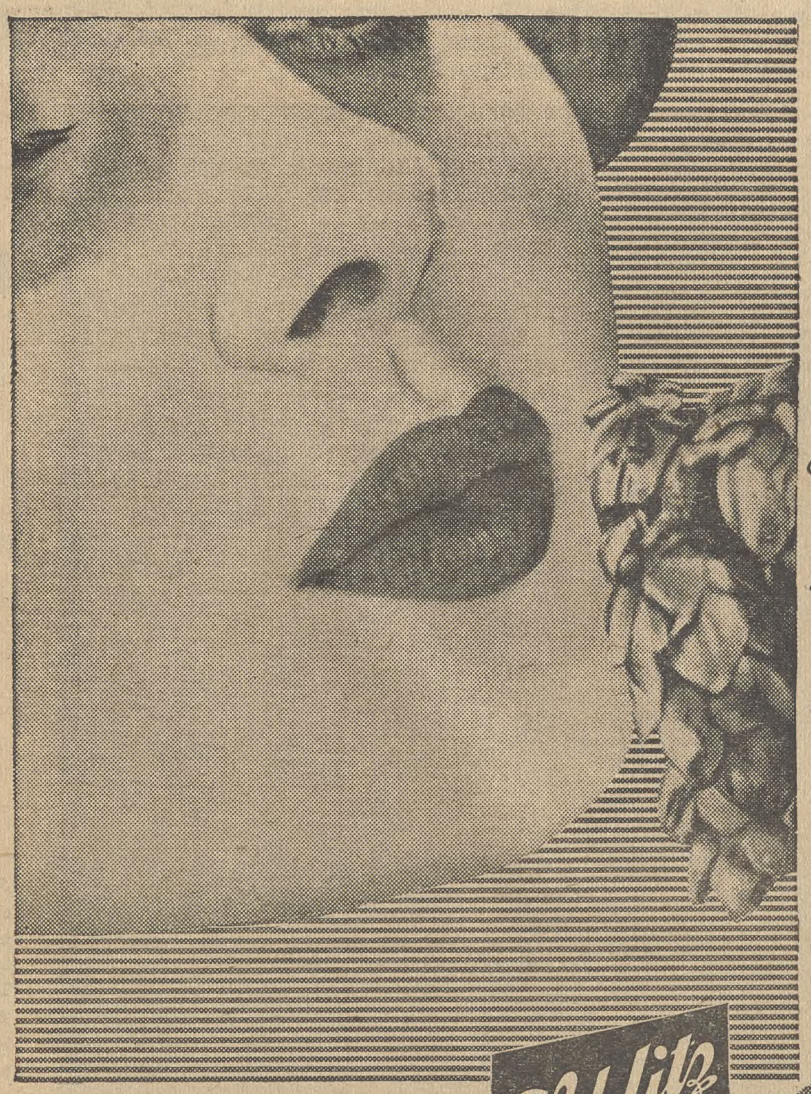
That famous flavor found only in Schlitz brings you the bewitching aroma and fine savor of the hops, free from the harsh bitterness natural to the hop flower.

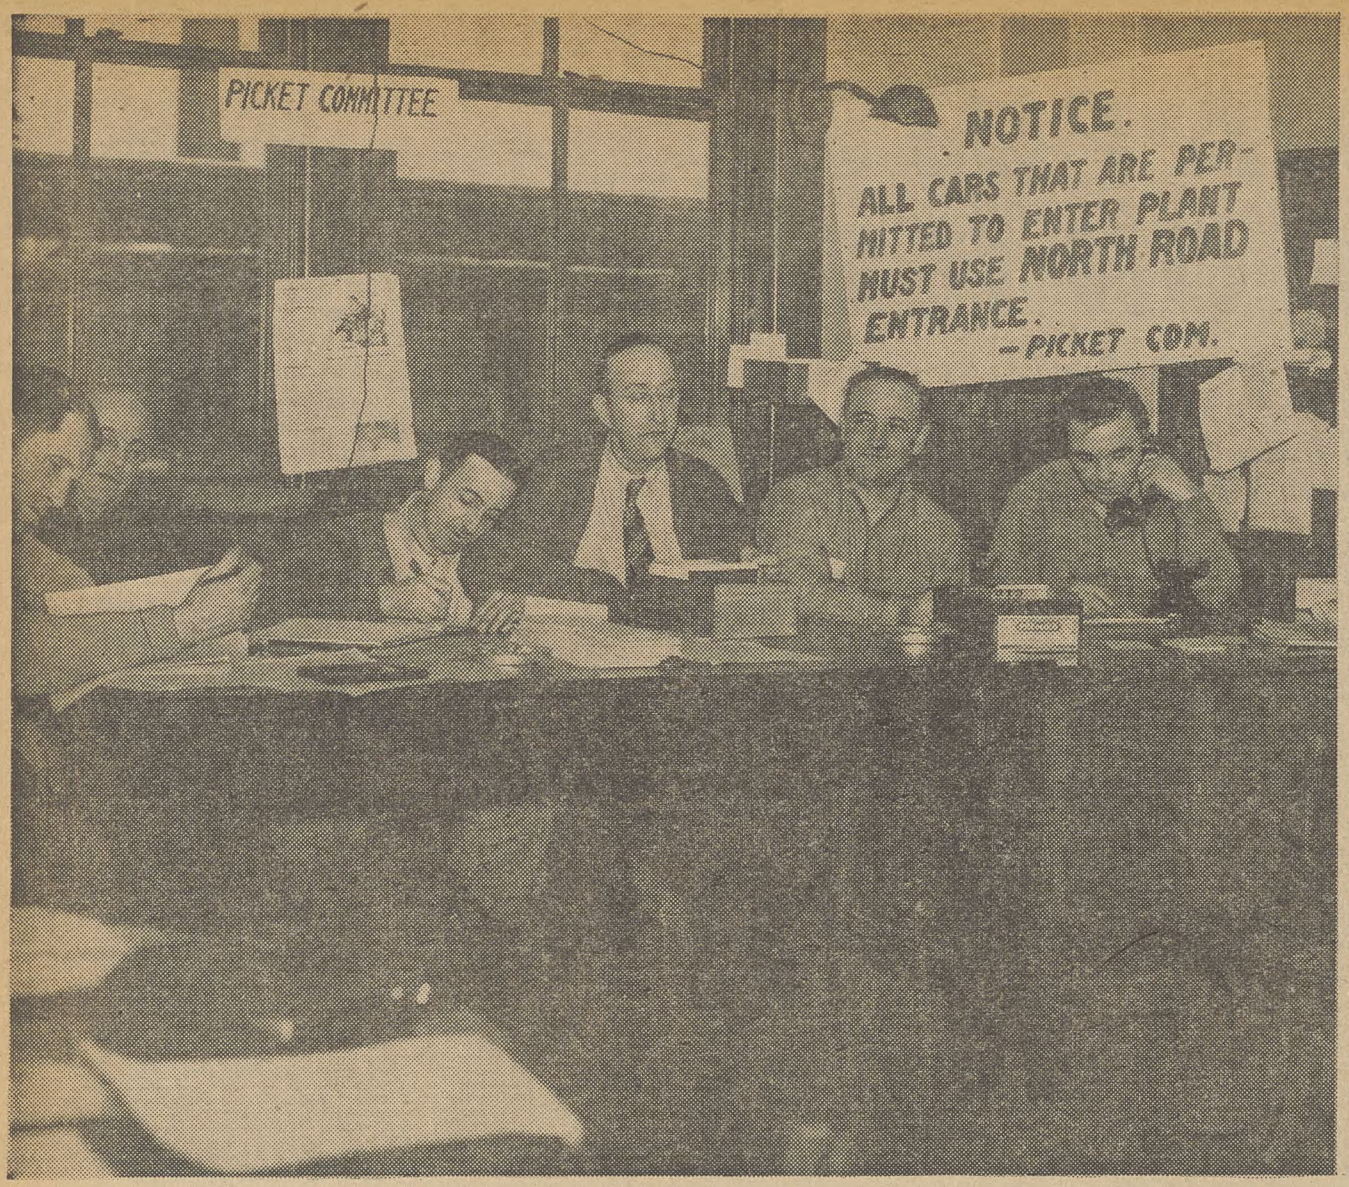


America's Most Distinguished Beer

Schlitz

Copyright 1945, Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

THE BEER THAT MADE MILWAUKEE FAMOUS



1 It takes organization to keep a picketline running. The Picket Committee of Local 301, UE-CIO, checks reports from the General Electric lines in Schenectady, N. Y. Chairman is Bill Mastrianni, on the telephone. 301 has 16,000 pickets to call on and local leaders see that every one has a turn on the line.

2 And it takes hot food, plenty of it, to thaw out pickets wh wind. Mrs. Grace Best and Mrs. Josephine Welch, both u Ferris, back from Europe three days before, is on the line.

4 Farmers of surrounding Schoharie County know the score. These members of the Natl. Farmers Union presented Local 301 with an 800-pound heifer, appropriately labelled. NFU chairman Alfred Mead (at bossy's left) said he knew farmers' income depends on industrial workers' take-home pay. Pay cuts for workers cut incomes for farmers.

WORK—KEY T

Story by C. W. Fowler • Pictu

IT'S cold on the UE picketline in Schenectady, bitter cold when the wind sweeps down the Mohawk River valley from Canada and bites into the workers walking the line in front of General Electric's sprawling plants.

One day in the first week of the strike, an old man came walking toward the line with a big bundle in his arms. In the bundle were fur coats, four of them, and they were the old man's gift to the strikers.

The old man was a retired GE worker, scratching a living on a chicken farm. Twenty years ago, GE laid him off—just two weeks before he became entitled to a pension.

Picketing is hungry work. You get a great fondness for hot soup and coffee and thick sandwiches. When the picketline is 1,000 strong, which it is every weekday, you need a lot of hot food. The merchants of Schenectady supply it—not all of it, but enough to be a big help to the union.

Pickets need a place on the line where they can duck in to warm hands and stamp a little of the cold out of their feet. First day of the strike, Local 301 chartered an old street car and parked it down by the main gates with a wood stove going inside it. The head of the transit company, riding back in a warm parlor car from an important meeting with his holding company in New York, saw the trolley standing there and ordered it taken away.

UE Local 301 went to the transit union—a local of CIO's Transport Workers Union—and two hours later the trolley car was back on the line with the wood stove roaring again.

Schenectady sits in a valley surrounded by some of the best dairy farms in the state. Many of the farmers belong to the National Farmers Union. One day early in the strike, two big fa beside 301's headquarters. One with 30 roasting chickens, six onions, turnips. The other had and she had a sign on her say the cows come home—if necessa

Bossy and the other produc of the Schoharie County local ion whose leader, Alfred M "We recognize that the streng market depends on the take worker in industry."

People come in from outside and USA-CIO strikes, recognizin key point in the counter-offensi on the living standards of all

A famous American artist—a boot—Rockwell Kent, came d Forks in the Adirondacks to wa was photographed in a gag dressed as an Eskimo. That eve the strike to faculty and stude Union College, met with local at a Lithuanian Society's party, day coach to get back home.

But strikes aren't won on lic support alone. They are w and hard, disciplined work no ers but by every member of and his wife.

Smack alongside the N. Y. Ce where trains pound by all day a Local 301 has headquarters in a ing that gives them a big meet a dozen smaller offices.

The organizing work back o on in this building. Here the Pic pickets when they come in from six hours in a 10 below zero h, both union wives, work in the strike kitchen. Sgt. Michael the line. He knows the raw deal GE hands out.

3 Strikers take their case to the public via radio on CIO's network show "Cross-Section—CIO" (Saturdays, 3:45 p.m. E.S.T.) Bill Downs interviews three UE veterans—Mrs. Edna Miller, former WAC, Foster Campbell, ex-Army, and Bill Roth, ex-Navy. Says Mrs. Miller: "My take-home was cut to $18. That's what the strike is about."

TO VICTORY

• Pictures by Courtney Wright

two big farm trucks pulled up rters. One of them was loaded ckens, six bushels of potatoes, other had an 800-pound heifer on her saying: "We're out till
—if necessary."

ther produce were the present
unty local of the Farmers Un-
Alfred Mead, told strikers: the strength of the farmer's n the take-home pay of the
"

om outside to support the UE
, recognizing Schenectady as a nter-offensive to industry's war rds of all Americans.

n artist—and a CIO member to t, came down from Ausable lacks to walk on the picketline,
n a "gag shot" with a picket
. That evening, Kent spoke on and students at Schenectady's with local ministers, appeared ty's party, rode 12 hours on the home.

't won on sympathy and pub-
They are won on organization ed work not only by the leadnemb r of the rank and file

he N. Y. Central railway tracks, y all day and most of the night, arters in a long, rambling build-a big meeting room and about es.

ork back of the picketline goes ere the Picket Committee, headed by Bill Mastrianni, keeps tabs on the marshals, the captains and the rank and file pickets, with phones open for emergency calls.

Pickets work six hours a day, under the slogan: "The longer the line, the shorter the strike." In another part of the room, strikers' wives keep the 16,000-name card index file up to date, check off who's done his turn on the line, who hasn't.

At the other end of the building union wives operate the strike kitchen. To get your soup, coffee and sandwiches you have to show your picket card punched up to date.

Everybody goes on the picketline. GE's electrical plant is shut tight by Local 301, UE-CIO, and American Locomotive's plant is shut equally tight by USA-CIO's Local 2074.

The town supports the strike, for the strikers are the town. Even though reactionary Republicans —and they don't come much more reactionary than the upstate New York variety—run the city government, the town is on the side of the strikers because it has to be.

Some signs of political action among the union members are evident, but not many. Pickets are urged to send postcards to their Congressman—Republican Rep. Kearny—asking him to support repeal of the carry-back tax law—but the two unions, UE and USA, seem unaware of their potential political strength.

Perhaps out of the strike will come a realization of the part the union can play in the life of the city, and through it, in the life of the state and the nation.

When that realization comes, Schenectady, where 80% of the working population belongs to the CIO, will take its place with the most progressive communities of the nation.

5 It gets cold in the Mohawk River Valley, as the Eskimo-clad picket demonstrates. The figure bent into the wind and carrying the sign is Rockwell Kent, American artist and a member of the CIO himself. Kent came down to Schenectady to walk on the line, show an artist's solidarity with the strikers. They're picketing GE's big radio station, WGY.

FRIENDLY ADVICE

TAKE A LETTER FROM A FARMER

This is a "must" letter for all CIO NEWS readers in or near farm communities. For what CIO nationally thinks about the problem, read "Letters to Dad"—24 pp., 10c a copy; order from CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl. N.W., Wash., D. C.

I am a farmer. But more than that I am an organized farmer who makes a study of farm problems. I know that the best market for beef, pork, mutton, wheat and other food products is the stomach of the working man.

However, most farmers are not organized into farm organizations that really make a study of economics, and as a consequence they are under the influence of the newspapers and magazines which are very much anti-labor.

Take for example the Pew-owned Farm Journal and Pathfinder. These papers go to hundreds of thousands of farmers each month or week and infect them with the ideas that Joe Pew wants them to have. And these ideas are anti-labor ideas of the first magnitude. And as a result such men as Harlan Bushfield are elected to the U. S. Senate.

Pew and duPonts contributed, along with others, $51,700 to insure the election of this reactionary lawyer on whom they can always depend.

What is labor doing to counteract the poison propaganda of the owners of the big corporations that pours over the countryside each day for the purpose of alienating labor's natural allies?

The situation is serious. When a farmer goes into an implement store for binder repairs, for example, he always asks the dealer how it comes that prices are so terribly high when he looks at the price tag. The dealer invariably tells him it is because of the high wages paid in the cities nowadays due to the unions. The dealer might be honest in his opinion, just a victim of the traveling salesman who peddles political propaganda for the company.

There are some farmers, especially those in the Farmers Union, who are good supporters of labor. They bring resolutions of support into their meetings and make them public in the local and state papers. They fight labor's battles in the countryside against heavy odds and would like to have some help. They think that labor has been overlooking one of their allies.

They believe that the leaders of labor should make it their business to study farm problems, to study the convention proceedings of the different farm organizations, and above all to get some facts out to the farmers showing the amount of labor involved in the production of the different commodities that farmers buy. In a word, labor must figure out ways and means of telling the farmers their side of the story.

During the war farmers have, for one of the first times in history, received somewhere near the value of their produce. They have paid debts and are getting on their feet. They don't want to slip back into the poverty they experienced in the 1930's.

There are different categories of farmers. Some are corporation farmers and farm for other farmers. But most of them are family-type farmers who should be good allies of labor . . .

Labor should take the lead in explaining to the people that the problems of the small farmers are tied up with the problems of labor and that wages cuts in the cities will be followed by drops in farm income.

Speaking as a farmer to labor I would like to see labor make a real effort to win farmer support. I am sure the farmers will respond. They are honest and on the whole pretty good fellows.

HOMER AYRES,
S. D. Delegate to the Natl. Farmers Union Con., Zeona, S. D.

Murray Hails Work Of OPA Boards

CIO Pes. Philip Murray wrote an open letter to "all CIO members of OPA Price Control Boards" on the fourth anniversary of the boards this month thanking them for carrying on "this important and trying wartime assignment" but warning that "the battle is not yet over."

"Effective price control NOW is one of the foundation stones of a stabilized postwar economy, and ceiling prices are the day-by-day protection so vital in a period of strong inflationary pressures," Murray continued. "I urge all CIO members who have been serving on these local OPA boards to continue their excellent work, until the battle of the home front is won."

RACIAL WORK HONORED

THE CIO this week honored five men and two women for meritorious service in the field of race relations during 1945. Included were:

Joseph Curran, president, CIO Natl. Maritime Union.

Harold J. Gibbons, director, St. Louis Joint Board, CIO Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes.

John Green, president, CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

Anna Arnold Hedgeman, executive secretary, Natl. Council for a Permanent FEPC.

The Most Rev. Bernard J. Shiel, D.D., Auxiliary Bishop of Chicago.

Frank Sinatra, singer and actor.

Lillian Smith, author and playwright.

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, chairman of the Natl. CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination, said the awards are made annually as an expression of the CIO's esteem for those who have distinguished themselves in fighting for human rights and furthering the cause of economic and political democracy in the field of race relations.

ARE YOU UNFAIR to the Union Label?

PLAIN OR TIPPED

Union people who do not boost union label goods are unfair to their union and unfair to themselves . . . because union-made means well-made!

Raleigh Cigarettes are the most widely distributed union label product in the world . . . every time you say "A pack of Raleighs" you boost your union label!

Be fair to your label . . . be fair to yourself . . .

SMOKE Raleigh

THROAT PROTECTION ★ BETTER TASTE ★ LASTING FRESHNESS

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

This past week has been a momentous one in the history of the CIO in the struggle to maintain the standard of living to which the workers are entitled.

The UAW-CIO Ford Dept., led by Richard Leonard, signed with the Ford Motor Co. for an 18c per hour wage increase. Pres. R. J. Thomas announced the signing of the Chrysler Corp. contract for an 18½c wage increase. The Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers came through with a victory on the wage question. The Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers joined the march by signing with RCA in Camden, N. J., for a 17½c per hour wage increase.

General Motors has entered negotiations with the Union again. Conciliator James Dewey, who in the early days of the UAW-CIO played an important role, has been assigned to this task by the U. S. Conciliation Service.

The settlements previously announced leave GM in an awkward position. There is nothing left to do but settle with the Union.

The Steel strike is solid. This is the first time in the history of our Nation that steel has been struck so effectively.

CIO IS MARCHING ON!

★ ★ ★

CIO Reg. Dir. Pugh, Richmond, Va., reports: Jobbers Pants Co., Martinsville, Va. (three plants), Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO 688, No Union 319. The campaign was conducted by Intl. Rep. John McMahon, assisted by Intl. Reps. Ben Hundley and Nellie Wilkins.

CIO Reg. Dir. Hugh Thompson advises: Union Carbide, Niagara Falls, N. Y., CIO 1077, District 50 362, No Union 319. UGCCWA Intl. Bd. Member Charles Doyle was in charge.

Robert C. Edwards, director, Organizing Committee, PJ&NW-CIO, reports: CIO won recognition at the following plants: Lafayette Co., N. Y. City, involving 20 employes. Organized by the N. Y. Organizing staff under direction of Assist. Org. Dir. L. T. Koletka; Kelman Pot Cleaners Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., involving 50 employes; LeLaune Jewelry Co., New York, N. Y., involving 30 employes. Edward N. Cook Plate Co., Providence, R. I., CIO 43, No Union 20. Rep. Alfred Bregnard was in charge under direction of CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Carmichael.

W. A. Copeland, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Memphis, Tenn., reports: H & C Table Co., CIO Furniture Workers 42, No Union 16. Rep. W. L. Carson was in charge. Owens Bros., CIO Packinghouse Workers 16, No Union 2. UPWA Rep. G. E. Boone handled this campaign.

CIO Field Rep. Wm. DeBerry, Carolinas, advises: Purina Co., CIO 31, Against 18.

Powers Hapgood, CIO Reg. Dir., Indianapolis, reports: Indianapolis Star (janitors), CIO Newspaper Guild 16, Against 1. The editorial department at the STAR has been under CIO contract for some time.

Frank Grasso, Director, Un. Paperworkers of America, reports: Smith-Lee Co., Inc., Piqua, Ohio. Rep. Elzie Bush was in charge; Manifold Supplies Co., with 60 employes; Chaspec Manufacturing Corp., with 25 employes; K-Poster with 30 employes; Pacific Display Co. with 15 employes. Rep. Carl Monaco was in charge.

FAMILY AIDS HARVESTER FIGHT: The CIO Farm Equipment & Metal Workers got real support this week in Chicago from Mrs. Emily Cavarso and her five-year-old daughter, Ruth.

REPORT DUE ON PACKING

By NORMAN DOLNICK

FINAL hearings on the meat packing dispute were held last Thursday by the fact finding board named to investigate and report on the matter, with the big packers still not coming any closer toward meeting the CIO Packinghouse Workers Union demand for a wage increase. A report is expected during the week of Feb. 4.

The hearings had lasted an entire week in Chicago and the closing day of arguments was held in Washington. Intl. Pres. Lewis J. Clark, Genl. Counsel Ralph Helstein and Research Dir. Lyle Cooper represented the CIO union.

On Jan. 26, the Packinghouse Workers, through delegates from every local, unanimously voted to return to work after Secy. of Agriculture Anderson assured them that he would seek approval of any wage increase recommended by the fact finding board. At a meeting held the day before, the delegates unanimously voted not to return to work without any such assurances.

However, Clark pointed out that the return to work does not mean that the strike had been called off. In a public statement Clark said that in urging the membership to return to work the union is "attempting to cooperate with the government with the understanding that the government will cooperate with them."

The statement continued: "The Packinghouse Workers regard these assurances from the government of the U. S. as a recognition that workers are entitled, at least, to equality of treatment with big business. It is regrettable that the government saw fit to take the seizure action . . ."

600 NEW VOTERS!

PICKET LINE POLITICS PAY OFF PLENTY!

"WHOEVER says political action has no place in the strike picture is just plumb crazy. Who passed those tax laws which give the corporations plenty of gravy even though the plants aren't working? It was the big business clique in Congress!"

That's the way Ed Helkamp, UAW official, thought as he watched 1,600 pickets marching 'round and 'round the Chevrolet-Fisher body plant in the Cincinnati suburb of Norwood, O. But his thinking didn't stop there. He figured that to match strike action, political action must be pushed to change the complexion of a Congress which has bowed to the corporations' every wish.

Recognizing that the first step to replace anti-labor congressmen was registration of all eligible voters, Helkamp checked the pickets and found to his amazement that 40% were not registered.

The Hamilton County PAC was contacted and PAC machinery began to operate. Cars were provided and the pickets were taken to the registration offices. The result? Six hundred new voters were signed up.

The idea caught fire, and it is being carried out in UE and USA-struck plants in the area. PAC officials report that at least 6,000 or 7,000 new voters will be on the rolls for the spring primaries and fall elections.

In commenting on the drive, Helkamp said: "The workers are showing more and more sympathy with political action. Now they can see what they're up against politically. They are finding out who their friends are, and how they can get action."

Pounding away at the theme that economic and political action are individuals, PAC newsletters have informed all PAC workers that "The roots of political action, registration and presentation of information to CIO workers must not wait. It must be carried on and encouraged as part of the strike.

"Registration should cover more than the strikers. It should cover their families, too. With workers spending more time at home, PAC registrars must stress the importance of getting every eligible member of the family to register."

CATERPILLAR TRACTOR OUT

THE largest local of the CIO Farm Equipment & Metal Workers Union this week struck the Caterpillar Tractor Co., Peoria, Ill., bringing to 48,000 the total number out on picket lines in support of the union's wage fight.

According to Pres. Grant W. Oakes, 16,000 production workers are involved at Caterpillar. They voted to strike only after negotiations, which lasted several months, had broken down, he said.

Demands include: a new contract; 30% pay hike; and settlement of wage inequities and accumulated grievances.

Meanwhile, the union's strike against the largest farm equipment monopoly, Intl. Harvester, was reported near possible settlement, with only 2½c an hour said to be separating negotiators representing the company and its 30,000 workers.

The company has said that it will not raise its top offer of a straight 17c an hour. Harvester plants all are shut.

The union is involved in two other strikes—at La Plant-Choate, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, with 800 workers out 11 weeks, and at the Oliver Corp., South Bend, Ind., with 1,200 workers out 13 weeks.

CIO ASKS TEXTILE SLOWDOWN PROBE

CHARGES that cotton textile manufacturers have been "deliberately withholding" the production of critically short cotton textile fabrics have been laid before the Small Business Committee of the U. S. Senate by the CIO Textile Workers Union.

Cotton mills are refusing to run third shifts because of a 5c an hour premium pay, failing to engage in production drives, and refusing to settle strikes called to enforce War Labor Board orders, Textile Pres. Emil Rieve told U. S. Sen. James Murray, chairman of the committee. Rieve asked for a congressional investigation.

In a letter to Senator Murray, Rieve declared that production allocation, the juggling of profit margins, and other matters already examined by the Murray committee have failed to get to the root of the cotton fabric shortage.

"Discussion of yardage distribution and price incentives will not create additional textiles," Rieve told Murray. "In fact, it has diverted public attention from the primary problem of getting more goods."

The best method of tackling the cotton textile shortage, Rieve said, is to provide more and more textile fabrics.

"A greater abundance of fabrics," Rieve wrote, "will almost automatically resolve the issue. Upgrading of garments will tend to stop and quality will return. Already, in the case of some types of children's underwear, high-priced substitutes introduced by new manufacturers have disappeared with the appearance of a competitive supply of regular merchandise."

Declaring that the industry needs 60,000 additional workers, the TWUA president told Senator Murray that this manpower dilemma can be solved by higher wages in the cotton textile industry. He quoted Price Administrator Chester Bowles, in a recent article in Collier's Magazine, as saying that the problem "is largely due to the fact that workers who left the textile mills for war plants have hesitated to return to low wages which are still general throughout the cotton textile industry."

Tomorrow's Citizens — By Rose H. Alschuler

WHAT HAS A NURSERY SCHOOL TO OFFER?

Nursery schools are not concerned with book learning, but they are concerned with developing happy well adjusted children with healthy bodies and staunch characters. Well trained nursery teachers give helpful advice to parents about the everyday problems of the everyday child. Music, stories, play with blocks and nature materials are daily experiences.

Copyright 1946, The CIO NEWS.

PNEUMONIA, KILLER, CAN BE STOPPED

By LILLIAN DE MUTH, M.D.
Member of the Council, the Physicians Forum

THE history of medicine affords few examples of progress as rapid and dramatic as that which has taken place in recent years with regard to the cure of pneumonia.

Eight or ten years ago, death claimed from 30 to 40 percent of those who fell ill with this disease. Today, with proper medical care, the proportion of deaths is only about 3 percent. In the Army, deaths have been reduced to 0.7 percent. This very low rate is partly due, of course, to the fact that soldiers are a select group; but the ready availability of good medical care in the Army is also a factor.

HOW VICTORY WAS WON

The serum treatment was the first great victory in the fight against pneumonia. This treatment came into general use in the middle and late 1930's, but it was expensive, and many people who needed it could not afford it. Subsequent use of the sulfa drugs and penicillin have rendered treatment simpler, cheaper, and more effective.

Pneumonia is still a costly disease, and far too many people who have it die because life-saving treatment is not available to them. Ten years ago, the average annual number of deaths from pneumonia, including influenza (which can usually be counted as a pneumonia death), was 132,000. By 1943, the number had fallen only to 90,000—not a sufficient decrease in view of the much more effective weapons we now have for coping with the disease.

Let us consider the sequence of events in a typical case of pneumonia. First of all, if the patient is the breadwinner, family income is cut off. Since careful medical and nursing attention are all-important in determining the outcome of the case, the patient should go to a hospital. If sulfa drugs are administered, their effects must be observed and checked by means of laboratory tests to protect the patient from possible harm. If penicillin is injected, a doctor or other trained person must do it. In a severe case oxygen or other forms of special and expensive treatment may be needed.

Should complications arise such as empyema, that is, pus within the chest cavity, the situation will require the services of a specialist or surgeon. After the cure a period of convalescence is necessary.

The cost to the patient may vary from $50—if he is lucky—to $500 or more, not counting the loss of wages. Consequently, unless a person accepts charity in a hospital ward, pneumonia usually means a financial catastrophe for the family.

Many communities are not equipped to give good treatment for pneumonia either on a pay or charity basis. The patient remains at home, the doctor looks in on him now and then, and the family does the best it can for him with its limited facilities. Under such circumstances, a severe or complicated case is much more likely to prove fatal than in a hospital.

I have heard some people say, "I don't have to worry if I get sick, because I have Blue Cross hospitalization insurance."

Blue Cross insurance is all right—as far as it goes. But it doesn't go very far. All it covers is the hospital bill. Only a small part of the population can afford to pay the $24 per family a year which this limited type of protection usually costs.

What is needed is a much more comprehensive kind of insurance—insurance which would cover all needed services and still be within the ability of the average person to pay. That is exactly what the new Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill (S. 1606) proposes.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

SNYDER AND SMALL ARE SABOTAGING OPA

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

THE bill to extend price control for another year after June 30 has been introduced and the House Banking and Currency Committee will start hearings the week of February 3.

That's very important news to every American housewife. President Truman made clear what is at stake in his State of the Union speech:

"The inflationary pressures on prices and rents, with relatively few exceptions, are now at an all-time peak. Unless the Price Control Act is renewed there will be no limit to which our price levels would soar. Our country would face national disaster."

Most Americans agree with Mr. Truman on the vital importance of price control. They are aroused to the urgency of the situation as never before.

They should know that passage of the bill to extend price and rent control is not the only job to be done. It is not even the most pressing. The first job is to oust the enemies of price control from top administration posts.

Take John D. Small, for instance, head of the Civilian Production Administration. He does not believe in holding the line. He wants a 10% increase in prices to consumers to stimulate production. He held a press conference the very day the price control extension bill was introduced to tell this to the public.

Reconversion Director John W. Snyder holds the same general views, though he has never been quite so frank about them. He decided last September to remove all federal controls on housing construction in order to stimulate production. Results were a real estate boom and failure to build homes under $8000 needed by our veterans.

It isn't hard to prove that price increases don't necessarily mean more production. There have been five price increases on lumber since 1941, prices are now up 75% and production has declined continuously. And yet Small, in his press conference pointed to lumber as an industry which must have a price increase to boost production.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES — MEMBERSHIP — EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS — ADVERTISING — LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman, New York, N. Y., 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig, Detroit, Mich., 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1725-41 W. North Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7818

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with acutal persons, living or dead.

JIM TRAILS HIS KID BROTHER TO DANDY'S BAR, HANGOUT OF THE TOWN'S MOST NOTORIOUS CRIMINAL ELEMENT -- TO LEARN THAT MICKEY HAS A RENDEZVOUS WITH PUG PERKINS -- CROOK AND PROFESSIONAL STRIKE-BREAKER! EAVES-DROPPING ON THEIR CONVERSATION. JIM IS STUNNED TO DISCOVER...

OKAY, KID, WIT' YOU LEADIN' US, DAT UNION'S GONNA BE SMASHED -- BUT GOOD!

THE VET LEADER.. IT... IT'S MICKEY!

WELL, THE BOY'S ASKED ME TO FIND OUT WHO WAS LEADING THIS UNION-SMASHING DRIVE, AND.. GUESS I'VE FOUND OUT... BUT, I.... I'LL HAVE TO THINK THIS THING THROUGH.

POOR GUY -- HE'S PASSED OUT.

DON'T WASTE NO SYMPATHY ON THAT STUMBLEBUM. GUYS LIKE HIM GET TANKED UP, AN' DEN DA WORLD IS THEIRS.

GUESS YOU'RE RIGHT, PUG -- BUT IT'S A TOUGH WORLD WHERE A GUY'S GOTTA PASS OUT BEFORE HE CAN FEEL GOOD.

SURE, IT'S A TOUGH WORLD -- BUT YA GOTTA LOOK OUT FOR NUMBER ONE! LIKE YOU -- ONCE WE BUST DAT UNION, YOU'LL BE RIDIN' HIGH -- YOU'LL BE TOP MAN IN DA SHOP, KID.

HOURS PASS SLOWLY FOR JIM,.. LEADEN PACED HOURS ... FILLED WITH PAIN AND INDECISION.

LOOK -- JIM! I'VE JUST JOINED THE UNION!

UNION NEWS

THAT'S THE GREATEST BLESSING IN MY LIFE, BOYS -- YOUR REAL FRIENDSHIP.

KEEP YA NOSE OUTTA MY AFFAIRS, JIM.

DAT'S RIGHT, KID. YA GOTTA LOOK OUT FOR NUMBER ONE!

SORRY, BUD. THE JOINT IS CLOSING. GUESS YOU'LL HAVE TO WALK THIS ONE OFF.

I'M NOT DRUNK, BARTENDER. JUST.. JUST TIRED.

AFTER HOURS OF WALKING...

GUESS IT'S ONLY HUMAN TO MAKE MISTAKES. AND MAYBE I'M MAKING ONE TOO. ...BUT I KNOW WHAT I'M GOING TO DO!

58

Produced by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

Copyright 1946 by the NAT'L CIO NEWS

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Stop The Case Bill

BULLETIN: By a better than two to one vote, the House this week gave a green light to the anti-labor Case bill (HR 5262), which outlaws strikes, sets fines, jail sentences for strikes "in violation of contract," imposes compulsory arbitration and in effect repeals the Wagner Act.

The vote was 258 to 114, with 152 Republicans and 106 Democrats voting for the bill and 16 Republicans and 96 Democrats voting against it.

The bill will now go on the House floor to be voted on as an amendment or substitute for the Truman anti-strike bill (HR 4908).

Next week's CIO News will carry the rollcall votes on the Case bill.

Meantime, rush demands to your two Senators to vote against the Case bill or anything resembling it when it comes before them.

And don't forget to include the Truman anti-strike bill (HR 4908, S 1661) in your demands for opposition to any and all anti-strike, anti-union legislation.

The following analysis, prepared by the CIO Legal Department, tells what the Case bill (HR 5262) is all about and why we must block it:

HR 5262 is a vindictive attack on the rights of labor and on the democratic rights of all the people.

It provides:

That for a period which may be as high as 35 days, a strike by a labor organization is illegal.

Any form of assistance to a strike is illegal.

At any time, not merely during the 35-day cooling-off period, picketing by so-called "force and violence" is made illegal.

Boycotts now recognized as legal in the states are condemned as illegal.

The hated labor injunction, ousted from the law after years of bitter struggle, is restored to full force and effect and the Norris-LaGuardia Act is repealed.

Workers engaged in the types of picketing condemned by the bill lose their rights under the Wagner Act and workers engaged in intimidation or violence in connection with a labor dispute or in connection with organizational activities are denied reinstatement and back pay under the Wagner Act.

Large groups not only of supervisory employes but also of clerical employes are denied the protection of the Wagner Act.

The federal courts are open not only for the purpose of injunction but for the purpose of assessing damages against labor organizations which violate contracts.

The grave evils which the bill presents are as follows:

It is a vicious and thoroughly undemocratic interference with the exercise of the right to strike.

Its prohibitions upon assistance to strikes during the cooling-off period will condemn free speech, free picketing, community action in sympathy with strikes and many forms of democratic and constitutionally protected activities.

The irresponsible attacks upon picketing under the pretext of preventing force are merely a device to invite the courts to destroy picketing as a form of protected concerted activity in American industrial relations.

All lawyers familiar with the field know that a court can find that all forms of picketing constitute force. Indeed, the widespread injunction abuses resulted from judicial expansion of the concept of force.

The bill revives the hated labor injunction ousted from the law by the Norris-LaGuardia Act after years of bitter struggle and makes of the federal courts a star-chamber for the repression of the liberties of American workers.

The bill is sharply onesided and is exclusively directed as a punitive expedition against labor and leaves untounched notorious employer misconduct in present-day labor relations.

The bill, for example, although it purports to deal with violence in labor disputes, says nothing about the use of tear gas by employers to break strikes, about the resort to terror by employers, about the notorious Mohawk Valley Formula, etc.

Although it purports to deal with the improper use of economic sanctions by labor organizations, it is strangely silent concerning the conspiracy of American industry to defy the government of the United States and its laws.

Similarly, the bill exposes labor organizations to the novel sanction of suits in the federal courts for breach of contract, but says nothing about the widespread flouting of War Labor Board directives by employers which today has resulted in the denial to workers of back pay awards of over $20 million.

The bill, in stripping not only supervisory employes but large groups of clerical employes of the protections of the Wagner Act, will encourage discrimination against employes who are entitled to the protection of the Wagner Act and will encourage these employes to strike in order to obtain those rights which this bill denies them.

The bill removes from the cognizance of local courts problems of violence and boycotts which are now adequately regulated by local law and substitutes for them a centralized federal Gestapo.

The bill also punishes employes for name-calling and minor scuffling on the picket line by denying them protections of the Wagner Act. The Wagner Act now, as interpreted by the National Labor Relations Board, contains adequate limitations on the rights of those strikers who engage in true violence.

The bill transforms the Wagner Act from one which protects the rights of workers into a weapon in the hands of employers to destroy labor organizations.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Case HR 5262	Imposes cooling-off, forced arbitration, fines, penalties for strikes, etc.	Rushed to House floor by GOP-poll-taxer gang in Rules Committee.	Wire Representative to defeat.
Bailey HR 5180	Repeals "carryback" section of tax law that gives industry refunds to guarantee profits at 1936-39 levels and better.	House Ways and Means Committee. Present tax law gives corporations ammunition to fight unions.	Urge early passage to save taxpayers billions, help unions win wage demands.
Norton-Ellender HR 4908 S 1661	Truman's bill to probibit strikes by cool-off and "fact finding."	Out of House Labor Committee. HR 5262 (see above) is substitute.	Tell Congressmen we oppose both Truman's and Case's bills.
FEPC S 101	Makes FEPC permanent U. S. agency.	Senate filibuster still on. 2/3rds cloture vote needed to gag the polltaxers.	Insist on Senate vote on merits of FEPC; no "deals" for quick burial.
65c wage S 1349 HR 3914	Ups present 40c wage minimum to 65 then 75c; extends coverage.	To Senate floor for early vote.	Urge Senators to vote full 65c and full coverage.
Polltax repeal HR 7	Allows Southern voters to get rid of Bilbos, Rankins and other vermin.	Passed House, now waiting Senate action. Filibuster expected.	Urge Senators to vote cloture; accept no compromise.

DROP HIM A LINE FROM THE PICKET LINE!

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Ask Action Vs. Corporations

Thirty-nine Representatives have signed the following statement opposing current "fact finding" and other anti-union legislation and calling for an "immediate investigation" of corporations like GM, U. S. Steel and others now defying the government and seeking to break CIO unions in their industries.

Look for your Representative's name in the list. If he hasn't signed, send him a copy of the statement and ask him if he agrees with it.

"The rejection by General Motors Corporation of the recommendations of the President's fact-finding board and the refusal of the United States Steel Corporation to accept the President's compromise settlement have precipitated the greatest industrial crisis in the history of our economy. The actions of these corporations indicate that fact-finding boards will not solve this crisis.

"The unions have accepted the compromise proposals and have charged that the refusal of these corporations is part of a concerted plan to destroy labor unions and endanger the welfare of the American people.

"To solve this crisis:

"We call upon General Motors and the United States Steel Corporation to accept the government's proposal for settlement of the disputes.

"We call upon the House Labor Committee to make an immediate investigation of the labor policies of these corporations and the whole field of labor management relations to determine the real causes underlying existing industrial strife.

"We call upon the House to reject any attempt to bring about reconsideration of the May-Arends Bill, and any similar anti-labor legislation.

"We call upon the House to defeat the fact-finding bill reported by the House Labor Committee."

Marcantonio, N. Y.; Rabin, N. Y.; Biemiller, Wis.; Kelley, Pa.; Powell, N. Y.; O'Toole, N. Y.; Celler, N. Y.; Eberharter, N. Y.; Torrens, N. Y.; Gordon, Ill.; Price, Ill.; Link, Ill.; Hook, Mich.; Geelan, Conn.; Sabath, Ill.; O'Brien, Ill.; Rogers, N. Y.; Bailey, W. Va.; Granahan, Pa.; Morgan, Pa.; Rooney, N. Y.; Rafiel, N. Y.; Dawson, Ill.; Havenner, Cal.; Welch, Cal.; Miller, Cal.; Outland, Cal.; Healy, Cal.; Douglas, Cal.; Patterson, Cal.; King, Cal.; Gallagher, Minn.; DeLacey, Wash.; Savage, Wash.; Coffee, Wash.; Lesinski, Mich.; Sadowski, Mich.; O'Brien, Mich.; Rabaut, Mich.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 7 | Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS | $1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA | 82 | February 11, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

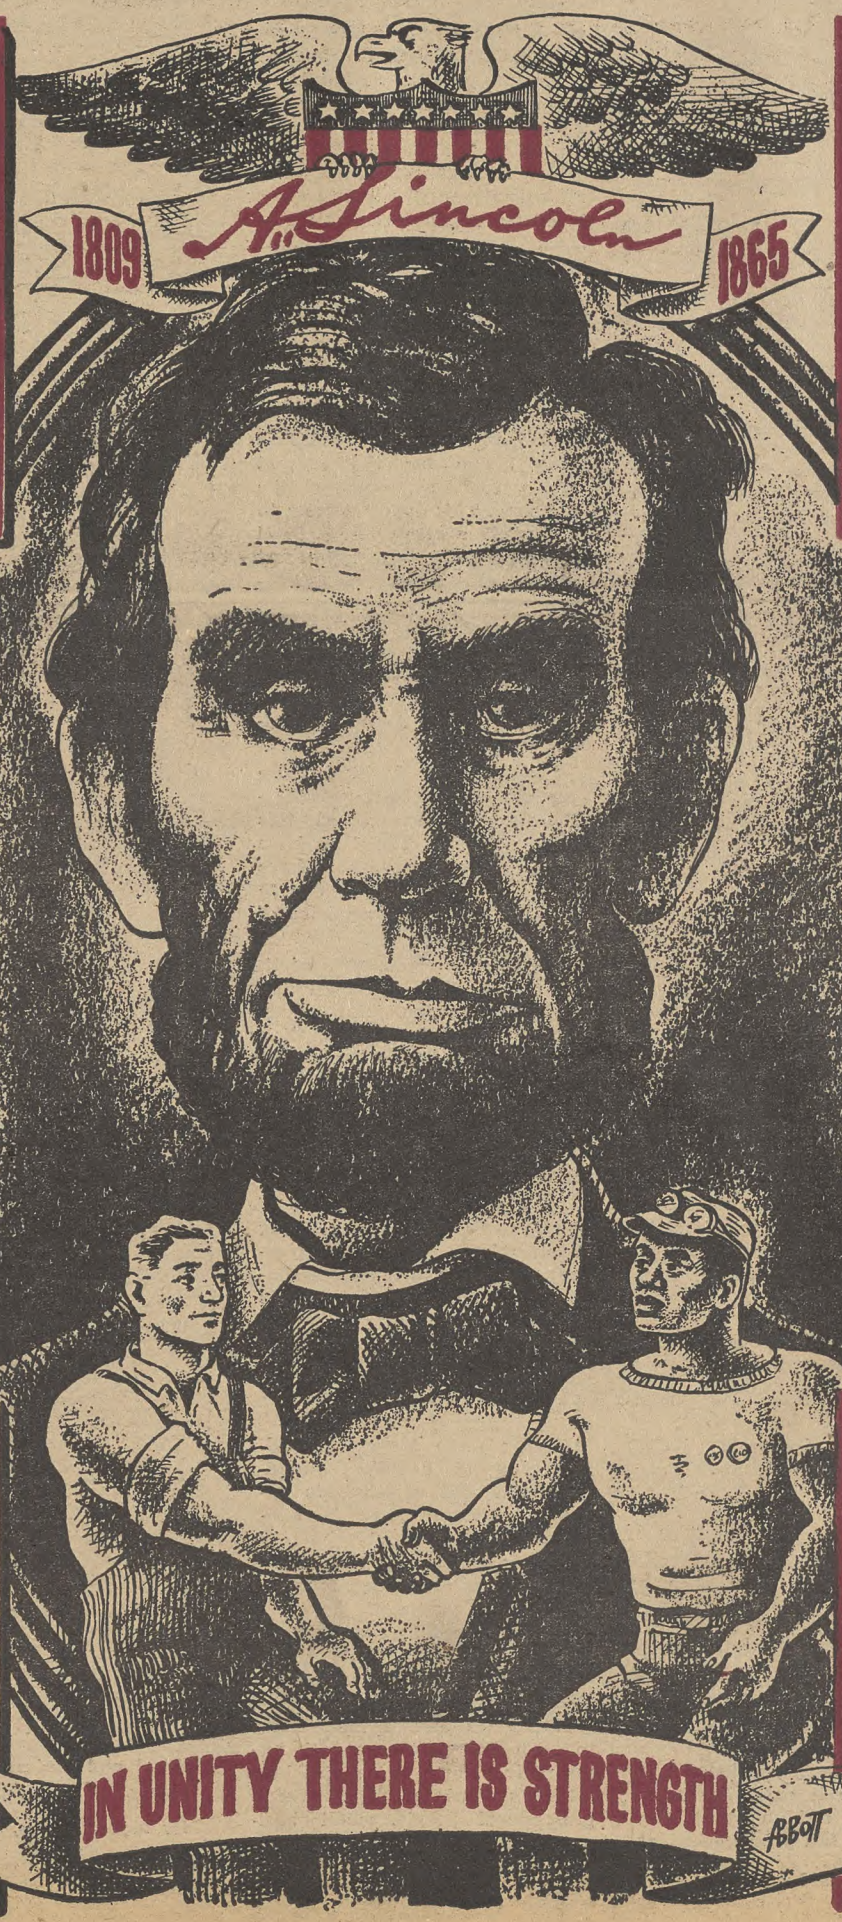
THE PEOPLE'S FRIEND

"The strongest bond of human sympathy, outside of the family relation, should be one uniting all working people, of all nations, and tongues, and kindreds."

Abraham Lincoln, 1864.

THE PEOPLE'S ENEMIES

"I wish there was some filibuster that I could inaugurate that would . . . destroy the so-called Southern Conference for Human Welfare . . . that has no other purpose . . . except to bring about social equality between the white and black races . . . "—Sen. Bilbo (D. Miss.), filibustering against the FEPC bill.



"True democracy makes no inquiry about the color of the skin, or place of nativity, or any other similar circumstances of condition. I regard, therefore, the exclusion of the colored people as a body as incompatible with true democratic principles."

Abraham Lincoln, 1842.

"The rule of the majority. The rule of votes. Majority to Hades . . . The rule that has brought more bloodshed and turmoil and cruelty on this earth than anything I know of. Of course, it is necessary to have it as a yardstick in order to do business, but let us not fool ourselves that majorities are always right."—Sen. Tydings (D. Md.), filibustering against FEPC bill.

"I am glad to see that a system of labor prevails under which laborers can strike when they want to, where they are not obliged to work under all circumstances, and are not tied down and obliged to labor whether you pay them or not. I like a system which lets a man quit when he wants to, and wish it might prevail elsewhere. One of the reasons why I am opposed to slavery is just here."

Abraham Lincoln, 1860.

"Unfortunately most of the big labor leaders are opposing what is known as the Case bill now under consideration. . . . The best friends of labor in the long run in this House are the ones who are considering the Case bill and other substitute bills which will be offered on the floor in an attempt to bring about industrial peace."—Rep. Vursell (R. Ill.), supporting the Case anti-strike bill.

CIO's Own Radio Shows EVERY SATURDAY

Two Full, Weekly 15-Minute Radio Programs, of and for CIO

1. Labor-USA. Dramatic shows. American Broadcasting Co. network. Saturdays, 6:45 to 7 P. M., EST.

2. Cross-Section—CIO. On-the-spot interviews of CIO people by William Downs, noted CBS commentator. Saturdays, 3:45 to 4 P. M., EST.

Live Listening!

INDUSTRY PLOT SEEN BY GUFFEY; HITS U.S. STEEL

A PLANNED "campaign on the part of the greatest and wealthiest corporations in America to hold up the American people for exorbitant price increases or to destroy American labor" was seen by Sen. Joseph F. Guffey (D., Pa.) in a speech this week sharply criticizing the U. S. Steel Corp. for its stubborn refusal to compromise with its striking workers. He called for a Congressional investigation.

Meanwhile, there was no official word from Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO United Steelworkers as to progress in settlement of the strike, involving nearly 800,000 workers, which has shut down the industry since Jan. 21.

The criticism of U. S. Steel's refusal to grant the 18½c an hour increases recommended by President Truman came from Senator Guffey during the filibuster by Southern Senators against passage of Fair Employment Practices legislation.

The Pennsylvanian, who has been a good friend of organized labor throughout his long period of service, charged that "the blame for the present strike rests squarely on the company. This does not seem to be merely a case of U. S. Steel setting a pattern and the rest of the industry following suit—but rather a planned campaign on the part of the greatest and wealthiest corporations in America to hold up the American people for exorbitant price increases, or to destroy American labor.

"I have grave doubt that the passage of fact-finding legislation would have solved this strike problem. The facts have been found—the workers have cooled off for far more than 30 days, without the compulsion of law.

"The proper committees of the House and Senate should look into this apparent joint activity on the part of large corporations and the monied interests and lay bare all the facts—not only as to industry's ability to pay higher wages, that has been demonstrated—but as to its program for America.

"I also hope that serious attention will be given to revising our tax laws so that the American people will not be subsidizing corporations in their efforts to break the organizations of their workers."

Meanwhile, at Pittsburgh U. S. Steel's Homestead plant, management obtained a temporary injunction limiting pickets to 10 to a gate, 10 feet apart, after an agreement regarding entrance of maintenance workers had broken down. Jones & Laughlin in Pittsburgh has asked for a similar injunction.

The Pennsylvania Supreme Court has agreed to hear union arguments against the Homestead injunction on Feb. 11. According to Lee Pressman, general counsel for CIO and the Steelworkers, the temporary injunction was granted without testimony and opportunity for examination of witnesses.

He described the injunction as "a serious departure from basic principles of law and fairness" and said that it is exactly the kind of evil which the Norris-LaGuardia Act and the Pennsylvania anti-injunction act were designed to prevent.

360 Dozen Eggs A Week to Strikers

"Your fight is our fight," farmers in the Federated Egg Producers Cooperated of Tom River, N. J., told CIO Auto Workers strikers this week, backing up their statement with a pledge to send strikers 360 dozen eggs a week.

"If your incomes are cut, our markets will be cut too, and if your unions are weakened, our co-ops will be weakened too," said the group, which is affiliated with the Natl. Farmers Union.

BRIGGS AND CHAMPION PACTS HIKE WAGES 18-26c AN HOUR

BRIGGS Mfg. Co. and Champion Spark Plug signed contracts with the CIO Auto Workers this week, bringing to five the automotive concerns that have agreed to increase wages 18c an hour or more. Meanwhile, the GM strike will be 12 weeks old Feb. 13.

Wages will be boosted 18½c an hour in the new contract with Briggs for approximately 12,000 workers in its six plants in Detroit. Like the new Chrysler pact, vacation pay at Briggs will be raised from $45 to $52.50 for workers with one year's seniority and from $90 to $104.80 for those with five years' seniority.

A few hours earlier a new contract was signed by UAW with Champion Spark Plug, granting wage boosts of 18 to 26c an hour for its 800 employes.

Thomas this week issued an analysis of the Chrysler contract which he said contains provisions which should make for better labor-management relations, including:

$32.50 per month increase by all salaried workers, seniority to veterans equivalent to their length of time in service after a 30-day probation period, reduction of probationary period of new employes from six months to 90 days, streamlined grievance procedure, and full recognition of the principle of arbitration by the company.

Thousands of dollars this week continued to pour into the offices of the Committee to Aid the Families of GM Strikers, as the following additions were made to the national committee: Henry R. Luce of Time, Life and Fortune; Capt. Harold E. Stassen, former Governor of Minnesota; Sens. Morse, Pepper and Glenn Taylor.

Flowing into the union's strike fund were voluntary assessments from members of Chrysler Local 490 and Ford Local 600.

CIO ASKS PAY TALKS

The CIO should have a chance to present suggestions about any new national wage-price policy before it finally is put into effect, CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week advised federal officials.

In a letter to OPA Administrator Bowles, OWMR Director Snyder and OES Director Collet, Murray said:

"There have been repeated newspaper reports to the effect that there is in the process of formulation a new national wage-price policy.

"Any such policy is of course of the utmost importance to the millions of members of the CIO.

"I do believe that this organization should be afforded the opportunity, and do hereby make such a request, to present its views or to make suggestions on this all-embracing problem before final and definitive action is taken."

MINISTERS BACK PAY FIGHT

THE wage demands of CIO unions are "fully justified" and "the whole American economy will prosper if the workers now on strike win their demands," said 23 Protestant ministers this week in a two-column ad published in the Chicago Sun.

The ad, sponsored by the Chicago Regional Action Committee of The Protestant, said:

"We are firmly convinced that prosperity can exist in America only if a high purchasing power and full employment at a living wage are maintained.

"To avoid deflation, unemployment and catastrophic depression, wages must be substantially increased."

Listing CIO unions that are on strike or are negotiating for wage increases, the ad said that their demands "are fully justified and must be met . . . "

"We support the demands of these unions," the ad continued, "because we believe their effort to keep wages abreast with rising living costs is in the best interests of white collar workers, professional people, small business men and the farmer."

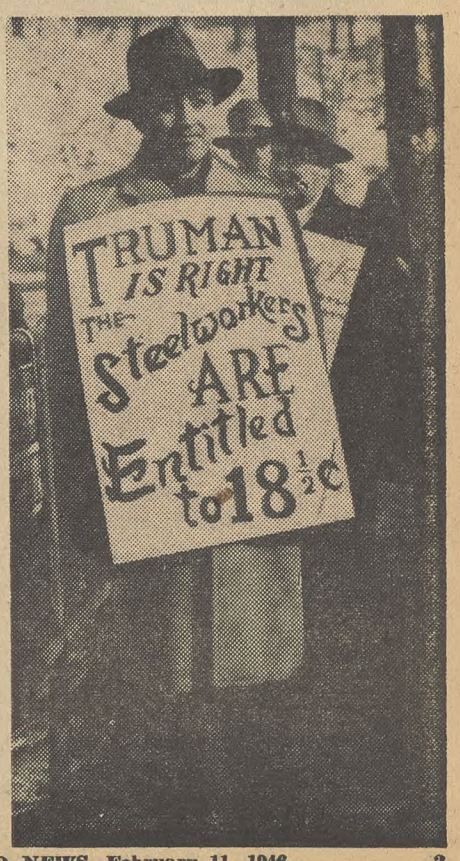
WHY RAISE BASIC PAY

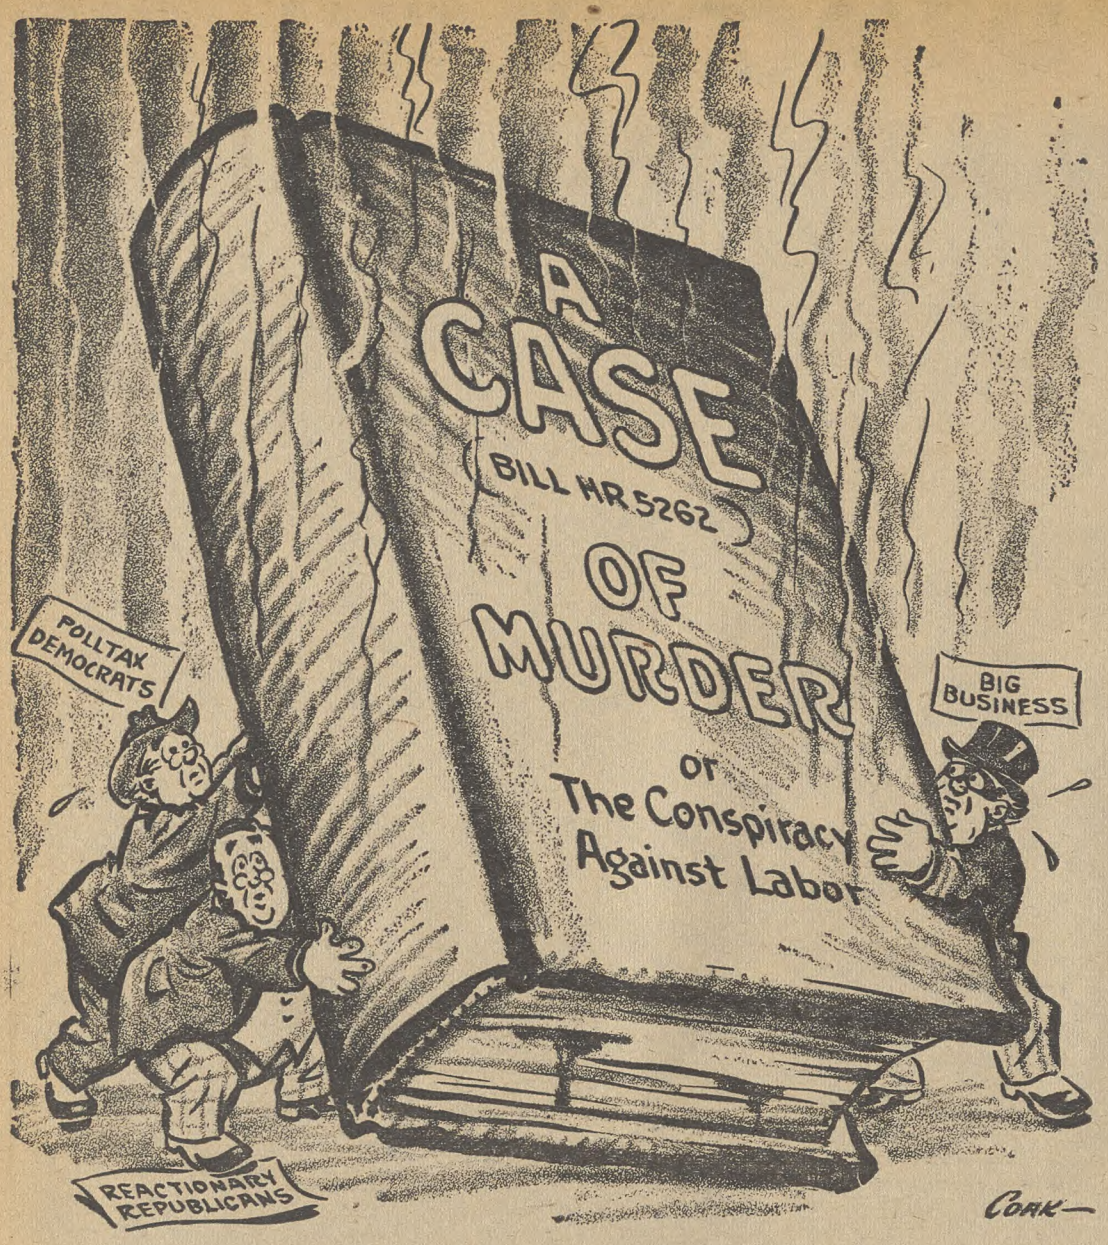
12. High Wages and the National Welfare.

Mass purchasing power is the key to national prosperity. If high levels of purchasing power are not maintained, we are headed for dwindling markets, cuts in production, unemployment and eventual depression. High wages are the key to mass purchasing power. That is why the welfare of wage earners, salaried employes, professional and business people, farmers, veterans and industry itself requires the immediate grant of substantial pay increases. By fighting for higher wages, the CIO serves the welfare of all America.

THE PEOPLE MARCH WITH CIO

Striking CIO workers are receiving unprecedented community support. Here's a sample in steel. (Top) Penn, Temple and Swarthmore students on the USA-CIO line at Baldwin Locomotive, Eddystone, Pa. (L., below) South Chicago Citizens' Committee representatives at Carnegie-Illinois. L. to r.: Attorney John P. Krall, Mrs. Ira Silbar, Paul J. Folind, United Church of South Chicago, Attorney Ira Silbar. (R., below) Braddock, Pa., borough officials picket U. S. Steel's Edgar Thompson Works. Four councilmen and three school board members on one shift! Clairton, Pa.'s, city council voted to borrow $50,000 for relief. Rankin, Pa., OK'd a similar plan. Carnegie and Homestead, Pa., held big community parades. Seattle AFL metal trades representatives pledged their backing. Pueblo, Colo., merchants bought a two-page ad to tell their community that they believe the "steelworkers are justified in asking for an increase in wages." These are but a few of many cases showing support for CIO's fight.





A 'BEST SMELLER'

The story of the Case bill reads like a cheap murder mystery—full of secret conniving and plotting with lots of obvious suspects.

Its passage by the House is a crime against labor and the people. It is a murderous assault on union rights and the workers' liberties.

The plot has been long in the hatching by a little clique of Congressional labor-baiters, who have consistently stooged for union-busting employers and who have watched for every possible opportunity to drive the knife into labor.

These polltax Democrats, like Congressmen Smith and Cox, can only succeed in their dirty work through an unholy alliance with reactionary Republicans—which alliance achieved its most notable anti-labor victory with the passage of the Case bill.

The introduction of the Norton-Ellender anti-strike "cooling-off" bill gave the conspirators their opportunity. A rule was slipped through to make the Case bill the only substitute that could be offered to the Truman proposal.

No hearings were ever held on the Case bill, and its terms were not even known outside the conspirators' own circle until it was introduced on the floor.

The House was asked to buy a "pig in a poke," and a majority voted promptly in a labor-baiting orgy to purchase the smelly package without further examination.

Now that the House has acted, it rests with the Senate to undo the grievous wrong done to American labor and to protect our democratic rights.

In contacting your Senators to stop the Case bill, remember that the tactics of the conspirators were to make the bill as vicious as possible in the hope that proclaimed friends of labor might concentrate simply on removing the most extreme features and thus let a "watered-down" version get passed.

The Case bill is rotten through and through and any amount of watering down would still leave it a vicious anti-union measure. Urge your Senators to vote down every feature of this and any other allegedly "milder" anti-labor legislation that may be introduced.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON CONGRESS

The members of CIO unions have made a magnificent showing of solidarity and determination in the current strikes.

Never before has there been such wholehearted unity and solid organization on such a widespread scale. Picket lines have held uniformly firm. There has been no weakening in the ranks, and all strikebreaking efforts have failed miserably.

As a result, the workers' wage demands have already been won in many instances and victory all along the line is in sight.

In one place only has there been an anti-labor breakthrough, and that is not on the picket line. It is in Congress, where the House has passed a bill designed to break future strikes, to destroy the unions, and thus to rob the workers of the wage and other advances won through union organization.

This should serve as the sharpest reminder to all union members that the fight to better their conditions and defend their organizations must be carried on politically as well as on the picket line.

So let's keep our eyes on Congress as well as on the picket line. Let's increase our political activity for the primaries and this year's elections, to mobilize support for those who fight labor's battles in Congress and to defeat those who betray the people's interests.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

MANY of the bobbysoxers who swoon at Van Johnson or Frank Sinatra deliberately work themselves into this condition, to "create an impression" or for similar reasons, according to some psychologists.

Great as is the charm of these young men, it is not sufficient to create a mass hysteria without considerable cooperation on the part of their devotees.

The Congressmen who voted the Case bill through the House lack the youth and good looks of the bobbysox brigade. But when it comes to self-induced hysteria they can beat any teen-ager.

★ ★ ★

There have been past periods when Congress might claim that in passing crazy spite legislation it was merely responding to outside hysteria—if by that it meant hysterical anti-labor propaganda campaigns of wide extent.

But today, no reliable opinion-indicators reveal any degree of anti-labor hysteria among the American people—and efforts to whip it up have been weak and futile.

On the contrary, there has been more widespread community support for labor's wage demands than at any time in the past.

This is not to say that there is not a considerable demand that "something be done" to get production rolling without delay.

But this demand comes from labor as much as from anyone else, and in no sense can it be called a demand to punish labor by destroying union rights and liberties, as the Case bill would do.

★ ★ ★

To justify his support of this union-busting legislation, Rep. Pace (polltaxer, Georgia) claimed he was afraid of "a terrible feeling of restlessness among farmers," who might "go on strike" if Congress did not pass a stiff anti-labor law.

But contrast his imagination with the actual results of an opinion poll conducted among farmers affiliated with the Ohio Farm Bureau.

This poll showed the farmers voting by 2,634 to 605 that the farmer's interest is more closely bound to that of the wage earner than to that of the employer; and a similarly large majority voting that "labor is justified in its efforts to keep its income from falling."

Most of the farmers (1,709 to 1,215) refused to believe that "the manufacturers are more right on the current wage issue than the unions."

It is true that a majority of the same farmers differed from labor on price questions and favored "government action" to prevent strikes.

But in view of the pro-labor attitudes expressed in other answers, it is inconceivable they would want a one-sided anti-union measure like the Case bill, designed to destroy the Wagner Act, to revive the hated anti-labor injunction, and to do away with many democratic rights.

★ ★ ★

One of the most encouraging aspects of the current industrial crisis is the relatively small degree of anti-labor violence and hysterical propaganda as compared with the past, and the actively friendly attitude of non-labor groups who realize their own prosperity depends on adequate labor purchasing power.

Even the daily press (employer-minded as most of it is) has shown a tendency to assign more blame to corporations like U. S. Steel and General Motors than to labor.

These results are due partly to intelligent CIO leadership and public relations, but chiefly to the movement's greatly increased strength and the impact its millions of members make on the community.

In the early days of the CIO, lying anti-labor propaganda might make some headway among people to whom the CIO was only a name. But today it falls flat in every community which numbers many CIO members among its best citizens and has for years seen at first-hand the constructive achievements of CIO unions.

In short, the anti-labor hysteria responsible for House passage of the Case bill would seem to be largely confined to Congress.

It is induced by the fear of Congressional tories that, if they can't cripple the unions and check their growing strength and prestige, they themselves will be swept out of office by increasingly effective progressive political activity.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 February 11, 1946 No. 7

CIO solidarity: Washington, D. C., CIO members picket offices of the Federal Communications Commission in protest against use of the mails to deliver Western Union telegrams in the N. Y. City area, where members of the American Communications Assn. are on strike. FCC promised two weeks ago to "investigate."

FORM ONE BIG CIO MARITIME UNION

By C. W. FOWLER

FIRST organizational steps to set up one big maritime union comprising all marine and waterfront workers were taken in Washington this week with the successful ending of a three-day conference of six CIO marine unions and one unaffiliated union.

The seven unions, representing over 200,000 workers already organized, voted unanimously on a program to set up "a national organization empowered to promote national agreements, complete the full organization of the industry, coordinate economic action, establish national research and political action departments, and publish a national newspaper for maritime workers."

Each of the unions—the American Communications Assn., Inland Boatmen, Longshoremen & Warehousemen, Marine Cooks & Stewards, Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders & Wipers (unaffiliated) and the Natl. Maritime Union—agreed to call a special convention May 6 to work out the program in detail.

"This unity of dock and seagoing workers, of licensed officers and unlicensed seamen of affiliated and independent unions on all coasts, the Great Lakes and the inland waterways, is being forged by a common recognition of the need for undivided strength if the welfare of maritime workers and the interests of the merchant marine are to be advanced," the conference said.

The May 6 convention, to be held in San Francisco, will decide on the name and structure of the new union. These decisions will be subject to ratification by the membership of the respective unions.

Speaking to newsmen at a press conference following the meeting, NMU Pres. Joseph Curran pointed out that the new union will aim at "organizing the unorganized and unifying those already in unions. This is the fundamental purpose of the new unity move, as it is of the national CIO to which six of our seven participating unions are affiliated."

Leaders of the conference also stressed the point that invitations will be issued to other maritime and waterfront workers' unions, both AFL and independent.

"Our plan is not to conduct any sort of raiding drive against any legitimate union," a spokesman said, "but to unite all maritime workers and to strengthen the unions that already exist. This is the objective of all worthwhile organizations, and of the national CIO itself."

To carry on the preliminary work before the May 6 convention, the conference elected the following "National Maritime Program and Action Committee:" Jack Winocur and Harry Morgan, for ACA; Hugh Bryson, for Marine Cooks & Stewards; Ralph Goldsmith, for Inland Boatmen; Samuel J. Hogan, for Marine Engineers; Harry Bridges, for ILWU; V. J. Malone, for Marine Firemen, and Joseph Curran for Natl. Maritime Union.

AT CIO MARITIME PARLEY: Presidents Joseph Curran (l.) of the Natl. Maritime Union and Harry Bridges of the Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union.

SPEED RELIEF AID FOR WIRE STRIKERS

ARRANGEMENTS were made this week by the CIO American Communications Assn. with N. Y. City authorities to speed up payment of relief to members of the union, one month on strike against Western Union in N. Y. City.

Tens of thousands of persons are expected to attend a mass rally of CIO members in N. Y. City at 5 p.m. Feb. 11, a block from the Western Union offices, in support of the ACA and other CIO strikers, an earlier plan to stop work for two hours having been abandoned.

ACA Pres. Joseph P. Selly said that strikers will be able to obtain rent money, food allowances and car fare within 10 to 48 hours after they have applied to the union's welfare committee for relief, instead of waiting one to three weeks. To put the plan in practice it was arranged to have a city welfare department representative at the union's headquarters.

At a strike rally last week-end it was voted also to grant $7 a week to needy strikers out of strike fund contributions, which aggregated $58,000.

A more spectacular but not important development occurred on Feb. 7, when a rumor that there would be mass picketing brought to Western Union offices a record strike detail of 750 policemen, who outnumbered a regular force of pickets 25-1.

LACK OF JOB SECURITY THREAT TO FAMILIES, SAYS MURRAY

SIXTY million jobs with guaranteed annual wages are needed to provide family security — the base of the American way of life, CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week told the third National Family Life Conference held in Washington, D. C., under the auspices of the Natl. Catholic Welfare Conference.

The lack of secure jobs at good wages causes postponement of "the time of marriage until later in life, with the result that when the parties do feel sufficiently secure to marry, one or both of them have acquired fixed and selfish habits that have made them less fit for marriage," Murray declared in his speech which was presented by Harry Read of the national CIO staff.

The CIO President struck out against those who advocate that both man and wife work to earn enough to keep them by saying that the proponents of this theory "fail completely to recognize that the full-time job of raising a family of children is in itself a great social contribution."

Murray quoted from the encyclical of Pope Pius XI on Christian Marriage which pointed out that when there is no secure economic base for family life, men "having nothing they fear to lose, are emboldened to hope for chance advantage from the upheaval of the state and established order."

CASE BILL IS GAS ON FLAMES—NEELY

PASSING the Case bill is like "pouring gasoline on a fire" in the opinion of Rep. Neely (D., W. Va.), in a speech made on the House floor against the bill this week.

"The average earnings of the steel workers in 1945, prior to the surrender of Japan, were $56.32 a week," Neely said. "Before the steel workers began their strike, their average weekly earnings, on the basis of the standard 40-hour week, were only $42.70.

"Not as a matter of choice, but as a matter of self-preservation, workers of GM, of the steel industry and others are now conducting strikes, and they are apparently determined to suffer unlimited hardships, if necessary, to obtain an equitable response to their demands.

"Mr. Ripley embellished one of his 'Believe It Or Not' cartoons with a picture of a man bearing a burden much larger than himself. Besides the picture these words appeared: 'In 503 A.D. a laborer's wages in Constantinople were frozen at 2c a day. The freeze lasted 1,400 years.'

"During this period, what a glorious Shangri-La Turkey would have been for Sewell Avery, who is one of the ring leaders of the whole wolf-pack of would-be destroyers of organized labor, and for President Wilson of GM and the tycoons of the steel industry who, because of their refusal to add a few pennies per hour to the wages of their employes, are wrecking the entire program of reconversion to peacetime production."

HAIL CIO'S BOND AID

A citation for service in behalf of the war finance program was awarded this week to CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey by Secretary of the Treasury Vinson.

In a letter to Murray accompanying the award, Vinson wrote:

"In reviewing the War Bond program of the Treasury I am deeply conscious of the fact that we could not have reached the high degree of success actually attained without the distinguished help which you have given us so generously and wholeheart[illegible]y."

Veterans of World War I and II lead the parade of CIO Auto Workers on strike at the General Motors plant at Kansas City on the way to file claims for state unemployment compensation at the U. S. Employment Service office. Congress and Kansas have denied them benefits.

FROM FRONT LINE TO PICKET LINE

THE CIO strikes for decent wages have solidified the workers and the veterans.

The veterans walk the picket lines, for they know that the boss-inspired stories they read in the newspapers about the $100-a-week jobs simply are not true.

They used to "sweat it out" in fox holes. Now they almost freeze on the picket lines along with their fellow steel workers, auto workers and electrical workers. They carry such signs as:

"We sweated it out for our country. We'll sweat it out for our families."

"We served on the front line, and now on the picket line."

"All together—Veterans and Labor."

The bosses simply missed the boat when they figured that they would use the veterans as strike breakers.

While still in uniform, the servicemen saw the mountains of supplies and ammunition, and they realized that they could not be produced by striking workers.

They returned to the steel mills to find that the basic labor wage is only 78c an hour, which does not go very far with rents sky high and the cost of food and clothing soaring.

Determined not to be "pushed around" in civies as many of them felt they were as GIs, they not only went out when their buddies in overalls left the production line, but became strike leaders, proudly marching on the picket lines in their uniforms, ready to fight it out with the cops if that became necessary, willingly doing any of the hundreds of tasks necessary to win the strike and decent wages.

The companies did not give up easily. GM, for example, during the early days of the strike, tried to use the veterans to start a back to work movement at Flint, but only a handful of ex-servicemen showed up, and the whole business blew out when the attempt was exposed by the Auto Workers.

The vets are finding that their faith in the unions is justified.

They heartily backed the efforts of the CIO, the Natl. Maritime Union and other CIO affiliates to use all available shipping to bring home all troops not needed in occupied countries.

They applauded the efforts of the CIO to liberalize the GI Bill of Rights.

Just this week in Pennsylvania, they saw the efforts of unions in their behalf bear fruit when the reactionary Republican administration gave them equality with other striking veterans in the payment of unemployment compensation.

Under the decision—which was announced while a test case started several weeks ago by the CIO Steelworkers and the CIO Veterans Committee was pending—veterans who established work credits before entering the services shall receive unemployment compensation. Veterans who had built up work credits since their discharge were getting compensation.

This decision is important because a striking veteran is unable to get unemployment compensation—"adjustable allowance"—under the GI Bill of Rights.

Veterans lead the picket line of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers at the General Motors plant at Philadelphia.

LABOR'S WORLD

ENDING a prolonged argument in which the U. S. delegation played the most reactionary role, the United Nations Organization this week decided to extend "advisory" recognition to the World Federation of Trade Unions.

The WFTU had demanded recognition on the UNO council with voting power, and was supported by the Soviet government delegation. Chief U. S. opposition came from Senator Connally, co-author of the Smith-Connally Act, who put on a full-dress, old-style stump oration against the idea of labor having a voice in world affairs.

Connally also saw fit to defend the war record of the AFL, although no one had attacked it. AFL leaders such as Robert J. Watt and William Green, who consistently attempt to smear the WFTU, did not seem embarrassed by Connally's joining their offensive against world labor.

Watt, whose AFL has broken its last ties with world labor, demanded equal representation with anything granted the WFTU. This was also supported by Connally. Republican Senator Vandenberg, who was active behind the scenes in opposing WFTU representation at the San Francisco UNO meeting last year, played the same role this time again, leaving the vocal part of the anti-labor job to Connally.

SUPPORT CIO STRIKES

Messages of support for CIO strikes continue to come into CIO headquarters from all parts of world labor. Louis Saillant, general secretary of the WFTU, cabled the following to President Murray this week:

"Please convey to the workers on strike in steel and other industries struggling for better living conditions fraternal greetings and solidarity from the WFTU and our best wishes for success."

Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the four-million-strong Latin American Confederation of Labor (CTAL), sent this cable to Murray:

"Latin-American labor is following with deepest interest CIO's gallant defense of the workers' rights in your great American nation. In line with the sincere, fraternal relationship linking Pan-American labor, the CTAL offers the CIO full solidarity and asks you to keep us continually informed of CIO's defense of the legitimate interests of U. S. labor so that all Latin-American trade unions will be enabled to orient their nations regarding CIO's struggle for better working conidtions."

And from Oscar Carerras, president of the Uruguyan Federation of Meat Workers:

"The cold storage workers of Uruguay, organized in the Autonomous Federation of Meat Workers, salute the valient struggle for justice of our United States comrades."

WORLD STARVATION

Millions of our allies—men, women and children—will die in Europe and Asia this year from hunger, unless we in America demand that our government take effective steps to send food to the liberated countries.

According to President Truman, wheat is the principal need. Americans are asked by Truman to forego white bread for a few months in order to help ease this crisis. That's all.

It was the present Administration that dropped rationing many months ago. Rationing stretches available supplies. Without it, people in shortage areas go hungry.

Incidentally, you need shed few tears for "starving Germans." They're still feeding better than our allies. GI's coming back from occupation duty all tell the same story—the Germans are being well fed now by the American and British authorities and they have years of fat from the rape of Europe to fall back on. It's our allies that are allowed to starve, not our enemies.

FACTS ON ARGENTINA

"The Argentine Regime," just published by the CIO Committee on Latin American Affairs, brings together the evidence and proof of the fascist nature of the Argentine government.

The book is a compilation of documents, news stories, verbatim excerpts from United Nations meetings, including Molotov's protest against admitting Argentina to the UNO, and similar material.

It was prepared as "facts and recommendations to the United Nations Organization" by Jacob S. Potofsky of the Latin American Committee and by George Michanowsky, the committee's executive secretary. It can be obtained free by writing Michanowsky at 15 Union Square, New York 3, N. Y.

From Allied Labor News in London comes a report that the book "shocked many who were uninformed about internal conditions in Argentina" at the UNO meeting there.

"One Scandinavian delegate told this correspondent that no information about Argentina was available in his country and that on his return he intended to publish sections of the dossiers," the ALN dispatch from London said.

"Other delegates agreed that the UNO should take notice of the Argentine situation, but said this was a matter for the great powers to raise, especially the U. S. and Britain." As a result, the issue will most likely not be raised in UNO.

CAN'T EAT PROMISES: Between turns on the picket line, George DePaul, lately of the Army Air Forces but now on strike with the CIO Electrical Radio & Machine Workers against Westinghouse at Bloomfield, N. J., drops into a strike kitchen for a cup of coffee. "We have to go on strike to get what we were promised overseas," DePaul says.

—Photo by Marion Hille

DO NOT CROSS PICKET LINES--ARMY ORDER

THE ARMY'S policy is not to act as a strike breaker, Col. Foster L. Furphy, director of the Industrial Personnel Division of the Army Service Forces, told the House Military Affairs Committee recently when called on to explain why the Army was respecting picket lines.

The Army had issued an order stopping Army trucks from crossing picket lines during the strike of the CIO Packinghouse Workers at Memphis, Tenn.

"The Army was not established as a domestic police force for indiscriminate use in local domestic affairs or to provide the means for the forcible attainment of the War Dept.'s civilian mission of procurement," Col. Furphy declared. "The Constitution was drafted to prevent just such interference."

Any cases where the Army crosses or otherwise interferes with a picket line should be reported immediately to the CIO Veterans Committee, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

Order Reported On Strikers In Uniform

The War Dept. is reported about to issue orders that it is lawful for veterans to wear their uniforms while picketing provided that the discharge emblem is visible, it was learned from a reliable source this week.

It is understood that the Navy, which recently arrested two men wearing Navy uniforms while picketing in Newark, N. J., sought to have the Army take similar action, but the War Dept. turned thumbs down on the request.

Any cases of men being arrested on picket duty while wearing uniforms bearing the discharge emblem should be reported immediately to the CIO Veterans Committee, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

BRADLEY DOING GOOD JOB—CIO

THE CIO Veterans Committee this week commended General Omar Bradley for the splendid job he has done thus far in revitalizing, streamlining, and liberalizing the Veterans Administration. The committee said:

"The CIO has observed his work carefully because almost one and one-half million of our membership have entered the armed forces during the war and are now in the process of demobilization. The way the Veterans Administration functions is of vital concern to each of them —as it is to all veterans.

"General Bradley has set aside musty rules and outworn procedures in a warm-hearted effort to serve the former serviceman in the most sympathetic and expeditious manner possible to one who has had to endure the irksome and onerous delays of the past, General Bradley's achievements are most gratifying.

"Of course, in the process he has stepped on many toes, including some of influential and important people. But we do not believe that the vested interests of these few individuals or of a single organization should be a bar to the greater welfare of veterans as a whole.

"The CIO Veterans Committee supports General Bradley, and wishes him well in the great work to which he has dedicated himself."

SUPER SENORITY NAILED DOWN

EXAMINATION of the decision of Judge Lederle in Federal District Court, Detroit, shows that Selective Service Director Hershey's "super seniority" theory should be decently interred.

Judge Lederle ruled that even during the year that an employe is guaranteed employment under the Selective Service Act following his discharge he could not call on the "super seniority" theory to prevent his discharge or lay-off under the seniority clauses of a union contract.

"A veteran is re-hired in accordance with his seniority, and continues to work in accordance with his seniority," the CIO Veterans Committee pointed out in interpreting Judge Lederle's ruling. "Seniority under union contract is the controlling factor, and if operations are curtailed the veteran may be laid off in line of seniority just as any other worker."

A few days before the issuance of Judge Lederle's decision, Federal Judge Briggle of the Southern District of Illinois had ruled a veteran erred in claiming that a company had to re-hire him even if it meant discharging a man with greater seniority.

Copies of Judge Lederle's decision may be obtained from the CIO Veterans Committee, 718 Jackson Place, NW, Washington 6, D. C.

D. C. AVC ASKS GI BILL CHANGE

The Washington, D. C., chapter of the American Veterans Committee this week asked Congress to amend the GI Bill of Rights to provide that striking veterans be paid unemployment compensation —"readjustment allowances."

The present law states that unemployed veterans be paid $20 a week for 52 weeks, but bars the benefits to strikers, and for several weeks the CIO Legislative Dept. and the CIO Veterans Committee have been seeking a change.

Showing its alertness to what is happening on the labor front, the chapter at a meeting attended by 300 members, went on record as asking Congress to amend the "carry back" tax law, to prevent corporations receiving tax refunds from the government while their workers are on strike.

The chapter has opened a campaign to raise $1000 to aid families of GM strikers, $230 being collected at the meeting.

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Reg. Dir. G. Geo. DeNucci, Columbus, reports: National Supply Co., Logan, Ohio, USA-CIO 17, against 13. USA Rep. Al Marsh was in charge.

Fullerton Fulton, CIO Reg. Dir., Minnesota, advises: Superior Metal Products Corporation plant, St. Paul, USA-CIO 100, AFL 58. The AFL had previously held contracts here for seven years.

Powers Hapgood, CIO Reg. Dir., Indianapolis, reports: Stewart-Warner plant, Indianapolis, USA-CIO, 410, against 139. USA Dist. Dir. James Robb was in charge.

Irwin L. DeShetler, CIO Reg. Dir., Kansas City, Mo., reports: Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Topeka, Kansas, CIO Rubber Workers 351, AFL 57. The campaign was conducted by Intl. Reps. URWA Ernest Payne and Roy Reasoner, assisted by CIO Regional Office and staff and members of the CIO Packinghouse Workers.

W. A. Copeland, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Memphis, Tenn., reports: Cudahy Branch, CIO Packinghouse Workers 36, AFL 1. UPWA Rep. G. E. Boone was in charge.

E. L. Sandefur, CIO Reg. Dir., Carolinas, announces: At Tower Hosiery Mill, Burlington, N. C., AFHW-CIO won by 70%. Work was under direction of Regional Director John McCoy. Johnson Cotton Co., Wilmington, N. C., IUMSWA-CIO 44, no union 0; Acme Fertilizer Co., IUMSWA-CIO 55, no union 13. IUMSWA Reps. Elijah Jackson and B. E. Davis were in charge. Cozier Wood Package Co., Cheraw, S. C., CIO Furniture Workers 127, no union 20.

* * *

Morris Muster, Intl. Pres. Un. Furniture Workers, reports: West Branch Novelty Works, Milton, Pa., CIO 49, no union 33; Tell City Desk Co., Tell City, Ind., CIO 54, no union 35; Tell City Furn. Co., Tell City, Ind., CIO 189, no union 46; Jasper Novelty Co., Jasper, Ind., CIO 26, no union 14.

James Ritchie, CIO Reg. Dir., St. Louis, Mo., reports: Mines Equipment Co., St. Louis, UERMWA-CIO 51, against 8; Landis Machine Co., St. Louis, USA-CIO 119, against 112.

CIO Reg. Dir. Ewald Sandner, Newark, N. J., reports bargaining rights won at Maas & Waldstein, Newark, N. J., by card check involving 60 employes; Manufacturers Chemical Co., Berkeley Heights, N. J., by card check involving 45 employes; Essex Electronics Co., Berkeley Heights, N. J., by card check involving 85 employes; Montrose Chemical Co., Newark, N. J., by card check involving 45 employes. UGCCWA Reps. William Ross, Jerry Mullica and David Elliot had charge of these campaigns.

CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Bender, Maryland, reports: Central Chemical Co., Hagerstown, Md., CIO 67, against 6. CIO Field Rep. Robert Brylke was in charge.

Robert C. Edwards, director, Organizing Committee, PJNWA-CIO, reports CIO won recognition at the following plants: Jewel Crest Co., New York, N. Y., involving 35 employes; Enel Company, New York, N. Y., involving 55 employes; organized by the New York Organizing Staff under the direction of Asst. Org. Dir. L. T. Koletka.

* * *

The CIO Utility Workers Union was successful in concluding an agreement with the Ohio Edison Co. at Akron, Ohio, providing for 15c an hour across-the-board increase, plus approximately 3c per hour covering the pay for six holidays. The same agreement applies also to the Dayton Power & Light Co. in respect to the 15c an hour across-the-board increase. The workers here already enjoy six paid holidays. The Ohio Power Co. also agreed to 15c an hour across-the-board, in addition to back pay amounting to a considrable sum and six paid holidays. Congratulations to the UWUA International Officers and all participating in these fine achievements.

CIO NEWS IN BRIEF

Rail Union Asks Poll

A petition for a second election among some 45,000 non-operating employes in four craft groups in the Maintenance of Equipment Dept. of the Pennsylvania Railroad has been filed with the U. S. Railway Mediation Board, announces Director A. B. Martin of the CIO United Railroad Workers.

In an election held on the PRR system last Sept. the CIO union won three crafts—boilermakers, molders and powerhouse employes, and railway shop laborers. The Brotherhood of Shop Craft Employes, so-called independent union, charged by the CIO union with being company-dominated, carried five crafts in the election, in most cases by narrow margins.

On the basis of the thousands of new members signed up since the election, including many who formerly voted for the Brotherhood, but now wish to change their affiliation, the CIO Railroad union has petitioned for another election. Director Martin said he was confident the next election would bring all the crafts into the CIO.

Erwin Strike

Representatives of the CIO Textile Workers Union and the management of the Erwin chain of mills in North Carolina conferred this week in Washington with U. S. Conciliation Service officials on settlement of the strike which has kept three of the company's mills employing 4,500 workers, closed down since last October.

The joint union-management conference called by Government conciliators has been sought by the union for many weeks. Results of the conference had not been announced at press time.

Scabs trying to break through a CIO picket line at the strike-bound plant of the American Tobacco Co. in Philadelphia meet some opposition from members of the CIO Food, Tobacco & Allied Workers. The strike against American Tobacco plants in Philadelphia, Trenton, N. J., and Charleston, S. C., started last Oct. to back up the union's demands for a 25c hourly increase, a 65c minimum and a no-discrimination clause in the contract.

TOBACCO STRIKERS ASK LIVING WAGE

POLICE violence, back-to-work committees and attempts to divide the three striking locals, all have failed to break the four-month-old strike of the CIO Food, Tobacco & Allied Workers against plants of the American Tobacco Co. in Philadelphia, Trenton, N. J., and Charleston, S. C.

The union workers are holding firm in their struggle to win their demands for a 25c hourly pay increase, a 65c minimum, and a no-discrimination clause in the contract.

The union's joint strike committee turned down an offer made by the U. S. Conciliation Service for a conference between the company and the Philadelphia strikers, voting unanimously to hold out until the concern agreed to meet with committees of Trenton, Philadelphia and Charleston strikers together.

Strikers are receiving strong support from CIO members throughout the country in their campaign to have Lucky Strike and Pall Mall cigarettes and other American Tobacco products put on the unfair list.

Members of the Natl. Maritime Union in Charleston have thrown their full support behind the 1,200 striking members of FTA Local 15, 99% of whom are women, 900 of them Negroes and 300 whites.

An attempt by local police to stop the NMU members who joined the picket lines from singing and talking was challenged as a violation of civil liberties. Anthony Lucio, NMU port agent, said the case would be taken to court and an injunction sought to prevent police from interfering with such peaceable practices.

One of the pickets aiding the tobacco strikers was Navy Lt. Richard J. Wethemer, just returned from duty in the Pacific. His father is a big stockholder in American Tobacco. Lt. Wethemer said he was picketing because the workers didn't get enough to support their families.

Charges against Pres. Reuel Stanfield of the striking Charleston FTA local, who was arrested during a fracas on the picket line, provoked by the strike-breaking activities of the police, were later dropped, following protests sent to the mayor and police chief from all over the country.

IWA's New Officers

The CIO Woodworkers Union announces that its new officers elected by referendum vote are: Pres. James E. Fadling; First Vice-Pres. Karley Larsen; Second Vice-Pres. William Botkin; Sec. J. E. Laux, and Intl. Trustee Jack Greenall.

Fadling, former IWA 1st vice-president, was elected without opposition to succeed the late Worth Lowery, who died in office. 1st Vice-Pres. Claude Ballard filled Lowery's post until election of Fadling.

MEAT PANEL RECOMMENDS 16c AN HOUR INCREASE

A 16c an hour general pay increase for some 90,000 packinghouse workers employed by the five major meatpackers was recommended this week by the government fact-finding panel appointed by Pres. Truman to inquire into the current wage dispute.

The CIO Packinghouse Workers, whose members make up the great part of the workers involved in the panel's decision, will take up the question of acceptance or rejection of the wage recomemndation at a wage policy conference to be held in Chicago this coming week. The union had demanded a 25c increase, 17½c immediately and the balance to be negotiated later.

The panel recommended that 5c of the 16c increase be met by the industry without a price increase, with the remaining 11c to be paid through a price increase or subsidy.

Companies covered by the decision are Armour, Swift, Cudahy, Morrell and Wilson, whose plants were seized by the Government Jan. 26, following a strike which started Jan. 16. The strikers returned to work after the seizure order, under which Sec. of Agriculture Anderson was delegated to take over operation of the plants.

Anderson was requested by the panel promptly to ask the National Wage Stabilization Board to approve the 16c increase. "We wish to make plain that we have only authority to recommend the above-mentioned wage increase of 16c per hour," the panel stated, "and that such increase can only be authorized by the wage stabilization authorities."

The 16c wage raise recommended would increase total costs a little less than 2%, the panel reported, with the portion which the packers are expected to absorb amounting to slightly more than 1% of the sales dollar.

Members of the panel are Edwin E. Witt, chairman; Clark Kerr and Raymond W. Starr.

Full time on CIO strikers' problems is the schedule that the Chicago CIO Community Services Committee is carrying. Discussing machinery for speeding aid are, l. to r.: Kenneth Kramer, CSC regional director; Ed Miller, chief counsellor, UAW Local 719, and Myrna Siegendorf, CIO liaison with the Council of Social Agencies.

SO THAT STRIKERS WON'T GO HUNGRY

BEHIND the lines of pickets, behind the strike committees, the local officers, the picket captains, stand the families of the CIO workers.

Supporting their men and women in the fight for industrial democracy, they stand by them through the thin times of no pay checks, no money for rent, food or coal. CIO unions step into the gap by securing all available assistance for their members. Two sources of assistance are the public and private agencies to whose services every citizen has a right.

Through the program of the National CIO Community Services Committee, local and city CSCs are working with public and private agencies for quick and effective aid to all in need . . . regardless of the cause.

Aided and advised by regional directors of CIO-CSC, special techniques for handling the great mass of problems arising in troubled times are worked out by the CSCs and the welfare agencies. Every effort is made to bring speedy and effective aid in solving problems of rent, food, installment payments, doctors' and hospital bills. In troubled times, red tape must be cut and delays avoided wherever possible.

CIO members gave for welfare and relief during the war years. Now, when many of them need assistance, the CIO-CSC program helps make available community resources to meet their need.

Rent payments are a bugaboo for families of strikers like this member of Local 664, CIO Auto Workers, at Tarrytown, N. Y. Two members of the local's welfare committee help to arrange for public aid.

HOUSE VOTE ON CASE BILL

HERE is the vote on the worst anti-union bill in Congressional history—the Case bill (HR 5262) that passed the House by 258 to 155 on Feb. 7.

The bill imposes cooling-off periods, compulsory arbitration, and sets heavy fines and severe jail sentences for strikers and strike sympathizers. It prohibits strikers from trying to secure public support for their strikes. It deprives unions and workers of the protection of the Wagner Act.

In short, the bill is an attempt to impose the methods of the Nazi German Labor Front on the workers of this country. It was voted by the House in an atmosphere of lynch-hatred against unions, incited by the Republicans and the Southern polltax Democrats.

Study the voting record carefully. Keep it by you during the election campaign. Take it out and give it a good, long look early in the morning of next November 5, just before you go into your polling booth.

The bill now goes to the Senate. Wire your Senators to vote against HR 5262, no matter how amended, and against S 1661, President Truman's anti-strike bill.

"R" indicates a right vote, against HR 5262. "W" indicates a wrong vote, for HR 5262. "NV" means that the Representative did not vote.

ALABAMA

Boykin (D)	W
Grant (D)	W
Andrews (D)	W
Hobbs (D)	W
Rains (D)	W
Jarman (D)	W
Manasco (D)	W
Sparkman (D)	W
Patrick (D)	R

ARIZONA

Harless (D)	R
Murdock (D)	R

ARKANSAS

Gathings (D)	W
Mills (D)	W
Trimble (D)	W
Cravens (D)	W
Hays (D)	W
Norrell (D)	W
Harris, Oren (D)	R

CALIFORNIA

Lea (D)	W
Engle (D)	R
Johnson, Leroy (R)	R
Havenner (D)	R
Welch (R)	NV
Miller (D)	R
Tolan (D)	R
Anderson (R)	W
Gearhart (R)	W
Elliott (D)	R
Outland (D)	R
Voorhis (D)	R
Healy (D)	R
Douglas (D)	R
McDonough (R)	R
Patterson (D)	R
King (D)	NV
Doyle (D)	R
Holifield (D)	R
Hinshaw (R)	W
Sheppard (D)	R
Phillips (R)	W
Izac (D)	R

COLORADO

Gillespie (R)	W
Hill (R)	W
Chenoweth (R)	R
Rockwell (R)	W

CONNECTICUT

Ryter (D)	R
Kopplemann (D)	R
Woodhouse (D)	R
Geelan (D)	R
Luce (R)	R
Talbot (R)	W

DELAWARE

Traynor (D)	R

FLORIDA

Peterson, J. Hardin (D)	W
Price (D)	W
Sikes (D)	W
Cannon, Pat (D)	NV
Hendricks (D)	W
Rogers (D)	W

GEORGIA

Peterson, Hugh (D)	W
Cox (D)	W
Pace (D)	W
Camp (D)	W
Vinson (D)	W
Tarver (D)	W
Gibson (D)	W
Wood (D)	W
Brown (D)	W

IDAHO

White (D)	R
Dworshak (R)	W

ILLINOIS

Douglas (D)	R
Dawson (D)	R
Rowan (D)	R
Kelly (D)	R
Gorski (D)	R
Sabath (D)	R
O'Brien (D)	R
Link (D)	R
Gordon (D)	R
Resa (D)	R
Church (R)	W
Reed, Chauncey W. (R)	W
Mason (R)	W
Allen (R)	W
Johnson, Anton J. (R)	NV
Chiperfield (R)	W
Dirksen (R)	W

ILLINOIS—Continued

Arends (R)	W
Sumner (R)	W
McMillen (R)	W
Simpson, Sid (R)	W
Howell (R)	R
Price (D)	R
Vursell (R)	W
Clippinger (R)	W
Bishop (R)	R

INDIANA

Madden (D)	R
Halleck (R)	W
Grant (R)	W
Gillie (R)	W
Harness (R)	W
Johnson, Noble J. (R)	W
Landis (R)	W
LaFollette (R)	R
Wilson (R)	NV
Springer (R)	W
Ludlow (D)	R

IOWA

Martin, Thomas E. (R)	W
Talle (R)	W
Gwynne (R)	W
LeCompte (R)	W
Cunningham (R)	W
Dolliver (R)	W
Jensen (R)	W
Hoeven (R)	W

KANSAS

Cole (R)	W
Scrivner (R)	W
Winter (R)	W
Rees (R)	W
Hope (R)	W
Carlson (R)	W

KENTUCKY

Gregory (D)	W
Clements (D)	R
O'Neal (D)	R
Chelf (D)	W
Spence (D)	R
Chapman (D)	W
May (D)	W
Bates (D)	R
Robsion (R)	W

LOUISIANA

Hebert (D)	W
Maloney (D)	W
Domengeaux (D)	W
Brooks (D)	W
McKenzie (D)	W
Morrison (D)	R
Larcade (D)	R
Allen (D)	W

MAINE

Hale (R)	W
Smith, Margaret Chase (R)	R
Fellows (R)	W

MARYLAND

Roe (D)	W
Baldwin (D)	W
D'Alesandro (D)	R
Fallon (D)	W
Sasscer (D)	W
Beall (R)	R

MASSACHUSETTS

Heselton (R)	W
Clason (R)	W
Philbin (D)	R
Holmes, Pehr G. (R)	W
Rogers, Edith Nourse (R)	W
Bates (R)	W
Lane (D)	R
Goodwin (R)	W
Gifford (R)	W
Herter (R)	W
Curley (D)	NV
McCormack (D)	R
Wigglesworth (R)	W
Martin, Joseph W. (R)	W

MICHIGAN

Sadowski (D)	R
Michener (R)	W
Shafer (R)	W
Hoffman (R)	R
Jonkman (R)	W
Blackney (R)	W
Wolcott (R)	W
Crawford (R)	W
Engel (R)	R
Woodruff (R)	W
Bradley (R)	NV
Hook (D)	R
O'Brien (D)	R
Rabaut (D)	R
Dingell (D)	NV
Lesinski (D)	R
Dondero (R)	W

MINNESOTA

Andresen, August H. (R)	W
O'Hara (R)	W
Gallagher (D)	R
Starkey (D)	R
Judd (R)	W
Knutson (R)	NV
Andersen (R)	W
Pittenger (R)	R
Hagen (R)	R

MISSISSIPPI

Rankin (D)	W
Whitten (D)	W
Whittington (D)	W
Abernethy (D)	W
Winstead (D)	W
Colmer (D)	W
McGehee (D)	W

MISSOURI

Arnold (R)	NV
Schwabe (R)	W
Cole, William C. (R)	R
Bell (D)	R
Slaughter (D)	W
Bennett (R)	W
Short (R)	W
Carnahan (D)	R
Cannon, Clarence (D)	R
Zimmerman (D)	W
Sullivan (D)	R
Ploeser (R)	W
Cochran (D)	R

MONTANA

Mansfield, Mike (D)	R
O'Ewart (R)	R

NEBRASKA

Curtis (R)	W
Buffett (R)	W
Stefan (R)	W
Miller, A. L. (R)	W

NEVADA

Bunker (D)	R

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Merrow (R)	W
Adams (R)	W

NEW JERSEY

Wolverton (R)	R
Hand (R)	W
Auchincloss (R)	W
Mathews (R)	W
Eaton (R)	W
Case (R)	R
Thomas, J. Parnell (R)	W
Canfield (R)	R
Towe (R)	W
Hartley (R)	W
Sundstrom (R)	W
Kean (R)	W
Norton (D)	NV
Hart (D)	R

NEW MEXICO

Fernandez (D)	W

NEW YORK

Sharp (R)	W
Hall, Edwin (R)	R
Latham (R)	R
Barry (D)	R
Roe (D)	R
Delaney, James (D)	R
Delaney, John, (D)	R
Pfeifer (D)	R
Keogh (D)	R
Somers (D)	R
Heffernan (D)	R
Rooney (D)	R
O'Toole (D)	R
Rayfiel (D)	R
Celler (D)	R
Buck (R)	W
Baldwin (R)	R
Marcantonio (ALP)	R
Bloom (D)	NV
Torrens (D)	R
Powell (D)	R
Lynch (D)	R
Rabin (D)	R
Buckley (D)	R
Quinn (D)	R
Gwinn (R)	W
Gamble (R)	W
Bennet (D)	NV
LeFevre (R)	W
Kearney (R)	R
Byrne (D)	R
Taylor (R)	W
Kilburn (R)	W
Fuller (R)	W
Hancock (R)	W
Hall, Leonard (R)	W
Taber (R)	W
Cole, W. Sterling (R)	W
Rogers (D)	R
Wadsworth (R)	W
Andrews (R)	W
Elsaesser (R)	R
Butler (R)	R
Reed, Daniel A. (R)	NV

NORTH CAROLINA

Bonner (D)	W
Kerr (D)	W
Barden (D)	W
Cooley (D)	W
Folger (D)	W
Durham (D)	W
Clark (D)	W
Burgin (D)	W
Doughton (D)	W
Ervin (D)	W
Bulwinkle (D)	W
Weaver (D)	W

NORTH DAKOTA

Lemke (R)	R
Robertson (R)	W

OHIO

Bender (R)	R
Elston (R)	W
Hess (R)	W
Gardner (D)	W
Jones (R)	R
Clevenger (R)	W
McCowen (R)	W
Brown (R)	W
Smith, Frederick (R)	W
Ramey (R)	W
Jenkins (R)	W
Brehm (R)	W
Vorys (R)	W
Weichel (R)	W
Huber (D)	W
Griffiths (R)	W
Thom (D)	R

OHIO—Continued

McGregor (R)	W
Lewis (R)	R
Kirwin (D)	R
Feighan (D)	R
Crosser (D)	NV
Bolton (R)	W

OKLAHOMA

Schwabe (R)	W
Stigler (D)	W
Stewart (D)	W
Boren (D)	W
Monroney (D)	W
Johnson (D)	W
Wickersham (D)	W

OREGON

Norblad (R)	W
Stockman (R)	W
Angell (R)	R
Ellsworth (R)	W

PENNSYLVANIA

Barrett (D)	R
Granahan (D)	R
Bradley (D)	R
Sheridan (D)	R
Green (D)	R
McGlinchey (D)	R
Wolfenden (R)	W
Gerlach (R)	W
Kinzer (R)	W
Murphy (D)	R
Flood (D)	R
Fenton (R)	R
Hoch (D)	R
Gillette (R)	W
Rich (R)	W
McConnell (R)	W
Simpson, Richard M. (R)	W
Kunkel (R)	R
Gavin (R)	W
Walter (D)	R
Gross (R)	W
Brumbaugh (R)	W
Snyder (D)	R
Morgan (D)	R
Graham (R)	W
Tibbott (R)	W
Kelley (D)	R
Rodgers (R)	W
Campbell (R)	W
Corbett (R)	R
Fulton (R)	NV
Eberharter (D)	R

RHODE ISLAND

Forand (D)	R
Fogarty (D)	R

SOUTH CAROLINA

Rivers (D)	W
Riley (D)	W
Hare (D)	W
Bryson (D)	W
Richards (D)	W
McMillan (D)	W

SOUTH DAKOTA

Mundt (R)	W
Case (R)	W

TENNESSEE

Reece (R)	W
Jennings (R)	W
Kefauver (D)	R
Gore (D)	W
Earthman (D)	W
Priest (D)	W
Courtney (D)	W
Murray (D)	W
Cooper (D)	W
Davis (D)	R

TEXAS

Patman (D)	W
Combs (D)	R
Beckworth (D)	W
Rayburn (D)	SPKR.
Sumners (D)	W
Johnson, Luther (D)	W
Pickett (D)	W
Thomas, Albert (D)	R
Mansfield, Joseph J. (D)	W
Johnson, Lyndon B. (D)	W
Poage (D)	W
Lanham (D)	W
Gossett (D)	W
Lyle (D)	W
West (D)	W
Thomason (D)	W
Russell (D)	W
Worley (D)	W
Mahon (D)	W
Kilday (D)	W
Fisher (D)	NV

UTAH

Granger (D)	R
Robinson (D)	R

VERMONT

Plumley (R)	W

VIRGINIA

Bland (D)	W
Daughton (D)	W
Gary (D)	W
Drewry (D)	W
Burch (D)	W
Almond (D)	W
Robertson (D)	W
Smith, Howard (D)	W
Flannagan (D)	R

WASHINGTON

DeLacey (D)	R
Jackson (D)	R
Savage (D)	R
Holmes, Hal (R)	W
Horan (R)	W
Coffee (D)	R

WEST VIRGINIA

Neely (D)	R
Randolph (D)	R
Bailey (D)	R
Ellis (R)	W
Kee (D)	R
Hedrick (D)	R

WISCONSIN

Smith, Lawrence (R)	W
Henry (R)	W
Stevenson (R)	W
Wasielewski (D)	R
Biemiller (D)	R
Keefe (R)	W
Murray (R)	R
Byrnes (R)	W
Hull (Prog)	R
O'Konski (R)	R

WYOMING

Barrett (R)	W

UE CHARGES PLOT IN CONGRESS

THE accusation was made this week that "a shamefully large number of Congressmen are trying to hurry through anti-labor legislation as part of the conspiracy of big business to destroy labor unions and lower wage standards" by Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak, of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

The statement was made in letters sent to majority and minority party leaders in the House of Representatives, Congressmen John McCormack and Joseph W. Martin.

Emspak, whose union is now conducting a strike of 200,000 employes of the General Electric Co., Westinghouse Corp., and General Motors Corp. (electrical division) for $2-a-day wage increases, wrote:

"By their vote to hurry through the Case anti-labor bill, 258 members of Congress —whether knowingly or not— have joined the conspiracy of big business against the welfare of the American people.

"Our union, the UE-CIO, is now on strike against three corporations who are participating in this conspiracy. General Electric, Westinghouse, General Motors and the steel industry have taken the leadership in a long-planned and carefully devised strategy designed to wreck the labor movement in America and squeeze multi-millions of profits from the American people.

"The pattern of this conspiracy is clear. On Monday there was a meeting of representatives of these corporations. On Tuesday, Irving S. Olds, chairman of U. S. Steel board of directors, demanded that the U. S. Government surrender to big business and grant totally unwarranted price increases. On Wednesday, the Case anti-labor bill was rushed before Congress by Congressmen who had not even had the time to read the measure. On Thursday, Congressmen, led by poll-tax Southern Democrats and Republicans, tied horn, hoof and hide to big business, gave this anti-labor bill a green light.

"Our union, representing 750,000 men and women—200,000 of whom are today on picket lines throughout America demanding a living wage—condemns this bill as part of the conspiracy of industry to wreck labor unions and force down wage standards. Furthermore, we condemn the undignified haste with which 258 members of Congress rushed to do the bidding of the big business interests.

"UE-CIO urges you to lend your influence to block passage of this legislation. We call upon you to instruct the House Committee on un-American Activities to immediately launch an investigation into the big business conspiracy aimed at the welfare of the American people which is behind the introduction of this bill in Congress."

1 Louder, please! Director Simon Rady conducts rehersal of N. Y. City CIO Chorus, with 75 members picked from hundreds of competitors in locals all over the city.

WORDS AND MUSIC—CIO

Photos by Conrad Eiger, Black Star

THEY can soothe your heart with Brahms' Lullaby or put a pep in your step with Solidarity Forever.

"They" includes 75 members of the N. Y. City CIO Council's Chorus, auditioned and selected from CIO members and their families. They come from locals in transport, shipbuilding, men's clothing, warehouses, government agencies, commercial offices, department stores and shoe factories.

The Chorus held its first auditions last spring, and its first performance this Fall. It has been heard at functions ranging from union parties to rallies at Madison Square Garden.

Judges who selected finalists in competition for the Chorus included: orchestra leader Mark Warnow, opera star Mimi Benzell and radio singer Benay Venuta.

Director Simon Rady has a long union history. He led the famous "Pins and Needles" chorus, as well as those of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the N. Y. Port of Embarkation.

The Chorus practices CIO democracy. An elected executive committee is responsible for training, program planning and selection of material.

2 (Top) Rady wants more oomph. Chorus held its first performance last Aug. before visiting Soviet unionists. (Below) Mark Warner (Hit Parade) and Rady audition soloist Helen Yoskowitz of CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

3 Betty and Robert de Cormier sing a duet. She belongs to the AFL American Variety Artists Guild. He recently returned from overseas. Chorus features wide repertoire of folk, union and classical songs.

Tomorrow's Citizens By Rose H. Alschuler

SICK TIMES CAN BE GROWING TIMES

Whether your sick child becomes more dependent and demanding or more independent and resourceful depends on you. Thoughtful planning reduces wear and tear. A variety of inexpensive novelties, e. g. colored paper, crayons, paste, a scrap book, turtles, fish, a sprouting carrot or sweet potato, or perhaps a surprise box to be opened every hour on the hour, are likely to keep your Jack and Jill happy and make them more self-sufficient.

Lib. of Congress—Russell Lee for FSA. Copyright 1946, The CIO NEWS

TROUBLED FEEDING THE TEENS?

Prepared by Nutrition Service, D. C. Chapter American Red Cross

DO YOU suddenly find you have to look up to your "baby" and that feeding the tall creature doesn't come under the baby book rules? Have you discovered that the authority you used in training him as a little fellow won't work any more and his food habits have taken a new twist?

No need to feel surprised and defeated. Teen-age John or Mary may take to over-eating, under-eating, sweet-eating or an assortment of likes and dislikes as one way to experiment with life.

To show grown-up independence, an adolescent often rebels against his parents' advice. One of the first restraints he may try to hurdle is the good eating routine you trained him to follow.

Because eating is so closely tied up with emotions and the teens are a highly emotional period, it takes real "know-how" for mother to guide an adolescent toward good grown-up food habits without interfering with his need for change and experiment.

To urge or punish may only make matters worse. So don't nag, scold, criticize or correct at the table. Keep eating pleasant and make the food look and taste good.

Try to help him understand that good eating helps build strength and health. Be a model "good-eater" yourself. He will expect it.

To grow, the teen-ager needs more protective foods — milk, fruits, vegetables, meats and eggs—than an adult. To take care of strenuous activity, a girl needs as many calories as her mother and a boy needs more than his dad. Bread, potatoes and desserts will take care of the extra calories.

Being "too fat" or "too thin" or having a bad complexion are "scourges" to sensitive youth. Afraid of losing standing with their group, they worry about their bodies. To overcome these problems they often develop distorted food habits. They may stop eating to lose weight or eat too many sweets and pastries to gain.

Special appeals may be needed in such cases. An ideal of good looks that accents a well-rounded figure, glossy hair, sound teeth and a good complexion should be held up to them. Poor complexion can often be helped by diet and hygiene.

Soft pedal the sweets and sodas! They crowd out the more important protective foods. Stress exercise, fresh air, sunshine, drinking water, and personal cleanliness.

If you can't handle the problem get the doctor to help. Let him decide the cause and work out the treatment with the child.

WOMEN OFTEN ARE STRIKE SPARKPLUGS

By HELEN BLANCHARD

Director of Organization, CIO Auxiliaries

I HAVE just returned from a field trip through Ohio. The efficiency of our strike committees and the solidity of our ranks is most impressive. Our striking members are convinced beyond a shadow of a doubt that the outcome of our strikes will result in victory. Morale is high!

Strategy committees have included women's auxiliary officers and members on such important committees as food, welfare, fund raising and publicity.

Many former women members of locals have volunteered their services in whatever capacity our strike leaders thought they could be of assistance.

Establishing, servicing and maintenance of strike kitchens during this period is of utmost value to every local and should be set up wherever feasible.

Together with this work, there is the additional job of making every effort to bring about a better understanding among the families of the CIO as to the basic economic issues involved in our strikes.

This can and is being done by calling regular meetings of the families where our union leaders report on the progress of negotiations and where our families are given factual, first-hand information to offset the highly colored anti-union statements of the press and radio.

I have found this to be one of the most effective means of: Recruiting new auxiliary members; obtaining commitments on time available for specific jobs, and answering questions.

Many times our families get the idea that strike headquarters is the place that Jim retires to in an effort to avoid doing those little chores around the house he never has time to do when he is in the shop or mill.

"There are so many on strike, why does Jim have to picket?" These ideas and questions evaporate when Mrs. Striker gets the real facts from our local union leaders.

In Dayton one of our locals invited Mrs. Striker to drop in at headquarters while Jim did his stint on the picket line. She left with a real understanding of just how important her Jim is to the whole set-up and better still how important she is to the success of the campaign being carried on.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1725-41 W. North Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

SOLD EVERYWHERE

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP
PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

44 Years of Know-how
in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois
20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

Gags and Grins From The Labor Press

"It's all I've got in the shop."

—Ammunition, UAW-CIO

"You say the thought of full employment caused the heart attack?"

—The Union

"All right, keep my watch and my money, but please give me back my CIO NEWS."

—The Union

PISCO

—NMU Pilot

EDUCATION NOTES

SIMPLE, down-to-earth ways of bringing the CIO's program and policies both to the workers and to the general public were discussed at the quarterly meeting of education directors of affiliated unions held Jan. 26-27 at National CIO headquarters.

Following a general report by Kermit Eby, Natl. CIO director of education and research, and George Guernsey, asst. director of education, on the department's work, educational representatives of various CIO internationals told of the programs developed by their unions.

The relation between problems of organizing and educating was stressed in a talk by CIO Organization Director Allan S. Haywood. John Brophy, director of Industrial Union Councils, discussed educational problems as related to CIO city, county and state councils throughout the country.

The problems of developing effective techniques for political education were discussed by Tilford Dudley and Joseph Gaer of the CIO Political Action Committee.

A talk on the use of films for union showings was given by Guernsey at an evening session at which he showed a group of 16 mm. movies, some with discussion trailers, to illustrate their value for educational programs.

Plans for three regional education conferences to be held in Dallas, Tex., Atlanta, Ga., and N. Y. City in March and April were also discussed at the quarterly meeting.

'Walking Together'

Realization of the importance of the Church and Labor getting together behind their mutual aims is growing steadily, according to a new pamphlet just issued by the National Religion & Labor Foundation, under the title, "Walking Together, Religion & Labor."

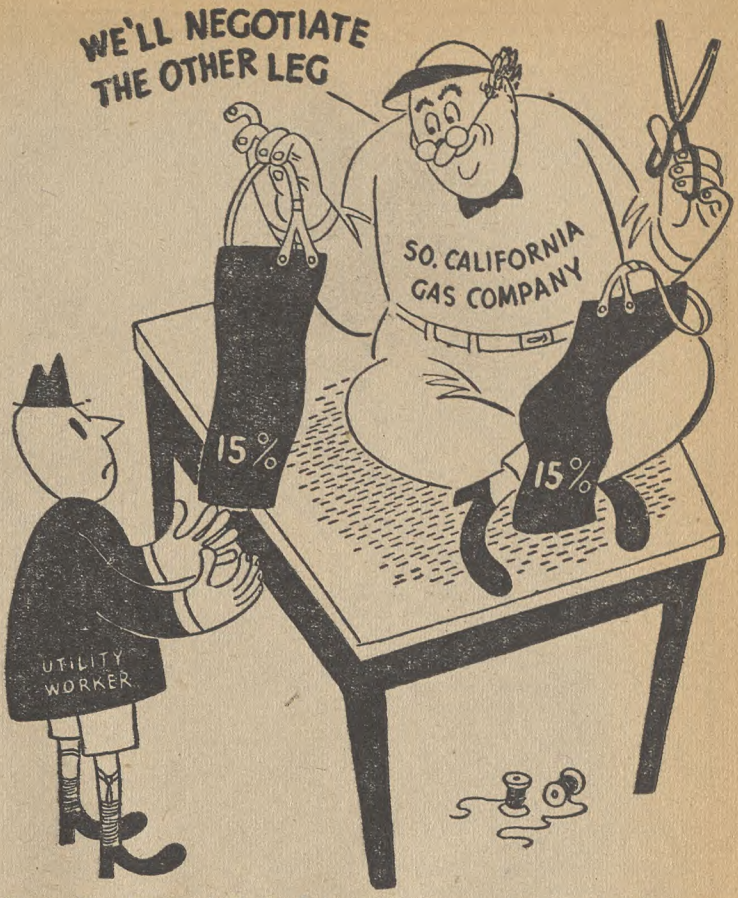
The program and activities of some of these groups in New Haven, Conn.; Dayton and Columbus, Ohio; Chicago, and Canada are described briefly and suggestions for setting up councils for Religion and Labor cooperation are outlined. Testimonials from various government, community and labor leaders, including CIO Pres. Philip Murray, are given in the pamphlet.

"Walking Together," Natl. Religion & Labor Foundation, 106 Carmel St., New Haven 11, Conn.; 15c a copy.

Pamphlet Press Books

Launching of a new project aimed to do in 1946 what Tom Paine did in 1776 has been announced by Pamphlet Press with the publication of a paper-bound edition of "It's a Secret," by Henry Hoke, first of series of short books to be put out by Reynal & Hitchcock. The book will be sold retail at $1, and in bulk to interested organizations.

Also announced for publication later this month is a new book by Leo Huberman, "The Truth About Unions," a simple explanation of what unions are and how they work, aimed to give the necessary background to anyone seeking an intelligent understanding of the present period of industrial strife. Huberman is director of the Pamphlet Press project.



Snappily illustrated leaflets explaining in bread-and-butter terms the need for increased wages have been issued by the California office of the CIO Utility Workers, 5851 S. Avalon, Los Angeles. The cover of one of the leaflets is shown above.

PAC Pamphlet

Needed—More Homes

YOU can do something about housing—which the country very badly needs, which is a "red hot" political issue today and which seems destined to become hotter as the 1946 elections roll closer.

What can be done is told in a CIO Political Action Committee pamphlet, "There's No Place Like Home If You Can Get One," which also recognizes the housing problem as a veterans' issue.

The pamphlet says that we had "a bad housing situation as far back as 1930 . . . The depression, the war, the migration of workers to war production areas, and the constant growth of our population—all these contributed to our present housing shortage. But the most important cause of all is the fact that so far in our history we have not had a national housing policy."

It analyzes the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Housing Bill (S 1592) to set up a permanent Natl. Housing Agency, to broaden loan provisions, to conduct research in building materials, etc.; and indicates the need for the Patman Bill to provide housing price and rent control and the Mitchell-Kilgore Bill (S 1729) to promote and subsidize production of critical building materials.

The pamphlet, which was written by Joseph Gaer, with a foreword by Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, and illustrated by Harold Price, may be ordered from CIO-PAC, 205 E. 42nd St., N. Y. 17, N. Y.

1 Nastenka was a child of Leningrad, as Marie Louise was a child of Rouen. Both find themselves dramatized in stories of the war—Nastenka (above) in the Russian film Once There Was a Girl, and Marie Louise (at right) in a Swiss film bearing her name. They both deal with children and the war.

CHILDREN To Remember

TWO sensitive pictures about children and the war have recently come out in Europe. One was produced in Switzerland by the Swiss documentarist Lazar Wechsler, and is named Marie Louise, and the other in Leningrad by Victor Eisimont, called Once There Was a Girl. The material of both films came out of the suffering and experiences of children. Victor Eisimont, who won the Stalin Prize for his film Girl From Leningrad, gave up his motion picture activities at the beginning of the war to devote all his time to the defense of his city. While supervising the building of fortifications around the beseiged city, working with old men and women and children, he conceived the idea of Once There Was A Girl. He began work on the film two days after the final liberation of Leningrad, and the cast and crew used the bombed out buildings and streets as sets, while the extras were native Leningraders in the clothing and shoes they had worn during the siege.

Movies Worth Seeing

2 For two years Marie Louise took the bombings, and then there was a respite, a brief furlough for children from the war.

Marie Louise was differently conceived. Switzerland was "neutral" in the war. But the plain people of Switzerland were partisan. They turned their homes inside out for the children of bombed out French cities. They knew that what they did was only temporary, was no genuine solution to the sufferings of the French children, but it was something.

This hospitality and generosity of the Swiss people is immortalized in the film Marie Louise. The French children, guests of the Swiss, were the actors.

Both films graphically portray a child's suffering and terror under air-raids. Both children, the little Russian girl and the little French one, suffer hunger, terror, nightmares, and the loss of loved ones. Nastenka, aged nine, makes herself guardian over her little friend and neighbor, aged five, while Marie Louise guards her little brother Pierre.

The Russian product while an earnest and sincere job, doesn't have the skill and sensitivity, nor the technical perfection of Marie Louise. Once There Was A Girl at times runs the risks of precocity, while Marie Louise is true at every turn.

Hunger in Leningrad is portrayed with graciousness. Nastenka shares her ration of heavy black bread with her little neighbor. Once-upon-a-time good things are h a u n t i n g l y remembered throughout the 17 months of the siege of the city. When Nastenka's dying mother tells her to remember Tonia, to go to her if something should happen, the little girl can't recall Tonia's last name, but remembers that it was "something tasty." When she goes for help she prods her memory vainly trying to remember, and the helpful ones suggest a variety of names from "blintzes" to "potatoes." At last she remembers, "cheese cake," tasty indeed.

In the Swiss film, those lucky children who are permitted the journey to Switzerland are shown in a state of lethargy, the lethargy that comes from fear and hunger.

One of the most interesting scenes in Marie Louise is that of workingmen discussing what they can do to help these children. They devise a plan of opening a series of chalets in the mountains, and pay for this by working 15 minutes overtime each shift.

The arguments of the workers for and against this plan, take place against the background of whirling machinery, at lunch, going home, in the washroom. It is as real a business as I've ever seen portrayed, and the dramatic effect of it is superb. One feels as though one were sitting there participating in the arguments, arguments of but a few words, while the spindles of the textile factory whirr in your ears.

The therapy takes place quickly. Children can forget the horrors of war, but then at the end of a few months they are faced with the reality of returning to it . . . going back to more bombs . . . to hunger . . . and even to death, and they know it.

Marie Louise becomes spoiled in the home of her upper middle class friends. When she must return she cannot face the reality of it. She runs away, gets off the train that is to take her back to France, and runs back to the hospitality of the Swiss. Only when she is taken to the chalet, where children like herself must face the same problems and have had experiences in common, is she prepared for her return to France.

It is to make room for other children, who are also to have three months of peace, and then a return to war. But the Nazis even stopped that.

Helen Kay.

BEST FILMS OF 1945

Best documentaries were: The True Glory and The Fighting Lady.

Best musical was: Anchor's Aweigh.

Best foreign films: The Last Chance and Love On The Dole.

Best film: The Lost Weekend.

Best mystery-melodrama: Spellbound.

Best GI Pix: The Story of GI Joe.

Also on my list were: National Velvet, for its wholesomeness; The Southerner, for its sincerity; Our Vines Have Tender Grapes, and Pride of the Marines.

3 In Switzerland, the bomb-shocked child learns to laugh again. Marie Louise is in the upper left hand corner. But the furlough was soon cut short, and she must return to occupied France.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with natural persons, living or dead.

BROTHER OR NO BROTHER-- THERE'S ONLY ONE THING FOR ME TO DO!

STUNNED BY THE KNOWLEDGE THAT HIS BROTHER MICKEY IS THE LEADER OF THE UNION SMASHERS AT THE ROTOR CONSTRUCTION COMPANY, JIM SPENDS A HARROWING NIGHT. MORNING FINDS HIM...

JIM! I... I WAS SO WORRIED ABOUT YOU. MICKEY'S ALREADY HAD BREAKFAST AND GONE TO WORK.

SORRY, MOM. I HAD SOME SERIOUS BUSINESS TO ATTEND TO... AND... WELL... I GUESS IT TOOK ALL NIGHT.

THAT'S ALL RIGHT, SON. A WISE MOTHER KNOWS WHEN NOT TO ASK TOO MANY QUESTIONS. SIT DOWN AND HAVE SOME BREAKFAST. I WANT TO TALK TO YOU... ABOUT MICKEY.

HAVEN'T YOU NOTICED HOW HE'S CHANGED LATELY.

YES, MOM. I'VE NOTICED HOW HE'S CHANGED.

SOMETHING'S HAPPENED TO THE BOY, JIM. HE... HE'S NOT HIMSELF. HELP HIM-- YOU'RE CLOSER TO HIM THAN I AM.

I... I'D RATHER NOT TALK ABOUT MICKEY NOW, MOM.

JIM! YOU... YOU KNOW WHAT'S WRONG. I CAN TELL. YOU'VE NEVER BEEN RELUCTANT TO SPEAK ABOUT MICKEY BEFORE.

I TELL YOU WHAT, MOM. I'LL MAKE A DATE WITH YOU... A DATE FOR DINNER TONIGHT. AND WE'LL TALK ABOUT MICKEY... SERIOUSLY.

AS THOUGH I CAN'T READ YOUR MIND LIKE A BOOK. YOU'VE ALREADY DECIDED WHAT TO DO ABOUT MICKEY'S TROUBLES... AND I BET YOU'LL HAVE THE WHOLE THING SETTLED BY TONIGHT. AM I RIGHT, JIM BOY?

I GUESS YOU'RE RIGHT, MOM.

I'M GOING TO SETTLE IT RIGHT NOW, MOM, BUT...

NEVER MIND THE "BUTS", JIM. JUST DON'T FORGET OUR DATE.. IT'LL BE A REAL CELE-BRATION.

YEAH... SURE... A CELEBRATION WITH BELLS ON... MOURNING BELLS. THAT'S A CUTE PHILOSOPHY OF MICKEY'S -- LOOK OUT FOR YOURSELF, AND TO HECK WITH THE CONSEQUENCES! ONLY... ONLY IT DOESN'T WORK!

59

Produced by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

Copyright 1946 by the NAT'L CIO NEWS

The Senate Is Next

(See Record—Page 10)

Acting in the spirit of a lynch mob out to get a victim at no matter what cost to the community, the House this week passed the Case anti-union bill by a vote of 258 to 155—a somewhat less than two to one majority.

The bill was passed by the now customary alliance of reactionary Republicans and equally reactionary Democrats, the latter mainly from the polltax states.

The leadership in the fight to jam the bill through was pretty equally divided between the two groups.

The author of the bill, Rep. Case, is a Republican from South Dakota—an admirable state, but scarcely an industrial one. Control of the Rules Committee, which rushed the bill to the House floor, lies in the hands of Republicans and Southern polltax Democrats, with men like Smith (D., Va.), Cox (D., Ga.), Colmer (D., Miss.), working with their Republican allies to block everything progressive and push everything reactionary.

On the final vote, 149 Republicans and 109 Democrats were for the bill and 33 Republicans, 120 Democrats and two from other parties against it.

Much credit must go to the Democrats and Republicans who worked and voted against the bill. They tried every possible argument and maneuver to bring about its defeat. The fact that they lost is the best measure of the strength of the reactionary coalition against them.

With the passage of the Case bill, and with the strength of the filibuster and its GOP allies in the Senate, we are faced with a stronger and more determined reactionary bloc in Congress than we have seen since 1942 and before it.

The Case bill now goes to the Senate. It must be stopped there—or we will have to accept the fact that, as far as this Congress is concerned, reaction is temporarily in the saddle.

There's only one answer to this—political action.

Mobilize the picketlines to beat back the tory offensive in Congress.

Make every worker and his wife a registered voter.

Stop the Case bill in the Senate.

Above everything else—register so that you can vote!

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman — Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler, Editor — Irving Richter

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Price of a Deal

As The CIO NEWS goes to press, strong rumors are circulating in Washington to the effect that a "deal" will be cooked up to dump FEPC, and perhaps it will be consummated by the time you read this.

The deal is said to involve a quick, single vote on cloture to end the filibuster against the FEPC bill and then an agreement to drop the issue after the one cloture vote fails. Cloture takes a two-thirds majority to pass.

If this deal goes through, it will mean much more than the defeat of FEPC, important as that issue is to the welfare of the entire nation.

It will mean that the reactionary polltax Democrats and their equally reactionary friends on the Republican side are in control of the Senate.

It will mean that the Administration has in effect said to the polltaxers and the GOP tories: OK, you win. We can't do anything progressive that you don't approve of in advance, and we won't try it again.

Meantime, the polltaxers have put on an exhibition in their filibuster that gives us a pretty good idea of their future strategy if they win on this issue.

All of them—Ellender, Eastland, Russell, the verminous Bilbo and even the "gentlemanly" Tydings—have been putting on an act the like of which has not been seen since before the Civil War.

Without cessation or rebuke, the polltax Senators have indulged in the vilest kind of race-baiting—anti-Negroism, anti-Semitism, anti-foreignism, and the crudest kind of red-baiting.

Eastland has distinguished himself by attacking our ally, the Soviet Union, and by telling lies about its system of criminal law.

Russell has distinguished himself by attempts to rouse sex hatred of Negroes, based on his pretense that passage of S 101 would end the use of Jim Crow toilets in the South.

Tydings has distinguished himself by venomous blasts against democracy. And Bilbo has been Bilbo.

These are the men who will pretty much run the U. S. Senate if they get away with their filibuster on FEPC.

Think of what they will do to the minimum-wage bill (S 1349), the Case anti-union bill (HR 5262), the Ellender-Truman anti-strike bill (1661), the housing, health, child care and similar bills—when they come up.

There's more than the cost of FEPC—steep as that is—involved in the fight over S 101.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Case HR 5262	Imposes cooling-off, forced arbitration, fines, penalties for strikes, etc.	Rushed through House by GOP-polltax coalition. Now in Senate.	Wire Senators to defeat, no matter how amended.
Norton-Ellender HR 4908 S 1661	This is Truman's "cooling-off" bill that served as wedge for the Case bill.	Senate Labor Committee holding hearings now. Effectively dead in House due to passage of Case bill.	Tell Senators we won't want this one either by itself or as a substitute for the Case bill.
FEPC S 101	Makes FEPC permanent government agency.	Filibustered in Senate. "Deal" set for this week to hold one quick vote on cloture, lose it, then drop whole issue.	Tell your Senators what you think of "deals" to dump FEPC.
65c Wage S 1349 HR 3914	Raises wage-hour act minimum to 65c, extends coverage.	Up for Senate action after FEPC. Surrender to polltaxers on FEPC endangers its chance of passage.	Wire Senators to vote for full 65c, no jokers on coverage.
Bailey HR 5180	Repeals "carryback" clause of tax law that pays corporations huge tax refunds for not operating their plants, thus arming them against strikes.	House Ways and Means Committee, headed by 82-year-old Rep. Doughton (D., N.C.).	Tell your Representative to demand early hearings, action.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Would make filibusters a thing of the past by letting Southern voters get rid of the filibusterers.	Passed House, now waiting Senate action.	Tell Senators to demand floor debate and vote.

DROP HIM A LINE FROM THE PICKETLINE!

Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

PRICE CONTROL: As predicted in the Washington Guide (Jan. 21, '46), price control is set for the next big fight in Congress, with Republicans and polltax Democrats teaming up to wreck OPA, bring on inflation and a new depression.

On the GOP side, Sen. Taft (R., O.) openly demands complete repeal of the price-control act, backed up by such far-sighted men of vision as Henry Ford II.

On the Democratic side, the polltaxers scream for OPA's blood when price control for cotton is mentioned.

Meantime, manufacturers of clothing, household appliances and practically all consumers' goods are refusing to sell to the public, piling up goods in warehouses to wait until price control is repealed.

SUBSIDIES: Even the Administration seems to be aware of the fact that inflation would be a terrific disaster to the nation, and is making statements designed to stave it off.

Latest recruit is Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson, who used to say that we should end all subsidies on food as quickly as possible but who now says we must keep them.

Subsidies are a major factor in price control. Every $1 spent on subsidies to hold down prices saves the consumers and taxpayers about $4 in increased food costs he would otherwise have to pay.

Reactionaries are against subsidies because the rich pay more taxes (more in dollars, but much less in proportion to income) than the poor. They want the poor to pay everything.

GOP MANIFESTO: The 14-point manifesto of the Republican Party, issued after a midwest conference of leaders from 12 states, reads like the policy line of the NAM or the Chamber of Commerce.

Adopted this week, it calls for repeal of price control, repeal of the Wagner Act, passage of anti-strike, anti-union laws, no food for Europe or Asia, etc.

HOUSING ROUNDUP: Here's a quick roundup on housing bills CIO is supporting:

S. 1592. Provides for low-cost rental and sales, essentially on a long-term basis but a help in present crisis. Hearings in Senate Banking Committee.

HR 4761. Patman's bill to aid veterans in getting houses below Snyder's $10,000 level. Reported out of House Banking Committee without price ceilings on used houses, thus gutting half its effectiveness.

HR 1729. Sen. Kilgore's (D., W. Va.) bill to up production of low-cost housing, primarily for veterans. Hearings set for Senate Banking Committee.

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 8

Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS
$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

February 18, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

GM STRIKERS SAY:

'WE'LL STICK IT OUT'

1 Tough going with 12 kids but C. W. Tanner is "in this strike until the bitter end" —determination typical at General Motors' Ternstedt plant, Detroit. He got 89c an hour during war. His take-home now, for sweeping, is a little over $30 a week. "I've nothing to lose except impossible working conditions. GM profits are highest in the auto industry. It seems to me they ought to pay decent wages."

2 "I've cashed in 24 bonds to keep going. I'm just about broke now but I'll stay on strike as long as it's necessary to win." Dewey Dellaire, Ternstedt polisher, talking. His wartime pay was $67.08 gross a week. It's $41 take-home now. "I could not make ends meet. Almost every pay day I had to draw on savings or cash bonds." Dellaire has three children, two of them grown—one of them in the Army.

3 "I've been fortunate in being able to save some money to tide me over so far, but most Ternstedt workers are not that well off," says Miss Agnes Missett, finish inspector. Her wartime rate was $1.07 an hour, 95c now. "I've talked to those who walk the picket line with me. We're all of the same opinion. We're entitled to a substantial raise and we're agreed we'll stay out until we get it."

4 War Vet Carter Cummings got $56.68 gross before V-J Day, $43.60 a week after—less than $40 take-home. "I'm in this to the finish. All that vets have got from GM are promises. GM's proposal for a 45-hour week is a direct blow at them. It would cut down the number of jobs. GM workers did a terrific war job. Their reward has been a drastic cut in income while GM coffers bulge with war profits."

UAW Photos by Morris Saffron

1 "We Fight Today for a Better Tomorrow." James Pepiton, GM Ternstedt striker in Detroit, his wife, their five kids, all really live that slogan. (Top) He talks with UAW Counsellor Joseph Bedi about the family budget. (Below) the Pepiton children get free haircuts at UAW headquarters from Harry Elliot—(l. to r.) Lucille, Jean, Marlene, Jimmy and Albert.

2 The Pepitons had no savings. They cashed in their bonds when Jimmy was born, then had to discontinue deductions. Before V-J Day they had just enough—then take-home pay dropped to $40. James arranges for help at UAW headquarters with Counsellor Peter Hegy.

FOR A BETTER TOMORROW

By PATRICIA BRONTE

THE youngest among the five Pepiton kids go barefoot in the house to save shoes.

Their father, James Pepiton, 47, is a GM striker.

He has worked at the Ternstedt plant, in Detroit, for 12 years as an oiler. During the war his $1.09-an-hour wage came to $50 a week take-home pay.

After V-J Day it dropped to $40.

"We were just getting by in wartime," Pepiton says. "Fifty dollars was just about enough to feed and clothe the children and pay household expenses."

In some ways, he has been luckier than most strikers, because he

(Continued on Page 3)

3 The Pepiton home, 2413 Howard St., is in bad repair. The rent is $30 a month. No refrigerator, no washing machine, no radio. The Pepiton car was sold to buy clothes for the kids. A few odd jobs have helped, but not enough. The strike is three months old.

4 Mrs. Pepiton and Jimmy receive a basket of food from George Lyons, member of the strike committee. "We don't want to go on the city welfare rolls if possible," says Mrs. Pepiton. "We're in this fight for a decent standard of living," says her husband.

(Continued from Page 2)

has been able to pick up odd jobs, cleaning out basements and shovelling snow, for groceries and occasional cash.

"We've been out for a long time, but we're willing to stick it out as long as it lasts. I'm doing my bit toward that end, and thousands of others in the same boat are determined to stick," he says.

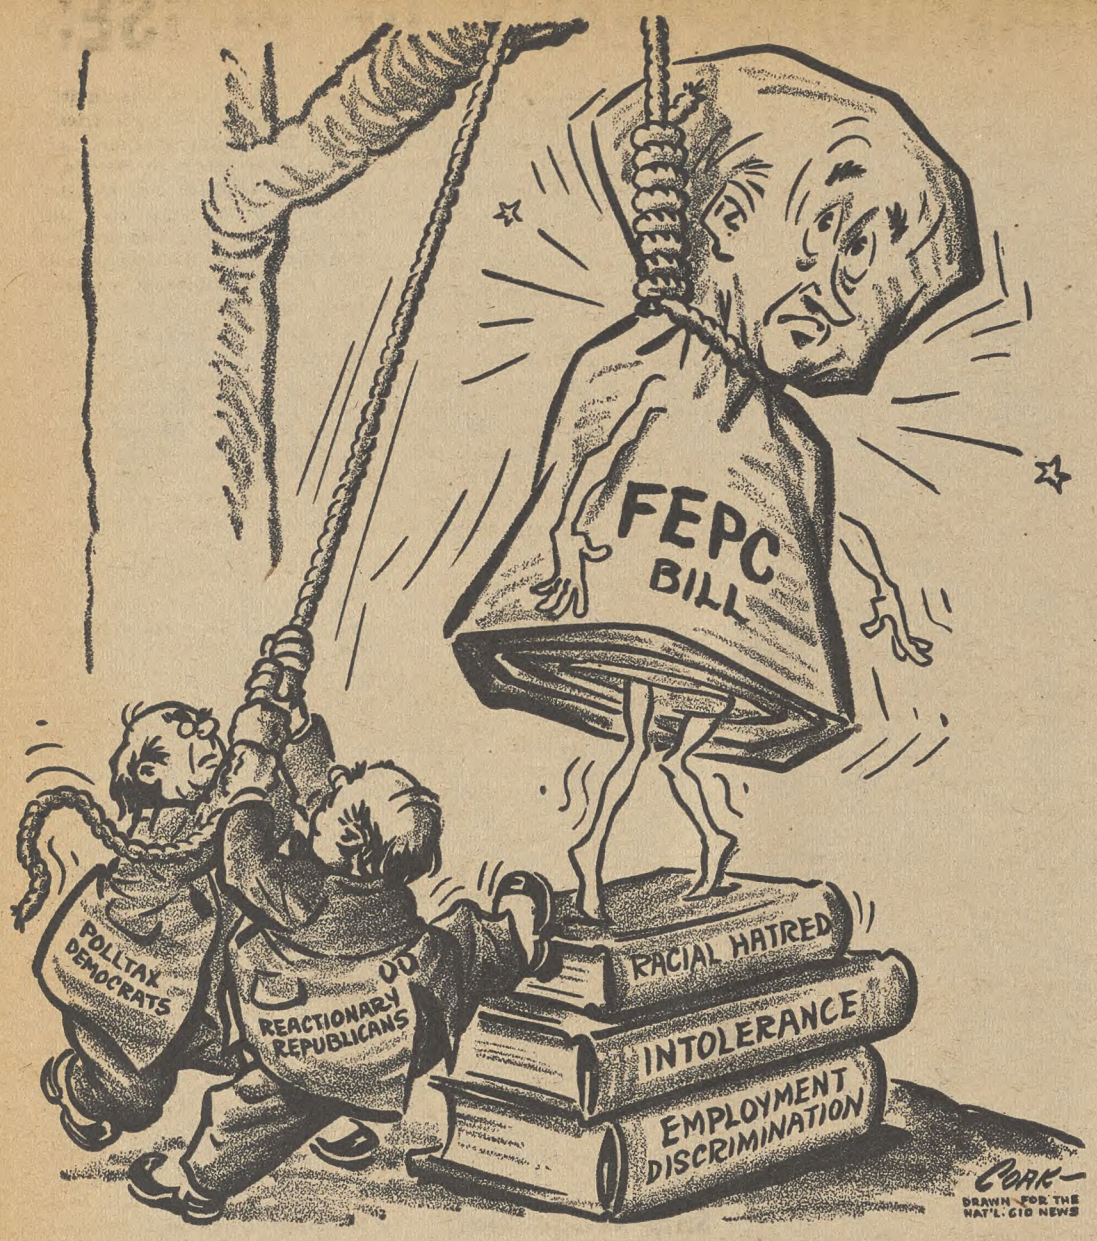
"The support we've received from other labor unions and certain segments of the population outside the union has been heartening, and has helped keep up the morale on the picket lines. We hope it keeps on coming, because we're going to keep on fighting."

His wife, Marguerite, points out that "Jim's overtime pay in the war period was eaten up by inflated prices of children's clothing and food.

"The government claims that living costs have risen 'just slightly,' but they could never convince me. I've had to pay more than double to keep the kids dressed halfway decently."

6 Jean and the others were attended by a city physician and nurse when they came down with flu. They received a city emergency relief check then, none since. "We've been out a long time. We're willing to stick until we win out," says Pepiton.

5 "At the wages I had been earning, I couldn't afford even the most ordinary household appliances," says Pepiton. There's no refrigerator, so Mrs. Pepiton (top) sets food on the porch. It is sometimes ravaged by dogs, or spoils when the weather turns warm. (Below) She set a typical lunch of stew and fried bologna for (l. to r.) Jean, Jimmy, Marlene and Lucille.



FOES OF BROTHERHOOD

This week has been set aside as National Brotherhood Week—a week in which leaders of government, churches, labor, business, farmers and other groups urge all Americans to give thought to the common brotherhood of human beings of all races, religions and nationalities.

The ideals of human brotherhood are so widely accepted as ideals that many people may dismiss the week's flow of oratory from all sources as platitudes of little immediate significance.

But the CIO does not share this attitude. For to its unions, brotherhood is not merely a vague ideal, but an immediate organizational necessity, the foundation of union strength and a practical program of action for furthering labor's and the people's interests.

CIO's membership is made up of native-born and foreign-born, Christians and Jews, Catholics and Protestants, Negroes and whites. Under its constitution all are admitted on an equal basis and with equal rights, and the strength of the movement depends on the brotherhood and harmony that can be developed between all members.

But, more than this, brotherhood to the CIO is something that has to be fought for. We have just emerged from a world war against the enemies of brotherhood, the Nazis and Fascists with their master-race theories, their anti-Semitism and their other diabolical propaganda to divide and destroy the forces of democracy.

Nazism has been vanquished on the field of battle, but its ideas persist and have their active advocates in the United States.

Some of these are outright or concealed fascists. But many others, who may not consciously realize the fascist direction of their propaganda and activities, are willing to use such fascist tactics as race-baiting to further their own reactionary, anti-labor and other selfish ends.

Just before Brotherhood Week started, America witnessed one of the most disgraceful exhibitions of race-baiting, anti-Semitism, anti-Negroism, anti-foreignism and labor-baiting that has ever been staged in this or any other country.

This assault on every concept of brotherhood, decency and democracy occurred right in the Senate of the United States, when a small minority filibustered to defeat the will of the majority, to prevent the establishment of a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission, and to continue racial, religious and other discriminations in employment.

As shocking as the flow of filthy race-baiting propaganda was the fact that the majority of the Senate meekly surrendered to the Hitleristic tactics of the minority. If the professed supporters of the FEPC had matched their acts with their professions, they could easily have squelched the filibuster.

The deal under which the majority surrendered to the minority is most ominous for the future of all progressive legislation in Congress.

Such appeasement will encourage the poll-tax Democrats and tory Republicans to believe they can have their way on everything, to defeat anti-polltax legislation, stop the 65c minimum wage, force through anti-labor bills and block all progressive legislation.

To promote the ideals of Brotherhood Week, therefore, labor must organize for increased political activity, to back up and put stamina into progressive members of Congress, and to defeat the schemes of the worst foes of brotherhood who are also the worst foes of labor and all democratic advancement.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

EDMUND BURKE once said, "You can't indict a whole people." But he never met Ernie Adamson. Ernie not only can but does.

As counsel for the Un-American Rankin Committee, Ernie has discovered that America itself is "un-American," and that in advocating democracy and fighting wars on its behalf the whole American people have been guilty of un-American activities.

Ernie has been writing threatening letters to veterans' organizations, radio commentators like Drew Pearson and other folks who advocate "democracy," implying they are subject to investigation for un-American activities on this account.

In these letters Ernie coyly asks if his suspects are "aware this country was not organized as a democracy."

He then wants to know if they are going to ask for an amendment of the Constitution to make America a democracy, if they are proposing to conduct "a propaganda campaign" for democracy, what they mean by such slogans as "Work, fight, give to make democracy live," etc.

★ ★ ★

But Ernie's biggest catch in this fishing expedition will be the CIO, if he ever gets around to it.

For the CIO is not only the outstanding champion of democracy, but it is also in itself the most democratic form of organization that could be devised.

So, if belief in democracy be "un-American," Ernie can make the most of it.

★ ★ ★

The CIO will plead guilty to any charge of being democratic. In fact, it has itself prepared the most convincing evidence to support this charge.

A study of the constitutions and practices of CIO unions, recently completed by the CIO Research and Education Dept. (see pages 12 and 13), reveals in detail how carefully the democratic rights of all members are safeguarded.

CIO unions admit all workers in their jurisdiction, regardless of sex, color, race or creed, for initiation fees generally ranging from $2 to $10.

All members have equal voting rights, elect their convention delegates and officers at frequent intervals, have constitutional rights to hearing and appeal before expulsion, and the great majority of them pay monthly dues of $1.50 or less.

The most careful accounting is made to the membership through audits, regular financial reports and open conventions with published proceedings. And even top union officers (in contrast to the hundred-thousand-dollar salaries of corporation executives with whom they negotiate) in most cases are paid less than $6,000 a year.

★ ★ ★

This report provides the complete factual answer to the lies of the Peglers and other labor-baiters. It may also prove embarrassing to those AFL unions which fall far short of CIO's democratic standards.

It shows that the CIO practices what it preaches and leads the procession toward that greater degree of democracy which it advocates for all Americans.

Contrast CIO's attitude, for instance, on equal voting rights for all members, and no discrimination on account of race, color, sex or creed, with that of Adamson's polltax cronies who filibuster against the FEPC and against the right to vote of millions of Americans disfranchised by the polltax.

★ ★ ★

Adamson's campaign against democracy cannot be dismissed as the irresponsible antics of a crackpot.

His idea of classifying democracy as "un-American" is not a new one. It has been advanced many times by American fascist groups, with pseudo-historical documentation, as a cunning scheme to discredit democratic institutions and prepare the way for fascism.

Furthermore, it reflects the anti-democratic bias of the polltax Democrats and reactionary Republicans who dominate the Un-American Committee and who are constantly trying to turn back the clock of democratic progress.

This clique oppose the FEPC, defend the polltax and try to put through anti-labor measures like the Case bill precisely because they oppose and fear democracy.

Above all, they hate the CIO and seek to destroy it, because they recognize its truly democratic character and its great potentialities for making government of the people, by the people and for the people a living and growing reality in these United States.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 February 18, 1946 No. 8

STEEL TALKS ON AS TRUMAN SETS NEW WAGE-PRICE POLICY

HOPE was general as The CIO NEWS went to press for settlement of the steel strike, possibly over the week-end, with negotiations reported in Washington between the CIO Steelworkers, headed by Philip Murray, and U. S. Steel.

Meanwhile, President Truman announced a new wage-price policy (full details and comment in next week's CIO NEWS) that gives authority to the Natl. Wage Stabilization Board to pass on wage increases.

Truman threw industry a well padded bone in his wage-price order, by allowing employers "placed in a hardship position by an approved (wage) increase to seek price adjustments without waiting until the end of a six-months period" as they formerly had to do.

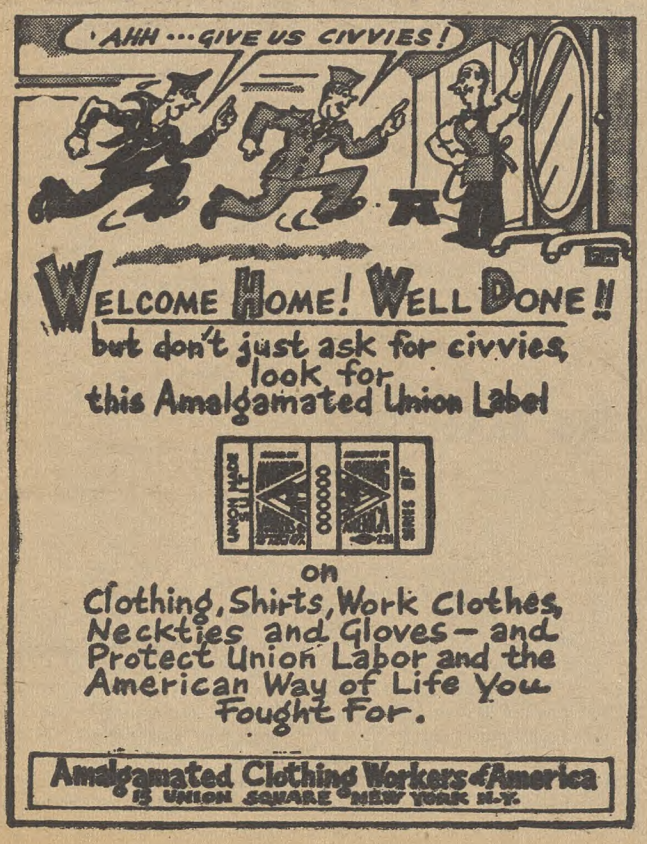
The new wage-price policy, which in effect OKs wage patterns recently set by fact-finding boards or Presidential recommendation in the steel, auto and packing industries, made it a virtual certainty that the steelworkers will get the 18½c an hour which Truman recommended.

Other details of the steel contract were said to be holding up final approval as The CIO NEWS went to press.

A new report on industry's profit position, meantime, was issued by the Securities & Exchange Commission, showing a new high record of net working capital of $50,900,000,000 in the third quarter of 1945.

This capital increased $2,900,000,000 in the quarter, the greatest gain on record.

Tax refunds, under carry-back, carry-forward provisions which guarantee employers against profits lower than their 1936-39 average during the two postwar years, amounted to $1,600,000,000, and profits to $1,100,000,000 in the reported increase.



BARE CONSPIRACY OF BOSSES

THE conspiracy of big business against unions and the people of the U. S. which CIO Pres. Philip Murray warned of Jan. 18 was revealed this week by Pres. C. E. Wilson of General Motors at a Natl. Labor Relations Board hearing at Detroit on charges by the CIO Auto Workers that GM was guilty of unfair labor practices.

This startling confession came as the strike lacked a few days of being 13-weeks-long, and during a week when the UAW withdrew from negotiations before Federal Mediator Dewey because GM was not bargaining in good faith.

N. Y. Meeting

Wilson testified that the conspirators met at the Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y. City, Jan. 9, one day before President Truman's fact-finding board recommended that GM pay its workers 19½c more per hour.

Wilson did not give the details of the conspiracy willingly but the story came out through repeated questioning by NLRB counsel.

His assertion that "no agreements came out of the meeting," was too naive to be believed. He continued:

"None (no agreements) were intended. There was nothing sinister about the meeting.

"In fact, it is too bad that that group cannot make decisions for the country."

The attitude of these industrialists toward the country was reflected by Wilson when he stated the board's recommendations were not consistent with the national wage-price policy and that the industrialists could formulate better decisions than the Government leaders.

Although he had "failed to remember" who was at the meeting when questioned by the Senate labor committee Feb. 7, Wilson, under quizzing by the NLRB counsel, found his memory refreshed and named the following persons:

Alfred P. Sloan, John Thomas Smith and Donaldson Brown, board chairman, general counsel and finance committee chairman, respectively, of GM; Pres. Eugene Grace, of Bethlehem Steel; Pres. Charles Cook, of the American Rolling Mills; Pres. C. E. Wilson, of General Electric; A. W. Robertson, of Westinghouse, and "representatives of the packing-house industry."

Chary with his details, Wilson denied that there were other meetings of the group but he told enough to substantiate the story released two days earlier by Federated Press which stated that the meetings were held in a three-room suite, that the surrounding suites were also engaged to insure secrecy and that the conspirators' rooms were guarded by hotel detectives and armed guards.

The Federated Press said that immediately after the first meeting in mid-November, GM flatly rejected a UAW proposal to arbitrate, forcing the strike of 200,000 workers, and U. S. Steel refused a government offer to resume negotiations with the CIO Steelworkers, the corporation declaring that nothing could be accomplished "until OPA authorizes increase in prices for steel products."

Ship Wage Stall

On Dec. 4 the nation's shipbuilding employers suddenly absented themselves from a meeting of the Shipbuilding Stabilization Committee which was to have considered a government proposal for an 18c across-the-board increase for shipyard workers. Their absence prevented a quorum and the increase still has not been approved.

After another meeting between Dec. 18 and 19, the story continued, GE and Westinghouse turned down the invitation to meet the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers and federal conciliators in Washington; GM walked out on the fact-finding hearings, and the meat packers flatly told another fact-finding board there would be no wage increases without price increases.

Another meeting, FP revealed, took place around Jan. 15 after Murray postponed the steel strike because of a possible settlement. A week later Pres. Benjamin Fairless of U. S. Steel refused to accept the government's proposal of the 18½c increase and forced 750,000 steel workers to strike.

Plot Unmasked

On Jan. 18, three days before the steel strike began, Murray said:

"Congressmen who have been so loquacious in denouncing labor unions should pause in the face of the present situation. The evil conspiracy among American Big Business has been unmasked. Its clear aim is to exact unconditional surrender of the American people and the U. S. Government. This conspiracy must be stopped if the sacred principles for which we fought in our struggle to destroy Nazism are to be enjoyed by the American people in peace."

When the UAW withdrew from negotiations with GM this week, the union asserted the corporation was "not only trying to chisel on the President's recommendation of 19½c an hour (increase)" but was trying to strike from the contract 19 provisions ordered by the Natl. Mediation Board and the Natl. War Labor Board, including maintenance of membership, which with the other provisions had been in the contract since 1940.

At a citizens' mass rally in support of the strike at Detroit Feb. 14, attended by 20,000, it was announced by Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.) that Harold Ickes, who this week resigned as Secretary of the Interior, has accepted honorary chairmanship of the Natl. Citizens' Committee to Aid General Motors Strikers.

FRANKENSTEEN WITHDRAWS

Vice Pres. Richard T. Frankensteen of the CIO Auto Workers this week announced that he would not be a candidate for re-election at the UAW convention at Atlantic City in March.

Frankensteen, who barely lost to Edward T. Jeffries in the Detroit mayoralty campaign last November, said that he had made his decision because his duties required "long and continued absence from my home and my family." He said that he had been "offered several fine opportunities that would enable me to enjoy a fuller home life," but that he had made no decision on his future work.

WILLYS IS SIXTH TO SIGN UP

Making the sixth automotive company reaching a wage agreement with the UAW, the Willys-Overland Co. this week granted a 10c an hour "interim" pay increase with the final rate to be negotiated when the industry's pay scale is set. The raise became effective this week after ratification by the UAW locals concerned.

FEPC VOTE

THIS is the Senate vote on the motion to apply cloture to the Southern polltax filibuster against the FEPC bill (S 101). It is not a vote on the merits of the bill itself, since the filibusterers did not permit the Senate to consider it. In other words, the U. S. Senate was not allowed to vote on the issue.

The vote to end the filibuster was lost, though a majority of the Senate voted for it. It was lost because a cloture vote requires two-thirds majority to pass.

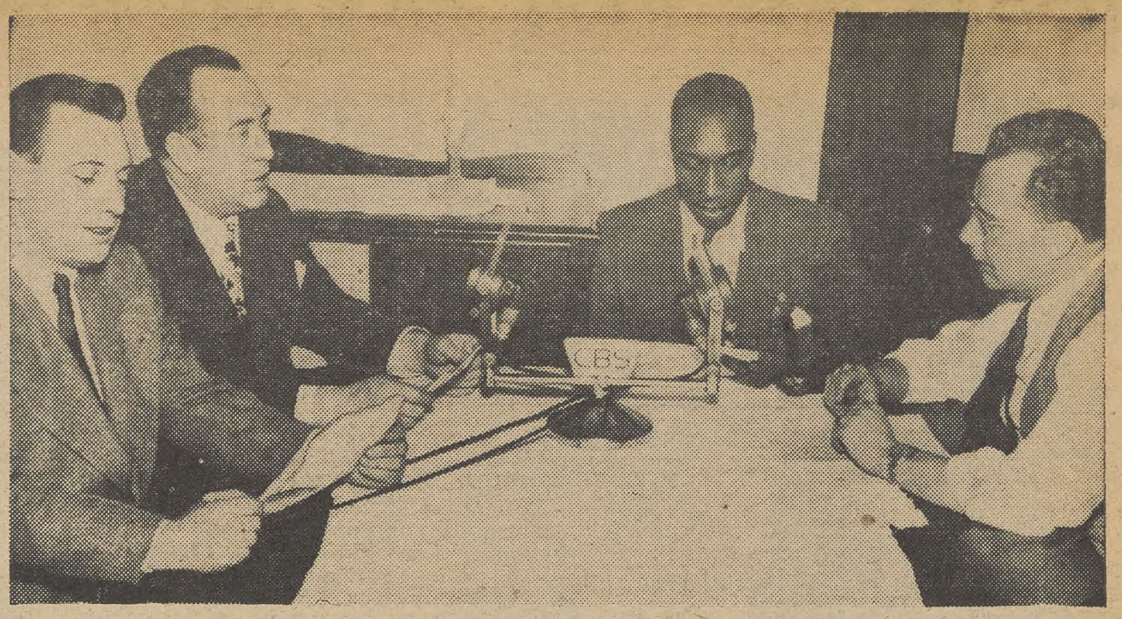
The CIO NEWS lists two votes on the question of taking up FEPC. The first one is the vote on the cloture motion itself, lost by 48-36. The second is a vote to take up FEPC again, before proceeding to the next order of business, which was lost by 71-12. Loss of this motion means that the fight for FEPC will have to be started again from scratch.

In the first column, a vote for cloture is a right vote, indicated by "R." A vote against cloture is a wrong vote, indicated by "W."

In the second column, a vote to take up FEPC again is a right vote, indicated by "R." A vote to take up the next order of business is a wrong vote, indicated by "W."

In both columns, "NV" indicates that the Senator did not vote. He may have been paired for or against, absent, or simply abstaining.

	No. 1	No. 2
ALABAMA
Bankhead, John H. 2d (D)	W	W
Hill, Lister	W	W
ARIZONA
Hayden, Carl (D)	W	W
McFarland, Ernest W. (D)	W	W
ARKANSAS
McClellan, John L. (D)	W	W
Fulbright, J. William (D)	W	W
CALIFORNIA
Downey, Sheridan (D)	R	W
Knowland, Thomas J. (R)	R	R
COLORADO
Johnson, Edwin C. (D)	R	W
Milliken, Eugene D. (R)	W	W
CONNECTICUT
Hart, Thomas C. (R)	R	W
McMahon, Brian (D)	R	W
DELAWARE
Tunnell, James M. (D)	R	R
Buck, C. Douglass (R)	R	W
FLORIDA
Andrews, Charles D. (D)	W	W
Pepper, Claude (D)	NV	NV
GEORGIA
George, Walter F. (D)	W	W
Russell, Richard B. (D)	W	W
IDAHO
Gossett, Charles C. (D)	NV	NV
Taylor, Glenn H. (D)	R	R
ILLINOIS
Brooks, C. Wayland (R)	NV	NV
Lucas, Scott W. (D)	R	W
INDIANA
Willis, Raymond E. (R)	R	W
Capehart, Homer E. (R)	R	W
IOWA
Hickenlooper, Bourke M. (R)	R	W
Wilson, George A. (R)	R	W
KANSAS
Capper, Arthur (R)	R	W
Reed, Clyde M. (R)	R	W
KENTUCKY
Barkley, Alben W. (D)	R	W
Stanfill, William A. (R)	NV	NV
LOUISIANA
Ellender, Allen J. (D)	W	W
Overton, John H. (D)	W	W
MAINE
Brewster, Owen (R)	R	W
White, Wallace H., Jr. (R)	W	W
MARYLAND
Radcliffe, George L. (D)	W	W
Tydings, Millard E. (D)	W	W
MASSACHUSETTS
Saltonstall, Leverett (R)	R	W
Walsh, David I. (D)	R	W
MICHIGAN
Ferguson, Homer (R)	R	R
Vandenberg, Arthur H. (R)	NV	NV
MINNESOTA
Ball, Joseph H. (R)	R	W
Shipstead, Henrik (R)	R	W
MISSISSIPPI
Bilbo, Theodore G. (D)	W	W
Eastland, James O. (D)	W	W
MISSOURI
Briggs, Frank P. (D)	R	W
Donnell, Forrest (R)	NV	NV
MONTANA
Murray, James E. (D)	R	W
Wheeler, Burton K. (D)	W	W
NEBRASKA
Butler, Hugh (R)	R	W
Wherry, Kenneth S. (R)	R	W
NEVADA
McCarran, Pat (D)	W	W
Carville, Edward P. (D)	W	W
NEW HAMPSHIRE
Bridges, Styles (R)	W	W
Tobey, Charles W. (R)	R	R
NEW JERSEY
Hawkes, Albert W. (R)	W	W
Smith, H. Alexander (R)	R	W
NEW MEXICO
Chavez, Dennis (D)	R	W
Hatch, Carl A. (D)	W	W
NEW YORK
Mead, James M. (D)	R	R
Wagner, Robert F. (D)	NV	NV
NORTH CAROLINA
Bailey, Josiah W. (D)	W	W
Hoey, Clyde R. (D)	W	W
NORTH DAKOTA
Langer, William (R)	R	R
Young, Milton R. (R)	NV	NV
OHIO
Huffman, James (D)	R	W
Taft, Robert A. (R)	R	W
OKLAHOMA
Moore, E. H. (R)	W	NV
Thomas, Elmer (D)	R	W
ORENGON
Cordon, Guy (R)	R	W
Morse, Wayne (R)	R	R
PENNSYLVANIA
Guffey, Joseph F. (D)	R	W
Myers, Francis J. (D)	R	W
RHODE ISLAND
Gerry, Peter G. (D)	W	W
Green, Theodore Francis (D)	R	W
SOUTH CAROLINA
Johnston, Olin D. (D)	W	W
Maybank, Burnet (D)	W	W
SOUTH DAKOTA
Bushfield, Harlan J. (R)	W	W
Gurney, Chan (R)	W	W
TENNESSEE
McKellar, Kenneth (D)	W	W
Stewart, Tom (D)	W	W
TEXAS
Connally, Tom (D)	NV	NV
O'Daniel, W. Lee (D)	W	W
UTAH
Murdock, Abe (D)	R	W
Thomas, Elbert B. (D)	R	W
VERMONT
Aiken, George D. (R)	R	R
Austin, Warren (R)	R	W
VIRGINIA
Byrd, Harry Flood (D)	W	W
Glass, Carter (D)	NV	NV
WASHINGTON
Magnuson, Warren G. (D)	R	R
Mitchell, Hugh B. (D)	R	R
WEST VIRGINIA
Kilgore, Harley M. (D)	R	W
Revercomb, Chapman (R)	R	W
WISCONSIN
La Follette, Rob. M. (Prog.)	R	R
Wiley, Alexander (R)	NV	NV
WYOMING
O'Mahoney, Joseph C. (D)	NV	NV
Robertson, Edward V (R)	W	W



"I've done everything but dig a fox hole to get some shelter for my family," declared Walter Bohacek, CIO Auto Workers veteran (left) in a "Cross Section CIO" broadcast over CBS Feb. 9. Next to Bohacek is UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas, CIO Housing Committee Chairman, who with CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week endorsed the emergency housing program advanced by Housing Expediter Wyatt and called for enactment of the Patman, Wagner-Ellender-Taft and Kilgore-Mitchell bills. Others in the picture are Ernest Cannon, vice-president, UAW Local 410, who told the need of minority groups for housing, and Bill Downs, CBS commentator (right).

CIO VETS DEMAND JOBLESS AID

A TOTAL of 1,200 veterans, all members of CIO unions, presented their demands — including unemployment compensation for strikers—at Michigan, New Jersey and Indianapolis capitols during the past week.

A ten-point program was drafted by 500 delegates to the Michigan CIO Veterans Legislative Conference at Lansing. They were told by UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas that the finances, forces and facilities of the UAW were at their disposal.

Planks in the program are: Medical aid and assistance for families of servicemen; a monthly state subsistence grant of $30 in addition to subsistence for education under the GI Bill; allowances for indigent veterans; Enactment of a State bill facilitating employment of disabled veterans and non-veterans; settlement of the steel and GM strikes by President Truman on the basis of the recommendation of his fact-finding committees; enactment of Federal and State FEPC laws; establishment by the state of veterans' service centers; and appointment of a state administrator to coordinate the needs of the state with Housing Expediter Wyatt's building program.

The conference passed a resolution expressing "fullest confidence" in Veterans Administrator Bradley and asking him "to disregard SNAFU remarks emanating from irresponsible individuals who speak only for themselves and not for their organizations."

Despite the opposition of Republican Governor Kelly, the veterans presented their demands for a bonus at a hearing before the state legislature.

Two hundred striking veterans, including members of the UAW from South Bend and Indianapolis, Steelworkers from Gary, and Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers from the General Electric plant at Kokomo, received a non-committal reply to their demands when they called on Governor Gates, also Republican, at Indianapolis.

Approximately 500 members of the Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers and of the Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers presented their demands to officials of the Republican administration at Trenton, N. J., but were unable to see Governor Edge, another Republican.

LEGION 'MAG' LAUDS LABOR

HEARTY praise of labor's contribution to victory and a verbal spanking of newspapers for playing up strikes out of all proportion to the facts are contained in the leading article, "Well Done, Home Front!" in the January issue of the American Legion Magazine.

"Now and then headlines screamed, '50,000 men on strike'," says the article written by Grove Patterson. "But headlines said little about the fifty million who stayed on the job. Strikes in the U. S. in wartime were vastly lower than one might have expected in terms of the heightened industrial activity."

Patterson points out that in 1918, the last year of World War I, the number of workers involved in strikes was 6.2%, compared to 2.8% in 1942 and .1% in 1944, and that in 1942 and 1943 there were fewer man-days of production lost proportionately through labor disputes in the U. S. than in Great Britain.

HITS PROPAGANDA

General Eisenhower this week assured the Los Angeles CIO Council that "proper action" will be taken to prevent anti-labor propaganda by officers. The chief of staff wrote the council after it had protested to him and President Truman a mimeographed recruiting appeal issued to personnel of the Walla Walla Army Airfield, Wash., which quoted a Capt. Blaylock of the 448th Bombardment Group as saying:

"Why go after a job where the right to strike keeps thousands of willing workers away from their jobs? Why go where you have to pay union fees, initiation fees, etc., for the privilege of working?"

ASKS BENEFITS

Action to assure payment of GI Bill unemployment benefits to striking veterans is sought by the Pennsylvania IUC, joining with the CIO Legislative Dept. and the CIO Veterans Committee in seeking a change in the law.

In a letter to all affiliates, Sec.-Treas. Harry Boyer of the IUC called for veterans' committees and individual veterans to write their Congressmen urging them to back GI Bill amendments to give striking veterans unemployment compensation — "readjustment allowances."

EXPOSE ARMY EXILE PLAN

ATTEMPT of Army Brass to silence Sgt. Kenneth J. Pettus and Cpl. Howard Rubin, managing editor and columnist, respectively, of the Pacific Edition of the Stars and Stripes, and the proposal to send them from Tokyo to Okinawa stirred up a storm of protest this week.

Both formerly did press relations work for CIO affiliates, Pettus being one-time editor of the Timber Worker, formerly official organ of the Intl. Woodworkers, and Rubin, formerly doing publicity for a local of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.

Orders to transfer the two men to Okinawa were stayed after the Stars and Stripes carried a lead story on page 1 on February 11, telling of the appeal of staff members who said:

"We believe that the transfer is linked with a statement signed by members of this staff on January 8 wherein we charged open and implied pressure was put on us 'to delete, distort and play down news' to serve personal and professional interests of the Army hierarchy."

MURRAY HITS CASE BILL, CITES CIO'S BARGAINING RECORD

By C. W. FOWLER

HOW long does labor have to cool off before it takes strike action? Three months? Four months? Six?

And why does Congress pass such bills as the Case bill, designed to shackle labor, when labor in its present struggles has conformed to every law and standard of decency in its attempt to reach agreement without strife?

These questions, asked by CIO Pres. Philip Murray of the Senators at last week's Labor Committee hearing, went unanswered, as did his challenge to Congress:

"It is the guilty that should be brought to Congress to face justice, the guilty men who have brazenly defied the government and the people in their refusal to bargain collectively with their workers.

"What do people have to do to cool off?" Murray asked. "When a union of 800,000 workers exercises every possible degree of patience without resort to strike for a period of over four months, isn't that enough —or do we have to have some compulsory, anti-union legislation on top of that?"

From Lee Pressman, CIO and steel's general counsel, the Committee heard the statement: "You can't lay aside the constitution of the U. S. just because you're dealing with labor relations. Once you suppress the right to strike, you take a long and positive step toward fascism in this country.

"The Case bill, the Ball-Hatch bill, the Ellender bill all violate the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech, press and assembly," Pressman told the Senators.

"How can Congress presume to say to a worker, you can quit your job by yourself, but if you walk off with one other person we'll put you in jail? The men who fought for this country in its first days, and the men who fought for it in the war against fascism would turn over in their graves if they knew what Congress is attempting to do by passing such measures as this."

Murray didn't get much of an argument from the Senators except Ellender (D. La.), who considers himself the anointed protector of the bosses, South and North. Sen. Ball, whose BBH brand of poison is up as a substitute for the Ellender-Truman bill, stayed strictly in his corner both for Murray and Pressman, though Pressman tried hard to draw him out for a scrap. The friends of labor on the committee — men like Murray (D. Mont.), LaFollette (P. Wis.), Guffey (D. Pa.), never opened their mouths.

First hand evidence of the way Southern polltax reactionaries work for all employers, regardless of what part of the country they're from, was seen in the line that Ellender took in his questioning of both Murray and Pressman.

To listen to Ellender repeating U. S. Steel's paid advertising propaganda in the form of questions, you might think that Louisiana's hottest issue was the welfare of the steel industry in Pennsylvania. Ellender, of course, works equally hard for Southern employers, as he has shown throughout the campaign on the 65c wage issue, and on FEPC.

Ball, who once a had a reputation as a liberal, was visibly startled when Pressman asked him if the Republicans intend, by passing his bill, to wipe out the only decent labor measure Herbert Hoover ever signed— the Norris-LaGuardia Act.

And Ellender was equally set back when Murray told him, in answering a question on prices: "We want wages that will let us live. Of course we don't want inflation. Nobody stands to lose more than the workers by inflation.

"The CIO believes firmly that we need continued price control, for a year at least, to stop runaway inflation. But first of all our people must have wages on which they can live.

"Nothing could be more harmful, to American liberties and to American economic welfare, than restrictive legislation of the kind the House has passed and is now before you for your consideration.

"I urge the Senate to reject the Case bill, the Ball-Hatch bill, the Ellender bill and all similar restrictive legislation aimed at unions."

TESTIFYING AGAINST CASE BILL: Philip Murray, right, and Sen. Guffey (D., Pa.) as the CIO President told the Senate Education and Labor Committee that the proposed legislation is designed to take labor back to the days of persecution by court injunction, as well as to saddle unions with new restrictions aimed at the right to organize.

3 FM MIKES FOR LABOR

TWO out of 19 Frequency Modulation (FM) radio permits granted this week went to CIO unions—the Auto Workers in Detroit and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Rochester, N. Y.

The AFL Ladies Garment Workers Union was granted an FM permit for Chattanooga, Tenn.

The CIO unions, according to the Federal Communications Commission, will be of "metropolitan" range. This is the lowest of three categories of FM power, "rural" and "community" being larger in the order named.

The Rochester station is to be operated by the Amalgamated Broadcasting System, Inc., set up by the ACW.

The permits give the unions authority to start construction. Barring delays due to shortage of equipment, the stations may be on the air by the end of the year, the FCC estimated.

Of the 16 other FM permits, 12 were granted to operators of Amplitude Modulation (AM) stations. Eight of the permits went to newspaper owners.

* * *

The best-known radio commentator in California, Sidney Roger, is on the air Monday through Friday, 6:15 p. m., WST, over KYA, for the San Francisco CIO Council.

Rogers during the war was a featured commentator for OWI, with his broadcasts being shortwaved to the Pacific theater.

* * *

Workers in the printing trades industry have joined in a campaign to bring about a federal tax on radio advertising on the grounds that radio chains and broadcasting stations hold a federal franchise on which they pay no direct levy, while devoting well over three-quarters of their air-time to commercial (i.e. paid advertising) programs.

The campaign is spearheaded by the Intl. Allied Printing Trades Assn., headed by Pres. John B. Haggerty of the Intl. Bro. of Bookbinders (AFL). Associated in the campaign of the group are the Printing Pressmen, Typographical Union, Stereotypers, and Photo-Engravers, all of the AFL.

FRAME FIVE CIO MEN FOR MURDER

FIVE union men will go on trial March 19 in Little Rock, Ark., "framed" under an act which is the handiwork of the so-called Christian American Assn. and Sen. W. Lee (Pappy) O'Daniel of Texas, according to the CIO Food, Tobacco, Agricultural & Allied Workers Union. The five unionists are charged with violence on a picket line.

The truth is, stated the FTA, that the only violence in a strike of Southern Cotton Oil mill workers was the murder of a union member. The FTA said a strikebreaker who originally was held in connection with the stabbing of Walter Campbell "walks scot free on the streets of Little Rock, while five union men, four of whom did not even witness the killing, are indicted under Act 193 and are liable to one to two years in the penitentiary if convicted."

The FTA is conducting a national drive to raise funds for legal defense and to place the issues before the people of Arkansas. CIO locals in the Southwest which have been fighting Christian American legislation, are rushing funds for the defense of the five unionists.

Basic issues in the Southern Cotton Oil Mill strike, called last Dec. 17 after a strike vote under the Smith-Connally law, involve the union's efforts to get the 50c hourly wage rate increased to 60c, with time and a half for overtime.

The FTA signed its first contract in 1941 with this concern, a subsidary of Wesson Oil & Snowdrift Co. which has a hundred gins and 72 crushing mills strung from South Carolina to Texas.

The wage scale then was 35c an hour. The working day was 12 hours with no overtime pay. The lobby of the Southern Seed Crushers Assn. had been able to exempt the cotton oil industry from provisions of the Wage-Hour law.

Negotiations for renewal of the contract in the summer of 1945 broke down on the union's demand for overtime payments and for a 10c increase. After U. S. Conciliators were unable to bring the two sides together, and a union offer of arbitration was rejected, FTA Local 98 called a strike Dec. 17.

The union charges that circumstances surrounding the murder of Walter Campbell, and the attack on his buddy, Robert Brooks, neither of whom were pickets, point definitely to a frame-up. The two men, who had been urged to return to work by phone only a few hours before Campbell was stabbed to death, were a block from the mill plant when five strikebreakers approached them.

While Campbell was being attacked, Brooks was set upon by part of the gang so that he did not actually see what happened to Campbell. Only two company men on the scene and the strikebreakers witnessed the killing.

Otha Williams, the strikebreaker who was held in connection with the stabbing, was released, but the dead man's buddy, Brooks, and four pickets who were a block away from the scene of the crime and could not witness the killing because of darkness, were indicted under Act 193.

The night of Dec. 26, police rounded up all involved in the slaying, as well as active pickets, and later that night released Williams under $1,000 bond, while the union men were released under bail ranging from $1,000 to $2,500 for the chairman of the union group.

Later when the Grand Jury convened, Williams was freed and the five union men were indicted.

CIO's Own Radio Shows EVERY SATURDAY

Two Full, Weekly 15-Minute Radio Programs, of and for CIO

1. Labor-USA. Dramatic shows. American Broadcasting Co. network. Saturdays, 6:45 to 7 P. M., EST.

2. Cross-Section—CIO. On-the-spot interviews of CIO people by William Downs, noted CBS commentator. Saturdays, 3:45 to 4 P. M., EST.

Live Listening!

1 CIO and its affiliates have written—sometimes in blood—their basic philosophy: "To bring about the effective organization of the working men and women of America, regardless of race, creed, color or nationality . . ." To the CIO Natl. Maritime Union, which lost 6,000 of its members in the war, the good will expressed in words during just concluded Negro History Week and American Brotherhood Week (Feb. 17-24) has already been expressed in action. Negroes and whites, Protestants, Catholics and Jews — men of every creed—sail NMU ships and (top) democratically discuss their common problems. The NMU contract, signed with the shipping companies, says: "There shall be no discrimination because of race, creed, color or national origin."

2 Aboard the S. S. Argentina (left) NMU seamen in white, black and brown skins work in harmony. Their bravery in lightly armed ships, under threat of torpedoing and bombing, is a matter of wartime record. On Natl. Maritime Day, May 22, 1942, then Mayor LaGuardia of N. Y. awarded medals to 13 NMU seamen for heroic conduct "above and beyond the call of duty." Four of them were Negroes. The NMU's policy is to translate into peace the wartime policy of FDR—"to encourage full participation in the Natl. Defense program by all citizens, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin in the firm belief that the democratic way of life within the nation can be defended successfully only with the help and support of all groups within its borders."

3 Democracy at work a are elected by crews
"We are able to expose th

REAL

"TEAMWORK may word to the future
it, there can be no future.
energy makes teamwork nations of the world. W country, the need for a among its racial and re ticularly crucial.

"This," said CIO Pre
why the CIO recognize such work as is being c Natl. Conference of Chri sponsoring organization hood Week, Feb. 17-24).

The Natl. CIO Committ
ination is active in the affiliates. One of these le CIO Natl. Maritime Union

The CIO seamen in first article of their c jective "to unite in one less of creed, color, na affiliation, all workers ship directly or indire maritime industry."

But two of many case fought discrimination tel ion's policy than all the tution:

THE union's most cele connection came as a ship for Hugh Mulzac, N

It didn't matter that t ing to sea on steam and 35 years. It didn't matte
AB, quartermaster, bos' mate, and chief officer on ships. It didn't matter th of the U. S. Shipping B awarded its certificate in diploma in navigation an Correspondence Nautical
cate from the Sperry C
It didn't matter that as fa passed his examination going steamers unlimited fied to command any tonnage on any ocean.

None of these things
He was a Negro. So, for at work at the NMU Trade Union & Organizing School, N. Y. City. Students by crews at sea. Shipowners' discrimination against minorities is met head on. expose these tactics for what they are—attempts to create disunity in our ranks."

4 It's unity at play as well as at work in the NMU recreation hall, N. Y. City. About 10% of the union's membership is Negro. The NMU was one of six groups chosen in a nation-wide poll to determine who had done most for the improvement of race relations.

AL BROTHERHOOD

RK may be taken as the key he future of this world. Without no future. The release of atomic teamwork necessary among the world. Within our own great ed for a feeling of brotherhood al and religious groups is par-l.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray, "is recognizes the importance of is being carried forward by the e of Christians and Jews" (the anization of American Brother-. 17-24).

O Committee to Abolish Discrim-e in the battle. So are all CIO f these leading the fight is the ime Union.

amen in 1937 wrote into the f their constitution their ob-te in one organization, regard-color, nationality or political workers eligible for member-or indirectly engaged in the stry."

many cases in which the NMU nation tell more about the un-an all the words in the consti-most celebrated victory in this came as a result of a fight for Mulzac, Negro.

ter that this man had been go-team and sailing vessels for over n't matter that he had sailed as ster, bos'n, third mate, second officer on British and American matter that he was a graduate Shipping Board School and was rtificate in 1918, that he held a igation and radio from the Intl. Nautical School, and a certifi-Sperry Gyro Compass School. that as far back as 1922 he had amination as master of ocean-unlimited, and was thus quali-nd any merchant ship of any ocean.

ese things made any difference. ro. So, for over 20 years he had to sail as a steward or cook. When he made application at the shipping lines for the position of master, to which he was rightfully entitled by training and experience, he was given a run-around. "Sorry, we're all filled up." . . . "Leave your name and address and we'll see what we can do."

The NMU devoted all its strength to this case. From every port in the country, from ships on every sea, resolutions and telegrams of protest went to the authorities in Washington. Then, in cooperation with the Negro Labor Victory Committee and other interested groups, the union organized delegations to Washington to argue the case in person.

The NMU had its way. On Sept. 23, 1942, Captain Edward Macauley of the War Shipping Administration announced the appointment of Captain Hugh Mulzac to command the new Liberty freighter Booker T. Washington.

BACK in 1941, when the NMU was only four years old, Leo Haskell, a member since its inception, applied for admission to the Officers' Training School conducted by the U. S. Maritime Service at Fort Trumbull, in New London, Conn.

A Jew, Haskell had been an active seaman for 10 years, with a record of uninterrupted service. To be eligible for this school, which turns out licensed officers for America's merchant marine, a man is required to have three years' sea service. Nevertheless, Haskell's application was not acted upon favorably.

The matter was brought to the attention of the NMU. The union, today numbering more than 90,000 members of every race, color and creed, took up Haskell's case with the Maritime Service and won his admission to the school.

On May 8, 1942, 443 men were graduated at Fort Trumbull and the first prize, "For the Student with Highest Standing," went to Leo Haskell. He was singled out by the commanding officer, together with another NMU member who had won second prize, for special commendation at the graduation exercises. Shipping companies were waiting in line for Haskell's services. And the school which first sought to bar him now desired his services as an instructor.

5 NMU art classes (top) give all members a chance to express talents. L. to r.: Instructor Alzira Peirce, Henry W. Hall, Teachers Training College, Trinidad, and NMU Member Cameron Hunt. (Below) Capt. Hugh Mulzac and men of famed Booker T. Washington.

Tomorrow's Citizens By Rose H. Alschuler

EASY DOES IT

You thought you'd give your child a treat -- something new and different. He barely tasted it, made a face, and spit it out. Know it takes time for children to get used to the taste, smell and texture of different foods. Don't be annoyed! Don't talk about it! Serve it without comment soon again! Left alone, not coaxed, children naturally get hungry and eat. Helen Post photo. Copyright, 1946. The CIO NEWS.

ROUND 1 OPA VICTORY IN SIGHT

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

ONE of the last paragraphs in a recent Washington Post story on the fight over price control within the administration said:

"One phenomenon of the controversy was a sudden flow of mail to the once unpopular OPA supporting Bowles' general hold-the-line position and his advocacy of the Price Control Act."

The American people are aware of the terrific danger of inflation if price control is relaxed, and it was their support which enabled Bowles, almost single-handed, to defeat the surrender-to-big-business price policy advocated by Reconversion Director Snyder.

As this is written, the final outcome of the struggle has not been announced, but there is every reason to believe that Bowles is going to be given final authority, under Truman, on the stabilization program.

The next round will be fought in Congress. The National Assn. of Manufacturers again leads the opposition with ads in major newspapers throughout the country demanding an end to price control.

American consumers are organizing to win the fight to keep OPA. A long list of organizations including the Congress of Parents and Teachers, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the League of Women Voters, the National Education Assn., the Women's Trade Union League and the Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO and AFL have joined in issuing a call to "Fight Inflation Now."

It is a vigorous document which concudes:

"Our task is clear. We must let every Congressman know that we, the people, all of us, demand:

"Price and Rent Control for ANOTHER YEAR.

"IMMEDIATE extension of the Price Control Act.

"NO weakening amendments.

"ADEQUATE APPROPRIATIONS for the big job of holding the line against inflation."

Suggestions for community action are going out with their call to the member groups of over 20 organizations. They urge participation in state-wide anti-inflation conferences already called for February in a number of states; letters to the papers, leaflets, speakers, radio programs, resolutions, etc.

TENS OF THOUSANDS DIE TOO EARLY

By THEODORE SANDERS, M. D.

Member, Executive Committee, Physicians Forum

AT A hearing before the Senate Subcommittee on Wartime Health and Education, Senator Claude Pepper asked a doctor who was testifying:

"What percentage of the people would you say once a year, or once every five years for that matter, go through a good clinical examination?"

The reply was, "One in 100, maybe."

This answer reveals one of the fundamental weaknesses in our system of medical care.

How often should you go to the doctor for a check-up, and of what should the examination consist?

The answer will depend upon your age and sex, and to some extent upon occupation and place of residence. In general, the following schedule is recommended:

From birth to age 5—Monthly examinations during the first year; every three months during the second year; every six months during the third, fourth, and fifth years.

After this, everyone should be seen once a year by a doctor. Children from 5 to 15 should have an annual general physical check-up, including examination of the teeth and eyes, and, in certain regions tests for malaria and hookworm.

From 15 to 40 every person should have a chest x-ray and a serological test for syphilis every year. The syphilis test is especially necessary for pregnant women.

Those in the age group 35-50 should have a urinalysis for albumen and glucose once a year. After 50, microscopic analysis of the urine will detect diabetes and other diseases of the urinary system

A hemogloblin test once a year will give early notice of anemia and may lead to detection of other blood conditions, and is especially important for women between the ages of 15, and 50.

If regular medical examinations did nothing but discover early cases of cancer, they would justify themselves from that standpoint alone.

There is not the slightest room for doubt about the fact that the kind of medical attention outlined above would save tens of thousands of Americans from premature death every year. As the doctor who was questioned by Senator Pepper admitted, only about one person in 100 get periodic medical care.

Why? It is because care of this kind is more expensive than most people can afford when the pay on an individual basis.

If, however, the new Wagner-Murray-Dingle Bill (S 1606) were passed, a national health program would be set up which would make such scientific care available to everyone.

TRUMAN TOLD OF UNEQUAL RIGHTS PLAN

"All organized labor, including 13 million workers, and millions of women concerned with equal opportunities, will fight to the finish the so-called 'equal rights' amendment," was the message brought to President Truman this week by Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, chairman of the Natl. Committee to Defeat the Un-Equal Rights Amendment. The CIO and its auxiliaries are among the organizations opposing the proposed amendment.

In an interview she told Truman that the amendment will not do away with the discrimination against women resulting from prejudice and tradition.

"On the other hand," Mrs. McAllister said, "the amendment will wipe out legislation protecting working women from exploitation, laws establishing working standards for women and will threaten family support and other types of legislation affecting women as individuals and citizens."

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO. QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1725-41 W. North Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

SOLD EVERYWHERE

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP
PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Ralph W. Tillotson, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Erie, Pa., reports: Solar Lamp Co., Warren, Pa., USA-CIO 34, no union 32.

CIO Reg. Dir. Walter Harris, Chicago, advises: A. Brandwein & Co., Chicago, production and maintenance employes, CIO Textile Workers 148, against 85.

CIO Field Rep. Ralph Dawson, Los Angeles, reports: The Natl. Federation of Federal Employes 863, an independent union, this week voted 34 to 3 to join the CIO Federal Workers and have applied for a charter.

Joseph Kinch, UPWA Field Rep., reports: Phaelzer Restaurant & Supply House, CIO 50, AFL 5. This establishment is the largest hotel and restaurant supply house in the field.

Robert C. Edwards, Director, Org. Com. PJNW-CIO, reports: The CIO won recognition at two New York City plants—Trio Company, involving 25 employes, and House of de Rita, involving 45 employes. They were organized by the N. Y. organizing staff under the direction of Asst. Org. Dir. L. T. Koletka and aided by Local 147.

The ACA-CIO strike against Western Union in New York ended last week when the company agreed to accept arbitration. The Transport Workers Union were forced on strike in Philadelphia and have now returned to work. According to press reports, the company granted substantial wage increases and a preferential union shop.

The steel strike remains unsettled. Our lines are solid and the delay rests some place between the corporation and the government. The GM strike likewise continues, with the corporation still refusing to abide by the award of the fact-finding board.

UE Pres. Albert Fitzgerald reports a settlement with General Motors electrical division but the strikes continue against General Electric and Westinghouse.

* * *

Following the issuance against mass picketing by Vice Chancellor John O. Bigelow of Newark, N. J., against the UERMWA-CIO, Mayor Reed of that city addressed the workers on the Village Green, pledging every support to the strike. This is the place where Gen. Joseph Bloomfield once taught patriots of the Revolution of 1776.

The head of the so-called conference of small business organizations is contiuing its attack upon labor in costly advertisements and is soliciting the businessmen throughout the country for money. An investigation of this group and its connections, sources of its income, etc., would be interesting. Operating in behalf of small business is only their guise to be operating for big business.

* * *

The United Paperworkers came through with an agreement at West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co. of 12c additional per hour increase, added to the 4c increase received since V-J Day. Credit for this fine achievement goes to CIO Reg. Dir. Frank J. Bender, UPW Sec.-Treas. Harry Sayre, and local representatives. Congratulations! The vote of the Paper Workers local unions to increase the per capita tax is going over overwhelmingly. They are determined to make their union strong.

The CIO Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians won an outstanding victory in the current wage-strike situation at the RCA in Camden, N. J., when the company in a last-minute settlement before the expiration of the 30-day period under the War Disputes Act granted a 17½c hourly increase across the board for more than 500 technical employes. In addition, the company agreed to a sum of $175,000 for retroactive adjustments.

Young strike supporter walks with his mother in a picket line outside N. Y. Wall St. offices of the Phelps Dodge Copper Products Co., while behind them a still younger supporter is carried by her father. Some 800 Phelps Dodge workers, represented by the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, struck Feb. 3 in protest against the company's repeated refusal to negotiate a contract since July, 1944.

TRANSIT STRIKE WON

TERMS of the agreement which brought a quick end this week to the two-day strike of some 9,600 employes of the Philadelphia Transportation Co. were ratified with enthusiastic cheers of approval at a mass meeting of striking members of Local 234, CIO Transport Workers Union.

A 12c hourly wage increase for all employes, an improved pension plan and added vacation provisions giving three weeks' paid vacations to employes with 10 or more years' service were the highlights of the agreement. TWU leaders hailed the settlement as a tremendous victory for the union.

"Seldom has there been so much of a victory in a two-day struggle," said TWU Pres. Michael Quill, who was in Philadelphia with other international officers during the strike.

On the controversial issue of the union shop, one of the major snarls in negotiations between the union and PTC, the agreement provides that all employes who have been with the company since April 1944, and all new employes shall be required to be members of the union. The union's demand to have those employed before April, 1944 also included in its membership is to be taken up at a company-union conference not later than August, 1946.

All trolley, bus and subway lines in Philadelphia were at a standstill from the time the strikers walked out at 12:01 AM, Feb. 11, until terms of the settlement were ratified at the union meeting the next night.

Terms of the agreement which ended the strike were reached at a five-hour conference between union and company representatives called by Mayor Bernard Samuel.

Efforts of U. S. Dept. of Labor conciliators to avert the strike failed after the company turned down a union arbitration offer.

25,000 UE WORKERS RATIFY 18½c OFFER

THE GM electrical division and RCA settlements with the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers prove that "General Electric and Westinghouse can also grant substantial wage increases to their 175,000 striking employes not conditioned on any price increase," UE Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald said this week.

Fitzgerald's statement was made following unanimous ratification by UE's 25,000 GM workers of the agreement to settle on an 18.5c wage increase. In addition, UE-GM workers will get $1,250,000 in back pay under a clause making 13.5 of the 18.5c retroactive to Nov. 7, 1945. This will amount to about $60 per worker, Fitzgerald added.

The agreement also provides for an 80c-an-hour hiring-in rate for men and women, to be raised to a 90c minimum after a probationary period.

"GM is the chief competitor of GE and Westinghouse in the manufacture of electric refrigerators," Fitzgerald said. "In addition, RCA is the chief competitor of GE and Westinghouse in radios.

"Prior to the settlement with GM, our union reached an agreement with RCA under which RCA workers were paid a 17.5c increase, plus six paid holidays and other benefits. In both GM and RCA settlements a price increase was not a condition of settlement.

"Throughout the war each of these four corporations followed an identical wage increase pattern," Fitzgerald said.

"Each of the four made huge war profits, and could well afford an increase. GE and Westinghouse made a combined wartime profit of $424,000,000 and have reserves of $398,000,000.

"But Westinghouse refuses to make any wage offer whatsoever, and GE makes only an inadequate 10c or 10 per cent offer based on wage cutting, speed up and contract cancellation."

HARVESTER STRIKERS AWAIT PANEL REPORT

WITH its strike against 11 plants of the Intl. Harvester Company holding firm on all fronts, the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Union announced this week in Chicago that it had completed presentation of its case for a 30% wage increase before the government fact-finding panel. The hearings were held almost continuously for two weeks.

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach this week extended for another two weeks the date on which the panel's report on the Harvester case is due. Feb. 18 was the date originally set.

FE-CIO leaders presented evidence to the panel, based on extensive research into IHC's $75-million-a-year war-level income and $300 million surplus, to show that the 30% increase demanded would add only 10% to operations costs, and that even this would be more than offset by other factors already in effect.

These include elimination of overtime pay; savings of a minimum of $20,000,000 under the new 1946 tax laws; vast expansion of business as shown by IHC's acquisition of former war plants and construction of new plants in Memphis, Tenn.; Ft. Madison, Ia.; and Wood River, Ill.

FE Sec. Treas. Gerald Fielde, leader of the Harvester strike, said that after the union took strike action IHC raised its original offer of a 10% increase to 17c an hour, but the FE was forced to reject this, "because it was not supported by contract terms capable of enforcing it in the plants."

"Our 30,000 IHC members have voted to remain out until a contract acceptable to them is signed," he declared.

WU AGREES TO ACA TERMS TO END SEVEN-WEEK STRIKE

THE 34-day strike against Western Union in N. Y. City ended Feb. 11 in victory for the CIO American Communications Assn., with the huge telegraph monopoly agreeing to terms which the union was willing to accept before the strike began.

WU and ACA agreed to arbitrate a disputed paragraph under the Natl. War Labor Board directive. The union said that a favorable decision would give 2,000 senior employes $2 million annually in wage increases. The company and the union accepted the other provisions of the WLB directive, giving increases to 5,000 other workers.

After the ACA members had ratified settlement terms, ACA Pres. Joseph P. Selly hurried to the picket lines in front of the company's main building and declared Feb. 9 over the loudspeaker in the union's truck that "the greatest picket line in the history of N. Y. was adjourned." A crowd of several thousand cheered Selly and sang "Solidarity Forever."

Selly said that it was a "tremendous victory that the company agreed to submit to arbitration a question which it formerly refused to arbitrate."

Similar terms had been accepted by ACA but rejected by WU when proposed by Mayor O'Dwyer on the eve of the strike, but the two parties were brought together by N. Y. Supreme Court Justice Levy before whom the company had brought proceedings to ban mass picketing.

CIO SPELLS D-E-M-O-C-R-A-C-Y

THE newspapers' running attack on CIO unions based on allegations of dictatorship and failure to account for expenditure of members' dues should be halted in its tracks by a survey made by the CIO Dept. of Research and Education.

The utter phoniness of the press charges made since the first CIO local showed that it could benefit its members is shown by the survey which shows that affiliates of the CIO are democratically-run institutions which give a full accounting to their members of financial transactions, 32 publishing reports available to the press.

The charge of dictatorship is knocked into oblivion by the very first statement in the survey which declares that race, color, sex or creed are no bars to CIO membership and "that every member of a CIO union has full and equal voting rights."

Prepared by Katherine Pollak Ellickson, assistant director of research, and Everett Kassalow, also of the research dept., the survey shows that "top officers of CIO unions are elected by the members or their representatives who are chosen for this task" and that with one exception where the president is elected every three years, these elections are held every year or every two years.

Many newspaper stories of the survey led off with the salaries paid to the heads of the international unions, but in the face of the following sections of the survey it was impossible to "blow up" the facts on the remuneration to the union leaders:

"Two-thirds of all CIO unions pay top salaries of less than $6,000 a year and a majority of the unions pay a top salary of $100 a week or less. Is this too much for the job as serving as the head of an organization of 50,000 to 100,000 members?

"Some of the larger unions pay slightly higher salaries, but it is worthwhile to contrast these with the salaries paid to the heads of corporations with whom these union officers bargain:

"Bethlehem Steel, for example, paid a top salary of $221,645 in 1944; Westinghouse Electric's highest paid executive received $198,400 in 1944. Figures for 1944 on top salaries paid by the General Motors Corp. are not available, but President Wilson received $459,041 in 1943. Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO Auto Workers, which has bargaining relationships with Ford, Chrysler and other motor car manufacturers, as well as General Motors, is paid $9,000 a year."

How CIO Unions Are Run	How Often Are International Conventions Held?	How Often Are Officers Elected?	How Are Officers Nominated? By:	How Are Officers Elected? By:	Are Conventions Open to Public? [3]	Before Members Can Be Expelled Do They Have: Right to a Hearing?	Right to Appeal to Convention?
Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Automobile Workers	Annually	Annually	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Barbers and Beauty Culturists	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Amalgamated Clothing Workers	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Membership referendum	Yes	Yes	Yes
American Communications Assn.	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Membership petitions	Membership referendum	Yes	Yes	Yes
Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers	Annually	Annually	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Farm Equipment & Metal Workers	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Federal Workers	Annually	Annually	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	No
Fishermen and Allied Workers	Annually	Annually	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Nominating committee at Conv.	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Fur & Leather Workers	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Furniture Workers	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Membership in local meetings	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Membership in local meetings	Membership referendum	Yes	Yes	No [6]
Inlandboatmen's Union of the Pacific	No Conventions [1]	Every 2 years	Membership in division meetings	Membership referendum		Yes
Longshoremen & Warehousemen	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Membership referendum	Yes	Yes	Yes
Marine Cooks and Stewards	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Membership petitions	Membership referendum	Yes	Yes	Yes
Marine Engineers' Beneficial Assn.	Annually	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	No	Yes	Yes
Marine & Shipbuilding Workers	Annually	Annually	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
National Maritime Union	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Membership petitions	Membership referendum	Yes	Yes	Yes
Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers	Annually	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Membership referendum	Yes	Yes	Yes
American Newspaper Guild	Annually	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Membership referendum	Yes	Yes	Yes
Office and Professional Workers	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Oil Workers	Annually	Annually	Delegates at Convention	Membership referendum	Yes	Yes	Yes
Packinghouse Workers	Annually	Annually	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes [4]	Yes	Yes
Playthings, Jewelry & Novelty Workers	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employees	Every 3 years	Every 3 years	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Rubber Workers	Annually	Annually	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Shoeworkers	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Locals	Membership referendum	Yes	Yes	Yes [6]
State, County & Municipal Workers	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Steelworkers	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Locals	Membership referendum	Yes	Yes	Yes
Stone & Allied Products Workers	Every 3 years	Every 2 years [2]	Locals	Locals	Yes	Yes	Yes
Textile Workers Union	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Transport Service Employees	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Transport Workers Union	Every 2 years	Every 2 years	Convention Delegates at	Delegates at Convention	Yes	Yes	Yes
Woodworkers	Annually	Every 2 years	Delegates at Convention	Membership referendum	Yes	Yes	Yes

[1] Annual conference of Executive Council is central policy body, and its recommendations are submitted to membership referendum.
[2] President and Secretary-Treasurer every 2 years, Vice President and Executive Board every year.
[3] The Convention delegates may call for a closed executive session, but this has been done only on rare occasions by any CIO union.
[4] Open to press and limited number of visitors.
[5] May appeal to referendum vote.
[6] May also appeal to referendum vote.

NOTE: A few newly organized unions have not yet adopted constitutions and were not included in this survey.

Financial Practices Of CIO Unions

	Annual Salary of Highest Paid Officer	Initiation Fee	Monthly Dues	Portion of Dues Going to International Union (Per Capita Tax)	How Does International Levy Special Financial Assessments?	International Assessments Paid Last Year by Typical Member	How Does International Report on Receipts and Expenditures to Membership?	Are International Books Audited and by Whom?
Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians	$4,680	$3 to $10, usually $3	$1 to $2.50, average is $1.35	75c	Membership referendum	None	Quarterly report to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
Automobile Workers	$9,000	$2 to $15	$1	40c	Executive Board	$1	Semi-annual report to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
Barbers and Beauty Culturists	$4,680	$3 to $25	$1 to $4	40c	Convention or referendum	None	Statements issued by accountant	Yes, International Auditor
Clothing Workers, Amalgamated	$15,000	$10 maximum	Varies, usually $1.40 to $2 [6]	70c	Ex. Bd. with membership referendum	None	At Convention	Yes, Convention Com. and C.P.A.
Communications Association	$4,680	$1 to $20 [7]	$1 to $4 [7]	45% of dues, maximum	Membership referendum	$1	Published in union journal	Yes, C.P.A.
Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers	$5,200	$2 minimum, rarely more	$1 minimum, usually $1.50	35c	Convention or membership referendum	Never been levied	Monthly report to locals	Yes, trustees and C.P.A.
Farm Equipment & Metal Workers	$5,000	$2 to $15	$1 to $1.50	75c	Ex. Bd. may levy $1 yearly. Referendum may vote more	Limited to $1 per year	Quarterly by Executive Board	Yes, C.P.A.
Federal Workers	$5,000	$2 maximum, most pay $1	$1.50 maximum, most pay $1	50c	Not permitted	None	At Convention	Yes, C.P.A.
Fishermen and Allied Workers	$4,160	$10 maximum	Set by locals, most 50c to $1.25	20c	Membership referendum	$1	C.P.A. semi-annual report	Yes, C.P.A.
Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers	$4,940	$5 in union shop, $2 elsewhere	$1.50 minimum	50% of dues	Convention or membership referendum	None	Semi-annual report to Executive Board	Yes
Fur & Leather Workers	$5,200	$1 and up, as set by locals	$1.40 minimum [3]	50c [5]	Convention	Up to $2	Int'l Fin. Com. makes regular audit [14]	Yes, Finance Com. and C.P.A.
Furniture Workers	$5,720	$2 to $15	$1 to $2	40c	Executive Board	Never been levied	Quarterly report to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers	$3,600	$2 to $5, may be waived	$1 to $1.50	60c	Not permitted	None	At Convention	Yes, C.P.A.
Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers	$5,600	$2 minimum, a few locals charge more	1% of earnings	40% of dues	Not permitted	None	Monthly report to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
Inlandboatmen's Union of the Pacific	(1)	$10 maximum	$1.50 to $3	60c	2/3 vote in membership referendum	None, except $1 death benefit	C.P.A. quarterly report to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
Longshoremen & Warehousemen	$5,980	$1 to $10	Set by locals	65c	Membership referendum	$1 (only one in recent years)	Quarterly audit sent to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
Marine Cooks and Stewards	$4,840	$32 [2]	$2	(11)	Not permitted	None	At Gen. Council and weekly port meetings	Yes, C.P.A.
Marine Engineers' Beneficial Assn.	$7,500	$50	$2	37½c	None	None	Not reported but available	Yes, C.P.A.
Marine & Shipbuilding Workers	$8,000	$2 to $10, 80% pay $2	$1.25	55c	Executive Board	None	At Convention	Yes, C.P.A.
National Maritime Union	$7,800	$15 [4]	$2.50	No locals	Not permitted	None	Monthly, in union press [15]	Books open to members
Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers	$6,000	$2 to $10, most pay $2	$1 to $5, majority $1 to $1.50	65c	Ex. Bd. may levy $1 yearly for emergency	None	Monthly report to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
Newspaper Guild	$6,750	$1 to $10	$1 to $5	75c and $1	Convention and Executive Board	75c to $1.50	C.P.A. quarterly and annual reports	Yes, C.P.A.
Office and Professional Workers	$7,800	$2	$1.50 to $3.50	55c	Ex. Bd. may levy $2, otherwise by Convention or ref.	None	At Ex. Bd. meetings and Convention	Yes, C.P.A.
Oil Workers	$6,600	$2 to $25	$2 to $3; 95% pay $2	90c	Membership referendum	None	Monthly report to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
Packinghouse Workers	$4,500	$2 [3]	Set by local, 95% pay $1.50	75c	Ex. Bd. may levy yearly. Conv. or ref. may add $1	None	Semi-annual report	Yes, by auditor
Playthings, Jewelry & Novelty Workers	$5,200	$2 to $10, 90% of locals charge $2	2/3 pay $1; 1/3 pay $1.50	50c	Convention or Ex. Bd., with membership referendum	$2	Semi-annual audit sent to locals	Yes, auditor and accountant
Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employees	$10,000	$10 maximum, average is $5	$1 to $4	40c	Executive Board	$2 (first ever levied)	Report at each Exec Bd. meeting	Yes, audtior and C.P.A.
Rubber Workers	$4,500	$2	$1	45c	2/3 vote in membership referendum	None	Quarterly audit sent to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
Shoeworkers	$5,200	$2 minimum	$1 minimum [9]	60c [9]	Executive Board	None	Quarterly report to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
State, County & Municipal Workers	$5,000	$1 to $5, most pay $1	$1 to $2, most pay $1.50	50c and 75c [12]	Not permitted	None	Semi-annual report to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
Steelworkers	$20,000	$3	$1 to $1.50	75c	Not permitted	None	C.P.A report to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
Stone & Allied Products Workers	$3,000	$5 minimum [4]	$1.25 [10]	75c	2/3 vote in membership referendum	None	Annual report to local officers	Yes, C.P.A.
Textile Workers Union	$10,000	$1 to $10 [5]	$1 minimum, most pay $1.50	50c and 75c [13]	Ex. Bd. with membership referendum	Never been levied	At Convention	Yes, C.P.A.
Transport Service Employees	$4,000	$5	$1.50	$1	2/3 vote of all locals	None	Quarterly report to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
Transport Workers Union	$5,200	$3	$1.25 to $1.75 [7]	50c and 75c	Membership referendum	None	Semi-annual report to locals	Yes, C.P.A.
Woodworkers	$5,200	$5 [4]	$1 minimum	60c	Conv. with majority vote in membership ref.	None	Quarterly report to locals	Yes, C.P.A.

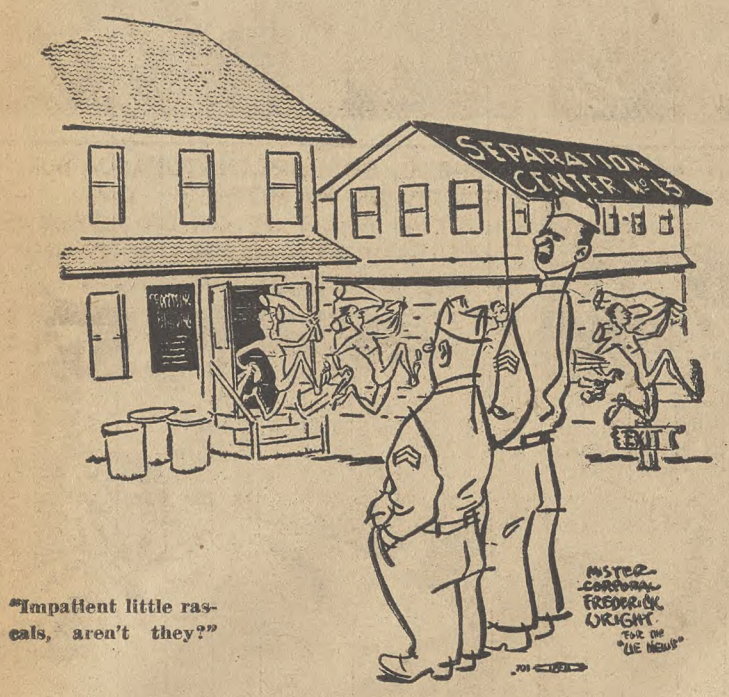
[1] No full-time international officers.
[2] Helps to cover burial benefit, shipwreck benefit, hospital benefit, etc.
[3] Although a few locals add fees for special purposes, the total never exceeds $5.
[4] International frequently reduces charge for new locals.
[5] Majority of locals make no charge.
[6] Set by locals, usually varies from 35c to 50c per week.
[7] Depend on earnings.
[8] Minimum 35c weekly, with 12½c weekly as regular per capita tax. In a few locals dues are based on a percentage of earnings.
[9] Minimum 25c weekly, with 15c weekly as regular per capita tax.
[10] A few locals charge $1.50 (with special permission of Int'l).
[11] All funds held and accounted for by the International.
[12] 75c where district organization exists, 50c where none.
[13] 50c is minimum, but most locals have voluntarily raised this to 75c.
[14] C.P.A. submits semi-annual report to Executive Board.
[15] Also semi-annually and annually.

NOTE: A few newly organized unions have not yet adopted constitutions and were not included in this survey.

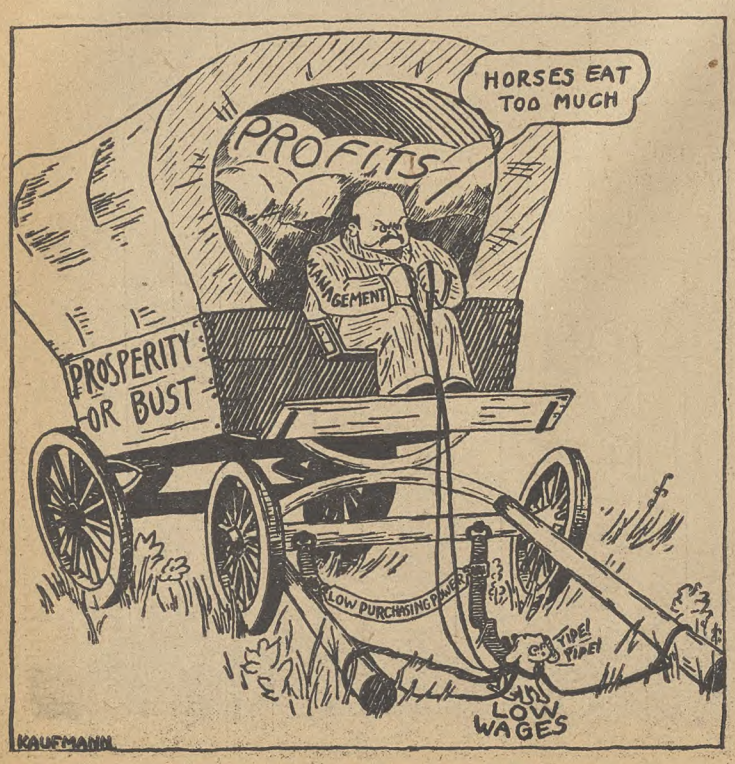
Gags and Grins From The Labor Press

"I'd like to make a suggestion."

—NMU Pilot



"Impatient little rascals, aren't they?"



PAMPHLETS

A USEFUL and timely study on obtaining public aid for strikers and their families has been issued by the Natl. CIO Community Services Committee, 1776 Broadway, N. Y. 19, N. Y.

The pamphlet, "Community Resources for Relief for Strikers and their Families", which was prepared by the CSC's Division of Social Research, aims to further the argument that men and women on strike are entitled to relief and assistance from all agencies, public and private, in the social welfare field, and is intended primarily for circulation among state and local public welfare administrators, but should be of use to CIO groups as well.

As explained by Natl. CSC Director Leo Perlis, the study "examines the background of the generally controversial issue over granting relief and community services to strikers and provides a general analysis of how far the agencies may be expected to go in meeting the needs of CIO members today."

An appendix gives a breakdown of the various state unemployment compensation regulations and contains an article by Dr. Marion Hathway, professor of public welfare in the School of Applied Science, University of Pittsburgh, which maintains that aid to strikers and their families is a direct responsiblity of public welfare agencies.

Dr. Hathway cites as authority for this view, the U. S. Social Security Act, which states that "when the applicant's need is established, his assistance is a matter of right."

The article also appears in the March issue of "Citizen CIO", monthly publication of the CSC.

* * *

Jobless Women

Women workers are urged to find out from their unions and from local unemployment compensation offices about their State unemployment compensation laws, in a new leaflet issued by the Women's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor, Washington 25, D. C.

The current leaflet, "Unemployment Compensation — How it Works for Working Women," is the fourth in the Bureau's Union Series. It explains that since some State laws discriminate against women, it is important for them to understand on what grounds they can get jobless compensation, and on what basis they will be held ineligible.

* * *

UE's Wage Fight

Why 200,000 members of the CIO Electrical workers are on strike today is explained in a new illustrated pamphlet, "Support UE Workers in Their Fight for a Living Wage," issued at UE headquarters, 11 East 51st St., N. Y. 22, N. Y.

Facts show that the average General Electric and Westinghouse employe is paid less than $40 a week, or below the living wage today, states the pamphlet, which calls upon people throughout the nation to back in every way possible the workers' fight for decent pay.

The Rev. Hall Elected

The Federal Council of Churches announces the election of the Rev. Cameron Hall of Philadelphia as associate executive secretary of the Dept. of Christian Social Relations. Mr. Hall has resigned his position as director of the Dept. of Social Education & Action of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., to begin his new work with the Federal Council.

Education Notes

New CIO Picture Strip

Similarities between the social philosophy of the Bible and the progressive labor movement are pointed out in an eight-page colored picture-strip leaflet, "The Bible and the Working Man," published this week by the CIO Dept. of Education and Research.

Kermit Eby, director of the department, said that the leaflet will be distributed widely to groups outside the labor movement "whose members are more familiar with religious precepts than with trade union ideology."

Drawing parallels from Biblical texts, "The Bible and the Working Man" tells the story of a farm family who move to the city, where the father is gradually won over to unionism.

The leaflet, which has been endorsed by Protestant, Catholic and Jewish clergymen, may be obtained from the CIO, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C. Price: 2c a copy; 100 for $1.50; 1,000 for $12.50.

* * *

Farmers Get CIO Leaflet

To help push the CIO's policy of mutual understanding between farmers and workers, Local 6, CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union in San Francisco has mailed to 100,000 farmers in California reprints of an article on farmers' problems taken from the CIO Economic Outlook, monthly publication of the Natl. CIO Dept. of Research and Education.

"The article talks in plain terms about mistakes made by union members when they think about farmers' problems and about mistakes made by farmers when they think about the problems of wage earners," says Local 6 Pres. Richard Lynden in a covering letter.

* * *

Gaer Now Publisher

A new book publishing firm, Boni & Gaer, Inc., which will devote itself to the publication of easy-to-read books presented from the progressive point of view, has just been announced by Charles Boni and Joseph Gaer. Mr. Gaer is the author of "The First Round," story of the CIO Political Action Committee, and other PAC publications.

The new firms first book, "Wind in the Olive Trees," by Abel Flenn, deals with Spain from the inside.

Hudson Shore Celebrates

Hudson Shore Labor School, oldest resident school for workers in the U. S., will celebrate its 25th anniversary at a dinner March 23 at the Murray Hill, Hotel, N. Y. City. Scheduled speakers are CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey; Hilda W. Smith, first director of the Bryn Mawr Summer School, and Frank Fenton of the AFL.

Tickets to the dinner at $5 a plate, may be obtained from the school's winter headquarters, Room 503, Singer Bldg. Annex., 95 Liberty St., N. Y. 6, N. Y.

The school, which began in 1921 on Bryn Mawr College campus as the Bryn Mawr Summer School for Women Workers in Industry, moved to its present location in West Park, N. Y., in 1939, where it has held its regular summer sessions and institutes sponsored by unions and other workers' education groups. This summer's session is scheduled for June 29-Aug. 10.

The school, which now includes men as well as women in all its student groups, has pioneered in developing effective methods of teaching workers.

An Honorary Committee for the 25th Anniversary is headed by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, warm supporter of workers' education, who has often entertained the school's students and faculty at her Val Kill Cottage.

Carey and Fenton are co-chairmen. CIO members of the Committee include Clinton S. Golden, John Green, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas and Willard Townsend.

UAW Medical Director

Appointment of Dr. I. Donald Fagin as Medical Director of the CIO Auto Workers' Health Institute was announced this week by UAW Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes, who is director of the Institute. Dr. Fagin, a Fellow of the American College of Physicians, returned recently from five years in service, and has been associated with the teaching staff of the University of Texas School of Medicine.

Activities of the UAW Health Institute include a medical diagnostic service, research in industrial medicine and hygiene, a health education department and a personal service department.

STAINLESS STEEL PROTECTS FOOD PRODUCTS

Food processors report that stainless steel equipment increases the effectiveness of many dehydrating units. The stainless steel protects food vitamins, colors, and flavors by preventing metallic contamination. This freedom from contamination also is found to reduce food spoilage and cut weight.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

JIM DISCOVERED THAT THE VET LEADER OF THE UNION SMASHING GANG AT THE ROTOR CONSTRUCTION COMPANY IS HIS OWN KID BROTHER, MICKEY!

MICKEY CERTAINLY FOUND HIMSELF A CUTE PHILOSOPHY... LOOK OUT FOR YOURSELF AND TO HECK WITH EVERYBODY ELSE... WELL, HE'LL HAVE TO TAKE THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR IT!

BUT IF I EXPOSE MICKEY... MOM WILL SUFFER MORE THAN HE WILL...

HUH? MORNING, WOODY.

WHAT'S THE MATTER, JIM? YOU LOOK LIKE SOMETHING EXPLODED INSIDE YOU...

SOMETHING DID, WOODY... I'VE FOUND THE RAT LEADING THE UNION BUSTERS AT THE ROTOR PLANT...

YIPPEE! NOW WE CAN BUST UP THE UNION BUSTERS!

WE'LL EXPOSE THE RAT! HE WON'T BE ABLE TO SHOW HIS FACE IN TOWN! HIS OWN MOTHER WON'T HAVE NO USE FOR HIM! SAY! YOU DON'T SEEM HAPPY OVER IT...

WHO... WHO IS THE GUY, JIM?

MY OWN LOUSY BROTHER! MICKEY...

GEE... I--I NEVER FIGGERED... MICKEY...

IT DOESN'T MAKE ANY DIFFERENCE... TOO MANY MEN AND WOMEN HAVE GIVEN THEIR LIVES TO BUILD THE UNION...

...A UNION THAT WILL GIVE THEM SOME SECURITY... PROTECT THEIR LIVING STANDARDS...

BUT--BUT WHAT ABOUT YOUR MOTHER? HOW'LL SHE TAKE IT?

SHE'LL BE HURT, NATURALLY. BUT IT'S EITHER MY MOTHER... OR HURTING A LOT OF OTHER MOTHERS AND FAMILIES AND KIDS WHO ARE PROTECTED BY THE UNION.

WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO NOW?

I'M GOING DOWN TO THE ROTOR PLANT AND EXPOSE MICKEY... TELL THE GUYS WHO IS LEADING THE ANTI-UNION BUNCH.

PRESENTLY AS JIM AND WOODY APPROACH THE ROTOR PLANT...

SOMETHING IS DOING... I HOPE THE RATS HAVEN'T STARTED ALREADY!

DON'T HOPE, JIM! LOOK WHO'S IN THE MIDDLE OF THE CROWD!

60

Produced by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

Copyright 1946 by the [illegible]

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Casing The Case Bill

(See Story, Page 7)

CIO members now in the thick of strike struggles must tell their Congressmen and Senators what they think about the Case bill and other anti-union measures now pending in the Senate Labor Committee, CIO Legislative Director Nathan Cowan says in a letter to affiliates this week.

The Case bill (HR 5262) which passed the House by 258 to 155 last week, is the most vicious of the lot, though the Ball-Hatch bill (S 1171) and the Ellender bill (S 1661) run it a close second.

Don't be fooled by the line that the Case bill can never be passed in the Senate because it's too stringent. The reactionary GOP-polltax Democrat alliance that worked on FEPC is capable of passing it—perhaps with "modifications"—but still with plenty of anti-union teeth. And there's no guarantee of a Presidential veto.

And don't be taken in by the equally dangerous line that the Case bill will fail and the "milder' Ball-Hatch or Ellender bill will pass, thereby not hurting us nearly as much as we think.

The Ball-Hatch and Ellender bills are just as anti-union in their own way as the Case bill. Our job is to keep reminding our Senators of this fact, lest they try to put over the idea that S 1171 and S 1661 are "reasonable."

Just as a refresher, study this brief analysis of the Case bill—and send it to your Senator, with your compliments:

1. The Case bill outlaws strikes for as long as 35 days after all available conciliation and mediation has failed. Assistance to a strike is also outlawed.

2. It effectively repeals the Norris-LaGuardia act, reviving the use of anti-union injunctions in Federal courts.

3. It bars Wagner Act protection to clerical and supervisory employes, thus putting them at the boss's mercy if they try to organize.

4. It makes it illegal for unions or workers to refuse to work on non-union or struck products.

5. It takes Wagner Act protection away from strikers accused of "violence" on the picketline. "Violence" can be anything a hostile judge may want to define.

6. It removes Wagner Act protection from 500,000 workers in industrialized food processing industries, such as fruit and vegetable packing by defining them as "agricultural labor."

That's the Case bill. Tell your Senators to stay away from it—and from all the others too.

Aid Housing

CIO support for the Wyatt-Truman emergency housing program was pledged by President Murray and UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas this week.

"Only those who have no faith in American democracy and production genius will doubt our capacity to meet the goals set in Mr. Wyatt's most practical program," they said.

The program calls for 2,700,000 homes to be built in 1946, with emphasis on homes selling for $6,000 or less and renting for $50 a month.

It also calls for price ceilings on old homes subsidies for production of building materials, funds for research in new techniques, immediate emergency housing, insurance of mortgages and tax amortization for new material plans.

The Wyatt program correctly puts heavy emphasis on veterans' needs—and will, if enacted, ease the general housing situation for all of us.

It contrasts sharply with the meager plans of the building industry, which calls for only 500,000 units in 1946 and no price ceilings or allocations to put materials into low-cost houses.

Three bills are needed to get the program going (for analysis, see CIO News, Feb. 11): S 1592 (Wagner-Ellender-Taft); HR 4761 (Patman, with amendments to be offered by him) and S 1729 (Kilgore-Mitchell).

British Loan

CIO is supporting the loan to Britain, up for ratification in Congress this week, and will support other loans for needed reconstruction among the United Nations.

Object of the loan is to put Britain back on her economic feet, and also to gain trade advantages for this country. Obviously British recovery means a better economic situation for us.

Terms of the loan specifically state:

"The purpose of the line of credit is to facilitate purchases by the United Kingdom of goods and services in the U. S., to assist the U. K. to meet transitional postwar deficits in its current balance of payments, to help the U. K. to maintain adequate reserves of gold and dollars, to assist the government of the U. K. to assume the obligations of multilateral trade, as defined in this and other agreements."

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Case HR 5262	Imposes cooling-off, forced arbitration; forbids support of strikes, etc.	Rushed through House and now in Senate Labor Committee.	Wire Senators, especially Sen. Murray (D., Mont.) as Labor Committee chairman, to oppose.
Ball-Hatch S 1171	Similar to Case, though called "milder." Has enforced cooling-off, arbitration.	Tacked on to Ellender (Truman) bill as substitute. In Senate Labor Committee.	Wire Senators to oppose along with Case bill.
Ellender (S 1661)	This is Truman's cooling-off and fact-finding bill.	Senate Labor Committee. Danger it may be put over as substitute for Case and Ball-Hatch.	Wire Senators to oppose; especially members of Senate Labor Committee.
Price control HR 5270	Renews price control act and OPA. Watch CIO News for details.	Hearings start this week in House Banking Committee.	CIO supports renewal for one year. More details later.
Housing HR 4761	Emergency housing, with priorities for veterans.	House Banking Committee. Hearings start soon.	Tell Representative to support, with Patman amendments.
School lunch HR 3370	Sets up permanent hot lunch program for school kids; appropriates $50,000,000.	To House floor for vote Feb. 19.	Wire Representative to support.
65-cent wage S 1349	Raises present wage-hour act minimum from 40 to 65c.	Reported out of Senate Labor Committee at 65c level.	Wire Senators to support at full 65c level and coverage.

NO VOTE, NO VICTORY IN '46: REGISTER!

Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

PRICE CONTROL: Hearings on renewal of the price control act are set to start in the House Banking Committee this week, with OPA head Chester Bowles leading the testimony.

The fight for renewal without hampering amendments will be one of the toughest in recent Congressional years.

It will take every ounce of united political strength that can be mobilized to win it. Workers, consumers, housewives, farmers, merchants, will have to work together as never before to prevent the disaster of inflation from overtaking us all.

Workers will have to fight for price control and OPA to protect the wage gains they have made through their unions. If they fail, everything won on the picket lines will go out the window.

The time to begin mobilizing is now—not a month or three weeks or two weeks from now.

65c: With the report of the Senate Labor Committee out this week recommending the 65c level, S 1349 now moves to the Senate floor.

Principal opposition is expected to come from Sen. Ellender (D. La.), who was also one of the main leaders in the filibuster against FEPC.

Sen. Ellender does not represent the people of the South, who would benefit from passage of the bill at the full 65c level. He works for the sweatshoppers, both North and South.

The House Labor Committee has not yet acted on its version of the bill (HR 3914), is expected to act after the Senate Committee has reported.

USES: CIO is scheduled to testify in the Senate Labor Committee this week on the issue of whether or not to return the U. S. Employment Service to state control.

State control can easily mean that the USES apparatus (which covers unemployment compensation as well as job placement) will be used to force workers into low-paid jobs, act as strikebreakers, etc.

The House has passed (Jan. 29) the Dirksen bill sending USES back to the states at once. Wire your Senators to support S 1510 which blocks immediate return.

SCHOOL LUNCH: The House will take up HR 3370, which provides $50,000,000 for a program of one hot meal a day to school kids. This is the only chance of a decent hot meal that millions of children get.

Following House action, the Senate will take up its bill, S 962 which is now in Senate Agriculture. Tell your Senators to support the program and to increase the amount in the House bill.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman — Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler, Editor — Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 9

Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS
$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

82

February 25, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

EVERYBODY'S HAPPY!

Soup kitchen workers at CIO Steelworkers' strike headquarters, Carnegie - Illinois Steel Corp., Homestead, Pa., greeted the 18½c an hour wage victory that ended the four-week-old strike in basic steel with a fandango of jubilation.

"I Can't Stand Jack Benny Because Lucky Strike Means Fink Tobacco" is what these Los Angeles pickets are chanting outside Benny's radio show. More than 350 CIO members paraded in front of Benny's studio, protesting refusal of his sponsors, American Tobacco Co., to meet with CIO Food & Tobacco Workers after more than 130 days of their strike for a minimum wage of 65c an hour.

STEEL WIN CLINCHED, PRICE BATTLE ON

By FRED d'AVILA

(See Other Stories—Pages 3, 4, 6 and 7)

THE conclusive victory of the CIO Steelworkers Union that won an 18½c an hour wage increase and continuation of union security clauses, and smashed the union-busting conspiracy of some of America's biggest employers, will be followed by an equally militant fight to defend real wages by extension of the price control act.

This was the word from Philip Murray, president of CIO and the Steelworkers, at a Pittsburgh meeting of the union's Wage Policy Committee this week. A committee resolution stated:

"It becomes our major immediate task to make sure that our success is not wiped out by any weakening in the battle for control of the price level.

"From the start of its campaign, the union has recognized that all of the objectives sought in our wage fight can be lost if the wage gains of American workers are wiped out by unjustifiable price increases granted to American industry."

Murray said that profits are so high that substantial wage increases without price increases still will give industry profits far in excess of pre-war levels.

Murray stressed the tremendous significance of the steel victory, result of a month-long strike which started Jan. 21 and shut down all but a few firms which agreed to pay the 18½c an hour raise asked by the union.

The victory not only cracked the log-jam holding up settlements in other industries which use steel, but also guaranteed that the union in peace will continue to be protected by security clauses written into contracts during the existence of the Natl. War Labor Board.

These include maintenance of membership and dues checkoff clauses—accepted by many manufacturers only on a temporary war basis.

The establishment of such clauses in the Steelworkers' contracts will help to set the pattern for all industry, and will make it virtually impossible for other managements to insist on other unions signing weaker agreements.

As The CIO NEWS went to press, the 18½c an hour increase had been OKed by firms employing about 500,000 workers—mostly in basic steel—with about 250,000 others in fabricating plants not yet back to work because employers had refused to grant the raise, largely due to questions about price adjustments. U. S. Steel and other basic producers have been guaranteed a price increase of about $5 a ton by the federal government.

Pointing out that a recent ruling of the Office of Economic Stabilization states that it is not necessary for the fabricators to obtain approval of wage increases as a preliminary step toward presenting claims for price adjustments, Murray said:

"The fabricators are engaged in a strike against the people. They have no moral or justifiable reason for continuing in this position. They assume no financial hazards in reaching agreement with our organization. Each employer is guaranteed his peacetime profits."

Murray said the union will not compromise its demand for 18½c an hour for fabricating workers. Pointing out that new fabricating contracts are being approved daily, he said that the entire industry probably will be signed up within the next two weeks.

Meanwhile, in a move to aid non-integrated steel companies, the union passed a resolution urging the Civilian Production Agency to reinstitute allocation of semi-finished steel supplies for these firms, and recommended establishment of a temporary labor-management committee to supervise the work.

L. S. MEANS FINK TOBACCO

NINETY CIO working men and women—strikers against the American Tobacco Co.—brought the story of a 130-day refusal to bargain collectively to the White House and to other government agencies in Washington this week.

The 90 workers were members of the CIO Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers who came from Philadelphia, Trenton, N. J., and Charleston, S. C., to tell President Truman and the people of the U. S. about their demand for a 65c wage and a union contract with one of the largest cigarette manufacturers in the nation — the makers of Lucky Strikes.

Meanwhile, the Natl. Labor Relations Board denied FTA-CIO its election-won right to certification in the cannery industry in California.

Bowing to AFL Teamster pressure, the NLRB set aside a legal election in which the CIO union had won a plurality of the votes, on a technicality dreamed up by the majority of the NLRB—Chairman Paul Herzog and Gerard Reilly—who responded to appeals of the AFL and their supporters in Congress.

CIO PUSHES CHEMICAL DRIVE

THE CIO this week prepared to launch an organization campaign in the chemical industry.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, announced that the drive will be conducted by the CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers.

William B. Taylor, who recently completed a successful organizing campaign for the CIO among the oil workers, was assigned to direct the new drive by Haywood.

Gas, Coke & Chemical Pres. Martin Wagner said that the soundness of CIO's program is demonstrated by recent wage victories, and that the AFL has forfeited the right to workers' support by its failure to take progressive action.

"The return of John L. Lewis to the AFL certifies the well founded belief in our hearts and minds that the high priest of reactionary labor and the foremost proponent of a policy of unrestricted and uncontrolled free enterprise has now in fact, as well as in practice, formally turned his back to the needs of American workers for progressive, sincere leadership and is now seeking to regain lost glory and position within the ranks of a decaying bureaucracy," Martin declared.

3,000 HONOR SLAIN PICKETS

More than 3,000 people this week crowded into the state armory at Peoria, Ill., to pay tribute to two labor martyrs who were shot in the back by armed thugs of George P. McNear's Toledo Peoria & Western Railroad, Feb. 6, and to vow that those responsible for the cold-blooded murders should not go unpunished.

Union delegations attended the joint CIO-AFL-Railroad Brotherhood meeting from all over the midwest, to honor the two men, Irwin Paschon and Arthur Browne.

Paschon and Browne were killed when 16 TP&W guards fired from an armored train into a crowd of pickets at a railroad crossing near Gridley, Ill.

ON THE BARGAINING FRONT

REJECT WESTINGHOUSE UNION-BUSTING PLAN

A unanimous vote of 75,000 striking members of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers at Westinghouse plants has repudiated a company offer, made in recent negotiations, which would have eliminated union security and have cut wages, the UE announced this week in N. Y.

"Westinghouse employes, by their votes, re-emphasized their demand for $2-a-day wage increases, which is the sole issue of the strike," UE stated. "They answer the Corporation's claim by pointing to the scandalous low wage rates paid, according to government figures in such plants as Baltimore (57½c an hour), Bloomfield (61½c), Cleveland (57½c), Derry, Pa. (61½c), E. Pittsburgh (61½c), Fairmont (54c), Lima (51½c), Mansfield (59½c), and Newark (57½c)."

GM STRIKERS WARNED OF PEACE RUMORS

As the CIO News went to press, the CIO Auto Workers' top leadership issued a warning to General Motors strikers that they should "ignore headlines and rumors reporting the settlement of strike issues."

This was the second time within a week that UAW national headquarters warned the strikers to disregard optimistic press reports of the negotiations being conducted by UAW and GM negotiators headed by Pres. R. J. Thomas and C. E. Wilson, respectively, in the presence of Federal Mediator Dewey.

In the second warning Thomas, Vice-Pres. Walter P. Reuther and Sec.-Treas. George Addes telegraphed GM locals that "on wages and Paragraph 63 (concerning promotions and transfers) we are as far apart as we were 10 days ago." Reuther said negotiators were nearer an understanding on maintenance of membership, as the GM strike entered its 15th week.

New UAW contracts were announced this week with the Ford Motor Co. of Canada and the Freuhauf Trailer Co., bringing to eight the number of new pacts and wage agreements reached by the union in the automotive in-

The Freuhauf pact provided a blanket increase of 15c an hour retroactive to Nov. 16, plus increases in three categories ranging from 7c to 12c an hour.

CIO RUBBER WAGE TALKS START

The Big Four rubber companies this week started their first industry-wide wage negotiations on the demand of the CIO Rubber Workers for a 30% increase, at conferences presided over by U. S. Labor Conciliator Paul W. Fuller.

Represented were Goodyear, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber and Firestone, which employ some 175,000 of the 300,000 workers in the industry. The union delegation was headed by URW Pres. L. S. Buckmaster and included representatives of 50 locals.

In addition to a 30% increase, the union is demanding overtime after 30 hours; double time for work on Sundays and holidays; and adjustment of inequities within the plants and among different plants. Present average hourly pay is $1.09, with overtime starting after 40 hours.

The employers have offered a 10c hourly increase and a 3c night shift differential.

14-1 VOTE FOR COAST LONGSHORE STRIKE

The CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union this week voted by a 14-1 majority to strike Pacific Coast docks Apr. 1.

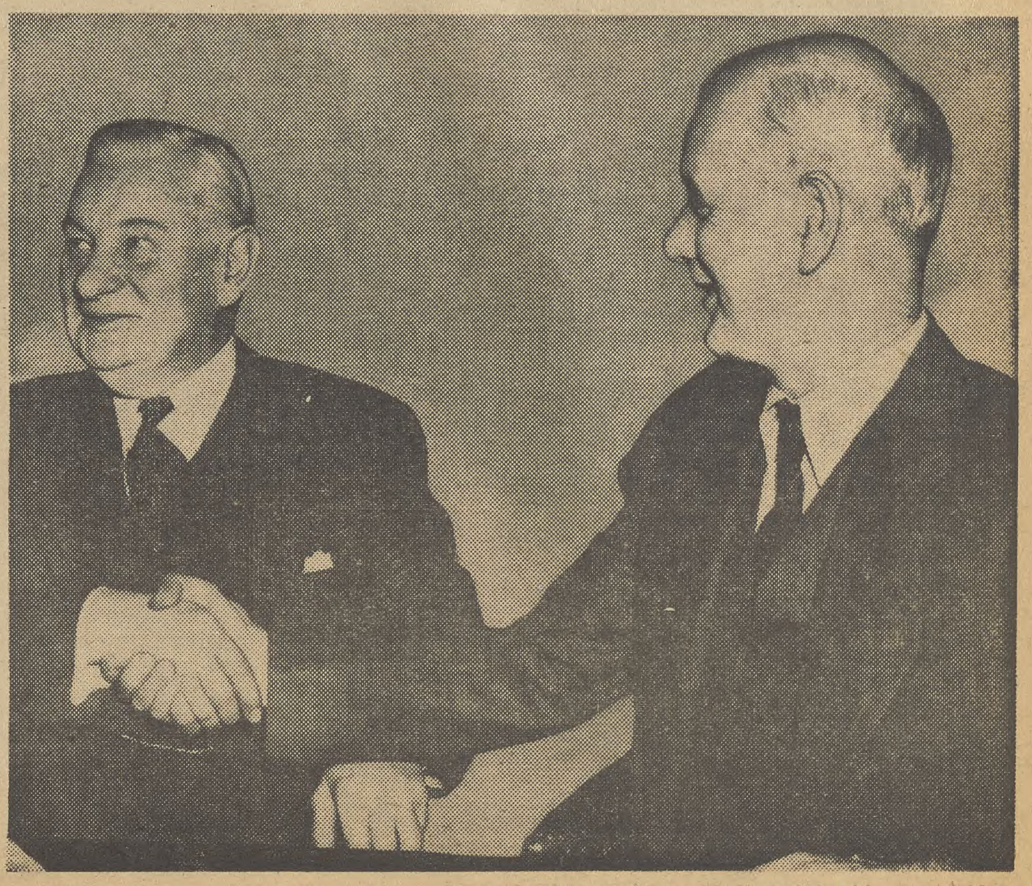
The union charged that employers have failed: to carry out War Labor Board directives; to pay $8 million in retroactive wages; and to bargain for renewal of a contract that expired more than six months ago.

BIGGEST STRIKE — BIGGEST VICTORY

1 U. S. Steel Corp., bellwether of industry, signing in Washington, D. C., agreement with CIO Steelworkers for 18½c-an-hour increase. Directly affected were 125,000 employes, with 400,000 more, employed by other basic plants, getting raise, too, following month-long strike which shut down virtually entire industry. Seated, l. to r.: Vice-Pres. John S. Stephens, U. S. Steel; Reconversion Dir. John Snyder; USA-CIO Pres. Philip Murray. Standing: Roger Blough, U. S. Steel; Sec. of Labor Lewis Schwellenbach; Presidential Advisor John Steelman; and David J. McDonald, Lee Pressman and Van A. Bittner, respectively, secretary-treasurer, general counsel and assistant to the president, USA-CIO.

2 Make-ready job: Pipefitter Nat Sayko works on furnace water cooling system at Carnegie Illinois Homestead Works, Pittsburgh, in preparation for production.

3 Bethlehem too: Vice-Pres. J. M. Larkin (l.) of the second largest steel corporation in the U. S. shakes hands with USA-CIO President Murray after signing for the 18½c an hour raise for the firm's 75,000 workers.



VICTORY AND ITS LESSONS

In all American labor's struggles, there has never been a victory so sweeping as that achieved by the CIO in the steel, auto, electrical, textile, clothing, oil and other industries, and in course of achievement by many other CIO unions.

It is true the victory is not yet complete. Not all the steel companies are yet signed up. General Motors, General Electric, Westinghouse, Intl. Harvester, meat packing, rubber and other companies are still holding out.

But with the recent agreements signed by U. S. Steel and other big steel companies for an 18½c increase, and with similarly substantial increases granted by Ford, Chrysler, RCA, General Motors Electrical Division, American Woolen and many other big companies in major industries, final and complete victory is not in doubt.

CIO's victory is its greatest in history, not only for the size of the wage increases won and the number of workers benefited but also for its defeat of a dangerous big-business conspiracy to destroy union security and union conditions.

The union security provisions of checkoff and maintenance of membership, obtained during the war under WLB directives, are now assured of continuance. In the steel industry, for instance, the companies, by extending existing contracts, have for the first time accepted these security provisions under voluntary collective bargaining.

Outstanding credit is due to President Murray and the other CIO leaders, whose brilliant strategy charted the way to victory and marshalled the hosts of labor.

But the success of their leadership has depended and still depends upon the solidarity and determination of the millions of rank-and-file CIO members.

It is they who man the picket lines and endure the hardships. It is their devotion and persistence in following through the line of action on which they have democratically determined that wins labor's battles.

Theirs is the victory and theirs the chief credit in the most solidly organized and most successful strikes American labor has ever conducted.

But this is not only labor's but a people's victory. One of the greatest contributing factors has been the amazing degree of general community support—from political and church leaders, farmers, veterans, professional people and small businessmen.

The CIO was widely recognized as leading the people's battle for higher living standards for all Americans, and because of this it received the people's support.

Looking ahead, it is obvious there are many battles still to be fought. The whole strength of the movement must be mobilized to bring to terms the many employers who are still holding out and bucking the tide.

There is still the acute danger of vicious anti-union legislation being passed by Congress, to deprive labor of many of its gains.

There is also the most immediate danger of inflationary increases in living costs robbing the workers of their hard-won wage raises. One of CIO's greatest campaigns must now be conducted to maintain OPA price controls and to keep down living costs.

The new strength and prestige achieved by the CIO through its victories must immediately be turned to advantage through great union organizing campaigns and through the intensification of its political activities.

We cannot rest on our oars. Only by going forward with renewed energy and determination can we consolidate our victory and reap its full advantages for labor and all the American people.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

IT is difficult to fix an exact V-Day for CIO's great victory over wage-cutting and union-busting, just as it was difficult to say which days could most appropriately be called V-E Day and V-J Day.

But for our part—rather than wait for all the die-hards to capitulate and for all mopping-up operations to be completed—we'll arbitrarily pick the day when the U. S. Steel Corp. signed up with the United Steelworkers of America for a wage increase of 18½ cents an hour.

For on this day, the back of heavy industry's war against labor was broken. The lesser steel companies began immediately to fall in line. A pattern of union acceptance and substantial wage increases was set in the most basic of all industries.

It became a foregone conclusion that the CIO would sooner or later win equally substantial increases in its other strikes, and that the big business conspiracy to wreck the unions and keep down wages had been defeated.

★ ★ ★

The full extent of CIO's great victory in the greatest of all industrial struggles cannot be measured in dollars and cents alone.

The increase in the weekly wages of the individual worker means plenty to him and his family in more tolerable living standards.

The many millions of dollars that will eventually be added to the purchasing power of all American labor means plenty to our whole society.

It will be passed on to farmers, business and professional people, to the whole community, in a greater demand for goods and services, resulting in increased production, more employment and expanding national prosperity.

In winning the largest wage increase for the greatest number of workers ever won by labor at one time, the CIO has won a great economic victory for all labor and all the American people.

But it has also won more than this.

★ ★ ★

Just as the full measure of the United Nations' victory must be taken against what would have resulted from a victory for fascism, so CIO's victory must be measured against what was in store for America in the event of its defeat.

After the first world war, there were inflationary price increases running far ahead of wages, the big industries launched an open-shop drive, and from the defeat of the unions followed wage-cutting, uninhibited profiteering, unemployment and finally the great depression.

This tragic history was on the way to repeating itself, if it had not been for the militancy and determination of the CIO.

★ ★ ★

A concerted postwar open-shop drive was foreshadowed during the war, when the steel companies and other large employers entered stipulations that they were obeying War Labor Board directives for the check-off and maintenance of membership only under protest and for the duration of the war.

Once the war ended, there was every evidence of a planned strategy on the part of the big corporations to hold up reconversion, to reject collective bargaining and to force a showdown with the unions, for the purpose of destroying union security, of breaking the unions or "teaching them a lesson," as well as of keeping down wages.

But now the U. S. Steel Corp., in extending the existing contract, without changes except for increased wages, has for the first time voluntarily agreed to the checkoff and maintenance of membership. Union security has similarly been preserved in other contracts signed by CIO unions.

Although there are still a number of sharp struggles to fight with die-hard corporations, it can now safely be said that the back of the general union-wrecking conspiracy has been broken.

A lesson has been taught all right by the CIO strikes. But it is a lesson to the corporations, that the CIO is strong enough to stop any open-shop drive.

Having fought for and won this great victory for higher wages and union security for all American labor, with AFL leaders largely "sitting it out", the CIO emerges with tremendously enhanced prestige, which can now be translated into a great expansion of organizational strength and political influence.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 February 25, 1946 No. 9

CIO's Own Radio Shows EVERY SATURDAY

Two Full, Weekly 15-Minute Radio Programs, of and for CIO

1. Labor-USA. Dramatic shows. American Broadcasting Co. network. Saturdays, 6:45 to 7 P. M., EST.

2. Cross-Section—CIO. On-the-spot interviews of CIO people by William Downs, noted CBS commentator. Saturdays, 3:45 to 4 P. M., EST.

Live Listening!

'SUPER-SENIORITY' TAKES RAP AT LEGION PARLEY

THE CIO found Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Veterans Administrator, in its corner and Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service head, modifying his adamant stand on "super-seniority" at the American Legion's Employment Committee Conference at Washington, D. C., this week.

Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee told the conference that real job security for ex-servicemen lay not in Selective Service's "super-seniority" for one year but in keeping jobs under union contracts. This was virtually echoed by Bradley.

The VA head declared that most veterans do not have re-employment rights and that the "employment of veterans is not a problem for the next year or the year after that."

It seemingly was obvious, to 200 Legion members, management and other guests, that the real protection of the veterans lay in union contracts guarding their seniority rights.

General Hershey was inching or being inched by the course of events over to CIO's corner. Last April he indicated to the Legion Employment Committee conference that Selective Service's "super-seniority" theory was part of the law, admitting only that such was not the case when he was cornered by questioning from CIO representatives.

This week he told the conference that he was willing to let the courts interpret the law, pinning his faith on a ruling that the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals has been asked to make in the case of Abraham Fishgold, veteran who was laid off for seven days by the Sullivan Dry Dock Co., Brooklyn, with other workers having insufficient seniority to keep them on the job when cutbacks came.

Bernstein pointed out that in any case Fishgold had no protection under Selective Service because more than a year elapsed since he went on the job.

Hershey was being forced to change his stand because two U. S. District Court rulings solely on the question of "super-seniority" found it illegal. Bernstein referred to the decision of the U. S. Court for the Eastern District of Michigan, which found that a World War II veteran was not entitled to the job of another employe with greater seniority.

Like Gen. Bradley, the CIO is concerned about all unemployed veterans, able-bodied and disabled alike, Bernstein told the conference. There are now 1,300,000 veterans weekly receiving readjustment allowances — unemployment insurance—under the GI Bill of Rights.

Bernstein pointed out that "the (Selective Service) law simply makes no provision whatever for the very servicemen who, being hurt in body or mind, made the greatest sacrifices in the war. This group if they are being reintegrated into industry, are going back, not as a matter of right, but as a grant, or as a result of collective bargaining."

The CIO representative said that the CIO had obtained contracts for employment of disabled veterans and was seeking others.

Bernstein quoted Selective Service's own figures showing that only 20% of all veterans have "even the beginning of employment rights," adding that under union contracts veterans who had temporary employment before going to war are credited with seniority rights.

Threat to Take-Home Pay

DOLLAR SHRINKERS AT WORK

By C. W. FOWLER

THE frightening extent of the drive now building up against price control was made clearly evident in the first week of hearings before the House Banking Committee on HR 5270, which renews the act for one year from June 30.

Three main forces are working against renewal of the act—working sometimes in concert and sometimes separately, but with an overall plan to wreck price control and rob workers of wage gains won since V-J Day and before.

These three main forces are the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and other employers, the Republican Party in Congress, and its counterpart among some of the reactionary polltax Democrats.

Standing up to this offensive are Chester Bowles, newly appointed head of the Office of Economic Stabilization, and the unions and the organized consumers. The first week of the fight against inflation has been conducted by Bowles and Paul Porter, his successor as head of OPA. CIO and other progressive groups are set to join in with testimony favoring HR 5270 as the hearings go on.

Bowles, who makes a competent, easy witness despite constant baiting from the Republican side (with a not too active defense from the Democrats), told the House Committee bluntly:

"If we remove controls now—or too soon—we'll have one of the most terrifying economic crashes in the history of this country. Frankly, we underestimated after V-J Day when we thought controls could be taken off quickly. We feel now that a one year extension to June 30, 1947, is an absolute necessity."

Some idea of what could happen if certain industrial interests have their way in abolishing control was given by Bowles when he revealed that Henry Ford, II, asked OPA for a 55% increase in the price of his cars a few months ago.

This figure, Bowles told the committee, was based on Ford's claim that he was losing $300 per car— a figure that was based on a production level of about 1,000 cars a day. Obviously, Bowles pointed out, this was far below Ford's plant capacity.

A further glimpse into the extent of the drive against price control is given in a Federated Press estimate of the amount the NAM is spending on its current full-page advertising campaign, which FP set at a "conservative" $950,000. The NAM ads are simple...They call for abolition of OPA on the ground that controls hold up production.

This claim was attacked by Bowles in a radio speech in which he called it "one of the most irresponsible arguments that has ever been attempted." Production was at the highest levels in history during the war, as were profits, he pointed out—despite price control.

The GOP's part in the inflation drive is obvious in watching the behavior of the Republicans on the House Committee and in reading statements put out by GOP people outside it.

In the committee, their tactic is to stall and to raise endless picayune objections. Regardless of logic and despite the number of times they are answered, the objections are raised time and time again for the sole purpose of sabotage.

In a long series of charts and graphs, Bowles showed the committee that profits of all U. S. business were never higher and failures never fewer than they have been under price control, declaring: "OPA price policies practically guarantee any industry against loss—especially since V-J Day."

SEE 6 MILLION JOBLESS!

THE warning of Sec. of Labor Schwellenbach this week that jobs must be found for six millions by June 30 reflected the concern of the Truman Administration over mounting unemployment.

This week Veterans Administrator Bradley characterized the unemployment ratio of three veterans to one civilian as a "critical emergency problem."

Employment Director Goodwin added that 3,300,000 discharged servicemen are registered with the U. S. Employment Service, and that another four million veterans will be seeking jobs in the next four months.

"Job applications have been increasing much more rapidly than job opportunities. The time has arrived for us to do something about it," Goodwin said.

The VA head said that there are seven million veterans without employment rights under the Selective Service Act. Four million, he said, never had jobs before they entered the service, or had temporary or inconsequental ones.

Asserting that of the nearly 52,000 handicapped veterans of World War II who applied for jobs in January only a few more than 6,000 got them, Bradley said bitterly:

"I think sometimes that I can see their faces when they are turned away by employers who advertised in magazines to tell what they were doing to win the war."

GI DISCHARGE BEEFS PAY OFF

THE GI protests against demobilization are paying off handsomely. Letters received from the Pacific Theater by Clinton S. Golden, chairman, CIO Veterans Committee, point out that as the result of protests, demobilizations in that theater for January were three times the predicted number.

The letters also credit the demobilization demonstrations as being responsible for the plans of the Senate Military Affairs subcommittee for increased discharges.

The cooperation of the CIO Veterans Committee in printing ads paid for by $5,000 raised by the officers and enlisted personnel of Sub Base R, Luzon, has won the CIO friends, and soldiers write telling how news of the steel strike was cheered in one of the base theaters.

The Tagalog Times, sub base publication, carried a column and a half story quoting a telegram from Golden telling of the efforts of the CIO Veterans Committee to speed up demobilization.

VETS SHUN STRIKE-BREAKING OUTFIT

INITIAL bid of the Veterans and Patriots Federation of Labor for the support of the veterans in Tennessee ended in failure last week when ex-servicemen revolted against the anti-union practices of the outfit, branded by CIO leaders in the state as "following the footsteps, or attempting to, of the Christian American Society and similar groups."

Answering an ad in the Chattanooga newspapers offering training for "high priced and highly skilled jobs," the veterans were directed by the VPFL to two Chattanooga plants where the CIO Steelworkers were on strike.

As soon as they learned the score, some of the veterans revolted against being used as strike breakers and upset the scheme. At another struck plant the outfit succeeded in creating a disturbance, which led to the arrest of seven union pickets.

1 "With the union stronger, the chances are better for giving my kids a decent education. I think we won a good victory. It'll help even up the cost of living." John Anderson, mill hand, talking. 23 years at Bethlehem Steel, Bethlehem, Pa. Picket captain in the four-week strike. Home owner. Three kids. "How they get along depends a lot now on what happens to price ceilings."

2 USA-CIO members Steve Forstoffer, Steve Kazik, strike was different. Before, they had the public a We're the biggest organization in Bethlehem. This battl alike, and we all gained alike."

'OUR GREATEST VICTORY'

Photos by Marian Hille

BETHLEHEM, Pa.—The second day of the victory, smoke still wasn't coming out of many stacks—the men were getting the big Bethlehem furnaces going.

Members of the CIO United Steelworkers were going back to work—except those in fabricating plants that haven't yet granted the 18½c-an-hour wage increase.

The city officials had taken down the picket shanties, which had been set at all important gates and points over the 13½ miles that had to be covered by the pickets.

As the strike progressed, these shanties had been fixed up. The best one was equipped even with electric lights and radio. They said one of the men didn't want to move out of his shanty when the cops came, he liked it so well.

The consensus of the strikers' opinions was that it is an important victory for Bethlehem workers and their union. They gave a lot of credit to Phil Murray and the CIO leadership.

The new cooperation of the men, suffering and winning together, the sympathetic spirit of the community (contrasted to that in the last strike), the new strength and prestige of the union—all mean a great deal to them.

Here's the way Joe Mangan, former treasurer of his local, put it: "I feel it's more of a victory for our children than for us. Before this, the company had the public against us. Today, we can walk down the streets with our heads up.

"A lot of the credit goes to the district and the staff—the way they laid the groundwork in the last three years. Unions are beginning to take their community responsibility to heart by cooperating in the Red Cross, veterans' and other organizations.

"We're the biggest organization in Bethlehem. We have the strength of a giant, and I believe we should use it wisely and for the benefit of all the people.

"This victory means that we aren't going to have the same as in 1929. Our biggest problem now will be to back Bowles and the OPA. That's the insurance for our gains."

→

5 Mike Pettigrass is president of USA-CIO Local 2598. His daughter, Mary Ann, is 13. "She's union-minded, that kid. She was more interested in the strike than I was—thought it was a hotsy-totsy setup." The union means a lot to Mike. "It'll make the economic future of all of us a lot more secure. It's the greatest victory ever, not only in CIO plants, but the largest raise granted in any big industry."

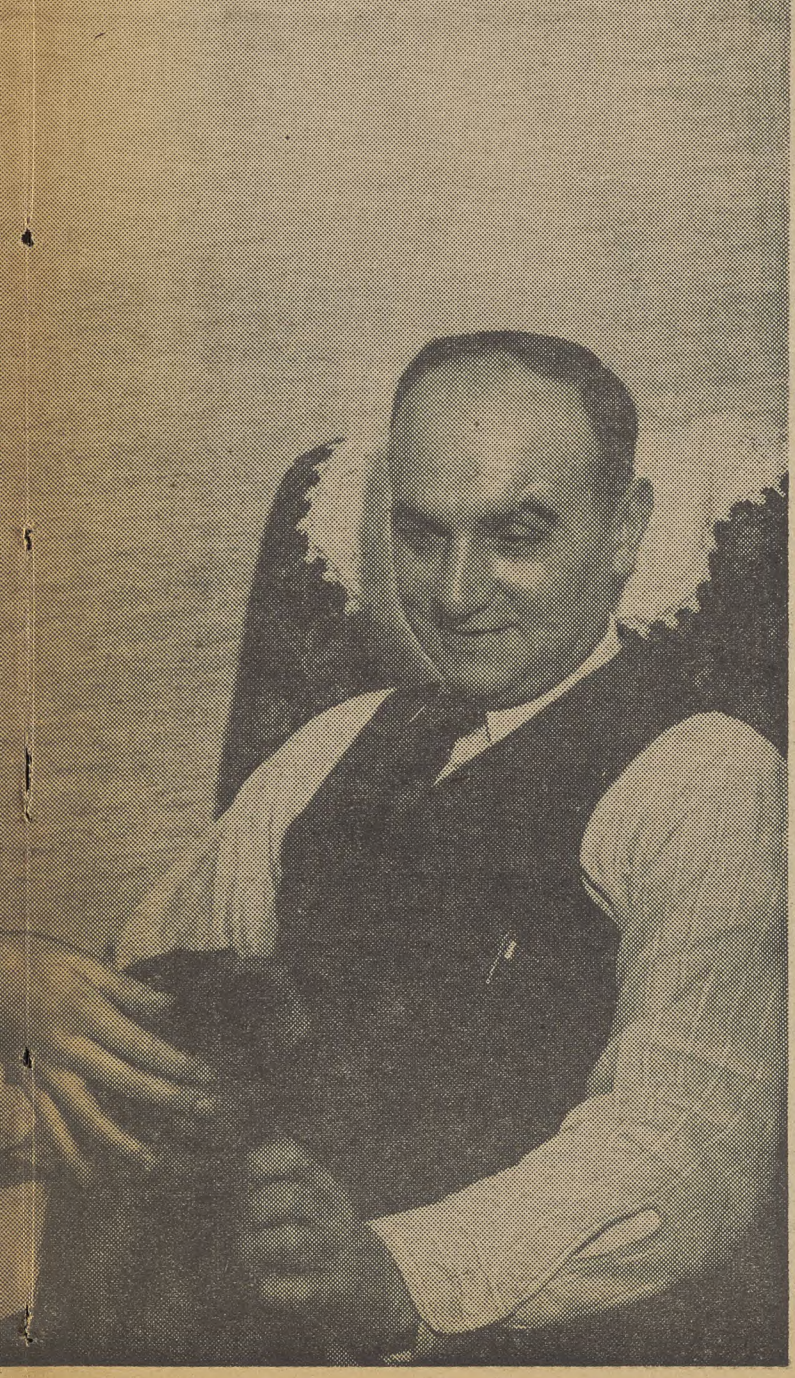
azik, John Anderson and Mike Pettigrass swap strike stories. "This ublic against us. Today, we walk down the streets with our heads up. s battle has brought the men a lot closer together. We all suffered

3 14 hours a day picketing was Bill Transue's contribution. "I only went out and done my share. I learned an awful lot out there. It was a good bunch of boys. We had men who'd been miners and loggers—men from all over the country. The raise is good—if high prices don't take it away again." Bill's a mechanical repairman, has two kids, wants them to get a good education—"not the same as me."

4 Harry Wolfe has 12 kids—from 1½-year-old Robert to 19-year-old Betty. The 18½c raise? "I'd stay out a year for that! It makes a big difference. Now I can do some of the things I couldn't do—build an extension to the house, buy some of the stuff we've been needing since the war." About Phil Murray? "I worked under him in the old Mine Workers. Our steel union has one of the best leaderships in the country."



LABOR'S WORLD

IN the final decision on labor representation in the United Nations Organization, the World Federation of Trade Unions has received an advisory and consultative place on the UNO Economic & Social Council along with the AFL and the Intl. Cooperative Alliance.

Originally, the WFTU asked for a place on the UNO General Assembly, as well as association with the work of the Economic & Social Council. Writing to UNO Assembly Chairman Paul Spaak, Sir Walter Citrine, who is president of the WFTU, and Louis Saillant, secretary, said:

"The WFTU holds a unique position as the chosen instrument of tens of millions of working men and women throughout the world. The cooperation of the trade unions was essential in winning the war, and is equally essential in mobilizing the workers of all countries to assist in maintaining the peace and to ensure fulfillment of the aims which the UNO is designed to serve."

During the Assembly debate on the issue, the most outspokenly anti-labor role was played by U. S. Delegate Sen. Tom Connally (D., Tex.), co-author of the Smith-Connally Act and chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Connally was so frank in his diatribes against WFTU that Sen. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), also a U. S. delegate, could afford to remain in the background.

Connally insisted that the WFTU had no right to representation and that if it were to be considered the AFL should also be given the same position. Connally was backed up in this by the AFL's Robert Watt, who was apparently able to overlook Connally's anti-union record in the larger interesting of keeping the WFTU out of the UNO. The AFL claim for equal place with the WFTU had little logic in it, since the AFL has voluntarily cut itself off from all association with international labor by its refusal to join WFTU.

V. Kuznetsov, head of the All Union Central Council of Trade Unions of the USSR, and D. Manuilsky, of the Ukrainian SSR, supported the WFTU. Manuilsky pointed out that the Latin-American Confederation of Labor, as a regional union group, had the same right as the AFL to representation, if the AFL got a place. The issue was not pressed.

U. S. FIRMS IN ARGENTINA

Last January, Argentina's fascist dictator, Juan Peron, now running for President, issued a decree raising wages for industrial workers. Exempted from the decree were the Argentine subsidiaries of Western Electric, Western Union and Swift & Co. All three of these firms are currently denying wage increases to their CIO union members here, or have recently been involved in strikes.

Charges that the present Argentine regime collaborated with the Nazis all during the war, and has helped them since, made a sensation when the State Dept. released its "blue book" on the subject this week.

Release of the State Dept. blast fully confirms similar charges, made over a long period of time, by the CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee headed by Jacob S. Potofsky. As a matter of fact, the CIO committee's book, "The Argentine Regime," was released weeks before the State Dept. did its job. The CIO blue book is a complete documentation of the fascist background of Peron and his gang. It can be obtained by writing to George Michanowsky, CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee, 15 Union Square, N. Y. 3, N. Y.

FIGHT AFRICAN JIM CROW

South African food workers are on a campaign to wipe out laws discriminating against native African workers in their industry, according to a letter received by the CIO's Food & Tobacco Workers from the Food & Canning Workers Union of South Africa.

According to Ray Alexander, secretary of the South African Union, the Industrial Conciliation Act by definition of the word "employe" excludes native Africans from all collective bargaining, conciliation, arbitration, etc.

This law, Alexander writes, was passed by the Smuts' government in 1924, after a series of prolonged and bitter strikes growing out of World War I.

OPPOSE AFL RAIDING

Attempts by agents of the AFL to raid Latin-American unions will be vigorously opposed, Vicente Lombardo Toledano, head of the Confederation of Latin-American Workers (CTAL), said in CTAL News this week.

According to the CTAL paper, Toledano said: "Latin-American labor will seek immediate expulsion of any and all agents of William Green and foreign monopoly generally who may attempt to cause trouble in our countries." Toledano's warning came after Green announced in Miami, Fla., that he was sending one Sarafino Romualdi of the Ladies' Garment Workers to Latin-America to "attempt to lure away CTAL affiliates."

Earlier, Toledano denounced reported AFL plans to form a dual Latin-American organization as a "declaration of war."

EDUCATION NOTES

Eby Goes to Japan

Kermit Eby, Natl. CIO director of Education & Research, has been named by the State Dept. as one of 25 educators who will spend a month in Japan as advisers to Gen. MacArthur on the demilitarization and reorientation of the Japanese educational system.

Chairman of the group is Dr. George E. Stoddard, N. Y. State Commissioner of Education and president-elect of the University of Illinois.

Cornell Conference

Proposed plans for starting an extension service for trade unions and for developing special courses on the campus for union leaders were discussed at a recent conference at Cornell University, sponsored by the N. Y. State School of Industrial & Labor Relations.

The conference was attended by 25 leaders in the field of workers' education, who discussed their plans with Dr. Phillips Bradley of the N. Y. School.

CIO education leaders who attended included Kermit Eby, Director of Education and Research, and Asst. Education Director George Guernsey; Larry Robin, education director, Textile Workers Union; Harry Gersh, of the TWU board, and Charles Obermeyer, Natl. Maritime Union education director.

The CIO leaders discussed the possibility of running CIO summer schools at Cornell. Members of the group agreed upon the need for staffing both the on-campus faculty and the extension service with people experienced in workers' education and the trade union movement.

The delegates also discussed with the school faculty the problems of developing an internship program to give students actual experience in the union movement while they were still attending college.

Federal Aid Needed

A fact-packed plea for Federal aid to education is made in the current issue of "The Southern Patriot," published by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, to advance the cause of "Education for Democracy."

Declaring that the low literacy level and educational standards in Southern States are due not to lack of effort but to lack of money, the Patriot points to the fact that while the South has only 8% of the nation's income, it has 32% of the nation's children.

The ravaging effects of the South's educational poverty are apparent in such facts as these cited by the Patriot:

One of every four Southerners 25 years old or over has had less than five years' schooling.

In Georgia 40% of the white schools and 95% of the Negro schools were declared unfit for use.

In only four Southern States do teachers average over $1,000 a year. In Mississippi white and Negro teachers receive between $200 and $599 a year.

Readers of The CIO NEWS can obtain a free copy of this "Education for Democracy" issue of the Patriot by writing to 212½ Union St., Nashville 3, Tenn.

BOOK FOR VETS

HOME FRONT -- SOUP TO NUTS

VETERANS for whom the book, "While You Were Away" (Simon and Schuster, 625 pps., $3.50), was compiled by Jack Goodman should get a fairly clear picture of what went on back in the States while they were sweating it out in the Pacific or across the Atlantic.

The 24 articles by 26 writers—two of them were collaborative jobs—cover everything from comics and the movies to labor and industry.

Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO Auto Workers, who wrote the article on labor, cities U. S. Labor Dept. statistics showing that there were few strikes and lockouts during the war, and asserts emphatically:

"There was not one strike in the U. S. during the war that caused a shortage of material on any war front," then asks this pertinent question:

"Did you—while you were away—ever see in any newspaper or clippings that you read that the cause for the strike that made you mad was that the union was defending your buddy's right to his job? I don't think you did. That's not news to many of our newspapers. Our newspapers were too interested only in making you think that the unions were sticking the knife in your back while you were gone."

The UAW leader declares that the wage freeze was part of a seven-point economic program which President Roosevelt declared "would work only if all of the seven points were followed. . . Actually, only some of the seven points worked with real effectiveness: one of these was the point that froze wages."

Of the management-labor committees that were formed during the war, he states that because of the fear of management that it would be forced to give up some of its rights the committees "degenerated into a method of handling minor activities, but any attempt to promote better production methods on a truly cooperative basis was discouraged by management."

Donald M. Nelson, former chairman of the War Production Board, gives an entirely different view of the labor-management boards, declaring that they worked well, but during this period Thomas knew the score—he was with the workers in Detroit, where they were making planes, tanks and trucks.

Nelson praises the part that labor played in the war and eulogizes management. However, he fails to tell how management had to be coaxed, cajoled—and guaranteed profits—before it would convert to war production.

These facts make one wonder how he could bring himself to write this whopper: . . ."the great majority of American industries did not try to make big profits out of war production."

A discerning veteran should find that organized labor served the nation well during the war. Allan Nevin, professor of American History at Columbia Univ., praises the achivements of the home front, saying that the production totals "meant not only speedier victory, but victory purchased with fewer lives."

Thomas L. Stokes, United Features columnist, refers his readers to the voting record of Congressmen and Senators at the back of the book adding:

"A personal chore that is suggested is that you take a little time to look up the record of your Congressman and your Senators and keep tab on it from now on."

F. R.

FE UNION SAYS:

PANEL PROPOSALS PROVIDE BASIS FOR ENDING STRIKE

THE recommendation for an 18c-an-hour general wage increase made by the Government fact-finding panel assigned to the Intl. Harvester strike was accepted this week by the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Natl. Harvester Council at a special all-day session held in Chicago.

The decision does not mean, however, the immediate termination of the strike, but calls for resumption of negotiations with the company to take up issues referred back to collective bargaining by the panel.

Gerald Fielde, director of the union's Harvester Council, stated that the report "provides the basis for an acceptable contract which can terminate the strike. If Harvester now abides by the spirit of the report and negotiates issues in the good faith called for they may resume manufacture of farm equipment in the very near future. We have already asked for such negotiations."

The 18c general increase, with 10% of it retroactive from Oct. 1, 1945, was accepted by the union's council on the basis of its being greater than previous company offers, while not involving price relief.

Other terms recommended by the panel and accepted by the union include maintenance of membership; checkoff of union dues; pay for union stewards while settling grievances; provisions for final and binding arbitration of shop disputes, subject to negotiation of a clause incorporating the panel's provisions; liberalization of the company's vacation plans; three weeks' vacation for workers with 15 years' service, and improvements in eligibility requirements.

Unsettled issues revolving around Harvester's wage rate, piece-work and allowance structure, which have been the subject of years of past negotiations, will be pressed by the union in further negotiations. While the panel urged fewer jobs classifications and less complicated rate structures, it left these to be settled by collective bargaining.

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Reg. Dir. Powers Hapgood, Indianapolis, reports: Wabash Fibre Box Co., Terre Haute, Ind., CIO 122, AFL 80. This company had been under AFL contract for 13 years. UPWA Rep. Nicholas Vrataric was in charge of drive, assisted by Field Reps. Markunas and McGrew and the Fin. Secy. of UPWA Local 31.

Geo. Craig, CIO Reg. Dir., Philadelphia, advises: Diaphane Bag Co., Philadelphia, CIO Paperworkers 26, against 11. UPWA Local 35 Business Agent Spencer Condiff was in charge of this campaign.

Wm. R. Henderson, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Little Rock, Ark., advises: Liberty Oil Co., Smackover, Ark., CIO Oil Workers 25, No Union 6; Arkansas Fuel Oil Co., Little Rock, CIO 6, against 1; Federal Compress & Warehouse Co., Helena, Ark., FTA-CIO received all votes cast.

George Brown, Dir. Org. IWA-CIO, reports: Zip-O-Log Mills, Eugene, Ore., CIO 15, no union 8; Edwards Paper Co., Camp 4 and Camp 10, Alsyon, Mich., employes voted 100% for CIO.

* * *

The UERMWA-CIO announce a 20% pay roll increase for 15,000 employes of the Emerson Radio & Phonograph Corporation, the Electronic Corp. of America and 18 other radio manufacturing companies in the New York metropolitan area. This agreement was reached without a strike. Among other benefits received was a closed shop with hiring through the union. This is the first area-wide agreement in the history of the radio industry.

The writer attended the United Office & Professional Workers convention in Cleveland and addressed the delegates on Monday, Feb. 18. This was the union's largest convention so far. The organization shows considerable gain in membership and is now preparing to negotiate wage increases with Metropolitan, Prudential and the movie industry, covering some 60,000 workers. The delegates cheered CIO's victory in steel; commended the leadership of CIO Pres. Philip Murray and enthusiastically endorsed intensified organizing campaigns.

A number of returning veterans on the UOPWA's staff received special badges of honor from the convention.

From Cleveland, I went to Memphis, Tenn., to meet the telephone groups whose conference is now in session there. I found that their wage strategy is patterned after the CIO's and the CIO position was commended by those in attendance.

* * *

Since my last column, the steel settlement has been concluded. This, the largest strike in the history of America, was conducted in a manner which received the highest commendation. The USA-CIO officers and members are to be congratulated on this victory which sets the pattern for all industry and workers everywhere.

The United Rubber Workers, for the first time in the union's history, has arranged meetings with the "BIG 4" in the rubber industry—Goodyear, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber and Firestone. Negotiations on an industry-wide basis began this week in Washington, D. C.

CIO MINE, MILL UNION CALLS NATION-WIDE AS&R STRIKE

SOME 7,000 workers in 18 plants of the American Smelting & Refining Co. are set for a nation-wide strike called for Feb. 25 by the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers to back up demands for a living wage and national bargaining, the union announced this week.

When the AS&R workers go out, they will add their forces to the strike ranks of the 20,000 employes in the brass and copper fabricating industry, 65% shut down since the first week in February by the strike of six MMSW locals in Connecticut and Buffalo, N. Y.

Also on strike are MMSW workers at the Laurel Hills plant of the Phelps Dodge Refining Corp. in Long Island City, N. Y., where Local 541 has been trying to negotiate a new contract since April, 1944, and where the company has stubbornly refused to comply with a War Labor Board order issued Apr. 5, 1945. The strike started Feb. 3.

Phelps-Dodge locals at El Paso, Tex., and at Douglas, Bisbee, and Morenci, Ariz. have also voted to strike.

Meanwhile, in Utah picketing continues at 17 plants of the Utah Copper Co., American Smelting & Refining Co. and U. S. Smelting Refining & Mining Co., where 5,000 workers of the Big Three Utah copper companies are on strike for a living wage.

In the Connecticut and N. Y. brass strike, where 20,000 workers have been out since early February, picket lines have been covering the gates of the silent brass mills, with nobody permitted to go through without a pass from the union. The strike followed eight months of fruitless conferences with the companies involved —Chase Brass & Copper, Scovill Mfg. and four plants of American Brass.

Overall strike strategy plans were drawn up at the MMSW's executive board meeting held recently in Chicago. The board voted for the AS&R strike after a Federal Conciliator tried without success to break the deadlock in negotiations at a conference between union and company officials at Perth Amboy, N. J.

The union is demanding a 30% an hour general increase and uniform wage rates in all plants throughout the country.

AS&R plants involved are located in California, Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, Colorado, Washington, Montana, Texas, Maryland, New Jersey, Illinois and Nebraska.

UOPWA CONVENTION GOES TO BAT FOR WHITE COLLAR WORKERS

By HELEN KINGERY

DETERMINED to show the same fighting spirit as industrial workers have shown on picket lines, 400 delegates to the sixth convention of the CIO Office & Professional Workers this week in Cleveland adopted a full-scale organizing and bargaining program to insure higher pay and decent living standards for white-collar workers.

Sec. of Commerce Henry A. Wallace, in an address to the delegates, declared that the trend of declining white collar living standards must be reversed.

He said that there are reactionary groups in America today, such as the Society of Sentinels, representing powerful economic forces which are "determined to prevent the rise of a progressive America because the interests of the people stand in the way of the unlimited extension of their own power and profits."

Wallace particularly scored those who are "talking up war with Russia." Stalin's election speech, he said, should be regarded as a friendly challenge to show that we can make our American system work without crises or depressions.

Messages from President Truman, CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Senator Wayne Morse and Scientist Albert Einstein were among the greetings read to the delegates.

"We in the U. S. must use our great strength and power to advance the national well-being by raising the living standards of the American people and strengthening the basis for lasting peace and national prosperity," declared the message from Truman.

Murray's message assured the UOPWA delegates that the CIO would place all its resources behind them in their efforts to improve their conditions. "You deserve and must have substantial increases that will permit you to enjoy the decent, wholesome standard of living to which every American is entitled," he said.

CIO Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood, in an address to the convention, assured the office workers of the full support of the CIO in their fight for security and higher salaries. The CIO's organization drive in the South, he said, will bring new political as well as economic democracy that will mean the end of the Republican-Democratic alliance now trying to push anti-labor legislation through Congress.

UOPWA Pres. Lewis Merrill in his opening address told the delegates that the same employer interests that are seeking to destroy the labor movement in order to secure undisputed sway over the life of the nation are contesting the right of white collar workers to organize.

Pointing out that the union would soon be opening negotiations with insurance, motion picture and other companies covering some 60,000 employes, Merrill said that the outcome would undoubtedly affect the salary structure that would prevail for all white collar workers.

Calling upon labor to participate as an independent force in the 1946 Congressional elections, to secure a progressive Congress through both parties, Merrill declared that the labor support for any political party should be measured only by its performance to secure the aims of the people.

The convention voted to set up a scientific and technical division and empowered the executive board to complete plans for the merger with the UOPWA of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians.

Other important actions taken by the delegates included a vote to back the drive to raise salaries in social service agencies and endorsement of the report of the insurance collective bargaining conference in which delegates representing 20,000 industrial insurance agents pledged to take all necessary action, including a strike as a last resort, for victory in the coming negotiations with the Metropolitan and Prudential Insurance companies. A $10 a week general increase is called for in the collective bargaining program adopted.

Resolutions were also passed calling for control of atomic energy by a civilian agency set up by the federal government; urging the Administration to remove from the State Dept. and diplomatic posts those who represent reactionary interests of big business groups; and asking withdrawal of troops from China, assistance to the people of Spain in their desire for democratic government, and collaboration with labor and democratic groups in Greece.

NEWS BRIEFS

JOHN W. GIBSON, former president, Michigan CIO Council, this week was appointed by President Truman as first assistant Secretary of Labor to replace Dan Tracy, recently resigned. Gibson had been second assistant.

* * *

HOSIERY CONVENTION: Delegates to the 34th annual convention of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers meeting last week in Philadelphia voted to demand a 12½c an hour "cost-of-living" increase from 35 full-fashioned hosiery manufacturers through the country now under contract with the union.

The Federation, an affiliate of the CIO Textile Workers, represents employes in most of the major hosiery plants.

The convention also voted to increase a present hourly minimum of 55c for day workers and 50c for beginners to 70c. Federation Pres. Alexander McKeown said that the additional 12½c increase demanded, added to the 6c increase won last fall in an agreement signed with the Full Fashioned Hosiery Mfgs. of America, Inc., would bring the pay rate up to the standard 18½c formula set in the steel strike settlement.

* * *

OIL UNION OFFICIALS: Re-election by referendum vote of Pres. O. A. Knight, Vice-Pres. A. R. Kinstley and Sec. E. C. Conarty, has been announced by the Oil Workers Union.

* * *

AMALGAMATED DIRECTOR KILLED: Carl Albrecht, southern director for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, was killed in an auto accident, Feb. 4 near Nashville, Tenn. Harold Marthenke, Amalgamated state director, who was with Albrecht, was seriously injured.

MOST OF OIL INDUSTRY NOW SIGNED UP AT 18%—CIO

WITH nearly all the refineries struck last Sept. and Oct. signing for an 18% increase, the U. S. Navy hopes to retire from the oil business by the end of February, reports the CIO Oil Workers Union from Fort Worth, Tex.

The Navy seized the plants Oct. 4, under an order issued by President Truman to end the oil workers' strike for higher take-home pay.

First on the picket lines in the current CIO fight for the American standard of living, the nation's union oil workers were the first to begin cashing in on that drive when Sinclair agreed to an 18% increase last Dec. Since then most of the major companies have settled for 18%, representing on the average a 22.5c an hour increase, plus 4c and 6c night shift differentials.

Under the new rates, stillmen—the most highly skilled refinery workers—will receive $1.845 an hour at Port Arthur, Tex. Skilled craftsmen will receive rates from $1.65 up. Helpers' rates range upward from $1.10. The hiring rate for common labor is 80c, upped to 92c after four months on the job, and to $1.01 after one year.

"These rates on the Gulf Coast underline the Union's smashing victory in breaking, over a period of years, the north-south wage differential," said a union statement. "Refinery wages on the Gulf Coast are higher than in California and on a par with northern refineries."

Coming Conventions

Auto Workers, Ambassador Hotel, Atlantic City, March 23.

Utility Workers, Breakers Hotel, Atlantic City, April 6.

State, County & Municipal Workers, Hotel Chelsea, Atlantic City, April 23.

Textile Workers Union, Breakers Hotel, Atlantic City, April 24.

Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes, Mayflower Hotel, Akron, May 14.

Furniture Workers, Hotel Statler, Detroit, June 3.

Tomorrow's Citizens — By Rose H. Alschuler

THE BEST ARE JUST GOOD ENOUGH

Through books, children like adults enlarge their world of experience. When selecting a book for your child be sure (1) the CONTENT is of immediate interest, (2) the VOCABULARY is simple and within the child's understanding, (3) the ILLUSTRATIONS are clear in color, simple in form, (4) the book is of convenient size, well put together to endure hard usage. Children like to own good books and can readily learn to care for them. Care and ownership of good books is one of the better habits to build and encourage.

Lib. of Congress—Marjorie Collins for OWI. Copyright, 1946, CIO News

TEACHING BABY TO ENJOY GOOD FOOD

Prepared by Nutrition Service, D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross

TODAY'S children seem fussier about food than the children of grandmother's day. She tells us she never had to coax her children to eat. What is wrong?

For one thing, grandmother was so busy she didn't have time to force her large family to do anything. Her children were good eaters because she didn't worry about them. She let them eat and enjoy it! Then, too, in her day parents didn't know that Susie's pep, personality and looks and Junior's strength, health and stamina depend on the foods they eat. So, she wasn't tempted like some modern mothers to coax and threaten if a child doesn't eat.

Doctors tell us it's a big mistake to worry about children's eating. Even a little baby may be turned against the very foods he needs by too much pressure.

If your baby won't eat and you are anxious because you want him to grow up with the kind of food habits that combine pleasure-in-eating with good-for-him the first thing you've got to do is stop worrying.

Instead, offer him what's good for him and give him a chance to learn to like it. Follow these rules:

1. Don't force food. Do you enjoy a meal if you are nagged and coaxed at every bite? Children are people and they don't like it either. If baby sometimes indicates he doesn't want all his food, don't insist. If you try to stuff him against his will and he spits it up, it does him no good and leaves him unhappy.

2. Introduce a variety of foods and flavors early. Teach him early to like all healthful foods. He will then be used to that good pattern all through life.

3. Offer new foods casually and repeat if necessary. Most babies spit out a new food the first time they taste it. Some mothers get discouraged when they see baby "swallowing out." It isn't necessarily because he doesn't like it—he simply isn't used to the new flavor and meets it with suspicion. If he pushes it away, make no comment but, try it again at another time. Include a bit of the new food with his old favorites or offer it at the start of his meal when he is hungry.

4. Keep portions small. Don't discourage your child with a big plate, heaping full.

5. Make meal time happy. Laugh and have fun with him. A pretty bib, a new dish or sometimes a change in his eating place makes eating interesting.

6. Set a good example. Baby is the world's best imitator. Hearing grown-ups he loves refuse food is his cue to do the same thing.

CIO, AFL Make Joint Appeal for Wages

People's support of labor's fight for a living wage and a better America was asked in a joint statement this week by the AFL Central Labor Council and the CIO Council at Cincinnati.

"The American labor movement today is engaged in a fight for a better America," the CIO-AFL statement said. "It is fighting to better the nation's living standard, to achieve a wider distribution of the produce of mine, mill and factory.

VICTORIES SPELL MONEY FOR GROCERIES

By ELEANOR FOWLER

THE victory of the steelworkers and the General Motors electrical workers in their strikes for a living wage has lifted a tremendous load of worry from the shoulders of women in workers' homes. The $1.48 daily increase in pay will make it possible for women in these families to balance their household budgets.

The fact that the unions have won those two fights makes victory almost certain for the workers in other industries still on the picket lines.

CIO auxiliaries members can be proud of the part they have played and are still playing in backing the striking unions. Thomas Corlett, president of USA Local 1298 in Cleveland, for instance, wrote the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries:

"Just a letter of appreciation for the splendid work one of your auxiliaries, Steel 18, is doing. Their soup kitchen is playing an important part in maintaining the morale on the picket line. You may depend on any support USA Local 1298 can give you in furtherance of the organization of your Women's Auxiliaries."

The classic example of the value of auxiliary organization is the recent feat of the UAW Auxiliary in Flint, Michigan. Two wives of Flint workers, no doubt company inspired, called a meeting of women in strikers' families to lay plans to get their men back to work.

Catherine Gelles, UAW Auxiliary secretary-treasurer, attended that meeting, explained to the 350 women present that the union was striking to maintain the living standards of workers' families against the greed of an unprincipled corporation, and convinced the leaders that they had been misled. The meeting closed with the announcement by both initiators that they would work in the strike kitchen and serve on the picket line until GM signs up.

Now there's a superb opportunity to build auxiliaries rapidly. The CIO has won the first round of the fight for a decent living. Women will understand how important it is to join an organization which backs the union that has meant money in their pockets.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO. QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1725-41 W. North Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

SOLD EVERYWHERE

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP
PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

44 Years of Know-how
in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois
20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and scenes contained here are entirely imaginary as fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

DETERMINED TO EXPOSE THE LEADER OF THE ANTI-UNION GROUP AT THE ROTOR COMPANY--THOUGH IT IS HIS OWN BROTHER MICKEY--JIM SETS OUT WITH WOODY TO VISIT THE PLANT. ONLY TO FIND--

JIM! WE'RE TOO LATE! THE UNION BUSTERS ARE AT IT ALREADY! WE GOTTA DO SOMETHING!

FIRST, LET'S FIND OUT WHAT'S COOKING.

I'LL TAKE ONE...

SURE, BUD! READ IT--AND GET THE REAL LOWDOWN ON HOW UNIONS AIN'T AMERICAN!

UNION SHOP IS UNAMERICAN

THIS IS THE TIME TO STEP IN--AND EXPOSE THE WHOLE GANG OF SKUNKS! MICKEY INCLUDED!

WAIT A MINUTE, FELLAS! I'VE JUST BEEN HANDED ONE OF THESE LEAFLETS--NOW HERE'S THE REAL INSIDE DOPE ABOUT THE GUYS WHO ARE HANDING THEM OUT...AND WHY!

YOU'VE HEARD RUMORS ABOUT AN ANTI-UNION GROUP IN THE PLANT! THAT BUNCH ISN'T FIGHTING FOR YOU--IT'S IN THE PAY OF THE COMPANY. AND THEIR JOB IS TO SMASH YOUR UNION...

WHO SAYS SO?

YOUR BOSSES HAVE GANGED UP TO SMASH ALL UNIONS IN THIS COUNTRY! THEY WANT TO BRING BACK THE DAYS WHEN THE GUY WHO'D WORK FOR THE LOWEST PAY WOULD GET THE JOB...

...AND YOUR UNIONS. WON'T LET THE BOSSES GET AWAY WITH THAT! THAT'S WHY THE RATS HAVE BEEN HIRED TO BUST UP YOUR UNION... AND I KNOW---

...I KNOW BECAUSE THE LEADER OF THE UNION BUSTING GANG AT THIS PLANT IS... IS MY OWN KID BROTHER!

AND HERE HE IS--MICKEY BARRY! THE RAT HIMSELF--

I WARNED YOU TO STAY OUT OF MY BUSINESS--

Produced by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

Copyright by the NAT'L CIO NEWS

WASHINGTON GUIDE

One Down And More To Go

One part—and a most important one—of the conspiracy to crush unions has been defeated by the victory in CIO steel and other strikes.

Part two of the conspiracy remains to be dealt with. This is the anti-labor plot in Congress, aimed at crushing unions through such bills as the Case bill, the Ball-Hatch bill, the Ellender bill, the Lea bill (HR 5117) and others like them.

What the corporations and their agents failed to do on the picketline, they are now trying to accomplish through legislation.

The strength and unity of the CIO, together with the public support it has received, has forced them to grant the biggest wage increases in union history to the steel strikers and to others who have settled. Shortly that same CIO strength will win equal victories on the remaining strike fronts.

These victories must be held against attempts to wipe them out by anti-labor action in Congress.

Paste this brief list in your legislative hat—and keep it in mind for November, 1946:

1. The anti-strike, anti-union offensive expressed in the Case, Ball-Hatch, Lea and Ellender bills.

Note especially that the Case bill, which has passed the House, was fathered by Rep. Case, a Republican from South Dakota.

South Dakota GOP politics are run by the duPonts (General Motors) and the Pews (oil)—as a study of campaign expenditures shows.

2. The anti-worker, pro-inflation drive expressed in GOP-polltax Democrat offensive against renewal of price control.

The NAM leads this fight with full-page ads and more subtle ways of influencing reactionary Congressmen. It is aimed at taking away whatever wage increases industry has been forced to grant.

3. Current attempts to put over compulsory military training and the May-Johnson bill for military (plus private monopoly) control of atomic energy.

This is one of the main purposes of the current spy scare and witch-hunt hysteria being built up in the press and in Congress. Carried to its logical conclusion, it means a third world war.

4. Current drives against civil rights, aimed now at minorities but eventually planned to cover unions and all of us. These take shape in the Rankin un-American Committee, the filibuster of FEPC, refusal to repeal the polltax, etc.

Add these together and you have a conspiracy against your living standards and your liberties that must be met—or we will risk losing the great victories gained by CIO on the picketlines.

'Petrillo' Gag

Sharp CIO opposition to the so-called "anti-Petrillo" bill was made public last week by CIO Legislative Director Cowan. The bill was later passed by the House 222-43 and headed for the Senate.

The bill, ostensibly aimed at ending alleged "excesses" of the AFL Musicians union in its contracts with radio broadcasting chains, is a serious threat to all unions, AFL, CIO or whatever.

"The bill is so drawn that it can be used against normal activities of unions in all industries," Cowan said.

"It uses such general language as 'intimidation,' 'duress' and even more broadly, 'use of other means' in its list of tactics forbidden to unions.

"As labor unions know from long and bitter experience, such language is easily interpreted by hostile judges to put a clamp on practically any act a union undertakes in the course of a dispute with an employer."

The sponsor of the bill, Rep. Lea (D. Cal.), is a bitter-end reactionary who tacked the Lea rider onto a WLB appropriation a year ago in an attempt to remove 1,000,000 food workers from the jurisdiction of the Board.

Rep. Marcantonio (ALP NY) led the fight against the bill in the House.

Job Service

"The decision before Congress is whether the employment service (USES) shall be run in a manner that will fulfill the reasons for its existence, or whether it shall be gutted and made ineffective."

With these words, CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey told the Senate Labor Committee this week that CIO wants passage of S 1848, a bill putting the USES on a permanent Federal basis.

Both Carey and the second CIO witness, President Abram Flaxer of the State, County & Municipal Workers, opposed HR 4437, the House-passed bill that sends USES back to the state patronage machines.

Returning USES to exclusive state control would not only endanger job placement at a time when millions of veterans and demobilized war workers need it most, but would also force present USES employes to continue at substandard wage scales, the witnesses pointed out.

"It (the issue of keeping USES under Federal standards) vitally affects employment, about which we have the keenest interest," Carey added.

"We do not propose that this important government operation, affecting our postwar prosperity, shall be wrecked to serve a narrow, selfish interest."

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Case HR 5262	Imposes cooling-off, forced arbitration, forbids support of strikes, etc.	Senate Labor Committee, along with Ball-Hatch (S 1171), Ellender (S 1661) bills aimed at same results.	Keep telling your Senators to have nothing to do with these or other anti-union measures.
Price Control HR 5270	Renews price control act and OPA for one year.	House Banking and Currency Committee. (See Page 5)	Urge Representative, Senators to support renewal for one year, no amendments.
Lea "anti-Petrillo" HR 5117	Under guise of curbing AFL Musicians Union would forbid normal acts such as publicity, soliciting support for strikes, etc., by all unions.	Passed by House, 222-43; now goes to Senate. Rushed through Interstate Commerce Committee without adequate hearings.	Tell your Senators to vote against as threat to all unions. (see col. 2 above)
65c wage S 1349	Raises present minimum wage from 40 to 65, then 75c, extends coverage to food processing, retail workers and others.	Senate floor debate tentatively set for shortly after Mar. 1.	Tell your Senators to support as reported by Senate Labor Committee at 65c level, with coverage.
Employment service S 1848 S 1510	S 1848 Keeps USES under Federal standards; blocks wage cutting plan of advocates of returning USES to states. (These support HR 4437). S 1510 delays return.	HR 4437 has passed House, is now in Senate Labor Committee with S 1848 and S 1510.	CIO support S 1848 as best bill; S 1510 as next best; opposes HR 4437. Tell your Senators.
School Lunch HR 3370 S 962	Sets up hot lunch program for school kids costing (in House version) $50 million. S 962 has $100 million fund.	HR 3370 passed House this week. S 962 now in Senate Agriculture Committee.	Tell Senators to support S 962.

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

ATOMIC ENERGY: two major bills are up for action on the issue of control of atomic energy.

One is the May-Johnson bill (HR 4566) which would turn over control to the military and to private interests.

The other is the McMahon bill (S 1717), which provides for a civilian atomic commission and for government ownership and production of fissionable materials. CIO backs this bill, opposes HR 4566.

The current spy scare being raised over atomic "secrets" is beautifully timed to coincide with the conclusion of hearings on the McMahon bill. Just by coincidence, no doubt, Rep. May also announces this week that he intends to move his bill without waiting for the end of the McMahon hearings.

Writing to President Truman this week, CIO's Lewis A. Berne, president of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians, said:

"I am struck by the fact that all this hysteria is being generated just when Senator McMahon's bill is to come out of hearings and before Congress.

"I see that it necessary again and again to oppose and expose those who would make frightened people of us and frighten us out of the McMahon bill—the first and belated piece of constructive legislation on atomic energy to come out of Congress."

Berne also reminded Truman of his original support of the principles of S 1717, and asked him to re-affirm it.

SOCIAL SECURITY: the House Ways and Means Committee is set to start hearings on social security this week (Feb. 25).

CIO and other progressive groups have been trying to get action on long-needed improvements to social security for more than two years.

The hearings will not be on a specific bill, such as the Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill, but on the general issue in broad terms.

SEAMEN RIGHTS: one of the first orders of business in the House Ways and Means hearings on social security should be a favorable report on the Jackson bill (HR 1899) to set up unemployment benefits for merchant seamen.

Merchant seamen, 6,000 of whom died for their country during the war, have been second class citizens so far as protection is concerned for far too long.

They should be put on a level with other workers now.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler, Editor Irving Richter

$500 MILLION A YEAR IN PAY GAINS!

(See Page 2)

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 10 Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS $1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA 82 March 4, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

A PERSONAL MESSAGE FROM PHILIP MURRAY

THE CIO campaign for the restoration of the take-home pay of American workers is now approaching a successful conclusion. Wage settlements providing for substantial wage increases on behalf of millions of members of CIO unions are now being made throughout industry. Historians of the labor movement will record CIO's campaign for substantial wage increases for its members as the most impressive activity of the American labor movement which so far has taken place. I am enormously proud of our role in this wage fight and of the unity and determination of the members of CIO organizations in bringing this basic issue to the American people. Terrific battles still face us in several big industries. The same solidarity we have shown to date will make final victory an absolute certainty.

PHILIP MURRAY

IN the course of this struggle to protect and improve the wage standards of the working people, we have had to meet attacks from strange sources. Before the Natl. Labor-Management Conference held in Washington last November, the CIO ceaselessly endeavored to secure the adoption of a resolution by the Conference recognizing the imperative need for substantial wage increases and effective price control to avoid inflation.

Representatives of labor groups outside of the CIO in concert with inflation-bent employers defeated the CIO's proposal. Instead, this combination proposed a resolution which was intended to gut the entire price control law and thereby invite inflation. The hypocritical pretenses on the part of these same groups today decrying the struggle of the CIO for wage increases as possibly threatening price control will deceive no one — least of all American workers who will reap the fruits of the successful and victorious drive of the CIO for substantial wage increases.

BUT even after the wage settlements themselves are all concluded three unfinished tasks remain which are absolutely vital in preserving and extending the effect of these wage settlements:

FIRST, members of the CIO must join with millions of other Americans in repelling attacks upon price control. If price ceilings are destroyed and inflation results it is the worker who will suffer first. With the same persistence and energy that has marked our historic fight for wage increases we must now resist the attacks of the profiteers upon price control.

SECOND, the victories of organized labor are being threatened by sinister legislative proposals pending in Congress which are designed to deprive workers of their rights to organize and bargain collectively and to undermine the very existence of labor unions. Organized labor and all other progressive Americans must make it clear to Congress that such measures as the Case, Ellender or Ball-Burton-Hatch bills must be decisively defeated.

THIRD, the millions of unorganized workers all over America will inevitably share in the fruits of our campaign for substantial wage increases. They will inevitably be made aware that it is through our struggle and our collective endeavors that their lot has been improved. Now is the time to bring home to these workers the message of trade unionism. Now is the time to make them see that the improved wage patterns emerging during this period are the product of the progressive trade unionism of the CIO. Now is the time to enlarge the membership of our organization among the unorganized by bringing home to them the message that the wage gains that have been earned can be consolidated and enlarged through the strength and growth of the labor organization responsible for those wage gains, the CIO.

Sincerely yours,

PHILIP MURRAY,

President, CIO.

BIGGEST EVER--ALL CIO

$500 MILLION PAY GAINS IN 2 MONTHS!

By FRED d'AVILA and EVERETT KASSALOW

WAGE GAINS far exceeding any records in the history of the nation have been chalked up by CIO in the last two months.

Under the militant policy of CIO President Murray, CIO affiliates took their case to the people in demonstrations and on picket lines that not only won badly needed raises for hundreds of thousands of workers, but also guaranteed continued security for their unions.

Reports from 12 CIO unions alone—and partial ones at that—show raises conservatively estimated at $10 million dollars a week for nearly 1,500,000 workers, or about $500 million a year. More raises are yet to be negotiated in auto, shipyard, packing, farm equipment, maritime and other unions.

In contrast to this, the AFL in its Labor's Monthly Survey listed "partial reports" of gains since V-J Day involving 573,837 workers. Although the AFL claimed gains for "3,000,000" workers, its detailed partial report listed only a little more than one-sixth this number.

In the CIO listing, only major reported gains are noted. There are many others, involving smaller unions and fewer workers, that could be added to the total.

Unions reported, numbers of workers involved, and wage increases, follow:

United Steelworkers	750,000	18½c an hour
(500,000 have got raise, 250,000 still out will get it.)
United Auto Workers	211,800
(Full production employment figures)
Ford	110,000	18c an hour
Chrysler	65,000	18½c an hour
Studebaker	12,000	12c an hour (To be adjusted upward to industry scale)
Briggs Mfg.	12,000	18½c an hour
Kaiser-Fraizer	6,000	(To be adjusted to scale set by General Motors)
Willys-Overland	6,000	10c an hour (To be adjusted upward to industry scale)
Champion Spark Plug	800	18-26c an hour
Textile Workers	195,000
Northern cotton mills	65,000	8c an hour
Woolen & worsted mills	80,000	15c an hour
Carpet & rug mills	20,000	10c an hour
Synthetic yarn mills	30,000	11c an hour
Amalgamated Clothing Workers	150,000	20-31%
Electrical, Radio & Machine Wkrs.	48,000
General Motors Electrical Division	25,000	18½c an hour
N. Y. area radio firms	15,000	20%
Radio Corp. of America	8,000	17½c an hour
Oil Workers	30,000	18%
Shoe Workers	22,400
67 Mass. manufacturers	12,000	15%
Intl. Shoe	9,000	12½%
Brown Shoe	1,400	12½%
Glass Workers	15,000	10.7c an hour (Plus 7c on some rates and reopening clause)
Newspaper Guild	11,000	$4 million a year
Transport Workers	9,600	12c an hour
Leather Workers	6,000	15c an hour
American Communications Assn.	2,000	$2 million a year
Total	1,450,800	$10 million a week

NEW WAGE ORDER

FOSTERS STALLS, CHAOS, STRIKES, SAYS MURRAY

CIO WANTS extension and vigorous enforcement of the price control act and is bitterly opposed to the new federal wage control policy which invites "destructive delays and inevitable confusion and strikes."

This was the policy outlined in a letter from CIO Pres. Philip Murray to Chester Bowles, director of economic stabilization. The letter follows in full:

A movement of historic proportions for the restoration of the take-home pay of American workers is now being concluded. Wage settlements on behalf of millions of members of CIO unions are now being made throughout industry. It is imperative for industrial peace, rapid reconversion, full employment, and the fight against inflation, that these settlements be made effective with all possible speed and in as broad as possible an area.

It would be severely injurious to the common welfare if, after the principles governing those wage settlements had been established, their application were deferred for an indefinite period of time or if they were applied in such a way as to deprive the workers who struggled to achieve those settlements of the full fruits of them.

Moreover, any policy which requires approval by governmental agencies of a wage increase granted as the result of collective bargaining seriously undermines the freedom of American workers and destroys the value of collective bargaining.

Having eliminated government intervention from the disputes phase of labor relations, it would be catastrophic to reintroduce it on the level of wage settlements. To do so would mean not only to abandon a fundamental premise of federal labor policy of encouraging collective bargaining to the widest extent possible but also to invite destructive delays and inevitable confusion and strikes.

This will be the inevitable result from the application of Executive Order 9697 purporting to establish a new national wage-price policy.

The CIO is unwilling to commit itself to an Executive Order based upon the view that wage increases obtained through collective bargaining are inflationary. The CIO is unwilling to commit itself to a recurrence of wartime delays in the processing of wage increases and in the policing of meaningless distinctions. Neither the labor movement nor the public as a whole can countenance a repetition of our wartime experience along these lines.

We urge you, therefore, promptly to remove all handicaps to the functioning of collective bargaining by removing the necessity for subjecting wage settlements between employers and labor organizations to approval of the Wage Stabilization Board.

In its struggle for a decent living wage for its members, the CIO has not at any time abandoned its firm support of effective and vigorous price control. It reaffirms its support at this time. Its record in the fight against inflation is untarnished by retreat or compromise.

In its campaign for wage increases, CIO has not at any time abandoned its conviction that price control is indispensable to the welfare of all the people.

This wage movement has been based upon the argument of the President of the U. S. that "wage increases are therefore imperative —to cushion the shock to our workers, to sustain adequate purchasing power and to raise the national income." At the same time, the CIO has insisted, as has the President of the U. S., that the high profits and reduced costs of American industry can amply absorb such increases without increasing the cost of living.

During the Natl. Labor-Management Conference in the month of November of last year, the CIO labored ceaselessly for the adoption of a resolution addressed to the wage issue which would permit substantial wage increases. A combination of other groups sponsored a resolution which proposed nothing less than the gutting of the entire price control program under the guise of supporting so-called unfettered "free enterprise." Any present attempt on the part of these interests to pose as guardians against inflation will deceive no one.

The CIO reaffirms its support of price control and pledges to you its wholehearted cooperation in the fight for the renewal of the Price Control Act.

PHILADELPHIA FASCISM

Nearly 1,000 club-swinging mounted cops and foot patrolmen smashed a CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers parade in the City of Brotherly Love this week, injuring more than a score of citizens, at least four of whom required hospitalization. Pitched battles Wednesday and Thursday mornings near the strikebound General Electrical plant were the "solutions" that Republican Mayor Bernard Samuels offered as a means of enforcing a court injunction banning more than token picket lines. Republican Governor Edward Martin promised—if asked—to use State police and Natl. Guardsmen, and to ask for Federal troops. (Top) Club-wielding cops even chased workers onto porches of homes near the plant, ganged up on them to beat them. Note four foot officers (one's hand extending beyond horse) and mounted cop. Policeman, minus hat, threatens fallen victim. The parade was led by war veterans. After the attack, more than 5,000 protesting workers from UE and other unions marched to City Hall, demanded the Mayor end police violence, guarantee right of free assembly and parade. The Mayor's answer: that he would use more force to curtail picketing. Injunctions against picketing have been used against UE in Bloomfield, N. J.; Schenectady, N. Y.; Ft. Wayne, Ind.; and Bridgeport, Conn., as the nationwide strike against Westinghouse and General Electric entered its seventh week. Meanwhile, federal mediators reported that they will meet with Westinghouse and GE officials to discuss negotiations for settlement.

FREE COLLECTIVE BARGAINING

The CIO wants no more wage freezes or formulas such as were imposed under wartime conditions. It believes that the healthy processes of free collective bargaining should be allowed full rein. But it also insists on strict price control to keep down living costs and prevent inflation. This is the gist of the CIO position on the new national wage-price policy.

The danger of inflation does not come from wage increases obtained through collective bargaining. It arises from the unwillingness of corporations to pay such increases out of ample profits, and from their attempts to swell profits by extorting unreasonable price increases.

To require governmental approval of wage increases granted through collective bargaining not only undermines the freedom of American workers, but also threatens endless delays, confusion and industrial unrest.

Labor remembers all too well the delays and injustices, and the straitjacket on wages while living costs rose, to which it was subjected under wartime regulations. Grievances accumulated and were tied up in governmental red tape for months on end, while the workers' resentment reached the breaking point.

The old War Labor Board was swamped with hundreds of thousands of cases and found it physically impossible to handle all of them promptly. The present Wage Stabilization Board, with nothing like as many facilities or employes as the WLB, will be similarly swamped if it attempts to police wage cases as indicated in the Executive Order.

Collective bargaining is the best, quickest and only satisfactory method of resolving differences that arise between workers and employers. It should not be hampered and frustrated by any requirement for government approval of wage agreements.

The huge profits and reduced costs of American industry can amply absorb the wage increases obtained through collective bargaining, without increasing living costs, if effective price control is maintained.

FOOLING THE PUBLIC

The American public, made up chiefly of workers, farmers and other low-income folks, has a vital stake in decent wages, strong unions and price controls to keep down living costs and prevent inflation.

But a huge big-business campaign is now under way to fool the public into favoring union-busting legislation and lower wages, with unrestricted profiteering and no lid on prices.

These poisonous ideas are being presented in sugar-coated form through a million-dollar newspaper advertising campaign of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers.

At the same time, the publication In Fact has exposed the systematic corruption of many weekly papers through a steel company advertising campaign. As the price of receiving the companies' ads, these papers were required to print prepared anti-labor editorials and alleged "news items."

While self-respecting publications refuse to sell their news and editorial columns in this brazen fashion, big advertisers unquestionably influence them in more subtle ways. And because they are big-business institutions themselves, most of the major papers print big-business propaganda of their own accord.

While they know they can't fool all of the people all of the time, these propagandists hope to fool many of them into opposing their own interests; and to fool others into believing that what they read in most of the press reflects "public opinion."

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

ONCE more, in a spirit of fair play, we are compelled to come to the rescue of the AFL.

Refreshed by a prolonged executive vacation in Florida, its leaders have returned full of declining vim and increasing vinegar, determined to take a sock at the CIO.

The CIO disturbed their hours of ease by conducting the biggest wage movement and winning the largest increases for the greatest number of workers in American history.

So naturally the AFL leaders are peeved. Already their members are piping up: "What did you do Pappy, in the great war for decent wages?"

★ ★ ★

But in trying to sock the CIO, the AFL leaders have got so tangled up it's painful. We'll try to unravel them.

In what purports to be a grand assault on the CIO, the AFL's Monthly Survey admits its unions haven't secured as high hourly increases as have those of the CIO.

It then tries to double-talk itself out of this embarrassment with a lot of old-maidish scolding about CIO strikes, "uncompromising demands", "government domination" and "Communist agents."

It's all very complicated. But this is about the nearest it comes to an argument:

AFL members with increases of 10-15 cents an hour are better off than CIO members who get 18½ cents, because living costs will go up. (How AFL members are exempt from the cost of living is not explained).

Strikes lead to government intervention, which is what "Communist agents" want (this will surprise Mr. Hearst and other publishers who are always asking the government to act against strikes); and government intervention means government domination, which ain't free enterprise. Then follows a long attack on the Soviet Union.

All of this ought to be as clear as mud to the AFL rank-and-filer, even if it doesn't put any more dollars in his pay envelope.

★ ★ ★

If the AFL leadership will take its foot out of its mouth for a moment, we'll try to point out where it stands and where the CIO stands. This may help to give it a better sense of direction and a more sporting chance for future socks.

At the National Labor-Management Conference, Philip Murray made the CIO's position clear by fighting for a resolution for substantial wage increases, to maintain take-home pay and sustain purchasing power, and for strict price controls to keep down living costs and prevent inflation.

The AFL, under the volunteer leadership of John L. Lewis, bitterly fought this resolution, lining up with the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers for a free-for-all on price increases and inflation.

★ ★ ★

Since then, the CIO has organized, led and largely won the fight for substantial wages increases for American labor, while at the same time fighting to maintain price controls and keep down living costs.

As to "government domination" etc., the CIO has been and still is the outstanding champion of free collective bargaining, as against wage regimentation of any kind and labor-shackling legislation.

The AFL leaders, on the other hand, have "let George CIO do it", so far as winning decent wage increases is concerned. Meanwhile, they have tried to cotton up to the NAM, by pointing out how much less demanding they are on wage matters and by applauding its philosophy of removing all controls regardless of inflation.

★ ★ ★

The real reason for the conflicts, contradictions and confusions in the peculiar statements now emanating from AFL headquarters is a deep feeling of insecurity.

The AFL leaders know CIO's great wage victories will not only increase discontent in AFL ranks with their own poor performance, but will also increase CIO's prestige among the unorganized workers who will want to join a movement that can secure such results.

They also know their own subservient attitude toward the big-business advocates of uncontrolled profiteering and inflation has little appeal to most American workers. They will prefer to join a movement like the CIO, which couples its successful fight for substantial wage increase with an equally vigorous fight to maintain price controls and prevent inflation.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

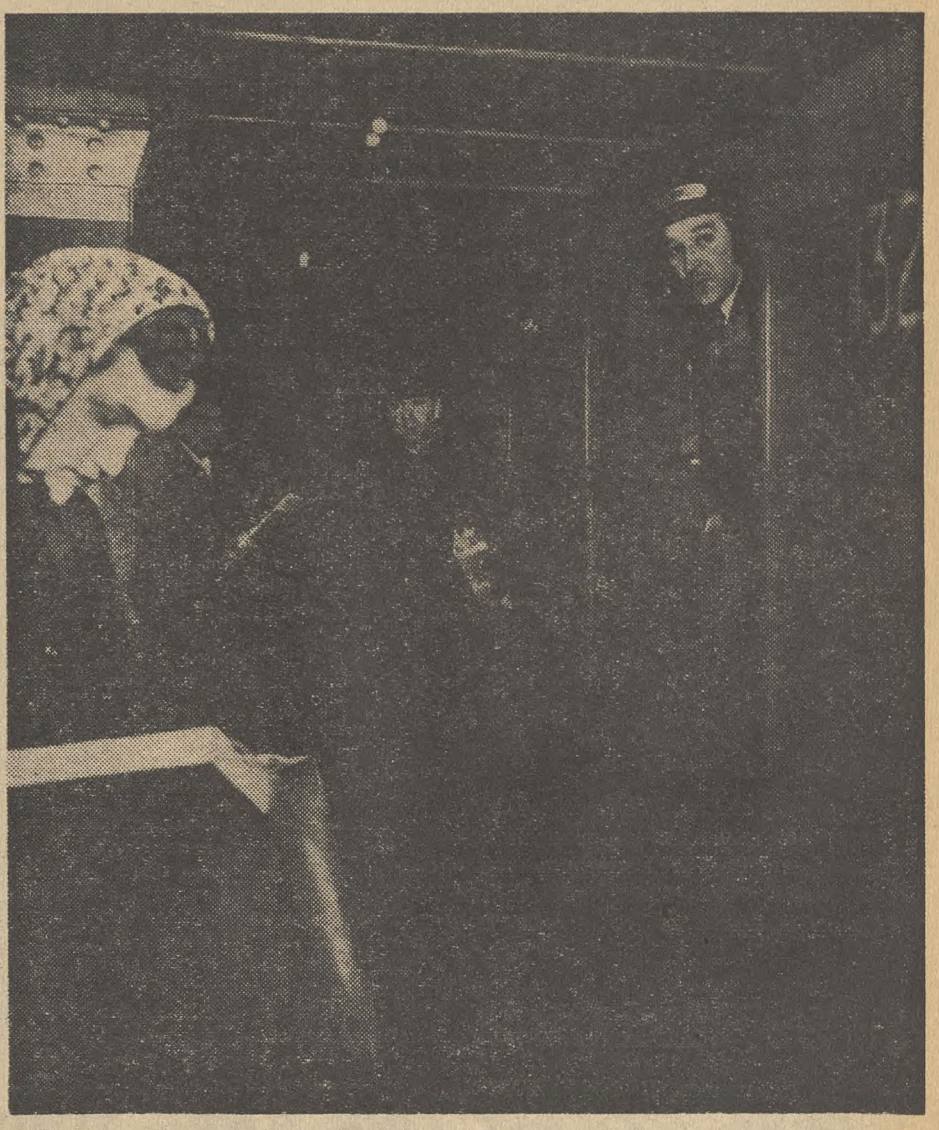
Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 March 4, 1946 No. 10

CIO TRANSIT MEN WIN VICTORY

1 Despite days of fierce newspaper attempts to whip up hysteria against the union, the CIO Transport Workers of New York, headed by Pres. Michael J. Quill (left), won a substantial victory when they called off their proposed strike of 32,000 members on the city's rapid transit lines.



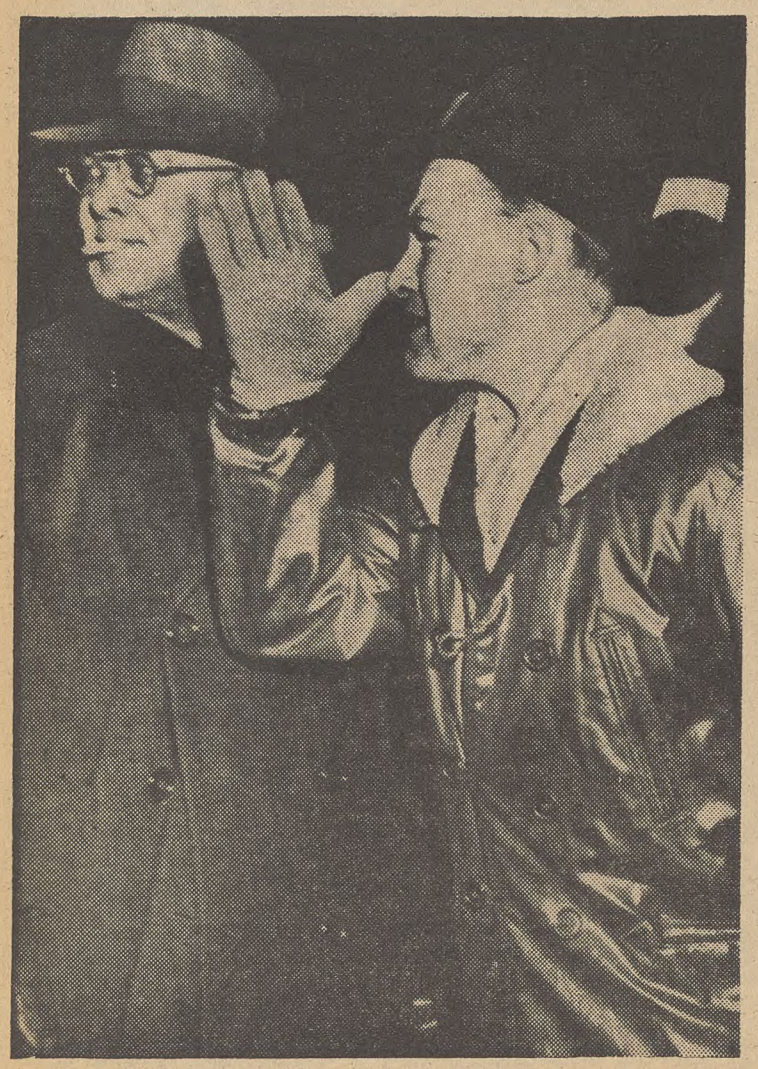
2 Workers who put in long, grinding hours on the subway trains such as the CIO member above will probably get a sizable raise out of the committee set up to probe living and working conditions, since New York's Mayor O'Dwyer has already indicated his belief that the union's wage demands are just and reasonable.

3 Men like Harry Klein work not only on the trains but behind the scenes to keep trains rolling. TWU's demand for collective bargaining recognition by the N. Y. Board of Transportation would protect not only the membership, but also the public whose lives depend on the skill of CIO union members.

4 While the newspapers tried to fan a lynch spirit against the union, CIO President Murray and TWU's Mike Quill worked long days and nights for a settlement. Cause of the near strike was the reactionary Board of Transportation, by-passed in the agreement to set up an impartial committee to hear CIO demands.

1 Peace and War: CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers strikers peacefully picket home of Judge Byron A. Milner, near Philadelphia. The judge was one of those responsible for an injunction limiting number of pickets at local Westinghouse plant.

2 Three Cops, One Lady: Lanny Ward, CIO Auto Workers picket at the W. A. Jones Foundry & Machine plant, Chicago, is hustled off to jail despite her struggles with the beefy law. She was back on the line next day.



3 A striking UAW-CIO member outside the Jones Foundry, Chicago, thumbs his nose at the cops after a scuffle involving scabs.

4 The kids took advantage of Washington's Birth day to help their folks to picket Westinghouse Electric, Essington, Pa., where the UE-CIO is out on strike. P. Cherkas furnishes "squeeze box" music.

250,000 Still Out: Members of the CIO Steelworkers are still on strike at fabricating plants, to win the 18½c an hour settlement arrived at in basic steel plants. (Above) Baldwin Locomotive workers, Eddystone, Pa., demonstrate at city hall.

CIO LAUNCHES NEW ORGANIZING DRIVE

PLANS for one of the greatest organizing drives in labor history were being mapped this week, as CIO's wage victories brought a flood of calls from unorganized workers eager to join.

Following a meeting in Washington at which CIO leaders from major unions discussed organizing plans and prospects, Pres. Philip Murray announced the formation of a national CIO organizing committee to collect funds from CIO unions, employ organizers and work out details of a coordinated campaign.

The chief purpose of the drive will be to organize the millions of unorganized workers in the Southern states. Special emphasis will be placed on the textile industry, but all other industries will also be covered in the Southern campaign.

At the same time, national CIO support will be thrown behind a special drive to organize hundreds of thousands of chemical workers throughout the country.

Vice Pres. Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, was named chairman of the new committee, which also includes CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey; David J. McDonald, Steelworkers; George Baldanzi, Textile Workers; Julius Emspak, Electrical Workers; George Addes, Auto Workers; Jacob S. Potofsky, Clothing Workers; Chas. Lanning, Rubber Workers; Pietro Lucchi, Fur Workers; and Wm. Pollock, Textile Workers.

UNION ASKS AID FOR SMALL STEEL FIRMS

PHILIP Murray, president of CIO and of the CIO Steelworkers, this week asked Economic Stabilization Dir. Bowles to restore the allocation of steel to non-integrated companies "in view of the unwillingness of the large producers" to supply them with sufficient semi-finished steel.

Murray, in a letter to Bowles, noted a USA-CIO Wage Policy Committee resolution asking that non-integrated companies receive sufficient semi-finished steel to operate at the same rate of capacity as the steel producers operate their ingot capacity.

Meanwhile, nearly 250,000 USA-CIO members in steel fabricating plants were still on strike for the 18½c an hour raise gained in basic steel, with union officials predicting that most of the plants would sign up shortly. Nearly 80 such plants have agreed to the raise.

As an anti-climax to the four-week basic steel walkout, the steel fact-finding board appointed by President Truman this week said the 18½c raise was justified, and that the strike was a legitimate exercise of the union's collective bargaining function.

The committee upheld the union's position that reopening of the wage issue, as provided under the steel contracts, carried with it the right to strike if bargaining should fail.

BOSSES OPPOSING FEPC BLASTED

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey at a rally in Madison Square Garden, New York City, charged employers who oppose fair employment legislation are really voicing their objection to full employment. He said this week.

"If employers are to be permitted to continue at the hiring windows their patterns of discrimination based on race, creed, color or national ancestry, they will be given another avenue of escape from their clear responsibility to provide full employment to all willing workers in our nation."

IT'S UP TO CONGRESS

CASE BILL OR FREE AMERICA?

TO BE frank about their real purposes in pushing the Case bill, anti-union Congressmen should write a clause into it declaring openly that they intend to destroy unions, CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman told the Senate Labor Committee this week.

That would be the general effect of providing for lawsuits against unions for violation of contracts, such as the Case bill allows. "Lawsuits and good industrial relations don't go together," Pressman said. "Workers simply won't work for employers who harass them continually with lawsuits, threaten to take away their homes and savings, and destroy the unions that protect their living standards.

"This bill seethes with anti-labor animus. The real issue is whether we want a free America, or whether we want a Gestapo-run state, where workers have no right to organize in unions and to strike when necessary to protect their living standards."

Pressman described the blacklist proposal of the Case bill as a fascist measure. Under this clause, any worker can be fired from any job at any time, once he has been convicted of violence on the picketline. Violence of course can be any minor scuffle, provoked by scabs or company stoolpigeons and charged by company agents disguised as police court magistrates.

Once convicted of "violence," the worker loses the protection of the Wagner Act not for a month or a year but forever. No matter what job he may get, no matter where he may go, the worker has a permanent blacklist hanging over him.

The bill also revives anti-union injunctions, outlawed 14 years ago (incidentally during Hoover's last months in the White House) by Congress in the Norris-LaGuardia Act, Pressman pointed out.

States and municipalities have ample laws to cope with any lawlessness during strikes, and state courts can and do issue injunctions when employers think it desirable to curb mass picketing, Pressman said, yet the Case bill puts all these back under Federal control.

"This bill is clearly against the principle of state's rights which Congress has so consistently upheld in recent years. Why is it that state's rights go out the window when it comes to repressing labor?"

The bill is extremely one-sided, Pressman pointed out, since it applies punishment only against acts of unions, leaving employers free to indulge in armed strike breaking, violence against pickets, tear gas, machine-guns and all the arsenal of strike breaking.

The committee listened to Pressman for the most part in silence especially Sen. Ball, who was afraid to come out of his corner to defend even his own Ball-Hatch bill. Only Sen. S. Fulbright (D. Ark.) and Smith (R. N.J.) were vocal in defending the bill. Sen. Donnell (R.. Mo.) also spoke up, accusing unions of a general tendency towards crime.

The Case bill is far from dead in the Senate, though some papers have said so.

GM STILL HOLDING OUT

AS The CIO NEWS went to press, the UAW-GM negotiations were adjourned, presumably to allow the union negotiators to give representatives of workers from striking locals a chance to hear what the company said were its "maximum proposals" for settling the strike which had lasted 100 days Feb. 28.

UAW officials said that the strike was not settled, and Federal Mediator Dewey said that the negotiators were "still apart on one or two issues" and that the company's "maximum proposals" would be presented to the 200 local union representatives—the Natl. GM conference—who were meeting in Detroit March 1 and 2. The negotiators were scheduled to meet again March 1.

The company's proposals were reported to have been made to UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas and other top union officials Feb. 28 by GM Pres. C. E. Wilson before he was taken to a hospital for treatment for a stomach ailment.

The UAW is asking a 19½c an hour raise and reinstatement of the contract which the company canceled after the strike was called.

The UAW and Ford this week signed a new contract which boosts wages 18c an hour retroactive to Jan. 5. Richard T. Leonard, director of the UAW Ford Dept., said that the new contract "made real progress toward improved relations and continuous production with high employment at better wages."

BARE PRESS SELLOUT TO STEEL TRUST

MANY weekly papers sold their editorial columns to the steel trust for big 70-inch steel ads obtained by the American Press Assn. Documentary evidence of this was exposed this week by In Fact.

The weekly news sheet, which was tipped off by a liberal-minded country editor, quoted letters by APA which said:

"Now that we have succeeded in selling the steel industry on the wholesome and powerful influence of the rural press, it is up to the publishers to KEEP THEM SOLD.

"This is your chance to show the steel people what the rural press can do for them. Go to it, and pave the way for more national advertising.

"Aside from the usual tear sheets of the advertising, sent to us for checking purposes, please be sure to send to me personally full tear page of any release or editorial you may publish. They will be shown to the steel executives," said a letter from William R. Robinson, APA's eastern representative.

Lest rural editors lack information or imagination necessary for concoction of the needed editorials, APA furnished "canned" edits with advertising copy. One of these said in part:

"It is time that Congress took a hand—to regulate these labor monopolies that put power for a few union leaders before prosperity for the people, that ride roughshod over the best interests of the nation."

That many papers cooperated is shown by another APA letter, which said:

"As a result of the arguments contained in these two (steel industry) advertisements, many editors of weekly newspapers already have entered into the strike picture with a vehemence.

"Through editorials, as well as in news stories (furnished also by APA), they are attempting to keep the problem before their readers and to explain the importance of labor peace to the future of the people of our country."

Evidence of newspaper corruption is widespread, In Fact pointed out, with 100 volumes of Congressional documents naming thousands of newspapers which have sold their opinions for paid ads.

"The big city press does not have to be bribed openly, as in the case exposed above," In Fact commented.

"Their interests — and in many cases their banking interests, stock portfolio, etc.— are the same as that of big business, and 98% of the big city press writes editorials such as the small town press has written for it by the Steel Institute."

1 Geraldine Martin checks in for the UOPWA-CIO Convention, in Cleveland, joining 357 more white collar delegates from publishing, radio and other fields. A cost status clerk at Bigelow Sanford, Thompsonville, Conn., she makes $36 a week. She got a $9 raise through the union. White collar average is $28 a week.

2 "The white collar worker must recognize his own importance in our society and he must be willing to act. There is a good American adage that Heaven helps those who help themselves," Sec. of Commerce Henry Wallace (second from left, below) told the Convention. Miss Martin helps escort Wallace from his train.

3 Miss Martin tells delegates at a Collective Bargaining secured in her office through the UOPWA is good, but not need a $30 minimum salary floor and a general $10 a week ra

MISS WHITE IS TALKING

Picture Story by Helen Kingery and Selma Ar

THERE are millions of Geraldine Martins and her male counterparts in every city throughout the U. S.—white collar men and women who report to work with shining shoes, carefully manicured fingernails and that well-groomed look that is the trademark of the "American way of life" in the slick magazines.

But in 1946 the white collar is getting a little frayed and the figures that dance before the white collar worker's eyes are more often than not the arithmetic of the constant struggle to make the skimpy pay envelope, and a fat pile of bills, add up to a living standard of health and decency.

"The white collar worker must take a good look at himself and the world he lives in," Sec. of Commerce Henry A. Wallace told the delegates to the Sixth Constitutional Convention of the CIO Office & Professional Workers of America in Cleveland last week. "He must recognize his own importance in our society and he must face the problems which confront him. And he must be willing to act. There is a good American adage that Heaven helps those who help themselves."

And this is what the white collar workers see when they look:

- Their living standards have been declining ever since the depression. Their average salary is $28 a week. Two million earn below 65c an hour. Their earnings went up 16% during the war but the cost of living went up 45%. Most of the gains they have made have been indirectly due to the advance made by organized labor in lifting the general wage structure.

- Even where they have organized in unions the white collar workers are meeting today the same resistance in collective bargaining that the industrial workers are meeting from the big corporations. In fact, in many cases, particularly in the big insurance and banking corporations, it is of Ge also a to wi

•
burde
The c
the p ing po
the fu
Bu To propag longer
Instea Collar hear ginnin to the
Th conven gram
$30 for gone b to orga ined munity
"Y
will pe
of livi confide take u to win assure its resc salaries fruits

rgaining Committee meeting that the 20-40% increase d, but not enough, and agrees that white collar workers a week raise. About 2,000,000 earn less than 65c an hour.

4 Miss Martin sings "You Can't Scare Me, I'm Sticking to the Union," along with insurance agents, social workers and office workers from 121 cities and 31 states. The Convention, which unanimously re-elected Pres. Lewis Merrill and other top officers, condemned President Truman's new wage-price policy as doing nothing to maintain purchasing power.

TE COLLAR
NG UNION

Selma Arnold • Photos by Victor Kayfetz

it is the same interests who direct the financial empires of General Motors, U. S. Steel and General Electric who also are saying "NO!" to the white collar workers' efforts to win security and decent pay.

• Inflation is threatening to place heavier and harsher burdens on the low-paid office and professional worker. The callousness with which the employers have dismissed the problems of full employment and peacetime purchasing power brings new uncertainties and growing fears for the future.

But the wite collar workers are adding up the score.

Today they are no longer so confused by the anti-labor propaganda in the newspapers they read. They are no longer so easily used against labor by their employers. Instead of crossing labor's picket lines, Miss and Mr. White Collar Worker are beginning to join them. Wherever they hear labor's message of hope for America, they are beginning to examine it with new interest as an answer to their own problems.

The CIO white collar workers who met at the UOPWA convention in Cleveland last week adopted a fighting program to raise salaries $10 a week and win minimums of $30 for clerical jobs and $50 for professionals. They have gone back to their desks and their typewriters determined to organize and fight for the program of the CIO, determined to carry to every white collar worker in their community the message of CIO Pres. Philip Murray:

"You deserve and must have substantial increases that will permit you to enjoy the decent, wholesome standard of living to which every American is entitled . . . I feel confident that the white collar workers of America will take up the fight in their own behalf and join with labor to win security and full employment for all. I want to assure them that they can rely upon the CIO to place all its resources behind them in their efforts to win adequate salaries, dignity and security and participate fully in the fruits of our democracy."

5 White collar workers meet the same resistance to wage demands as do industrial workers, frequently have to bargain with the same big bosses—insurance and banking firms that control General Motors, U. S. Steel, General Electric. They in turn are learning that solidarity pays off. (Below) Miss Martin takes a turn, between sessions, on UE picket line.

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

George Brown, Dir. of Organization, IWA-CIO, reports: T. R. Miller Mill Co., Brewton, Alabama, CIO 484; no union 77. Representative Lucien DeSheles and K. G. Ingle deserve the credit for this victory.

Irwin L. DeShetler, CIO Reg. Dir., Kansas City, Mo., reports: Patterson Manufacturing Co., Miami, Okla., Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO 94; no union 71. Election was under the supervision of Sam Kolkey.

G. George DeNucci, CIO Reg .Dir., Columbus, Ohio, reports: Habison Walker Co., Portsmouth, Ohio, United Stone and Allied Products Workers, CIO 89; against 56. General Refractories, Portsmouth, Ohio, US&APW 63; against 9. Int. Rep. Lewis R. Lowry was in charge of the two drives.

John C. Lawson, Secy-Treas. US&APWA, reports. Vermont Associated Lime Industries, Inc., Leicester Junction, Vermont plant, voted 11 to 5 for CIO. Rep. Ralph Broadwell was in charge of the organization of these men.

W. A. Copeland, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Memphis, Tenn., reports: Missouri Portland Co., Memphis, Tenn., CIO 54; no union 15.

C. H. Gillman, CIO Reg. Dir., Atlanta, Ga., reports; National Oil Products Co., CIO 64; no union 7. Metasap Chemical Co., CIO 24; no union 7. This work was under the direction of Rep. H. W. Denton. Scripto Manufacturing Co., CIO 139; against 124. This organizing work was conducted by USA Representatives Oscar Thomas and Charles Mathias.

Joe Dernoncourt, CIO Reg. Dir., Oklahoma City, Okla., reports: Vulcan Iron Works, Tulsa, USA-CIO 32; AFL 8, no union 1. Liberty Oil Co., Smackover, Ark., OWIU-CIO 25; no union 6. Little Rock distribution employes of Arkansas Fuel Oil Co. voted 6 to 1 for the OWIU.

Fullerton Fulton, CIO Reg. Dir., St. Paul, Minn., reports: Clawson-Bals Inc., Minneapolis, Minn., USA-CIO 28; no union 0.

G. George DeNucci, CIO Reg. Dir., Columbus, Ohio, reports: Columbus Coin Machine has agreed to recognize union as bargaining agent for its 100 employes. Contract negotiations are to begin next week. These workers will be asigned to the UERMWA. The contract will cover all employes of this company in Ohio.

This week the CIO Transport Workers Union in a fight for bargaining rights, succeeded through the efforts of President Murray in getting an agreement with New York City's Mayor O'Dwyer and in averting a strike. A committee has been set up to study hours, working conditions and collective bargaining procedures and to make recommendations.

Reports are coming in about the settlement of the Farm Equipment Workers strike at the Caterpillar plant in Peoria, Ill. A U. S. fact-finding panel has recommended an 18c hourly increase covering International Harvester plants. The union hopes to consummate an agreement on the basis of the panel's recommendation.

SORDID TRAIL OF POLITICS BEHIND NLRB CANNERY RULING

THE Natl. Labor Relations Board, on vote of Chairman Paul Herzog and member Gerard Reilly, with John Houston dissenting, this week denied certification to the CIO Food Tobacco Workers in the California cannery case.

The CIO union won an election in October of last year. The NLRB has now ruled that the CIO could not be certified, after the AFL Teamsters asked on alleged technical grounds that the vote of the workers involved be overruled.

The Board ordered the election won by the CIO set aside, at the same time directing the companies to deal with both unions and denying a Teamster petition for exclusive recognition. Following the order, the FTA-CIO announced that it would continue to seek a 25c raise for the workers and carry on production of food. The CIO union confidently expects to win a new election when it is ordered.

Behind this refusal of the NLRB to certify a CIO union, despite an election victory, lies a sordid story of political pressure on the Board and a sorry story of yielding by Chairman Herzog. It's a story that should be read especially by people who don't believe unions should mess with political action.

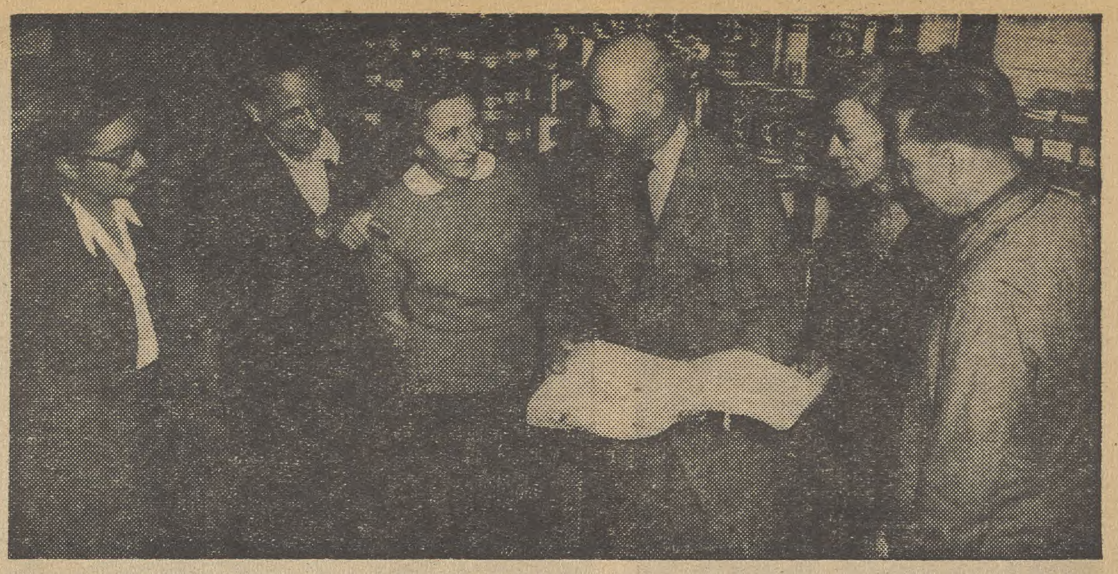
The FTA-CIO won a plurality of votes in a four-way election against the AFL Teamsters, winning 1,300 more votes than the AFL but falling 63 short of an absolute majority. An unusually large number (1,291) of votes were challenged out of a 12,000 total.

The AFL Teamsters protested the election, and the NLRB granted them an oral argument—thereby going over the head of its regional director in California who spent three months investigating the AFL's "charges" and found them all groundless. Nevertheless, the election was set aside and certification denied.

The oral argument was held Jan. 24 in Washington. NLRB Chairman Herzog was an hour late for the argument. That hour was spent up on Capitol Hill, listening to threats from Congressman Tarver (D., Ga.), chairman of the agricultural subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee.

The sordid trail of politics goes higher than that, however. Sept. 21 a high official of the Agriculture Department wrote the NLRB that an early election should be held to speed production of vitally needed food. In October, after a visit an AFL lobbyist to Washington, Agriculture Secretary Anderson "repudiated" his own letter.

FTA-CIO and the scores of thousands of west coast cannery workers have taken a raw deal from the majority of the NLRB. The raw deal happened because the Board listened to political pressure from the AFL.



Artist Rockwell Kent examines a piece of "fatback" on a visit to the commissary of the Erwin textile mill strikers in Durham, N. C. The Textile Workers Union finally won a smashing victory this week in the settlement which ended the 20-week strike.

LEAD STRIKERS CLOSE DOWN 18 PLANTS

A nation-wide strike called this week by the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers tied up 18 properties of the American Smelting & refining Co. employing 7,000 workers in a walkout that was 100% effective at all plants, Pres. Reid Robinson of the union announced at MMSW headquarters in Chicago.

"Every attempt was made by the union to reach a settlement and avoid tying up 60% of the nation's lead production as well as other metals which are still in critical supply," he said.

The union's main demands are for a 30% wage increase, elimination of geographic wage differentials, and collective bargaining on a national scale.

Last minute attempts by the Government to avert the strike proved futile as the company refused to go beyond the 12½c an hour previously offered.

The struck A S & R properties range from Perth Amboy, N. J., to Los Angeles, and from Elpaso, Tex., to Tacoma, Wash.

The union also announced that 5,000 iron miners in Alabama won an 18½c hourly increase along with the steel workers.

N. W. LUMBER BOSSES SMASH AGREEMENTS

Any work stoppages that may take place in the Northwest lumber industry in the near future can be laid at the door of the employers, Pres. J. E. Fadling of the CIO Intl. Woodworkers said this week, in announcing that a number of large lumber companies have cancelled their working agreements with the union. Companies involved include the Weyerhaeuser Timber Co. and the Long Bell Lumber Co.

Fadling stated that when the IWA locals sent notices to their employers informing them of their desire to revise the working agreement, the employers notified them that they wished to terminate all contract terms effective as of April 1.

"Any stoppage of production because of workers' reluctance to work without a working agreement," Fadling said, can therefore "be laid at the door of the employers."

ERWIN STRIKE ENDS WITH BIG VICTORY FOR UNION

SOUTHERN cotton mill workers are jubilant over the victory won by the CIO Textile Workers Union in the settlement this week of the Erwin cotton mills strike, said TWU officials in Washington. Five thousand workers in three mills return to work after a 20-week strike, the longest in the history of North Carolina.

Basic issue in dispute was the "stretch-out" or the arbitrary imposition of increased work loads. The company insisted that management had the exclusive right to say how much each worker was supposed to do. The settlement provides definitely that all work-loads are subject to negotiation and arbitration. TWU officials said this decision will be hailed throughout the South as history-making.

Also agreed to was a 65c minimum wage. The over-all wage increase is estimated to average 14c an hour, with an annual total that will amount to $1,200,000. A back pay award of $180,000, two weeks' paid vacation, improved seniority clauses, maintenance of membership and check-off of dues are also included in the new contract.

Negotiations for ending the strike were conducted in Washington and Durham, N. C., for almost two months. A settlement was finally reached after North Carolina Gov. G. Cherry, called TWU Pres. Emil Rieve and W. Rufin of the company to Raleigh after the employer had threatened to open the mills at the risk of violence.

A 19-weeks-old strike at the Entwistle Mill, Rockingham, N. C., has also been settled following sale of the concern to a Northern firm. The new contract calls for a 65c minimum and a 5c an hour across the board increase. Back pay will amount to $50,000.

Cotton mill strikes continue at Rock Hill and Gaffney, S. C., and at Athens, Ga. Negotiations have been resumed at Gaffney where the workers struck shortly after VJ Day.

From Textile Union officials in Georgia comes news of another victory in the settlement of a three-week strike at the Atlanta Woolen Mills, employing 600 workers. The workers won a 65c hourly minimum, a 10c increase for all hourly employes and 11c for incentive workers, one and two weeks' paid vacation, seniority rights in layoffs and promotions, union security and check-off of dues.

HARVESTER SEEKS PRICE RAISE

CONDITIONAL acceptance by the Intl. Harvester Co. of government fact-finding panel recommendation for an 18c hourly wage increase, provided a price increase was granted, was termed this week by the CIO Farm Equipment Workers to be in effect "a flat rejection". Some 30,000 Harvester workers in 10 plants have been on strike since Jan. 21.

The company took the position, the union said, that it would not grant wage increases until such time as a formula was worked out providing for price increases.

"The fact-finding panel had recommended no price increase whatsoever was required to meet union demands," the union stated at the close of brief negotiation held earlier this week in Chicago.

The panel's recommendations were accepted last week by the union as providing the basis for an acceptable contract, but union officials declared that the strike would not be called off until an agreement was reached.

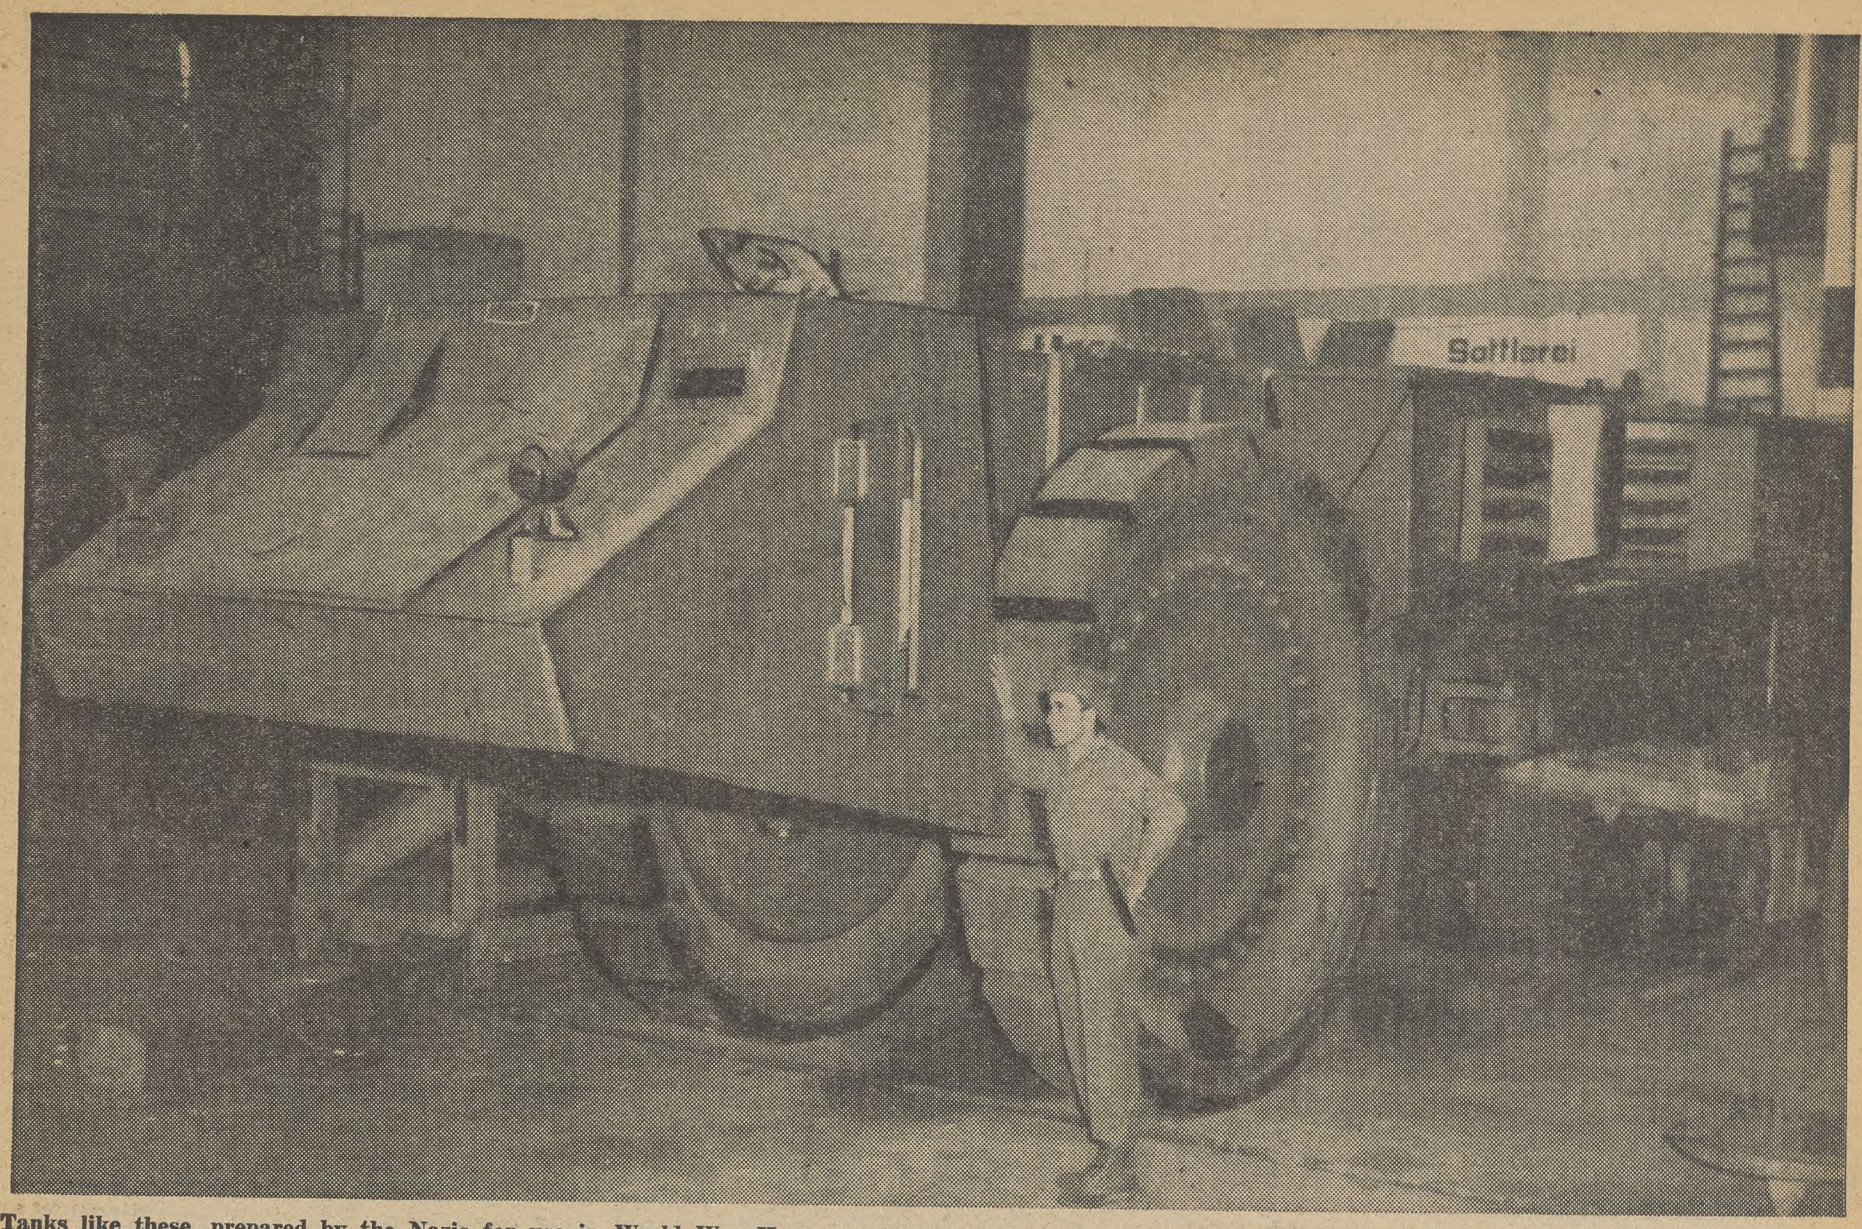
The company was also charged with rejection of other panel recommendation including union security and compensation for union stewards handling grievances in the shops.

CATERPILLAR STRIKE SETTLED

A union-company agreement settling the strike of 17,500 workers of the Caterpillar Tractor Co., Peoria, Ill., was ratified Feb. 24 by the CIO Farm Equipment Workers. The strike started Jan. 29.

Wage increases of 15c an hour for workers making under $1 an hour, and 15% for those making more than $1, are called for in the settlement.

The company said the increases would go into effect the Monday after its approval by the Wage Stabilization Board, retroactive to Feb. 24.



Tanks like these, prepared by the Nazis for use in World War II, may roll of production lines again if the de-Nazification program is not resolutely pushed.

CIO MAN TESTIFIES

NAZI PURGE BOGS DOWN

By C. W. FOWLER

(Last of a Series)

THE allied program of de-Nazification and disarmament of German industry, worked out at Yalta and clinched at Potsdam, has bogged down in the U. S. occupation zone, where some of the most important sectors of I. G. Farben and other war plants lie.

Not only that, but high Nazi industrialists, supposedly marked for arrest and removal from places of power, are still undetained and unpunished. Leaders of German war industry, who were also the real builders of Hitler's Third Reich, are living in relative comfort, eating their 3,000 calories a day, angling for a return to the power they once enjoyed.

Allied agreements on reparations, planned to take the form of transfer of industrial facilities to devastated countries, have been ignored. I. G. Farben, cornerstone of Germany's world conquest plans in the past and for the future, has been left largely intact and in many cases in operation.

The hunt for German assets—both cash and property—hidden in other countries as a reserve for World War III is being stalled while Nazi agents continue the process of concealment in "neutral" states like Spain, Switzerland, Sweden, Argentina, Portugal.

With it all, a deliberate attempt is being made to freeze the Soviet Union out of its agreed share and voice in the disposition of German reparations and war potential, both in Europe and in the secret caches abroad.

These charges, supported by detailed evidence, were made before the Senate Kilgore Committee this week by a man who knows from months of first-hand experience—Russ Nixon, presently Washington representative of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers and one-time acting director of the Division Investigation of Cartels and External Assets of Military Government in Germany.

Here is a sample of Nixon's charges—which, incidentally, have not been successfully contradicted by any government agency concerned:

"Our investigation disclosed that of a total of 55 I. G. Farben manufacturing plants in the U. S. zone, two were destroyed and three had been declared available for reparations and destruction.

"None of the I. G. Farben owned or affiliated plants had been eliminated—either by destruction or by making them available for reparations. All of the five plants eliminated were Montan, Reich owned plants. Fourteen of such plants were built by the Reich in the U. S. zone shortly before or during the war and were operated by Farben for military purposes.

"We discovered also that almost every one of the I. G. Farben plants in the U. S. zone was operating. Capacity added during the war exclusively for war production had been brought into operation for the production of so-called peacetime goods without any indication of the need for such production or proof that the particular goods could not be provided by other plants which normally produced those goods in the past."

In addition, Nixon said that despite the Potsdam agreement and numerous supporting decisions, nothing has been done to break up the German ends of the huge cartel system that played the chief role in laying the economic base for World War II.

In this connection, Nixon charged that the U. S. attitude on "de-cartelization" was "vacillating and unsympathetic to the basic objective of the law" and that our officials "encouraged the British disposition to resist, and discouraged the proffered Soviet support for a strong law."

The record of attempts to arrest leading German industrialists who were also Nazi big-shots shows an equal disregard of the stated allied plan to strip Germany not only of actual war plants but also to remove the war-makers themselves. Citing a long list of industrialists and Nazi officials who were either not arrested at all or merely held for a few days, Nixon said:

"Even those few who land in U. S. jails are well treated. They get up to 3,300 calories a day. New clothes are issued by U. S. authorities. Recreation is provided, and the barracks are heated—to 68 degrees.

"And these men are the high party officials, the SS men, the Gestapo agents, the thugs who ruled Germany for the industrialists who wanted war and made war on the world."

Turning to the problem of Nazi assets hidden abroad in preparation for World War III, Nixon showed that the four-power (U. S., USSR, Britain, France) agreement for united action had been ignored and the Soviet Union frozen out. Further, he charged, U. S. and British policy toward neutral "hosts" of Nazi assets was completely ineffective while "Nazi agents and their dummies in the neutral countries have been busily engaged in dissipating and recamouflaging German assets already hidden there."

In previous articles, The CIO NEWS has called attention to this problem, warning that a continued refusal to solve it can lead to a third world war. Commenting on Nixon's testimony, Sen. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), who has done more than any man in public life to expose the situation, declared:

"Our declared policy in Germany has not been implemented. Today the Nazis and their agents in effect have not even heard of our policy. This means that we are dividing the world into two camps—which in turn means a step in the direction of another world war."

CIO URGES ARMY, NAVY PAY HIKE

THE CIO Veterans Committee this week joined with the Army and Navy in asking more pay for service personnel, but requested a flat increase "for each man irrespective of rank" — not the 20% raise for all, which Sec. of War Patterson and Sec. of Navy Forrestal jointly requested of Congress.

Golden also called for giving enlisted men any increase in ration and living quarter allowances granted commissioned officers. In the interest of greater democracy in the armed forces, Golden in his letter to Patterson and Forrestal urged similar treatment of enlisted personnel and commissioned officers in respect to:

Terminal leave, retirement disability, subsistence allowances, travel pay and accommodations, recreation facilities, uniforms and food, rationing and post exchange privileges.

"I am sure that under such a program you would have no difficulty whatever in recruiting the full number of enlisted men necessary for the job our Army and Navy have to do in the years ahead," Golden wrote.

"The cost of living for the GI has increased every bit as much as it has increased for the officer," Golden's letter said. "If he lives off the post he has to pay just as much for his food, lodging, clothing for his family and other essentials as the officers.

"And he has been affected by price increases by exactly the same extent as the officer. It would be most undemocratic to give the officer an adjustment many times greater than that of the enlisted man."

Revision of the GI Bill to provide unemployment compensation for striking veterans was the principal aim of 50 veterans, members of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers from six eastern states, shown leaving Natl. CIO headquarters in Washington, to ask action from the Veterans Administration and Congress.

ASK PROBE OF GI TRANSFER

CLINTON S. Golden, chairman of the CIO Veterans Committee, this week announced that the committee has asked the War Dept. to investigate the transfer of Sgt. Emil Mazey from the Philippines to Okinawa.

Sgt. Mazey was chairman of the demobilization committee of Subbase R, Batangas, Luzon. At the request of the committee, the CIO Veterans Committee several weeks ago made arrangements for the publication of protests against the demobilization slowdown, in sixteen newspapers throughout the U. S. The ads were paid for with $5000 contributed by officers and enlisted men at the subbase. Golden said:

"The transfer of Sgt. Mazey to Okinawa, known by servicemen as the Army's Siberia, seems strange at this time in light of the fact that General Eisenhower publicly stated that no Army personnel would be disciplined for participating in demobilization demonstrations."

Simultaneously Golden released a wireless message which Mazey sent to Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D. Colo.), chairman of the demobilization subcommittee of the Senate Military Affairs Committee. The message said in part:

"Am I to be disciplined without trial because I dared to appear before the Mead subcommittee and present evidence of destruction of good and usable government property? We feel that the Army is carrying on a campaign of intimidation and coercion against military personnel so that they will be afraid to voice just complaints and grievances."

GI Bill Pamphlet

Unions seeking to tell veterans of their benefits under the law would act wisely if they ordered "The Amended GI Bill of Rights" issued in pamphlet form by the Army Times, 1419 Irving St., N. W., Washington (10), D. C. The pamphlet contains explanations of the educational, loan, unemployment allowance and job finding features of the amended measure, as well as likely questions and answers.

The full text of the law as it now stands is contained in the publication which may be obtained from the Army Times for 10c a copy, $2 per hundred.

VETS ASK JOBLESS GI PAY

CHARLES Severino, who came to Washington this week with 50 veterans, all striking members of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, is a flesh-and-blood argument for revising the GI Bill to pay unemployment compensation to striking veterans.

"My hands are still tender and sometimes break open," said Severino, on whose shrapnel-scarred hands Army surgeons had grafted skin. He was wounded with Patton's Third Army while chasing the Germans and spent 11 months in hospitals.

It was not his wounds Severino was eager to talk about but about his family .

The 25-year-old veteran told how he set up housekeeping in Elizabeth, N. J., for his wife and their two children, Thomas, seven months old, and Charles, Jr., three, using his mustering-out pay of $300 for a down payment on furniture.

Going to work for the Phelps Dodge plant, Severino soon found that the stories about high wages he had been reading about in the papers were not true, and that he needed more money to keep his family decently. So he went on strike a month ago wth his fellow UE members for a $2 a day increase.

"I sold my car to keep my furniture, and I took back a suit, and got a refund to pay other bills.

"It's the children that concerns us most," Severino said. "We get some food from the union, but we don't always have money for milk. Sometimes I buy some at the corner store and sometimes I convince the milkman to leave some. When we don't have milk, we give the baby hot tea in a battle."

HIT BALLOT BARS IN SOUTH

CIO Political Action Committee officials, inaugurating registration and get-out-the vote campaigns, received a sharp reminder this week that some state legislators and political bosses were working overtime to cut down the national vote.

As an example of this trend PAC spokesman pointed to Alabama where lawmakers, discontented with the existing restrictions which are already the most numerous and most rigid in the nation, have passed the discriminatory Boswell amendment to the state constitution. All efforts are being made to crystallize opinion against the amendment to insure its defeat in a referendum in November.

Described by Alabama CIO-PAC head, Carey Haigler, as a "subterfuge to keep political power in the hands of a few", the amendment would grant to the Board of Registrars unlimited power to determine who shall and who shall not vote.

It permits the defranchisement of the "undesirable elements" not already screened out by the existing property-owning and cumulative polltax requirements by making registrants interpret any part of the U. S. Constitution.

Voters, according to the amendment, must have been gainfully employed "the greater part of the twelve months preceeding the time they offer to register" and must be persons of "good character" who understand the duties and obligations of good citizenship."

Similar regulations requiring interpretation of the Constitution are in effect in North Carolina and Mississippi.

WORLD LABOR SAYS:

UNO REBUFF BLOW TO UNITY

THE executive bureau of the World Federation of Trade Unions announced this week in Paris that it is "disappointed and perturbed" that the United Nations Organization failed to accept world labor's offer of close cooperation. The bureau called upon all WFTU affiliates to press their governments "to remedy this unsatisfactory state of affairs."

At the same time, the bureau disclosed that WFTU president Sir Walter Citrine and general secretary Louis Saillant are going to Berlin to present to the Inter-Allied Control Commission the findings of the WFTU delegation which just returned from three weeks in Germany.

The WFTU offered the UNO the close cooperation of over 60,000,000 workers, an executive bureau resolution said. "Instead of cordially welcoming such cooperation, the UNO, owing to the action of certain governments, relegated the WFTU to a subordinate position as regards consultation.

"The UNO has suggested no practical manner by which the WFTU could participate in Social and Economic Council deliberations. It has placed the WFTU, despite its unique character as the representative of almost all of organized world labor, in the same position as national bodies.

"By this action, the UNO has encouraged disunion in the world labor movement. The WFTU will take advantage of the representation thus granted, while it will insist on its right to submit to the UNO its own proposals which it may consider its duty to make the interest of all workers.

"The WFTU draws the attention of every affiliated union to this question, and asks them to take appropriate action in their respective countries, pressing their own governments to remedy this unsatisfactory state of affairs."

An "indignant protest" was registered by the WFTU leaders over "the execution of 10 Spanish Republicans in Madrid, among them the valiant French Forces of the Interior fighter under the Nazi occupation, Major Cristino Garcia. This last inhuman outrage by the Madrid dictator strengthens our determination to mobilize the world labor movement in the struggle against Spanish fascism."

CIO BACKS BRITISH LOAN

SUPPORT for the proposed $4 billion loan to Britain was expressed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in a statement issued this week, which said:

"The CIO recognizes the present plight of Great Britain as essentially the result of war-time expenditure of her resources in common battle and therefore a situation in which the U. S. has clear-cut obligations as the only Allied nation capable of giving her effective economic assistance.

"The loan amounts to economic first-aid for Britain; but it is also an essential first step to an expanding world trade in which American labor has a vital stake.

"The loan expresses in practical terms the interdependence of labor in closely-allied countries and provides a mutually profitable solution of present world trade difficulties for both American and British industry.

"The basic purpose of the loan is to help Britain over the rough spots of the next three or four years. As our partner she suffered war damage to her industry, used up her credits in other countries, sacrificed her foreign markets and ended up with an adverse trade balance which translated into terms of our currency amounts to fourteen billion dollars.

"A loan at 2% of dollars that will be spent buying the products of American labor, is certainly not my definition of charity.

"What is more, her purchases woud not even cut into our assured home market for consumer goods. The raw materials and capital goods Britain needs most would actually create new jobs and new profits.

"Add up this increased trade, total the heavy machinery and tool steel Britain will purchase here with the new credits, and American labor has good reasons in added jobs and continued employment for supporting the loan."

SENATE VOTES FOR HIGHER PRICES

HERE is the rollcall vote on Round One of the fight for renewal of the price control act in the Senate. We lost.

The vote was taken on a Republican-polltax Democrat motion to cut a deficiency appropriation for OPA in half.

Previously, a GOP move to kill the whole appropriation had been defeated in the House.

The vote means that the Republicans and the southern Democrats will work together in an attempt to wreck price control through amendments to the act and OPA through reductions in its funds.

Unless organized workers and consumers come to life on this issue, they will succeed.

"R" by a Senator's name indicates a vote against the motion to cut the appropriation, and thus a correct vote. "W" indicates that the Senator voted for the motion to cripple enforcement of price control between now and June 30, and is an incorrect vote. "NV" indicates that the Senator did not vote.

ALABAMA
Bankhead, John H., 2d (D).....R
Hill, Lister .....R

ARIZONA
Hayden, Carl (D) .....R
McFarland, Ernest W. (D).....R

ARKANSAS
McClellan, John L. (D).....W
Fulbright, J. William (D).....R

CALIFORNIA
Downey, Sheridan (D) .....R
Knowland, Thomas J. (R) .....R

COLORADO
Johnson, Edwin C. (D) .....R
Milliken, Eugene D. (R) .....W

CONNECTICUT
Hart, Thomas C. (R) .....W
McMahon, Brian (D) .....W

DELAWARE
Tunnell, James M. (D) .....R
Buck, C. Douglass (R) .....W

FLORIDA
Andrews, Charles D. (D) .....NV
Pepper, Claude (D) .....R

GEORGIA
George, Walter F. (D) .....W
Russell, Richard B. (D) .....NV

IDAHO
Gossett, Charles C. (D) .....R
Taylor, Glenn H. (D) .....NV

ILLINOIS
Brooks, C. Wayland (R) .....NV
Lucas, Scott W. (D) .....NV

INDIANA
Willis, Raymond E. (R) .....W
Capehart, Homer E. (R) .....NV

IOWA
Hickenlooper, Bourke M. (R) ..W
Wilson, George A. (R) .....W

KANSAS
Capper, Arthur (R) .....W
Reed, Clyde M. (R) .....NV

KENTUCKY
Barkley, Alben W. (D) .....R
Stanfill, William A. (R) .....W

LOUISIANA
Ellender, Allen J. (D) .....NV
Overton, John H. (D) .....W

MAINE
Brewster, Owen (R) .....NV
White, Wallace H., Jr. (R) .....W

MARYLAND
Radcliffe, George L. (D) .....W
Tydings, Millard E. (D) .....NV

MASSACHUSETTS
Saltonstall, Leverett (R) .....NV
Walsh, David I. (D) .....NV

MICHIGAN
Ferguson, Homer (R) .....W
Vandenberg, Arthur H. (R) ....W

MINNESOTA
Ball, Joseph H. (R) .....W
Shipstead, Henrik (R) .....W

MISSISSIPPI
Bilbo, Theodore G. (D) .....W
Eastland, James O. (D) .....NV

MISSOURI
Briggs, Frank P. (D) .....W
Donnell, Forrest (R) .....W

MONTANA
Murray, James E. (D) .....NV
Wheeler, Burton K. (D) .....NV

NEBRASKA
Butler, Hugh (R) .....W
Wherry, Kenneth S. (R) .....W

NEVADA
McCarran, Pat (D) .....NV
Carville, Edward P. (D) .....W

NEW HAMPSHIRE
Bridges, Styles (R) .....NV
Tobey, Charles W. (R) .....NV

NEW JERSEY
Hawkes, Albert W. (R) .....W
Smith, H. Alexander (R) .....W

NEW MEXICO
Chavez, Dennis (D) .....R
Hatch, Carl A. (D) .....R

NEW YORK
Mead, James M. (D) .....R
Wagner, Robert F. (D) .....NV

NORTH CAROLINA
Bailey, Josiah W. (D) .....W
Hoey, Clyde R. (D) .....W

NORTH DAKOTA
Langer, William (R) .....W
Young, Milton R. (R) .....W

OHIO
Huffman, James (D) .....R
Taft, Robert A. (R) .....W

OKLAHOMA
Moore, E. H. (R) .....W
Thomas, Elmer (D) .....W

OREGON
Cordon, Guy (R) .....W
Morse, Wayne (R) .....R

PENNSYLVANIA
Guffey, Joseph F. (D).....NV
Myers, Francis J. (D) .....R

RHODE ISLAND
Gerry, Peter G. (D).....W
Green, Theodore Francis (D) ....R

SOUTH CAROLINA
Johnston, Olin D. (D) .....W
Maybank, Burnet (D) .....W

SOUTH DAKOTA
Bushfield, Harlan J. (R) .....W
Gurney, Chan (R) .....W

TENNESSEE
McKellar, Kenneth (D) .....W
Stewart, Tom (D) .....W

TEXAS
Connally, Tom (D) .....NV
O'Daniel, W. Lee (D) .....NV

UTAH
Murdock, Abe (D) .....R
Thomas, Elbert B. (D) .....NV

VERMONT
Aiken, George D. (R) .....R
Austin, Warren (R) .....W

VIRGINIA
Byrd, Harry Flood (D) .....W
Glass, Carter (D) .....NV

WASHINGTON
Magnuson, Warren G. (D) .....R
Mitchell. Hugh B. (D) .....R

WEST VIRGINIA
Kilgore, Harley M. (D) .....R
Revercomb, Chapman (R) .....W

WISCONSIN
La Follette, Rob. M. (Prog) .....R
Wiley, Alexander (R) .....NV

WYOMING
O'Mahoney, Joseph C. (D) .....NV
Robertson, Edward V. (R).....W

Leo Krzycki talking to a group of workers in a big cotton textile mill in Lodz, the Polish Manchester.

EDUCATION NOTES

New Committee

Five CIO representatives were appointed this week to a 10-member CIO-AFL Labor Education Advisory Committee set up by the U. S. Dept. of Labor to help formulate a long-range workers education program directed toward training capable union leaders and members and promoting better labor-management relations.

Named by Sec. of Labor Schwellenbach as CIO representatives were: John Brophy, director of Industrial Union Councils; Kermit Eby, research and education director; Vincent Sweeney, publicity director, United Steelworkers; Lawrence Rogin, Textile Workers education director, and John Kowalski, Michigan CIO Council education director.

AFL representatives are Florence Thorne, Frank Fenton, Nelson Cruikshank, Marion Hedges and James Brownlow.

"An intelligent program of labor education," Schwellenbach said, "directed both toward the training of capable union leadership and a membership well informed in the rights and responsibilities of unionism, can do a great deal to forestall labor disputes and promote better labor-management relations."

People's Songs

People's Songs, Inc., a new organization with a program aimed to create, promote and distribute songs of labor and the American people, was formed in N. Y. City last December at a meeting of songwriters, singers, union representatives and workers in cultural fields.

The group issues a monthly bulletin for members only, containing a song supplement which gives both words and music. Membership is $5 a year. Further information may be obtained from P. S. Offices, 130 W. 42d St., N. Y. City.

KRZYCKI SAYS:

POLISH LABOR IS REBUILDING STRONG MOVEMENT ON RUINS

THE POLISH labor movement, gathering up the remnants of the unions smashed to pieces during the terrible years of the German occupation, has built up a strong organization and has hammered out a program for the working men and women of the new democratic Poland in an incredibly short time and under great difficulties, Leo Krzycki told a CIO audience this week in Washington, D. C.

Krzycki who is vice-president of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers and president of the American Slav Congress, recently returned from a five-month tour of Europe which began when he attended the World Trade Union conference in Paris last September as adviser and interpreter for the Polish delegates.

Later he visited ten countries in war-torn Europe, spending six weeks in Poland where he was a fraternal delegate to the first national trade union conference in liberated Poland, held in Warsaw in November. It was attended by 800 delegates representing more than a million workers.

Recalling his visit to Poland in 1930 on a goodwill lecture tour for Polish-American labor organizations, Krzycki said he had then found "top labor and political leaders languishing in prison camps and unions fighting for their very existence" under the reign of terror instigated by the Pilsudski dictatorship. One of the meetings at which he spoke was broken up by a gang of terrorists.

This time, instead of secret meetings and terrorism, Krzycki said he found "labor building its organization out in the open, unfettered by government restrictions and persecutions" and with the right of free speech and assembly fully recognized.

Describing the tremendous difficulties with which the new Polish government has had to contend, Krzycki said it is "working under handicaps greater than those any other nation has ever been faced with." Subjected to vicous attacks at home and abroad, and forced to build upon ruins, it has "performed miracles", he declared.

Krzycki blamed distortions and lies, which he said Americans are being told about Poland, on the influence of the aristocrats and wealthy landowners who fled from the country and are now trying to recover their power and position. "Nearly 50% of the land in Poland before the war was owned by one-sixth of 1% of the people," he stated.

Asserting that the land reform and nationalization of industry introduced by the new Polish government is practically the same as the programs now in effect in Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia, Krzycki attributed the fierce attacks leveled against Poland in particular to the propaganda of these former wealthy landowners.

(A written report by Krzycki to CIO members will be published in next week's CIO NEWS.)

CHURCH-LABOR COOPERATION

Hundreds of representatives of church and union groups attended the two-day conference of the Natl. Religion Labor Foundation held this week in Detroit. Conference chairmen were the Rev. Kirk B. O'Ferrall, dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit; Pres. R. J. Thomas of the Auto Workers, and Pres. Frank X. Martel of the Detroit Federation of Labor.

Keynote of the conference was sounded by the Rev. Charles C. Weber, Amalgamated Clothing Workers representative, who urged labor and religious groups to unite their efforts toward bringing industrial as well as international peace to the world.

Tomorrow's Citizens By Rose H. Alschuler

DEPENDENCE OR INDEPENDENCE?

Why do parents enjoy having their children dependent on them—ego satisfaction, maybe? Actually, there's much more satisfaction to be found in helping them to be independent. Certainly it takes time to teach children to feed, wash and dress themselves, to use scissors and matches, and to cross streets safely—but before long their independence is a great time saver and joy. It's important to remember that independence is like various parts of the body—it can grow only if given sufficient exercise. It's never too soon to start.

Lib. of Congress—Parks for OWI. Copyright 1946, CIO News.

CHILD CARE CENTERS NEEDED

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

TESTIMONY of mothers and fathers before the House District of Columbia Committee on the need for child care centers left no doubt of the urgency of continuing the wartime centers for children of working mothers.

One mother was left a widow when her son was less than a year old. She had not been able to earn enough at first to make a home for him, so he had been in an orphanage for three years. Then her pay increased enough so that with the child care center to take the boy while she worked, she was able to have a home again.

She had the boy with her for a year and she told the Congressmen very simply how much better it was, both for her and her son, to be together. The closing of the centers meant that she would have to break up her home and send the child back to the orphanage, since she could not afford any sort of private care.

A Negro taxi-driver testified that his wife had been in the hospital for six months and would have to stay for some time to come. At first he drove their three children, aged 2, 3 and 4, with him in the cab. Then a fare told him about the child care centers. That made it possible for him to keep his home together, as he wanted so much to do, until his wife was well.

These stories could be duplicated in most American cities. They point up the fact that centers for the care of children of working mothers are an urgent peace time need. The war forced communities to face that need. Now it is up to us to see that we don't lose the child care gains made during the war.

There is very encouraging public support for continuing a public nursery school program. A recent Washington Post survey of opinion in the District of Columbia showed 76% of all those interviewed and 83% of the women in favor of including nursery schools in the regular public school curriculum.

Most working mothers hold down jobs because they have to in order to have a decent home for their children. The choice these mothers have is: "Shall I stay home and starve with baby or work so both of us can eat?"

ARMY CHOW + FLAVOR = HAPPY MAN

Prepared by Nutrition Service, D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross

"HOW'RE you gonna feed him right in his home, after he's been in the Army?" may be a paraphrase of a pretty old song, but the problem is a new one.

The Army fed your serviceman in American training camps well — gripes notwithstanding—and he learned what it means to "feel fit." He still goes for his mother's good home-cooked food but he got accustomed to a lot of foods he never tasted before and learned to like them.

Servicemen and women had a well-rounded diet — milk; fruits and vegetables; meat, poultry, fish; eggs, cheese; cereals and bread; fats; sugars and beverages. Thousands of men learned to like milk, to include eggs and cheese daily, to expect a variety of meats and vegetables and to choose salads.

It took them a little time to learn, but they began to grow bigger shoulders, flatter stomachs, to get a spring in their walks, and to complain about the chow!

Now, at home they want the quality of Army food with the flavor of your delicious home cooking.

It is easy to slip back into old habits and maybe your man is already slipping back without a ripple. If so, you will probably hear these complaints after a few months—he doesn't feel any spring in his step; he is getting a little "paunchy"; he doesn't feel as fit! It's up to you to know the answers for combatting sloppy eating habits.

A man doesn't stay at physical peak with a hurried breakfast, mostly poured down, because he has no time to chew. He won't be alert and efficient with a "quicky" lunch of coffee, sandwich and pie—and that isn't the kind of energy food he got in the Army. He may eat a pretty well-balanced dinner, but it would have to be super-special to make up for some of the things he didn't get all day.

Stick with the gains the services have given—copy their system to keep him in the pink and help the whole family improve. Junior won't complain about milk being "sissy" if Daddy always drinks it. Cereal for breakfast suits a GI—especially ready-to-serve ones.

Lots of different fruits, vegetables and meats keep the appetite ticking along, and it should keep Mother from getting bored with the cooking. If he-man looking salads are on the table, he will enjoy one every day. Tomato or lettuce with dressing, raw carrot with raisins, cabbage as a slaw or with pineapple, milk to drink, fruit, juice, ice cream, a variety of meats and cheese, were tops on the Army's lists.

CHILD CARE CONTINUANCE ADVOCATED

CONTINUATION of child care services for the children of working mothers, education and employment opportunities for youth, and a broad health program were asked by the advisory committee of trade union women to the U. S. Children's Bureau at a meeting in Washington this week.

CIO members include Faye Stephenson, president, CIO Auxiliaries; Katherine Pollak Ellickson, CIO Asst. Director of Research; Mildred Jeffery, Auto Workers, and Wanda Pilot, Textile Workers.

The Lanham Act grant for child care expires March 1. The committee asked the Children's Bureau to aid the CIO Community Services Committee and the AFL Labor's League for Human Rights in stimulating State and community action for the grant.

The committee called on the Children's Bureau in consulation with other agencies to prepare a program assuring education and employment opportunities for youth, both veterans and non-veterans.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges · Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS
UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES · MEMBERSHIP · EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS · ADVERTISING · LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1639-49 W. Evergreen Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

SOLD EVERYWHERE

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP
PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and scenes mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

FINDING THE ANTI-UNION GROUP LED BY HIS BROTHER DISTRIBUTING LEAFLETS IN FRONT OF THE ROTOR PLANT, JIM ACCUSES THEM OF BEING IN THE PAY OF THE COMPANY... WHEN---

NOBODY IS GOING TO CALL ME A RAT-- NOT EVEN MY OWN BROTHER!

WHA--!

A WISE GUY, HUH? TRYING TO FRAME ME PAL...

LOOK OUT, JIM!

THIS'LL TEACH YOU TO MIND YOUR OWN-- OOP!

TIME FOR YOU TO LEARN A LESSON TOO!

SIT DOWN, RAT! I'VE STILL GOT A COUPLE OF THINGS TO TELL THE BOYS!

WHAT'S THIS ALL ABOUT? WHAT MAKES YOU CALL YOUR OWN BROTHER A RAT, JIM? HE MAY BE A DOPE FOR PASSING OUT LEAFLETS LIKE THESE, BUT---

IT'S A TOUGH DEAL TO FIND YOUR OWN KID BROTHER WORKING AS A PAID AGENT FOR THE COMPANY IN BREAKING UP THE UNION BUT---

"I TRAILED HIM TO DANDY'S BAR LAST NIGHT AND OVERHEARD..."

DAT UNION'S ON IT'S LAST LEGS RIGHT NOW! SO DA GUY FROM ROTOR WHO PAYS US OFF WANTS TO SEE YOU TONIGHT...

I'M ANXIOUS TO MEET HIM...

PRICES
RYE
SCOTCH GIN

THEY THINK THEY CAN PUT IT OVER USING A VET. BUT NO ONE'S BUSTING THIS UNION-- MY BROTHER OR ANY-ONE ELSE...

HE'S A LIAR!

GIVE IT TO HIM, MICKEY!

YEH, HE'S BLABBED TOO MUCH ALREADY.

DIS IS DA BEST ARGUMENT.

BREAK IT UP.

THE POLICE...

GET THAT GUY!

62

Produced by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

Copyright 1946 by the CIO NEWS

WASHINGTON GUIDE

It's All One Front

CIO has won on one of its most important fronts, with the victories in steel, auto, RCA, GM electrical, and others. Big strikes still remain, as in GM auto, GE and Westinghouse, but they will be won.

The enemies of labor have been set back with the strike victories. They haven't been set back all the way—and they won't be until the CIO has won on all the other sections of the fight for progress and decent living.

These fronts are actually one front. Thus, a victory in a strike can be lost in a defeat on price control — as President Philip Murray points out in his message on page one of this week's CIO NEWS.

A union victory won in a contract giving us union security can be lost in passage of a Case bill, a Ball-Hatch bill, a Lea bill, an Ellender bill.

Similarly, a victory won by maintaining strong and determined picketlines in a strike can be lost with passage of bills, such as these, restricting the right to picket, freezing the right to strike, imposing compulsory arbitration, setting up permanent blacklists, and a host of other anti-union evils.

In fact, we can lose more than the gains won from current strikes if we let Congress turn the clock back to the pre-1932 days of anti-union injunctions, as it would do if it passes the Case bill or the Ball-Hatch bill.

There are still millions of unorganized workers. Despite the great growth in the labor movement, led by the CIO with the AFL tagging along behind, not more than 15 out of 50 million gainfully employed workers are union members.

The victories in the strikes set the stage for new organizing drives, such as the CIO is now undertaking in the South and in other relatively unorganized areas and industries.

But if we lose our right to organize and bargain collectively, as we can if anti-labor bills pass . . .

And if we lose our hard-won wage gains, as we can if price control is crippled in Congress . . .

And if we return to a period of Hooverism, of economic crisis, of new preparation for aggression and war . . .

What happens to the victories won on the picketlines and around the bargaining tables?

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman — Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler, Editor — Irving Richter

Round One

(See Record—Page 13)

Round one in the fight for price control has been lost.

It was lost when organized labor and consumers failed to stop the Senate from cutting the OPA deficiency appropriation in half this week.

The vote shows the usual lineup of Republicans and their fellow reactionaries among the Democrats.

Curiously enough, an even more drastic move in the House was defeated on a strictly party vote of 185-108, with 137 not voting.

This indicates that the Senate fight will be tougher and tougher from now on out, with the polltax Democrats like Ellender and Overton (La.) ganging up with extreme tories like Wherry (R. Neb.) and Taft (R. O.) to do a wrecking job on price control.

If they succeed, wage increases won in strikes won't be worth a damn. Neither will the rest of your wages.

Wrecking price control, either by amendment or by denying funds to OPA, means inflation.

Inflation means depression.

The next depression will make Hoover's days look comfortable in comparison.

Depression breeds wars.

If we have another war, it will make this one look safe in comparison.

Have you started doing anything about price control yet?

Rankin's Line

One of the two smartest men in Congress is Rep. John E. Rankin, the real head of the un-American committee and the seldom disputed master of the lower House.

This week's fracas on the House floor, which made headlines in the daily papers and brought Rankin publicity, is an example of his technique.

It came when Rep. Helen Douglas (D. Calif.), one of the supporters of the resolution to abolish the un-American committee, attacked it on the floor.

Before a very few minutes were over, Rankin had almost started a fist fight, had provoked Rep. Sabath, 80-year-old chairman of the House Rules Committee, almost to tears, and had started a series of rollcall votes on points of personal privilege.

Rankin's purpose behind the fracas was simple—to divert the House from the real business of attacking the un-American activities of fuehrer Rankin's committee. He succeeded.

He also succeeded in adding to the general panic that most Congressmen feel when someone yells "communist."

Dies knew how to work this technique, first perfected by Adolf Hitler, to a fare-you-well, particularly on government employes.

Rankin is even better at it than Dies was.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price control HR 5270	Renews price control act and OPA for one year.	House Banking and Currency Committee	Tell Representative and Senators to support for one year; no amendments.
"Anti-Petrillo" HR 5117	Under guise of curbing AFL Musicians would forbid strikes, strike support, etc. by all unions.	Passed House by 222-43. Now to Senate Labor Committee.	Tell Senators to oppose as part of general anti-union drive
Case HR 5262	Imposes cooling-off, forced arbitration, criminal punishment for strikes, blacklists, anti-union injunction, etc.	In Senate Labor Committee, with Ball-Hatch (S 1178), Ellender (S 1661) aimed at destroying unions also under consideration.	Wire Senators to oppose as aimed at smashing unions, introducing fascist corporate state.
65c wage S 1349	Raises 40c wage floor to 65c, extends coverage to food, maritime, telegraph and retail workers.	To be reported out of Senate Labor Committee this week; debate starts possibly Mar. 4.	Wire Senators to support as reported, at full 65c and full coverage levels.
USES S 1848 S 1510 HR 4437	S 1848 keeps USES on Federal standards; blocks wage cut plans of state officials. S 1510 delays reutrn of USES to states. HR 4437 returns USES immediately.	HR 4437 has passed House. S 1848 and 1510 in Senate Labor Committee.	Wire Senators to support S 1848; reject HR 4437.
School lunch HR 3370 S 962	Sets up permanent hot lunch program for school kids.	HR 3370 passed House with $50,000,000 fund, no funds for administration. S 962 has $100,000,000 plus fund for administration.	Urge Senators to vote for S 962 as reported.

NO VOTE, NO VICTORY IN '46. REGISTER TO VOTE!
(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

GROVES' PRAYER: Gen. Groves, the brasshat who has such fun hounding the scientists who did the work on the atomic bomb, likes to worry publicly about leakage of "secrets" to the Soviet Union.

Of course, as every scientist knows, there are no "secrets" to leak, and the current spy scare is simply a cover-up for the May-Johnson bill that gives the brass hats and the corporations control of atomic energy.

This bedtime prayer has been suggested for Groves:

"Now I lay me down to sleep.
"I pray the Lord my secrets keep.
"If we all die before we wake,
"Who will know of my mistake?"

"ANTI-PETRILLO": The House-passed "anti-Petrillo" bill, aimed allegedly at trimming down the AFL Musicians, has been sent back to conference by the Senate, which passed a version of its own some time ago.

The fact that only 43 members of the lower House voted against this bill should seriously alarm all people concerned with labor legislation.

The so-called "anti-Petrillo' bill (HR 5117) is aimed at more than one union. For that matter, it would be bad enough if it were aimed, as its sponsors say, only at the AFL Musicians.

Actually, the bill is designed to rob all unions of the rights to strike, to support strikes, to carry on publicity favoring strikes, and more.

Yet only 43 Congressmen can be found to vote against it. Significantly, the House refused to take a record vote, so the names of those who voted for or against are not known.

This proves that the majority of the House knew what it was doing, because it was afraid to face the voters on the record.

It proves something more, too—that we in the CIO have a lot of work to do to educate our Congressmen to the point where they know an anti-union bill by smell, if by nothing else.

CHILD CARE: Acting against the welfare of working class children, the House District of Columbia Committee this week denied any funds for child care centers in Washington.

Hundreds of Washington mothers who have to work to support themselves and their children—many of them with disabled veteran fathers—crowded the Committee room to tell a moving story of need.

The same week, the House voted to eliminate $15,000,000 from a $50,000,000 program to furnish hot lunches to school children.

For the past year or more, Congress (both House and Senate) has refused to move on bills to increase aid to children under social security, to set up a child health plan, to create Federal aid to education.

These Congressmen, no doubt, are fond of making speeches about the future of the nation being in the hands of its children.

But try to find them taking some of these simple, inexpensive steps to ensure that future.

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 11

Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS
$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY — $1.50 IN CANADA

March 11, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

OLD CLUB OVER LABOR

First big wave of court injunctions against picketing caused loss of Pullman strike in 1892. Some judges today are following same pattern. Philadelphia cop (above) was one of hundreds attacking UE-CIO parade last week after court limited picketing. (See stories on Pages 4, 8, 9.)

LET FREEDOM RING: These veterans, members of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, on strike against General Electric in Philadelphia, ask a new Declaration of Independence as they prepare at Independence Hall to lead a parade to demand that Republican Mayor Bernard Samuels end police violence and guarantee right of free assembly. More than a score of citizens were injured earlier when approximately 1,000 police smashed a UE parade.

APPELLATE COURT TO GEN. HERSHEY

'SUPER-SENIORITY' AIN'T WHAT SHE USED TO BE

By FRED ROSS

THIS is the story of the retreat of Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey.

It all started because the general persisted in riding a hobby horse called "super-seniority," meaning that a veteran should be returned to his old job though in doing so he would displace a worker with greater seniority.

Last April at the first conference of the American Legion's Employment Committee, he thought he was ensconsed on his hobby horse, which he tried to pass off as part of the Selective Service Act until CIO representatives forced him to admit that the horse was only the creature of his agency's imagination.

The dauntless general continued to ride the horse quite proudly on every occasion, encouraging some employers to think that they could hire veterans exclusively, fire their other employes and thus get rid of unions.

At first, things looked pretty good for a long life for the quadruped. Federal Judge Abruzzo of Brooklyn, found that Abraham Fishgold, a welder, should not have been laid off at the Sullivan Drydock and Repair Co. even though his seniority was not sufficient to keep him on the job during a few days of slack operations.

Then the horse's bright coat lost some of its luster when Federal Judge Briggle of the Southern District of Illinois, said of two court decisions and General Hershey's ruling on super-seniority: "These expressions are all entitled to great respect, but I am unable to accept the reasoning of any of them."

Within a week much of the spring went out of Hobby's legs when another court presided over by Federal Judge Lederle of Detroit, ruled that even during the year following his discharge when a veteran is guaranteed employment under the Selective Service Act, he could not call on the "super-seniroity" theory to prevent his lay-off under the seniority clauses of a union contract.

Realizing the frailty of his mount, General Hershey continued to ride him last month at the second conference of the Legion's Employment Committee, but retreated to the position that he would let the courts decide the fate of Hobby.

He expressed confidence that the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in N. Y. City to which the Fishgold case had been appealed by Local 13 of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers, would listen to the Dept. of Justice's arguments in the welder's behalf and uphold Judge Abruzzo's decision.

But, instead, the appellate court this week reversed the decision of the Brooklyn jurist, finding that it was "beyond debate that it was not intended that the veterans should gain in seniority . . .

The latest bulletin from General Hershey's stables said that Hobby had collapsed and that his owner was not quite sure where he would retreat.

RIP 'HEART' FROM VETS' HOUSING

ORGANIZED real estate interests this week used the Southern Democrats and Republicans to scuttle the Patman Housing Bill—against the best interests of the veterans and the rest of the people of the U. S.

The CIO and progressive veterans strove valiantly to win Congress away from the reactionary coalition. The author of the bill, Rep. Patman, charged that the Natl. Assn. of Real Estate Boards and the Producers' Council, organized producers of building materials, were conducting a campaign to kill his bill, and another member of Congress said that the Post Office Dept. was unable to locate the senders of nine out of a dozen opposition telegrams he had received.

The Patman Bill, whose objective was 2,700,000 homes for veterans in the next two years, was passed. But it was stripped of its most important features including a $600 million subsidy fund to guarantee a supply of scarce building materials at reasonable prices—which President Truman called "the heart" of the Veterans' Housing Program—and price controls on existing homes.

Approximately 200 veterans, probably a majority of them members of the Washington Chapter of the AVC, came to the House corridors March 4 to line up Congressmen for the bill and hear debate.

Clinton S. Golden, chairman of the CIO Veterans Committee, declared in a letter sent to members of the House:

"No personal condition was allowed to interfere with our country's demand for military manpower during the war. No one was deferred simply because it meant giving up a profitable business or job. But there are apparently some people who think sacrifice is a one-way street, that our gratitude must stop short of interfering with someone else's money grabbing.

"The campaign against the Patman Housing Bill is a campaign against the veteran. A vote against this bill is a vote to hinder veterans from obtaining homes, and to increase the price they will have to pay for them. I cannot believe that any of our representatives had any such notion in mind in the recent tallies. Nevertheless, such is the effect."

UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas, who heads the CIO Housing Committee, asserted:

"Congress is not representing the people of this country when it succumbs to the dictates of a handful of lobbyists for the corporate interests which oppose the Veterans' Housing Program. We hope there are enough men in Congress to withstand the pressure and the threats and come out fighting for the Patman Bill and other phases of the emergency housing program."

Tom Neill, executive secretary of the Servicemen and Veterans' Committee of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, together with 50 veterans, members of the UE, charged that Congressman Rankin (Miss. polltaxer) is betraying all veterans by his opposition to the bill and by his conduct as chairman of the House Veterans Committee.

CIO HAILS COURT DECISION

"THE decision of the 2nd U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in the Fishgold case is a victory for the veteran as well as the principle of simple seniority in employment," Clinton S. Golden, chairman of the CIO Veterans Committee, declared this week.

"The issue was clear," Golden continued. "Would ten years' progress in industrial relations be set aside for the supposed advantage of a small percentage of returning GI's? The court found that super-seniority is contrary to the law. We might add that it is contrary to the veteran's own best interests.

"In giving the former fighting man preference for one year, and one year only, super-seniority undermines job security for all. What good is the guarantee for the year when work is most plentiful, if it is gained at the expense of the wage earner's strongest bulwark—seniority under collective bargaining agreements? And by wage earner we mean veteran and non-veteran alike."

LONG CIO FIGHT WINS VET JOB

CIO's year and a half court battle to win reinstatement of war veteran Joseph Grasso to his old job at the A. J. Crowhurst tannery, Belleville, N. J., has ended in victory with a decision by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia, Leo Perlis, Natl. Director of the Natl. CIO Community Services Committee, announced this week.

The decision reversed an earlier ruling of the U. S. District Court in Newark denying Grasso the right to return to the job he held before entering the armed forces. In ordering the reversal, the higher court ruled that Grasso "comes squarely within the letter and spirit of the statute in question which is popularly known as the GI Bill of Rights."

18½c an Hour Raise

$50 MILLION A YEAR WON IN RUBBER

THE 18½c an hour increase provided in the agreement signed last week between the CIO Rubber Workers and the nation's four major rubber companies—Firestone, Goodyear, Goodrich and U. S. Rubber—will mean an annual $50,000,000 boost in pay for the 100,000 workers involved, the union stated this week.

The settlement which was agreed upon after 11 days of industry-wide negotiations was termed by the union to be "the best current example that management and labor can settle their differences without government intervention."

U. S. Dept. of Labor Conciliators were present at the conference, but only as observers, the union said.

The rubber negotiations started first with one company, but the union vigorously pressed and won its request to have all the Big Four included. The agreement reached covers the 41 American plants of the companies involved.

In addition to the 18½c increase, the agreement provides for double pay for Sunday and holiday work and calls for adjustment of inequities at plant levels. Twelve cents of the general wage increase is retroactive to Nov. 1, 1945.

URW Pres. L. S. Buckmaster said the contract will undoubtedly set a pattern for another 100,000 workers in the industry employed by the smaller companies.

The agreement is subject to approval by the Natl. Wage Stabilization Board and to ratification by the local unions whose members are employed in the 41 plants involved, he stated.

SEASON OF "CELEBRATION": Striking CIO Textile Workers at Bemis Bros. Bag Co. turned New Orleans' famed Mardi Gras into a demonstration for a 65c-an-hour minimum wage by picketing in costumes. The Bemis chain employes 4,000, nearly 600 of them in New Orleans.

SIGN STEEL DESPITE TRUMAN

NEGOTIATIONS for complete settlement of the steel wage case on the basis of the 18½c an hour won in basic plants proceeded on four fronts this week:

1. President Truman tossed a monkey wrench into negotiations with fabricating plants and other small operators by saying that the 18½c recommendation applied only to basic steel.

2. Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO Steelworkers pointed out that it costs workers in small plants as much to live as anyone else, said that Truman's statement must have been based on lack of facts, and that it "can only be regarded as a serious disservice to industrial peace."

3. Despite Truman, settlements with small companies were rapidly proceeding on the 18½c basis, with less than 100,000 of the 250,000 employed by these firms expected to be out on strike as of this week.

4. The Natl. Wage Stabilization Board approved a general wage and salary adjustment of 19c an hour for 39,000 employes of the Aluminum Co. of America. About 16,000 of them are members of USA-CIO. The others benefited from the union's militant four-week strike.

Murray, in his criticism of Truman's wage statement, said government wage regulations have covered the entire industry, that 18½c an hour settlements have been made with about 300 fabricating firms, and that the 18½c has been accepted as the pattern in other industries such as aluminum, auto, oil, shipbuilding and rubber.

"All these facts are completely overlooked in the reported statement of President Truman," Murray said.

Meanwhile, Lee Pressman, general USA-CIO counsel, wired the Senate Education & Labor Committee in protest against discrimination against the Kaiser-Frazer Corp., which charged that the steel industry was refusing to provide steel for cars.

Urging the committee to investigate the situation, Pressman said that the Kaiser-Frazer statement "discloses a most nefarious conspiracy and boycott designed to stifle competition, foster a monopoly, and threaten employers who desire to pay decent wages and maintain good working conditions rather than attack labor unions."

2-1 STEEL VICTORY

The CIO Steelworkers this week won an NLRB election at SKF Industries, Philadelphia, by 1,733 for USA-CIO to 872 for SKF Employes Assn., independent.

GM REJECTS ARBITRATION, POLL ON ENDING STRIKE

THE spotlight in the strike of 200,000 UAW members against General Motors, well on the way to being four months old, shifted this weekend from Detroit to Washington where Federal Mediator Dewey came to make a "progress" report to Labor Sec. Schwellenbach.

The world's biggest union and the world's biggest corporation were apparently as far apart as ever after GM rejected a proposal that the strikers decide in secret ballot on two questions:

Whether to accept GM's latest proposals including a wage increase of 18½c an hour, or whether to return to work on the basis of the corporation's offer with the understanding that the other issues would be settled by an arbitrator appointed by President Truman.

UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas in a letter to GM Pres. C. E. Wilson declared that "several other issues still in dispute are of equal or greater importance than wages" and include preference to older employes in transfers, elimination of speedup piece-work systems and of the so-called "merit spread," correction of health and safety hazards and changes in local seniority agreements.

The UAW had offered to submit the matter to arbitration after its council representing the striking locals throughout the country had rejected GM's "final" offer of an 18½c increase, after the council had left, GM proposed that the matter of ending the strike on its own terms be submitted to the strikers, and the union then countered with its proposal as to the form of the ballot.

If the strike is still continuing when the Natl. CIO Executive Board meets March 15, it will be one of the principal matters considered.

The UAW pressed for the end of delay and immediate hearings on its charges of unfair labor practices before the Natl. Labor Relations Board, before which it brought formal charges of a lockout after GM rejected the union's offer to allow a poll to be conducted.

Before Dewey went to Washington, UAW negotiators offered again to submit the dispute to arbitration. When GM again rejected the proposal, R. J. Thomas, Walter P. Reuther and George F. Addes, UAW president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer respectively, issued a blistering statement, charging that the corporation "does not dare submit the issues to the judgment of an impartial third party because it knows the facts and justice will not support its case.

"The corporation obviously does not want to end the strike at this time. If it did it would either accept the recommendations of the President of the U. S. or submit the issues to arbitration."

(President Truman's fact-finding board recommended that GM increase wages 19½c an hour, renew the contract which it canceled and continue collective bargaining.)

The suffering of the GM strikers was uppermost in the minds of many CIO, AFL and independent labor leaders as the United Labor Committee to Aid UAW-GM Strikers this week announced plans to raise "$5 million from all branches of organized labor within ten days" to aid the GM strikers in their struggle.

Help was continuing from the Natl. Committee to Aid Families of General Motor Strikers which distributed widely a letter by one of its members, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, which stated that "even though the strike should be settled tomorrow, there will be weeks of delay before the men are back at work and drawing any pay."

DAILY PRESS PLEASE COPY

SCARE stories in the daily press about a "farm strike" in protest against labor's drive for higher wages were given the lie this week by concrete farmer action in support of General Motors strikers.

Ten farmers at Powers, Mont., dug into their bins to send the strikers a carload of wheat worth $2,500, and with it this message:

"We want to show that the slogan 'Food for Freedom' works here at home as well as abroad. We want our gift to demonstrate that the farmers of the Northwest are coming to understand that laboring people of this country represent the farmers' real market, and that full employment at parity prices and income is in the farmers' interest as well as in the public interest."

Meanwhile at Great Falls, Mont., a meeting of 210 farm leaders, representing locals and county and state organizations of the Montana Farmers Union and board members and managers of cooperatives from 14 counties in that vicinity, "deplored" the suggestion of a Nebraska group which proposed a farm "strike," according to Wilfred Pedersen, secretary of the Montana Farmers Union.

"The Montana group strongly supports the idea which generally has precipitated the strikes, feeling that agriculture will either rise or fall with the purchasing power possessed by American labor," Pedersen said.

EXECUTIVE BOARD MEETS MARCH 15

A meeting of the CIO Executive Board March 15 at Natl. CIO Hdg., Washington, D. C., was called this week by President Murray.

Murray said the meeting, which will begin at 2 p.m. and may run through the 16th, will consider among other things the CIO Auto Workers strike against General Motors.

THE ANTI-LABOR INJUNCTION

What's behind the sickening spectacle, in Philadelphia and other cities, of mounted police charging into peaceful parades of American citizens; of unarmed strikers fleeing for their lives and being clubbed and kicked by burly cops?

On what pretext has this reign of terror been launched against labor unionists exercising their rights to strike, to picket and to parade?

The pretext for this police brutality and these infringements of American liberties is in nearly every case the issuance of an anti-labor injunction.

Ever since an injunction was successfully used to break the Pullman strike in the 1890's, this form of court action has been a favorite weapon to break strikes and destroy unions.

Strikebreaking injunctions began to be issued by the bushel, on the say-so of employers alone, forbidding "parading," "congregating in the streets," "annoying language," exhibiting signs, and every kind of strike activity.

These injunctions became such a scandal that finally the Norris-LaGuardia act had to be passed in 1932, to prohibit injunctions against peaceful picketing; and to require open court hearings, and evidence from an employer that local police could not handle the situation and that he had made reasonable efforts to settle the strike.

While this act has provided some protection for labor in the Federal courts (as evidenced by the recent refusal of the U. S. District Court in Indiana to grant General Electric an injunction against the CIO Electrical Workers, on the grounds the company "has failed to make every reasonable effort to settle this dispute"), state courts have recently been issuing many anti-labor injunctions.

And now the House has actually passed the Case bill, which would destroy even the limited protections of the Norris-LaGuardia act and expose labor to constant attack by strikebreaking, union-busting injunctions.

To preserve American liberties against these vicious assaults, to halt the use of the courts for anti-labor purposes, to end police violence against peaceful pickets, and to save its unions from destruction, labor will have to intensify its political activities.

Let Congress and your state and city authorities know how you feel about the anti-labor injunction and police attacks on strikers. Become active in the work of CIO's Political Action Committee. And, above all, be sure you register to vote and cast your ballot.

GENERAL MOTORS LOCKOUT

The scandalous behavior of General Motors in rejecting all government recommendations, in refusing the union's offer to arbitrate, and in deliberately prolonging what has now become a lockout of 200,000 workers, is a challenge to the whole labor movement.

In a spirit of blind spite and labor hatred, this giant corporation is gambling recklessly with the national economy and with the lives and welfare of its employes and their families, in a futile effort to destroy the union.

In their long struggle, with all the effort and sacrifice it has entailed, the General Motors workers have been shock troops for all labor, and all labor must rally to their support.

All unionists and other justice-loving citizens must come quickly and generously to their aid, heeding this union appeal:

"The morale of GM workers is high and their determination is great. The moral and financial support they will receive from others, so that their wives and children do not suffer, will make their ultimate victory certain."

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

BEWARE of pickpockets, highjackers, confidence men, and all other swindlers and tricksters, when you draw your pay these days.

If you don't watch out, they'll not only take the money from your pocket, but the food from your table, the clothing from your back, the roof from your head and your savings from the bank.

The slickest, smoothest-talking, best-organized gang in history is operating now on a nation-wide scale to rob the public.

They don't wear masks, or carry gats or marked cards, so you may not recognize them at once. But they're after your dough all the same.

They are well-dressed, respectable-looking gents who haunt Washington hotels, the lobbies of Congress and the corridors of government agencies.

Their higher-ups may be found in Wall Street, the more expensive clubs and other hang-outs of the profiteers in every city.

You can read their spiel in full-page ads and the editorial columns of most daily papers.

★ ★ ★

The gang is led by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, which is spending close on a million dollars for an advertising campaign against price control.

But Chester Bowles has also named other names, such as the Natl. Retail Dry Goods Assn., the Natl. Assn. of Real Estate Boards, the packers' lobby, the textile lobby, the dairy lobby, and the Wall Street speculators who are "irresponsibly whooping it up for inflation."

The real estate gang has already made the House vote against reasonably-priced housing for veterans and others, by rejecting price ceilings on homes and subsidies for lower-cost construction.

The rest of the gang are working to wreck the price control act by attaching every possible amendment to allow higher prices and prevent real enforcement.

They have already got the Senate to vote a 50% cut in the OPA's deficiency appropriation.

★ ★ ★

All these activities are designed to steal your wages as effectively as with a blackjack down a dark alley.

When OPA controls were removed from citrus fruits, prices of oranges, lemons and grapefruit rose at once from 50 to 100%. And the same, or worse, would happen to all other foodstuffs, if the wreckers of price control have their way.

Lobbies are similarly working to raise clothing prices, rents and everything else on which your wages are spent.

If the robber gang are successful, real wages will be cut again and again by leaping living costs; and the value of war bonds, insurance and other savings will shrink to the lowest point.

★ ★ ★

If you think this is alarmist talk, consider what happened after the First World War.

Shortly after the 1918 armistice, with no price controls, living costs started to skyrocket. By June, 1920, they had more than doubled over the pre-war level.

This inflation brought nothing but misery to most Americans. Wages could not keep up with increased prices, and the workers' real earnings were not restored until the 1930's and CIO's big organizing drives.

Along with lower real wages came increasing unemployment and reduced farm earnings.

Factory payrolls shrank 44% between 1919 and 1921 and the number of unemployed rose by more than five million. Average earnings of factory workers declined from $1,350 in 1920 to $900 in 1921.

Net income of farmers, meanwhile, declined from $8.8 billion to $3 billion between 1919 and 1921, and average farm income shrank from $1,360 to $460.

★ ★ ★

To preserve the purchasing power of your wages, and to prevent unemployment and depression, the robber-campaign of the price profiteers must be counteracted by the greatest popular campaign ever conducted to maintain price controls.

Write or wire your representatives in Congress at once, to renew the Price Control Act without any price-raising amendments whatever; to grant adequate appropriations to OPA; and to pass the Patman emergency housing bill with price ceilings and subsidies to hold down costs.

And to put weight behind your words, be sure to register and be ready to vote.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, S. H. Dalrymple, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 March 11, 1946 No. 11

MISSION TO POLAND

The CIO NEWS presents high spots of a report to CIO members on a recent five-month tour of Europe by Leo Krzycki, vice-president, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and president, American Slav Congress. Krzycki went from the Paris World Trade Union Congress to liberated Poland, where he was a delegate to the first national trade union meeting. He talked with hundreds of workers in steel mills, mines, textile and glass factories. He spent 34 days in the Soviet Union and visited Rumania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia.

IN 1930 the American-Polish labor, fraternal and cultural organizaions sent me to Poland on a good-will lecture tour. A "Reign of Terror" existed in Poland then. One of the meetings at which I spoke at Sosnowiec was broken up by a band of terrorists. Even then before the world was aware of fascism the labor movement of Poland was badly crippled.

Pre-War Persecution

The record shows that conditions did not improve with the death of the dictator Pilsudski. When the militarists and aristocrats wrested the government from him it was only to intensify the persecution of democratic forces in Poland. From 1934 until the Nazi invasion of Poland, 40,000 political and labor leaders were imprisoned and persecuted.

In contrast with the labor terror under the pre-war regime, it was heartening to behold the dignified assemblage, which met on Nov. 18 in Warsaw, with 800 delegates representing more than a million organized workers convening to hammer out a program for new Poland.

As an indication that labor in Poland had attained its full citizenship, the president, vice-president, ministers of the provisional government, and the marshall of the armed forces brought greetings to the delegation in person. These officials addressed the labor representatives as partners and assured them, that inasmuch as labor is a major factor in a democratic society, they as political servants intended to keep the needs of the working people in mind in all of their undertakings.

Democracy At Work

The fact that this was not mere political demogoguery was soon to be borne out with the recent nationalization of basic industry in Poland. This government action, which opens the door to the industrialization of Poland and guarantees jobs and a higher standard of living to thousands of Polish workers, was the direct result of a resolution passed by the delegates to this first national labor convention of Polish workers. This government action, however, affects only those plants employing more than 50 workers on any one shift. Smaller plants and businesses are to continue under a system of private enterprise.

In 1930 when I visited Poland there were only 450,000 organized workers in that country and these were scattered in 14 separate, independent labor organizations. Today with ten million fewer people in Poland (it is estimated that 6½ million Polish citizens were murdered in concentration camps, massacres and in gas chambers by the Nazis and another 3 million are still scattered throughout Europe awaiting repatriation), there are 1,100,000 organized workers in one central united organization (the Alliance of Polish Workers).

While labor under the provisional government is consulted on all important issues affecting the nation as a whole, I saw no indication that the government was attempting to control the unions. The convention which I attended was very much like our own CIO national conventions. Delegates were elected democratically by the members of their respective industrial unions. Resolutions were presented and voted upon in a democratic manner.

DESPITE the horrible suffering of the people, millions of whom were victims of fiendish, inhuman barbarism—despite the gas chambers at Maidenek and Oswiemcim where six million Poles were exterminated, despite the fact that there is scarcely a family in Poland which has not been visited by tragedy, I found a marvelous spirit among the people as they undertake the rebuilding of their devastated country.

Grateful to Allies

I talked to hundreds of people in factories and mines and everywhere I found eternal gratitude for allied assistance in overthrowing the Nazi oppressor. The people will never forget the day of Warsaw's liberation by the Red Army and the heroism of the Kosciuszko and Dombrowski, two Polish divisions, fighting side by side with the Russians.

Again and again they tell how the Red Army and Soviet engineers set up the first 500 prefabricated houses in New Warsaw, and the first pontoon bridge in Warsaw. How they repaired the water works and power plants and brought water and light to the city which had been left without a drop of water and in total darkness by the Nazis. They will not forget that the first bread to arrive to the starving city came from the Ukraine.

Aid From Russia

When the Nazis fled they took with them all of the raw material needed to keep the textile mills going. Shortly after liberation by the Red Army, Russia sent large supplies of wool and cotton in exchange for Polish coal. The raw material enabled 140,000 textile workers, engaged in Poland's second largest industry, to stay on the job, thus providing sustenance for 460,000 people.

Coal mining is the largest industry in Poland. In response to an appeal made by the Polish miners union, production in the mines has increased from 520,000 tons of coal in March, 1945, to 3,600,000 in January, 1946. This puts Polish miners, as producers, ahead of those in France, Belgium and England.

Rail Shortage

When I left Poland there were two million tons of coal on the surface awaiting transportation. The lack of rolling stock is the chief bottleneck in the development of Poland's industry at this time. Sweden and the Soviet Union are the largest markets for Polish coal. The largest railroad car manufacturing plants in Europe, located at Breslau (now called Wroclaw) have now been restored to operation.

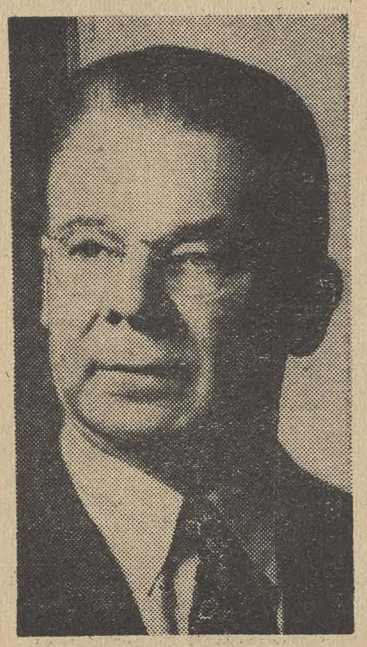
In less than six months this German built plant, demolished by the Nazis when they retreated, has been rebuilt by Polish workers and is now in operation.

POLAND is now governed by a national council consisting of 350 representatives of every important anti-fascist democratic group in the society of that country. The provisional government, which will be in power until official elections are held upon the return to Poland of nearly three million exiled and displaced citizens and soldiers and former slave laborers, grew out of a conference of 1,400 delegates called shortly after the liberation of Poland.

Elections are expected to be held by June of this year.

The pre-war population of Poland was around 33 million people. It is estimated that nearly 6½ million people lost their lives at the hands of the fascist aggressors and 2½ million are yet to be repatriated.

Bereft of homes and every vital necessity of life, the need of the Polish people is great and their suffering is among the worst in war-ravaged Europe. A mild winter together with the marvelous assistance which the United Nations Relief & Rehabilitation Agency is giving have combined to save the lives of thousands of Polish people who would have otherwise died from hunger and cold this winter.



LEO KRZYCKI

WITH the liberation of Poland came sweeping reforms in the social and economic life of the nation. The breaking up of the huge estates of the landed aristocracy and parceling of the land among the peasants brought an end to the feudalistic system which had kept Poland among the most backward nations of the world.

Peasants Get Land

The Minister of Finance of prewar Poland reported in 1934-35 the average cash income of a Polish peasant was 2c a day. Almost half of the best land was owned by less than .6 of 1% of the population. In prewar Poland, the aristocratic landlord owned as much as 400 typical peasant families. Under the old system, the average peasant was merely a serf and barely eked out an existence. Now he is given a piece of land of his own and is at last his own master.

School Enrollment Up

In 1939 the total attendance at adult schools was 159,258. Today through the efforts of the trade unions, despite the destruction of schools and educational facilities, enrollment at evening classes by adults has been boosted to 678,000 students.

A people's theatre is developing and workers, through their trade unions, can secure theatre and concert tickets at 30% of the regular price. In prewar Poland, culture was a luxury available to few outside the circles of the aristocracy.

The cooperative movement has grown tremendously with the liberation of Poland. Today there are 10,000 cooperatives in Poland. Most of them are to be found in food, savings and loan, commercial, manufacturing and publishing industries.

Since the war the membership in cooperatives is around 2,500,000. An additional 3,000 coops are in the process of being organized. This is particularly significant inasmuch as leaders of cooperatives like labor leaders were among those who were persecuted and imprisoned during the pre-war regime as well as under the Nazis.

THE same elements that caused terror in prewar Poland are active today in organizing outside of Poland or operating underground. I learned that there is evidence that terrorists are being sent into Poland from groups organized outside the country. I found that the Polish people are indignant at the maintenance abroad of Polish armies hostile to the present government. They point out that these services are paid and supplied by members of the United Nations Organization to which Poland belongs.

Terrorists' Sabotage

The present government has issued a decree making Anti-Semitism a crime but the old behavior persists in some parts of the country. There is no doubt that it is stimulated and inspired by these terrorists from the underground or from abroad.

ALTHOUGH my main interest was Poland, still the trade unionists of the other Slavic countries were interested in hearing an American voice, and so I was invited by the Soviet trade unionists as well as their Slav Congress. While in the Soviet Union I was received by Marshall Stalin. My audience with him lasted one and a half hours. Addressing the Soviet trade union plenum of 500 delegates was a thrilling experience for me.

The trade unionists of Yugoslavia invited me to their country where I met Marshall Tito Broz. While in Czechoslovakia I had a talk with President Benes.

What is evident and noticeable in all the Slavic nations in Europe is that there is a strengthening of the unity between the workers and the peasants. As an example I cite the numerous incidents which are commonplace in Poland where the workers on their week-ends make trips into the country and repair the damaged and broken farm machines and implements for the peasants without any compensation. Thus a new understanding of the mutual interests of worker and peasant is being realized.

Profit for America

In Poland the people are grateful to us for aid thru UNRRA. America—business and labor—can gain by cultivating the potential Polish market. If America grants credits and loans to Poland, Poland will take our manufactured machine and consumer goods which American workers and farmers would produce for the Polish workers and farmers, based on such loans and credits. And Poland's big industrial and commercial potential secured by its new democratic program together with its program of industrialization will guarantee payment of these loans dollar for dollar.

Poland can thus be a big factor in helping unemployment from developing here in the United States.

1 No string on a door knob for Johnnie. That aching tooth gets treated free at New York's Guggenheim Dental Clinic.

FREE DENTAL CLINIC

Photos By Conrad Eiger

MURRAY GUGGENHEIM and his wife, Leonie, founded the Guggenheim Foundation in 1929, to promote the well being of mankind. The Guggenheim Dental Clinic, N. Y. City, is one result. The Clinic is located in a modern stone building on E. 72nd St.

Squads from the Clinic visit public schools within a large radius on the East Side. They examine the mouths of all children regardless of ability to pay, and make recommendations to parents.

Families that can afford private care are not admitted to the Clinic. Admission is free, and only children of families where income is $25 a week for three persons, $5 allowed for each other child, are eligible.

Surprisingly enough, one hardly ever hears a crying child at the clinic. This is due to the sympathetic attendents, murals planned for the children's amusement, and the training that Guggenheim dentists receive in working with the very young.

4 Clinic staff consists of all colors, creeds, from many countries. Dentists are taught how to work with children.

2 Seventeen dentists can work at one time in the large, well equipped clinic on E. 72nd St. Surgical cases are treated in private rooms. Clinic squads visit East Side public schools.

3 Youngsters wait in muraled reception room. Organization is so efficient that hundreds are admitted at a time. Kids are from first grade age, and younger, to 16. Older ones go to other clinics. Murals help take young minds away from sharp drills.

CIO to Congress

SECURITY ACT NEEDS OVERHAUL

SEVEN years after the last revision of the Social Security Act and three years after the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill was introduced we are at last getting down to a dission of overhauling the entire system, Van A. Bittner, chairman of the CIO social Security Committee, told the House Ways & Means Committee this week.

At that, he pointed out, the House group is considering the subject 'piecemeal, rather than making a frontal attack on the whole issue of bringing social security up to date. At the request of the Committee, Bittner's testimony was limited this week to the issue of Old Age and Survivors Insurance.

In addition to Bittner, two other CIO witnesses testified during the week. These were Mrs. Elizabeth Sasuly, for the Food & Tobacco Workers and Joseph Levy for the Office & Professional Workers.

"A man or woman with a job is relatively secure for as long as that job holds out—depending of course on the amount of wages paid," Bittner told the committee. "But a job does not provide complete security. It has to be bulwarked by a many-sided social security system.

"Having a job is no guarantee against unemployment — hence the need for unemployment insurance.

"A job offers no protection to the widow and children of the job-holder who dies, nor to the worker himself when he grows too old to work. Old age and survivors insurance is needed.

"A job does not protect the worker and his family when he falls ill, nor provide adequate medical care. Only a health insurance program can take care of health emergencies.

"And for the many victims of poverty and disability; for the children who would be deprived of adequate food, clothing, shelter and education by reason of family poverty, public assistance is needed to set the limits to which we will allow human misery to go."

Bittner outlined a series of main points for needed reform of the old age and survivors insurance aspects of social security:

1. Extension and improvement of old age and survivors insurance benefits to all gainfully employed people—including farmers, the self-employed, agricultural, domestic, maritime, railroad, non-profit and public employes.

2. Payment of permanent disability benefits to all these groups.

3. Financing the cost of this program by a system of contributions from employers, workers and the government.

On specific amounts, Bittner said the CIO supported the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill formula which raises the minimum old age and survivers benefits to $20 a week for a single worker, $30 to a family, with a maximum of $120 a month or 80% of past earnings, whichever is less.

German unions are being slowly rebuilt on the wreckage left by the Nazis. CIO's Sidney Hillman, as part of a mission from the World Federation of Trade Unions, shakes hands with Martha Arendsee, official of the Social Political Division of the German labor parties. With Hillman are fellow WFTU executives, Sir Walter Citrine, of England, and Mikhail Tarasov, USSR.

BREAK WITH FRANCO URGED BY MURRAY

JOINING with seven leaders of civic, professional and church groups, CIO Pres. Philip Murray has asked President Truman for an immediate break with Franco Spain and recognition of the Spanish Republican government.

"The liberation of the Spanish people is the test of our determination to destroy fascism, extend the area of human freedom, and protect the peace," Murray said in the joint statement to Truman.

"The compelling factor today is not justice for the first victims of the war of the Axis against civilization, but the vital interest of self-protection against the possibility of new aggression."

The letter warned that the plan to replace Franco with a monarchy (currently being promoted in London) "is a cause of grave apprehension" and "would offer a change in name but not in substance. As the record shows, a monarchy will maintain the authoritarian practices which have been the distinguishing feature of the Franco regime.

"The American people have no interests that can be served by a monarchy. Our government can and should disassociate itself from this dangerous appeasement by breaking with Franco and recognizing the Republic."

The statement was accompanied by a long memo detailing Franco's help to Nazi Germany and citing the fact that Spain now shelters scores of thousands of Nazis and at least $160,000,000 in Nazi cash, some openly invested but most hidden away.

LABOR'S WORLD

DE-NAZIFICATION results in Germany are "far from satisfactory," according to the report of the World Federation of Trade Unions' special commission investigating conditions under the Allied occupation, Allied Labor News reports from Paris.

Rejecting the excuse given by Allied officers that some Nazis with technical skill are "indispensable," the report says "there can be no 'indispensable' Nazis. De-Nazification can and must be given priority over any desire to achieve maximum productivity."

The WFTU commission, which just returned from three weeks in Germany, also revealed that Allied officials in many cases scorn trade union assistance, with the result that Nazis are left in important posts in industry and are able to hamper trade union growth. Even Nazis who have been ousted from one post have little difficulty in getting an important job in another factory, the report says.

Speaking for the commission at a press conference here, Sidney Hillman underlined these findings but emphasized the commission's view that the German trade union movement is a strong force for a new, democratic Germany. In every zone, he said, Socialists, Communists and Christians are determined to avoid the division in the working class movement that made Nazism possible.

The report, however, stresses that the Junker (landed proprietor) class must be stripped of economic power in order to prevent re-emergence of militarism. "It would be folly," the report asserts, "to rely wholly on the ability of the German workers to transform their land and their institutions as a guarantee that the world be free of the menace which twice in our lifetime has plunged us into war."

Commission findings will be presented to Allied authorities, who will be continuously informed of future WFTU findings on the progress of de-Nazification, Hillman said. He pointed out that the length of time our troops will have to occupy Germany depends largely on our determination to uproot fascism. The WFTU commission, he said, favors a small, efficient occupation force.

Trade unions, the report says, should be encouraged to develop on a zone-wide basis, and since they represent "one of the most reliable anti-fascist forces in Germany," they should also be empowered to establish youth organizations for re-education.

Criticize Churchill Speech

Sharp reaction to Churchill's Fulton, Mo., speech, in which he called for a military alliance of the U. S. and Britain was expressed in Congress this week. Three Senators—Pepper (D., Fla.), Kilgore (D., W. Va.) and Taylor (D., Ida.)—said:

"Mr. Churchill's proposal would cut the throat of the United Nations. It would destroy the unity of the Big Three without which the war could not have been won and without which the peace cannot be saved."

Rep. Ellis Patterson (D., Cal.) declared: "It is incredible to me that the Tory representative from Britain used the heart of the U. S. as a platform for the reactionary proposal to set up one power with another with only one possible objective: to create a bloc against a third power. History has proved the insanity of this."

Senators and Representatives supporting the speech included Colmer (D., Miss.), Cox (D., Ga.), Sen. Taft (R., O.), Wherry (R., Neb.) and others.

Unshackling British Unions

While anti-labor forces in Congress here rush ahead with union-busting bills such as the Case, Ball-Hatch, Ellender and other measures, the British trade union movement is finally being freed of its own version of anti-union legislation—the Trades Disputes Act which has stood for 20 years.

In a less than 60-word bill, the British Parliament has repealed an act that since 1927 has prohibited general strikes and sympathy strikes, has outlawed union contributions to political parties, and has forbidden government employes from joining a national labor organization.

The act, which the Labor government has now repealed in one of the first moves toward redeeming pre-election pledges, also limited picketing and made a union shop illegal in any national or local government job.

'WIN PEACE' MEET CALLED

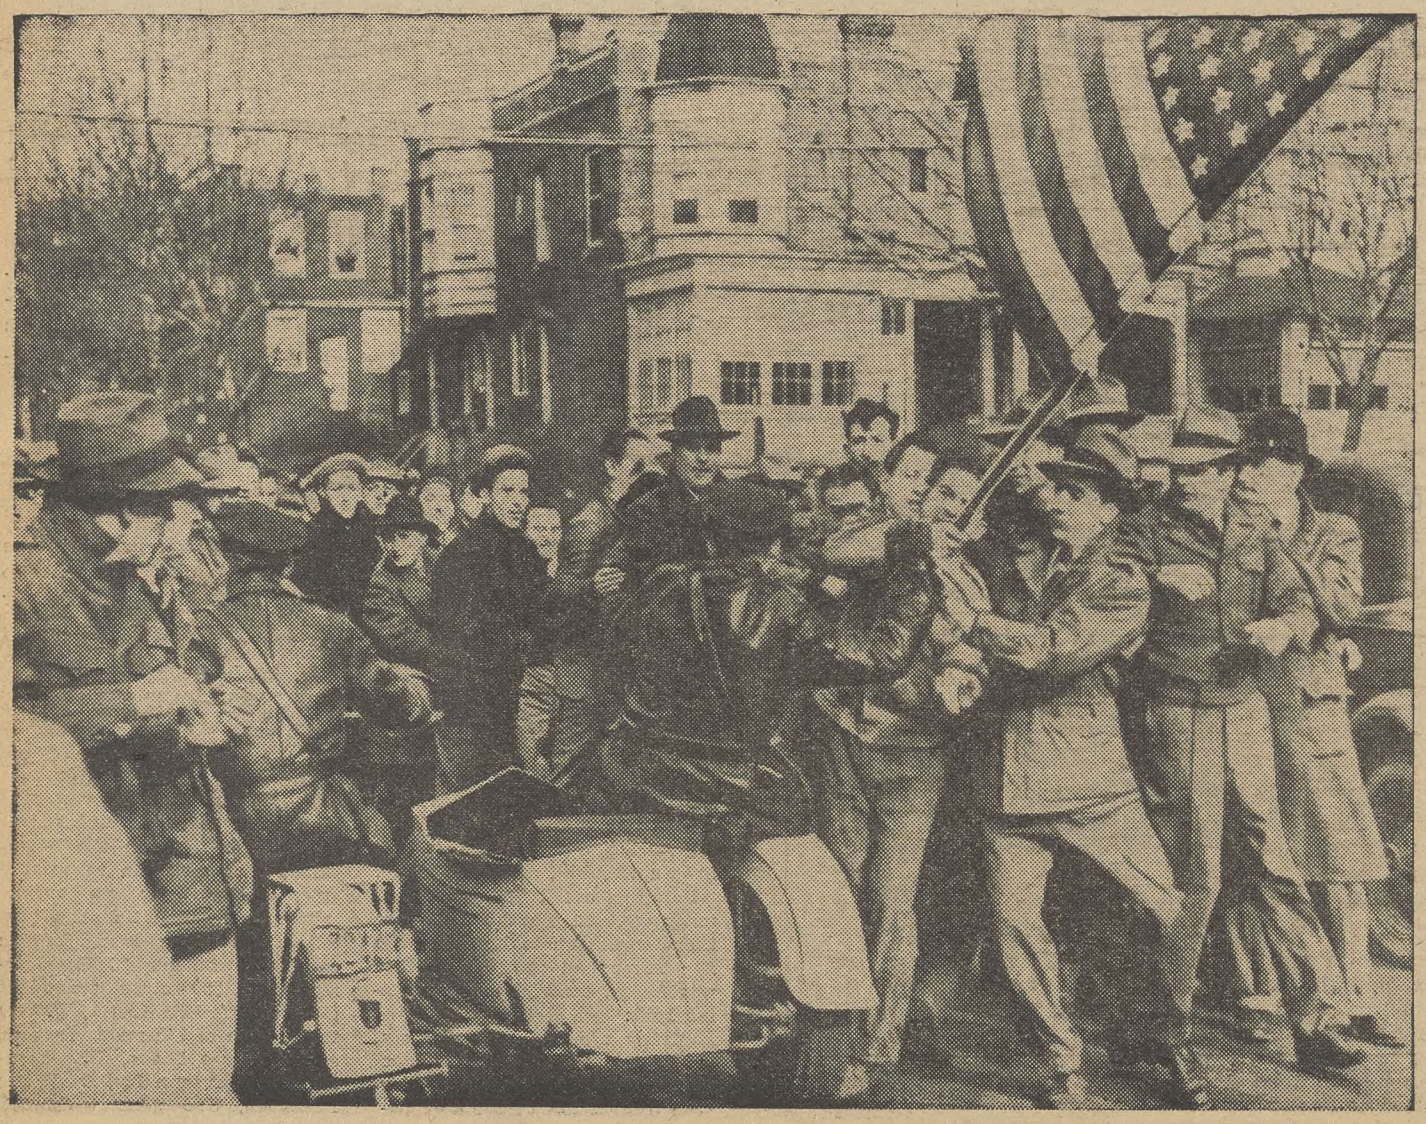
Congressmen and private citizens are holding a "Win the Peace" conference in Washington April 5, 6 and 7, Rep. Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.), announced here.

Pointing out that enemies of unity were at work even before the war was on to break up the Big Three and promote another world war, the call to the meeting said:

"They are trying to destroy unity and replace it with bloc politics; they seek to hinder the destruction of the war potential of Germany and Japan; they help promote interference in Greece, Indonesia, China and other countries. On the home front they continue to retard reconversion, stir up racial strife and political discord."

Speakers and sponsors of the conference include 23 Congressmen and 200 other prominent citizens. Sen. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) will be one of the main speakers, as will Russ Nixon, UE Washington representative, and Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel.

1 One thousand club-swinging cops, mounted and on foot, broke up a CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers' parade last week in Philadelphia, in City of Brotherly Love interpretation of court in junction limiting picketing. In eight-week-old, nationwide UE strike against Westinghouse and General Electric, ten injunctions have been issued, two have been denied, one is pending.



3 Republican Mayor Bernard Samuels (striped tie) emphasizes point with finger. Many CIO members

OLD CLUB

By

MOUNTED cops breaking strikers' heads wit clubs, under sanction of court injunctions li union picketing, drove home to labor this we threat that legislation pending in Congress ma picketing back to the 1890's.

The same court injunctions that smashed picke then will be revived if legislation like the Case Bill (HI Ball-Hatch Bill (S 1178) and Ellender Bill (S 1661) wi gressional approval.

The current wave of injunctions against the CIO trical, Radio & Machine Workers Union in its strike ag Westinghouse and General Electric is proof positive state courts—despite the 1932 federal Norris-LaGu Anti-Injunction Act—are bowing to anti-union empl who are more interested in fostering disturbances th settling wage disputes.

The UE charges that GE and Westinghouse manag have inspired supervisors to ignore the union pass syste gives them orderly access to plants for performance productive work. The companies thus are fostering line "beefs," UE declares.

"Even after agreeing to the system of identificat passes the companies have incited their supervisors to a to break through picket lines, ostensibly on the theo important work was being neglected," the UE says.

"Actually the companies have been seeking to inspir to work' movements and to provoke violence and so a basis for injunction applications."

The injunction pattern in the UE strike, invo 175,000 members of CIO's third largest affiliate, take struggle legally backward to the 1890's when Fe troops, under authority of an injunction, smashed famous Pullman strike. The strikers' leader, Eugen Debs, testified that "the ranks were broken . . . not b Army and not by any other power but simply by the a of the U. S. Courts."

Injunction procedures then (that might be revived Case, Ellender or Ball-Hatch Bills) allowed judges to picketing, and even parading or congregating in the str exhibiting signs or distributing leaflets near a struck pl

Some judges went so far as to prohibit "abusi "annoying" or "bad" language. Use of the words "traitor" or "unfair" was sometimes outlawed.

2 Philadelphia cops, backed by injunction, rode do paraders. Picket-limiting injunctions have been issu at Bridgeville, Pa.; Schenectady, N. Y.; Bloomfield, and Jersey City, N. J.; Bridgeport, Conn.; Cleveland a Angeles. Injunctions have been denied at Pittsburgh, a Wayne, Ind. One is pending at Pittsfield, Mass.

riped tie) of Philadelphia hears UE protests about violence. UE Rep. Peter D. Besch O members switched registration from Republican to Democrat as result of assault.

UB OVER LABOR

By FRED d'AVILA

heads with billy unctions limiting this week the ngress may take shed picket lines ase Bill (HR 5262),

S 1661) wins Con-

st the CIO Elects strike against of positive that Norris-LaGuardia
nion employers rbances than in ouse managements pass system that formance of non-fostering picket identification by rvisors to attempt the theory that

E says.
ng to inspire 'back ce and so provide trike, involving iliate, takes the when Federal n, smashed the der, Eugene B.

. . . not by the
ly by the action

be revived by the judges to ban all in the streets or a struck plant.
ibit "abusive" or he words "scab,"

n, rode down UE
e been issued also loomfield, Newark
Cleveland and Los ttsburgh, and Fort ss.

Injunctions in federal and state courts spread like wildfire. Preliminary injunctions were issued without giving unions notice. Even when a "hearing" was held it did not necessarily mean that testimony was taken or that employers' witnesses could be cross examined.

The situation became so scandalous that Congress passed the Clayton Act in 1914, specifically declaring that nothing in the anti-trust laws should interfere with the operation of labor organizations. But this Act, soon became a dead duck, and injunctions continued plaguing unions.

Finally in 1932 Congress passed the Norris-LaGuardia Anti-Injunction Act forbidding injunctions against peaceful picketing. The Act among other things required an open court hearing and the taking of testimony before an injunction could be issued. It forced an employer to show that local police could not protect his property, and required him to make reasonable efforts to settle the strike.

State legislatures too—in Pennsylvania and New Jersey where injunctions against UE have been issued—passed anti-injunction acts, but state courts have largely ignored them to the benefit of Westinghouse and GE managements.

Meanwhile, fat with war profits, Westinghouse has refused to offer a single penny wage increase and GE has made a thoroughly inadequate counter offer to UE's demands, despite the fact that General Motors electrical division has granted an 18½c an hour raise—the pattern set in several other big industries. While GE negotiations are scheduled to resume this week, the company stands convicted with Westinghouse of having "merely sought the aid of the injunctive process to break the strike."

Realistically, UE warns, labor disputes cannot be settled by injunctions. "The present strike can be settled only if the companies engaged in legitimate collective bargaining."

The UE's position has been fully supported by mayors and city councils in 13 communities, with a population of 2,500,000, and by 43 U. S. Representatives and eight Senators.

The Congressmen said: "These workers deserve full support in their grim struggle for a substantial wage increase to compensate for the reduction in take-home pay and for a decent American standard of living."

Which is a good answer to the companies, but which needs support in Congress if the pattern of anti-labor injunctions witnessed in some state courts is not to become the pattern for the entire nation.

5 UE picket line protests Philadelphia violence to Pennsylvania Gov. Edward Martin, attending Pittsburgh luncheon honoring late George Westinghouse and "system of free enterprise" for which he stood. UE is opposing Case Bill in Congress, pushed by Republicans and reactionary Democrats, which might saddle all striking unions with injunctions.

4 CIO parade to Philadelphia City Hall followed police attack. UE says Westinghouse, GE have refused to bargain in good faith to date, hence are not entitled to injunctions. Federal Court at Fort Wayne denied injunction said reason was GE had "failed to make every reasonable effort to settle this dispute." Court said "every reasonable effort" requirement is not fulfilled by mere willingness to meet with union.

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

George Craig, CIO Reg. Dir., Philadelphia, Pa., reports: SKF Industries, USA-CIO 1733; SKF Employes Assn. 872; against 40. Congratulations to all who participated in this splendid victory!

Ernest B. Pugh, CIO Reg. Dir., Richmond, Va., reports: Russell Weill Distributing Co., Richmond, Va., CIO 46; no union 1. The plant was organized by Field Rep. Lloyd P. Vaugh, assisted by James Talbert, a worker in the plant. Field Rep. Ted DuCuennois supervised the election arrangements.

R. J. Davidson, CIO Reg. Dir., Cincinnati, Ohio, reports: Smith & Mills Co., Cincinnati, USA-CIO 101; against 6. Maxwell Paper Co., Franklin, Ohio, CIO Paperworkers 88; against 58. Reps. Logan Coff and Herbert Schwenker organized this plant.

Paul E. Miley, Reg. Dir., UAW-CIO, reports: UAW has won bargaining rights by a cross check of cards at Williams Auto Glass Co., Dayton, Ohio. The workers will become members of Amalgamated Local 785, Dayton. Intl. Rep. George Wilkin was in charge of the drive.

Carey E. Haigler, CIO Reg. Dir., Birmingham, Ala., reports: Swift & Co., Birmingham, UPWA-CIO 32, no union 3. Mrs. Ada Lee Howell, UPWA Rep., deserves a great deal of credit for winning this victory since the plant was lost to the AFL about two years ago by a vote of 11 to 10. This time the AFL did not even appear on the ballot.

G. George DeNucci, CIO Reg. Dir., Columbus, Ohio, reports: Stern Garment Co., Columbus, Ohio, has agreed to recognize the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The firm normally employs about 100 workers. ACWA Intl. Rep. Clyde Mathews in charge.

Joseph M. Walsh, CIO Reg. Dir., Wilkes-Barre, Pa., reports: Leon Ferenbach Silk Mill, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Textile Workers Union 246; no union 185. Exec. Vice-Pres. George Baldanzi and State Vice-Pres. James J. Kelly assisted in this election.

John J. Maurillo, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Syracuse, N. Y., reports: Hygrade Food Products Co., Syracuse, N. Y., through a card-check, has recognized the CIO Packinghouse Workers. These employes now come under the master agreement held with this firm, and will receive the 16c an hour increase granted to other packinghouse workers.

* * *

Frank J. Bender, CIO Reg. Dir., Baltimore, Md., reports: Monumental Distillers, Inc., Lansdowne, Md., CIO 23; against 3. Reps. Robert Brylke and Edmund Ryan conducted the campaign.

Paul E. Wiley, UAW Reg. Dir., reports: CIO is certain to win an NLRB election at Western Automatic Machine Screw Co., Elyria, Ohio. Unofficial and incomplete returns, because the soldier vote has not yet been counted, indicated that the UAW-CIO easily won the election on Feb. 27. In a 4-way vote the CIO received 561 votes; no union, 173; AFL, 123, and MESA, 31. Some 350 employes in military service will vote by mail. These mail ballots must be returned by Mar. 19. The company has conceded victory to the UAW-CIO. Intl. Rep. Michael Chesik was in charge of the drive, assisted by an active committee of workers and a lively campaign by Local 971, UAW-CIO, which represents the Bendix Westinghouse employes of Elyria.

Sylvester Graham, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Billings, Montana, reports: Oregon Basin Oil Field, near Cody, Wyoming, OWIU-CIO 40; no union 8. The bargaining unit in this case covers about 68 field workers.

B. T. Judd, CIO Field Rep., Chattanooga, Tenn., reports: U. S. Pipe & Foundry Co., Chattanooga, USA-CIO 250; AFL Moulders & Foundry Workers 76; no union 0. This was a big victory for the CIO because this plant has been under contract to the Moulders Union for several years. Campaign was conducted by USA-CIO Rep. J. C. Stafford, assisted by J. T. Judd.

E. L. Sandefur, CIO Reg. Dir., Winston-Salem, N. C., reports: Schottland, Inc., Rocky Mount, N. C., TWUA-CIO 39; no union 28. Rep. Toby Menzes was in charge.

Wm. B. Taylor, Dir. of Orgn., UGCCWA, reports: Armour Fertilizer Co., Montgomery, Ala., UGCCWA-CIO 33; against 4. International Minerals Co., Montgomery, PGCCWA-CIO 36; against 0. CIO Field Reps. K. G. Ingle and Robert McGruder, along with UGCCWA Rep. Howard King assisted in this election and C. W. Danenburg, UGCCWA Reg. Dir., was in charge.

* * *

Walter Harris, CIO Reg. Dir., Chicago, reports: The CIO Natl. Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn. has been certified as bargaining agent for licensed and unlicensed officers employed by the Central Barge Co., Chicago, as the result of an election conducted by mail which the MEBA won, 23 to 22. The CIO also won an election among production and maintenance employes of Rehnberg-Jacobson Mfg. Co., Inc., Rockford, Ill., by a vote of 29 for the CIO to 19 for the AFL machinists.

Frank Grasso, United Paperworkers director, reports: UPA-CIO won bargaining rights for employes of Glover Container Co., New Yok City. Rep. Cal Monaco assisted in the election.

* * *

The United Rubber Workers have come through with a smashing victory in negotiations with the nation's four major rubber companies. An agreement covering all the companies' plants gives an increase of 18½c across the board in addition to fringe increases which will bring the total to about 22½c. Credit should be given to URW Pres. L. S. Buckmaster, Sec.-Treas. Charles Lanning and Gen. Counsel Patterson, who served on the negotiating committee.

If the big Northwest lumber concerns get away with their scheme to provoke a strike this spring, log dumps like this will stop.

Woodworker Head Charges:

PLOT BREWING TO PROVOKE STRIKE

A SLICK scheme has been cooked up by Northwest lumber interests to deliberately provoke a strike by cancelling contracts this spring in order to take advantage of tax rebates and reap profits while raw material acutely needed for housing is held back. Then they will blame the whole thing on the union.

This is the charge made by Pres. J. E. Fadling of the CIO Woodworkers in a letter to Rep. R. L. Doughton, chairman of the House Ways & Means Committee, urging repeal of the carry-back provisions of the tax law.

As spokesman for the IWA, principal union in the logging and lumber industry in 21 states, Fadling told Chairman Doughton:

"The Government and the public are clamoring for lumber, and the industry, of course, doesn't want to have the blame for a serious lack of lumber. This calls for a strategy that will throw the blame on someone else and still permit them to curtail production and take advantage of the tax rebates.

"Just how the industry proposes to do that has become clearer in the last few weeks, at least with regard to the important lumber producing areas of the Pacific Northwest. The largest timber companies, Weyerhauser and Longbell, have spearheaded a move to provoke a strike this spring—a strike which would throw the blame for loss of production on the unions.

"This was done by a notice given by the employers to the IWA-CIO in 96 major operations in the Northwest, stating the employers' decision to cancel the existing labor-management contract. That kind of a move can only be interpreted as an attempt to provoke a strike, and indeed, it has already started a strong wave of strike talk amongst the rank and file members of the union."

In another letter to Rep. Charles R. Savage of Washington, Fadling suggested a Congressional investigation into the economics of the lumber industry. This would show, he said, that the companies which have cancelled their contracts with the IWA "are among those which made the highest excess profits during the war and therefore are eligible for the greatest rebates under the carry-back-carry-forward provisions."

LAUNDRY WORKERS GET 15% INCREASE

Wage increases totalling 15% were among the gains obtained for 5,000 workers employed in 150 linen supply and hotel laundry plants in the Metropolitan N. Y. area, Exec. Vice Pres. Frank Rosenblum of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers announced this week. A previous 7% increase was obtained for these workers in Nov., 1945.

The latest pay rise is effective as of Feb. 4, while other terms of the contract are subject to ratification of the linen supply workers. These include provisions for a fund covering death, sickness, accident, hospital and maternity benefits into which employers put 2% of their weekly payrolls.

The new contract also provides for five paid holidays and paid sick leave.

LONGSHOREMEN PLAN STRIKE

THE CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union announced this week that it was going ahead with plans for a strike of its Pacific Coast members on April 1. The announcement came after negotiations with the Waterfront Employers Assn. of the Pacific Coast, held this week in San Francisco, were adjourned for one week.

The employers had agreed to renew negotiations, following arbitration hearings held Feb. 28-Mar. 4, in San Francisco on charges made by the ILWU that the Employers Assn. had acted in bad faith when it broke off negotiations with the union Jan. 25.

After the break-off, longshoremen up and down the Pacific Coast voted by more than 92% to strike on or before April 1. A 30-day notice to the government of intention to strike, as required by the Smith-Connally Act, was given by the ILWU more than a month ago, and the union's negotiating committee has been empowered to call a strike on or before April 1.

At the arbitrations hearings the ILWU demanded that Coast Arbitrator Harry Rathbun order the employers to resume negotiations and end their lockout of the port of Portland. The union charged that "a creeping paralysis of longshore operations" in Portland had been instigated by the illegal cancellation, without first submitting to arbitration, of the Portland Employers contract with ILWU Local 40.

A recent statement issued by Pres. Harry Bridges and other Union officials charged the employers with refusing "to bargain collectively in good faith for the renewal of a contract that expired more than six months ago." The statement also accused the employers of trying to precipitate a coastwise lockout in order to divert public attention from the real issues" in the dispute.

These involve, the union official declared, refusal of the employers to carry out War Labor Board directives handed down more than six months ago, calling among other things, for retroactive wages amounting to more than $8,000,000, for which employers were guaranteed full reimbursement by the government.

A resolution passed by Longshore Local 10 in San Francisco charged that the employers have been carrying on since V-J Day, "a persistent attack on the ILWU marked by insolent disregard of government directives, stubborn refusal to consummate contracts in accordance with those directives and general provocation of the ILWU and its members."

CIO GLAMOR JOB

1 Layouts of luscious screen stars that lure cash-in-handers into movie theaters are the specialty of Wiley Paden, member of the CIO Screen Publishers Guild, N. Y. City. The 45-year-old "unusual job holder" is the head of Loew's Art Dept., and creates displays for the N. Y. circuit as well as national ad campaigns for Loew's Theaters. (Top) He works on a water color. (Bottom) He checks a display that someone else has just hung. (Black Star photos.)

2 Paden gives a last look at posters for "Weekend at the Waldorf" (top). He designs them and, with the help of assistants, does the finished drawing and lettering. (Below) He looks at the hundreds of photos and scores of releases that, every day, cross his desk and give him display ideas. Paden created the internationally known "It's True" newspaper cartoons, consisting of odd facts about the stars, and other motion picture items.

Tomorrow's Citizens By Rose H. Alschuler

PETS OR NO PETS?

Anyone who has cared for his own cat or dog can understand the meaning and joy of such an experience to a child. Many of us unfortunately missed that experience and now find it difficult to allow our children to have pets. Through caring for animals, children develop a capacity for tenderness and a healthy respect for the ways of nature. Consideration and responsibility increase. Perhaps even more important is the wordless but deeply satisfying affection that children and their pets offer one another. A dog's affection is something a fellow can depend on—and he knows it. Kittens too are satisfying pets.

Lib. of Congress—Rothstein for FSA Copyright, 1946, CIO News.

RATIONING, NOT HOOVER, WOULD AID EUROPE

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

MOST American housewives feel guilty today. They feel guilty because we have such plenty in this country while so many of our allies are close to starvation.

Most organizations of women have been urging the government to do more to share our food supplies for a long time. They urged continuation of rationing in order to build up stockpiles of food to send abroad. But rationing was abandoned in spite of their vigorous protests.

World-wide shortages of essential foods have developed. And what does our government do? They appeal to us to eat less and not to waste food. They tell the millers to use more of the wheat in making flour so that our bread will be yellow rather than white. They set up an emergency food committee with Herbert Hoover as honorary chairman.

On the first two points we say emphatically, it isn't enough. We all have our ration books because we need our sugar stamps. There's a whole page of green stamps that hasn't been touched. There are a lot of stamps marked spare. Why not at least ration flour, fats and oils?

Voluntary means just won't do the job. Studies of wheatless days in the last war show that people used as much wheat as ever during that period. They just ate more on days that were not wheatless.

How can we ever face the women of Europe who lived through the horror of four, five and six years of war, barbarous fascist domination, of courageous participation in the underground, unless we get our government to do the most that is possible to relieve their hunger now?

We are willing to eat less, to eliminate waste in our kitchens and at our tables, to do all we as individuals can to cut down on our food buying. We shall do those things, but we want the assurance that our saving will help our sisters overseas, not just mean more for some unscrupulous individual or restaurant or baker.

Rationing would make it possible also for the government to set aside large quantities of the basic foods needed for relief and still assure fair distribution of the short supply remaining for American consumers. Expanded victory gardens and home canning will help. All the things we can do as individuals will help.

Only why, we can't help asking, why do we have to do them on the suggestion of a committee headed by Herbert Hoover? They call him an honorary chairman, but he's busy working at the job.

We remember he used food as a tool of reaction after World War I. We remember the starvation days of Hoover's presidency in 1930, 31 and 32. We know that Hoover advocates removing food price control power from OPA.

Let's make our voices heard. Let's tell President Truman once again that we want to help feed our allies. But let's ask him for a real program of allocation and rationing, let's protest the reappearance of Herbert Hoover.

NO BACK SEATS FOR AMERICAN COOKS!

Prepared by Nutrition Service, D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross

DON'T believe it when they tell you Americans aren't good cooks! Think of the world's best dishes and see how many of them are American.

We have developed among other things apple pie, fried chicken, strawberry shortcake, corn bread, hamburgers, candied sweet potatoes, and last but not least—a good cup of coffee.

Add to these the use we have of some of the good recipes brought here from all over the world. For example, English Roast Beef, French-fried potatoes, Italian spaghetti and ice cream, Scandinavian meat balls, Dutch cole slaw, Russian bortsch, Spanish tomato sauce, Mexican chili, Persian pilaf, Indian curry, Irish stew.

Americans have developed and enhanced natural flavors. We do not specialize in "making do" or "covering up." We constantly demand better varieties and greater quantities of meat, poultry, fruits, vegetables. To preserve flavors and add to our food variety we have developed food shipping facilities, home refrigeration and food packaging beyond the dreams of the rest of the world. This helps to make our meals so uniformly good that a traveler who knocked on any door would eat well much of the time.

Here are some outstanding American food triumphs from all sections. Do you know them?

NEW ENGLAND: Baked beans, brown bread, codfish cakes, clam chowder.

SOUTH: Fried chicken, hominy grits, black-eyed peas, turnip greens, cornbread, Virginia ham, beaten biscuit.

SOUTHWEST: The "Lone Star State," good beefsteak; the Southwest, some adopted Mexican dishes: hot tamales, chili, tortilla.

CALIFORNIA: Famous for her citrus fruits and vegetables served as salads for the first course.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

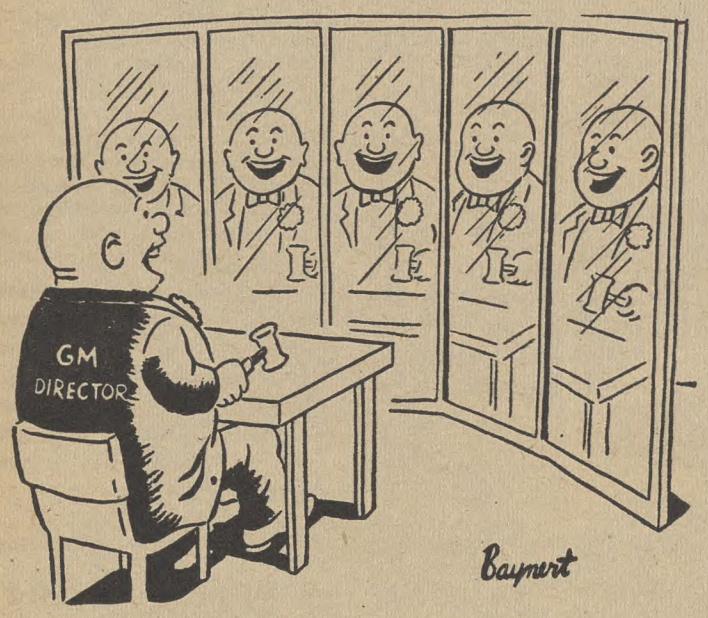
L.J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS
UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1639-49 W. Evergreen Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

SOLD EVERYWHERE

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP
PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

44 Years of Know-how
in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois
20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

Gags and Grins From The Labor Press



"All in favor of another little bonus, say ME!"
—Ammunition, UAW-CIO.

—The Advance.

"The heck he does—the dirty scab!"
—The Union.

EDUCATION NOTES

Regional Conference

The Natl. CIO Dept. of Research & Education will hold a regional conference Mar. 29-30 at the Commodore Hotel, New York City, announces Asst. Director of Education George Guernsey.

Subjects for discussion the first day include the New Jersey community support of strikers in which a group from Bloomfield will take part at the morning session and educational strike techniques at the afternoon meeting. At a dinner meeting Friday evening, Pres. E. E. Day of Cornell University will speak on university and labor extension services.

Saturday morning will be devoted to a discussion of political action and education with Palmer Weber of CIO-PAC as main speaker and Clifford McAvoy, UE legislative representative, as chairman. Larry Rogin, Textile Workers education director will be chairman of the discussion Saturday afternoon on full-time schools and labor institutes.

Appeal to Farmers

A number of CIO unions have been issuing leaflets during the current wage struggles aimed at explaining labor's demands to farmers and showing that the two groups have common interests.

Among these is one just issued by the CIO Farm Equipment Workers, 188 W. Randolph St., Chicago 1, which contains "an important message to farmers from the men and women who make your farm implements." A chart based on government figures shows that direct labor costs are next to the lowest item. A truck type tractor, for example, has a material cost of $42.10, a dealer's margin of $23.80, and a direct labor cost of $6.50.

The CIO Packinghouse Workers, 205 W. Wacker Drive, Chicago 6, also recently issued a leaflet in the form of a four-page "Letter to Farmers," explaining the meat packing workers' case.

Several CIO groups have been distributing their own editions of the pamphlet "Letters to Dad" published by the Natl. CIO Dept. of Research and Education, and others have reprinted it in their union papers.

The Minnesota CIO-PAC and the Independent Voters of Minnesota both have taken special editions of the same pamphlet for distribution among the farmers of their state, and the Natl. Farmers Union plans to run it serially this spring in the NFU paper.

Union Counseling

An article on the CIO's new union counseling service, written by Leo Perlis, director of the CIO Community Services Committee, is feature in the January-February issue of Channels, published by the Natl. Publicity Council for Health & Welfare Service, N. Y. Copies may be obtained by writing to the CIO-CS, 1776 Broadway, N. Y. 19, N.Y.

Book Review

HUBERMAN TELLS SIMPLE TRUTHS ABOUT UNIONS

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

LEO Huberman's new book, The Truth about Unions" is a brief, unpretentious and important contribution to labor literature which fills a big need. It is simple as a primer, yet packed with information and convincing arguments aimed to enlighten both the general public and union members who don't know as much about unions as they should.

In it can be found straightforward, concise answers to all the smears and smart cracks used by Westbrook Pegler and lesser lights of the labor-baiting brotherhood to confuse and mislead the public.

After explaining the useful and important role unions play in American life, and showing how they function by taking a new member through the process of joining and becoming active in a local of the CIO United Steelworkers, Huberman goes into such controversial subjects as strikes, jurisdictional disputes, the closed shop, featherbedding and racketeering, explaining things about them that the public is seldom told.

The book contains nine full and half-page original charts by Harold Price which aim to get away from the dull conventional type. Some of them are excellent, particularly the two which show what happens when a worker joins a union and what happens to the dues dollar.

With his gift of simple, persuasive writing, Huberman is a modern pamphleteer qualified to follow in the steps of Tom Paine, whose flaming defense of the rights of man in the 18th century is one of America's glorious traditions. Let's hope he will write more books and pamphlets which, like "The Truth about Unions" will tell the American public simple truths they need to know to counteract the evil propaganda of greedy interests.

As a quote from CIO Pres. Philip Murray on the cover says, the book "should be read by every worker in the U. S."

The Truth about Unions by Leo Huberman; Pamphlet Press, Reynal & Hitchcock; 80 West 40th St., N. Y. 18, N. Y. Paper-covered edition, 87 pages, $1.

* * *

Editors' Workshop

A training program for rank and file local union editors and staff members of both mimeographed and printed papers has been announced by Julius Schatz, education committee chairman of the Greater N. Y. CIO Council.

Scheduled to start the middle of March, the project includes two workshops, one for each type of paper. Courses will be practical working session, directed by professional editors from various unions.

For further information write to the N. Y. CIO Council, 1133 Broadway, N. Y.10, N. Y.

$12,500 to Strike Relief

The American Federation of Hosiery Workers voted at its recent convention to donate $12,500 to the Natl. CIO strike relief fund. The Natl. Executive Board was authorized to increase the amount if it found that more was needed.

Steward's Manual

CIO shop stewards, the trouble-shooters of local unions, can now keep in their pockets, ready for any emergency, a handy manual issued by the Natl. CIO Dept. of Research & Education.

This small, 48-page illustrated pamphlet is full of vital information essential for a steward or committeeman or shop chairman, or whatever name he goes by, to have at his fingertips. It starts off with a morale booster which should ease, or at least console, the steward for the headaches it may be his lot to bear. He is called the cornerstone of the local, the key man upon whom hangs the success or failure of collective bargaining in the plant, the guy who can give the contract life or turn it into a dud.

Background facts about the CIO; the know-how of collective bargaining; how to recognize and handle a grievance; the importance of keeping records and getting facts straight, are among the subjects discussed. At the back of the pamphlet is a steward's dictionary which gives short definitions for the main terms the steward may need to know, from "arbitration" and "bargaining unit" to "union shop" and "workmen's compensation."

Several CIO internationals including the Rubber Workers, Paperworkers and Packinghouse Workers have issued their own special editions of this CIO steward's manual with their own cover and introduction, and other unions may wish to do the same.

The original CIO edition may be ordered from the Natl. CIO, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6. D. C. Price, 15c a copy; 100 for $12:50; 1,000 for $100.

* * *

Fighting Prejudice

Among the CIO unions that take the fight against discrimination seriously is Local 65, Wholesale & Warehouse Workers, 13 Astor Pl. N. Y. 3, N. Y. In celebration of Negro History Week, the union published a 31-page illustrated pamphlet, "Local 65 Fights Discrimination," which gives a vivid story of the union's crusage against intolerance, including a description of how seven specific cases were handled.

With Red Cross

Miss E. Lorene Newton, former director of the UAW-CIO Local 600 chorus of the Ford Motor Co. and a music teacher with broad community interests, has arrived in the Southwest Pacific to serve the armed forces there as an American Red Cross staff assistant.

65c WAGE RADIO SHOW

A 15-minute transcription on the 65-75c minimum wage bill has just been produced by the CIO Political Action Committee.

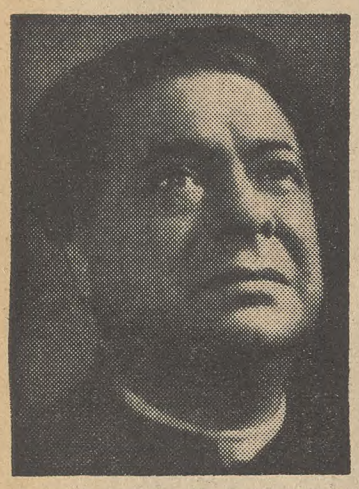
The show features Gregory Peck, "Spellbound" star, and a Hollywood cast in a dramatization with music of testimony by witnesses before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

Records, at $15 each, are available at Natl. PAC Hdq., 205 E. 42nd St., N. Y. 17, N.Y.

1 Pina is the fiancee of an underground printer, Francesco. Police are hunting him, and his friend Manfredi, head of the underground. The Nazis arrive, and all must go to the courtyard. The two men try to escape.

2 They fail. Francesco somehow gets away. Pina is killed. But Manfredi and the neighborhood priest are held. They try to torture Manfredi, first psychologically, and then physically, but he does not break.

3 Don Pietro, the ideological opposite of Manfredi, has also promised not to talk. The Nazis shoot him. He dies saying: "It is not difficult to die well. It is only difficult to live right."



4 Don Pietro weeps for his Manfredi. The torture inflicted on the priest was to watch what the Nazis did to Manfredi.

LOCALE: ITALY

TWO top notch films about the struggle for Italy have hit the billboards in the last week. One was produced in Italy, nearly the day after the city of Rome was freed, and it is called "Open City." The other is a Hollywood production, about the landing at Salerno Beach by the Americans, and one group of infantrymen, 53 in all, who have an assignment to take a farmhouse, and blow a bridge, and what happened in the few hours that they took "A Walk In The Sun."

Both films are tremendous in their humanity, their simplicity, their conversation and their drama.

Movies Worth Seeing

The Italian film was born of the struggle against fascism. It is raw with the wounds of the people. It is documentary in character, and yet has all the drama of a well-rounded work of art.

The story is simple. By accident, the police have got a photograph of the leader of the anti-fascist underground. The Rome chief of police together with the Gestapo chief divide the city into eight districts and begin a finetooth combing of the city. As they come to Manfredi's home, he escapes by the rooftop, and goes to the home of another member of the group.

His co-underground fighter, Francesco, a printer, is not at home, but Manfredi makes the acquaintance of his fiancee Pina, Anna Magnani, an actress of intense drama and realism. She helps him. Manfredi is invited to her wedding to Francesco on the following day. She sends her son by a previous marriage to bring the neighborhood priest Don Pietro to help Manfredi.

Don Pietro is also a worker in the underground. He is a devoutly religious man.

From this moment forward, the fates of Manfredi and Don Pietro are linked. The Nazis catch up with them, through the betrayal of Manfredi by his sweetheart.

Manfredi and Don Pietro, together in their prison cell, pledge each other that they will not talk, that they will not divulge anything to the Nazis. Hardly have they made that pledge when the Gestapo chief has them before him for interrogation. He tries to separate them psychologically. First he asks Don Pietro, how can he, a priest, a religious man, walk hand in hand with Manfredi. Manfredi who fought in Spain. Manfredi who was an atheist, who was an enemy of religion.

Don Pietro answers simply: "The ways of God are many."

Next comes torture. The anguished eyes of the priest must watch Manfredi go through a living purgatory. He screams like a beast, under torture by fire, by lead, by whip, by every device the Gestapo can think of. But Manfredi does not talk, and neither does Don Pietro. Manfredi dies. The next day Don Pietro is shot as a traitor with the words on his lips: "It is not difficult to die well. It is difficult to live right."

ALL THROUGH the anguish of "The Open City," the people murmur, "when will the Americans come?" They were fighting without weapons.

A "Walk In The Sun," tells about the American landing at Salerno Beach.

There are 53 men in the platoon assigned "to take a farmhouse, blow a bridge." In that walk you get to learn a lot about them. Their simple hopes, their lives, why they were fighting.

It's the story of Rivera, an Italian-American who likes opera and would like a wife and kids; of Friedman, a lathe operator, and amateur champion boxer from N. Y. City; of Windy, a minister's son who takes long walks alone just to think; of Sgt. Ward, a good farmer who knows his soil; of McWilliams, first aid man, slow, southern, dependable; of Archimbeau, platoon scout and prophet—talks a lot; of Tranella, who speaks two languages—Italian and Brooklyn. It's the story of these and a lot of others who came across the sea to sunny Italy and took "A Little Walk In The Sun."

To some it was their last walk.

HELEN KAY.

5 Marina is the betrayer. She is the actress sweetheart of Manfredi and gives him away in her search for dope.

NEW FILMS

THE OUTLAW with Jane Russell is long, corny and sexy. The long awaited Howard Hughes production was only recently previewed by the N. Y. critics. It had been put on the shelf due to a Hayes office ban. Jane Russell is chesty enough to give the picture a long run.

SCARLET STREET with Edward G. Robinson and Joan Bennett is another journey into sordidness. At first banned by the N. Y. Board of Censors, it was finally released. It has a new twist on the "crime does not pay" angle, but conscience and not society gives the pay off.

THE SPIRAL STAIRCASE with Dorothy McGuire as a mute. She is pursued by a strangler who believes that women should be perfect. Ethel Barrymore assists ably in a rather grisly atmosphere.

ADVENTURE which brings Clark Gable and Greer Garson together in a romance about a librarian and a sailor. The girls are all sore, 'cause Garson's got him.

6 While all this goes on in Rome, the Americans are taking a "Walk In The Sun" at Salerno Beach. Dana Andrews is the Sergeant who makes them come through with their assignment, "blow a bridge, and take a farmhouse."

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and scenes mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

DENOUNCED AS A UNION BUSTER BY HIS BROTHER JIM, MICKEY STARTS A FIGHT AT THE ROTOR PLANT GATE. WHEN THE POLICE ARRIVE JIM IS POINTED OUT FOR SPECIAL ATTENTION--

GET THAT GUY!

THIS HAS A FUNNY SMELL, JIM..

YOU CAN SAY THAT AGAIN. WHAT'S THE CHARGE, OFFICER?

SHUT UP! YOU'LL FIND OUT SOON ENOUGH. GET GOING!

DEM GUYS FELL FOR IT LIKE A TON OF BRICKS!

C'MON, MR. DENTON'S EXPECTING US AT HIS OFFICE!

I SAW IT ALL. IT'S JUST WHAT I WANTED TO HAPPEN! FINE JOB, MICKEY. PITY YOUR BROTHER ISN'T AS SMART AS YOU.

--MEANWHILE JIM AND WOODY ARE BROUGHT TO COURT.

WHAT'S THE CHARGE?

DISORDERLY CONDUCT. THIS MAN ATTACKED A WAR VETERAN IN FRONT OF MY CLIENT'S PLANT-- THE ROTOR CONSTRUCTION COMPANY.

YOUR HONOR-- THIS IS AN EFFORT TO FRAME MY CLIENT! THE CHARGES ARE PREPOSTEROUS AND--- WHO'S PRESSING THE CHARGE?

YOUR HONOR, HIS OWN BROTHER, MICHAEL BARRY, IS THE VETERAN HE ATTACKED. HE'LL PRESS THE CHARGE.

THE TRIAL WILL BE HELD NEXT WEDNESDAY. DEFENDANTS RELEASED IN THEIR LAWYER'S CUSTODY. THAT'S ALL.

THAT RIOT WAS A PUT-UP JOB. DID YOU NOTICE HOW QUICKLY THE POLICE CAME? WHAT'S OLD MAN DENTON TRYING TO DO?

IT'S PART OF THE CAMPAIGN TO SMASH UNIONS...

63

EXTRA! UNION RIOT AT ROTOR! EXTRA!

AND THEY LOST NO TIME SPLASHING THE NEWS ON THE FRONT PAGES!

DAILY INFORMER

LABOR AGITATORS ATTACK VET

UNION MEN RIOT AT ROTOR PLANT. MR. DENTON, PLANT OWNER, PRAISES HEROIC WAR VETERAN. SAYS HE WILL KEEP PLANT CLOSED TILL SUCH UN-AMERICAN OUTRAGES CEASE.

Produced by the ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

Copyright 1946 by the CIO NEWS

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Round Two, And More To Come

Round two in the fight against inflation and depression was lost this week, when the now standard GOP-polltax Democrat coalition gutted the emergency housing bill (HR 4761) by killing price ceilings and subsidies to hold costs down.

Round one similarly went to the same gang last week when the Senate voted to cut OPA's appropriation in half, thus crippling enforcement of controls between now and June 30.

In both votes, last-minute Administration pressure failed to produce results, and the inflation lobby dominated Congress.

Taken singly or together, the two votes present an alarming picture of what can happen, not only to price control and housing, but to every other issue of concern to the people—unless quick, positive and widespread action is taken by us.

The main lobbying agencies behind these two votes are the Natl, Assn. of Manufacturers and the Natl. Assn. of Real Estate Boards. Dozens of others—such as the dry goods people, the food monopoly concerns, etc., go along with them, but these are the two main ones. "Economic theory" for the job is supplied by the Committee for Economic Development, a big business agency pure and simple.

Best evidence of the effectiveness of the real estate lobby is the job on the housing vote. A dozen or so Congressmen testified to this during the debate. Said Rep. Savage (D. Wash):

"They (real estate agents) have appeared before our committees, they have had their associates send wires from our districts. They have been in our offices. Every member here knows it has been going on and it does no good to deny it."

The NAM is the most brazen of the lot, spending an estimated $900,000 on full page ads calling for outright repeal of price control.

Much of this pressure is phony, using faked names, non-existent addresses, etc. Replying to a series of wires on the housing bill, Rep. Koppelman (D. Conn.) found that 75% of the addresses given in the wires did not exist.

Phony or not, the lobby has been successful in gutting the housing bill, can be successful on price control.

Our answer to this must be literally thousands of wires, letters, phone calls—and above all:

A REAL DRIVE TO REGISTER SO WE CAN VOTE.

'Theory' of Inflation

Principal "theoretical" statement of the pro-inflation crowd in its fight against price control appeared this week in the N. Y. Journal of Commerce, based on a series of recommendations of the Committee for Economic Development.

The recommendation, while doing a smoother job than the NAM or some of the more blatant pressure agencies, wraps up a scheme for amending price control that would turn it over completely to big business. Here is a summary of the proposals as reported in the Journal of Commerce:

1. Change the present base period used by OPA for figuring profits from 1936-39 to 1936-40, because '36-39 is "unfair."

Note: profits were starting their big war-order jump in '40, and using this figure shoots the average up.

2. Or let base period stay at '36-39 but consider average profits after taxes only, not before.

Note: taxes are normally considered in all business figuring on profits. CED's change would make taxes part of costs in pricing. (Have your cake and eat it too.)

3. Extend "self-pricing" by manufacturers, producers, etc., with OPA review after the event.

Note: modern fire - fighting stresses prevention, does not rely solely on calling out the fire engines—months after the fire.

4. Base prices on "actual costs," not forecasts of costs.

Note: all business forecasts costs, does not wait until after the article is produced in quantity. This would also jack up prices on "low-cost" products, many of which are normally produced at a loss or extremely small margin.

5. OPA should be required to look "vigorously and positively" for items from which to lift ceilings.

Note: this was done a while back on oranges. They promptly went up 100%. Ceilings had to be put back quick.

6. Keep '36-39 base period but arbitrarily raise "average" by 33%.

Note: this has the beauty of simplicity. It is merely a 33% steal formula. Profits have already more than doubled since 1939.

This is the "respectable" big business idea of what to do with price control.

Watch out for it. It's infinitely more dangerous than the outright repeal line.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Housing HR 4761	Originally designed to carry out Wyatt plan for 2,700,000 houses by '47. Had price ceilings, subsidies as necessary to success of plan.	GOP-Southern Democrat alliance has gutted bill by killing ceilings, subsidies. Real estate lobby responsible. Now to Senate.	Wire Senators to pass HR 4761 as originally written; emphasize need for ceilings, subsidies.
Price control HR 5270	Renews price control, OPA to June, 1947. Has no trick amendment—so far. Senate has halved needed appropriation for OPA.	House action on housing (above) is alarming sign for renewal. Trick amendments will be offered by the score. NAM lobby most active on this. CIO to testify soon.	Keep demanding early passage; no amendments; full funds for OPA; no riders. Get community action going.
65c wage S 1349	Raises present 40c minimum to 65c; extends coverage to food, maritime, telegraph and retail workers.	Senate Labor Committee report favors 65c rate by 12-6. Minority for 55c rate, less coverage. Sens. Ball (R. Minn.), Ellender (D. La.) leading minority.	Tell Senators to support majority report; reject 55c rate.
Case HR 5262	Imposes cooling-off, forced arbitration, jail sentences, permanent blacklist, injunctions for strikes or for supporting strikes.	Passed House. Senate Labor Committee has rejected it, will report "some kind" of bill. Danger is in amendments from Senate floor and in conference.	Wire Senators to reject Case bill, oppose Labor Committee version and all restrictive bills.
Anti-labor bills	Others in this series include Ball-Hatch (S 1171); Lea (HR 5117), Ellender (S 1661), etc.	Will be brought up as floor amendments to Labor Committee bill (above).	Wire Senators to oppose all.

MAKE A DATE WITH YOUR CONGRESSMAN—REGISTER NOW!

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

WAGE FLOOR: The long-awaited report of the Senate Labor Committee on the 65c wage bill (S 1349) came out this week with a 12-6 vote for the full rate and coverage. Early floor action is expected.

The bill as reported raises the rate from 40 to 65c now, to 70c in two years and 75c in four. Coverage is extended to workers in food processing, fish packing, retail, maritime and other industries previously exempt.

A minority report signed by Sens. Ellender (D. La.), Fulbright (D. Ark.), Ball (R. Minn.), Taft (R. O.), Donnell (R. Mo.) and Smith (R. N.J.) recommended only 55c, sharp restrictions on coverage.

Wire Senators to support S 1349 at full 65c rate, complete coverage.

SOCIAL SECURITY: Three years after the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill was introduced and one year after a special committee was set up to study the subject, social security is on deck in the House.

CIO testimony favoring the W-M-D bill was presented this week by Van A. Bittner, assistant to the president of the CIO Social Security Committee. (See story, page 7.)

Social Security has not been revised or improved for the past seven years. It is more than time for changes.

SEDITION: Remember the sedition trials of last year, which ended in a mistrial of about 27 alleged seditionists and native fascists?

New evidence has been brought out of Germany by Prosecutor Rogge showing that Nazi money was paid to a number of the defendants and other U. S. fascist agents.

According to Rogge, Mrs. Dilling of the "Red Network" got $10,500, Lawrence Dennis, "highbrow" fascist, got $18,800, and others still more. Rogge is asking a 30-day postponement of a new mass trial to sift this new material.

GUIDEPOSTS: . . . rumor is Churchill got a dozen wires congratulating him on Fulton, Mo., speech . . . all signed W. R. Hearst. . . . Truman got one too, congratulating him on performance as MC at the affair. . . . Congress wants to "streamline" itself while keeping seniority rule and Rules Committee . . . best streamlining possible is labor political action to rid Congress of reactionaries. . . . U. S. scientists are in revolt against gags, FBI and Army persecution under guise of atomic "security" . . .

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 12

Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS
$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

March 18, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

NEW CIO GAINS $621.2 MILLION MORE A YEAR

	WORKERS	WAGE GAINS
Previous (Partial) Report	1,450,800	$500.0 Million
General Motors (SEE PAGE 2)	200,000	77.0 "
General Electric (")	100,000	39.0 "
Packard (")	10,000	3.7 "
Nash-Kelvinator (")	4,000	1.5 "
TOTAL (MAJOR GAINS ONLY)	1,764,800	$621.2 Million

Mass demonstrations like this one last week at Newark, N. J. courthouse helped CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers mobilize public support for their strike against General Electric. The workers were protesting arrest of five strike leaders for mass picketing.

GM, PACKARD, NASH VICTORIES

THE General Motors strike—longest in the history of the auto industry — ended March 13 in an outstanding victory for the 200,000 UAW strikers, bringing them wage increases estimated at almost $77 million annually.

As this week closed other negotiations were being concluded throughout the industry with sizeable increases for UAW members. An 18½c hourly raise was won by 10,000 Packard workers in a tentative agreement, and at Nash-Kelvinator, Grand Rapids, Mich., more than 4,000 workers obtained a wage boost of 10c an hour retroactive to Feb. 11, giving them an hourly raise of 21c since last August.

Natl. UAW Ford Director Leonard announced that the new Ford contract would be submitted to the membership for ratification April 1.

Hailing the successful conclusion of the GM strike by the world's largest union against the world's largest corporation, UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas, with Vice-Pres. Walter P. Reuther and Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes, declared the settlement "gives GM workers the largest wage increase in the industry and an improved and strengthened contract."

They asserted that the settlement "surpasses the economic and the non-economic terms recommended by President Truman and the fact-finding board."

The UAW leaders pointed out that with removal of inequities, the agreement "meets the 19½c increase recommended by President Truman." The basic wage increase was 18½c an hour.

"In addition to these two provisions," they said, "there are other economic clauses—improved vacation pay, which alone amounts to approximately $5 million a year: improved overtime rates for seven-day continuous operations, and equal pay for women—which bring the total average hourly increase well above 19½c."

Besides bringing these pay benefits to workers in 92 plants in 50 cities, the new contract has several improvements which management fought bitterly, including maintenance of membership with a new provision for check-off of dues and assesments, and preference in transfers to workers with the greatest seniority. These victories were underscored in the UAW leaders' statement which declared:

"The union has blocked the corporation's proposal to return to the 1942 agreement which provided that transfers are to be the sole responsibility of management.

"We have won a new union security provision which amounts to a long step forward toward the union shop. The contract, as proposed, now provides for a check-off of dues and general assessments irrevocable for the life of the agreement."

What Thomas, Reuther and Addes termed "the most advanced and liberal vacation-pay agreement in history" provides that employes with one to three years' seniority receive 2% of gross annual earnings; those with three to five years' seniority receive 3%, and those with five years and more, 4½%.

Another provision is that double time will be paid for the seventh consecutive day of work and for legal holidays.

The UAW leaders declared the contract "a victory for the whole American people" because "a price increase in GM products cannot be justified on the basis of the flat increase won in hourly rates and other economic gains included in the proposed strike settlement."

57 DAYS AT GE—AND WORTH IT

IT WAS worth waiting 57 days for the strike victory of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers at General Electric. As a result of the agreement negotiated this week, an additional three quarters of a million dollars a week will flow into the payroll envelopes of GE's 100,000 production employes throughout the country.

The wage gain, which will be substantial ammunition for GE workers in the increasingly difficult job of feeding their families, is almost double the company's original offer. As finally settled, the strike produced an 18½c an hour raise. The company had suggested a dime an hour for all workers making less than a dollar an hour and 10 per cent for those making over that figure.

The 57-day walkout came to a speedy end after the company bought large advertisements in metropolitan newspapers to state its position. GE claimed it was ready, willing and able to negotiate a pay raise "in line with the new national wage pattern."

"That's news to us," UE leaders said in effect, since the company had never indicated in the bargaining sessions that it was willing to pay the 18½c raise negotiated by CIO unions in a brace of the nation's major industries.

UE President Albert J. Fitzgerald and Joseph Dermody, union coordinator of locals in the GE plants, hailed the pact as a major victory and predicted it would be speedily ratified by the membership.

The agreement, in addition to lifting the GE scale, raised pay retroactively for the two weeks ending January 15, the day the walkout was called.

The UE victory wasn't handed out on a silver platter. During the two-month walkout, union members were subjected to bitter police attacks while they engaged in peaceful mass picketing around the company plants at Schenectady, N. Y., Philadelphia and Bloomfield, N. J. GE successfully obtained injunctions against normal union picketing activities at those plants in those cities and in half a dozen others throughout the country.

Mounted cops rode into picket lines and wielded clubs in scenes reminiscent of pre-Wagner Act days.

While the GE strike has been settled, negotiations are still in progress for a settlement of the walkout at Westinghouse Electric.

Board Report

CIO WAGE GAINS SPUR SOUTHERN ORGANIZING DRIVE

"IN 1932, many workers in industrial plants were making $1.50 a day for ten hours of work. In 1946, CIO unions have won that amount as pay raises per day for hundreds of thousands of members."

In these words Pres. Philip Murray emphasized to the CIO Executive Board, meeting in Washington on March 15-16, the tremendous gains for industrial workers and for the nation achieved by CIO affiliates during the past several weeks.

Leaders of a dozen different unions testified during the course of the two-day meeting concerning the tremendous wage gains won for their membership in plants large and small.

But not content to rest on past laurels, the CIO leaders emphasized as their major target during the next several months the organization of low-paid, unorganized workers in the southern states. A million dollar fund, contributed or pledged by the CIO's affiliated unions, will finance the campaign, which is expected to start within the next six weeks under the direction of Van. A. Bittner, assistant to the president of the steel union and a veteran hand at organizational campaigns.

The southern drive will be conducted as a CIO enterprise, with the organizers directly responsible to the national organization.

As locals are established, they will be turned over to the international union in each industry, and the CIO organizing staff will turn their attentions to new, unorganized spheres.

The unionization of some million and a half workers is foreseen during the year, thanks to the vigor with which CIO will prosecute the drive and the unparalleled gains it has won for American labor during the past several months.

Principal targets will be the textile, rubber, furniture, clothing and chemical industries, in which there are large non-union "pockets" still existing. The drive will also aim to bring union benefits to smaller numbers of unorganized workers in the packing, steel, oil and miscellaneous sections of the southern economy.

Throughout the two-day board meeting, President Murray emphasized that CIO is in the midst of completing a record-breaking series of wage boosts that serve as a beacon light to all unorganized workers. He said that some unofficial predictions claim the net gains established by the CIO affiliates will run as high as ten billion dollars a year in increased purchasing power for all the people employed in American industry.

With wage rates set at the highest level in history, the southern drive has become even more important, Murray said. It will not only bring comparable benefits to the southern workers, but will protect the northern, unionized workers from low-pay competition in open-shop areas.

Named as associates of Bittner on the southern organizing committee were Sherman Dalrymple, former head of the Rubber Workers, who will serve as secretary-treasurer; Vice-Pres. George Baldanzi of the Textile Workers, as assistant director, plus two other assistants yet to be named; Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, to fill the same job on the committee; and Richard Bauer of the CIO staff to serve as assistant secretary-treasurer.

An advisory committee was also named. Its members are CIO Vice-Pres. Allan S. Haywood, chairman; Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey; Jacob Potofsky of the Clothing Workers; Albert J. Fitzgerald of the Electrical Workers; Charles Lanning of the Rubber Workers; Pietro Lucchi of the Fur & Leather Workers; R. J. Thomas of the Auto Workers; and David J. McDonald of the Steelworkers.

While the bulk of the meeting was devoted to the present wage and organizing situation, the Board also passed a number of resolutions on important current issues. Actions included:

1. Calling upon local and national Political Action Committees to "intensify and increase their efforts" in behalf of good candidates in the coming primaries and elections, and asking that all union members contribute at least one dollar to the PAC campaign.

2. Joining with the World Federation of Trade Unions in denouncing Franco's fascist regime in Spain, and calling upon the U. S. to sever diplomatic relations with that nation.

3. Urging Senate adoption of a 65c minimum wage, while calling for the defeat of the Case bill and other anti-labor bills now in Congress.

4. Demanding abolition of the poll tax.

(Continued on Page 15)

VICTORY IN DETROIT

By PATRICIA BRONTE

QUIETLY, as it had begun, the longest strike in the history of the auto industry came to an end in Detroit on the 113th day.

There was no planned, general demonstration, but some small, spontaneous celebrations.

On the UAW picket lines there was just a pat on the back and the "thank heaven, it's over" smile of weary union shock troops who had done what they had to do, and did it well.

George Lyons, 41-year-old Ternstedt polisher, said exultantly:

"We met a union-busting threat that was facing us for years, and we won. We now feel more strongly than ever that unions will be a recognized and accepted part of a democratic nation."

Mildred I. Szur, union counsellor, declared:

"Our efforts haven't been in vain. I'm not going to miss the 113 days of lost pay because of the gains made. What we've lost is little enough payment for the improved wages and working conditions this victory has guaranteed."

The strike victory was as great as that won in the organizational days of 1937, according to polisher Harry Elliott:

"Then we were spearheading a drive to establish unionism in the auto industry. We won and our victory eradicated Detroit as the citadel of the open shop. This time we were spearheading another vital fight, a fight to establish decent wages and working conditions in the industry.

"Our victory was the victory of every auto worker."

It was last Nov. 21 that 200,000 UAW workers went on strike against GM.

When negotiations in the billion-dollar strike began, the union demanded a substantial rise in hourly wage rates without any increase in the price of cars.

Buttons which read "We Fight Today for a Better World Tomorrow — Higher Wages, No Price Increase" were worn by hundreds of thousands of CIO and many AFL workers.

Last Dec. 14, about the time President Truman was appointing his fact-finding board in an effort to speed up settlement, supporters of the hard-pressed strikers were collecting funds, food and clothing for the workers' families.

Volunteers drove trucks in search of day-old bread, leftover food and canned goods to be turned over to the daily more destitute strikers.

Morale remained high during the exhausting three and one-half months, however, and impromptu "amateur nights" and union hall entertainment attracted the public's attention.

James F. Dewey, special Federal mediator, arrived in Detroit Jan. 30, determined to "ride the strike to a finish." He had a long, hard gallop ahead.

As higher prices were granted the manufacturers, the going got rougher for the GM strikers, despite gigantic, fund-raising rallies and contributions averaging more than $90,000 a week.

City and strike welfare committees assumed staggering obligations of food, clothing, rent and medical expenses. More and more often strikers brought their children to walk the three-hour picket-line stint—so they could be fed by the soup kitchens.

Two days before the all-night session which resulted in the final peace, $100,000 was received from the CIO Steelworkers and $100,000 from the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

One strike-unit chairman, Cal Fletcher, praised the aid GM workers received from other auto workers and the rest of organized labor.

"We won, and we did the job through cooperation given us from all fronts," Fletcher said.

1 Picket signs and strike literature were torn and tossed into the air by GM strikers at one of the picket headquarters in Detroit this week as they received the news of the victorious end of their 113-day strike. And they have plenty reason to be glad because the new contract will bring them not only an 18½c an hour increase in wages but also adjustments of inequities, improved vacation pay, and dues and assessment check-off.

2 News of the settlement of the GM strike was broadcast by Federal Mediator James F. Dewey in Detroit at the end of 17-hour session of UAW and the corporation negotiators. Dewey entered the controversy Jan. 30 after the previous attempts to settle the strike on the basis of the recommendations of President Truman's fact-finding board had failed.

QUICK, CONGRESS, THE DDT!

Don't be lulled into any false sense of security by the overwhelming evidences of popular support for continued price control, as shown by opinion polls and statements by community leaders of all kinds.

Washington is positively crawling with lobbyists, out to wreck price control by lifting ceilings in every direction. Powerful and wealthy interests are flooding the press with their propaganda.

The campaign against effective price control is already getting results, and the danger of inflation through uncontrolled price increases is growing greater and greater.

The Twohey Analysis of Newspaper Opinion reports a steady decline in clear-cut support of price control extension in the daily press. In the last three weeks it has dropped from 36% to 32% and again to 23%. Meanwhile, 18% of the press is urging "qualifying conditions" in extending price control, 4% oppose it outright, and 55% are mixed or unclear.

The most dangerous opposition to price control comes, not from those who brazenly oppose it outright, but from those who say, "We're for it, but . . ."

The BUT is a cover for every sort of inflationary amendment to raise prices and cripple OPA, thus reducing price control to a farce.

In Congress, the enemies of price control are more strongly organized than ever before. The loose alliance of reactionary Republicans and polltax Democrats that has long operated against all progressive legislation has recently been transformed into a formal, organized group with a chairman and 150 members.

In the interests of labor and all consumers, the CIO is promoting a nationwide campaign to resist the attacks of the profiteers on price control. (See resolution, page 15).

The overwhelming popular sentiment for price control must be translated immediately into an overwhelming demand on Congress to extend the Price Control Act without amendments and with adequate funds for OPA.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

IF YOU want to believe the dire predictions of H. G. Wells about mankind going berserk and madly rushing to self-destruction, consider the mighty atom.

Here is a discovery that can bring untold blessings to mankind—a tremendous new source of energy to relieve human drudgery, to revolutionize medicine, to produce countless comforts, to bring more leisure, better health, longer life and higher living standards.

Yet so far the chief results have been atom bombs to lay waste whole cities, spy scares, international ill-will, intensified competition in the arts of mass destruction, and Congressional plans for what Henry Wallace calls "military fascism."

★ ★ ★

The United States is supposed to be jealously guarding the "secret" of the atomic bomb. Yet scientists say there's no real secret, and that all other countries have to do is to perfect the industrial processes necessary for the bomb's production.

But from this false theory that we can reserve to ourselves the exclusive power to destroy the rest of the world, many dangerous conclusions are drawn.

One drawn by powers excluded from the "secret," is that the United States is implicitly threatening them with the atomic bomb and that in self-protection they must compete desperately in the production of this and even deadlier weapons.

Other conclusions, within the United States, are that atomic energy, being primarily a military "secret," must be kept under exclusively military control; that atomic scientists must be barred from talking about it even to each other, and that a military Gestapo rule must be established over universities, industrial plants and everyone even remotely connected with atomic developments.

★ ★ ★

The May-Johnson bill in the House and the Vandenberg amendment adopted by a Senate committee would establish this military control over atomic energy.

They would heighten the fears of other countries, spurring them to an atomic armament race; would cripple the development of atomic energy for peaceful purposes by gagging scientists from sharing their information, and would lead to a type of military fascism threatening all our civil liberties.

★ ★ ★

Foreseeing these dangers to our national security, welfare and liberties, the CIO executive Board long ago adopted a vigorous policy on atomic energy.

Pointing out that the developing atomic armament race is sheer madness, and that in any case the United States cannot long retain its alleged "secrets," the CIO called for suitable international machinery to bring atomic energy under world-wide social direction.

It also declared that the beneficial industrial, scientific and medical possibilities of atomic energy are so great that they should belong to the people, and not be subjected to private monopoly or military control.

The CIO urged that the United Nations outlaw the military use of atomic energy and all production of atomic bombs, and promote the constructive peacetime development of atomic energy, with world-wide public information and education.

It urged complete public control of all atomic energy patent rights, licenses and resources in the USA by a democratic civilian agency.

★ ★ ★

Since then, the Security Council of the United Nations has voted to set up a commission on international control of atomic energy, but no action has yet been taken.

President Truman has declared in favor of civilian control of atomic energy. Bills to establish such control, introduced by Senator McMahon and Rep. Helen Douglas, have had the support of labor, farm, church and most other public-spirited organizations and citizens, including notably the atomic scientists themselves.

But, with the worsening of international relations and the current vogue of "get tough," "big-stick" talk, the mad impulse to self-destruction through military control and rivalry in atomic armaments seems to be gaining ground, as evidenced by the Vandenberg amendment and new efforts to pass the May-Johnson bill.

This matter of civilian control of atomic energy and international regulation is of prime importance to labor, as to everyone else.

The atom is a question we can't evade by saying to others, "That's your funeral." It may mean everyone's funeral.

AFTER VICTORY

With General Motors, General Electric, Packard, the rubber companies and many other corporations added to the already imposing list of CIO wage victories, and new agreements reported almost daily, the CIO may well congratulate itself on the outstanding success of labor's greatest wage movement.

In addition to the substantial wage increases, the unions have preserved and strengthened their security and won many other improvements.

But while we rejoice over these victories, and express our gratitude to the strikers who have borne the brunt of the fight for all labor, we must remember that the battle is not finally won until we have protected real wages by insuring continued and effective price control; until we have defended our unions against threatening anti-labor legislation; and until we have consolidated our gains by vastly extending union organization.

It is also timely to remember that higher wage standards are always in danger of being undermined, so long as 10,000,000 American workers in sweated industries continue to be paid less than 65c an hour.

The bill to raise minimum wages from 40c to 65c is now a first order of business before Congress. Let's get behind it with the same energy and enthusiasm CIO has shown in all its other wage movements.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, S. H. Dalrymple, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 March 18, 1946 No. 12

Picket Spanish Embassy: 150 people, mobilized by the Washington, D. C. CIO Council, paraded this week in protest against continued U. S. recognition of Franco Spain's fascist government.

PRICES ARE STILL AT WAR, OPA IS A 'MUST'—CAREY

IMMEDIATE renewal without amendments, and adequate funds for enforcement. That sums up the program of the CIO on price control, Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey told the House Banking and Currency Committee this week in testifying on HR 5270, due to hit the House floor at an early date.

"The CIO has never regarded price control as a war measure in the sense that its necessity began on Pearl Harbor Day and ended on V-J Day," Carey said. "We believe that price control was made necessary by the special economic conditions which the war brought on.

"Since those conditions still exist, it is clear that the need for price control still exists. As a matter of fact, the evidence on hand makes it clear that inflationary pressures today are greater than they were at any time during the war, and that, therefore, the need for price control is greater than ever."

There are few if any, groups in the country "willing to gamble with our economic welfare to gain additional profits" by outright repeal of price control, he added.

There are few, if any groups "so illiterate economically as to decide to end price control at this time," he said. "There are a great many organizations in this country, however, willing to gamble with our economic welfare to gain additional profits at the expense of the whole nation."

Such pressure groups as the Natl. Retail Dry Goods Assn., the Natl. Automobile Dealers, the Retail Grocers, the Wool Council, the Natl. Assn. of Real Estate Boards and others are out to add big increases to the already inflated cost of living through a series of individual dents in the price control line, he explained.

"It is this total picture that I urge this committee to keep in mind as the various proposals to weaken the price control program are laid before you," he said. "It seems to us that the answer to all of them must be a flat 'no.' There must be no further weakening amendments attached to the price control law."

After Carey testified, the various pressure groups now working for inflation trooped up to the witness table, each one with a hard-luck story of how they were suffering under price control.

All of them claimed great hardships—though every industry in the country has more than doubled its profits since the war began. All of them asked for a chance to chisel here and chisel there—and the sum totals adds up to wrecking price control.

The greatest danger to the act is through these pressure groups, and through the amendments they propose to take care of their own greed for superprofits.

TIMBER BOTTLENECK THREAT TO HOUSING PROGRAM--CIO

PROMPT government action to eliminate the lumber bottleneck, which now threatens the effectiveness of the federal housing program, and to conserve the nation's long-range timber supply, was called for this week by the CIO Woodworkers Union.

Appearing before the Senate Sub-Committee on Forestry & Agriculture, John Edelman, of the CIO Legislative Committee, presented an analysis of the lumber situation prepared for delivery by Ellery Foster, research director of the union.

Asserting that the lumber industry has undergone a "radical change" in the past few years and has emerged as an area of the economy dominated by small producing units, the union statement warned that lumber will "continue to be a problem until we have a national lumber production program comparable to the national food production program."

"Sawtimber trees are getting scarcer and scarcer," Edelman testified. "If we blunder along in the same old way, with the lumber industry destroying forests and wasting far more wood than it uses, a ten-year building program such as government and industry experts are predicting will wreck many of our remaining forests. To avoid that, current lumber production should be geared in with long-time forest conservation, in the same way that current food production is now being geared in with long-time soil conservation."

The solution of the industry's problems requires three major steps, the union pointed out:

- "Tackle the production problem of lumber and other wood products in the same manner that we now handle the farm problem . . . The farmer gets practical advice and assistance which help him to produce efficiently for this year, and, at the same time, conserve and build up his soil for the future.
- "A national forestry program must go further than the farm program. A forest can be destroyed so much quicker than the soil—and it frequently is so directly profitable to the individual to clear-cut a forest—that the police power as well as the assistance powers of the government must be exercised in order to conserve the forest.
- "Government must act to stimulate the development of plants which utilize waste wood to make substitutes for ordinary lumber. Mountains of wood waste are available for this purpose—waste which is a by-product in the production of ordinary lumber."

Henderson to Truman

FAMINE CHIEF HOOVER GETS THUMBS DOWN FROM WORLD

By C. W. FOWLER

CHOICE of Herbert Hoover as head of the Famine Emergency Committee and reliance on "voluntary rationing" to feed Europe and Asia "cannot inspire anything but mistrust, not only among our own people but also among the peoples abroad," President Truman was told this week by Donald Henderson, president of the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers Union.

Henderson's letter to Truman called for "immediate upward revision of current production goals in cereals, oils and fats" and a return to rationing of oils and fats so that "we can at least carry out our repeated promises to the allied and liberated peoples."

At the same time, Faye Stephenson and Eleanor Fowler of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, wired Sec. of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson protesting Hoover's appointment and also urging rationing to prevent hoarding by "unscrupulous individuals, restaurants and bakeries."

"Our organization has no confidence in Herbert Hoover, knowing how he used American food as a reactionary political weapon in Europe after World War I and remembering how he starved Americans during his administration," the Auxiliary leaders said.

Henderson blamed the premature ending of rationing and the government's repeated announcements of cuts in food production for the present crisis. He further called on Congress "to play its part by renewing price control without crippling amendments in order to protect consumers here and to increase supplies available to the limited purchasing power of the peoples abroad."

Meantime, food monopolists here and their agents in Congress are seeking to make still greater profits out of the misery of the European and Asian peoples by using the crisis as a lever to raise ceilings on grain, corn and other cereals.

Henderson sharply criticized President Truman's choice of Hoover to head the emergency committee, pointing out: "After World War I . . . millions of European and Asian people died of starvation because Hoover did not approve of their desires for independent, democratic action.

"Everything in Hoover's record indicates that he is prepared, if he gets the chance, to repeat that performance—this time on an even greater scale. Our own people felt the bitter effects of Hoover's reactionary policies when they went hungry during his term as President. The workers of this country do not share the confidence you apparently have in him."

Turning to "voluntary rationing," Henderson said it had been tried and had failed during the war, when it resulted "in hoarding by those who can hoard and hardship by those who cannot."

"We are convinced that the American farmer and the American housewife will accept any responsibility the government may place on them, provided they are assured it will result in increased shipments of food to needy areas," he said.

CIO RUSHES HOSPITAL BILL

THE hospital construction bill (HR 5628) now in a House subcommittee on public health "is but one of a series of measures needed to provide better medical care for the American people," Robert K. Lamb, secretary of the CIO Legislative Committee, testified in the House this week.

The bill appropriates $75,000,000 to aid in hospital construction in communities now lacking such facilities. It provides $5,000,000 for surveys of the need by states, and sets up a five-year system of building hospitals with the $75,000,000.

Praising the bill, Lamb stressed the fact that a total approach to the health program, long urged by the CIO, is an absolute necessity. Meantime, he urged the House committee to report favorably on HR 5628.

Some House members think differently. Rep. Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, is against it—on the grounds that the "U. S. is bankrupt" and can't afford $75,000,000 for health. Cannon has not objected to spending $450,000,000 to drop an atomic bomb on a sizable hunk of the Navy.

472 STEEL FIRMS SIGN

CONTRACTS with 472 steel manufacturing, processing and fabricating firms covering nearly 600,000 workers have been signed, the CIO United Steelworkers of America announced this week.

This leaves 426 unsigned, employing 160,000. Most of these will be completed this week at the rate the companies are signing, the union said. About ten days ago upwards of 300,000 workers were still on strike.

The union cited as particular evidence of the break in the "log jamb" the fact that the presidents of two of the small steel associations signed this week for their individual firms and negotiations were about complete with the president of the third association.

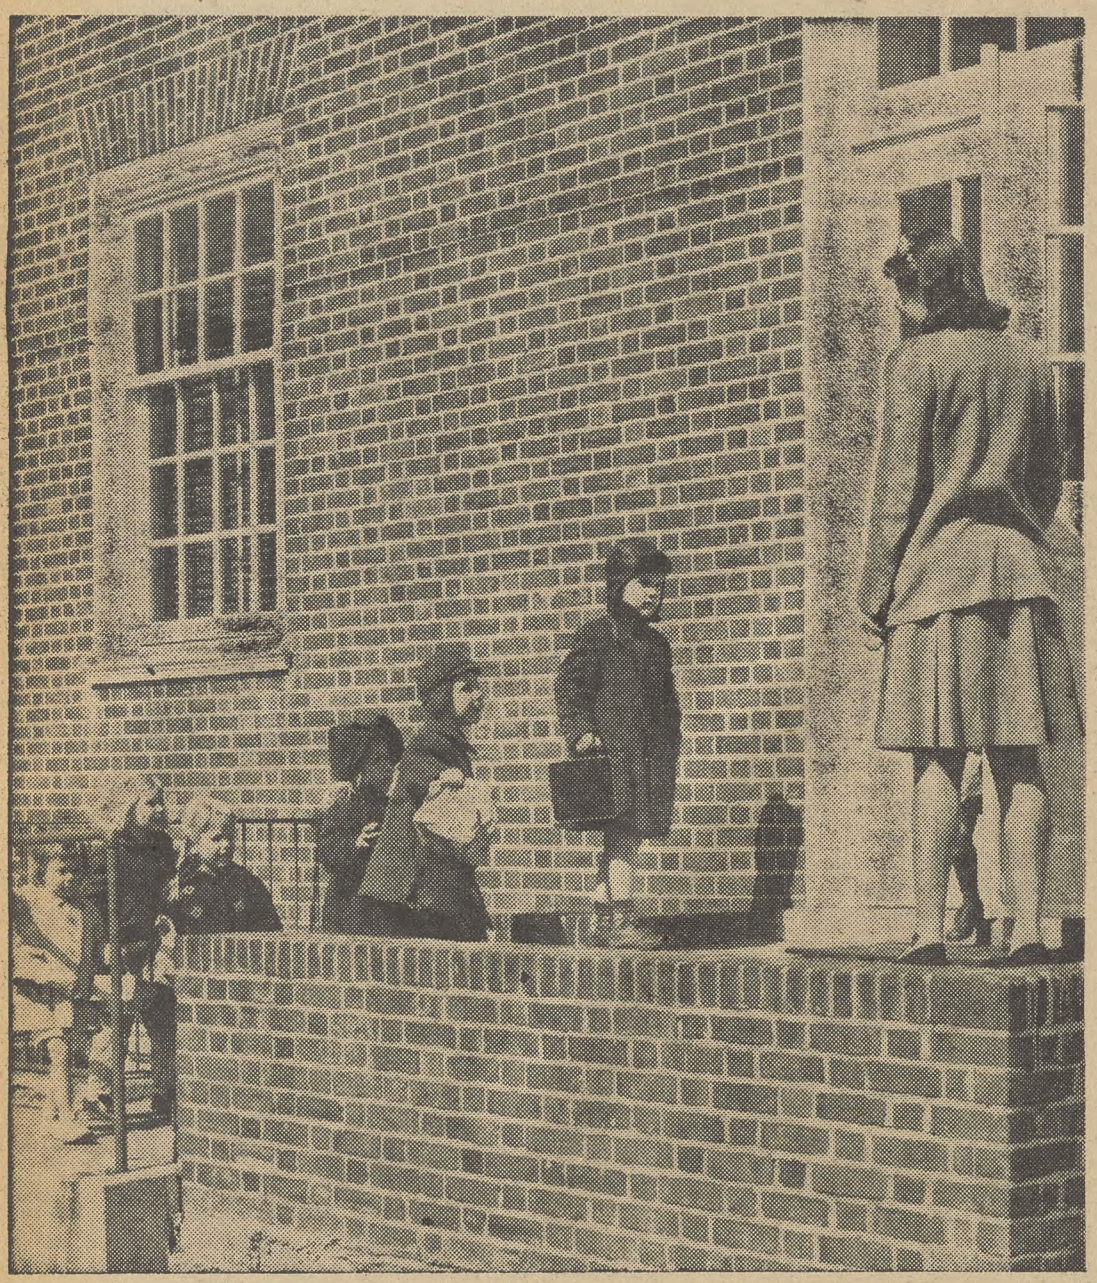
Berger Ingstrom, president of McDowell Manufacturing Co., Pittsburgh, and also president of the Smaller Manufacturers Council, with offices in the Chamber of Commerce, signed a contract Friday covering approximately 350 employes.

In Detroit, E. C. Evans, president of the Evans Products Co., and also president of the Non-Basic Steel Coordination Council, signed for his company, which employs about 500 workers. Evans signed for 20 cents.

Of the companies not yet signed, the union said that 41 of them employ 95,000—mainly in heavy machinery such as locomotives, Diesel engine manufacturers, steam shovel producers and the like.

Even before the strike most of the companies in this category had been working at below-capacity production because of the surplus due to war production.

Tired out after their teachers took them on a trip to the zoo, children in the 2-5 nursery school age sleep during the noon-hour on blankets and comforts spread on the floor at the Lewis Methodist Church, temporary quarters for these children of working mothers after the Washington, D. C. Board of Education closed the nursery and child care centers. The children sleep on cots at their regular center in a school.



A teacher welcomes the children, carrying their lunches in bags, to their temporary center in the church building. At the regular nursery and child care centers children are served hot lunches, vitally needed for their health and growth. The mothers are the sole support of 18 of the 28 children enrolled at this center. Three hundred and fifty mothers of children enrolled in the Washington centers are the sole support of their children, or are wives and widows of servicemen. In about 200 families both parents are working, but in virtually all cases the father does not earn enough to support the family.

National Need

D. C. CHILD CARE FIGHT SPOTLIGHTS PROBLEM

STORY BY FRED ROSS • PICTURES BY CLEVER, CREATIVE ARTS

DENIED funds by Congress for nursery and child care centers, parents of 600 children—most of them dependent entirely for support on low-paid working mothers—this week opened a campaign to get financial support for the continuation of the centers in Washington, D. C. This campaign points up the acuteness of the child care problem throughout the nation.

Lanham Act appropriations for all centers in the country stopped Feb. 28, the theory being that this aid to working morthers was only a wartime need.

Suspension of the Federal payments threw the entire burden of the projects on the mothers, who had in most places been paying part of the expenses. In a number of communities such as Detroit, Philadelphia, Montgomery County, Md., and Alexandria, Va., the centers were maintained in one way or another, sometimes on a curtailed basis. But in many places they were discontinued.

Like the CIO and its Auxiliaries, the Washington Parents' Committee for Child Care sought first the extension of the Federal appropriations. When that fight appeared hopeless the committee joined with the Washington Citizens' Committee on Day Care, which includes representatives of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, the CIO Federal Workers and the CIO Office Professional Workers, to send 150 mothers to the House District Committee to urge that funds held by the District Commissioners be allocated to child care.

The women were given a sympathetic hearing but were advised that they must carry the entire burden of the centers until July 1, when appropriations will have been made for the ensuing year. The committee has promised to introduce a bill providing for funds then to carry on the work in Washington.

The Washington parents, who had been paying 40% of the cost on a graduated fee basis, voluntarily boosted the scale of fees. At least 25% of the mothers are paying the full cost of $10 a week. But many who earn only $22 a week cannot spend $10 a week for nursery care.

The Washington Board of Education would not assume responsibility for operating the centers in the schools after the Federal appropriation ceased. Teachers willing to take a chance on future pay are continuing to work. Fourteen of the centers have been forced to move to churches and homes, where facilities for hot lunches, such as were provided in the schools and as are needed particularly by children in the 2-5 nursery age group, are usually not available, and where there are no cots for the children in the lower age group.

Determined to carry on their fight, the Parents' Committee took out incorporation papers, becoming the Child Care Centers of the District of Columbia, to conduct a campaign for $40,000, the amount needed over and above the mothers' fees to run the centers until July 1. The Board of Education has assured the mothers that when the money is raised the centers will be permitted to move back into the schools.

Washington's working mothers appear to be solving their problem. Nationally, the only pending legislation that would help provide an answer in the Pepper Bill (S 1318), which would create a fund on which day centers could draw for support. Hearings will be held soon before the Senate Labor Education Committee.

"The secrets related to atomic energy which are in the possession of the United States are in reality few and limited, and cannot be retained for any great length of time. Our industrial potential, a temporary advantage in any world race for atomic armament, could not protect us permanently.

"To enter any such atomic armament race with other powers would destroy any hope of international cooperation and could only end in disaster for the world. Suitable international machinery must be established to bring the use of atomic energy under world-wide social direction.

"This country should speak out now in favor of setting up such machinery and should declare its readiness to pool all its information and know-how on atomic energy jointly with all other nations when such machinery has been agreed upon and put in operation."

—CIO, Nov. 2, 1945.

ATOMIC BOMB—A FASCIST MENACE

THE most destructive weapon in the world may be the instrument by which miltiary-dominated fascism may storm into power in the U. S.

The weapon is the atomic bomb, horror package that wiped out two Japanese cities. It is now the subject of a Congressional fight over whether its control, and the development of atomic energy for peacetime purposes, shall rest with civilians or the military.

Highlighted by "spy" scares and hysterical newspaper headlines carrying the threats of World War III, the issue is being decided in some minds by emotions rather than by reason.

By 10-1 vote, the Senate Atomic Energy Committee this week recommended that control of atomic problems be turned over, in effect, to a military board.

The significance of the action is pointed up by the vigorous attack against it from Henry A. Wallace, secretary of commerce, former vice-president of the U. S., and the outstanding liberal remaining in President Truman's cabinet.

Wallace said the committee's action "has potentialities to deliver us into the hands of military fascism."

"I hope," he declared, "that when the American people realize its significance they will rise up in their wrath and let the Senators know what that action means."

What Wallace was talking about was the committee's proposal, originated by Republican Senator Vandenberg, providing for establishment of both a civilian commission to control atomic development and a military board.

The military board would have the power to initiate plans, and to veto those suggested by the civilian commission by appealing to one man, the President of the U. S.

Vast power is placed in the hands of the military. The board would have authority to intervene in any situation which, in the military's mind, might affect the security of the nation.

Almost every phase of development of atomic energy, for peace or war, thus would come under the province of the military board, which could establish a gestapo rule of the country under the theory that the nation's "security" was threatened.

This is the proposal wrapped up in the Vandenberg amendment to the McMahon Bill (S 1717).

The McMahon bill, twice approved by President Truman in its original form, would—if not amended—set up a civilian control commission.

Another bill, in the House of Representatives, would give control solely to a part-time commission, and to an administrator solely responsible to the commission. The administrator could be a military man.

This legislation is known as the May-Johnson bill (HR 4566), which has been vigorously opposed by the CIO, by other liberal organizations, and by the Federation of American Scientists, most of whose members are the men and women who invented and produced the atomic bomb.

These scientists, better than anyone else, know the potentialities for world destruction and world development contained in atomic energy. This week, discussing the Vandenberg proposal for military participation in control of atomic energy, they said.

"The public must not be misled by the fact that there would still be a civilian commission. The Vandenberg proposal, accepted by the committee, would give a military board broad powers over everything which it considers affects national defense.

"This move was opposed by Senator McMahon (D. Conn.), who pointed out that it means that the military can and will effectively control every phase of atomic energy and thus determine both national and international policy.

"Never before in the history of the U. S.—not even in time of war—has the military been given policy making powers. This bill, if made into law, will be a clear declaration to the world that the people of the U. S. will put their faith only in military might.

"The military in peacetime naturally has the assigned job of assuming that we will be involved in another major war, and of making preparations to win it. They must not be given policy control in a field where our major aim is to work out those cordial international relations which will avoid the necessity for war.

"We feel that it is time to reaffirm belief that the only true security lies in world control of atomic energy and a world free from war. Pre-atomic thinking must go. The difficulties in world cooperation are great but peace cannot be achieved by force. Atomic energy is the most important single factor in world policy.

"The issue of military review and veto on civil policy is now squarely up to the American people. Although ostensibly confined to atomic energy this is something which is the immediate concern of every peace loving American."

The CIO itself, at the last Executive Board meeting Nov. 2, 1945, went on record against the May-Johnson bill, and it since has voiced vigorous objection to the proposals contained in the Vandenberg amendment.

The CIO recommended that the following steps be taken immediately:

1. "Immediate negotiations with Britain and Russia to agree on world-wide atomic energy controls, and extension of the agreement thereafter to the United Nations.

2. "The United Nations to outlaw the use of atomic energy for military purposes, and all production of atomic bombs. United Nations control of atomic energy raw materials and production everywhere in the world, with full authority to inspect, investigate and police.

3. "Improvement of the present machinery of the United Nations in order to make the above controls effective, and to reduce or eliminate all international military rivalry.

4. "Full and continuous disclosure to the United Nations by all governments and their nationals of all information, discoveries and activities related to atomic energy after the above steps have been taken.

5. "Broad world-wide public information and education on atomic energy, and stimulation of constructive peace-time development and use, after the foregoing arrangements have been completed.

6. "In the U. S., a democratically organized national agency to deal domestically with atomic energy, composed of representatives of government, labor, industry, farmers, churches, universities, scientists, and military forces.

7. "Complete public control of all atomic energy patent rights and licenses in the U. S.; all rights in new atomic inventions and discoveries must vest automatically in the U. S.; any pre-existing rights must be acquired at once, by condemnation if necessary.

8. "Complete public control of uranium and thorium are deposits and other raw materials in the U. S.: The Agency should acquire all domestic deposits in the name of the U. S. and exercise the power of eminent domain where necessary for this purpose.

9. "Full public information in in the U. S. immediately on all aspects of atomic energy, subject to the retention of military secrets, as determined by the Agency, during the period of consummation of the international arrangements referred to above, in order that the people shall be as fully informed as may be consistent with military security and their representative may act wisely in this emergency."

The military significance of the atomic bomb has occupied thousands of column inches in the daily press and hundreds of hours over the radio.

As good a statement as any about what its potential destructive power means for civilization was that made this week by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. She wrote in her column:

"It isn't just a question of another war in which hundreds of thousands of young people would lose their lives. It is a question of wiping out the civilization which now exists upon the earth."

Warning that we won't prevent war if we give up trying to make a success of the United Nations even before the organization has had a chance to be adequately tested, she added:

"It is, of course, entirely possible to divide the world into armed camps and look at each other with suspicion. We can live in constant fear—and end by destroying each other."

Which is what military fascists in control of atomic energy might well be foolish enough to do.

1 N. Y. City shoppers like this matron remember that prices during World War I—without OPA—rose twice as fast as during World War II. Even with OPA, this pre-war shopper paid 39c for 15 pounds of potatoes in 1939, pays 63c now; 39c a dozen for eggs then, 69c now. Other prices, then and now: Butter 32c-54c; delivered milk 13.2c-17.6c; chicken 33c a pound-46c; chuck roast 24c-34c. All items bought by N. Y. City low income families have jumped at least 37.5% (conservatively estimated by the Bureau of Labor Statistics). Actually, because of quality deterioration, etc., the rise is greater.

2 The 18½c an hour raise won by Danny Falls, UE-CIO member at Gusbach M weakened. "It's still week to week, hand to mouth living. If controls were Seems to be nobody in Washington that cares about it. You pick up a paper—th

THEIR HOPE FO IS A ST

"LAST NIGHT I saw a woman crying in her hand she had the 15 million Mark her man a shirt. The clerk was very rough. he had nothing at that price. 'But you have. I window,' she tells him. 'Exactly when did yo asks her. 'Why, on this morning,' she says. swers, 'that's different. This afternoon that 20 million.' And the poor soul, she just s bawled like a baby."

That happened in Germany, after World it happen here?

The answer is, that it is happening. clothing, in housing. In the drive of the N Manufacturers for the abolition of all pr In Congress, where a willful group of men business interests have started to cripple drive to kill it entirely when it comes up before June 30.

What has happened when OPA control removed? Chester Bowles talking, former in a speech before the NAM convention:

"Those of you who are in the candy b that cocoanut, which OPA decontrolled some has quadrupled in price. Many grades of furs price controls were removed during the fall more than doubled. Your wife will tell yo sbach Machine Products, Brooklyn, won't keep his family eating if OPA controls are s were taken off, the increase vouldn't do a bit of good. We've got to fight for OPA. aper—there's no fight at all in this Administration. There's a lot of dead heads there."

5 Mrs. H. Burton (left) is a price clerk at t Price Control Board, knows what the sc all the newspaper propaganda about ending people are gullible enough to follow their lea more need for OPA than ever. Businessmen in money while they can—they have no acc servicemen overseas. They don't realize that a pound of butter for $2 they'd still have to for stockings."

OR FAIR PRICES STRONG OPA

Photos by Marian Hille

crying in a store. In ion Marks for buying y rough. He told her u have. I saw it in the n did you see it?' he he says. 'Ha,' he an- on that shirt went to e just sat down and r World War I. Will pening. In food, in f the Natl. Assn. of f all price controls. of men representing cripple OPA in the mes up for renewal controls have been former head of OPA, n:

candy business know led some 30 days ago, s of furs, from which the fall months, have tell you that some lerk at the Manhattan t the score is. "With ending OPA, a lot of their lead. But there's nessmen want to rake e no accountability to lize that if they sold have to pay $8 a pair grades of oranges, lemons and grapefruit moved up 50 to 100% in the first few days following the action by OPA in removing the price restrictions.

Already the profiteers in other fields have moved in:

● In Congress, the Senate bowed to the NAM line, voted to cut in half a deficiency appropriation OPA needed for operation till June 30.

● The House voted in effect for high prices for homes by killing price ceilings and subsidies to hold down costs.

● The Administration this week granted cotton textile manufacturers, already fat with war profits, price rises up to 15%—boosting income $250 million, according to OPA.

Drives to hike prices in rent, clothing, all consumers goods are piling up pressure on Congress and OPA. What would happen if the dam should break? Best example is what happened here shortly after World War I.

Wages could not keep up with prices. There was suffering and privation among workers' families. People could not buy—so prices crashed.

In less than two years, factory payrolls shrank 44%. Five million workers lost their jobs. Average earnings in manufacturing declined from $1,350 a year in 1920 to $900 in 1921.

Farmers went bankrupt. Net income between 1919 and 1921 dropped from $8.8 billion to $3 billion. Average farm income shrank from $1,360 a year in 1919 to $460 in 1921. From 1922 to 1926, 453,000 farmers lost their farms.

Business lost too. Corporation profit in 1919 was $6.4 billion after taxes. In 1921, there was a net loss of $55 million. Reserves were practically wiped out. Small business, in particular, was hard hit. In the five years following the price collapse, 106,000 businesses shut down.

Will it happen again? The answer lies with the organized consumers of America.

3 It's tough sledding for Frieda Evanoff (r.) and her husband, Pete. Just back from overseas, he can't find an apartment. Sheets, shirts, blouses are problems too. "Blue dress shirts used to be $2.50, now $4. I paid $3.50 for sports shirts and they're like cheese cloth. The manufacturers are just holding out for bigger profit and we're paying for it. If OPA had more money for enforcement the manufacturers would have to give in to the public. You go out with a $5 or $10 bill now and it doesn't mean a thing."

●

4 Pete Evanoff, Frieda's husband, saw action at Guam, Leyte and Okinawa. "My take-home pay is $36.50 a week. After rent, lunch, etc., it just carries over from week to week. If they took off price controls the cost of living would skyrocket higher than the Empire State Bldg. I know in my own shop (cotton goods) the boss is holding up materials—he's not shipping out—waiting to get in on any rise in prices. I think vets should get together—and their wives too—and do something about it."

YOUR RIGHTS ON THE RADIO

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

FCC REPORT GIVES SCORE

By FRED d'AVILA

THE radio industry was told in effect this week to spend more time thinking about public service and less time worrying about its $90 million annual profit from "Pepsi Cola hits the spot" and other advertising. The advice came in a frankly worded 139-page report by the Federal Communications Commission.

The report:

• Warned that FCC will tighten up on applications for license renewals, checking closely on public service provided by stations.

• Made a detailed study of time devoted to public service, and found most stations sadly negligent.

• Asked more time for labor and other non-profit organizations.

• Recorded that stations and networks spent only 67c out of each revenue dollar serving the public in 1944 as compared with 83c in 1938.

• Pointed out that the public's investment in tangible radio equipment is 26 times greater than that of the entire broadcasting industry.

The report was a militant declaration of policy which in effect ordered the industry to set its house in order and give the public a better break than soap operas and programs filled with recorded jazz interspersed with commercials.

Industry Squirming

The new Bible for the broadcasting industry drew pained comment from Justin Miller, president of the Natl. Assn. of Broadcasters, who said in part:

"The report reveals a lack of faith in the American system of free radio and a desire to impose artificial and arbitrary controls over what the people of this country shall hear."

This statement was somewhat contradicted by details of the FCC report, which called for increased listener participation in determining the content of programs and hence for curtailment of the frequently dictatorial authority that stations and networks maintain over their broadcasts.

The FCC pointed out that radio is really a public industry, with the equipment investment of radio listeners 26 times greater than that of station and network owners.

The FCC made this breakdown of public and private investment:

• Original cost to the public of 53,800,000 receivers manufactured during the eight-year period to Dec. 31, 1944, $2,078,000,000.

• Original cost of all tangible broadcast property to licensees of all stations and networks as of Dec. 31, 1944, $82,997,650.

• Excess of public investment over industry investment in tangible broadcast property, $1,995,002,350.

Reiterating a policy established in 1928, the FCC said:

"Broadcasting stations are licensed to serve the public and not for the purpose of furthering the private or selfish interests of individuals or groups of individuals.

"The standard of public interest, convenience, or necessity means nothing if it does not mean this . . .

"The emphasis should be on the receiving of service and the standard of public interest, convenience or necessity should be construed accordingly. . . .

"The entire listening public within the service area of a station, or a group of stations in one community, is entitled to service from that station or stations. . . .

"In a sense a broadcasting station may be regarded as a sort of mouthpiece on the air for the community it serves, over which its public events of general interest, its political campaigns, its election results, its athletic contests, its orchestras and artists, and discussion of its public issues may be broadcast.

"If . . . the station performs its duty in furnishing a well rounded program, the rights of the community have been achieved."

The FCC report showed steadily mounting income but steadily decreasing public service.

"In 1939," the FCC said, "the industry earned a return of 37% on the orignal cost of its tangible broadcast property and a return of 67.1% on the depreciated cost. By 1944, the comparable rates of return were 108.8% on original cost and 222.6% on depreciated cost."

$90 Million Profits

While profits increased from $23 million in 1937 to $90 million in 1944, the public service given by radio stations sharply declined.

"In 1937," the FCC reported, "the networks and stations spent 80c out of every revenue dollar in serving the public, and in 1938 they spent 83c out of each revenue dollar.

"Thereafter, the proportion progressively declined, until in 1944 stations and networks were spending only 67c out of each revenue dollar in serving the public.

"Conversely, in 1937, the stations and networks retained 20c out of each revenue dollar as broadcast income (profit after all expenses, including depreciation charges, but before Federal income tax). By 1944, the proportion of each revenue dollar retained as broadcast income had increased to 33c.

"The tremendous increase in profits from 1937 to 1944 (from $23 million to $90 million) was not due solely to the increase in advertising revenues but is also attributable in considerable part to the fact that the industry has progressively retained a larger and larger portion of each revenue dollar as profit and has spent a smaller and smaller portion for serving the public."

Calling for more sustaining programs like CIO's Labor-USA over ABC, and Cross-Section—CIO over CBS, the FCC stated:

"If broadcasting is to explore new fields, to devise new types of programs for the American listener, it is clear that the sustaining program must continue as a means by which experimentation and innovation may have the fullest scope, undeterred by the need for immediate financial success or the imposition on writers of restraints deriving from the natural, but limiting, preoccupations of the advertiser.

"It is especially important that some sustaining programs be reserved from commercial restraints in view of the degree of concentration of control currently existing among advertisers and advertising agencies. In 1944, for example:

• "26% of CBS business came from four advertisers.

• "38% of CBS business was handled by four advertising agencies.

• 25% of ABC business came from four advertisers.

• 37% of ABC business was handled by four advertising agencies.

• 23% of MBS business came from four advertisers.

• 31% of MBS business was handled by four advertising agencies.

"One advertiser, Procter & Gamble, is reputed to have spent $22 million on radio advertising in 1944," the FCC said. "It purchased approximately 2,000 hours a week of station time—equivalent to the entire weekly time, from sign-on to sing-off, of more than 18 broadcast stations."

The FCC reported that soap operas are monopolizing radio time. "In January, 1940," the FCC said, "the four networks provided listeners with 59½ daytime hours of sponsored programs weekly. Of these, 55 hours were devoted to soap operas. Only four and a half hours a week on the four networks were devoted to any other type of program."

Commercials too were obnoxious. Station KMAC, San Antonio, Texas, "broadcast 2,215 commercial announcements in 133 hours on the air during the week beginning Jan. 21, 1945. This was an average of 16.7 spots per hour. Spot announcements in excess of 1,000 per week have been noted on a number of stations."

What to do about this, and about improving radio generally, might be solved by the organization of radio listener councils, the FCC suggested.

What People Can Do

Noting that such organizations have been successful in a number of cities, the FCC said of them:

• They can provide a much needed channel through which listeners can convey to broadcasters the wishes of the vast but not generally articulate radio audience.

• They can check on the failure of network affiliates to carry outstanding network sustaining programs, and on the local programs substituted for outstanding network sustaining programs.

• They can serve to promote and publicize outstanding programs.

In the Commission's mind, according to the report, the situation adds up to this—radio stations and networks had better get on the beam of public interest if they want to stay in business.

And, the FCC points out, it is up to the public to be alert in demanding that the radio industry puts public interest first and profits second.

MORE TIME FOR LABOR URGED

Highlights of the FCC report include these recommendations:

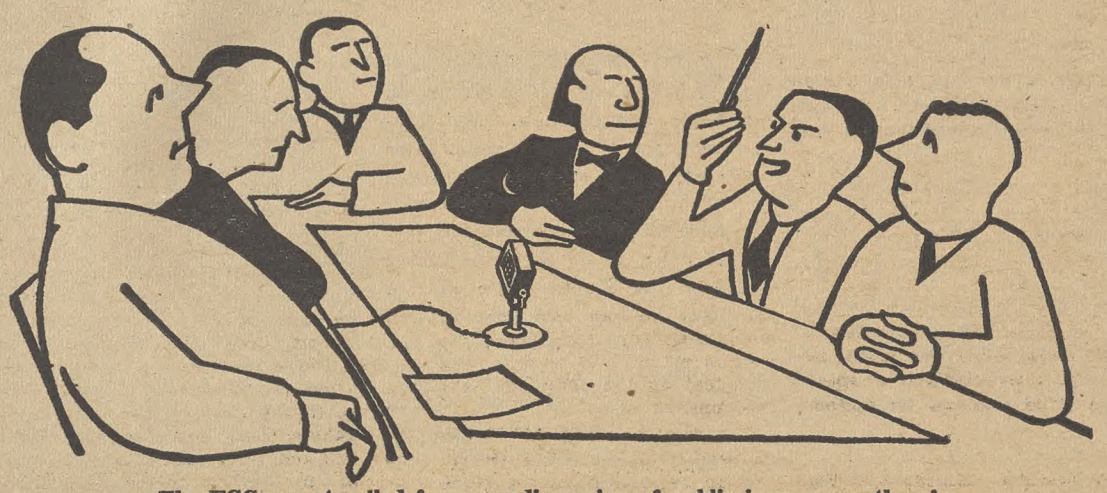
• More time on the air for labor and other public interest groups at good broadcasting hours.

• Development of public discussions, not only on the networks but on local station programs.

• Development of radio criticism, comparable to that now written about movies, plays, etc.

• Formation of radio listening councils to help promote good programs and eliminate bad ones.

• Expansion of radio's educational role with the aid of colleges and universities.



The FCC report called for more discussion of public issues over the air.

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

George Craig, CIO Reg. Dir., Philadelphia, Pa., reports: United Textile Corporation, Allentown, Pa., Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, 37; against 14. Barrett Division, Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation, Philadelphia, Pa., Oil Workers International Union, CIO 24; against 14.

George Brown, IWA Director of Organization, reports: Potlatch Forests, Inc., IWA-CIO 1,050; AFL 728. Congratulations to all who participated in this splendid victory.

Leo Goodman, URWDSEA Representative, reports: Outlet Store, Providence, R. I., CIO 474, against 168. New England Regional Director for URWDSEA, Harry Tuvin, was in charge.

Frank J. Bender, CIO Reg. Dir., Baltimore, Md., reports: Potomac Edison Electric Light Co., Hagerstown, Utility Workers Union of America, CIO 44; AFL-IBEW 8.

Carey E. Haigler, CIO Reg. Dir., Birmingham, Ala., reports: URWDSEA-CIO won recognition as the bargaining agent at Bretnall Manufacturing Co., Birmingham, Ala., in a cross check conducted by the NLRB. Out of a possible 100 employes, 70% were found to be members of CIO. Credit for this splendid achievement should go to Regional Director John Schulter, and State Director Frank I. Parker of URWDSEA. For the first time several of the large department stores in Birmingham have come into the CIO and all indications point to a very fine local union in this field in the very near future.

E. B. Pugh, CIO Reg. Dir., Richmond, Va., reports: Johnson Carper Furniture Co., Roanoke, Va., UFWA-CIO 210; no union 123. Campaign was handled by Buzz Hiatt and Jack Clark, Int. Reps. of UFWA, assisted by CIO Field Representative Lloyd P. Vaughan.

W. L. Carson, UFWA Field Representative, Memphis, Tenn., reports: UFWA-CIO won election at Tennessee Fabricating Company, 35 to 5.

★ ★ ★

Michael Livoda, CIO Sub-Regional Director, Denver, Colo., reports: William Ainsworth & Son plant, Denver, Colo., USA-CIO 43; no union 27. Art Menozzi, USA Representative, was in charge of the organizational work. Molybdenum Corporation of America, Idaho Springs, Colo., IUMMSW-CIO 24; against 18. Hugh Matlock, Int. Rep. IUMMSW, was in charge of the campaign.

Morris Muster, President, United Furniture Workers of America, reports: Woodcraft Corp., Bay City, Mich., UFWA-CIO 183; no union 48. William Tell Woodcrafters, Tell City, Ind., UFWA-CIO 31; no union 3.

Pete Mosele, Dist. Director, United Steelworkers of America, reports: J. Ryerson & Sons, Inc., Jersey City, N. J., USA-CIO 44; AFL 0; no union 39.

James Ritchie, CIO Reg. Dir., St. Louis, Mo., reports: International Shoe Plant, Quincy, Ill., United Shoe Workers of America, CIO, 325; no union 61. In Cape Giradeau, Mo., the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America, CIO, has been recognized as the bargaining agent after a card check. There will be approximately 200 people employed at this plant.

Walter H. Harris, CIO Reg. Dir., Chicago, Ill., reports: Cans, Inc., Chicago, USA-CIO 44; against 26. Blumenthal Bros., Chicago., USA-CIO 8; against 2. Industrial Spring, Chicago, USA-CIO won bargaining rights by card check, 84 out of 97. National Steel, Chicago, USA-CIO 13; against 2. Olson Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill., USA-CIO 23; against 19.

★ ★ ★

The writer journeyed to New Orleans and addressed a meeting of all CIO local and international representatives, over which CIO Regional Director Fred Pieper presided. We met in the CIO Building, which is a credit to our movement there. Delegates from all locals were present, as well as independent union representatives of the Brewery Workers, Telephone Workers, and Fishermen. The CIO is on its toes in New Orleans. All are interested in organizational expansion, education and political action.

I proceeded to Atlanta and met with our representatives there and groups of telephone workers.

The Textile, Auto and Steelworkers unions are conducting their strikes and fighting any attempt to divide them. All are looking forward to intensified organizing campaigns. The South can and must be organized. The CIO stands high in the minds and hearts of the Southern worker.

★ ★ ★

FLASH! The GM strike has been settled. It was a great fight and demonstration of solidarity. Congratulations to officers and members of the UAW-CIO!

The CIO is with the Auto Workers in their struggle all the way. UE is holding tight in their struggle for decent wages, so are the Farm Equipment Workers, the FTA-CIO, the many thousands in steel fabricating, and the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers. Support all these strikes. They are in the interest of all CIO and the nation.

★ ★ ★

FURTHER FLASH! GE settled with President Murray and the officers of UERMWA.

Splitting Efforts Flop:

FARMERS LEND HELPING HAND

THE old tory gag that farmers and workers have nothing in common fell flatter than a pancake filled with sawdust during the convention of the Natl. Farmers Union in Topeka.

In rapid fire sequence, the assembled farmers last week took these steps to back up striking CIO Farm Equipment Union members trying to wrest decent pay from the powerful Intl. Harvester Co.:

1. Collected $2,000 in small bills, to be divided equally among the striking CIO workers at Harvester and General Motors.

2. Called for the government to seize the struck Harvester plants and turn out badly need farm machinery until such time as the company's management is ready to accept the recommendations of a federal fact-finding panel—whose suggestious have already been okayed by the CIO union.

3. Vigorously cheered FE Education Dir. Edwin Schonfeld, representing FE Pres. Grant Oakes, who outlined the union's opposition to passing higher prices on to the farmers.

4. Gave an ovation to CIO Sec-Treas. James B. Carey, who brought greetings to the organization from the industrial workers of the country.

Carey paid tribute to the Farmers Union for its pioneers work in developing friendly relations with the unionized workers of the cities and towns, and described the benefits that higher wages gained in the GM and other strikes would have upon the farmers of the country.

The enthusiasm with which the farmers—most of whom are having as much difficulty in balancing family budgets as their city friends—dug into their jeans to help the strikers, and the way they greeted the union representatives, was warmly appreciated by the CIO people present.

Understanding of the single role of working farmers and industrial workers in fighting monopolists and profiteers was evident throughout the four-day session.

"Labor's struggle is the business of the whole people, including farmers," the official convention declaration stated.

An Oklahoma cotton farmer expressed it even more simply. Addressing the convention, he declared:

"If labor's got money, they'll buy my products. The more labor gets, the more I get."

In Chicago, FE Pres. Oakes hailed the degree of farm-labor friendship shown at the convention.

"What Intl. Harvester and the others have spent millions to prevent has come about anyway—the workers knows he is rooked by the company through low wages, and the farmers knows he is rooked by the same company through high prices.

"The myth that workers' wages rob farmers, or that farmers' prices rob workers, is a dying duck. To the Natl. Farmers Union, it's already dead. Their convention action will send a pang of defeat up the spine of every reactionary."

The four hundred farm delegates who met at the Topeka convention represented some 160,000 members of the NFU.

Farmers see eye to eye with the workers—and prove it. Delegates to the recent Natl. Farmers Union parley collected $2,000 as gift for striking GM and Intl. Harvester workers.

NEW PACTS BRING HIGH PAY DIVIDENDS

THE week's headline went to the GM and GE strike settlements, but lots and lots of dollars went into the pay envelopes of workers in smaller, less publicized plants as CIO continued its drive to bring prosperity to the nation's wage earners.

Down in Greensboro, Ga., the CIO Textlie Workers Union and the Mary-Leila Cotton Mills signed an agreement that brings $50,000 more a year to the employes. Basic minimum in the plant went up to 65c an hour—the figure sought in the wage bill now before Congress—while all workers getting more than the minimum received a dime-an-hour increase. Kenneth Douty, TWUA state director for Georgia, said 260 employes will benefit.

* * *

In Connecticut's "Brass Valley," 4,300 workers at the Scovill Mfg. Co. stacked their picket sign as the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers won a contract giving them 18½c hourly boosts. The grass workers had been out since Feb. 6.

On the other hand, strikes continued at the American Brass Co. and Chase Brass & Copper in Connecticut; and the MMSW walkout at the American Smelting & Refining plants in half a dozen states were still in force. And in Chicago Pres. Reid Robinson predicted that the union would be forced to strike on March 18 at Phelps-Dodge mines and plants from coast to coast unless the firm shows greater willingness to meet its workers' demands.

Such a strike, involving both the MMSW and the CIO Electrical Radio. Machine Workers—which has contacts in two of the company's plants—would affect more than 75% of the country's copper output and 56% of U. S. lead production. The unions are seeking $1.50 a day raise at smelters and mines, and $2 at refining and fabricating plants.

* * *

Wage rates went up as much at 40c an hour when the UE signed a new agreement with the Paul & Beekman Division of the Portable Products Corp. in Philadelphia. A union shop, longer vacations and the right to reopen wages in the event of "adverse economic conditions" were some of the gains won.

* * *

It was anchors aweigh for wages paid to per diem workers in the Navy's east coast shipyards this week, as the CIO Federal Workers Union secured promises of an 18c increase to go into effect before the end of March. A similar raise had been recommended for employes of private shipyards, but it took some UFWA-sponsored demonstrations and a conference with Acting Sec. of the Navy Sullivan to get the increase for the Navy employes.

ASK U.S. THROTTLE 'VIOLENCE ORGY'

An end to the "orgy of violence" directed at Negro citizens of Columbia, Tenn., was demanded of President Truman this week by Pres. Lewis J. Clark of the CIO Packinghouse Workers.

The union leader asked Truman to make certain that Atty.-Gen. Clark and the Dept. of Justice take action in the case in order that those responsible for the anti-Negro violence in the Tennesee community be arrested.

In a second message, Clark asked N. Y. Gov. Thomas Dewey to appoint a special grand jury for investigation of an incident at Freeport, Long Island, where three Negro servicemen were shot, two of them fatally. Referring to the case of the men, all brothers, Clark said that "justice, and not lynch tactics, should prevail in N. Y. State and throughout the nation."

Tomorrow's Citizens — By Rose H. Alschuler

EVENINGS WHEN DADDY COMES HOME

Daddy's homecoming is an important time of day. Because everybody wants to make the most of the short time when the family is together, it's sometimes too exciting and is followed by difficulty in getting the darlings to bed and asleep. Occasionally a little romping is in order. But for day in, day out use a special bedtime reserve of games, stories and music on the quiet rather than the boisterous side side is recommended to parents who want happy, satisfying hours at the end of the day when children, dads and mothers are likely to be tired. Lib. of Congress—Rothstein for FSA

EXPECTANT MOTHERS' DIET

By Nutrition Service, D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross

"FOR every child, a tooth is lost!" This is an old saying which many people still believe about the pregnant mother. It might have been true in the past when we didn't know so much about the needs of the mother-to-be.

Since good nutrition for baby depends on the good nutrition of mother, a good diet is important from the beginning of pregnancy. The mother's food must give all the materials she needs for herself and her growing baby.

Here is the good daily diet for pregnancy:

Milk: One quart. The milk supply must be doubled in pregnancy to have enough calcium for baby's bones and teeth and to protect her own teeth, bones and nerves. Since milk also give muscle-building material and vitamins, it is a three-in-on-package. Use it to drink, in cooking or as ice cream and cheese.

Fruit: Two servings—for vitamin C. (One should be orange, grapefruit or tomato. In the latter half of pregnancy use extra large portions of these).

Vegetables: Thee or four servings—for vitamins and iron. Include a potato and a green or yellow vegetable and eat some vegetables raw. Vitamin and iron needs increase for baby building.

Eggs: One every day.

Meat, poultry, fish and beans: A liberal serving (¼ pound). Eat liver once, fish once or twice and lean meats three or four times a week. Liver and other gland meats are good blood builders.

Breakfast cereal and a slice of bread at each meal: The whole grains are best.

Fats: Two or three tablespoons on bread or in cooking.

Water or other liquids: Six to eight glasses.

Fish liver oils for vitamins A and D: Let the doctor decide how much to take and what kind to get.

FIGHT FOR OPA WOMEN'S JOB TOO

By VERDA W. BARNES

Director, Women's Division, Natl. CIO-PAC

PRICE control isn't just a woman's job. Neither is it a man's job, for that matter. It's a job for all of us, man, woman,—yes, and child, too. But it is true that women can do everything that men can do about price control and more too.

That's because so often the woman in the family is the business agent for the family as well. Besides the role she plays as citizen, mother runs the household, plans and does most of the shopping, keeps up with what is happening in the newspaper ads, and knows the latest answers to give to the grocer

Let's put down some of the things that women can do in the fight against inflation:

Political action. Inflation starts on capitol hill. It starts in the offices of the congressmen who are always pressuring OPA for some favor for some special constituent. It starts in the congressional committee rooms where honest OPA people who want to keep prices down are always being heckled by inflation-minded Congressmen. It continues on the floor of Congress where appropriation cuts are approved, where new amendments to the price control law are passed, where subsides are killed.

Of course, the men can write Congress, too. But that doesn't mean that women have any less to do on this score. Every Representative and Senator should be swamped by letters demanding honest price control. They should be told that every price increase steals bread off of the table, clothes off of peoples backs, health from the bodies of American children.

Watching prices: Inflation starts on Capitol Hill in Washington, but it reaches right down to the department store and the corner store where you shop. Since women do most of the shopping, women have the best chance to watch store prices.

Every time a price goes up, every time you're asked to pay more than before, complain to the store keeper—so he won't go around telling people, as so many of them do, that women don't care what they pay. Complain, so that maybe next time he'll hesitate before marking up the new stock of goods.

Complain to the OPA price board, so that they'll check to see whether this new dose of inflation is legal. Complain to the OPA in Washington; maybe they'll think twice before handing out the next price increase. Complain to your Congressman; maybe there will be a few writing to OPA demanding lower prices like the hundreds that write now demanding higher prices.

Of course, if you know the price is over the ceiling, don't pay it. Legal inflation is bad enough. Illegal inflation is also a serious insult to the most serious possible injury.

Educate the public. Much more than men, women can help to educate people on price control. Friends can tell friends; neighbors can educate neighbors.

MURRAY BACKS RED CROSS CAMPAIGN

CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week urged CIO members to remember the men still in the armed forces by giving to the American Red Cross during its current campaign. Murray said:

"While we work for this goal of peace and prosperity for all peoples, let us not forget those who made the hope of a better world possible—our fighting men. Let us not forget that many of them need our help, that many of them are still in distant lands, many of them suffer wounds not yet healed.

"The American Red Cross is not forgetting. This organization carries on the job it did so well during the war. Over 3,000 Red Cross Field Representatives are manning more permanent Red Cross installations, and adapting an overseas program of clubs, hospital recreation and welfare according to changing needs.

"Here at home, services to the wounded in hospitals continue to increase. The needs of veterans and their families have grown."

SOLD EVERYWHERE

5c

EAT A BAG A DAY FOR MORE PEP

PLANTERS NUT & CHOCOLATE CO.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS
UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1639-49 W. Evergreen Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

LABOR'S WORLD

LABOR groups in Latin America are showing enthusiasm for the work of the CIO Latin American Affairs Committee, it is reported here. Labor papers in Cuba and Mexico, and underground papers in Argentina, are giving more and more attention to the work of the CIO group headed by Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman, and George Michanowsky, executive secretary.

The committee was set up several years ago by President Murray, and since that time has worked to improve fraternal relations with the Latin American unions, particularly the Confederation of Latin American Labor (CTAL). It has conducted studies in industrial and labor conditions south of the border, raised funds for relief of Bolivian miners, and generally has sought to carry out labor's "good neighbor" policy.

Franco Terror Protested

Protests against the imminent execution of three Spanish anti-fascist women were sent to Franco and to Secretary of State Byrnes this week by the newly formed Congress of American Women.

Meantime, demonstrations continue in Europe against the Franco dictatorship. Workers in France are refusing to handle Spanish goods, having decided on this tactic before the border was officially closed. Sharp criticism is being voiced over the failure of the U. S. State Dept. and the British Foreign Office to carry out a real program designed to unseat the major remaining fascist dictator in Europe.

In Congress, Rep. John M. Coffee's resolution to break off all relations with Franco still lies in the House Foreign Relations Committee.

British Wage Rates

The British government will not fix wages, according to a statement by Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the Council, cited in an Allied Labor News dispatch this week.

"Trade unionists point out that pay levels have fallen drastically since the war's end and that many key industries are facing a severe manpower shortage because they pay exceedingly low wages," the ALN story said.

"Little progress has been made in adjusting these wages through negotiations or arbitration machinery, the trade unionists claim. Morrison said that the nation will not be prepared for wage fixing until a complete socialist state is achieved."

Hit Churchill Speech

Winston Churchill's recent speech urging an Anglo-American military alliance was "nothing short of an ideological declaration of war on the Soviet union," according to Leo Krzycki, chairman of the American Slav Congress and vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

"By raising the false specter of Soviet 'expansion' it tries to conceal the ugly face of British imperialism and to enlist our support for the suppression of democratic forces in Europe and the national liberation movements of the colonial peoples," he said.

Expose AFL Intervention

AFL intervention against the union of Latin America organized in the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL) was denounced this week in a "CTAL News" expose of the record of one Serafino Romualdi, chief AFL agent in the disruptive maneuver.

According to the CTAL News, Romualdi was employed by Nelson Rockefeller and by the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) as a "labor advisor" and as an investigator of the "political reliability" of anti-fascist refugees in Latin America and Italy.

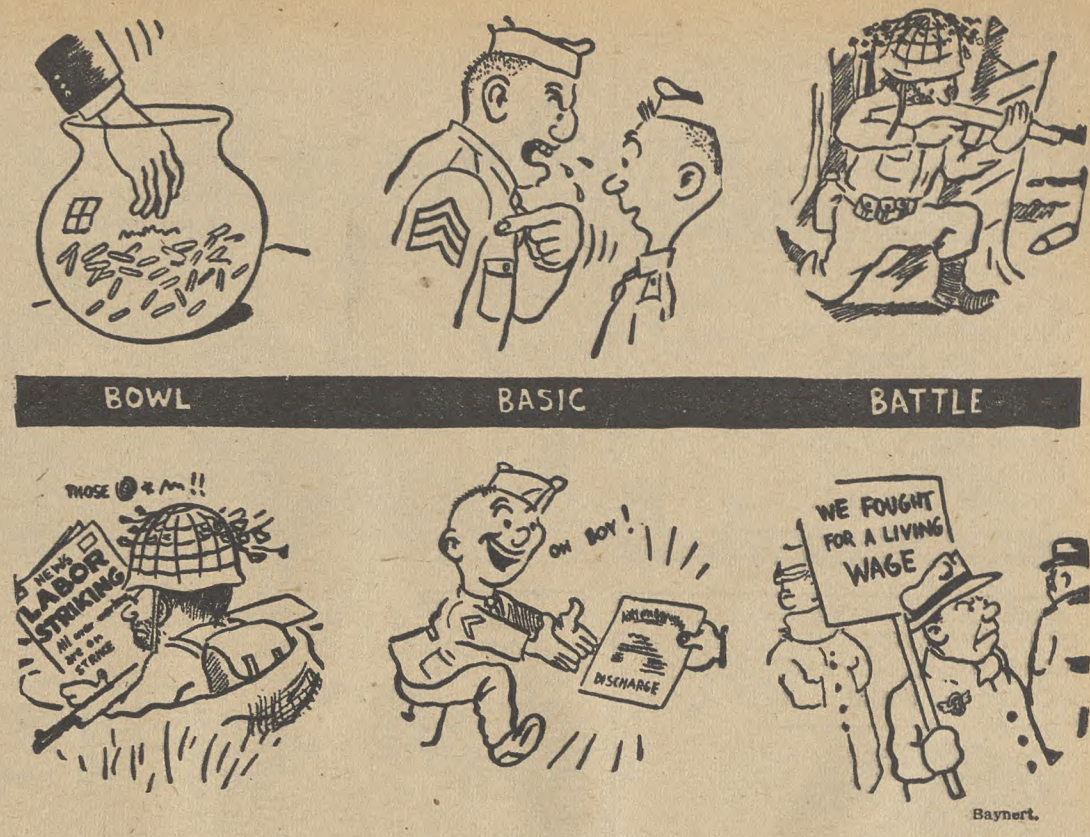
Another character named Silverio Pontieri, now head of the Argentine fascist labor front, is also involved in the AFL conspiracy, according to CTAL News. This Pontieri was exposed in the U. S. State Department's Blue Book on Argentine fascism, which said of him when he was appointed by Argentine dictator Peron: "At no time were elections held; officers were merely appointed by the Secretariat of Labor Welfare."

Industrial Unionism In France

French trade unions are tending more and more toward large scale industrial unionism, ALN reports from Paris. In preparation for the April 18 meeting of the General Confederation of Labor (CGT), "important unions are meeting and showing a tendency to re-group into large industrial bodies as a means of streamlining French organization," ALN says.

Among these are the building trades, with 600,000 members, who are merging with the woodworkers and the pottery workers union. The teachers unions has also met and decided to merge the now separate groups of elementary, high school and university teachers and librarians and scientific workers.

EDUCATION OF A VETERAN



Baynert.

Ammunition—UAW-CIO....

RALLIES CIO FOR VETS' HOUSING

DECLARING that the emasculation of the Patman Bill by the House meant that the first round in the fight to house veterans was lost, UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas as head of the CIO Housing Committee this week called on "CIO members and particularly our veterans" to carry on the fight for the original measure in the Senate.

As the Natl. Assn. of Real Estate Boards was blatantly referring to its lobby which helped kill the subsidy and old-house-ceiling provisions of the Patman Bill as "the people," Thomas urged CIO members, veterans and non-veterans, to "wire, write or telephone" their Senators to restore these two features. President Truman had called the $600,000,000 subsidy provision the "heart" of program for 2,700,000 homes for veterans in two years. Thomas said:

"Death of the premium payment program is the most serious of our defeats. These subsidies were to have been used to bring small and marginal material producers into production, to encourage new plants, and to finance experiments with prefabrication and new materials. Without the $600,000,000 needed for subsidies, it is doubtful that more than 300,000 or 400,000 new homes will be started this year. . . .

"The battle is not yet lost. The Senate still has to act on the Patman Bill. Specifically we must insist that price ceilings on second-hand houses and premium payments to increase materials must be put back into the Patman Bill.

"Any Congress which can vote down a measure so dramatically necessary as this one can certainly not be relied on to vote favorably on any issues which affect labor and the people." . . .

ARMY HEEDS CIO PROTEST

The War Dept. this week told the CIO Veterans Committee that a company commander at Fort Benning, Ga., had been reprimanded by a superior officer for telling enlisted personnel they were being trained to break strikes.

This followed a committee protest that he was erroneously referring to training to quell civil disturbances as "strike breaking." Any similar references or any training for strike breaking should be reported promptly to the CIO Veterans Committee, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

SAW FAR AHEAD

CIO Pres. Philip Murray's forecast in the February issue of Air Force, the U. S. Air Forces official magazine, that negotiations would recoup postwar wage losses, this week continued to come true with the substantial victories at General Motors and General Electric. The article, of course, was written long before the strikes were settled.

SOME BOSSES OPPOSING 'SUPER-SENIORITY' THEORY

SOME employers this week were ignoring threatening letters from Selective Service officials to stampede them into granting "super-seniority" to veterans and were abiding by their seniority agreements with the CIO.

One letter told an employer that if he did not obey Selective Service's "super-seniority" interpretation of the law he would be liable to payment of earnings lost by the veteran.

"Super-seniority" means that a veteran should get his old job back, even though he would displace an employe with greater seniority.

CIO contracts and agreements state that the veteran shall be credited with additional seniority equal to his time in the armed forces.

The Aluminum Corp. of America this week agreed that it would abide by the seniority provision in the CIO Steelworkers contract, and a second company also informed the Steelworkers that it would not be frightened by a threatening letter it received from a Selective Service official and would carry out its agreement with the Steelworkers on seniority for veterans.

Corporations are aware that three Federal courts, including the 2nd U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals at New York City have ruled against "super-seniority" and that two more arbitrators' awards recently turned down Selective Service's pet theory—in the case of Bell Aircraft and Local 501, CIO Auto Workers, and New England Shipbuilding Corp. and Local 50, CIO Shipbuilding Workers.

An examination of the Circuit Court's decision which overruled Federal District Court Judge Abruzzo's ruling in the Fishgold case, shows that the judges believed that even in his first year of employment the veteran's best job protection was his union.

Copies of this decision may be obtained from the CIO Veterans Committee, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and scenes mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

ARRESTED IN A RIOT PROVOKED BY HIS BROTHER AND THE ANTI-UNION GROUP, JIM AND WOODY LEAVE THE COURT IN THE CUSTODY OF THE LAWYER WONDERING ABOUT THE REASON FOR THE PROVOCATION. THE EVENING'S PAPER SUPPLIES THE ANSWER...

SO THAT'S THE SCORE!

DAILY "RED" INFORMER

LABOR AGITATORS ATTACK VET

UNION MEN RIOT AT ROTOR PLANT, MR. DENTON PLANT OWNER PRAISES HEROIC WAR VETERAN. SAYS HE WILL KEEP PLANT CLOSED TILL SUCH UN-AMERICAN OUTRAGES CEASE

A LOCKOUT WITH THE MEN USING UP THEIR SAVINGS THEN DENTON THINKS THEY'LL COME CRAWLING BACK ON HIS TERMS... HMM...

BACK AT THE ROTOR PLANT..

IT WAS A FINE JOB, YOUNG MAN. A FEW WEEKS WITHOUT WORK WILL CONVINCE SOME OF THE TROUBLE MAKERS-- THAT'S WHY I'M CLOSING THE PLANT.

THE OLD HUNGER TREAT-MENT---

YOU DON'T KNOW HOW GLAD I AM TO BE WORKING WITH YOU

WELL, WE GOTTA GO NOW, MR. DENTON. WE GOT AN APPOINTMENT.

DA BOSS THINKS THE WORLD OF YOU. NOW WE'LL GO SEE THE REAL TOP GUY OF DA WORKS...

WHO'S THE APPOINTMENT WITH? ISN'T OLD MAN DENTON THE TOP MAN, PUG?

NAH, I'LL INTRODUCE YAH TO THE GUY. WE GOT AN APPOINT-MENT WITH HIM. HE WANTS TO TALK TO YAH ...

AND I'M ANXIOUS TO MEET HIM...

YOU'RE LUCKY BEING A VETERAN, AND A SMART GUY TOO--- DEY WAS LOOKING FOR A GUY LIKE THAT ALL ALONG...

DO WE HAVE FAR TO WALK?

WE TURN DOWN DIS STREET.

WHY THAT'S THE STREET... MY HUNCH WAS RIGHT. HE IS BEHIND THE ANTI-UNION GROUP!

IT'S DENTON'S HOUSE BUT WE JUST LEFT MR. DENTON. I THOUGHT...

YAH, I KNOW.

64

MEET DA BOSS, MICKEY!

Produced by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

CIO BOARD RESOLUTIONS

The following resolutions were among those passed by the CIO Executive Board, meeting in Washington, D. C., March 15 and 16.

Political Action

WHEREAS the CIO is now emerging victorious in its campaign for general wage increases, having won benefits for the workers surpassing all gains previously made in the history of American Labor, and

WHEREAS these great victories were made possible by CIO's political strength combined with its economic strength and strike action, and

WHEREAS political strength is essential to protect organized labor from the vicious attacks made upon it by the reactionaries now trying to push anti-union bills through Congress, and

WHEREAS aggressive political action is necessary to protect the wage increases and the purchasing power of the people from the attacks of the greedy who seek to increase corporate profits by abolishing price control, and

WHEREAS we are now in a year of momentous political significance, with the needs of political action for 1946 immediately upon us, including specifically the selection of candidates and the raising of funds for political needs,

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the national Political Action Committee and the various local Political Action Committees intensify and increase their efforts for the study and selection of candidates and for the support of good candidates in the primary and general elections throughout the nation; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Political Action Committee and the various local Committees immediately commence and aggressively push drives for the registration of all workers, and for the contribution by each worker of least $1 for the expenses of PAC, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the International Unions immediately instruct their various officers and representatives to push the campaign for $1 contributions and for registration, with both determination and vigor, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Industrial Union Councils immediately do all in their power to stimulate and coordinate the $1 campaign and the registration drive in their respective communities.

Franco Spain

WHEREAS, (1) The recent execution by the bloody Franco dictatorship of ten heroic Spanish Republicans has aroused the indignation of free people throughout the world and re-emphasized the need for united action by the democratic nations on behalf of the Spanish people:

(2) The existence of Fascism in Spain is by no means exclusively an internal question for the Spanish people themselves, for as long as Fascism continues to exist anywhere it constitutes a danger and a source of danger for free people and free nations everywhere;

(3) Recent revelations made by the United States State Department fully confirm the fact that Franco was an ally of Hitler in the war against the United Nations, and our victory in that war will not be complete or secure until Spain itself is free.

RESOLVED, that the CIO executive Board:

(1) Joins with the World Federation of Trade Unions, speaking on behalf of world labor, in denouncing the brutal Franco regime and recording our burning protests against the murder of ten Republican heroes;

(2) Urges the State Department immediately to break off diplomatic relations with Spain;

(3) Urges the Security Council of the United Nations to place the question of Spain upon the agenda of its meeting of March 25, 1945 and to take concerted action to secure the speedy elimination of this center of fascist infection and threat to world peace.

Police Terror

During the past few weeks there have been several very dangerous and significant indications of a growing trend toward use of police brutality. As has always been the case in the past when officers of the law abused their authority to deprive American citizens of important rights, these terroristic acts have been directed against labor and against minority groups such as Negroes.

Particularly disturbing have been the reports received from Columbia, Tennessee.

It appears quite clear that the Negro Community of that City was forced by threats of an impending lynch mob to take action within their own residences and business for self-protection.

Nevertheless, the State Police authorities embarked upon a course of conduct resulting in the destruction and devastation of the physical property of the Negro community and followed these activities with mass arrests in complete violation of basic principles of civil rights of Americans.

This activity reached its high point in the killing of two of the arrested Negroes in the jail house by the Police Officers themselves.

During the very same period the Police in Philadelphia were attacking strikers in a peaceful parade on the public streets, were using their clubs freely and, not satisfied merely with breaking up the parade, were following individual paraders on to private property and into private homes to club and beat them without provocation.

Similar vicious anti labor practices have been the vogue on the part of police officials in the cities of Chicago and Los Angeles.

These developments follow on the heels of other instances of police killings and lynchings of Negro people, including returning veterans, in various parts of the South and of brutal police actions against pickets in other parts of the country.

These are not simply isolated instances without relation to each other. Each unpunished act of police brutality is an encouragement to the same pattern of conduct elsewhere. It is important that all forces of Government and the people be brought to bear in defense of democratic and constitutional rights to prevent any spread of a program of terror and lynch spirit.

It is extremely important, therefore, that the Attorney General of the U. S. rise to the very special responsibility imposed on him by these developments and undertake vigorous prosecution of public officials who engage in violations of the Federal Rights Act.

Our own organization and all others alive to the need for carrying on an active defense of civil rights should make every effort by messages, public meetings and mutual cooperation to make their voices heard by those public officials who have been involved in these incidents or who may be tempted to follow the examples set in these incidents.

We urge that the Tennessee officials, both State and local, take every posible action to assure a fair trial for the Negro citizens who have been arrested, to assure full restitution to the victims of the police action and to assure prompt prosecution of the officers responsible for these illegal actions.

We pledge our every effort to assure proper defense for the persons involved in these arrests and for the rights of the victims of police action.

Price Control

America is threatened by inflation. The National Association of Manufacturers, the real estate lobbies, the producers lobbies of one sort or another, are organized and geared to destroy the American standard of living. They are operating through a coalition of reactionary Southern Democrats and Republicans who have announced their intention to defeat price control.

The opposition to inflation must come from the American people, from labor, consumers and veterans. The fight must be waged on the broadest terms with the closest cooperation of all groups in the country affected by inflation. Labor's gains in the recent wage struggles are at stake. The gains made on the picket line must now be defended in Congress.

The issue is being resolved now in the fight for the renewal of the Price Control Act. Hearings are being held before the House Banking and Currency Committee on HR 5270, which provides for the renewal of the Price Control Act for one year and for the continuation of subsidies to help hold down the cost of living.

The strategy of the inflationists is: (1) to stall the renewal of the Act by prolonged hearings; (2) to cripple the law by amendment; (3) to make price enforcement impossible by cutting OPA funds.

To protect incomes, small savings, and uphold and extend the American standard of living, the people must fight to RENEW OPA WITHOUT DELAY, WITHOUT AMENDMENTS, AND WITH ADEQUATE ENFORCEMENT FUNDS.

Here is what our unions must do:

1. See that every local in your area discusses this question of price control and wage increases at their regular meetings.

2. Organize postcard and letter campaigns in every shop to write to your Congressman demanding that he vote for this bill without amendment. Also write to the Hon. Brent Spence, chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

3. Find out if the Congressman in your area is at home. Pay him a visit with a large delegation.

4. Be prepared on call from the National CIO to send delegations to Washington.

5. Arouse your community, your church, civic, veterans, farmers, women's consumers, and other public-minded organizations to back you. This is the fight of all the people. There is no better opportunity for the CIO to demonstrate its leadership in the fight for the general welfare than this drive against inflation.

We call your special attention to the need of working with the veterans on this issue. They are being given a raw deal by Congress on housing. The skyrocketing of prices makes it impossible for them to get adequate housing, food, clothing and other needs for themselves and their families. The monopolists and reactionaries have thrown a challenge to the American people. We stopped the inflationists and their powerful lobbies before. We will do it again. Let's protect those wage increases. Let's protect and extend our American democracy.

CIO GAINS SPUR ORGANIZING

(Continued from Page 2)

5. Calling on all unions to mobilize a nationwide campaign in behalf of the price control act, in which the CIO board pointed out that "gains made on the picket line must now be defended in Congress."

6. Favoring a unified social security program behind which the people can rally.

7. Criticizing the U. S. delegation to the United Nations for its part in preventing full acceptance of the World Federation of Trade Unions as a member of the Social and Economic Council of the world organization.

8. Protesting police brutality in connection with the wanton murder of two Negroes, in Columbia, Tenn., and in attacks on striking CIO electrical workers in Philadelphia.

The board heard a report on trade union conditions in occupied Germany from Sidney Hillman, head of the Amlagamated Clothing Workers, who spent three weeks in all four of the country's occupational zones as a member of the WFTU delegation which studied the problem.

The WFTU report, which was approved by the board, described the rebuilding of the German unions and urged that all four occupying powers continue to give all possible assistance to the rekindling of democratic organizations.

Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, head of an 11-man CIO delegation which spent several days in the Soviet Union last October, presented to the Board the report of that delegation. It described the warm reception given the CIO representatives by the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions and by the Soviet people, and called for the promotion of "closer understanding and cooperation" with the Soviet.

The report said the delegation was "impressed with the character of the Soviet trade unions, and with their many excellent activities in promoting the interest of the workers in the economic, social and cultural fields."

W. L. Douglas Shoes
W. L. DOUGLAS SHOE CO., BROCKTON 15, MASS.
WASHINGTON
905 PENN. AVENUE N. W.
(Opposite Department of Justice Building)
(Men's Shoes Exclusively)
STORES IN PRINCIPAL CITIES • GOOD DEALERS EVERYWHERE

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Out in The Open Air

The long-known fact that a reactionary Republican-southern Democrat alliance is operating in Congress became official with this week's admission that a formal, organized group exists with a chairman and 150 members.

Chairman of the now openly admitted tory bloc is Rep. Fred A. Hartley (R. N.J.), with Rep. Howard Smith (D. Va.) as the No. 2 man. On the steering committee are Reps. Fred Crawford (R. Mich.), Graham Barden (D. N.C.), A. S. Camp (D. Ga.), Dudley Roe (D. Md.), Thomas Jenkins (R. O.), Howard Buffet (R. Neb.) and Frank Sundstrom (R. N.J.).

Rep. Hartley, who did the talking for the group at its opening press conference in Washington, also boasts that a similar unit is being formed in the Senate.

Leadership there will come from Sens. Wherry (R. Neb.), Tom Stewart (D. Tenn.) and John Bankhead (D. Ala.).

All of these men are sworn enemies of price control, of labor and of consumers generally. And all of them are in positions of power in Congress.

Here's a list of their committee membership, where they can do the most harm to the interests of the entire nation:

Hartley (R. N.J.) belongs to the House Labor Committee and to the Committee to Investigate Acts of Executive Agencies Which Exceed Their Authority.

This last one, for all its long and fantastic name, exercises real power over such government agencies as OPA, NLRB and the like. It has used that power consistently to harass these agencies and to force them to distort the laws they are supposed to administer.

Rep. Smith (D. Va.) belongs to the all-powerful House Rules Committees and is chairman of the Committee To Investigate etc.

Rep. Crawford (R. Mich.) is the ranking GOP member of the Banking and Currency Committee, now holding hearings on price control.

Barden belongs to the Labor Committee; Jenkins (R. O.) to Ways and Means, which controls such issues as social security, taxation, etc. Both Buffett (R. Neb.) and Sundstrom (R. N.J.) are members of Banking and Currency—where Buffett has been especially vocal in fighting price control.

These men are no small potatoes. Through their committee memberships, through seniority, and through their place in their parties, they can exercise power far beyond their numbers.

The only answer to this tory bloc is a fighting organization of real liberals, with guts, in the House and in the Senate.

A little Administration leadership would be a big help also.

Report on Lobbies

Rep. Adolph Sabath (D. Ill.), senior member of the House and chairman of the Rules Committee, has a bill in the works to look into lobbying activities on Capitol Hill. Earlier this week Speaker Sam Rayburn (D. Tex.) let off a blast at the utility lobby.

Said Sabath in introducing his bill: "Lobbyists are infesting Washington for the purpose of defeating or weakening legislation in the interest of the people of the U. S. and especially of veterans."

Thirty years ago, such charges would have received top play in the press. Today, both Sabath's and Rayburn's blasts are stuck back on page 20, behind the sports pages.

Not that the press deliberately suppresses news of lobbies operating in Washington. On the contrary, the newspapers throw their columns wide open to the lobbies that fight against price control, for inflation and superprofits.

They open their pages to the Natl. Assn. of Real Estate Boards in the drive for lifting all rent controls and the drive against building houses for veterans.

They give columns of space—and leg-art pictures furnished by the press agents—to the Natl. Retail Dry Goods Assn. for its fight against price control and OPA.

They faithfully reprint whatever the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers hands out for free publication along with its juicy full-page advertisements.

They play up anything the food monopoly lobbyists such as General Foods, Standard Brands, etc. send them against price control, and carry out their directives in fighting the 65c minimum wage bill.

And of course they print long quotes from anything said by Taft, Rankin, Ellender and their like.

Rep. Sabath's proposal to look into Washington lobbies is a good one—if the probe is full and honest and does not shrink from exposing the highly "respectable" outfits like the NAM.

Better still is the organization of broad, militant people's lobbies to counteract the real estate agents, the manufacturers, the wholesalers and the other assorted parasites and profiteers now "infesting Washington."

Better even than that is the organization of active, broad political action to send to Congress the kind of Rpr-seentatives that will fight for the people and against the profiteers.

That job is up to us. No one else will do it.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Anti-labor (Case, Ball, etc.)	Case and other bills have been trimmed down by Senate Labor Committee, with many objectionable features out.	Senate Labor report out soon; danger is from amendments on Senate floor.	Keep wiring Senators to oppose all labor restrictive bills.
Price control HR 5270	Renews price control act to June 1947. Battle will be on weakening amendments, not on outright renewal.	Still in House Banking and Currency Committee. Most vicious lobby in Congressional history operating for amendments to gut control.	Wire, write, send delegations, visit Congressmen; demand early renewal, no amendments, full OPA funds.
65c wage S 1349	Raises present 40c wage level to 65c; extends coverage to food, maritime, telegraph and retail workers.	Senate floor debate this week. Sweatshop agents (Sen. Ball, R. Minn.; Ellender, D. La.) for 55c rate; narrow coverage.	Wire Senators to support 65c rate, full coverage; fight filibuster threatened by Ellender.
Housing HR 4761	Originally designed to carry out Wyatt plan of 2,700,000 houses by '47. Had price ceilings and subsidies as key to plan.	Gutted in House by GOP-Democrat coalition on orders of Natl. Assn. of Real Estate Boards. Now to Senate.	Wire Senators to restore ceilings, subsidies as only way to make Wyatt plan a reality.
Polltax repeal HR 7	Helps clear out polltax reactionaries by giving vote to 10 million Negro and white Southerners.	Passed House; now awaits Senate action. Filibuster planned.	Tell Senators to vote gag on filibuster, pass HR 7.

MAKE A DATE WITH YOUR CONGRESSMAN—REGISTER NOW!

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

FOOD: There's nothing that a profiteer will shrink from, as demonstrated in repeated demands for lifting of all ceilings prices on wheat, corn and other cereals now being made.

The demands are made in the name of "feeding Europe and Asia." Actually, increasing price ceilings on food will result in less, not more food going to victims of fascism.

UNRRA, the only United Nations buying agency, has a budget limited to 1% of each participating country's national income. This amount was fixed by international conference when UNRRA was set up. It cannot be increased.

Consequently, increasing prices on cereals will cut even further the amounts UNRRA can buy.

Here's a note on "voluntary rationing" now being urged by Hoover and Truman. During World War I, there were voluntary "wheatless days." Result was increased, not decreased, use of wheat, since people ate more in anticipation of "wheatless day."

ATOMIC: Along with military control of atomic energy, now put into Sen. McMahon's (D. Conn.) bill by Sen. Vandenberg (R. Mich.) goes a threat to civil rights that makes the Dies Committee look like pikers.

Under this amendment, the brass hats can "check every phone call, every memorandum written and the hiring of all personnel" on atomic project sites.

Vandenberg's amendment is a long step toward a military dictatorship in this country. It is the real reason behind the current spy-scares and witch-hunts being drummed up here and in Britain and Canada.

The FBI has its nickel's worth in on the spy scare with a proposal to "tighten up" on our "counter-espionage." Best plum for the witch-hunters is a plan to up fines to $300,000 and jail raps to 35 years for violating "security."

SO LONG: The editor of the Washington Guide is leaving with this issue, going to work for the CIO Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers Union.

He wants to say thanks for all the help and guidance from his readers, from the CIO Legislative Committee, and from the officers of the CIO.

Henry C. Fleisher, just back from the Army after three years of service, will take over. He was with The CIO NEWS from its beginning.

So long—lots of luck—and don't forget—Lucky Strike Means Fink Tobacco!

C. W. Fowler

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
C. W. Fowler, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 13 | Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS | $1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY — $1.50 IN CANADA | March 25, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

ATTENTION—THE SENATE

Charge to the account of _____ $ _____

CLASS OF SERVICE DESIRED
DOMESTIC		CABLE
TELEGRAM		ORDINARY
DAY LETTER		URGENT RATE
SERIAL		DEFERRED
NIGHT LETTER		NIGHT LETTER

Patrons should check class of service desired, otherwise the message will be transmitted as a telegram or ordinary cablegram

WESTERN UNION

1208

A. N. WILLIAMS
PRESIDENT

CHECK

ACCOUNTING INFORMATION

TIME FILED

Send the following telegram, subject to the terms on back hereof, which are hereby agreed to

FOR VICTORY BUY WAR BONDS TODAY

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE U. S. SENATE:

THE CIO STRONGLY URGES YOU TO VOTE FOR IMMEDIATE PASSAGE OF THE 65¢ MINIMUM WAGE BILL (S 1349) AS REPORTED OUT OF THE SENATE EDUCATION & LABOR COMMITTEE, WITH PROGRESSIVE AMENDMENTS. THE LAW WOULD PROVIDE BADLY NEEDED RAISES FOR FROM THREE TO FIVE MILLION PEOPLE WHOSE PITIFULLY LOW PAY IS UTTERLY INADEQUATE TO MEET THE RISING COST OF LIVING.

THE CIO BELIEVES THAT NO ELECTED REPRESENTATIVE OF THE PEOPLE CAN AFFORD TO GO ON RECORD IN OPPOSITION TO A STANDARD OF LIVING OF LESS THAN $26 A WEEK. SIXTY-FIVE CENTS AN HOUR FOR 50 WEEKS A YEAR YIELDS AN ANNUAL WAGE OF ONLY $1,300 BEFORE INCOME TAX. THE U.S. DEPT. OF LABOR REPORTS THAT A FAMILY OF THREE NEEDS $1,950 A YEAR AFTER INCOME TAX FOR A "MINIMUM" STANDARD OF LIVING -- SPENDING ONLY 22¢ PER PERSON PER MEAL AND ONLY $30 A MONTH FOR RENT. I URGE YOU, AS REPRESENTATIVES OF ALL THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES, TO VOTE FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF MILLIONS OF OUR CITIZENS TOWARD THIS MINIMUM STANDARD OF LIVING.

PHILIP MURRAY, PRESIDENT
CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

BLAME HARVESTER STALL FOR STARVATION DIETS

CONTRIBUTING responsibility for the starvation diet of millions of people in Europe and Asia was placed directly on the doorstep of the Intl. Harvester Co. this week by a delegation of dirt farmers who came to Washington to urge government action to end the nine-week-old holdup in farm machinery production.

The farmers, officials of the Natl. Farmers Union, pointed out that the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Union has agreed to accept a federal fact-finding committee report, providing among other things for an 18c-an-hour raise.

The delegation asked federal officials to seize Harvester plants, and put into effect the panel's recommendations if the company continues to refuse to settle the strike, involving 30,000 workers and affecting 60% of the industry's production capacity.

Meanwhile, the Labor Dept. Conciliation Service announced that representatives of the FE and management had been called to Washington for settlement conferences set for March 26. The company this week said it would grant the 18c raise, but hedged its offer with an agreement only to "negotiate" other issues of vital importance to the striking workers.

The visiting farmers, officials in the NFU, included: Homer Duffy, Oklahoma; S. A. Forseth, N. Dak.; Kenneth Hones, Wisconsin; Emil Loriks, S. Dak., and Archie Wright, president, NFU northwestern division.

They charged that 15% of the corn in the Midwest is still standing in the fields, chiefly for lack of badly needed machinery, and that substantial portions of the wheat crop will be standing next fall if production lines do not start within the next 45 to 50 days.

U. S. HIRING POLICIES BLASTED

TWO hiring policies of the Federal Government were sharply protested this week by the CIO Federal Workers Union.

The union said that Sec. 4 of Executive Order 9691 provides in effect for a temporary return to the spoils system. It allows all Federal agencies to do their own hiring without certification or approval by the Civil Service Commission until such time as competitive registers can be set up.

The Federal Workers said that it will take as long as two years to set up registers for some government classifications and that the temporary policy will allow agencies to play politics, resulting in discrimination against veterans and former employes who have lost government jobs and are entitled to employment preference.

The union also protested to the Civil Service Commission against use by Federal agencies in Washington, D. C., of the local U. S. Employment Service, because it segregates job applicants according to race.

Pointing out that such discrimination is directly contrary to Federal employment policy, the union demanded that Federal agencies be barred from using USES as a recruiting source so long as the segregation is maintained.

HEAR PHILIP MURRAY

3:45 P.M., EST—Saturday, March 30—CBS

Two Full, Weekly 15-Minute Radio Programs, of and for CIO

1. Cross-Section—CIO. On-the-spot interviews of CIO people by William Downs, noted CBS commentator. Saturdays, 3:45 to 4 P.M., EST.

2. Labor-USA. Dramatic shows. American Broadcasting Co. network. Saturdays, 6:45 to 7 P.M., EST.

Live Listening!

Injunction Case May Bring 40 Months in Jail!

MAXIMUM sentence of 40 months in jail and $5,000 fine face Philip M. "Slim" Connelly, secretary-treasurer of the Los Angeles CIO Council, in a conviction pointing up the danger to labor unions contained in the use of court injunctions limiting picketing.

Connelly, due to be sentenced March 25 in Los Angeles, was charged with rioting, "violating a lawful order," blocking an entrance and disturbing the peace, after a police attack on a CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers picket line at the U. S. Motors Corp.

In Washington this week, CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman said the CIO will give full support to an appeal from the lower court finding of "guilty."

"Mr. Connelly took his stand in support of the right of workers to picket and to make their grievances known to the public," Pressman said. "We regard that as a constitutional right, upheld by decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court."

Connelly's conviction—with 24 other arrested pickets yet to be tried—was the outcome of an attack on the picket line by 100 police with three-foot clubs and tear gas, on Jan. 17.

Excuse for the attack was a temporary injunction, issued without a hearing by the same judge who presided at Connelly's trial—Henry M. Willis.

Connelly said that police officials pointed out him and a dozen others for arrest prior to the attack, which followed reading of the injunction over a sound truck.

The clubbings which then broke up the picket line injured more than two dozen workers, one of whom suffered a broken leg.

Connelly, who said that his conviction will be appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court if necessary, said that Judge Willis re-instructed the jury after it had been deadlocked 12 hours and had expressed a desire to be discharged.

The strike, which involves 700 workers, has kept U. S. Motors closed tight since Jan. 11. Main issues are wages and a union shop contract.

Connelly charged that the police attack is part of a pattern set by Mayor Fletcher Bowron, who recently formed a vigilante "Law and Order" committee headed by the former president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, James L. Beebe, a corporation lawyer.

Out To Beat Bricker

The Ohio CIO's Political Action Committee has taken on the job of keeping John W. Bricker out of the U. S. Senate in 1946 and eliminating him as a possible Republican Presidential candidate in 1948. CIO-PAC this week indorsed Democrat Marvin Harrison, Cleveland attorney, for senator in the coming primary campaign.

While indorsing Harrison, the committee said it would back either of his other two rivals—incumbent Sen. James W. Huffman or former Rep. Stephen Young—should one of them win. Bricker, former governor of the state, is the Republican candidate.

UE REJECTS 9.7c BAIT FROM WESTINGHOUSE

THE first wage offer of the Westinghouse Electric Corp. made after months of conferences and 10 weeks of strike amounts to no more than 9.7c an hour, with 10,000 lamp workers receiving no increase at all, the Westinghouse Negotiating Committee of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers charged this week. The UE rejected the offer as "an attack on Westinghouse workers' right to live in decency and health."

The UE put forward its own "minimum proposals for settlement of the strike" which include the demand that "Westinghouse offer an 18½c-per-hour wage increase to all employes," equalling the UE wage settlement made by General Electric and General Motors.

In addition the union demands that employes on strike shall return to work without discrimination from the corporation and that Westinghouse will immediately enter into negotiations with the union, following the strike, on terms of the 1946-47 contract. Any unresolved questions would be settled by arbitration, according to the union's proposals.

The UE statement, in a letter to the Westinghouse Corp. signed by the UE General Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak and UE Intl. Rep. Edward Matthews, said that the Westinghouse offer "excludes all hourly and salary-rated employes of the company's lamp division, some 10,000 in all. This is the first wage offer you have made after 10 weeks of strike by 75,000 members of this union. The multitude of conditions with which you have surrounded your offer nullify it.

"In estimating the wage cuts which bring your offer down to an average of 9.7c an hour," the UE statement pointed out, "the union considered only those of your conditions that can easily be translated into immediate terms of cents per hour . . . the 25 pages of conditions with which you have surrounded your wage offer include forms of wage cuts not immediately translatable in terms of cents per hour, which would destroy the stability of wages and conditions in your plants and which would within less than one year cut rates far below their present levels."

YOU CAN DEPEND ON THE CIO NEWS

FOR THE BEST CIO COVERAGE EVERY WEEK

The Record Tells the Story

- STEEL—First week of month-long strike, CIO NEWS (16 pages) went to town at Pittsburgh: All of page 1, top story page 3, all of pages 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. Full details until victory issue Feb. 25—all of pages 1, 3, 6, 7.

- AUTO—GM strike got big "play," made all of page 1 four out of 17 issues, picture spreads and big feature coverage Nov. 26, Dec. 3, Jan. 7, Feb. 18 and March 18, as crises developed. Human needs of strikers got all of pages 1, 2, 3 on Feb. 18.

- UE—Jan. 21, all of pages 1, 6, 7 on community support for strikes. Feb. 4, all of pages 1, 6, 7 on UE organizational unity. March 4, full page blow up of best police violence picture of the year. March 11, all of pages 1, 8, 9 on injunctions, danger to all labor.

THIS WEEK AND EVERY WEEK, READ

THE CIO NEWS

$1 A YEAR; $1.50 IN CANADA

(Special Union Rates on Request)

SEND ME THE CIO NEWS FOR ONE YEAR

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... State .....

(Send Cash, Check or Money Order)

Senate Stalling

DEMAND ACTION NOW ON POLLTAX

IT'S about time that the anti-poll tax bill, smouldering in a Senate committee grave since last October, came out for a vote.

That's the gist of an increasingly strong demand in Washington as labor and liberals mobilize a final and decisive push to get the bill (H.R. 7) passed by Congress. Approved by the House last fall, the proposal to remove the tax in seven southern states and provide millions of low income voters with the right to vote, has been kept under wraps by its opponents. Most of the opposition comes from southern reactionaries in Congress who realize that when the people in their districts get the vote, they'll be out of jobs.

To spur the drive for abolition of the feudal tax, the week of March 24-31 has been named "Abolish the Poll Tax Week." In Washington Sen. Homer Ferguson (R. Mich.) and Sen. James Mead (D. N. Y.) called upon the American people to make a special effort during the week to use "all the powers of expression . . . in this great democracy" to guarantee action on the bill.

"As Americans we believe that the best and only way to solve the differences that may come between us is by the honorable and hallowed way of a free vote," the two Senators declared. "We stand before the world today as pleaders for other nations to settle their differences by this method.

"Therefore we cannot longer stand for the condition that still exists in seven of our southern states whereby the people are denied a free vote by the archaic and inexcusable polltax."

The statement, which was issued by the Natl. Committee to Abolish the Polltax, warned the public to be on the alert against a filibuster gag, by which the polltax bill has twice before been killed by a conspiracy of long-winded reactionaries in the Senate.

Other support for the bill has been voiced by Sen. Claude Pepper (D. Fla.), and by Barry Bingham, Kentucky newspaper publisher.

Discussing the danger of a rear-guard action by the tories to prevent the bill coming up for vote, Bingham declared: "I believe the time has come when the American public must decide whether it will allow a minority group in Congress to stifle legislation."

CIO, always a strong supporter of the bill to kill the tax, called for Senate action at its recent board meeting. The Board noted that every piece of legislation designed to aid the people's welfare has been mauled and weakened, and added:

"This betrayal of the people by their elected representatives has been made possible by the operation of the polltax system in seven states, whereby Congressmen representing but a small minority of their constituents are able to join hands with representatives of the minority party and thwart the wishes of the majority."

"All-out for passage of the 65c minimum wage bill" is the slogan down New Orleans way. Above, a typical meeting at the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers Union to plan distribution of petitions to Congress.

TO FOOD, TOBACCO: C. W. Fowler, assistant to Len De Caux, CIO publicity director and editor of The CIO NEWS, is leaving to become publicity director of the CIO Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers Union, in Philadelphia. With the CIO almost from its inception, Fowler is being replaced by Henry C. Fleisher, just returned from the Army.

65c AN HOUR PAY VOTE UP FOR SENATE DECISION

IS $16 a week enough to live on? Should employers be permitted to pay that starvation wage to American workers?

These questions, debated at length on the floor of the Senate all this week, will come to vote probably this week when the Senate decides whether it will order minimum wages lifted from 40c an hour to 65c.

Mobilized behind the bill (S. 1349) are the CIO and dozens of civic organizations; against it are vested interests in the nation's low wage industries, intent on preserving sub-standard pay levels.

The bill, in addition to lifting pay standards, would extend the benefits of the Fair Labor Standards Act to seamen and workers in fish and food processing plants, as well as to those in large retail and service establishments.

Supporters of the proposal pointed out that in addition to giving protection to the employes of low wage industries, the 65c minimum would be an added brace in the wage structure of plants where unions have been able to push pay rates well above the legal minimum.

"We cannot have continued progress for the entire nation unless each and every segment of national life progresses," Sen. Carville (D., Nev.) reminded the Senate durng the debate.

"During the war, the speed of a convoy was determined by the speed of the slowest ship in the group. So will the level of our national existence be determined by the minimum wage we establish here. Let's not put the drag of a bare-existence wage on the American standard of living."

In the House, which has not yet started discussion of the bill pending the Senate's action, Rep. LaFollette (R. Ind.) reminded his colleagues that the 65c bill will affect not only workers in the south, but in every section of the country.

"No doubt the average well-informed person would assume that no such wages as 48c an hour would be paid in any fairly large manufacturing plant in Indiana," Rep. LaFollette said. He recalled that recent examination of wages at the Indiana Cotton Mills in Cannelton had shown pay ranging from a minimum for permanent employes of 48c an hour to 53c as a plant average.

Sen. Tunnell (D. Del.) carried the ball for supporters of the bill when the Senate discussion commenced.

Even the 65c hourly minimum will fail to give workers the decent standard of living they deserve, he asserted, but it will be a big improvement over the 40c legal minimum now in force.

Quoting a recent Dept. of Labor study of living costs, the Senator declared that in 1944 in order to break even a family of three persons should have had an income of $1,950 after income taxes. Senators who vote to keep the working people of today under a minimum $800, or 50 weeks at $16 a week, are voting an injustice which they may be able to settle with their consciences, but the laboring man cannot settle with his merchants by such wages.

"We in the Senate are asked today not to raise that minimum amount, but to hold in front of the workingman of America a barrier which says: "Thou shalt not have healthy children. Thou shalt not have the conveniences of life."

"We are asked to vote for a thing of that sort, and yet we say we believe in free enterprise. Enterprise of whom, for whom?"

Other liberal Senators joined in to attack the tories' argument that industry couldn't afford the increased minimum, and that workers "don't need more money." Sen. Aiken (R. Vt.) scoffed at the idea that most low income workers are single and don't need more money. If they had more pay, they might not stay single, the Senator pointed out, recognizing the theory that two can't live as cheaply as one.

Sen. Pepper (D. Fla.) recalled that terrible pictures of "American industry going bankrupt" because of the old 40c minimum were painted when the Fair Labor Standards Act was first discussed in 1938. The same businessmen who once claimed fear of bankruptcy now confide to him, Pepper said, that the law hasn't "driven us out of business. We are better off than we were."

Sen. Thomas (D. Utah) chairman of the Labor Committee, declared that studies of the original act showed it to be inadequate since it covers only half the workers and the base pay is too low.

To Sen. Guffey (D. Pa.) passage of the bill is necessary if the American people are to keep faith with returning vets.

"Remember when they marched off to war, the kid down the street, and the druggist's son, your sons and nephews? Remember how fervently we promised them in friendly salute and by legislative enactment, that we would provide for them when they came home. We made these promises resolutely, in good faith, and we must keep them as resolutely as we made them," Guffey recalled.

Buckmaster a New CIO Vice-President

Newest vice-president of the CIO is L. S. Buckmaster, president of the CIO Rubber Workers Union. He was unanimously elected at last week's Executive Board meeting, to replace Sherman Dalrymple, who resigned as president of the URW.

PASS THE AMMUNITION

Now's the time to pass the ammunition to millions of underpaid workers battling against high living costs and sweatshop exploitation, as the Senate prepares to vote on the 65c minimum wage bill.

This bill would amend the Fair Labor Standards Act to boost the present 40c minimum to 65c, prohibit child labor and extend the Act's protection to food processing, maritime, telegraph and retail workers.

Considering the great increases in living costs since the original Act was passed and the low minimum proposed, it is scandalous that the 65c minimum should be so viciously opposed by a sweatshop bloc of polltax Democrats and tory Republicans.

This opposition takes the form of efforts to cut down the proposed minimum, to deprive many groups of workers of protection and to tack on the inflationary Pace bill as a rider.

The CIO is urging the Senate to reject all crippling amendments and to enact the full 65c bill without any compromises that would destroy its effectiveness.

This bill is of immediate concern to every American. Higher paid workers need it for their protection as well as do those underpaid workers whose wages will be directly affected. For sweatshop-wage competition is a constant threat to decent pay standards. And no American can rest easy so long as millions of his fellow-citizens continue to be exploited at starvation wages.

Wire your Senators to vote for the 65c bill with full coverage, and urge your Representative to do likewise in the House.

A BIG BUCK'S-WORTH

You want prices kept down, so your wages won't be cut at the store-counter.

You want sweatshop wages raised at least to a minimum of 65c an hour.

You want your union gains protected against union-busting legislation.

You want some security through adequate benefits in time of unemployment, ill-health, old age.

You want these and many other progressive social measures, and to see our country guided along the paths of democracy, peace and prosperity.

Congress has it in its power to grant these vital benefits. But you will have to take political action to get results.

In this election year particularly, you will not only have to register and vote yourself, but you will have to join in promoting big registration drives and intensive political campaigning for the selection of good candidates in the primaries and their election in the fall.

The CIO Political Action Committee can get the results you want, if it has the active assistance of all members, unions and councils —and this includes adequate financing.

This CIO has launched a drive for voluntary contributions for PAC of at least $1 from each member.

You'll get more for that buck than for any dollar you ever spent.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

FAIRY stories and popular movies and novels base much of their appeal on the imaginary fulfillment of wishes that are common to most people.

They create all sorts of situations in which folks like ourselves are more or less miraculously granted their heart's desire for love, wealth, pleasure, adventure.

While this sort of entertainment has an undoubted fascination, it tends to result in idle dreams of the impossible, or in a defeatist attitude, that only through some kind of a miracle can our wishes be fulfilled.

Practical and intelligent people avoid both these extremes. They set for themselves goals that are capable of achievement, figure out the necessary steps to be taken, and then devote their efforts to getting these results.

The secret of CIO's powerful appeal to the popular imagination is that it has become the expression of the commonest wishes of millions of people and has managed to fulfill many of these wishes to an almost miraculous degree.

★ ★ ★

The first resolutions of the CIO expressed the wishes of millions of unorganized workers for higher wages, more leisure, greater independence and other union advantages.

When the CIO first resolved to organize the millions of unorganized in mass-production industries, there were plenty of scoffers who said this would take a miracle.

But the CIO went ahead and performed this miracle, through sound planning, wise leadership and endless effort. Millions were organized and won higher wages, shorter hours, vacations with pay, seniority rights and countless other union benefits.

When the CIO resolved to build a labor political movement, scoffers also abounded. They said you might get workers to join unions, but you'd never get them to vote together.

Nevertheless, the CIO built a PAC that swept the country, drove the reactionaries crazy, elected many progressives and resulted in much legislation to better the lot of ordinary folks.

Not long ago, the CIO adopted resolutions for a movement to win substantial increases in basic wage rates.

Once more it was expressing the deepest wishes and needs of millions, many of whom doubted their wishes could be fulfilled.

But again the CIO set its goals, planned its campaign, mobilized its members, exerted the necessary effort, and finally succeeded in winning wage increases of close to $1.50 a day for millions of workers.

★ ★ ★

Now the CIO executive board has met and adopted a whole string of new resolutions, expressing the heartfelt wishes of most workers for higher living standards, more security, more democracy and world peace.

In the light of past CIO successes in fulfilling the wishes expressed in its resolutions, there should be fewer scoffers now.

For, once more, the CIO has set for itself attainable goals, has mapped a practical plan of action, and is determined to mobilize the energy and effort necessary to achieve them.

★ ★ ★

The CIO is determined that the wage increases it has won shall not be lost through inflationary price increases, nor undercut by the substandard wages of unorganized workers.

It has resolved on a nation-wide campaign to renew the Price Control Act without amendments and with adequate enforcement funds; on a carefully planned million-dollar organizing campaign throughout the unorganized South; and on aggressive efforts to secure enactment of a 65c minimum wage and a vastly extended social security system.

As a means of achieving these results, blocking anti-labor legislation and securing more democracy and greater social progress, the CIO has also resolved on an intensified political action campaign; on renewed efforts to abolish the polltax, and to build and back the PAC with voluntary contributions of $1 apiece from all members.

At the same time, the CIO resolved to continue its efforts for world peace, through support of the World Federation of Trade Unions, through demands for real labor representation in the United Nations Organization, and through close and friendly relations with the workers of other countries, as exemplified by the report of the CIO delegation to the Soviet Union.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, L. S. Buckmaster, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 March 25, 1946 No. 13

MORE FIRMS END 'SUPER' THEORY

THE number of corporations which have kicked out Selective Service's "super-seniority" continued to grow this week with the Allegheny Ludlum Corp. and the Aluminum Company of America signing agreements with the CIO Steelworkers governing employment of veterans and non-veterans.

The contract with Allegheny Ludlum provides that all non-veterans who were replaced by veterans under the "super-seniority" shall be restored to jobs to which their seniority entitled them.

The Aluminum Co. agreed that it would discontinue super-seniority but the Steelworkers told the firm that it would continue its claims for back wages and restoration of employes who have been displaced by veterans with less seniority.

Both companies decided to end "super-seniority" after the 2nd U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled against it.

★ ★ ★

The Veterans Administration this week announced an apprenticeship training program virtually following recommendations made by the CIO Veterans Committee and the CIO Auto Workers for apprenticeship training.

Under the VA program all state-approved joint apprenticeship committees or similar management-labor committees are recognized as training institutions.

The VA, at the same time, is guarding against the attempt of employers to use apprenticeship training to subsidize industry. Another VA ruling states the veteran taking training shall be paid a sufficient wage.

The CIO several months ago complained that some veterans receiving apprenticeship training were being paid less than the prevailing wages, the employer deigning to consider subsistence payment received by the ex-GI from the government as part of his wages.

★ ★ ★

John C. Williamson, assistant national legislative representative for the Veterans of Foreign Wars, this week asked the Senate Committee on Education and Labor to extend the federal control of the United States Employment Service to Jan. 1, 1947. The CIO has been pressing for extension of USES.

Williamson told the committee that his organization had grown to a membership of 1,600,000. He said that as a veterans organization, the V. F. W. was not concerned with "the question of ultimate state or federal control of public employment offices, however, we are greatly concerned with the prospect of a diminution or deterioration of service to millions of unemployed veterans during the reconversion period. The facts are relatively simple and lead, in our opinion, to an inescapable conclusion."

It Pays to Belong To The Union!

A U. S. Supreme decision last week involving the Ford Motor Co. and an employe, Joseph Nierotko, marked the final phase of a legal battle in which the CIO Auto Workers Union won back jobs for 3,000 Ford workers and $2,600,000 in back pay, according to UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas and Ford Director Richard Leonard.

The fight, led by UAW Attorney Maurice Sugar, started in 1936 with the discharges. The UAW's 1941 strike and NLRB action brought reinstatement then with back pay.

The union then went to bat to win equitable adjustments of income taxes on the back pay and a guarantee that Social Security protection would be awarded the workers during the period of their discharge.

The Supreme Court decision this week will increase the amount of the workers' old age benefits and will make it possible for the widows of workers who died to collect benefits.

HIT UN SLAP AT WORLD LABOR

SHARP protest was registered last week by the CIO Executive Board against rejection by the United Nations of the request of the World Federation of Trade Unions for full participation in work of the Social & Economic Council. The UN granted the WFTU only a consultative position.

"This action was taken on the initiative of the U. S. delegation to the United Nations, which acted as the organizer of the campaign against the WFTU, notwithstanding the fact that the request of the WFTU was supported by three of the Big Five powers as well as by a number of other governments," the CIO Board said.

Pointing out that organizations like the CIO affiliated with the WFTU have 66 million members in 52 nations, the Board said:

"The CIO protests the arbitrary and ill-considered action of the U. S. delegation in depriving the WFTU of an effective voice in the Social and Economic Council despite its unique character as the representative of substantially the entire trade union membership of the world."

RADIO NOTES

The Federal Communications Commission this week granted an FM (frequency modulation) broadcasting license to the Metropolitan Broadcasting Co., Washington, D. C.

The station is owned by a group of liberal residents of the capital.

* * *

Upton Close, darling of the native fascists, is back on the air via the Mutual network.

Twice forced off the radio because of his pro-fascist leanings, the news commentator is being sponsored by reactionary Merwin K. Hart's Natl. Economic Council. Hart is a Franco apologist.

Close in March, 1941, said he saw little reason for having war with Japan, but after Pearl Harbor he plugged a policy of trying to take the heat off Hitler by warning that "our greatest threat lies in the Pacific . . ."

ARE YOU UNFAIR to the Union Label?

PLAIN OR TIPPED

Union people who do not boost union label goods are unfair to their union and unfair to themselves . . . because union-made means well-made!

Raleigh Cigarettes are the most widely distributed union label product in the world . . . every time you say "A pack of Raleighs" you boost your union label!

Be fair to your label . . . be fair to yourself . . .

SMOKE Raleigh

THROAT PROTECTION ★ BETTER TASTE ★ LASTING FRESHNESS

CIO Report On:

UNIONS IN THE SOVIET

What are the Soviet trade Unions like? Government-controlled "company unions" is the description peddled in many sections of the U. S. press. But an 11-man CIO delegation which visited Moscow and Leningrad last October came back "impressed with the character of the Soviet trade unions, and with their many excellent activities." Here are excerpts from the report of the CIO delegation, which was headed by Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey.

THANKS to the excellent arrangements made by our Soviet Trade Union hosts, with whom we worked out a schedule enabling us to see all that we asked or were able to see in the period, the delegation was able to cover an extraordinary amount of ground during its visit, including a trip to Leningrad as well as Moscow, many visits to different industrial plants, and countless opportunities to meet with Soviet trade unionists and to obtain all the information we requested.

Most of the delegation's last day in the Soviet Union was spent at the headquarters of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions in Moscow, a large office building housing some 600 employes of that organization as well as 600 officers and employes of about a score of affiliated unions that share the headquarters.

100% Social Security

The CIO delegation heard the Soviet social security system outlined by A. I. Gurbonov, Director of the social insurance department of the AUCCTU.

This system is very comprehensive, Mr. Gurbonov said, being designed to cover all contingencies of loss of income for a worker and his family from whatever cause. It includes benefits to women during pregnancy and childbirth; sickness and accident insurance, designed to maintain a worker's income at its average level until he can return to work; support for families whose breadwinner loses the capacity to work; old age and widows' pensions; payment of funeral expenses, and many other features.

The social security system, he pointed out, covers all wage and salary earners in the USSR. It is financed entirely by a fund collected by the government from employing establishments in proportion to the number of employes in each, and the workers themselves are required to make no contribution to this fund from their wages.

The trade union movement has complete charge over the administration and distribution of social insurance funds, Mr. Gurbonov said. The AUCCTU draws up the annual social insurance budget, which is then submitted to the government and passed on by the Supreme Soviet (corresponding to the U. S. Congress).

Industrial Unionism

Director Peter Kazakov of the AUCCTU Organization Department outlined for us the structure of the Soviet trade union movement. He said that industrial unionism is the rule there as in the CIO, with all the workers in each plant in a single union and one industrial union for each industry.

There are 168 All-Union industrial unions affiliated to the AUCCTU, each of them with divisions for the various Soviet Republics in which they operate. In addition, there are regional and district committees, and each factory has its shop committee and committees for each department. As a general rule a shop steward is elected for each 20 workers.

Secret Ballots

Mr. Kazakov emphasized that all union elections are by secret ballot. Departmental and shop committees and shop stewards are elected directly by the workers in the shops who also elect their delegates to district and regional conventions, which conventions in turn elect the district and regional committees and the delegates to All-Union conventions.

Union membership dues vary in different organizations and approximate 1% of the workers' wages. The unions pay a per capita tax to the AUCCTU ranging from 1 to 4% of the dues they receive from their members.

For additional information on the unions' part in determining wage rates the CIO delegation interviewed Alex Stepanov, director of the Wages department of the AUCCTU.

He explained that the budget for each industry in the Soviet Union is drawn up by a top government planning body on which the AUCCTU is represented and consulted on the proportion of the budget which should go to wages so that it can present the workers' demands and work for their incorporation in the national plan.

Collective Bargaining

Once the total payroll has been determined for a particular industry, the government Commissariat (department) directing that industry consults with the industrial union on how this budget shall be divided between the various plants and sections of the industry. Finally, the union shop committee in each plant works out with its management the wage rates for the workers employed in that plant.

In determining piece rates and rates of output per worker, the workers concerned are in all cases consulted, Mr. Stepanov said. They discuss the matter in factory meetings and the shop committee takes up their suggestions and demands with the management, with a view to their incorporation in collective agreement. The final rates have to be referred back to the shop committee and cannot be placed in force until it has attached its signature to them.

Individual grievances over wages and conditions are referred to a "rates and conflict committee" on which management and union are equally represented, according to Mr. Stepanov. This committee can discuss a particular grievance only in the presence of the worker who advances it and the decision must be made openly in his presence. The decision can be appealed through a whole series of higher committees of union and management, but if it is still unsettled after this procedure has been followed the final decision will rest with the AUCCTU. Once a decision has been duly rendered a plant director who fails to comply with it can be taken to court and made to pay damages if found guilty.

For information on prices and the purchasing power of Soviet wages, the CIO delegation interviewed Matthew Borkasov, Director of Workers' Supply Department of the AUCCTU.

Rigid Price Control

Prices for the food and other supplies to which people are entitled on their ration cards are rigidly controlled at pre-war levels. But purchases beyond these rations may also be made at much higher prices at the so-called "commercial store" or for still higher prices on the open market where farmers bring their goods over and above their quota to the State.

Rents are strictly controlled and vary from 5 to 14% of a worker's wages, according to figures given to the delegation.

It is difficult, however, to make any exact appraisal of the purchasing power of Soviet wages because of the above-mentioned differences in prices for goods bought within the ration and the same kind of goods legally purchased beyond the ration; because of the various medical and other social services which a Soviet worker receives free or for a nominal charge; and because of the shortage of most consumer's goods which makes a worker less concerned with the amount of his wages than with finding commodities which he can buy with them.

Friendly Reception

In the evening of October 18 we were given a most warm and friendly send-off at an affair presided over by President Kuznetsov of the AUCCTU, and early in the morning of October 19, we left Moscow by air for London on our way back to the U. S.

The delegation cannot conclude its report without again expressing its deep appreciation to President Kuznetsov and the other officers and members of the Soviet trade unions for their generous and unfailing hospitality.

The reception we received everywhere made a deep impression on us as did the eagerness of all Soviet citizens we met to demonstrate their respect and friendship toward American labor and the American people.

This visit has made us more than ever determined, as CIO representatives, to strengthen our movement's ties with the Soviet trade unions, as with the labor movements of other countries, and to promote closer understanding and cooperation between our peoples for enduring peace and world prosperity and progress.

Unions Like Ours

We were impressed with the character of the Soviet trade unions, and with their many excellent activities in promoting the interest of the workers, in the economic, social welfare and cultural fields—as well as with the most far-reaching character of the social insurance system they operate, which is designed to protect working people and their families against all contingencies from the cradle to the grave.

While there are many obvious differences in the systems and governments of the U. S. and the Soviet Union, we found parallels in the functioning of labor unions in both countries, as indeed throughout the world.

We express our admiration and respect for the effort of the trade unions and the people of the Soviet Union for their part in winning the war and setting about the huge tasks of reconstruction that is absolutely necessary to raise a standard of living that is low compared with American standards.

Reconstruction Progress

We saw horrifying evidences on all sides of ghastly destruction wrought by the Nazis in their invasion of the USSR. But we also saw substantial progress in reconstruction and much evidence of the unity and determination of the people in rebuilding and developing their industries to make possible the higher living standards that will come with increased production.

The U. S. can do much to aid the people of the Soviet Union in their great tasks of reconstruction and economic development by supplying many of the machines, industrial technique, and other products which they so badly need. In so doing, we shall not only be increasing our foreign trade and making more jobs for American workers, but we shall also be laying up a store of good-will for ourselves from a great people whose cooperation we shall need in peace as much as in war for our own future welfare and security.

There must be an enlarged interchange of people between the two countries. Past practices of exchanging students should be expanded, but side by side with this development should go the interchange of workers who can both learn and teach the most modern industrial methods. An organization known as the Intl. Training Administration, Inc., has developed for the U. S. such activity in other cases. Perhaps Soviet Russia will establish a similar vehicle for the interchange of workers between the two countries.

Closer Relations

The recent establishment of a Soviet-American Trade Union Committee, as approved by the CIO Executive Board and the AUCCTU, is heartily welcomed as providing a continuing medium for the exchange of information and the promotion of ever-closer relations between our two trade union movements.

We hope that the visit of the Soviet Trade Union delegation to the United States and our return visit to the USSR will be the forerunner of many similar exchanges in the future.

The peace and prosperity of our countries and of the world depend not only upon the cooperation of governments but even more upon the understanding and friendship which may be fostered between the working and common people of all countries.

The CIO sent our delegation to the USSR to promote this purpose, and our visit has added to our determination to continue its promotion in the future in every way we can.

CIO Delegation

The CIO group which visited the Soviet Union consisted of the following officials: Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey; Vice-Presidents Allan S. Haywood, Joseph Curran, Albert J. Fitzgerald, John Green, Emil Rieve and Reid Robinson; Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel; John Abt, counsel, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Len DeCaux, CIO publicity director and editor, The CIO NEWS; and Vincent Sweeney, publicity director, CIO Steelworkers.

The importance of democratic education to aid the de-Nazification of Germany was stressed by the World Federation of Trade Unions Commission which investigated conditions there. Above, Heidelberg residents who once watched the progress of the Wehrmacht on this huge map, read an Allied proclamation.

WFTU Report On:

DE-NAZIFICATION OF GERMANY

Building strong trade unions is a key point in breaking down Nazi philosophy. That and other facets of the problem of making Germany over into a democracy are contained in the report of the Commission of the World Federation of Trade Unions to Investigate Conditions in Germany. Highlights of the report, by Sidney Hillman, Sir Walter Citrine, Leon Jouhaux, M. Tarasov, E. Kupers and Evzen Erban, are printed here. The CIO is a WFTU affiliate.

THE broad policy of the occupation authorities on the question of de-Nazification was formulated at Potsdam in the following words:

"War criminals and those who have participated in planning or carrying out Nazi enterprises involving or resulting in atrocities or war crimes shall be arrested and brought to judgment. Nazi leaders, influential Nazi supporters and high officials of Nazi organizations and institutions and any other persons dangerous to the occupation or its objectives shall be arrested and interned.

"All members of the Nazi party who have been more than nominal participants in its activities and all other persons hostile to Allied purpose shall be removed from public and semi-public office and from positions of responsibility in important private undertakings. Such persons shall be replaced by persons who, by their political and moral qualities, are deemed capable of assisting in developing genuine democratic institutions in Germany."

IT IS apparent from our inquiry that the application of the broad principles laid down at Potsdam vary widely among the four zones.

Speaking generally, our conclusion is that the results to date have been far from satisfactory. During the course of our discussion with the Trade Union Representatives, we amassed a considerably body of information as to specific cases of active Nazis who continue to hold important posts, both in public administration and in industry.

Certainly in Public Administration and the Governmental Services, sufficient time has elapsed since the occupation to effect a thorough and complete cleansing.

In industry the situation is considerably worse than in public services. In several of the zones, the Military Authorities themselves admitted that the task of de-Nazifying industry is only now beginning to get under way.

In our view there can be no "indispensable" Nazi. De-Nazification can and must be given priority over any desire to achieve maximum productivity and over the industrial requirements of the German people. Our gratification that this view has been embodied in directives was considerably tempered by our finding that the directives have far too often been ignored by the officers of military government charged with their implementation.

We are satisfied that if self-de-Nazification is to work, the task must be given to that section of the German people who are proved anti-Nazis. Our inquiry has established to our satisfaction that one of the strongest and most reliable anti-Nazi forces in German life today is the Trade Union movement.

It is our recommendation that for each industrial enterprise a de-Nazification commission be established composed entirely or predominantly of Trade Unionists from that enterprise. It is the Trade Unionists who have the most intimate knowledge of Nazis and Nazi-supporters in industry. It is they who should be charged with primary responsibility for de-Nazification.

Retention of any active Nazi, even at the level of foreman, is incompatible with the extirpation of Nazism and the building of a democratic Germany.

WE FOUND that the pre-1933 division of the labor movement along political and religious lines no longer exists. In this aspect the German Trade Union movement is completely unified.

They attribute the rise to power of Hitler, in part at least, to the division which existed within the German movement, and are firmly resolved to correct this error through the creation of united organizations. Social Democrats, Communists and Christians have joined together in the creation of united organizations. The commission views this development with deep satisfaction.

The German Trade Union movement is also being reconstituted along industrial lines.

Our investigation satisfies us that the German Trade Unions today are developing along fully democratic lines, with all officials from bottom to top elected by secret ballot. We were informed everywhere that Trade Union rules prohibit the election of any Nazi to office and heard of no case in which a Nazi holds an official Trade Union position.

The Trade Unions, more than any other group, should be charged with the task of re-educating the German people and disseminating the principles of democracy, not only in words but through their day-to-day work. Particularly, the Trade Unions must work among the German youth, all of whose conscious life has been spent under Hitlerism, and whose ideology must be uprooted if Germany is ever again to find a place in the community of free nations.

In the main Trade Unions have not as yet developed beyond a city-wide basis, each city having its own separate industrial Trade Unions, federated on a city-wide basis only.

In the Russian zone, provincial and zone-wide conferences of Trade Union delegates were scheduled at the time of our visit, looking toward the organization of industrial unions, zone-wide in their jurisdiction.

In the British and French zones, and to a lesser extent in the American zone, the organization of even city-wide unions is not yet complete.

We believe it urgent that authority be granted promptly to organize industrial unions on a zone-wide basis—that is a single trade union in each industry, covering all the workers of that industry in each respective zone. We further urge that the industrial unions established in each zone be authorized to form a zone-wide federation of trade unions.

POWERFUL as it was in number prior to 1933, the German labor movement lacked the ability to prevent Hitler's seizure of power.

We believe that it would be folly to rely wholly on the ability of the German workers to transform their land and their institutions as a guarantee that the world may be free of the menace which twice in our lifetime has plunged us into war.

Germany must therefore be deprived of the economic means to disturb world peace.

It is necessary to destroy the economic basis of the Junker class, one of the principal supporters of Nazism and militarism. This requires the prompt breaking up of the great landed estates and their distribution among the German people. This has been accomplished in the Russian zone, and we urge that similar measures be promptly applied elsewhere.

The interests of world peace and security require the prolonged military occupation of Germany. It is impossible to predict the number of years that must elapse before the allied armies can be safely withdrawn.

It is of the utmost importance that the Allied Armies remain until such time as the peaceful character of German economy, the re-education of the German people and the reshaping of German political and social institutions give the positive guarantee that Germany shall never again have the will or the power to threaten their neighbors or to disturb the peace of the world.

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS — By Rose H. Alschuler

WHAT'S TO BE SAID FOR MUD PIES?

Can you remember the fun of stepping barefooted into a mud puddle and the feel of the mud squishing between your toes? Children enjoy wet clay in somewhat similar fashion. It's important NOT to show them how to make better bird's nests or candlesicks. Instead, let them feel the pleasure, relase and satisfaction that comes from experimentation and making whatever it is they feel like making. Whether or not the form is recognizable is unimporant. Let their creative impulses flow freely, and as their experiences and understanding grow, form and increasing ability to express themselves will naturally develop.

Lib. of Congress—Tillery for OWI.

NMU Seamen Picket World-Telegram

More than 1,000 seamen picketed the N. Y. World-Telegram this week to protest its "vicious and distorted articles smearing the CIO Natl. Maritime Union in an obvious effort to weaken the union during its present negotiations with the shipowners."

A rank-and-file committee spokesman in charge of the demonstration said that "the seamen are not going to sit idly by while anti-labor newspapers like the World-Telegram and brass-check writers like Frederick Woltman carry on a smear campaign against our union and our democratically-elected officials."

PLANNING ENDS MEALTIME FLURRY

By Nutrition Service, D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross

THE WOMAN who works and keeps house at the same time has a double-duty job that calls for streamlined living. Kitchen timing is her main problem and quick-to-prepare dishes that are healthful, mouth-watering and easy on the purse have star preference on the menu.

For successful time-saving meals, the working homemaker needs to invest some time in plans. Planning helps reduce those 6 o'clock grocery store battle casualties, saves time, energy and money and cuts down kitchen labor.

First make up a weekly master-menu plan, then prepare two market lists—a big one to include staples and an extra one for perishables. Then mark up foods which can be prepared ahead and in quantity to carry over from day to day.

Even one dish prepared ahead of time relieves the rush. Deliberate planning for "leftovers" is not a disgrace but an economy for the modern busy woman.

Enough of the following foods can be cooked to last for two or three meals, kept in the refrigerator, then reconditioned and reserved in a jiffy. Vary the way they are prepared for taste appeal.

Navy Beans—boiled, baked or in soups.

Rice—plain or fried Chinese fashion with egg, or Spanish Rice, or in casserole with meat.

Macaroni and Noodles — baked with cheese, or escalloped with meat or tuna, or in soups.

Potatoes —(boiled in jackets—they keep well) hash browned, fried, escalloped, creamed or in soups, stews, chowders and salads.

Eggs—hard cook a supply for creamed, curried or salad dishes.

Meats—left over from roasts in meat pies, casseroles or served sliced hot or cold with gravy.

Desserts—most dried and fresh fruits, puddings, cakes, cookies and refrigerator-made ice creams can be prepared ahead.

To "short cut" vegetable cookery, dice or quarter potatoes, turnips, carrots and string beans and cook in a little water. Don't throw water away, feeding valuable minerals and vitamins to the sink. Reduce baking time for potatoes by dropping in boiling water for several minutes. Remove, rub with salt and bake 20 minutes.

The homemaker lucky enough to find and invest in a presure cooker will cut cooking time on most dishes from hours to minutes. A luscious beef stew takes only 20 minutes and most vegetables and fruits cook in the twinkling of an eye.

Next time, meat dishes that cook quickly will be featured.

CIO Backs Hastie

Judge William H. Hastie should be confirmed promptly as governor of the Virgin Islands because of his interest in improving "conditions of the common man wherever the American flag flies," CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week told Sen. Abe Murdock of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

HELP WANTED

Workers Education Service, organized to serve Georgia labor movement, needs field program leaders, director research and publications. Applicants need experience workers' education or adult education. Good salary. Write Director, 1120 Chandler Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges · Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

"The Amended GI Bill And How It Works"
FREE TO HEADS OF LOCAL UNIONS
The complete amended text of the GI Bill of Rights, a full explanation of the principal provisions and answers to pertinent questions about education, loans, unemployment compensation and other rights and benefits conferred upon veterans, are contained in this new booklet. Price quantity lots $2.00 per thousand. Free copy to heads of Local Unions.
★
ARMY TIMES
1419 IRVING STREET N.W.
WASHINGTON 10, D. C.

L.J. IMBER CO. QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS
UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES — MEMBERSHIP — EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS — ADVERTISING — LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1639-49 W. Evergreen Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Fullerton Fulton, CIO Reg. Dir., Minnesota, reports: Donovan Plant, Inc., St. Paul, Minn., USA-CIO 51, no union 19.

CIO Reg. Dir. Wm. Mayo, South Bend, Ind., advises: Edwards Iron Co., South Bend, CIO 12, no union 8. The campaign was conducted by Mrs. Otie Jenney, secretary, St. Joseph IUC and Jack Victor of the UOPWA.

John B. Easton, President W. Va. IUC, and CIO Reg. Dir., Charleston, W. Va. advises: Houdaille-Hershey Corp., Huntington, W. Va., USA-CIO 63, AFL 30, no union 0.

CIO Reg. Dir. Walter H Harris, Chicago, reports: Small Motors, Chicago, USA-CIO 39, against 13.

Edward McCrone, CIO Reg. Dir., Connecticut, reports: Maxams Plant, Bridgeport, Conn., CIO 113, no union 4.

★ ★ ★

Frank J. Bender, CIO Reg. Dir., Maryland, reports: Fairchild Plants, Hagerstown, Md. (garage mechanics, auto and aero technicians and office employes): Garage Mechanics, UAW-CIO 7, against 0; Tech. Eng. & Office Workers, UAW-CIO 207, against 54. Clerical: UAW-CIO 427, against 23.

Ralph Tillotson, CIO-Sub-Reg. Dir., Erie, Pa., reports: Sun Ray Lamp Co., Warren, Pa., UERMWA-CIO 52, Co. Union 31.

Ewald Sandner, CIO Reg. Dir., Newark, N. J., reports: Cordts Inc., Newark, N. J., URWA-CIO 153, AFL 96. Reps. Covert and Baldante were in charge. Baker Co., Newark, N. J., IUMMSWA-CIO 353, Int. Assn. of Machinsts 124. Reg. Dir. Rudy Hanson was in charge.

Hugh Thompson, CIO Reg. Dir., Buffalo, N. Y., reports: Kittinger Furniture Co., Buffalo, N. Y. (production & maintenance), CIO Furniture Workers 108, no union 38. Upholstering Unit, CIO 49, no union 10. Inasmuch as CIO won both units the Board will hand down certification making this one unit.

Paul R. Christopher, CIO Natl. Rep., Tennessee, reports: Tennessee Fabricating Co., Memphis, CIO Furniture Workers 35, no union 5.

Joe Dernoncourt, CIO Reg. Dir., Oklahoma, reports: Oklahoma Furniture Co., Oklahoma City, CIO 65, against 32. CIO Rep. Gobel Cravens was in charge.

Walter H. Harris, CIO Reg. Dir., Chicago, reports: Close & Co., Chicago (production & maintenance employes), URWDSEA-CIO 26, against 3.

★ ★ ★

C. H. Gillman, CIO Reg. Dir., Atlanta, reports: John Saxton Grocery Warehouse, CIO 17, against 9. Organizing work was under direction of Reps. James R. Cochran of the URWDSEA-CIO. Puritan Mills, Atlanta, CIO 45, against 0. This was under the direction of Packinghouse Rep. John Henry Hall.

John C. Lawson, Intl. Secy.-Treas., Stone & Allied Products, CIO, advises: Central Milling Co., Clayton, N. C., employes voted unanimously for CIO, 33-0. Rep. Sam H. Scott was in charge.

Robert C. Edwards, Dir., Organizing Committee, CIO PJ&NWA, reports: CIO won recognition at the following plants: Gillman Bros. Co., Philadelphia, involving 80 workers; organized by PJNW Org. Joseph Gorelik working out of CIO Reg. Dir. Geo. Craig's office; Esquire Novelty Co., New York, involving 20 workers; organized by PJNW Reps. William Hopps and Frank Cancellieri, under direction of Asst. Org. Dir. L. T. Koletka, aided by Sam Russo, Rep. Local 223.

Geo. Brown, Dir., IWA-CIO, reports: Klickitat Pine Box Co., Goldendale, Wash., CIO 72, AFL 24.

★ ★ ★

Bertie Selden of FTA-CIO advises: Parrish Frozen Food, Stockton, Calif., CIO 33, AFL 7; Marshall Canning Co., Sugarland, Texas, CIO 43, no union 1; Imperial Garden Growers, Imperial Valley, Calif., CIO 29, no union 0 (7 other packing sheds in the same area granted recognition without an election); Colonial Milling Co., Nashville, Tenn., CIO 35, no union 1; Alaska Salmon Industries, Inc., Independents: Grindall Fisheries, CIO 2, no union 0; Salt Sea Fisheries, CIO 6, AFL 3; Member firms: Peninsula District, CIO 78, no union 7; Purina Feed Mill, Charlotte, N. C., CIO 31, no union 18.

Helen Kingery, Dir. Pub., UOPWA-CIO, advises: Cudahy Packinghouse, Sioux City, Iowa (office workers), CIO 53, against 21; Edward Iron Works, South Bend, Ind., office workers voted for CIO.

★ ★ ★

The Farm Equipment Workers came through with an agreement with the Oliver Plow Works. These workers have been on strike since the end of October, have held their lines solidly and are to be commended.

The Intl. Harvester Co., so far, has refused to accept the Government's findings and while the world is calling for food to avoid starvation of millions of people, this corporation continues its stubborn attitude. The Farmers Union endorsed the FEMWA position and called for the IHC to settle accordingly, in order that the farmers can get machinery to work.

Another attack upon the world's needs is the action of the Teamsters in California boycotting the workers of the fruit growers in order to set aside the award of the Board. President Philip Murray has called this to the attention of President Truman and all workers are called upon to support the FTA-CIO, which has made every reasonable effort to straighten this thing out; but we are met by the stubborn action of the Beck Teamsters group, regardless of merits and human consideration.

PROBE AFL CANNERY CONTRACTS

WHILE the NLRB this week ordered its San Francisco office to investigate and authorize prosecution of illegal closed shop agreements signed by certain California fruit and vegetable canneries with the AFL, CIO Pres. Philip Murray called on the canners' organization to uphold the law and bargain with the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers.

FTA recently won an NLRB election among the cannery workers of northern California, but the board set aside the results and ordered a new election, providing that pending the new election employers bargain with FTA.

Meanwhile, the AFL, which lost the election, has been signing closed shop agreements with certain canneries, while the AFL Teamsters blockaded canneries which failed to sign such agreements.

Murray wired the Calif. Processors and Growers Assn. that failure to bargain with the FTA or to sign closed shop agreements meanwhile with any union "would be thoroughly unfair to employes involved and be a disservice to maintaining peaceful and fruitful relations between canneries and their employes."

Murray also wrote Pres. Morris Zusman of the Calif. IUC commending the council and its affiliated organizations for the support given to the FTA and urging that the council and the unions make certain that "the employes of the Northern and Central canneries be protected in their right and demonstrated desire to be affiliated with the CIO union."

The NLRB order to investigate the illegal closed shop contracts was hailed by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, who asserted that it was a "first step in ending an intolerable situation..."

"Obviously, if badly needed foods are to be processed and if the Wagner Act is to remain more than a dead-letter law, the Regional Office of the Board must act at once to smash this honeymoon arrangement between the canners and the AFL Teamsters."

He said that the CIO supports the demands of the cannery workers for immediate wage increases, and called for full operation of the canneries immediately.

Carey demanded that the government halt "the illegal blockade imposed by the Teamsters Union," and hold an election "at the earliest date consistent with full democratic expression of the cannery workers and the law."

Back on Ohio Job

At Columbus, Ohio, William V. Lavelle has resumed his job as secretary-treasurer of the Ohio CIO Council, following his discharge after two years in the Army. During Lavelle's absence, George De Nucci filled the post in addition to his other duties as CIO Regional Director and President of the Columbus CIO Council.

SIGN OF THE TIME:

NEW ORLEANS VICTORY SOUTH'S BID TO CIO

A HAPPY harbinger of a successful CIO organizing campaign in the South—authorized March 16 by the Executive Board—arrived this week with the victory of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers over the AFL Metal Trades Dept. in an NLRB election at the Higgins Shipyards, New Orleans. The AFL had previously held bargaining rights.

A huge staff of AFL organizers and the expenditure of $3,000 failed to halt the influx of the workers into CIO.

The results: CIO 892; AFL 684; 78 challenged votes and seven void.

The mounting desire of the Southern workers to become CIO members in shown by the fact that several weeks ago the CIO, while getting a sizeable vote, was unable to obtain a clear majority. Thereupon, the NLRB ordered this week's run-off election.

★ ★ ★

On the West Coast, the CIO Longshoremen won the first round in their negotiations with the Waterfront Employers Assn. of the Pacific Coast, in progress since last October.

The Longshoremen wrested from the employers an agreement to pay $8,000,000 in back pay due since August, 1945.

"So far as we have been able to learn, the seven months' delay represents an all-time record for employers to owe and not pay wages due workers," ILWU Pres. Harry Bridges declared. "It becomes all the more amazing when it is realized that the employers themselves are not even furnishing the money, which comes from the U. S. government. . ."

★ ★ ★

In N. Y. City wage increases totaling more than one million dollars annually for 5,000 employes at Macy's were won by Local 1-S, CIO Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes. Wages were boosted $4 weekly, which local union officials hailed as "a tremendous step forward in ending the low wages of department store workers, a stride that ranks with the establishment of the 40-hour, five-day week in the industry in 1941."

RAISES 'DOWN PAYMENT'—UAW

WHILE General Motors' stalling prevented the return of 200,000 employes following the signing March 13 of a national agreement with the CIO Auto Workers, UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas in his annual report to the convention—opening March 23 at Atlantic City—served notice on the auto industry that wage increases granted so far are first installments with the balance to be collected later.

GM was using local issues to keep all workers idle, although the settlement stipulated that plant issues should be negotiated by the locals. Twenty UAW locals have voted to continue the strike until local grievances are settled.

Calling the pay increases granted by GM, Ford and Chrysler but the first installment on UAW pay demands, Thomas told the convention that the three corporations had settled for only approximately 17% of the 30% union demands.

The UAW head said industry wants inflation to wipe out the workers' savings, to damage unions and to strengthen its hold on the national economy. He charged that the corporate interests were conspiring to "rob us by price increases of what they have given by wage increases."

Encouraged by President Truman's failure to carry out Roosevelt's policies, nonetheless "monopolies in control of the basic industries of America were forced to capitulate to the unions' demands," Thomas said.

NATIONAL PHELPS DODGE STRIKE ON

The strike of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers against the Phelps Dodge Corp. became nation-wide this week, closing mining and smelting operations at Douglas, Bisbee and Morenci, Ariz., and the Tyrone, N. M., plant.

With the spread of the Phelps Dodge strike, operations have ceased in virtually the entire non-ferrous metal industry, with approximately 20,000 workers walking picket lines.

The Phelps Dodge strike, together with a nation-wide walkout affecting eighteen plants of American Smelting and Refining Company, cuts off more than 75% of copper production and more than 55% of lead production in this country.

There were signs of a collapse of the employers' front against the union's demand for an 18½c increase, Bridgeport Brass, Connecticut, signing this week. Workers at Scovill Mfg. Co., Connecticut, won their wage demands last week.

A MMSW local at a Phelps Dodge fabricating plant in Los Angeles, scheduled to go on strike with those in Arizona and New Mexico, settled with the company last week on the basis of a wage increase of 18½c per hour.

The government sought to end the deadlock this week, Labor Sec. Schwellenbach appointing a fact-finding board consisting of George E. Strong, Washington lawyer; Judge James H. Wolfe of the Utah Supreme Court and Dr. Carl Borgmann, head of the Chemical Engineering Dept. of the Univ. of Colo. The board is scheduled to meet in Denver March 25 with representatives of the MMSW and the company.

The national strike against Phelps Dodge was called when the company rejected a federal subsidy which would have covered the expense of the 18½c wage increase. MMSW Pres. Reid Robinson pointed out that the union had agreed to the increase.

Dr. Holland Roberts teaches a class in American history at the California Labor School—a course which is popular with veterans. Seated at his right is Jimmy Randall, a war vet and long-time member of the Marine Cooks and Stewards Union. Dr. Roberts left his post as associate professor of education at Stanford University to be educational director of the California Labor School.

TRAINING VETS TO LEAD UNIONS

WHILE many colleges are turning away former GIs, the California Labor School at San Francisco, the only labor school in the country to have Veterans' Administration approval for veterans' study, has adapted itself to the ex-servicemen's needs.

It has set up a veterans department headed by Leon Alexander, to give every possible assistance, both in study and in personal problems. Through arrangement with the Federal Housing Authority it has also licked the housing problem for the student-veteran.

The school rates high scholastically and in the labor movement. Not only is it accredited by a number of universities including Stanford and the University of California, but it is recommended by Alexander Barkan, director of the servicemen's and veterans' division of the CIO Community Services Committee, to ex-servicemen who want to go places in the labor movement.

The school this term launched a full-time program to prepare students for labor leadership. After visiting the school recently, Barkan declared:

"Trade union leadership demands fully trained personnel and the California Labor School is fully equipped to give veterans the training and the background they will need in making contributions to the American labor movement."

Veterans and other full-time students who take the Labor Organization and Administration course attend classes in U. S. history, public speaking and parliamentary procedure, labor's political problems, economics, world politics, labor statistics and research, history of the American and world labor movements, news analysis, workers' rights in government agencies and problems of the Far East.

Part of their training consists of visiting union meetings, working with shop stewards, learning how a union paper is put out and working closely with other trade union activities.

Courses at the four-year-old school, which occupies an entire building in the heart of San Francisco, cover a wide range of subjects.

The social science course offers background in economics, history, politics and related subjects. Ex-servicemen and women interested in writing will get both training and actual experience through a course in writing and public relations which includes courses in psychology, creative writing, literature, radio writing, journalism and a workshop where students' work is analyzed and given constructive criticism.

To prepare veterans for jobs in newly developing industries, an industrial arts course has been set up which will train students for work in plastics, photography, ceramics, furniture design and construcion, and graphic arts. The industrial arts department, under the direction of Eugene Bielawski, nationally famed artist-teacher, has as instructors such well-known artists as Clare Falkenstein, Margaret DePatta, Ciacomo Patri, and others.

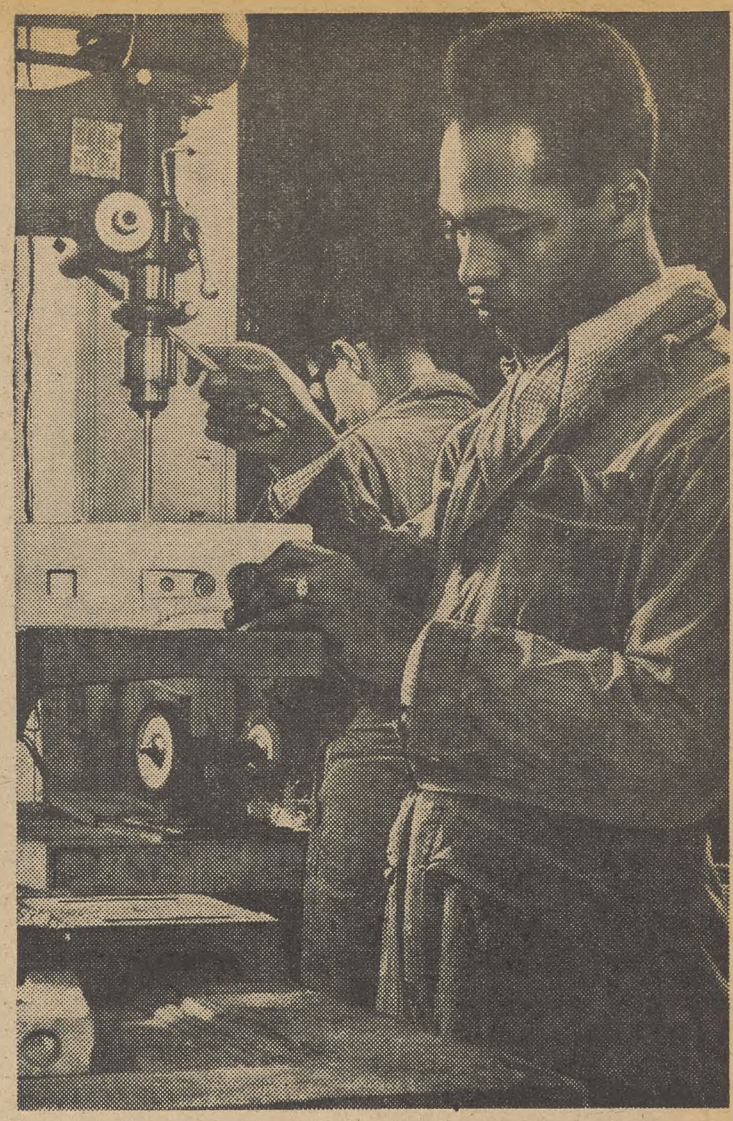
Most of the courses are conducted on a workshop basis, with lectures amplified by actual work in materials.

The school has arranged to provide housing for all student veterans who need it. Through cooperation of the Federal Housing Authority, dormitories at nearby Hunters Point have been set aside for veterans, single only, and attractive rooms with eating and recreational facilities are available at $15 to $21 monthly.

The four-year-old school has the active support of 35 CIO organizations and a number of AFL unions. A resolution passed at the recent California CIO convention urged unions to send their veteran members to the school, possibly supplementing their government subsistence allowance with income from the union's funds.

Many of the vets studying at the school this term are CIO members, and many more are expected for the summer term which opens in May.

Complete information regarding the school may be had by writing Leon Alexander, Veterans' Dept., California Labor School, 216 Market St., San Francisco 11.



World War II veteran Melton Rougeau of Louisiana is one of the full-time students at the California Labor School. He's studying industrial art and design, getting ready for a job. Many of the school's student veterans are taking Industrial Arts courses, preparing for jobs in plastics, ceramics, furniture design and other newly developed job fields.

Vets meet their friends to talk things over before and after classes at the school's coffee bar which the Student Council established and runs. The Student Council plays a vital part in school affairs, pitching in to help with registration, to paint the auditorium, to launch new classes and guide in social activities.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and scenes mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

SINCE MICKEY, JIM'S BROTHER HAS RETURNED TO CIVILIAN LIFE HE HAS BEEN INVOLVED IN ACTIONS AGAINST THE UNION AT THE ROTOR CONSTRUCTION PLANT. A RIOT SPONSORED BY THE UNION BUSTING GROUP LED TO THE ARREST OF JIM AND WOODY, NOW AWAITING TRIAL. MICKEY IS TAKEN BY PUG TO MEET THE BIG BOSS BEHIND THE ANTI-UNION DRIVE.

MEET DA BOSS.

SO IT'S STEVEN DENTON!

HELLO, MICKEY... WAIT OUTSIDE, PUG!

I THOUGHT YOU WERE A UNION MAN, MR DENTON?

ONLY TO PUT OVER OUR CITY-WIDE PLAN TO CLEAN UNIONS OUT OF THIS TOWN.

OUR CLOSING OF ROTOR CONSTRUCTION IS ONLY THE FIRST STEP. WHEN WE BREAK THE UNION THERE, THE WHOLE LABOR MOVEMENT IN TOWN WILL BE CRACKED WIDE OPEN.

I SUSPECTED YOU WERE BEHIND THE ROTOR SCHEME... BUT THIS IS BIGGER THAN JUST ONE PLANT!

YES, IT'S BIGGER. WHEN WE SUCCEED HERE WE GO ON A NATIONAL SCHEDULE. THE TOP SPOT IS YOURS, MICKEY, AND THERE'S A LOT OF GOOD CASH INVOLVED.

NATIONAL LEADER OF A UNION-BUSTING DRIVE...

IT'S THE OPPORTUNITY OF A LIFETIME. TODAY'S A-1 JOB AT THE PLANT GATE PLUS THE FACT THAT YOU ARE A VETERAN MAKES YOU THE MAN WE ARE LOOKING FOR.

I'VE WANTED TO FIND THIS FOR A LONG TIME!

IT WILL WORK OUT FINE, DON'T YOU HAVE ANY WORRIES.

IT'S BOUND TO WORK OUT WELL. GOODBYE MR. DENTON.

I'LL BE LEAVING YOU, PUG. I HAVE AN APPOINTMENT.

O.K. YOU'RE IN THE BIG TIME NOW FELLOW.

"THE TIME HAS COME" THE WALRUS SAID, "TO TALK OF MANY THINGS, OF CABBAGES AND KINGS"--AND WITH BROTHER JIM...

IS JIM IN?

YES, BUT...

HELLO, JIM. MEET THE LEADER OF THE ANTI-UNION DRIVE. BIG TIME OPERATOR! THAT'S ME!

Produced by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Sharpening The Knives

Comes spring—and almost any week now it will be open season in the Senate for stalking the "big, bad unions."

There are several million workers in this country, both in and out of the unions, who are highly satisfied at the CIO's success in raising wages by several billion dollars a year, or more. Not so the representatives of big business or the big-business way of thinking on Capitol Hill.

The Case Bill (H. R. 5262) is their chosen instrument to make certain that such good fortune won't happen again to American industrial workers. The Case Bill passed the House with more big sticks than a picket fence—all designed to cripple the legitimate functions of labor unions under the cover of "protecting" workers from their chosen union leaders.

In the Senate Education & Labor Committee, the anti-union boys tried hard but were only partially successful. Sen. Ball (R., Minn.), Sen. Ellender (D., La.), Sen. Taft (R., O.) formed the spearhead of those Senators determined to make the Case Bill as bad in the Senate as the version passed by the House. Fortunately they lost on almost every issue.

The Senate Committee majority proposed a national mediation authority and machinery for voluntary settlement of labor disputes through third-party assistance. Neither of these proposals is bad itself, although there is question whether they are necessary.

But even the friendly members of the committee fell for the theory that "something must be done" and produced an anti-racketeering treatise resurrected from the Hobbs bill, passed by the House several months ago. The Hobbs bill, sponsored by a reactionary southern Congressman, kicked around for a long time. Now, in what appears to be a move to appease the foes of labor, it's back in circulation under the sponsorship of the Senate Labor Committee.

Appeasement has failed before, and there's no reason to believe it will work when the Case Bill reaches the Senate floor. The same men who fought for a drastic anti-labor bill in the committee, plus a batch of their associates in the Senate, are determined that the final Senate version of the Bill be just as bad as the original measure passed in the House.

It's necessary to start the campaign against them now, before the Bill reaches the floor of the Senate for final debate and voting. Send your resolutions, letters and wires to your Senators now. Tell them you're 100% opposed to the Case Bill and all its amendments.

Health and Security

In Los Angeles county, according to a recent dispatch, there are three persons out of jobs for every five at work. Unemployment there is expected to reach nearly half a million by summer.

Conditions may not be as bad in other cities—but in every community they point to the constant insecurity and threat of unemployment facing millions of Americans.

The CIO Executive Board took note of the situation at its March 15 meeting in voicing support of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bills on social security and on a national health program.

"The CIO has long been on record in support of an over-all improvement in our social security system as represented by the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Social Security bill," the board said. "Only a many-sided social security program, operating side by side with a full employment economy can secure to the American people protection against the hazards of old age, sickness, disability, unemployment and poverty."

Pres. Truman's recent call for a national health program and the filing of the health bill, have pointed the spotlight at a situation long ignored, the CIO Board added, predicting that forthcoming hearings will emphasize the need for prompt passage of a national health insurance program.

But, the CIO group warned, "we must not lose sight of the millions of American citizens—workers and their families—who are deprived of any protection under the social security system, nor can we tolerate the present low rate of benefits which bear no relation to present living costs."

While supporting the two bills on security and health, the CIO urged that the whole problem be studied in the light of the country's present needs, and that Pres. Truman give to Congress and the people a "comprehensive program for social security which can be the springboard for public discussion and further Congressional action."

Sec. of Commerce Henry Wallace has also urged support of the health bill. He points out that small businessmen as well as workers stand to gain from the adoption of a suitable national health program. Absenteeism caused by illness and accidents is costing the nation about four billion dollars a year, with much of the burden of the cost falling on the little businessmen.

"The annual loss of about 500 million man days of work through illness and injury represents a loss not only for business but also for the nation," Wallace declared.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
65c wage S 1349	Raises present 40c minimum to 65c; extends coverage to food, maritime, telegraph & retail workers.	On Senate floor, with vote expected soon. Foes busy trying to trim base to 55c, limit jurisdiction.	Wire Senators to support bill without any amendments.
Case Bill HR 5262	"Throws the book" at unions: forced arbitration, blacklists, injunctions for strikes or for backing strikes, and forced cooling-off.	Senate Labor Com. killed most bad features, but added "anti-racket" clause from hoary Hobbs bill of several years back. Senate may restore all bad angles of House-approved bill.	Write, wire Senators to reject Case and all other anti-union bills.
Housing HR 4761	Originally designed to carry out Wyatt plan for 2,700,000 houses by '47. Had price ceilings, subsidies to insure success of plan.	GOP-Southern Democrat alliance in House killed ceilings, subsidies. Now in Senate, where real estate lobby busy sniping.	Wire Senators to pass original HR 4761; stress absolute need of price ceiling, subsidies.
Price Control HR 5270	Extends price control act to June, 1947. Faces danger of crippling amendments.	In House Banking & Currency Committee. NAM on warpath for gutting bill, lifting prices. CIO to testify soon.	Write, wire, send delegations to Congressmen; demand passage of effective bill to hold price line.
Polltax repeal HR 7	Gives vote to 10 million low-income southerners; would be body blow at southern tory bloc on Capitol Hill.	Passed House; now awaits Senate action, but needs widest pressure to bring to vote.	Tell Senators to vote gag on possible filibuster, pass HR 7 now.

ONLY EIGHT MONTHS 'TIL ELECTIONS—REGISTER NOW!

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

WAR OR PEACE: Our clouded international relations affect every type of legislation; and, moves are bringing anxiety and disquiet to the peoples of America and all the world.

Sen. Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), one of Washington's most liberal statesman proposed this week in a long and moving speech that we do something constructive about world affairs while there's still sufficient time.

"It is time—yes, it is late—for those millions of American men and women who have just laid down their weapons of war to awaken to the fact that we are hurtling toward war again", the Senator somberly warned.

What to do about it? Let's see things from the other fellow's standpoint, and try to appreciate what's bothering him. Let's have another Big Three conference, not only of heads of state but of labor people and business men and civic leaders. Let's collaborate openheartedly, on political, economic and atomic matters.

BRITISH LOAN: Still under consideration by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee is the Anglo-American financial agreement, involving a 4.4 billion dollar loan to Britain.

CIO has backed the loan, and last week told the Committee why: Britain carried the ball for us during a large portion of the war against fascism, and in so doing made huge economic sacrifices; the loan will help trade and help create jobs; and economic stability will help bring world peace.

The agreement comes up for a vote soon.

FEDERAL PAY: The cost of living is going up for employes of the federal government as well as for the rest of us. CIO's United Federal Workers Union asked Congress for a 30% pay boost, and was willing to compromise for 20%. A hostile Civil Service subcommittee finally recommended 17%—which UFWA describes as a "chisel". The union's fighting to get the 20% boost reinstated. Your letters to Congressmen and to members of the House Civil Service Committee will help them do it.

PRICE CONTROL: NAM's big boss, R. R. Wason, bared his heart to the House Banking and Currency Committee last week with a roaring attack on price controls, which, he finally admitted, the NAM wants to see completely abolished.

Using a theory not completely clear to harassed consumers, Wason argued that the way to keep prices from going up is remove the controls that keep them from going up!

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
Henry C. Fleisher, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 14

Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS
$1 A. YEAR, 5c A COPY — $1.50 IN CANADA

82

April 1, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

Picture of the Week: Walter Reuther, newly elected president of the CIO Auto Workers; CIO Pres. Philip Murray, who spoke at the UAW Convention held in Atlantic City; and R. J. Thomas, who was defeated for the UAW presidency but was elected vice-president.

These four war veterans, all members of the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers at Winston-Salem, N. C., are leaving the White House after urging President Truman to do everything in his power to support the 65-cent minimum wage bill, for which he has gone on record. They are, left to right, Clarence Anderson, W. C. Ledford, J. Henry Minor and Marcellus Penn.

'On 40c An Hour, We Don't See How They Do It'

By FRED ROSS

"WE don't see how they do it!" said four war veterans, all members of the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers, in telling of the economic straightjacket worn by approximately 4,000 workers at the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, N. C. The workers are earning less than 65c a week.

Under the auspices of the CIO Veterans, FTA and the Natl. Committee for a Fair Minimum Wage, the four flew in a charted plane this week to Washington, D. C., to plead for passage of the 65c minimum wage bill (S 1349) without any crippling amendment..

They went to the White House, where President Truman reminded them that he had urged passage of the measure several times but warned that they should try to convince Congress of the need for a 65c floor under wages to replace the present 40c one.

One of the visitors from North Carolina, Clarence Anderson, has been working 48 hours a week, but his department will soon go on a 40-hour week.

"I don't make ends meet," Anderson said. "I make $31 a week. I am married and have three children, 9, 6 and 4, and another on the way. How do I do it?

"I pay one bill this week, and another next week. I don't know what I'll do if they cut us back to the 40-hour week."

"What they promised us when we went into the service is short of what we're getting," declared Marcellus Penn, whose rate of 62c an hour nets him about $20 a week.

"I have four dependents, a wife, child, mother, and nephew. I don't know myself how I get by. I have no reserve. Groceries alone take half of my salary each week. We're just lucky nobody's been sick since I was discharged from the Army last Sept. 26."

J. Henry Minor and W. C. Ledford, the other two in the party, are higher paid Reynolds workers. Ledford earns 83c an hour, works 48 hours, and gets $39 a week take-home pay.

"I'm going to have to borrow money," Ledford declared. "The house needs painting. My wife is sick, and the doctor's bills take a lot of our money."

Taking President Truman's advice, the four called on their Senators—Bailey, who doesn't believe that the "Federal government should meddle in the affairs of the states," and Hoey, who said he is going to vote against the bill to "protect interests of the widows and the orphans owning stock in the R. J. Reynolds Co."

They got a better reception from their Congressman, Rep. Folger, who said that he will vote for the bill.

65c BILL PLODS IN SENATE

IT was oratory week in the Senate as the 65c Minimum Wage Bill moved through heavy debate towards a vote expected to be held early in April.

Led by Sen. Ellender (D. La.), Taft (R. O.) and Ball (R. Minn.), foes of the measure attacked the bill (S. 1349) from a variety of positions.

Friends of the measure to lift the floor under wages from 40 to 65c an hour brought out a battery of facts to meet the conservative opposition and to kill the Pace amendment to the wage bill. The amendment would change the whole basis of determining basic farm prices and would lead to heavy increases on a wide assortment of farm products.

None of the big farm organization has voiced support of the amendment, and both OPA and the Dept. of Agriculture have indicated that its passage as part of the Minimum Wage Bill would throw a monkey wrench into efforts to control prices and maintain parity between farm and city income structures.

OPA Administrator Paul Porter told Sen. Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) in a letter read into the record that "the Pace amendment would force an immediate spurt in the cost of living, a rise so sharp that the stabilization program would have no real chance of survival."

Sen. Mead (D., N. Y.) joined with Pepper, Sen. Tunnell (D., Del.) and other supporters of the bill to argue the necessity of its passage.

Mead said he found the debate "strange" and "difficult to believe that as we enter the atomic age . . . we still have not learned the importance of purchasing power" for low income sections of the public.

"The people we are talking about," he continued, "those who are down in the brackets below and around 65c , are the real ill-fed, ill-clad and ill-housed men, women and children of the country . . .

"They are the ones who gather in grocery stores on Saturday night just before closing time to pick up fruits and vegetables or meat likely to spoil before Monday morning. They are the ones who really need the protection of this proposed law, and I say they should have it."

FE, TWO FIRMS MEET WITH CABINET OFFICERS

Seeking an early settlement of strikes among farm equipment workers, CIO Farm Equipment Workers met in Washington March 29 with Labor Sec. Schwellenbach and Agriculture Sec. Anderson and officials of two of the major agricultural equipment manufacturers involved in the walkout.

The conference was called by the two members of the President's cabinet and invitations were accepted by two companies, Intl. Harvester and Allis-Chalmers. J. I. Case Co. of Racine, Wisc. did not accept.

An offer to end one of the strikes—in Intl. Harvester plants—was made by the union in newspaper ads before the meeting was scheduled. The union proposed an "interim settlement."

The offer included an 18c an hour increase with a 10% increase retroactive to Oct. 1, 1945; improved vacation plan, premium pay for Sunday work and swing shift operations; arbitration of all other contract issues including 12 major issues still in dispute.

The union proposed that the decision of the arbitrator and the interim settlement be incorporated into new contracts, and that previous contracts remain in effect until the new contracts are signed.

The union had accepted the recommendations made by a fact-finding board appointed by Sec. Schwellenbach. The company refused to accept any of the board's recommendations until last week when it announced it was willing to increase pay 18 cents an hour with a 10% increase to be retroactive to Oct. 1.

Harvester officials on March 28 walked out of a collective bargaining conference called by the U. S. conciliation service to settle the 10-week strike of 30,000 Harvester workers.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week hit the Harvester company's "continued defiance" of the fact-finding board's recommendations and declared that "no single act would contribute more toward the fulfillment of the government's food program than the settlement of the Harvester strike and the resumption of farm machinery production."

Farm equipment is essential, the CIO president said, "in order that our farmers may produce the food so sorely needed if we are to do our part in preventing wholesale starvation amongst suffering millions throughout the world."

STEEL ASKED FOR SMALL COMPANIES

President Truman this week was asked by the CIO United Steelworkers Union to take steps which would guarantee to small steel producers sufficient tonnage of semi-finished steel.

A wire from USA-CIO President Philip Murray asked for Federal allocation of supplies, and said:

"For lack of 6,000 tons of pig iron a month 2,000 steelworkers are idle in Newport, Ky., at the Andrews Steel Co. and this small steel firm may be forced out of business unless it can secure iron.

"Workers in stove and refrigerator plants are being laid off or are suffering from curtailed operations for lack of steel. Small non-integrated steel firms are finding it increasingly difficult to secure adequate tonnages of semi-finished steel."

Despite this, the Civilian Production Administration this week decided after a conference with industry representatives to continue its voluntary plan of steel allocation. The CPA said that as a last resort it would clamp on allocation controls.

HOUSE AIDS 'WITCH HUNT'

WITCH-HUNTING forays of the Wood - Rankin Committee on Un-American Activities received a boost this week when the House voted contempt proceedings against Dr. Edward Barsky of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee.

At the same time the House declined to go along with the committee in taking similar action against 15 members of the group's executive committee. Barsky faces possible prosecution in the federal courts.

The Wood-Rankin group, an enthusiastic heir to the Dies Committee, charged the anti-fascist committee with being "red" and demanded that Barsky produce all books, records and papers of the organization. The material was not submitted to the un-American probers on grounds that it would cripple the work of the organization, which is licensed and supervised by the President's War Relief Control Board.

The same technique — of demanding all records—could be used against labor unions to throttle their activities.

Only four Congressmen opposed the action against Barsky: Reps. Marsantonio (ALP, N. Y.), Izac (D., Cal.), Powell (D., N. Y.) and Neely (D., W. Va.).

Anti-Bias Play

Tryout of a new play starring Canada Lee, noted Broadway actor, will be held in Buffalo, N. Y. on April 10 and Detroit, Mich., beginning April 15 before opening in N. Y. City.

The play is a dramatic presentation of discriminatory practices met by a returned Negro veteran and his family who were forced by the housing shortage to live in a neighborhood previously restricted to whites.

In Buffalo the play will be shown at the Erlanger Theatre, and in Detroit at the LaFayette Theatre.

All For CIO

UNITY PLEDGED BY REUTHER

LED by a new president, chosen in one of the most hectic and closely fought elections in union history, the vociferous but united Auto Workers emerged from their tenth convention this week serving notice on the world that, no matter how much they may differ among themselves at conventions, nothing can destroy their union solidarity or their loyalty to the CIO.

Red-headed, youthful Walter P. Reuther, assuming the presidency after a full day of exuberant demonstrations and rollcall balloting that netted him 4,444 votes, as against 4,320 votes for former President R. J. Thomas, made this clear the moment he took over the gavel. Thomas later was elected Vice-President.

Reuther warned anti-union employers that the auto workers may disagree sharply at their conventions, but "when they leave, they leave as a united organization, to carry on the common fight."

Pledging "the closest cooperation and teamwork between the UAW and the CIO," Reuther declared: "As long as I am president of this great organization, it will be a source of strength for President Murray and the CIO. I want to take my place beside Philip Murray and help to carry some of his heavy burdens."

Asserting that he would "try to work hard and sincerely to knit together this organization" and achieve its complete unification, Reuther said he would work closely with George F. Addes for unity. Addes, who had opposed his candidacy, was subsequently re-elected Secretary-Treasurer without opposition.

Elected vice presidents, in place of Reuther and Richard T. Frankensteen, who announced he was not seeking re-election but intended to run for Congress in the 13th District of Michigan, were former President Thomas and Richard T. Leonard.

For the vice presidency, Thomas obtained 4.472 votes, as against 3.916 for Melvin Bishop, who was supported by the Reuther forces, and 199 for Leonard.

In the second vice presidential election, Leonard nosed out the Reuther - supported candidate, John W. Livingston, by 42 votes. The final tally showed 4,309 votes for Leonard to 4,267 for Livingston.

Thomas followed Reuther to the rostrum after the presidential election, declaring that he had done everything in his power to "weld together every section of this union" and that "there's nothing I'd like to see better than unity among all the United Auto Workers."

"I'm not worried, after this convention," he added, "about anyone trying to take the UAW out of the CIO—I don't believe it can be done."

On the motion of a Reuther supporter, Thomas was given a unanimous rising vote of thanks in token of "the eternal debt of gratitude" owed to him by the union for his services.

The UAW delegates also demonstrated their unanimous enthusiaiasm for Philip Murray and the CIO in repeated ovations when the CIO president addressed the convention.

They adopted a motion reaffirming "our staunch, consistent support to his personal and policy leadership of our great parent labor organization, the CIO.

"We hail his successful leadership of our tremendous strike movements," the motion continued, "his consistent stand for higher wages, for the retention of price control, for the defeat of anti-labor legislation, for the organization of the unorganized, and for independent political action to assure the victory on all fronts of the camp of progress in our great country."

In his speech, Murray took occasion to spike a number of lying rumors that had been circulated against him and the CIO, alleging lack of support for the General Motors strike and interference in auto union affairs.

He pointed out that his union, the United Steelworkers, had contributed $100,000 to aid the G-M strikers, out of $350,000 given to aid sister CIO affiliates, and had offered "to drain its treasury to help the GM strikers, if necessary"; and that he had offered his personal services and the full pressure of the CIO to help win the GM strike.

Murray vigorously denied any intention of interfering in the union's elections, pointing out that he had never intervened in UAW affairs except at the express invitation of the union.

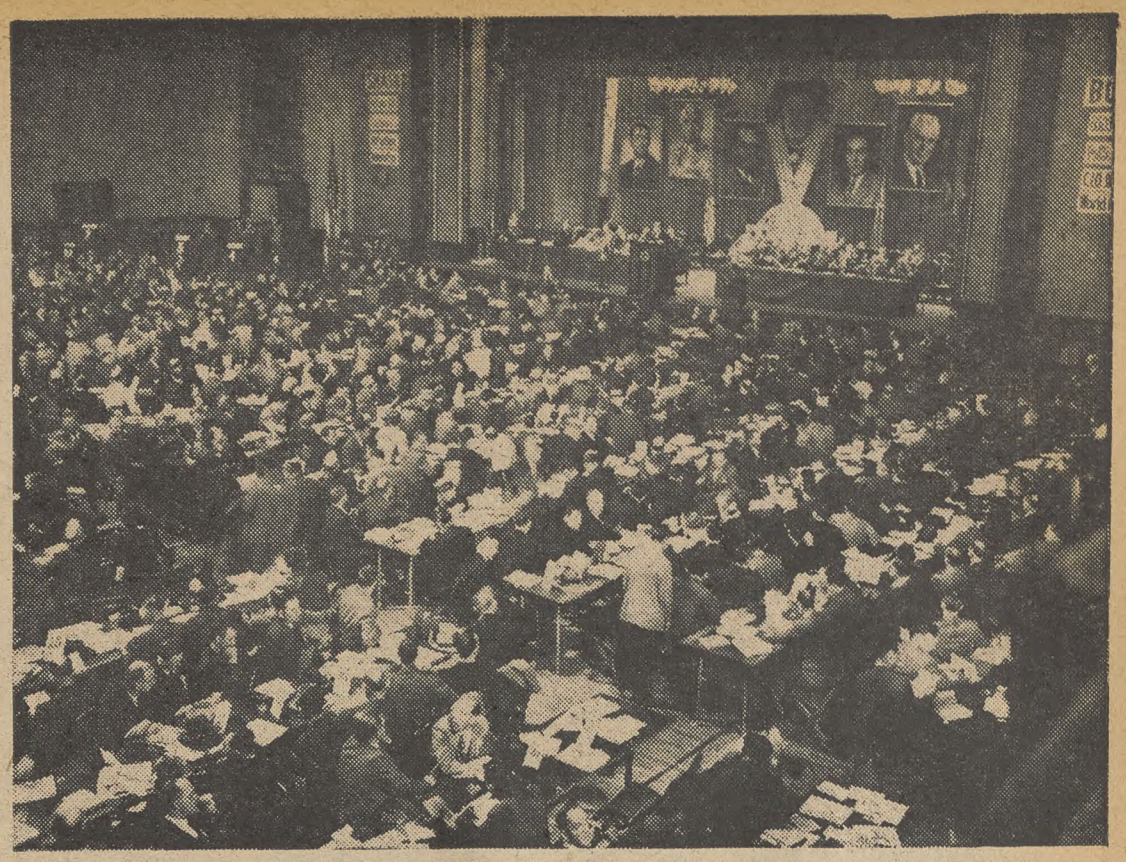
He characterized as "a diabolical, destestable lie, circulated by a defamer of defamers for the purpose of injuring the CIO," the statement attributed to "a high officer of General Motors Corp." that Murray had tried to influence the GM fact-finding board to make a lower wage recommendation than it might otherwise have made.

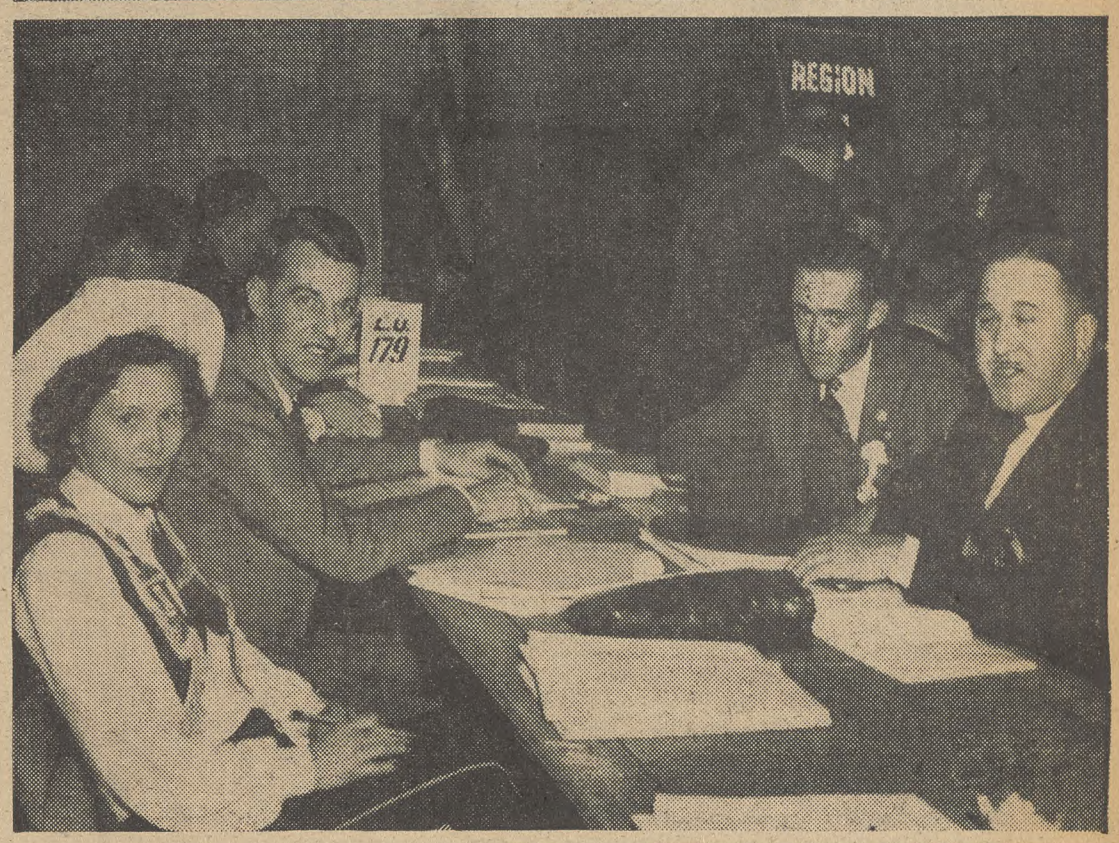
Murray recounted his long campaign for substantial wage increases, and the opposition this encountered at the Natl. Labor-Management Conference, not only from the employers but also from John L. Lewis and William Green of the AFL. He said his efforts were rebuffed by "a combination of employers and rusty labor leaders working in collusion," and added:

"I still believe that, had the Labor-Management Conference resolved that issue last September, and had the AFL and Mr. Lewis met their obligations to American labor, and had the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce fulfilled their obligations, there would have been no need for major strikes in the United States during the past few months."

Murray emphasized the importance of the World Federation of Trade Unions in stopping military aggression and preserving world peace. He praised R. J. Thomas for his "unusual services"

(Continued on Page 10)





AT ATLANTIC CITY: (Top) more than 2,000 delegates from all over the nation attended the UAW-CIO convention in the city auditorium. (Center and bottom) some of the delegates to the convention which added another tumultuous page to UAW history.

STILL REFUSING TO PLAY BALL

Most of the country's big industries have yielded to the inevitable.

They have signed agreements with the CIO unions for substantially higher wages, have recognized union rights and accorded some degree of union security, have granted many improvements in conditions and are now going ahead full blast to catch up with the production so long delayed by their own stubbornness.

But there are still bitter-enders who insist on remaining out of step with the national procession.

Westinghouse Electric, for instance, has refused to recognize the national pattern of wage increases established by the CIO. It has offered the union no more than a miserable 9.7% wage increase.

International Harvester has accepted the wage recommendation of a government fact-finding board but refused to agree to other recommendations of vital importance to the workers.

Resumption of work has been delayed at a number of General Motors plants by the refusal of their managers to make reasonable adjustments of local grievances and demands. And a number of other important strikes, of lesser size, are still in progress.

In every case, the attitude of the CIO unions has been reasonable and motivated by concern for the public interest and eagerness to resume operations at the earliest possible moment.

The CIO Electrical Workers have offered to return to work at Westinghouse immediately the company recognizes the wage pattern already established throughout the rest of the industry by giving a 18½c wage increase, as General Electric has done, leaving all other contract issues to negotiation or, if necessary, arbitration.

The Farm Equipment Workers, "to help the critical food-production program," have offered to resume work at once with the 18c wage increase already agreed to, leaving issues which can't be settled in the interim agreement to final and binding arbitration.

The Auto Workers similarly have pressed for immediate resumption of operations in all General Motors plants where there are not still some outstanding local issues to be settled.

But the bitter-enders of industry have shown no similar concern for the public interest. Westinghouse and Harvester have rejected the workers' arbitration offers and seem determined to continue the fight.

Such hold-out fights cannot buck the national tide or for long dam up the river of progress. But they can be extremely bitter, and the whole labor movement must rally at once behind the unions concerned, with all possible economic, moral, financial and relief aid possible.

But there is also another field in which labor's aid is immediately needed, to complete its national wage victories, to consolidate the gains already made and to assure their retention. That is the field of political action.

CIO President Murray has called national attention to the recent shameful actions of the Governors of Michigan and Pennsylvania in using state police for strikebreaking purposes.

Labor's wages and conditions, and the winning of the remaining strikes still in progress, are directly endangered by such abuses of their power by public officials, by anti-labor injunctions and by the union-busting legislation now before Congress.

In backing up the workers who are still fighting all of labor's battles on the picket lines, don't forget that one of the most effective steps you can take is to get behind CIO's Political Action Committee 100 percent, to become active in its work, and to register so that you may vote for progressive candidates in this year's primaries and elections.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

CLOSE TO a hundred reporters covered the UAW-CIO convention in Atlantic City.

There was plenty of colorful copy for them in the demonstrations staged by the 2,000 delegates; in the amazing public caucuses; in the unrestrained charges and counter-charges of close-fought union electioneering.

There is nothing secretive about a UAW convention, to put it mildly. The delegates parade their feelings and advertise their differences with banners, placards, buttons, leaflets and stunts of all kinds.

They make the welkin ring around town singing about any union leader they oppose that "so-and so's a horsethief—he shall be removed."

★ ★ ★

At the Atlantic City convention, the union's internal differences were advertised without any reticence whatever.

Besides the usual free-for-all of debate and demonstration, and campaign leaflets issued every few hours, packed press conferences were even held to publicize the rival candidates' charges against each other.

As to the nightly "caucuses," these were regular mass meetings, attended by a thousand or more. The press was invited, and anyone could walk in to hear unvarnished accounts of what each side thought of the other.

★ ★ ★

But more remarkable than all this unrestrained campaigning is the underlying unity and vitality of an organization which grows and thrives despite such hectic episodes.

No sooner were elections over than demonstrations of unity were staged, to leave no doubt that the union's solidarity against its foes was unimpaired.

Furthermore, a huge amount of constructive business was handled without undue factional heat and with general agreement on major policies.

A powerful unifying factor in the UAW is the enthusiastic unanimity in support of President Murray and the CIO.

Murray drew the most vigorous and universal applause, when he referred humorously to the continual caucusing, warned of the dangers of factionalism and emphasized the union's basic unity.

Praising the vitality, energy, independence and courage of UAW members, Murray said the delegates ought to get time-and-a-half for attending caucuses, in which they "have the world's record."

"When an auto worker finishes his day's work in the convention," Murray said, "he is looking for a caucus at night. He doesn't care where the caucus is or who is holding it, he wants to go to a caucus.

"But," he added, "don't let the misleading notion get into the public prints that you are going to tear this house of yours down.

"There is too much at stake. You must never permit either a caucus or a convention, no matter how bitter the personal animosities may be, to so control your emotions that you might endanger the future of your organization."

Referring to reports that "some people in New York were interested in splitting up this organization," Murray said, to applause that rocked the convention: "I don't give a damn who these people are, they can't do it, they are not going to do it, whether they are alleged leaders of the AFL makes no difference—they are not going to do it."

★ ★ ★

Despite the factionalism it has suffered and the hurly-burly of its conventions, the UAW has an unparalleled record of growth and accomplishment.

The militancy and solidarity with which it has fought the most powerful anti-labor corporations, winning enormous gains in wages and conditions, have developed an unbreakable loyalty to the union and the CIO.

Union-busting employers and AFL splitters are doomed to sharp disappointment, if they base any hopes on the UAW's much publicized internal differences. Certainly the Atlantic City delegates gave them short shrift.

For UAW members regard two things beyond cavil or question—their union solidarity and their CIO loyalty.

The Nazis kidded themselves that the verbal violence of an American national election campaign was a sign of weakness and disunity. But most Americans considered the holding of an election in wartime betokened the surest confidence in their national unity.

The auto workers are like that—so sure of their basic unity that they sometimes seem to other folks to be taking undue chances with it.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

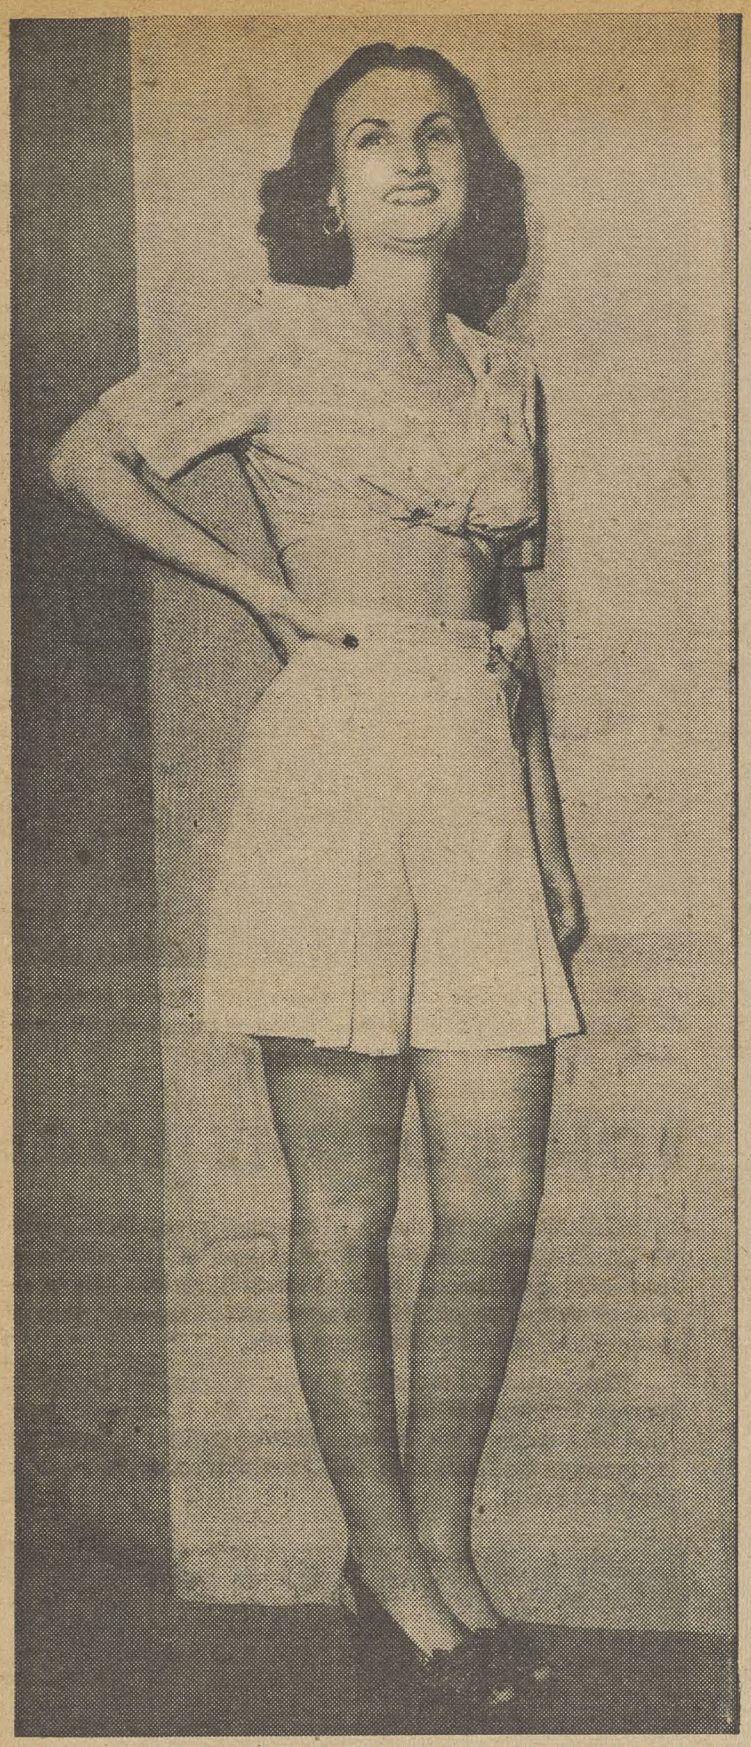
Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, L. S. Buckmaster, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 April 1, 1946 No. 14



QUEEN OF THE RANGE AND CIO: Miss Virginia Lutz, 21, Fort Worth, Tex., was pin-up No. 1 this week in contest sponsored by beauty-master Earl Carroll. Secretary at the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, she was chosen from among 50 contestants as Queen of the Range for the town's springtime cattle festival. Now she's Hollywood bound.

'WIN PEACE' PARLEY APR. 5-7

CIO international unions and state and city CIO councils will be represented at the "Win the Peace" Conference to be held in Washington, D C., April 5-7.

Theme of the conference is: "Unity won the war—unity must win the peace."

Speakers scheduled include: Sens. Harley M. Kilgore (D, W. Va.), Claude Pepper (D, Fla.) and Glen H. Taylor (D, Ida.); Reps. Adolph Sabath (D, Ill.), Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.), John M. Coffee (D, Wash.) and Hugh DeLacy (D, Wash.); Marine Col. Evans F. Carlson, and Legislative Rep. Russell Nixon of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Topics for consideration by the conference are: America in the United Nations; occupation policies; American policies in Asia; American policies toward colonial peoples; and home front effect of foreign policy. After a discussion of these subjects, the conference aims to draw up a program of action for securing the peace.

CIO unions and their veterans groups electing to send delegates to the conference include: National Maritime Union, Office & Professional Workers, Marine — Shipbuilding Workers, and the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians.

New Jersey and Wisconsin state CIO councils will be represented as well as industrial union councils from N. Y. City, Washington, Baltimore, Wilmington, Del., Seattle, Milwaukee, Cleveland and Schenectady.

Arkansas Justice

KILLER FREE, 3 CIO MEN GET YEAR EACH

JUSTICE—Arkansas style: It's legitimate to kill a striker, but it means a year in the penitentiary for three strikers who were "guilty" of walking a picket line.

That was the decision this week of a hand-picked Little Rock circuit court jury which considered cases arising out of the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers' strike at the Southern Cotton Oil Co.

The three strikers, Lewis Jones, Jesse Bean and Roy Cole, were indicted under Act 193, Arkansas' so-called anti-violence law.

The prosecution was having a hard time making a case, the Arkansas Gazette, local anti-labor paper observed, until Judge Lawrence C. Auten instructed the jury that the pickets could be found guilty if they had aided or just stood idly by while violence occurred in connection with the strike.

Testimony showed that the defendant pickets were two blocks away when FTA member Walter Campbell was knifed to death. Otha Williams held in connection with the stabbing, was exonerated by the jury.

Motions to quash the indictments were overruled by the judge without reading them. The motions protested absence of Negroes from the jury, excessive penalties in the indictment and charged that Act 193 constitutes class legislation against workers and does not cover others for similar offenses.

Selection of a jury in Arkansas is left to one man appointed by the judge. In this case the judge appointed Mark Valentine who, after selecting the jury, signed an ad in Arkansas and Tennessee newspapers pledging "active and unrelenting aid in the legal prosecution of these men."

Names of six of the jury members appeared in a published open letter to President Truman demanding repeal of the Wagner act. The other six were Little Rock businessmen. There were no workers on the jury.

FTA will appeal the verdict, union officials announced. Appeal bond was fixed at $2,500, although the usual bond in such cases is $1,000.

TELLS HOW TO WIN THE PEACE

NECESSARY steps to be taken to win the peace and prosperity are given in the current issue of the Economic Outlook, publication of thet CIO Dept. of Research and Education. Before telling how the recommended steps will help, the Outlook points out:

"Unless workers earn enough to buy back what they produce, unless our purchasing power matches our giant productive capacity, the nation will eventually be overwhelmed by depression—depression which will threaten the democratic way of life."

The CIO publication calls for research and planning, large output at low prices, civilian control of atomic energy, river valley developments such as the Tennessee Valley Authority and continued operation of plants built by the government during the war.

The Outlook hails the enactment of the Full Employment Bill, adding:

"Federal planning, social security and public works must not be seen merely as shock absorbers, when private industry fails to furnish jobs for all, but also as devices for expanding the community's supply of goods and services. Furthermore, the mere realization that such devices are available for use in an emergency, will tend to stimulate and sustain business confidence."

Passage of the McMahon Bill, without the Vandenberg amendment, was urged by the Outlook, which asserts:

"Control of the government's atomic research program should be placed in the hands of a full-time civilian commission directly responsible to the President. A democracy must avoid military control of such matters. Furthermore, research supported by public funds must not become the tool of any special interest group. Therefore, this commission must not be composed of part time persons employed by private institutions or organizations."

In addition, the Outlook contains a page on "Legislation to Win the Peace," urging support for the Sixty-five Cent Minimum Wage Bill, extention of the Price Control Act without crippling amendments; the Murray-Wagner Dingell Health Bill; retention of the United States Employment Service under Federal control; the Patman and the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Housing Bill; the Fair Employment Practices Bill; the Anti-Poll Tax Bill; an appropriation to compile statistical information to make the full employment program effective. The Outlook called for the defeat of the Case Bill, "designed to hamstring the labor movement and undermine free collective bargaining."

THANKS CIO

Thanks for CIO aid in the Victory Clothing Collection was tendered CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week by Dan A. West, the drive's executive director. West said:

"The perhaps unexpressed but most profound gratitude comes from the hearts of the people who were the first victims and the first fighters against fascist aggression, from the people who live and suffer in the ruins of last year's war."

LABOR'S WORLD

THE CIO will have two representatives on the U. S. delegation to the coming confab of western hemisphere members of the Intl. Labor Office, which opens soon in Mexico City. Pres. Willard Townsend of the Transport Service Employes and Michael Ross of the CIO International Affairs Dept. will leave shortly for the Mexican capital.

Other in the group are Sec.-Treas. George Meany and A. F. Cadena of San Antonio, Tex., of the AFL; Sen. Dennis Chavez of New Mexico, representing government; and James D. Zellerbach of San Francisco, representing business.

★ ★ ★

The World Federation of Trade Unions has announced publication of a new official monthly magazine, "World Labor Movement", first issue of which came off the presses in Paris early this month. Printed in English, French, Russian and Spanish, the first issue contains articles by Sir Walter Citrine, WFTU president; Sec. Louis Saillant; a discussion of the "Origins of the great social conflicts in the U. S." by CIO Pres. Murray; and a treatise on the relationship between UNO and WFTU by Pres. V. Kuznetsov of the Soviet labor organization.

Arrangements for American distribution of the new international magazine are now being investigated by the CIO. There'll be an announcement in a forthcoming issue of The CIO NEWS as to how you can subscribe.

★ ★ ★

Japanese unions, emerging after years of suppression, are getting ready to form a national organization which the English-language Nippon Times of Tokio describes as a "Japanese counterpart of the CIO."

Invitations to a number of unions, including organizations of workers in the railway, communications, coal-mining, publishing, and metal industries and to school teachers, seamen and traffic workers, brought delegates from seven of the unions. According to the same newspaper source, "a preparatory committee for the formation of a National Congress of Industrial Organization was set up by unanimous agreement of all participants." The new group, despite the similarity of names, has no connection with the CIO.

★ ★ ★

Allied Headquarters in Tokio estimates that between 600,000 and two million workers have joined unions since V-J Day, and the membership boom is still continuing.

Reports of violent anti-labor activity in Chungking, China, by secret police squads and soldiers of the Kuomintang 14th Army are reported by Allied Labor News. According to the dispatch, 20 workers were killed, three injured and 20 others arrested during a strike at the China Woolen Textile Mills.

Those jailed by the police were reported tortured in the prison, while the remaining strikers were forced to return to their jobs at bayonet point.

1 Personable secretary Marie Glucksberg takes typing woes from shoulders of Editor Mannie Silverman of The Outlook, official voice of Local 30, Industrial Insurance Employes Union, an affiliate of CIO Office & Professional Workers, N. Y. City.

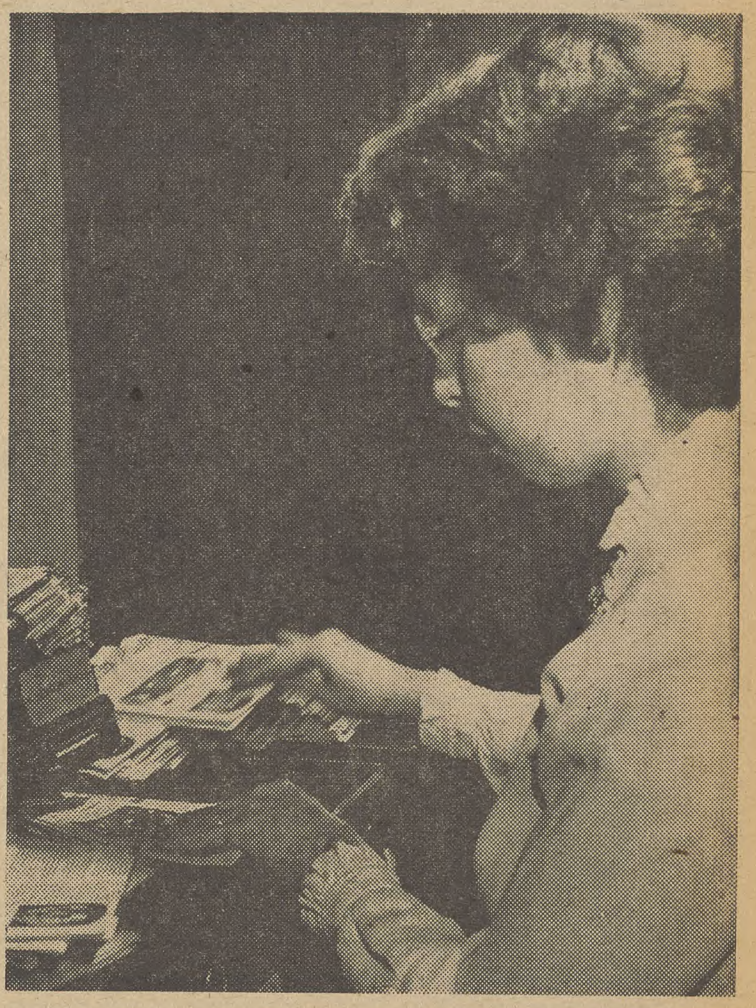
2 Silverman works out a pencilled page layout (makeup dummy) scaling photograph of shop stewards to fit space desired. His one-man job requires versality.

VOICE OF THE LOCAL

THE Outlook is virtually a one-man newspaper, typical of hundreds published by local unions of CIO national and international affiliates. Editor Mannie Silverman has no simple scissors and paste job. He's a combination reporter, picture and news editor, layout and makeup man.

The Outlook is the official voice of Local 30, Industrial Insurance Employes Union, N. Y. City. It's a four-page monthly, filled with union news, columns written by its members, a regular message by Local Pres. Bill Frankfurt, and photos of union people in action.

3 Makeup dummy is translated into type. With printers paid by hour, instant decisions are necessary. Main woe of most editors is fact that type, set on lead slugs, can't be condensed. Spaces slightly too large for stories are filled by "leading" a little between type slugs.



4 Hot off the press, The Outlook is addressed by Ethel Livingstone for mailing. She's using an addressograph machine, operated with aid of foot pedal.

Frances Lohn, Hooven battery operator at the J. A. Want Organization, N. Y. City, operates five typewriters at once, with the help of a device like a player piano roller.

FIVE-RING CIRCUS IN HUNT AND PECK

CIO's "unusual job of the week" is held by Miss Frances Lohn, who keeps five typewriters going at once, pounding out hundreds of "individually typed" letters a day in the direct mail advertising trade.

Most of the typing is done automatically by player-piano type rollers (cut by a master typewriter) which transmit impulses to the five typewriters. The machines turn out "individually typed" form letters.

Miss Lohn's job is to insert stationery in the one machine, type in the name, address and "Dear Mr. So-and-So," set the mechanism going and then do the same thing with the other four typewriters.

The typewriters pause now and then for her to fill in something in the body of the letters, and then go on typing. And out come the letters, looking just the way they would if the sender's private secretary had typed them.

Direct mail plants turn out quantities of letters and advertising to individuals all over the country. Their specialty is mass production office work. And the direct mail workers were doing this work for 35 and 40 cents an hour before they organized into the CIO Office and Professional Workers Union.

Miss Lohn, for instance, got this job seven years ago at $14 a week, with a $2 raise a few months later. She's been doing it ever since, except for two years out to work in Sperry Gyroscupe, a UE war plant. But today, with UOPWA raises, she's making $33.60 a week.

Hooven operators will tell you that's a big step in the right direction, but they've still got far to go, with living costs what they are today. "And besides," says Miss Lohn, "nobody could tell, watching us, what it takes to keep these five typewriters going. The customers come in and think it's pretty simple—all we have to do is put the paper in the machine and the typewriter does the rest. Actually, we have to keep proofreading the letters every few rounds, because even machines make mistakes.

"And we may have as many as five different jobs on the five machines—each with its own special instructions and different specifications to keep track of. It's like a five-ring circus."

SNAFU

LOBBY DIMS HOPE FOR HOMES

THE organized real estate lobby, which succeeded in cutting the "heart" out of the Patman Housing Bill (HR 4761) in the House, has changed the scene of its operations to the Senate, where the measure is being considered by the Banking Committee.

Not only did the House strip the bill of the $600 million subsidy fund to guarantee a supply of scare materials at reasonable prices, but also removed price controls on existing houses.

Apparently the spokesman for the Natl. Assn. of Real Estate Boards and the Producers Council in the Senate is Sen. Homer Capehart(R., Ind.), who this week heckled Housing Expediter Wyatt while he explained to the banking committee why the subsidy fund is vital to the effectiveness of the Patman Bill and the program for 2,700,000 homes for veterans in two years.

Wyatt with Civilian Production Administrator Small this week acted to channel existing building materials into veterans' housing by ordering that with a few exceptions no new construction or repairs to existing structures can be undertaken without U. S. authorization.

The CIO, which joined in the fight to save the Patman bill in the house, is continuing to battle for the measure. Letters asking the Senate Banking and Currency Committe to report out the bill minus crippling amendments should be sent now to Sen. Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.), committee chairman. After the bill is reported out, write or wire your Senators.

TERMITES IN THE WOODWORK

Powerful financial backing and the pro-Fascist connections of the Society of World War II, an anti-union veterans organizations, have been exposed by the Labor Herald, California CIO Council paper.

Set up seven months ago in a tiny San Francisco office, the society moved this month into a 20-room mansion which formerly housed the Japanese consulate and rents for $300 a month.

The organization is working on plans for a referendum in the state elections in November designed to outlaw the closed shop, but that is not the bait it uses to get veterans.

The biggest drawing card of the society is capitalizing on the housing shortage and getting apartments for veterans. The Labor Herald reports that Hugh R. McDevitt, president of the San Francisco Apartment House Assn., is legal counsel of the society and aids it in getting apartments.

Most outstanding among the vice-presidents of the society, which claims to be organized in 46 states, is Edward R. Fuller of Philadelphia, president of Sylvan Seal Milk, Inc., a Philadelphia corporation. Another vice-president is J. S. Livesay, a San Francisco banker. The Labor Herald reports that I. W. Hellman, president of the Wells Fargo Bank Trust. San Francisco admitted that he is a member of the society.

The society's president is Folson Haywood, a promoter from the Middle West. Labor Herald reporters also found that S. P. Bennett of California representative of Allied American, is a great friend of Haywood. The paper points out Bennett last year attended a meeting of the American Action Committee in Chicago, called by Merwin K. Hart, N. Y. attorney widely know for his fascist tendencies. The committee is the co-ordinating agency of anti-union, anti-democratic groups.

Voices for price control over CIO's CBS show from N. Y. City last week were, l. to r.: Miss Irene Anderson, UOPWA; Miss Evelyn Kostove, Shoe Workers, and Mrs. Elsie Spencer, NMU Auxiliary. Off the air on CBS, CIO is still broadcasting weekly over ABC. Listen in—6:45-7 p.m. every Saturday!

BLS SHOWS CIO GAINS

GREAT strides have been made by the CIO in organizing during the seven-year period ending 1945, a U. S. Bureau of Labor Standards survey issued this week shows.

In 1938 the aircraft industry was almost entirely without union agreements, but in 1945 almost the entire industry was covered by written contracts, official figures show.

The survey also states that the same holds true for metal mining and the release of the department continues:

"Large gains have also been recorded in packing from a comparatively small number of workers under written contracts in 1938 to nearly 100% coverage in 1945. Shipbuilding, with approximately one-half of the workers employed under written agreements in 1938, is now almost 100% covered by union agreements. Substantial gains have been made also in cement, aluminum, rubber and steel."

In these industries the CIO unions are the leading organizations of workers.

Eighty-seven percent of all manufacturing workers in 1945 had union security ranging from maintenance of membership to the closed shop, with maintenance of membership leading with 46%; closed or union shop with preferential hiring, 25%; union shop without preferential hiring, 167%.

The BLS survey estimated that 14 million workers were covered by union contracts during 1945 out of 29 million engaged in occupations in which unions seek written contracts for their members. Of all the production workers in manufacturing in 1945, about 70% were under union agreements.

In 1941 slightly less than 33% of the workers eligible for union agreement coverage were under contract protection, but this figure includes non-manufacturing workers as well as production employes. For 1945, the total under union contract in both manufacturing and non-manufacturing industries were 50%, according to BLS.

A large part of the contract protected workers in 1945 were covered by the Natl. War Labor Board in exchange for labor's no-strike pledge. For 1945 the BLS said, 29% of all covered workers had maintenance of membership clauses in their contracts. In 1942 it was only 15%, in 1943, 20%, and 27% in 1944.

Closed shop and union shop agreements took in 45% of all covered workers in 1942, and rose to 50% in 1943, before falling off, to reach 45% in 1945. Under the closed shop only union members may be hired by an employer. The union shop permits hiring of non-union men who must join the organization within a short period, usually 30 to 60 days.

Nylons May Be Precious—But!

Here's a yarn a lot of harried husbands may not believe—but it's true.

Two hundred women gathered outside the J. C. Penney store at Wilmington, Calif., where a widely-advertised sale of nylons was scheduled. In front of the store was a picketline of 20 striking clerks, members of the CIO Retail & Wholesale Employes.

A CIO Auxiliary member talked to the shoppers, discovered their husbands were longshoremen, seamen, pipefitters and shipyard workers.

"You'll never get 30% for your own, girls, if you don't stand behind the other girls' husbands," she told the crowd, and reminded them that even a pair of nylon wasn't worth crossing a picket line.

After the pep talk, the crowd disbanded.

1 PITTSBURGH CIO members and children like Timmy Tobin (top) last week paraded in thousands to protest refusal of Westinghouse to settle 11-week-old UE-CIO strike. They heard Mayor David L. Lawrence (bottom) urge Westinghouse to meet the national wage pattern of "steel, aluminum, oil, meat packing, automobile and the rest of the electrical industry."

2 Paraders marched through heart of Pittsburgh (top and right) sin Republican Governor Edward Martin. "Crime Does Not Pay—Neit

WESTINGHOUSE—

Story by Fred d'Avila • Pictu

IT happened in steel, auto, rubber, oil, meat packing, in most of the electrical industry. But it hasn't happened in Westinghouse.

"It" is the national pattern of wage boosts averaging 18½c an hour and set by CIO unions in most of the major industries. It has been flatly rejected by one of the largest and most profitable electrical corporations in the world.

With 75,000 workers 11 weeks on strike, Westinghouse this week refused to budge one penny above its offer of a 9.7c raise. It also told the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers that its contract with the company would be cancelled April 1.

The reason why is best told in a report issued by William H. Davis and Arthur S. Meyer, U. S. mediators who have been studying the strike for the last 10 weeks.

In the report, notifying Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach that they had withdrawn from the case, they said:

"The refusal of the company to continue negotiations or meet with the union unless its wage offer was accepted in full, together with its refusal to extend the contract for a reasonable period, created conditions that made mediation impossible."

The company maintained that it had offered 15.1c an hour. The union said the offer was 9.7c. The impartial mediators reported: "The company's offer is substantially less than 15c an hour."

The mediators noted that the offer was subject to the following conditions:

1. The lamp department, employing about 10% (mostly women) of the workers, is excluded from the offer. It will get a small raise, if any.

2. The company proposes to eliminate the bonus paid to day workers (45% of its hourly employes), thus cut their pay 7½c an hour.

3. The company "proposes unilaterally to establish new incentive procedures and techniques. No estimate is given of the reduction involved but it will be substantial for the 55% of the hourly employes engaged on an incentive basis."

Westinghouse claims it pays high wages, based on an incentive system. Actually, according to UE-CIO, t few workers, low pay

UE quoted sample ties—U. S. Governme
Natl. War Labor Boar house to stop "exploiti scales reported were:

	Rang Hourl Minim
Baltimore	57½c
Bloomfield	61½c
Cleveland	57½c
Derry	61½c
E. Pittsburgh	62½c
Fairmont	54 c
Lima	52½c
Mansfield	59½c
Newark	57½c

"In the face of this fore the American peo

WHAT U

UE-CIO this we ing offer to Westin corporation's 75,00
11 weeks:

1. Company to raise to all employ made by GM electr

2. All strikers to crimination.

3. Following term above conditions, contract to continu unresolved question arbitration.

4. Until new cont
ing national and apply.

Westinghouse rej fied UE that prese canceled April 1.

ght) singing union songs, protesting court injunctions and use of State police by ay—Neither Does Westinghouse" featured marchers' slogans.

—LOW PAY HOLDOUT

• Pictures by Associated Photographers

E-CIO, this means high pay for ow pay for the great majority.

sample pay scales in nine locali- overnment figures on which the or Board last year told Westing- exploiting" its workers. The pay were:

Range of Women's Hourly Wage Rates		Male
Minimum	Maximum	Common Labor Rate
57½c	74½c	69½c
61½c	79½c	78½c
57½c	73½c	73½c
61½c	63½c	79½c
62½c	80½c	78½c
54 c	72 c	76½c
52½c	78½c	70½c
59½c	74½c	80½c
57½c	77½c	80½c

e of this, management comes be- can people and states: Westinghouse employes do not have to strike to get high wages," UE said.

In N. Y. City this week, UE Sec. Treas. Julius Emspak declared:

"Westinghouse evidently has made up its mind that it wants to obtain a better competitive position in the electrical industry in order to realize higher profits. In order to accomplish this, Westinghouse is seeking to advance its own position and increase its profits at the expense of its employes.

"Westinghouse men and women have already suffered a greater reduction in earnings than any of its major competitors. In addition, no other company in the electrical industry has as many of its employes working on an incentive basis as has Westinghouse

"This corporation has some 60% of its workers toiling under an incentive system. Under such a system, the average worker is permitted to earn a little more if he works much harder. Workers under the Westinghouse incentive system have suffered the greatest losses in pay since V-J Day.

"Despite this, under Westinghouse's proposal for a settlement of the strike, the corporation proposes further cuts in wage rates.

"Westinghouse ignores the fact in its huge advertisements and publicity campaign that the people who work for Westinghouse must buy the same food, pay the same rent, face the same doctor bills as the employes of any other company.

"The report of the U. S. mediators upholds the UE position in every respect. The contents of the report place full responsibility for the continuation of the strike on the Westinghouse Corp."

What do workers think about it?

Tony Quinn talking, member of UE-CIO Local 601. Over the radio he said:

"I am not the president of a multi-million dollar corporation like Mr. Gwilym A. Price. I am just a steward in the E. Pittsburgh plant of Westinghouse.

"Mr. Price claims that our union leaders coerced us into turning down the company's wage-cutting demands. No one has to coerce me, a Westinghouse worker, into voting against letting the company cut my wages, abolish my seniority, take away my rights and push me around every day in the week. I have enough sense to know when I'm being pushed around. My union is here to see that Price and Westinghouse don't push me around. That's why we are on strike.

"In Fairmont the workers took those company proposals, burned them to ashes and sent the ashes to Mr. Price. They told him how his demands were purified by fire. In Baltimore the Westinghouse workers wrapped a baloney in the proposal and sent it to Mr. Price.

"One thing all of us who work for Westinghouse know—we are determined to win our wage demand for an increase of 18½c. Injunctions won't stop us. State troops will not weaken our determination. We will continue stronger than ever and firmly united until victory is ours."

T UE OFFERS

this week made the follow- Westinghouse on behalf of s 75,000 workers, on strike ny to grant 18½c-an-hour employes—same settlement M electrical division, GE. ikers to return without dising termination of strike on itions, negotiations on new continue for 30 days. All questions to be submitted to new contract is signed, exist- l and local agreements to ouse rejected the offer, noti- at present contract will be ril 1.

3 Gwilym Alexander Price (right), former Mellon bank official, is Westinghouse president. A Republican lawyer, Price holds directorships in Pittsburgh Steel, National Union Fire Insurance, Blaw-Knox and S. Penn Oil companies. His wage offer: 9.7c an hour. GM electrical division and GE settled for 18½c.

All For CIO

UNITY PLEDGED BY REUTHER

(Continued from Page 3)

in helping the found the WFTU.

The CIO president lashed out at the governors of Michigan and Pennsylvania for using state police for strikebreaking purposes, while stressing the importance of political action to elect progressives to public office.

After warning of the dangers of union factionalism (see Looking Ahead, page 4), and calling for meticulous observance of contracts by both employers and unions, Murray told of CIO's plans for a big organizing drive in the South.

"There is a great gateway," he said, "a gateway of opportunity lying wide open for this mighty movement of ours to go through." When the CIO passes through that gateway, he added, it will do so "to bring about the economic and political emancipation of millions of people who are deprived of these opportunities today.

"There is no other instrumentality I know of anywhere in America that seems quite so capable of performing that task as the CIO. We have been reading about many things in the South for many years—polltax, low wages and the inability of the average poorer wage earner to vote on election day.

"I have a notion there is only one way to cure that condition down there. It isn't by confining our task exclusively in Washington to the Bilbos and the Rankins and their ilk. No, the CIO has got to go into the South and carry the message of America to the people down there."

Declaring that the CIO was raising $1,000,000 for this drive and would put 200 organizers to work, Murray described Southern labor conditions as "a type of economic millstone thrust around the necks of the people who are working in the North," and said:

"We are not going into the South to violate the law; we are going into the South in the year 1946 like we went into the North, 10 years ago, to carry the message of the CIO."

Despite the turbulent union election campaign, and the nightly mass caucuses in the first days of the convention, the UAW delegates applied themselves in serious and orderly fashion to a large amount of convention business.

After prolonged discussion and the rejection of several reports on the subject of dues, including a recommendation to raise them to $2 a month, the convention voted to raises dues from $1 to $1.50, 65c of which is to go to the international, with 5c allocated to a new international strike fund, in addition to the already existing local strike funds funds.

Another subject which was long and vigorously debated was the establishment of a Fair Practices and Anti-Discrimination Department in the international office. A report which would have made the director of this department a member of the international executive board was voted down.

The final action called for a committee of executive board members and an appointed director and staff qualified "in the field of inter-racial, inter-faith and inter-cultural relations." One cent per month per capita is to be allocated to this department's work in combatting discriminatory practices.

In another anti-discrimination resolution, the convention demanded a permanent FEPC; called on the Governor of Tennessee to prosecute the members of the white mob who stormed the jail at Columbia, Tenn., and the officers responsible for the death of two Negro prisoners; called for the prosecution of those guilty of slaying the Negro war veterans at Freeport, L. I.; denounced fixed Jewish quotas in educational institutions, and asked increased immigration quotas for displaced Jews and other persecuted and displaced persons.

The convention called on the CIO to establish machinery "for the speedy, just, binding and conclusive determination" of jurisdictional disputes between CIO unions; and expressed the willingness of the UAW "to enter into reciprocal arrangements with any and all international unions of the CIO to provide for such adjustment of jurisdictional disputes."

The convention urged the immediate severance of all diplomatic and trade relations with Franco Spain; and called for an economic embargo against Argentina and that country's expulsion from the UNO until "it rids itself of its pro-fascist, fifth-column regime."

President Truman came in for vigorous criticism in the officers' reports of Thomas and Addes. Thomas in his opening speech, characterized him as "weak and spineless" for having approved the GM fact-finding report for a 19½c wage increase but not having had "the intestinal fortitude to go out and fight for his own recommendation."

Thomas warned the major political parties that if they don't agree labor deserves some support, "we are going to have to find in the future independent candidates, at least, to support."

The Women's Auxiliaries of the UAW, claiming to be the largest in the country, met concurrently with the union convention and re-elected Mrs. Dorothy Keene of Rockford, Ill., as president, and Mrs. Catherine Gelles of Detroit, as secretary-treasurer.

WALTER REUTHER—UAW CHIEF

WALTER Philip Reuther, newly elected president of the UAW-CIO, is one of the most colorful figures in American labor ranks.

Born Sept. 1, 1907, at Wheeling, W. Va., he left high school at 15 to become an apprentice tool and die maker at the Wheeling Steel Corp. He was fired for organizing the workers in protest against Sunday and holiday work.

In 1926, Reuther went to Detroit. He worked for Briggs, GM, Coleman Tool and Die, and finally Ford, where he worked in the tool and die room for six years. He continued his high school education at night and went three years to Wayne University.

In 1933, Reuther was fired from Ford's for union activity and, with his brother Victor, embarked on a world tour which took them through 11 countries of Europe and Asia. They worked in factories, and studied the labor movements in the countries visited.

Returning to Detroit in 1935, Reuther went to work in a shop and plunged into the job of organizing auto workers. In May 1936, he was elected to the UAW international executive board and was re-elected every year after that until 1942, when he was first elected vice-president.

Reuther was active in the Detroit and Flint sitdowns, and during the Ford organizing drive in 1937, he along with Richard Frankensteen and other unionists was severely beaten by Ford strong-arm men in what has come to be known as "the battle of the overpass."

The "Reuther Plan" in 1940, for converting the auto industry to a war footing and mass production of military planes, drew wide national attention to Walter Reuther, as has also his recent leadership, as director of the UAW General Motors Dept., of the long and bitterly fought GM strike.

Reuther is married, has a 3½-year-old daughter and lives in Detroit.

UNION LEADERS ELECTED TO HIGH SOVIET POSTS

Two Soviet trade union leaders, both well known to CIO officials as a result of visits to the United States and contacts at WFTU meetings during the past year, have been elected to high government positions in the USSR.

Nikolai Shvernik, former chairman of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, was named chairman of the presidium of the Supreme Soviet, a post described as that of president of the Soviet Union.

Vasili Kuznetsov, present AUCCTU chairman and host to the recent CIO delegation to Moscow, was elected chairman of the Council of Nationalities, one of the houses of the Soviet Congress.

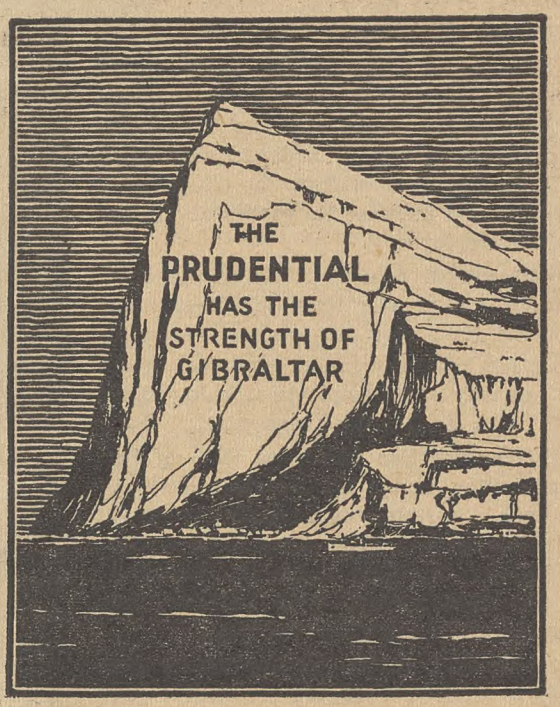
CHILEAN WORKERS DEVELOPING UNITY PLANS

The Confederation of Chilean Workers meets in Santiago March 29-31 in an effort to develop a unified program for unions and progressive people which will off set reactionary attacks on labor, believed to represent a plan to establish a dictatorship similar to the Argentine model.

Declaring "further conciliation of the enemies of the Chilean people is impossible," the convention call said that a get-together of the country's democratic forces would "allow economic transformation of Chile within the democratic system, freeing us of all imperialist influence" and would "isolate and smash the semi-fascists."

Union Records

Record albums of picket line songs and the "voice" of the late President Roosevelt were issued this week by the Union Record Co. Both albums contain two 12-inch unbreakable records and are priced at $5.



The Future

belongs to those who prepare for it

The PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE COMPANY OF AMERICA
A mutual life insurance company
HOME OFFICE NEWARK, NEW JERSEY

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Thomas J. Gallagher, Dir. Org. IUM&SWA, advises the run off election at Higgins Industries, Inc., New Orleans, resulted as follows: CIO 892, AFL 684.

Fred C. Pieper, CIO Reg. Dir., New Orleans, reports: Sterling election, CIO 143, no union 54.

CIO Reg. Dir. Geo. DeNucci, Columbus, reports: Detroit Harvester Co., Zanesville, Ohio, USA-CIO 99, against 4. USA Rep. Al Marsh was in charge.

USA-CIO Dis. Dir. Pete Mosele, New York, advises: Alumnium Company of America, Edgewater, N. J., CIO 38, no 1.

C. H. Gillman, CIO Reg. Dir., Atlanta, Ga., reports: Cedartown Textiles, Inc., Cedartown, Ga., CIO 326, no union 57. The drive was under the direction of TWUA Rep. Garland Brook and CIO Rep. Wm. Denton.

CIO Reg. Dir. George Craig of Philadelphia reports: Frank Associates, Inc., CIO Textile Workers 36, against 29; Textile Machine Works, Reading, Pa., USA-CIO 297 against 26.

Paul Domeny, Secy., CIO LIU 1064, Detroit, Mich., reports: Cafeterias operated by Ford Motor Co. (Administration Bldg., Aircraft Bldg., Dearborn Research Laboratory and Camp Legion), CIO 101, against 19. Contracts have been renegotiated for the River Rouge Box Lunch Co., Springwells Factory Lunch Co., Schaefer Lunch, Inc., Fordson Factory Lunch Co., all four serving the Ford Rouge Plant, Dearborn, Mich., and an 18c per hour increase was won. Conant Lunch Co., contract was renegotiated with a 15c per hour increase.

* * *

Walter H. Harris, CIO Reg. Dir., Chicago, advises: Acme Industrial Co., Chicago (production and maintenance employes, including shipping and receiving room employes), UAW-CIO 156, against 124; E. S. Vihon, Chicago (production and maintenance employes), CIO Fur & Leather Workers 16, against 9.

CIO Reg. Dir. Geo. DeNucci, Columbus, reports: Detroit Har-Corp., Elizabeth, N. J., URW & DSEA-CIO 139, AFL 121. URW & DSEA Rep. Geo. Braverman was in charge; U. S. Rubber Recap, Nutley, N. J., CIO Rubber Workers 29, no union 1. URWA Dist. Rep. O. H. Bosley and Rep. John Baldante were in charge.

W. A. Copeland, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Memphis, Tenn., advises: International Sugar Feed, FTA-CIO 34, no union 4. FTA Rep. Mack Dyson was in charge; Modern Packages, Memphis, Tenn., recognized CIO without going to the Board. UFWA Rep. W. L. Carron, advises of the winning of the Darnell Wood productions election by a vote of 23 for CIO Furniture Workers as against 2 for no union.

* * *

Chairman Thomas E. Andert, Optical & Instrument Workers Org. Com., reports: Bay State Optical Co., Attleboro, Mass., CIO 118, no union 113. Organizers James O'Reilly and Joe Duggan were in charge.

Dir. Org. IWA-CIO George Brown reports: Umpqua Plywood, Roseburg, Oregon, CIO 46, AFL 37.

Ben Henry, CIO Reg. Dir., Des Moines, Iowa, advises: CIO LIU 1465 won an election at Chamberlain Laboratories, Inc., Des Moines, CIO 23, no union 2.

CIO Reg. Dir. James Ritchies, St. Louis, Mo., reports: Servel, Inc., Evansville, approximately 4200 employed in the plant with 95% voting; the majority was 200 for CIO.

* * *

Robert C. Edwards, Director, Org. Com. PJNWA-CIO, reports that the CIO won recognition at the following plants: Gardner Co., Chicago, involving 400 workers, organized by Rep. Walter Ignatowicz out of CIO Reg. Dir. Walter Harris' office; Sylvania Co., Philadelphia, Pa., involving 75 workers, organized by Rep. Joseph Gorelik with aid of Al Lichtman, Eddie Hickman and John Jay out of CIO Reg. Dir. Geo. Craig's office.

Joseph M. Walsh, CIO Reg. Dir., Wilkes-Barre, Pa., advises: Utility Workers Union of America, CIO, Local 334, covering Shamokin and Mt. Carmel, Pa., won election for Roaring Creek Water Co. employes at Shamokin, 21 to 16 for "no union." CIO Field Rep. Frank Vrataric was in charge and is negotiating contract for Mt. Carmel Water Co. employes.

FEDERAL UNION NIPS JIM CROW

DISCRIMINATORY practices of the U. S. Employment Service were ordered discontinued this week after charges leveled by the CIO Federal Workers Union were sustained in an investigation by Civil Service Commissioner Fleming.

The union maintained that the USES office in Washington was using separate files of Negro and white job applicants and that this separation resulted in habitual discrimination by the agency.

The Federal Workers pointed out that the current discriminatory situation is a logical outcome of the executive order provision allowing each governmental agency to do its own hiring. The union asked that the recruitment of workers be returned to Civil Service Commission control to preserve the merit system and established Civil Service policies.

From other sections of the nation, Federal Workers locals have, in resolutions, condemned Pres. Truman's executive order which "reinstates the spoils system." The locals in Marion, Ind., Danville, Ill. and Chicago asked the revocation of the order and the issuance of an amendment which will institute a civil service register."

Federal Workers locals also condemned the "bad faith displayed by the Secretary of Navy" in dealing with the union in the establishment of a grievance procedure.

FLORIDA IUC JOINS CIO IN DRIVE

A TWO-PRONGED drive aimed at organizing Florida's unorganized workers and achieving political activity is being developed by the Florida CIO to implement its convention program.

The CIO organizing will begin with the 150,000 citrus and vegetables workers in the state, John G. Lackner, newly elected state CIO president, declared.

The creation of state and local PAC's to carry out a program of political education, organization and guidance for the spring primaries is the second objective, Lackner said.

Political possibilities of the CIO's national campaign to organize the unorganized in the South were pointed out by John Brophy, national director of CIO industrial union councils. "Once we have two or more million workers organized down here there won't be any more coalition of Southern Democrats and Republicans in Washington," he said.

Enumerating the CIO's gains within the last three years in the South, Brophy contrasted the CIO's great strength today with it's position ten years ago. "With more workers organized we will be able to break reaction in the South," he added.

In his acceptance speech Lackner declared that a "lynch campaign, as an attack against organized labor, attempting to split the workers and destroy the unions," could best be met by a stronger unity between white and Negro workers.

Condemning the Truman administration's foreign policy as "madness," the convention, in one of 35 resolutions, called upon the President and Congress to carry out the decisions reached at Big Three meetings and "follow the program of United Nations cooperation upon which they were elected to office."

The convention also resolved "that the United Nations outlaw use of atomic energy for military purposes and control atomic energy raw materials and production everywhere in the world. Urging that all governments disclose everything they know about atomic energy to the UNO, the resolution condemned the attempt to use it as a big stick against the world."

Repeal of the anti-labor right-to-work law was also urged by the delegates.

GI WINS L. A. COUNCIL SEAT

A GI who knows why he fought was elected as a city councilman in Los Angeles in place of Meade McClanahan, recalled in a 12,394 to 8,913 vote because of his outspoken enthusiasm for Gerald L. K. Smith, rabble-rousing leader of American fascists.

John Russell Roden, 26, who flew 175 missions over the Hump in the India-China theater of war, was the choice of the 13th district voters by 11,405 votes against 1,028 and 929 of two other candidates for McClanahan's seat.

ILWU DELAYS STRIKE

POSTPONEMENT of the strike of the CIO Longshoremen scheduled for April 1 assures the success of the convention in San Francisco, May 6, to set up one big CIO maritime union.

Postponement came after Pres. Joseph Curran of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union, on behalf of the national NMU council, telegraphed Longshore Pres. Harry Bridges that the convention could decide "the most effective action to attain the just demands of all maritime workers." Other maritime unions also requested delay in calling the strike until after May 6.

Curran's wire stated that the council supports the Longshoremen's demands "but believes that most effective decisions can be made at that convention both with respect to the timing of the strike of the Longshoremen and the most effective kind of national action to the attain the just demand of all maritime workers."

In the negotiations with the Waterfront Employers Assn., San Francisco, the Longshoremen are seeking an increase to $1.50 per hour retroactive to last Oct. 1, the rate given Atlantic Coast longshoremen by an arbitrator. The association had upped its wage offer from 18 to 23c along with what the union termed "the most cruel joker ever invented." The employers made the price of the additional five cents the annual two week's vacation awarded the Longshoremen by the NLRB last August.

Representatives of seven maritime unions met in Washington in February to plan the the convention. Unions represented in addition to the NMU and the Longshoremen were the American Communications Assn., Marine Cook & Stewards, Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., Inland Boatmen, all CIO unions, and the unaffiliated Marine, Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders & Wipers.

STRIKE ENTERS 7TH MONTH

AFTER weathering a combination of the worst tactics of slave-minded textile management in the South plus the worst South Carolina weather in years, workers in the Gaffney Manufacturing Co. prepared this week to continue their six-month-old strike.

Turning down a company offer of a 55c an hour minimum wage and a tie-in feature that would have meant pay reductions for many of the 600 strikers, members of the CIO Textile Workers Union in Gaffney said they would "rather go fishing and picket the plant for another year if it takes that long to win this strike." The workers are asking for a minimum wage of 65c.

The company, which bucked a War Labor Board directive to raise the minimum wage to 55c until the Army stepped into the plant early in 1945, dropped the wage rate to a 47½c minimum after the Army left. When the wage was cut the workers went out on strike.

Almost every strike-breaking trick in the trade has been pulled by the mill management, but all have failed, C. D. Puckett, business manager of the TWUA Joint Board in Gaffney, said.

During the worst winter months in the history of the state the workers were unable to get coal or wood. The cooperation of workers with oil stoves enabled the strikers to keep their health and their picket lines going. Puckett declared.

"The picket lines are still holding tight," Puckett added, "and it appears that the morale and determination of the workers is as good, if not better, than it was the first two weeks of the strike."

CIO BREAKING TEAMSTERS' BOYCOTT

The AFL Teamsters boycott against North California canneries is breaking down under pressure from the CIO and the growers.

The boycott, the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers charge, was collusively conceived by the Teamsters and the canners who hoped to sign honeymoon contracts with the Teamsters for cannery workers instead of bargaining with FTA Workers who had shown their strength by winning a NLRB election. The board set aside the election result for no apparent reason.

The CIO Steelworkers on the West Coast have served notice that they will not make cans for plants entering into illegal contracts with the Teamsters for cannery workers. CIO councils have passed resolutions condemning the activities of canners, Teamsters and boycott.

The Teamsters have few members in their cannery workers union. So when the spinach crop was ready for processing this week, the FTA members who have been ready to go to work all along responded to appeals like this made by an FTA leader outside the Filice & Perrelli cannery at Gilrey:

"Go to work. Nobody has voted for a strike. The AFL is not trying to get us a raise. the AFL is just out to control the canneries. Stay on the job and help keep farmers from losing their crops." The workers entered the plant ignoring Teamster pickets.

Meanwhile, the NLRB has ordered a new election and an investigation of illegal contracts signed by some canners with the AFL.

★ ★ ★

Federal District Judge Ganey of Philadelphia, this week issued a preliminary injunction restraining the Pennsylvania State Labor Relations Board from acting as a strike-breaking agency in connection with the American Tobacco strike.

The injunction was granted upon request of FTA, on strike at American Tobacco for five and a half months. It followed proceedings of the SLRB on a petition for a new election at the plant by a scab group under the name of "Employes Representation Committee."

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS — By Rose H. Alschuler

BILLY PAYS NO ATTENTION

Does your 2, 3 or 4-year-old ignore your requests and refuse to obey you? Hard to reason with, isn't he? Cheer up! 75% of children his age are that way some of the time—about 25% most of time. Fact is, if your child is to have a will when he's older, he must have a won't when he's young. Recommended: Understanding and the patience of Job.

Lib. of Congress—Collins for OWI.

MEALS THAT COOK THEMSELVES

By Nutrition Service, D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross

IF you are one of the army of women doing double duty as homemaker and worker, your big problem is tasty, nutritious meals that can be prepared in short order and served piping hot to a hungry family.

For many working families, the evening meal is usually planned around meat or a meat alternate. Busy homemakers often find this meal the most time consuming. Easy-to-make main dishes that save time and motion, yet have taste appeal to satisfy the hungry young and the finicky old, is the answer.

A master-menu plan for at least three days ahead, should feature meats and alternates that cook quickly or allow for leftovers.

All-in-one dishes that practically cook themselves while you set the table and get ready to serve cut down on time spent in the kitchen. Simple salads, and fruit desserts with bread, butter and beverage help to make the meal well-balanced.

Here are some main dishes that are ready in 20 minutes to half-an-hour:

Liver: Any kind cooks in 3 to 5 minutes.

Hamburg: Broil as patties with half tomato; or make meat balls by adding crumbs or oatmeal and a little milk and seasonings; or make meat loaf in quantity, store in refrigerator and slice cold next day.

Frankfurters: Season canned beans with molasses and mustard. Bake in casserole while "franks" are boiling; or cut up "franks" into canned corn and tomatoes and bake in casserole.

Lamb: Stuff thin slices with bread stuffing. Fasten with toothpick. Braise in covered pan with a little water; for Shish Kabob, soak diced lamb in French dressing for a day. Skewer alternately with tomato or pieces of liver and broil.

Fish: Fry whole, or boil 5 to 10 minutes; or to make chowder cut fish into small pieces, cook with diced potatoes, flavor with bacon and onion, add milk.

Ham: Bake thin slices with left-over fruit juices or sweetened apple slices.

Veal cutlets: Pound in flour and brown, add water, cover and cook slowly.

Eggs: Omelets with or without chopped meat; or hard cook and cream or curry.

Cheese: Rarebit on toast or crackers; or bake macaroni; or broil on tomatoes.

Preparing some food in advance gives you a head start on many meals. While the oven is going bake several things and store them for future meals. You can do this safely with the help of that great invention, the refrigerator.

Noose Around News

The "Daily Noose," a parody on a New York newssheet, even to the name, went into its second edition this week.

The "Noose," originally issued as a supplement of the "Union Voice," official publication of CIO Wholesale Warehouse Workers Union Local 65, in N. Y. City, reached a circulation of 300,000 in its first edition.

Throughout the paper are parodies of the N. Y. Daily News' columns and editorials. The paper is available at 1c a copy.

COMPANY DOCTOR RACKET BARED

A Federated Press Review

Medicine In Industry, by Bernard J. Stern, The Commonwealth Fund, New York, $1.50, 41 E. 57th St., N. Y. 22.

THE American worker who believes he is getting a "raw deal" from the company doctor and from management generally on health and safety in the plant and in treatment of industrial accidents and disease will find his suspicions largely upheld in the latest study in the field, titled Medicine In Industry, by Bernard J. Stern and published by The Commonwealth Fund.

Here is what Stern has to say about the company doctor (in Chap. 7): "The physical examinations given by the industrial physician (company doctor) are often too scant and cursory to permit fundamental diagnoses."

On minor surgery, known as repair service or patchwork, Stern says there has been a wrong management attitude and "the result has been indifferent surgical work of low standard which has unfortunate consequences on the incidence of permanent disabilities."

Increasingly, he says the company doctor "instead of being regarded as a physician concerned primarily with his patients' welfare, is now accepted as a technical adviser sharing management's viewpoint."

One way to get around such suspicions on the part of workers, he suggests, is "when the labor-management health and safety committees of individual plants are permitted to share in the administration of the medical departments and when health matters are handled through the regular grievance machinery of the unions" (p.167).

The study takes detailed notice of efforts by unions to improve the health of their members and to counteract the abuses of health conditions and their consequences by managements. The AFL Ladies Garment Worker Union health centers in New York and Philadelphia and the CIO Auto Workers health institute in Detroit are very favorably mentioned. Many other unions are also cited for meritorious work.

But most managements are too greedy for profits and too blind to their responsibilities as well as to their long-term advantage to care much about (p. 112): "The limited distribution of industrial medical services bears evidence that the concept of conservation of human resources has not yet been fully incorporated into industrial management policy."

Stern's book studies the development of pre-payment medical and hospital group plans, legislation and enforcement, the handicapped worker and preventive services, as well as surveying the history of medicine in industry from Egyptian times. It is a volume that union health and safety committees should have in dealing with management.

QUITS OIL POST

Resigning after 11 years as secretary-treasurer of the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union, E. C. Conarty will be succeeded on May 4 by T. M. McCormick of Texas City, Tex., who was elected by the executive council..

Conarty plans to enter business to develop his patented union dues collecting system for several large international unions.

AID STRIKERS

Close to $100,000 was collected by the Joint CIO Strike Support Committee of Greater N. Y., it was announced by Saul Mills, secretary of the group. Thirty tons of food was also collected and distributed to strikers. The committee is appealing for continued strike aids.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges · Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

SEALS - STAMPS

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS
UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES · MEMBERSHIP · EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS · ADVERTISING · LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1639-49 W. Evergreen Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

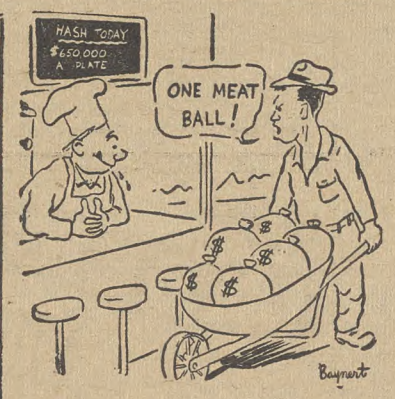
44 Years of Know-how
in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C.I.O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee.
20th Century Glove Company, 2650 Belden Ave., Chicago 47, Illinois
20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

Gags and Grins From The Labor Press

PLANT LIFE

-(FP)-

FE News



"If we eliminate price control, then we will know the true value of our money."—Society of Sentinels.

Ammunition, UAW-CIO

OUR DAILY BREAD

"He's our horse racing expert."

Bill Chelmow, Guild Reporter

Everyone's welcome at the Buchanan, Michigan, Well-Baby Clinic, sponsored by the Clark Equipment Co., the USO and the Federal Public Housing Administration. L. to r.: Nurse Lillie Brown, Dave Wahbunosa, Charles Faulkner, Mrs. John Wahbunosa, Leona Wahbunosa, Essie Lee Neal and Dr. J. C. Strayer.

POPEYE WOULD APPROVE!

"WIM, wigor and witamins" have come to Buchanan, Mich. The three "W's" advocated by Popeye, the spinach eater, are neatly wrapped for juvenile consumption by the recently started Well-Baby Clinic, servicing families of workers at the Clark Equipment Co.

The experiment, notably successful, may set a pattern that other communities might copy.

The clinic, non-sectarian and interracial, was established in a war plant community which had no town or county health departments. USO had been established there to provide recreation and other aids to families of war plant workers.

Lack of facilities for check-up on the health of more than 100 babies became a matter of concern to the USO, the school nurse and the FPHA manager. With the cooperation of the company, where most of the workers were employed, the Well-Baby Clinic was established last winter.

Within three weeks, 109 babies had been registered with the clinic. Examinations were made by a local doctor, who donated his services, with the cooperation of the school nurse.

Within a few days the Clinic turned up one serious nutritional case in a family of six children, the oldest aged seven. The fourth child weighed less than the fifth. During a conference with the mother, the nurse learned that the family was saving everything it could to buy a farm, but was spending nothing on oranges, tomato juice, cod liver oil. It actually managed on one quart of milk a day.

The mother went home, filled with good advice. The next day the father called at the office of the USO Club Director and said:

"Listen, I want to thank you folks for all you told us—I didn't know that boy of ours was so bad off. I bought two quarts of cod liver oil, a case of tomato juice and a big bag of oranges last night. We'll get the boy fixed up—and thanks for telling us."

Launching the Well-Baby Clinic was costly only in effort. As a starter, the project was financed jointly by company and the USO, with all permanent and expendable material furnished by the FPHA. Total expense for the first month was $54.59. The company continued to contribute $25.00 a month after that.

Interest of the permanent residents of the town was engaged when members of the Mayor's Committee agreed to match the company's $25.00 by donations of $5.00 from the City Poor Fund, Odd Fellows, Lions, American Legion Auxiliary and Masons.

"This move should result in old-time Buchananites taking advantage of the free baby check-ups, where, incidentally, white mothers will rub elbows with Negro mothers and come to see that their goal—'nothing is too good for my baby'—is a common goal for all mothers," wrote Mrs. Eloise Sterling Hirt, then USO Club director.

Because most of the war workers left Buchanan after the plant reconversion had been accomplished, the USO Club closed the end of November.

But in its service it was instrumental in creating for the first time, a concerted public interest in the scientific care of young children—and without distinction as to race or creed. And the Well-Baby Clinic is still flourishing today, under the auspices of local civic groups who recognized its continuing value for the children of Buchanan.

Plan 2 Meets In Education

George T. Guernsey, assistant director of education of the CIO Dept. of Research and Education, this week announced that two educational conferences will be held within the next two months for workers in 13 states, mostly in the South. They are as follows:

April 27-28, Fort Worth, Tex., for La., Okla., Ark., Colo., and Tex.

May 3-4, Chapel Hill, N. C., for Va., Tenn., N. C., S. C., Ga., Fla., Ala., and Miss.

Jim Crow Bowls

Angered by the Jim Crow practices of the American Bowling Congress, the Milwaukee County CIO Council this week urged a campaign to "smash Jim Crowism in bowling."

Sponsors of a bowling tournament that drew 3,000 entries, the Milwaukee County CIO refused to follow ABC's disciminatory pratices and was refused an ABC sanction of the tourney.

The Milwaukee County CIO bowling committee was also directed to determine whether the ABC which has a virtual monopoly of the game was operating in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Public Talks Back to Radio

John Q. Public—at least in two cities—is telling radio stations about the kind of programs that he wants to listen to. And he's organized to boot!

It's happened in Madison, Wis. (the Wisconson Joint Committee for Better Listening) and in Cleveland, O. (the Radio Council of Greater Cleverland).

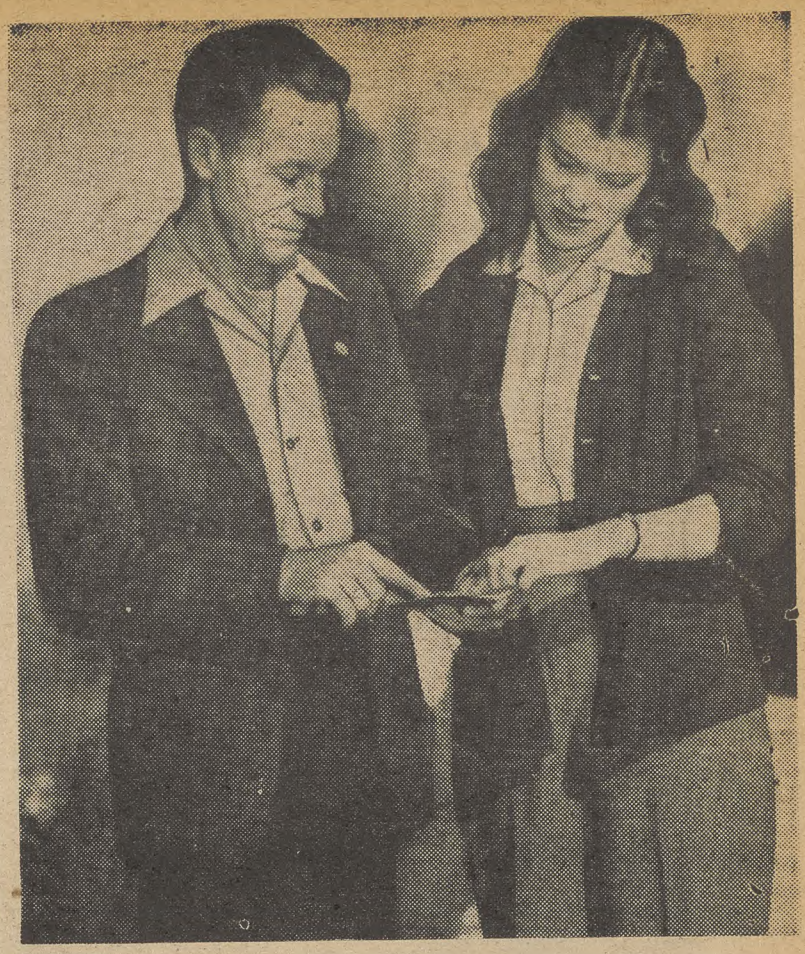
The Cleveland group prints a monthly bulletin, "Selective Dialing". Its choices include news broadcasts, forums, musical programs, drama, quiz and youth programs. Both groups have broad community support.

For further information, write: Mrs. Walter V. Magee, Federation of Women's Clubs, Hotel Statler, Cleveland, and Miss Leslie Spencer, 423 Pickney, Madison.

★ ★ ★

On the air at Newark, N. J. (WAAT) is the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Union, 9:05 p. m. Monday through Friday.

The UE says the program, "Labor Views the News," is the first concrete attempt to give a regularly heard radio voice to labor in the metropolitan area.



(Above) Reaching the workers through attractive leaflets is taught FTA unionists at Northeast leadership school held in Bechtelsville, Pa. (Right) Charles Law, president of Phoenix, Ariz., FTA local, and a unionist for 25 years, hands out some of his experience to Marjorie Ballard, a Portersville, Calif., citrus shed worker, and a unionist for four months. Both attended the FTA's West Coast leadership school.

(Above) A quiz committee corrects course papers at the Mid-West school, in Madison, Wis. (Below) Elizabeth Sasuly, FTA's Washington representative, explains the need for political and legislative action at one of the Mid-West school sessions.

TRAINING UNION LEADERS

By CONNIE ANDERSON

THE GRAVE of the "one-man" local has been dug wide and deep at the FTA Leadership Training Schools. In the past year, 154 leaders of 54 locals of the CIO Food, Tobacco, Agricultural & Allied Workers Union, have met for one week courses in union leadership.

They have thrashed out the problem of building active stewards and leaders, of an active membership which understands and fights for the union. Building group leadership in each local is the theme of the schools—group leadership for organizing, for developing a hard-hitting steward system, for contract negotiations behind which the wishes and strength of the entire membership is mobilized.

"I've gotten the information I needed on things like PAC, the veterans, minorities," said Ann Tinnon, of Phoenix, Ariz., Local 78, who attended the West Coast school last January. "But mostly I learned about shop stewards—I never realized how much they are the key to everything."

School discussions are led by FTA officers and department heads, by other CIO leaders and sometimes by an outside "expert." Schools were established in every section of the country after the value of leadership training was demonstrated in sessions conducted by union officials.

The one-week school sessions have been held in vacation spots—Pacific Grove on the Pacific Ocean, Lake Mendota in Wisconsin, Nature Friends Camp in Bechtelsville, Pa., and in Memphis and Winston-Salem, N. C.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The stories, characters, incidents and names mentioned herein are entirely fictitious and bear no identification with actual persons, living or dead

AFTER A CONFERENCE WITH STEVE DENTON, SECRET LEADER OF THE ANTI-UNION DRIVE AND SON OF THE OWNER OF ROTOR COMPANY, MICKEY BARRY GOES TO SEE JIM...

WELL, JIM, YOU'RE LOOKING AT THE BIG WHEEL IN THE CITY UNION-BUSTING DRIVE! I'LL BE GOING PLACES, I'LL...

I'LL SAY YOU'RE GOING PLACES!

AND THE PLACE IS OUTSIDE!

HEY, WHY DON'T YOU...

JIM— DON'T BE A FOOL! LISTEN TO ME—

THERE'S NOTHING YOU CAN SAY THAT'LL CHANGE MY IDEAS. BEAT IT, YOU BUM!

I WONDER WHY MICKEY CAME HERE?

MAYBE MICKEY HAD SOMETHING IMPORTANT ON HIS MIND, JIM.

DID THAT STUPID KID COME HERE JUST TO BOAST?

MAYBE I SHOULD HAVE HEARD WHAT HE HAD TO SAY...

LET'S CATCH UP TO HIM!

OKAY, WOODY. LET'S GO AFTER HIM. MAYBE HE WAS READY TO SPILL SOMETHING...

THERE HE IS, JIM.

SAY, HE'S HEADING FOR SUSIE'S PLACE!

LET'S GRAB HIM, HE'S TALKING TO SUE.

NO, WAIT! SUE DOESN'T LOOK TOO FRIENDLY...

GIVE A GUY A CHANCE TO EXPLAIN, SUE. I ONLY WANTED TO PROVE SOMETHING—SLAM!

MESKIN

GEE — HE LOOKS SORE ENOUGH TO BLOW HIS TOP!

AND MAYBE HE WILL, WOODY. LET'S SEE WHAT HE DOES NEXT!

Produced by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

Chain Reaction

The proposal to place control of atomic science under the heavy thumb of military brass-hats has produced a reaction almost as warm as that which battered Hiroshima last summer.

Having lost an initial effort to gain complete domination of the lowly atom, the military won a rear-guard action when the Senate Special Atomic Energy Committee approved the Vandenberg amendment to the McMahon Bill (S. 1717). The amendment would give the military wide powers of veto and control over the actions of a civilian atomic agency—powers so wide that in any given dispute on atomic power the military would have the last word.

This week the Federation of American Scientists — composed of the men who built the bombs—was joined by a new organization, the National Committee for Civilian Control of Atomic Energy, in the fight to free the atom from the military.

In a sharply worded statement the two groups termed the amendment offered by Sen. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) an "administrative monstrosity." They charged its danger lay in appearing to give civilian authority control over atomic energy while actually leaving the power in military hands.

The new citizens' group lists prominent figures among its membership: former Under-Sec. of State Sumner Welles, former UNRRA chief Herbert Lehman, Bishop Oxnam, head of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and the Most Rev. Bernard Sheil, Auxiliary Bishop of Chicago. Backing up their own statements, the committee made public a petition signed by more than 8,000 persons in 100 college towns and research centers.

The demand for reopening of hearings by the Senate's Atomic Energy Committee has the CIO's complete support. Earlier CIO made clear its interest in the McMahon bill's passage —without amendments of the Vandenberg type.

Meanwhile, the State Dept. has come forward with even more far-reaching suggestions to make the world safe for the atomic age.

A special report prepared by a committee of experts urges the creation of an international monopoly under UNO auspices to control the atom. To this group, the State Dept. proposes, should be landlord rights to all uranium deposits—here and abroad—control of existing plants and the right to build new ones.

Without such international control, it was clear from the State Dept. report, there's no guarantee against one nation or another blowing us off the face of this troubled globe.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

NOW AND NOVEMBER

Senator Maybank (D. S.C.) spoke wistfully of the "good old days" during the debate this week on the 65c minimum wage bill. Referring to a statement by a southern colleague, he remarked, rather plaintively, "I am pleased to note that the Senator from Georgia feels that there are some of us here who do not have to depend upon lobbyists and groups who sit outside this Chamber to tell us what to do, or what legislation to pass."

Like a good many others on Capitol Hill—particularly in the ranks of those from the seven poll-tax states—the Senator feels that John Q. Public is a little gentleman who should be seen, but by no means heard. In the presence of such a silent partner in the business of government, many Congressmen feel secure and happy as they bowl down progressive legislation.

But liberal laws don't get passed on any such quiet basis—a fact long since discovered by CIO and a good many people's organizations. And the best time to talk is during the campaigns and on election day.

While there's much that can be accomplished in Washington by letters and telegrams and delegations, the basic work has to be done back home. The CIO Political Action Committee underscored the importance of that job this week, when Chairman Sidney Hillman called for full cooperation of all CIO international unions and industrial union councils in the twin job of registering all worker-voters and collecting the largest possible campaign fund through voluntary $1 contributions.

"Everything possible must be done to stimulate activity on a community basis by holding mass meetings, by continually checking each local and by promoting community spirit," Hillman wrote to all affiliated unions.

Political strength, the letter continues, depends on two things: the available finances to educate the electorate as to the issues and record of the candidates—"there is no place to get this money except from our own pockets. It's our battle, our victory, and we have to pay for it," and on votes for good candidates, "which depend on the number of people registered."

The foes of labor and of all progressive legislation have caught their second wind since V-J Day. If we're to avoid a Pearl Harbor attack on the rights of the American people during the next session of Congress, the time to build the defenses is now.

And the place to do it is back home. Through PAC the nation's workers have a chance to elect a liberal Congress prepared to carry out a sorely-needed constructive program of social, labor and economic laws.

Let's get busy now for November!

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
65c wage S 1349	Raises present 40c minimum to 65c; extends coverage to food, maritime, telegraph & retail workers.	On Senate floor, with vote expected this week. Foes busy trying to trim base to 55c, limit jurisdiction.	Wire Senators to support bill without any amendments.
Case Bill HR 5262	"Throws the book" at unions: forced arbitration, blacklists, injunctions for strikes or for backing strikes, and forced cooling-off.	Senate Labor Com. killed most bad features, but added "anti-racket" clause from hoary Hobbs bill of several years back. Senate may restore all bad angles of House-approved bill.	Write, wire Senators to reject Case and all other anti-union bills.
Housing HR 4761	Originally designed to carry out Wyatt plan for 2,700,000 houses by '47. Had price ceilings, subsidies to insure success of plan.	GOP-Southern Democrat alliance in House killed ceilings, subsidies. Now in Senate, where real estate lobby busy sniping.	Wire Senators to pass original HR 4761; stress absolute need of price ceiling, subsidies.
Price Control HR 5270	Extends price control act to June, 1947. Faces danger of crippling amendments.	In House Banking & Currency Committee.	Write, wire, send delegations to Congressmen; demand passage of effective bill to hold price line.
Polltax repeal HR 7	Gives vote to 10 million low-income southerners; would be body blow at southern tory bloc on Capitol Hill.	Passed House; now awaits Senate action, but needs widest pressure to bring to vote.	Tell Senators to vote gag on possible filibuster, pass HR 7 now.

ONLY EIGHT MONTHS 'TIL ELECTIONS—REGISTER NOW!

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

SLOWDOWN: Congress plans an informal sort of Easter vacation from mid-April until early May. While some few sessions may be scheduled during that fortnight, important bills will be off the calendar.

On the agenda now:

PRICE CONTROL: House Banking & Currency Committee is winding up hearings, and the bill to extend OPA beyond June 30 will reach the floor for debate and vote some time in April. Business groups and special interests are on the warpath.

Says Rep. Monroney (D. Okla.) a member of the committee: "There is real danger—terrific danger—that the OPA law will be amended to death."

To meet the attack, 63 Congressmen, both Republican and Democrat, have formed a new, informal Congressional Committee for Protection of Consumers.

It's headed by Rep. Forand (D., R.I.) and Baldwin (D., N.Y.), with Rep. Chase Woodhouse (D., Conn.) as secretary. The group will work closely with 22 labor, consumer, civic and vets' organizations—among them CIO and AFL.

POLL TAX: Plans to force action on H.R. 7, which would outlaw the poll tax in seven southern states, are taking shape. A bi-partisan steering committee, headed by Sens. Pepper (D., Fla.) and Ferguson (R., Mich.) has obtained written pledges of support from 51 Senators. Thirteen more will give the bill's supporters a guarantee that they can forestall a long-talking southern filibuster and pass the bill. Such action is long overdue—anti-poll tax bills have floated around Washington for years; and the present measure has been awaiting Senate action for five months.

HERE AND THERE: Washington women marshalled a lobby of their own this week and warned Congress to extend OPA before we get swamped by inflation . . . "A Meeting to Save Price Control" has been called for April 10 by the Natl. Conference on Jobs & Security. Representatives of a score of organizations will discuss plans, then buttonhole Congressmen. . . . Win the Peace Conference, set for April 5-7, will bring hundreds of delegates to town to call for a fast advance on a New Deal domestic and foreign program. PAC, many CIO unions, civic organizations will be represented.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President

NATHAN COWAN, Chairman

ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

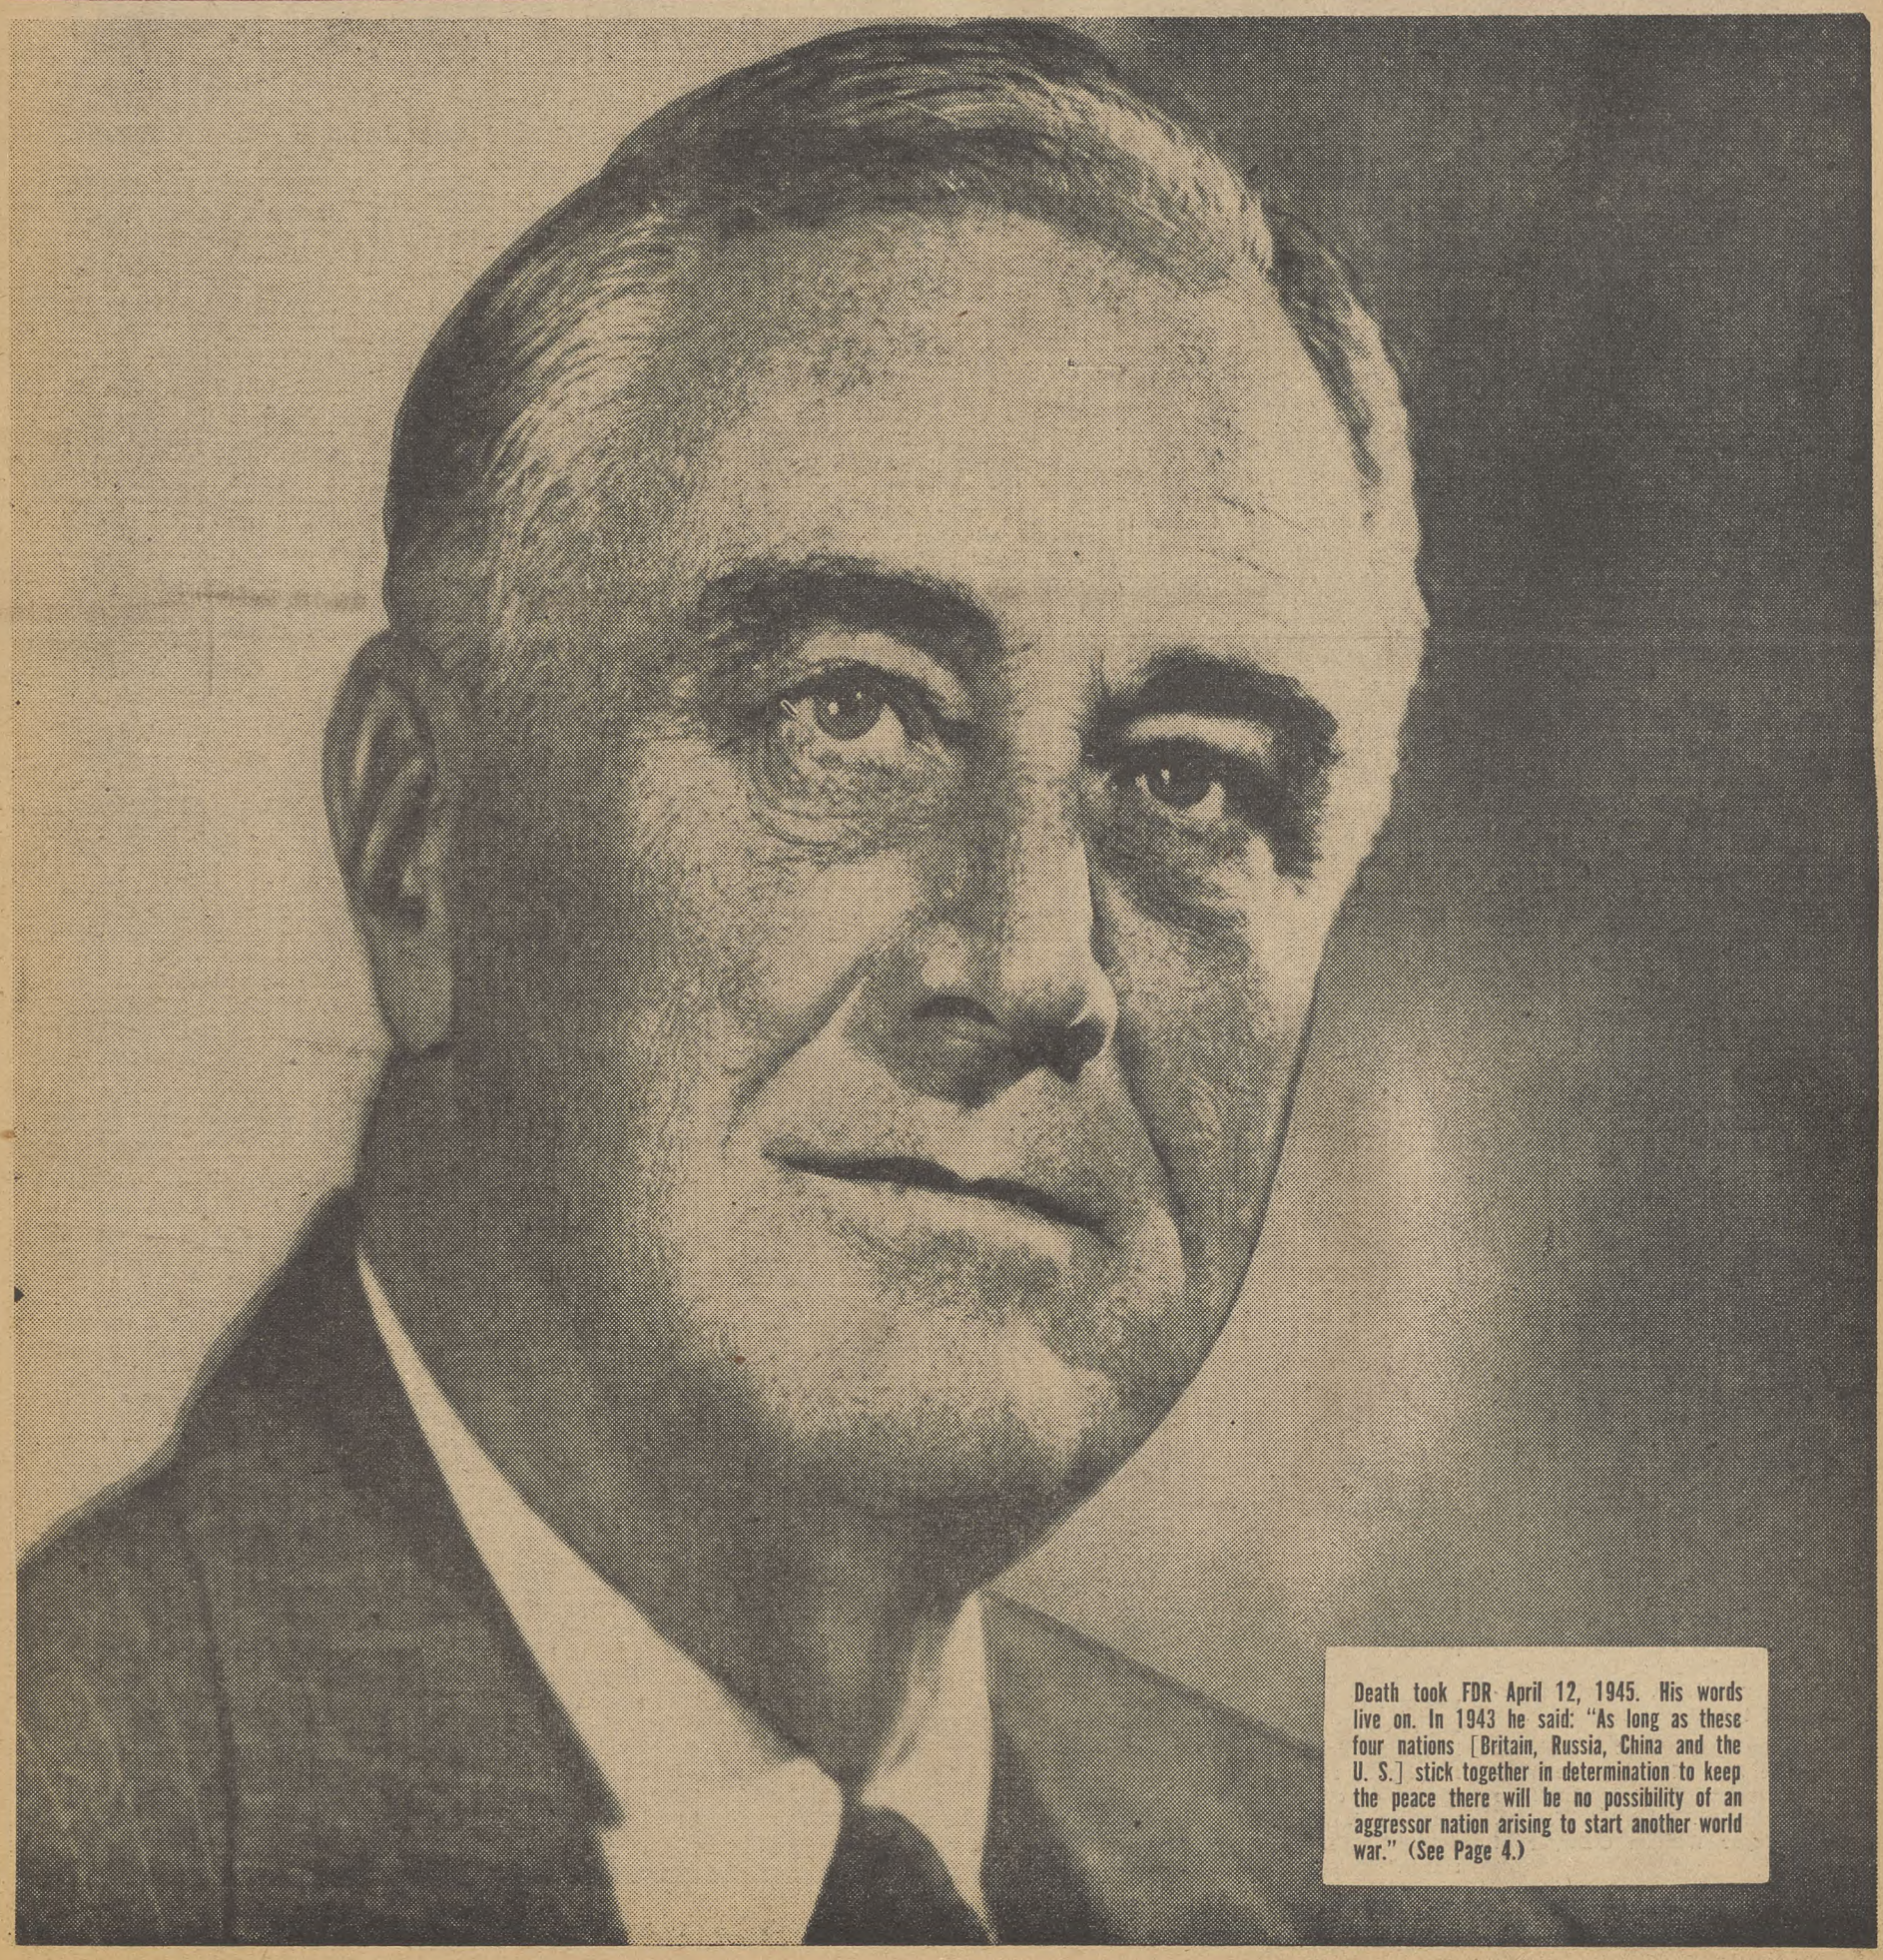
5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 15

Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS
$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

April 8, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS



Death took FDR April 12, 1945. His words live on. In 1943 he said: "As long as these four nations [Britain, Russia, China and the U. S.] stick together in determination to keep the peace there will be no possibility of an aggressor nation arising to start another world war." (See Page 4.)

This and similar demonstrations won favorable action by the House this week on bills to boost the pay of each of one million and half Post Office and other Civil Service employes $400 a year. Don Murray, editor of the Federal Record, UFWA paper, is addressing members of the union at a Washington rally before they visted Representatives. Other demonstrations were held last week in New York, Chicago and Detroit.

SEE HARVESTER STRIKE VICTORY

A CONTRACT between the CIO Farm Equipment Workers and the Intl. Harvester Co. was in the process of being written late this week. The contract would end a three-month strike of 30,000 workers at 10 Harvester plants.

Agreement on the major points in the dispute between the union and company was reported reached after a four-day session with officials of the U. S. Conciliation Service in Washington.

Most contract details were decided late Thursday night. The union declined to return to work until the new contract was put into writing.

The Farm Equipment workers, before meeting with company and conciliation department representatives, proposed an "interim settlement" of the dispute. This proposal called for an 18c hourly increase for all workers, 10% retroactivity to Oct. 1, 1945, vacations, premium pay for Sunday work, and arbitration of all other contract issues.

UAW VOTES $100,000 FOR SOUTHERN DRIVE

A $100,000 contribution to CIO's southern organizing drive and full support for CIO President Murray's campaign to keep down prices were important actions voted by the CIO United Auto Workers Union's 10th Convention as it wound up a turbulent week at Atlantic City last Saturday.

Extended aid to veterans—particularly the disabled—and an even break for women workers were other convention-approved proposals.

The parley adjourned half an hour earlier than planned after newly elected Pres. Walter Reuther ruled that a quorum was lacking.

Two new members of the 18-member executive board were elected—Emil Mazey replacing Melvin Bishop, and William C. Stevenson taking the place vacated by Richard T. Leonard when he was elected a vice-president. Both Mazey and Stevenson represent Detroit regions.

The convention recommended organization of the thousands of white collar workers in the auto industry who do not belong to unions.

Its action on veterans' problems was highlighted by the appearance on the stage of five disabled vets, members of the UAW, who were given a thunderous welcome.

The UAW voted to purchase three specially equipped autos to help train disabled veterans hospitalized in Atlantic City, and also called on government agencies and Congress to make available specially outfitted cars to veterans who need them.

On other veterans' problems, the Convention:

1. Asked amendment of the GI Bill of Rights to allow payment of unemployment compensation to veterans involved in strikes where employers refuse to bargain in good faith or to obey the law.

2. Endorsed the Wagner Bill, providing $160 a month social security credit for time spent in the armed forces and merchant marine.

3. Asked a 30% rise in pensions, and payment to World War II vets of $3 a day for domestic service and $4 a day for overseas service, with a minimum of $100 and maximum of $3,500 for the former and a $500-$4,500 range for the latter.

4. Hailed court decisions outlawing "superseniority" and said: "Our success in establishing the legality of a proper interpretation of the re-employment provisions of the Selective Service Act makes it imperative that we redouble our efforts immediately to give maximum contract seniority protection to newly hired veterans who are not covered by the law and to correct injustices which have resulted from employers taking advantage of the 'superseniority' interpretation before it was ruled invalid by the courts."

The nub of a resolution urging alertness in protecting women employes' rights was contained in the following recommendation for incorporation in all local union contracts:

"The company agrees that it will not discriminate in the hiring of employes or in their training, upgrading, promotion, transfer, layoff, recall, discipline, discharge or otherwise, because of race, creed, color, national origin, political affiliation, sex or marital status."

DINNER HONORS FDR

Organized labor will join independent progressives in observing the first anniversary of the late President Roosevelt's death at a Natl. Citizens Political Action Committee dinner in N. Y. City April 12, at the Hotel Commodore.

Philip Murray and William Green, presidents of the CIO and AFL, respectively, are vice-chairmen of the dinner committee.

Among speakers at the dinner will be Sec. of Commerce Wallace, Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black, Sen. Robert F. Wagner, and Mayor William O'Dwyer of N. Y.

$400 U. S. RAISE GETS NOD

THE CIO Federal Workers scored a double victory this week with passage by the House of bills which would give annual pay increases of $400 a year to each of a million and a half postal and other civil service employes.

UFWA members were jubilant over the action on the postal workers raise bill, which was gained with the help of the increasing numbers of Post Office employes who are leaving the several AFL and independent unions for the CIO union.

This bill is retroactive to Jan. 1, but the measure to give the flat increase to other civil service employes is not.

UFWA was seeking an 18½% increase, which would have given more adequate pay raises to the middle income workers.

The non-postal wage bill will go to a conference of House and Senate. The Senate previously passed a measure giving an 11% increase. This action was taken before the CIO scored general increases of 18½% throughout industry.

CHARGE WESTINGHOUSE STALLS UE STRIKE SETTLEMENT

THE CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Union this week charged that the Westinghouse Electric Corp. is deliberately prolonging the 12-week-old strike by its 75,000 employes in an effort to gain a competitive advantage over the rest of the industry, which has followed the national pattern of 18½c an hour wage increases.

The UE also, in a letter from Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak to the U. S. Treasury, asked that Westinghouse be denied tax refunds under the carry-back, carry-forward provisions of the tax laws.

"The Westinghouse Corp., hopeful of obtaining a more favorable competitive position in the industry, deliberately seeks to finance this effort through the taxpayers' money by guaranteeing itself profits under the carry-back provision," Emspak charged.

"The Westinghouse Corp. can obtain, from the U. S. Treasury, a total of $11,200,000 if it breaks even on profits during 1946. The company can obtain $19,750,000 if it loses $10,000,000 in profits, thus being assured of a profit of $9,750,000.

Guaranteed enormous profits even if it loses money, Westinghouse intends to use the public funds for the purpose of prolonging the strike."

Meanwhile, in Pittsburgh, Westinghouse Airbrake Co., which is not connected with Westinghouse Electric, granted its 9,000 employes, represented by UE, the 18½c an hour raise previously agreed to by GE, RCA and GM electrical division.

At Pittsburgh, also, 80 labor leaders, businessmen, clergymen, city officials and legislators in Western Pennsylvania organized a citizen's committee to start a protest movement against use of injunctions and state troopers in strike-breaking.

$25,000 FOR UE STRIKE

Twenty-five thousand dollars for relief of striking members of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers at Westinghouse Electric was voted this week by the CIO United Steelworkers Executive Board, meeting in Pittsburgh.

The USA Board will meet again May 12 in Atlantic City, prior to the union's convention, which will start two days later at the City Auditorium. It is scheduled to last through May 18.

ASK PROBE OF FLORIDA KKK

FLORIDA CIO unions this week were rallying citizens in every walk of life to smash the reviving Ku Klux Klan after Miami FBI headquarters had in effect given the hooded order of the millionaire citrus bosses the green light to go ahead with its program of lynching and union-busting.

Steps toward federal prosecution of the masked night riders were taken by the state CIO council as soon as it learned that the Klan had chosen Florida as one concentration center in a southwide "campaign" to head off the CIO's great organizing drive in Dixie.

Charles N. Smolikoff, director of the state council, answered an announcement of Miami FBI Chief Joseph E. Thornton that his office would not act "unless there were a violation of civil rights" with a strongly worded letter to national FBI headquarters in Washington demanding that the Klan, closely identified with the German-American Bund before Pearl Harbor, be investigated and prosecuted.

Smolikoff pointed out that "the report by local FBI personnel that the 'FBI can take no action unless the hooded members begin interstate activity' is adopting a close-your-eyes passivity that can only lend encouragement to these hooded native fascists and hate mongers."

Smolikoff said that "the CIO at its recent state convention in Tampa authorized formation of a state-wide anti-lynching committee to include not only representatives of local unions but also representatives of church, civic, fraternal and Negro organizations.

During the last 18 months, there have been six known lynchings in Florida, he said.

"We will broaden this anti-lynching committee until it becomes a fighting arm of Florida's people against an organization which has been revived to force war veterans, Negroes and discharged former defense workers back into the fields and citrus groves for a dollar a day," Smolikoff declared.

"Twice in a postwar period—once after the Civil War and once after World War I—the Southern aristocracy was able to use the Klan to crush the beginnings of democracy in the South. But this time, the Klan has taken on a tough customer."

Significantly, the announcement of the Klan's return in Florida was made almost immediately after the CIO convention in Tampa had mapped a drive to organize the state's 175,000 white and Negro citrus workers.

Abundant health, such as this family typifies, would be assured the nation under the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill, which is being untruthfully attacked by the American Medical Assn. and its apparent spokesman, Sen. Taft (R., Ohio), as "socialistic."

NATION'S HEALTH AT STAKE

SENATOR JAMES E. MURRAY

One of the sponsors of the bill.

By FRED ROSS

FOR a few cents per week contributed by employe and employer, all America would be assured of medical care.

The fate of the Murray-Wagner-Dingell Bill that would assure medical care for all is in the hands of the Senate Education & Labor Committee.

Viciously and untruthfully attacked by Sen. Taft (R. Ohio) as "socialistic," here's what the bill would provide for the average worker:

- Medical care from a physician of his own choice.
- Services from a specialist, when recommended by a family physician, general practitioner or other specialist attending the patient.
- Major and minor surgery with no limit on the cases per year.
- Maternity care for his wife.
- All types of preventive services, including health examinations.
- Hospital care up to 60 days per person in each year, or 120 days if funds permit.
- Dental care, including examinations, cleansings and extractions, if the physician advises, with more complete dental services, especially for children, insofar as dentists and other personnel are available.
- Nursing services in the hospital or at home, when requested by the doctor.
- X-rays for diagnosis and treatment and all other diagnostic tests when requested by the physician.
- Blood tests, tissue examinations and other analyses also when requested by the doctor.
- Prescribed drugs and medicines, even if expensive.

One of the most frequently voiced criticisms of the bill is that it would end the freedom of the patient and the doctor, but Sen. Wagner (D. N. Y.) one of the sponsors of the bill, said this week:

Keeps Freedom

"Under the bill patients are guaranteed free choice of doctors, doctors are guaranteed the right to accept or reject patients, and hospitals are guaranteed freedom to manage their affairs. Specific provisions are included in the bill for hearings and appeals on any issues which may arise between doctors, hospitals and covered persons.

"Specific provision is made for judicial review of any disputed cases arising under the plan. It is clear, therefore, that the bill does not involve regimentation of doctors, hospitals, or patients. Neither do I believe that the doctors of this country will lower the standards of medical care simply because they are guaranteed payment for their services."

The bill would aid the veteran where the present laws stop by providing services of the family doctor, of specialists and laboratories, and hospital care up to 60 days—120 days if funds permit—as well as dental and home-nursing services. It would assure adequate funds for the maintenance of hospitals and health centers badly needed in rural areas.

The bill, if enacted, would help business by decreasing labor turnover and absenteeism due to poor health and by increasing productivity, and would reduce workmen's compensation premiums because physicially sound workers have fewer accidents.

The bill would even help physicians. Contrary to popular opinion, doctors are not alawys prosperous. In 1941, for example, more than one-fourth of the nation's physicians had incomes under $1200 a year, Sen. Wagner asserted. Under the bill they would receive more adequate and stable incomes under rates they themselves would fix, and would have wider range in choosing their patients since the financial relationship would not stand between them and the patients.

Vicious Attack

The facts of the bill must be repeated time and again. The American Medical Assn., whose most vocal spokesman is Dr. Morris Fishbein, executive secretary of the association and editor of its Journal, and the Natl. Physicians Committee, a creature of the association, are now engaged in a campaign of willful misrepresentation.

Testifying on the first day of the hearings on the bill, Rep. Dingell (D., Mich.) said:

"The Natl. Physicians Committee, formed specifically to preserve the AMA's tax-exempt status under the income tax laws, is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars to circulate false statements to try to defeat the health insurance provisions of the bill.

"It is collecting money under the false pretext that contributions to it 'should be deductible' from income taxes by individuals who contribute. As a member of the House Ways and Means Committee responsible for drafting our tax laws, I believe that the Natl. Physicians Committee's statement to this effect is deliberately misleading and any such deduction is a violation of existing law which should be investigated by the Treasury Dept."

AMA Dissenters

Not only are a good number of the AMA members for the bill but they have organized to fight for the meaure. The Physicians Forum, whose members must also belong to the AMA, has endorsed the bill and organized or participated in citizens committee to campaign actively for its passage.

Also actively favoring the Murray-Dingell bill is the Committee of Physicians for Improvement of Medical Care, headed by Dr. Channing Frothingham, former president of the Massachusetts Medical Society and chairman of the newly formed Committee for the Nation's Health, launched this week at dinners for the press and radio commentators in New York and Washington.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray is an honorary chairman of the committee. Other honorary chairmen include: Jonathan Daniels, Russell Davenport, Jo Davidson, the sculptor; AFL Pres. William Green, Bishops Francis J. McConnell and G. Bromley Oxnam, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, David Sarnoff and Gerard Swope.

What Needs To Be Done

The Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill is in for a tough fight and will not be reported out of the Senate Committee on Education & Labor in its present form unless members of the committee receive an ever-increasing flow of letters and telegrams during the three remaining weeks of the hearings. Pick your Senator from the following list of members of the committee and let him know that you are for the bill:

Sen. Murray, chairman; Sens. Walsh, Mass.; Pepper, Fla.; Ellender, La.; Hill, Ala.; Chavez, N. Mex.; Tunnell, Del.; Guffey, Pa.; Johnston, S. C.; Fulbright, Ark.; LaFollette, Wis.; Taft, Ohio; Aiken, Vt.; Ball, Minn.; Smith, N. J.; Morse, Oreg.; Donnell, Mo.

A top official of the CIO will testify for the bill April 16.

A MIXED MONSTROSITY

Walk up, folks! See the elephant that brays like a donkey—the jackass with a pachyderm's hide. Here's an elephant that always forgets—the head of one species joined to the hindquarters of another. Can be sawed in half at elections, but the two parts always come together again.

The American people have become so used to the monstrous combination of polltax Democrats and tory Republicans that it no longer excites wonder.

Both ends of the strange animal work as one body for union-busting bills and against every progressive measure to benefit the working and common people.

This year, the Republocratic alliance has been more firmly cemented than ever, with a formal organization in Congress and with the Republicans' selection of a southern polltax chairman of the same stripe as the Democratic polltaxers.

One of the favorite brays of elephantine asininity is "Down with the CIO". This expresses not only their anti-union attitude but also their fear that the working and common people will use their votes and organize politically, as urged by the CIO, to end Republocratic rule in Congress.

The Smith-Connally act was pushed through Congress by the polltax Democrats and tory Republicans largely to cripple labor political activity. The same combination has recently passed the Case bill in the House, with a similar purpose in back of its mind.

But the Republocrats might as well try to turn back the tide. They should note that the British tories tried to restrict labor participation in politics through the Trade Disputes Act of 1927. But, despite this Act, the Labor Party was able to win a sweeping majority over the tories, which it now has used to repeal the Act.

Similarly the political restrictions of the Smith-Connally act so aroused American workers that, after its passage, the CIO Political Action Committee was able to conduct the most effective political campaign in American labor history.

Democracy is on the march these days. And no raucous political hybrid, no matter how horrible, is going to scare American workers from using their ballots and their rights to advance its cause.

TRIBUTE TO ROOSEVELT

This week marks the anniversary of the death of one of America's greatest, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

He was not only a great wartime President, who raised national unity to its highest level in the war against fascism—he was also the builder of United Nations unity for lasting peace, and was the greatest champion of the welfare of the common people.

In the international friction that has arisen since Roosevelt's death, it is timely to remember his admonitions on Big Three unity and his warning that "the world will either move toward unity and widely-shared prosperity or it will move apart into necessarily competing economic blocs."

At a time when labor-baiters are running rampant and seeking to block the progressive measures for which Roosevelt fought, it is timely to think of the lead he gave for full employment, more abundant social security, minimum wage laws, better housing, for the rights of workers to join unions and to protect their unions.

Nearly everyone will be paying verbal tribute to Roosevelt this week. But the real tribute he deserves is to work for the great goals he set before the American people.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

MANY a true word is spoken inadvertently.

No truer statement could be made than that passage of the Case anti-labor bill in the House was "a vote against the American people."

But there is no doubt this statement was printed in a Democratic Party publication "inadvertently and without approval," as party officials hastened to point out.

For the fact is that more than a hundred Democratic Congresssmen joined with the Republicans in voting for this anti-American bill to destroy the democratic rights of American working people.

★ ★ ★

To express their indignation and embarrassment, an angry caucus of labor-baiting polltax Democrats created a "Committee on Harmony and Cooperation."

The resulting discord would indicate that the harmony and cooperation were not intended for their own party, but rather for the Republicans with whom these polltax Democrats have long worked harmoniously and cooperatively against all progressive legislation.

★ ★ ★

An interesting aspect of this episode of "the right word in the wrong place" is that the members of the "Committee on Harmony and Cooperation" sounded off more against the CIO—which had nothing to do with the incident—than against their own red-faced party officials.

They said, in so many words, that their chief complaint was against the CIO, rather than the offending statement, and that they were "angered" by CIO's recent announcement of a union organizing campaign in the South.

★ ★ ★

Of course, polltax Democrats and tory Republicans have a habit of automatically blaming "the CIO" or "the New Deal" for everything.

They may be expected, at any moment, to blast the CIO for causing the recent Pacific tidal wave.

But, in this case, it is not hard to analyze the psychological process which associated the CIO in their minds with the editorial slip-up and their own guilt-complex.

The Case bill is ostensibly directed only against the economic power of unions, being designed to so cripple them that employers may have greater freedom to cut wages and worsen working conditions.

But actually the Congressmen who voted for this bill had a strong personal political motivation.

They knew, from the experience of recent elections, that one of the by-products of union organization is greater alertness, independence and intelligence in political action.

In voting for the Case bill, therefore, they felt they were fighting for their own jobs, by striking at the union roots of progressive political activity.

★ ★ ★

The CIO's southern organizing drive is no different from any of the other organizing campaigns so successfully conducted by the CIO.

Its sole immediate purpose is to bring the benefits of union organization to the unorganized, so that through collective bargaining they may increase their wages, improve their working conditions and generally raise living standards throughout the community.

Representing only a small well-to-do minority, most polltax Congressmen associate themselves with low-wage employers in opposing unionism.

But they also have a deep-rooted fear that industrial progress, and the economic democracy that comes with unionism, will make the people of their states want political democracy too, thus spelling the doom of the polltax and leading to the election of more progressive and representative Congressmen than themselves.

★ ★ ★

It is symptomatic of the increasingly close coalition of polltax Democrats and tory Republicans that, at the very time this rumpus was taking place within the Democratic Party, the GOP chose to select a southern polltax Republican as its chairman.

Rep. B. Carroll Reece of Tennessee has as consistent an anti-labor record as most of the polltax Democrats. He is a millionaire, associated with the reactionary Taft wing of the Republican Party.

To such elements in both parties, alike as two peas in a pod in their reactionary attitudes, the CIO says, "A plague on both your houses." It will oppose all who "vote against the American people," regardless of party labels, and will work with progressives everywhere for the election of candidates who truly represent the people's interests.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer
Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, L. S. Buckmaster, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 April 8, 1946 No. 15

SENATE ROUGH ON 65c BILL

SENATE polltax Democrats and conservative northern Republicans ganged up this week on the 65c Minimum Wage Bill after brushing aside efforts to compromise on certain sections of the measure.

With the bill still on the Senate floor at press time, it seemed clear that the only hope for salvaging a decent act to raise the base pay for millions of low-income workers, and to extend its protection to others not now covered by the Wage-Hour Act, lies in the House of Representatives.

As the bill moved through the Senate meat-grinder, these developments occurred:

1. A compromise proposal cut the minimum rate to 60c an hour. The original bill had called for an initial 65c base, with successive increases to 75c during the next four years.

2. Reaffirmation by the Southern Democrat-Republican block of the Pace rider, which alters the method of determining farm parity prices and which would add an estimated 4½ billion dollars to the nation's food bill.

In addition, it appeared that the opposition block, riding high on the wave of its victory, would move to carve out many or all of those sections of the bill aimed at expanding wage-hour protection to seamen, employes of large retail businesses, and food and telegraph workers. When the battered bill is finally passed by the Senate, it goes to the House for action.

The compromise plan, to cut the minimum pay base to 60c an hour, was passed by a 76-6 vote, as supporters hoped their action would lead to a break in the polltax ranks on the Pace amendment. But when that rider was brought up for vote for a second time by Sen. Russell (D., Ga.), the opposition ranks held firm.

The second vote in favor of the rider was 46 to 38.

Pres. Truman, who had noted opposition to the Pace proposal by the Dept. of Agriculture and OPA as well as lack of support for it by the big farm organizations, had previously warned that he would be forced to veto the 65c bill if it reaches the White House with the inflation clause included. The President reiterated his warning a day before the vote.

Nevertheless, more Democrats voted against the Pace amendment than for it, and they were eagerly joined by most of the Republicans.

KILL OPA DEATH SENTENCE

ANTI-INFLATIONARY forces won a round in their battle for extension of OPA this week as the House Banking Committee gave its stamp of approval to a bill lengthening the life of the government agency until June 30, 1947.

Defeated in the Committee was a Republican proposal to give OPA the death sentence on April 1, 1947, and to make even easier the lifting of price controls on certain products.

However, the Committee bowed to Rep. Brown (D., Ga.) and accepted an amendment to permit Pres. Truman to lift certain controls and subsidies upon recommendation of the Agriculture Dept. and OPA. Supporters of strong price controls fear that adoption of the amendment would give even greater incentive to the scores of business lobbies already prowling about Capitol Hill and OPA headquarters in quest of lighter restrictions.

Noting the more free and easy manner with which OPA has been retreating in the Battle of the Price Bulge, the CIO last week expressed "alarm" at the speed with which price control is being undercut by OPA itself.

A delegation headed by Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey conferred with Chester Bowles, director of economic stabilization, and with OPA Administrator Paul Porter. To the government officials they presented a statement by CIO Pres. Philip Murray which declared:

"We regard these actions as being in the main premature and ill-considered. The result is an unnecessary, avoidable increase in the cost of living.

"We are equally perturbed with the frequency and generosity with which increases are being made in the prices of commodities which are vitally important to the American consumer."

A recent study of OPA activities showed that the "hold the line" defense front was riddled with holes. Increases in the prices of meat and milk, canned meat and fruits, are soon to be announced, while a number of electrical appliance items just coming back on the market after a wartime lapse are being permitted serious price increases.

Between V-E Day and February, 1946, 459 price increases on an industry-wide scale have been permitted, while in approximately the same period some 5,000 individual price adjustments were made.

CONGRESS GROUP FIGHTS FOR OPA

Battle lines in the fight to extend OPA were drawn in Congress this week by the formation of a 63-man Congressional Committee for the Protection of the Consumer.

Rep. Aime Forand (D., R. I.), chairman of the House group, declared that on the other side of the battle line is "the Chamber of Commerce, the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, and real estate lobbies" who are attempting to break the OPA.

Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse (D., Conn.), secretary of the committee, cited an analysis of 12,000 letters received by the House Banking Committee as revealing full public support of OPA.

She said that 90% of the individuals who had written letters were for extension of OPA and larger funds for enforcement. Business, however, is divided, she declared. Small business asked for retention of price and rent control and big business asked that OPA be abolished.

PUBLICITY 'OSCAR' TO CIO

The "Oscar" of the American Public Relations Assn. was awarded to the national CIO this week for "outstanding public relations accomplishments in 1945."

Selected from a group of nearly 300 labor, church, education, government and business organizations, the CIO publicity program was adjudged the best in the field of labor by a panel of prominent public relations experts.

Among the judges were Charles G. Ross, press secretary to President Truman; Stephen T. Early, press secretary to the late President Roosevelt, and Harwood Childs, associate professor of politics at Princeton University.

Len DeCaux, CIO publicity director, received the award for the CIO at an Association dinner in Washington addressed by Agriculture Secretary Anderson. In the presentation speech, special mention was made of the "ingenuity" and "unusual technique" employed by the CIO in its public relations work.

The award gave recognition to the press relations work of the national CIO office; the popular journalistic techniques used in The CIO NEWS; the extensive national CIO radio work, as exemplified in the "Labor USA" and "Cross-Section CIO" network programs; the special efforts to reach servicemen through the Servicemen's Edition of The CIO NEWS and by other means; CIO pamphleteering, and other phases of the public relations program conducted from CIO headquarters.

The entry did not cover the public relations work of affiliated CIO unions and special committees, some of which submitted separate entries of their own.

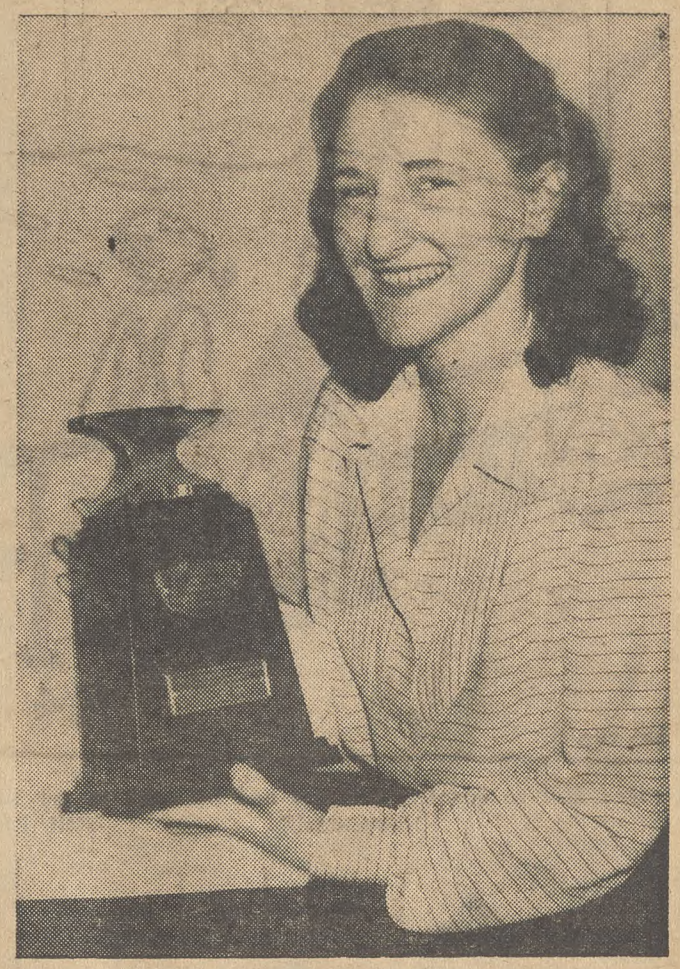
Major objectives of CIO's 1945 public relations program listed in the entry were:

(1) To mobilize the workers' support for CIO's postwar program of "planned and speedy reconversion looking toward an era of full production and full employment, based on an expanding domestic market through increased mass purchasing power and increased world trade";

(2) To "demonstrate to other sections of the population that CIO's postwar aims were constructively designed to promote their interests as well as labor's, through expanding national prosperity."

As a measure of success of CIO public relations work, the entry cited wide press and radio recognition of the effectiveness of CIO publicity techniques; marked labor sympathies held by returning servicemen; wide community support for CIO strikers; modification of anti-labor attitudes in much of the press; and cooperation between the CIO and other segments of the public in support of broadly progressive national and international measures.

Chief handicaps to be overcome were "control of the major media of opinion-formation by large corporate interests traditionally hostile to labor's economic demands"; and limited financial means which made it impossible to compete with wealthy hostile interests in huge advertising campaigns.



Miss Joyzelle Schore, a CIO Publicity Dept. secretary, admires the American Public Relations Assn. award presented to the national CIO for "outstanding public relations accomplishments in 1945."

Much reliance had therefore to be placed on the labor press, pamphlets and "other low-cost methods involving the cooperation of a large membership"; and on "ingenuity and imagination . . . to get CIO's message into the daily press, magazines, radio broadcasts, etc., with minimum expendtiure."

CIO operated "in a goldfish bowl," De Caux said, "letting all its policies and activities be known to the press at once, with a maximum of background information."

To make CIO NEWS popular enough to "sell itself," modern journalistic techniques of pictorial presentation, human interest, comic strips, humor, family features, etc., were employed.

CIO's long campaign for greater freedom of the air for labor was referred to in the entry, resulting in revision of the NAB code and the granting of regular radio time to the CIO on the three major networks.

These network programs, DeCaux said, "were utilized by the CIO as one of its most effective public relations media, to reach all sections of the public as well as labor.

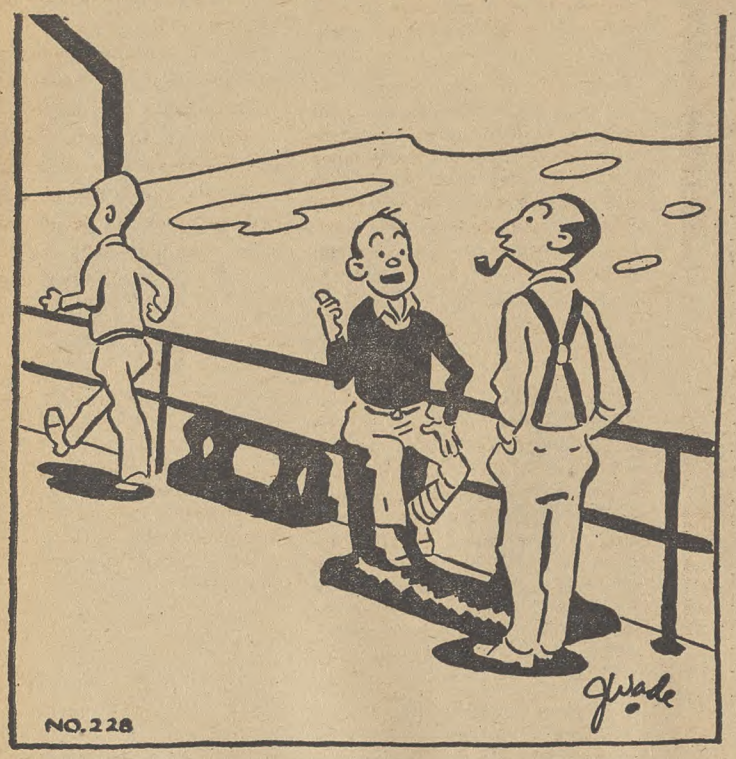
"Emphasis was placed in the CIO radio programs on simple, popular presentation and an individualized approach, using the most modern and professional techniques of dramatization, music and entertainment, to attract and hold listeners of all kinds."

Similar techniques of popular presentation, with "a warmly human and concrete personal approach and profuse illustration," and including use of the "comic strip," were used in the many pamphlets produced by CIO Research & Education Dept., whose mailings to a list of 70,000 "influencers of public opinion" were mentioned, as well as in those produced by the Publicity Dept., PAC, Community Services Committee and other CIO groups.

Dealing primarily with the work of the national CIO's publicity staff, the entry made no attempt to cover all the public relations activities of all sections of the CIO. But it did refer to the close relations established by CIO officers with veterans, farm, business, church, professional and many other types of organizations, and to the outstanding public relations work also performed by many CIO committees, including the special-purpose Wage Program Publicity Committee formed by CIO unions in the fall of 1945.

Finally, it pointed out that the major policies of the CIO, as democratically determined at its conventions, and the actions of Pres. Philip Murray and other leaders in implementing these policies "are the basic determinant in all CIO public relations"; and that "the direct impact of CIO's six million members on their communities, the human relationships . . . the standing they and their local unions achieve through their community work, determine the opinion most citizens will have of the CIO even more than the most skillful work of public relations experts."

Gags and Grins From The Labor Press



"I asked him to box the compass and he went to get the carpenter!" —NMU Pilot

"ER—I guess this isn't my bag, after all."
R. R. Trainman

W. L. Douglas Shoes
W. L. DOUGLAS SHOE CO., BROCKTON 15, MASS.

STORES IN PRINCIPAL CITIES GOOD DEALERS EVERYWHERE

GI GRIPES MILITARY SECRET

The Army board to study the caste system recessed this week after hearing 36 witnesses ranging from a private to a five-star general, but it's pretty hard to tell what's cooking.

The sessions were held in private. Reporters had an opportunity to talk to the witnesses leaving the hearing. Three out of four had nothing to say one morning. During a three-week recess the committee's recorder —a major—will write a report, which the committee will consider before submitting a final report probably in mid-May to Sec. of War Patterson.

The request of Meyer Bernstein, representative of the CIO Veterans Committee and himself a veteran, to testify, made several weeks ago to Patterson, was not even acknowledged.

At least two witnesses, Marion (See Here, Private) Hargrove, and former Master Sgt. Glenn G. Kendall, Lovell, Ky., newspaperman, told the committee that the first step in democratization is to let the GI know what his rights are.

Kendall, who served three years in the Pacific, said that the enlisted men should be shown a movie setting forth their rights, chaplains should be civilians, the inspector general's office should be enlarged and manned by civilians responsible only to the Secretary of War.

The same time off and the same privileges for enlisted men as for civilians were also urged by the witness as another means of democratization.

Similar treatment of GIs and commissioned officers in respect to terminal leave, retirement disability, subsistence allowances, travel pay and accommodations, recreation facilities, uniforms and food, rationing and post exchange privileges were asked by Clinton S. Golden, chairman of the CIO Veterans Committee, in a letter to Patterson several weeks ago. The letter, which asked for a flat pay increase for all enlisted personnel instead of 20% increase across the board, was not answered.

Veterans crowd into the Rochester, N. Y., city council chambers to demand action on a six-point housing program. All of Rochester's 16 vets organizations were drawn together by the Rochester CIO Council to press the fight for more housing.

CIO VETS STIR TOWN TO ACTION ON HOUSING

By MEL FISKE

GET a few riled veterans together and you'll get action on the housing shortage.

That's the experience of two Rochester, N. Y., CIO members who were instrumental in organizing a veterans' fight to solve the city's housing shortage.

All of Rochester's vet groups—even the Spanish-American War Vets—formed the Rochester Veterans Committee for Housing and channeled their anger into positive, constructive action that has the whole city talking and working for housing.

Two CIO vets—Arthur Miller, an organizer for the Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, and Gerald Schaflander, education and veterans director for the Rochester Joint Board, Amalgamated Clothing Workers—were dissatisfied with the lack of action taken at an emergency housing conference sponsored by the Gannett papers, the only newspapers in Rochester.

Through their unions they appealed to the Rochester CIO Council, which responded by broadening its CIO veterans committee. The AFL vets, plus the American Veterans Committee, the Global War Vets, and Wives and Veterans joined with the CIO to march twice to the city council chambers and ask for action. The city council, composed mainly of Republicans, stuck by their do-nothing policy.

Then the committee obtained the support of all other city veterans' organizations, placed its six-point housing program on petitions, called a mass meeting, and established their organization on a permanent basis. Sixteen veterans' organizations were on the executive committee including the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans, Negro Housing and Planning Council veterans committee, the American Veterans Committee and the Jewish War Veterans.

Fourteen thousand signatures on the petition were secured in a few weeks. The petitions called for the appointment of a Municipal Housing Authority; support of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft housing bill and passage of similar legislation in N. Y.; more appropriations for more emergency housing; housing to be made available to all without regard to race, creed, national origin or political affiliation, and appointment of a citizens' housing committee.

Seventeen hundred people attended the mass meeting. Hundreds more packed the streets outside Convention Hall listening to the speeches over public address systems.

Now the housing committee is planning a parade when the drive to obtain 19,000 signatures on the petition is completed. Nineteen thousand signatures equal 10% of the city's population and mean that the city council will have to get moving on the people's demand for housing.

TRAIN CIO VET COUNSELORS

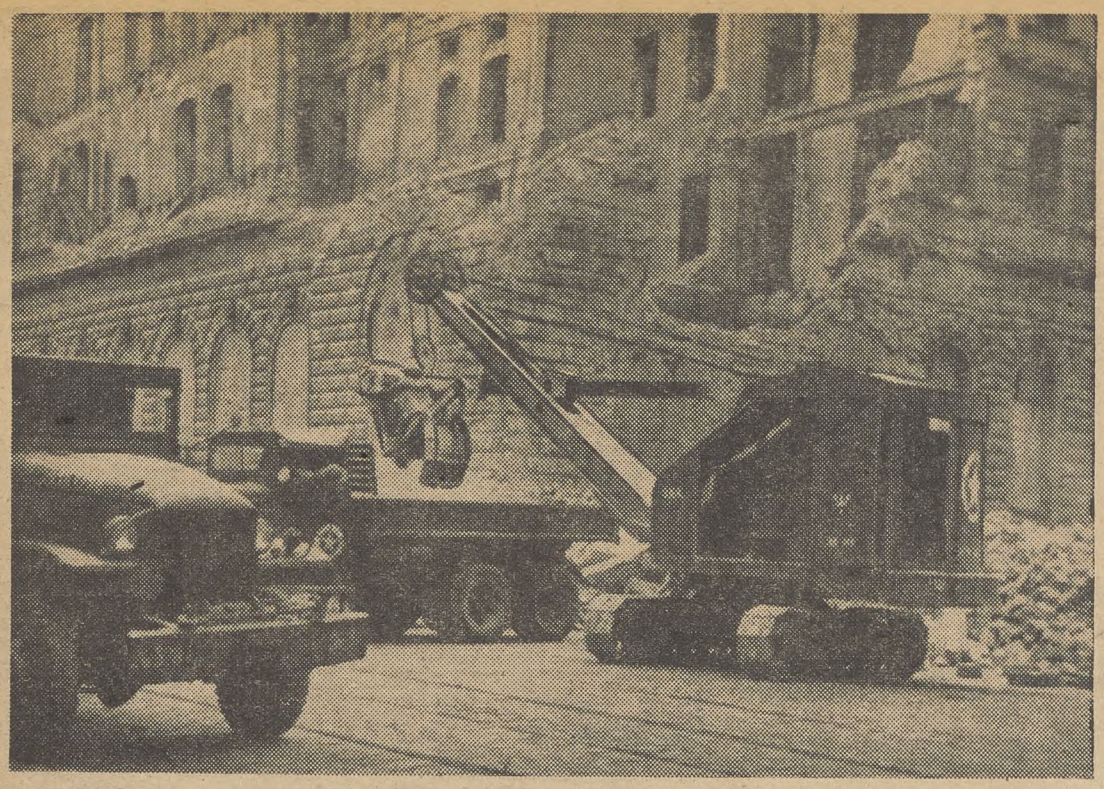
PLANS for the first CIO school for veteran counselors were made this week by the Veterans Committee of the Chicago CIO Council.

As a result of a conference called by the committee and attended by more than 100 CIO members each local will be asked to select key men for the classes, scheduled to be held weekly to train men to answer questions about veterans' problems. Chairman of the committee is Charles R. O'Malley, a member of the CIO Steelworkers Union who served 33 months in the Pacific.

The conference passed resolutions calling on Congress to strengthen and extend the OPA, to amend the GI Bill to provide unemployment compensation for striking veterans in states where compensation is paid to workers during a strike, to pass legislation to make possible the realization of the Wyatt housing program.

The conference also called on Selective Service to abide by the ruling of the 2d U. S. Circuit of Appeals and other Federal courts that super-seniority is illegal.

Principal speaker was Meyer Bernstein, representative of the Natl. CIO Veterans Committee.



YANKS LEND A HAND: Against a background of destruction, American soldiers help clean up rubble on a bomb-damaged Vienna street. War destroyed 20 per cent of the buildings in city once famed for wine, women and waltzes.

Report from Austria

'WE MUST HURRY TO CATCH UP WITH YOU'

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WE SAT, a half dozen of us, huddled in the one warm room of the apartment—there isn't much fuel in Vienna this year—and drank weak tea and talked in a mixture of pidgin German and pidgin English.

My host, a veteran Austrian government employe and a trade unionist, was full of questions about America. Had the American radio played music of Germans like Beethoven and Brahms during the war? What was President Truman's background? Does everyone in America have enough to eat?

"And what," he asked, "has happened to the 'Cheeo'?"

It took a little time, in our painful German and English, to find out what he was talking about—the CIO. My host beamed as I told him the highlights of the story; of 10 years of upward struggle for recognition and higher wages, of increased membership and powerful influence for democracy at home and abroad.

"Ah," he said, when I had completed my thumb-nail sketch of 10 years of unionism—"you have done so much while we were going backward. We must hurry, hurry to catch up with you. The working people of Austria have heard a little about CIO during the black years; now they want to know more about the American unions to serve them as a guide during the years ahead."

Austria's trade unions are working hard to bridge the gap of 11 years of fascism and oppression, but the road is twisting and filled with the debris inherited from Hitlerism and war. In the autumn of 1935, when CIO was first established, Austrian workers had already been living under a native, union-busting, domestic fascism for more than a year and a half. An fascism goes, it wasn't a very efficient type of dictatorship, and the unions and the workers' political parties maintained big underground movements. In 1938, the Nazis moved in and trade unionists, Socialists, Communists, liberals — everyone who opposed the Hitler way of life—hid out, went to his death or to a concentration camp that was almost death itself.

Now, after 11 long years, the Austrian unions are functioning again. Their central headquarters—which carries the jaw-breaking name of Freie Oesterreichische Gewerkschaftbund (Free Austrian Trade Union Center)—is open for business again in an unheated building in a downtown Vienna street lined with buildings more wrecked than whole. Sixteen or 18 affiliates are reorganizing their structures. And Austrian workers, free to call their souls their own for the first time in a decade, are joining up.

The trade union heritage in Vienna is great and powerful, something that even long years of fascism weren't able to erase. Vienna developed a model city administration in which the unions played a major part.

Today, luckily little scarred by war, the great housing developments built by the city for its industrial and white-collar workers still dot the Vienna scene. On the other hand, the intricate system of labor mediation courts, social welfare systems, health and unemployment insurance, which was erected during that period fell before the Nazis, or was prostituted into a device to "keep the people in line" for the German Hitlerites.

It's understandable that Austrian workers and their leaders have a tendency to hark back to the "good old days." But they have pitched in with a ready will to build their new organizations.

It's not an easy job. No auto transportation, few leaders, little food, almost no heat for offices or homes, and the fatigue that comes from having the war move down through your own city block—all these slow up the task of reorganizing the unions.

Even worse is the absence of trained leaders. It takes time to develop people with "know how" in union matters. The young men, from 25 to 40, haven't had any such opportunity for the past 11 years. Some of the old leaders were able to ride out the fascist storm—in some cases unmolested in obscurity, in others in the hell of the concentration camps. Many of them are back at their old desks. Some have returned from years of exile in London, Moscow and New York.

But there's still a big vacuum, down in the lower ranks, where the people need guidance on the little details of democratic technique.

Back in the late summer of '45, for example, the editorial and business staff of the American-controlled German language paper in Linz decided they wanted to select a grievance committee to represent them before the American management. The problem was thrashed out at a meeting; the big question was how to handle the election. It seems easy, but you forget how to do it after a dozen years.

One man suggested nominations, speeches in favor of the various candidates, and a written vote. One of his colleagues objected: "If speeches are made, persons will indicate how they are going to vote, and the ballot, accordingly, won't be secret!" The staff eventually decided to have each person write his favorite's name on a piece of paper, with the job going to the person with the most votes.

When the votes were counted, the name of almost every staff member had been mentioned, and no person received more than two votes!

It's difficult enough to build a union organization with a shortage of leaders, but it's harder when the country is in the midst of unemployment comparable to that of the U. S. in the dark days of 1931 and 1932. American industry is operating at only a tiny fraction of capacity. In the case of many war plants, machinery has been taken by the Red Army in accordance with the Potsdam agreement. In many more instances, the factories would produce if they had sufficient raw materials, transportation and fuel. Lacking all three, most plants are closed or staffed only by maintenance workers.

In the service trades and in transportation, conditions are a little closer to normal. The railroad union is the country's biggest, and far better developed than most. Throughout the fascist era, the democratic transport workers had maintained a loose sort of underground, and when the war was over many of the old union veterans rallied their organizations.

On V-E Day, or earlier, most of the bosses of the Nazi-controlled state railways took off in a hurry. In Salzburg and other sections of the American zone of occupation, engineers and trainmen kept the rolling stock in good running shape without any directions—either from the management or the American Army—for more than a week.

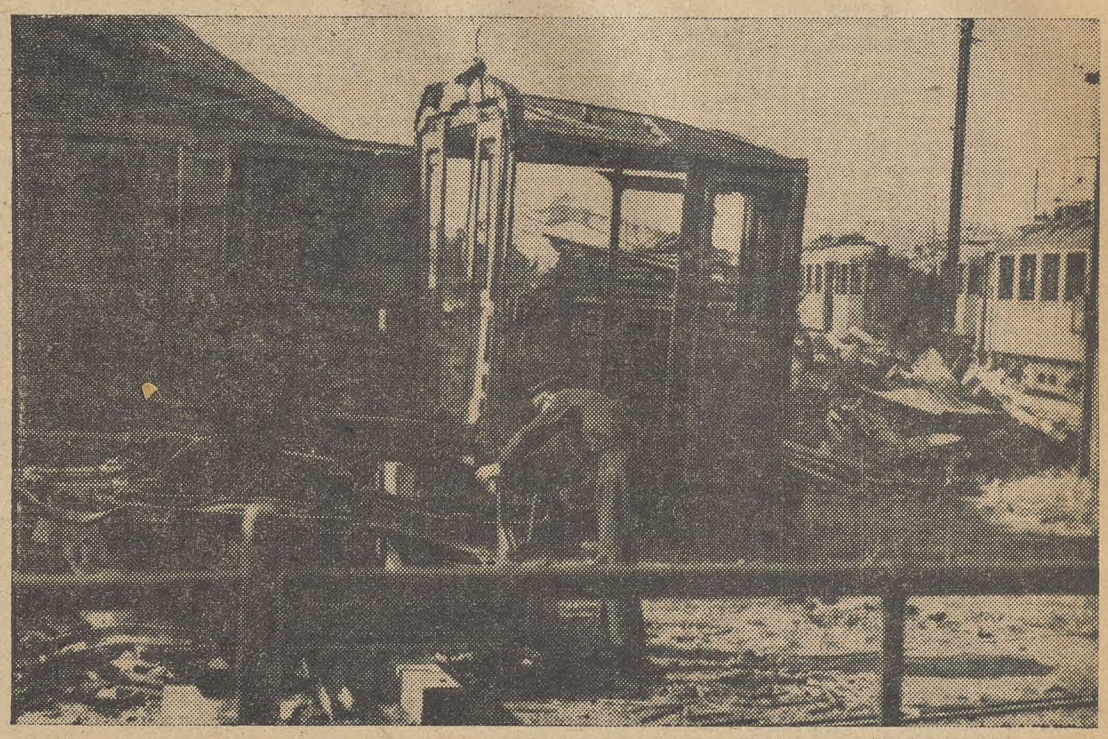
The same sort of thing happened in lots of other "private" industries. The Nazi bosses, closely tied in with the Hitler war machine, skipped out. In more than one big plant, workers' councils maintained the property in the interest of the Austrian republic pending formal nationalization by the state.

Today the Austrian unions want all major plants taken over by the government. Johann Boehm, president of the labor federation and a member of the first interim democratic government, thinks the list should include "all mining and oil production, water power, electricity, as well as banking and credit." Boehm would like to see the owners paid indemnity for their property, "except in cases where the owner is a war criminal or a leading Nazi."

Judging from the way Austrian big business flocked to the Nazi banner, a program such as that outlined by Boehm wouldn't cost the government very much money.

It's almost a year since Austria's liberation. Before long, the unions will be holding their first national convention in a dozen years. They're proud of their achievements, and anxious for support from the labor organizations of Europe and America. An Austrian delegation managed to get the necessary travel permits to attend the World Trade Union Congress at Paris last October. Labor groups from England, France and the Soviet Union have visited Vienna to establish personal contact with the new Austrian unions.

And the Austrians are hopeful that one of these months the CIO will be able to send a delegation for a similar visit.



Heiligenstadt yards of Vienna's city-owned street railway system were a mess at war's end. But workers, once again members of free trade unions, are helping to clean them up. There's still much to be done, but progress has been fast since Red Army liberated the Austrian capital in April, 1945.

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS — By Rose H. Alschuler

IT'S TOO MUCH

Children love to help, but should not be given more responsibility than they can carry. Too much is being expected of Ellen, and she doesn't like it. Nor is she old enough to guard and protect her husky brother, Joe.

SYSTEMATIZED KITCHEN PAYS OFF

By Nutrition Service, D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross

ANY woman who works and keeps house knows it's not only cooking the food that eats up time—it's the preparing, serving and washing-up that adds to the fuss and bother of feeding a family.

Getting the kitchen organized and keeping the service simple is work-saving strategy that pays dividends in better meals, better health and better dispositions. Getting the family to help lightens your load and is good training, especially for the small fry. The whole family can have fun doing it, too.

Use these time-savers on the kitchen front:

Make meal plans ahead. Read "ads" in the daily paper to find out what's plentiful in the market, then make up meal plans and grocery lists. To ease up on marketing difficulties, make one shopping trip to do for several days.

Check your kitchen arrangement with a cold, critical eye. Will a book, a shelf, some labels, a double-boiler that cooks in bottom and top compartments at the same time, sharp knives, double-duty coking and serving utensils save minutes each meal? Have an emergency shelf for unexpected guests, illness and bad weather. Stock it with canned soups, cans of vegetables, fruits, fish, quick mixes, prepared desserts, macaroni and cheese.

Use quick meal aids. Try frozen fruits and vegetables for quick cooking and serving. They are often as inexpensive as the fresh kinds. Cook most vegetables in their skins. They peal easily after cooking, or if well scrubbed, skins of carrots and potatoes can be eaten—they're good for you.

Fresh fruits, crackers and cheese and home-made ice creams which keep well when stored in the electric freezer make good "quickie" desserts. Ice creams made with evaporated milk in place of hard-to-get cream are tasty and inexpensive. Keep several different sauces on hand to top it.

Keep service simple. When possible, cook in utensils that can be brought to the table. Many new and interesting post-war models are coming back on the market. Dishwashers will love this—it saves time in washing-up. Try individual tray service and let the family line-up for chow. If you have a porch or garden, eat out of doors for a change.

Let the men help. K. P. isn't "sissy" anymore. If you have men folks, supply them with aprons and give them instructions. Let them make gravy, toss the salad, and serve-up the food. They can manage the coffee, too. While the men are busy, you and the girls can put the finishing touches on the table or tend to the frills.

LABOR'S WORLD

MASS starvation faces the Yugoslav people unless quick help is forthcoming, according to two authentic reports from the Balkan country.

In a cable to the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, leaders of the Yugoslav miners union said that five million people face a hungry death, and their country's economy will head into the rocks, unless UNRRA help is greatly increased.

Pointing out that 1,500,000 Yugoslavs died at the hands of the Nazis and Italian fascists during the war, the union asked support from American metal miners on the basis of "our readiness in the struggle against blood-stained fascism and our contribution to the liberty of all peoples of the world."

In Belgrade, an Allied Labor News report declared, Dr. A. P. Meiklejohn of UNRRA's staff revealed, that in many parts of the country per capita food consumption is down to 770 calories a day. This is far less than official rations in defeated Germany, and much below the amount necessary to keep people alive.

UNRRA has sent some 500,000 tons of grain into Yugoslavia, along with 15,000 cars and trucks. These have kept the country going, but recent cuts in the shipments spell disaster for the Yugoslav people.

Aid to Yugoslavs

The CIO Natl. Maritime Union has contributed $11,000 for a mobile clinic for Yugoslavia in cooperation with the $5,000,000 health program of the American Committee for Yugoslav Relief, 235 E. 11th St., N. Y. City, it was announced this week.

The health campaign, which was launched nationally on March 27, Yugoslav Independence Day, includes projects for the equipment of two bone tuberculosis hospitals for children, a Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial hospital, mobile clinics, children's homes and clinics, jeeps for the transportation of doctors, dentists and nurses, and research projects.

Latin American Meet

Plans for building up the industry of Latin America, while at the same time avoiding serious price inflation, are on the agenda of the Intl. Labor Organization's American hemisphere conference which started in Mexico City April 1.

Representatives of more than 11 Latin American nations and the United States are attending the meeting. On the U. S. delegation are Pres. Willard Townsend of the CIO Transport Service Employes, and Mike Ross, head of the CIO's Intl. Affairs Dept.

David Efron, director of Latin American affairs of the ILO, said that prices have risen in some countries to 10 or 12 times the pre-war level, with a third of the population going on a below-subsistence living standard.

They're On, They're Off

France's ministry of labor this week settled a small but violent labor dispute which began at Issoudon when a local hat manufacturer ordered his workers to "wear hats or be fired."

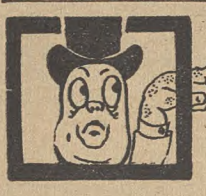
It was decided, according to Federated Press, that workers would enter and leave the factory wearing hats, but might leave their heads unadorned at work and after hours. In addition each season the employer will present everyone in the factory with a new hat.

CUT PAPER SUPPLY FOR LABOR PRESS

Rationing and other controls over the supply of newsprint must be applied by the government if other efforts to secure adequate paper for labor publications break down, a delegation of union editors warned the Civilian Production Administration this week.

Two groups, largely from CIO publications in New York, conferred with CPA Administrator J. D. Small and other officials to protest the severity of delivery cuts during the past few months.

While metropolitian newspapers have expanded since the controls were lifted and are permitting the use of luxurious "white space" in their ads, a dozen or more labor papers have had their publications dates delayed or their number of pages sharply cut as a result of the crisis.



WES
• progressive labor's designer
• cartoons • illustrations
• layouts • pamphlets
MEET YOUR DEADLINE!
341 E. 56 St., N. Y. C. PL 3-6474

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS
UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1639-49 W. Evergreen Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide
NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.
BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

44 Years of Know-how
in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C. I. O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 4600 West Parker Ave., Chicago 39, Illinois
20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Edward McCrone, CIO Regional Director, Connecticut, reports: International Silver Co., Meriden, Conn. (Factory T) UERMWA-CIO 50, AFL 9, no union 11; Whitney Blake Co., Hamden, Conn., UERMWA-CIO 261, no union 184; Connecticut Malleable Co., New Haven, Conn., UERMWA-CIO 46, no union 13.

CIO Reg. Dir. Geo. Craig, Philadelphia, advises: RCA, Lancaster, Pa., UERMWA-CIO 464, AFL 370; H. Brinton Co., Philadelphia, UERMWA-CIO 146, against 48.

Paul R. Christopher, National CIO Representative, reports: Reily Tar, Memphis, Tenn., CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers 5, no union 0. CIO Rep. B. T. Judd was in charge.

Wm. B. Taylor, Dir. Org. UGCCWA-CIO reports: U. S. Gypsum, East Chicago, CIO 224, against 9. UGCC Rep. Howard Jones was in charge of the organization.

CIO Reg. Dir. Powers Hapgood, Indianapolis, advises: Indianapolis News CIO American Newspaper Guild 70, against 10. All three of the Indianapolis newspapers now have CIO organization.

★ ★ ★

Robert C. Edwards, Director, Org. Com. PJNWA-CIO, reports: Bridgeport Metal Goods Co., Bridgeport, Conn., CIO 282, against 88. CIO Field Rep. Michael Roxas was in charge, assisted by PJNW Organizer Anthony Ramuglia working under the direction of CIO Reg. Dir. Edward McCrone. Improved Seamless Wire Co., Providence, R. I., CIO 28, no union 26. CIO Field Rep. Ben Stahl and PJNW Rep. Alfred Bregnard directed in the region of CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Carmichael. H. A. Wilson Co., Newark, N. J., resulted in CIO victory. Organization work was done by Intl. Rep. PJNWA Morris Malmignati, assisted by PJNW Org. Morris Riger in CIO Reg. Dir. Ewald Sandner's area.

Frank Grasso, Director, Un. Paperworkers, CIO, reports: Rep. Carl Monaco reports winning bargaining rights for employes of Queens Ribbons & Carbon Paper Co.; and reports winning an organizing campaign at the Rix Paper Co., New York, N. Y.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. W. A. Copeland, Memphis, Tenn., reports: CIO Paperworkers won bargaining rights for the Rite-Way Products Co., CIO won recognition without going through an election at the Modern Packages Co., (subsidiary of American Coating Mills, Elkhart, Ind.)

CIO Reg. Dir., Walter H. Harris, Chicago, advises: Ft. Wayne Corrugated Paper Co., CIO 58, AFL 24. UPA Rep. Stanley Righton participated.

★ ★ ★

E. B. Pugh, CIO Reg. Dir., Richmond, Va., advises: Hopper Paper Co., Richmond, CIO Paperworkers 86, No Union 9. UPA Rep. Robert Turner was in charge. Old Colony Box Co., Radford, Va., CIO Paperworkers 17, Against 16. Intl. Rep. UPA Tom Linn did a tough job well.

Frank J. Bender, CIO Reg. Dir., Maryland, reports: The Individual Laundry Co., Hagerstown, Md., CIO 20, AFL 0, neither 2. Maryland Ribbon Co., Hagerstown, Md., CIO 38, Against 13; Associated Ribbon Works, Inc., Hagerstown, Md., CIO 10, neither 2. CIO Rep. Robert J. Brylke was in charge of these campaigns.

CIO Reg. Dir. Jos. Dernoncourt advises that CIO Rep. Gobel F. Cravens reports: Oklahoma Furniture Mfg. Co., Oklahoma City, CIO Furniture Workers 62, Against 35.

W. A. Copeland, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., advises: Trojan Luggage, Memphis, Tenn., CIO Furn. Workers 32, no union 5. UFW Rep. W. L. Carson was in charge. The Lilly Company, Memphis, recognized CIO without going to the Board. CIO Rep. Henry White did the job here.

Geo. Brown, Dir. Org. IWA-CIO, reports: Craftman's Products, Memphis, CIO 52, no union 5, IWA Rep. W. W. Snook was in charge; Bellgrade Lumber Co., Cary, Miss., CIO 58, No. Union 8. Claude Ballard, Asst. Dir. was in charge.

John C. Lawson, Secy-Treas., CIO Stone & Allied Products Workers, reports: Tungsten Mining Corp., Henderson, N. C., CIO 90, against 30. Reps. Sam H. Scott and Niles G. Alwine were in charge.

CIO Rep. Frank D. Vrataric, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., reports: Roaring Creek Water Co., Shamokin, Pa., CIO Utility Workers, 21, against 16.

★ ★ ★

The writer attended the UAW-CIO convention in Atlantic City last week. Walter Reuther was elected president, R. J. Thomas and Richard Leonard were elected vice-presidents and George F. Addes was re-elected secretary-treaurer, while twenty members were elected to the Executive Board.

The convention adopted a resolution endorsing the CIO's Southern Organizing Drive and many other constructive resolutions.

The officers elected pledged their support to teamwork with CIO pushing forward its program.

President Murray was commended highly for his splendid, constructive address to them. Everyone is pulling for the maximum degree of unity in this splendid organization.

This week the Utility Workers Union of America will hold their first constitutional convention in Atlantic City. The writer will meet with their executive board and will attend their convention in his capacity as Advisor. This union now is in a position to go forward in organizing the workers in this vital and important industry.

Correction: Through a typographical error in this column last week, report of an election in New Jersey was garbled. It should have read:

CIO Reg. Dir. Ewald Sandner, New Jersey, advises: Burry Biscuit Corp., Elizabeth, N. J., URW&DSEA-CIO 139, AFL 121. URW&DSEA Rep. Geo. Braverman was in charge.

2 VICTORIES IN TOBACCO

SETTLEMENT of the five-month old strike of CIO Food & Tobacco Workers against the American Tobacco Co. was reached in two of the company's plants, union officials reported this week.

The union gained hourly wage increases of 12c for 600 workers in the Trenton, N. J., plant, and 8c for 1,200 workers, mostly women, in the Charleston, S. C., division.

The union expected to reach a settlement at the Philadelphia plant momentarily.

At Charleston, the union won maintenance of membership and mandatory checkoff.

★ ★ ★

CIO Food & Tobacco Workers this week demanded that the Natl. Labor Relations Board obtain court injunctions to restrain 66 canneries of the California Canners & Processors Assn. from operating under illegal closed shop contracts signed with the AFL Teamsters.

Ineffectiveness of the Teamsters' boycott of the canneries was proven last week when FTA members went to work, as they had been willing to do all along, to process the spinach crop.

In the face of the readiness of FTA members to work, the association statement that it was necessary to sign closed shop contracts with the Teamsters to save the crops was hypocritical and proof of collusion between the canners and Teamsters, FTA declared.

CLEANERS UP WAGES 20%

Close to 3,500 workers in 92 N. Y. cleaning and dyeing shops won an average 20% pay increase in a contract signed by the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Other contract gains include seven paid holidays, two-week vacations after five years and a comprehensive insurance program providing health, life, accident, hospitalization, maternity and other benefits for which employers will pay 2% on weekly payrolls.

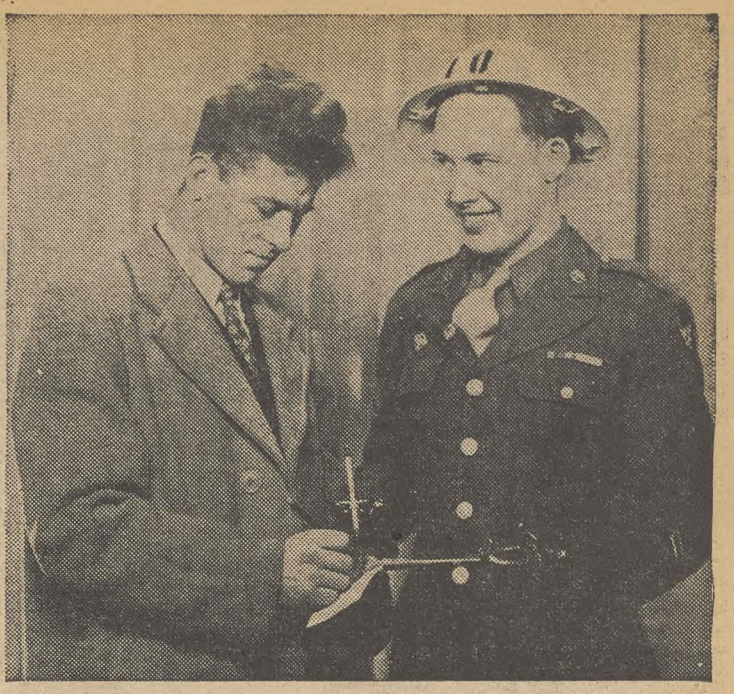
SOCIAL WORKERS WIN PAY BOOST

An 18% wage increase and establishment of $30 weekly minimum rates for office workers and $2,400 a year for professional employes were won by the CIO Office & Professional Workers for members in three social agencies in N. Y. this week.

Starting salaries for professional workers will be $2,300, advancing to $2,400 after six months. Previous starting salaries were $24.50 a week for office employes and $1,914 a year for professionals.

ARRANGE TALKS

CIO United Railroad Workers and Railroad General Managers Assn. of N. Y. have completed arrangements to negotiate a master agreement covering marine department workers of the N. Y. Central, Baltimore & Ohio, Lackawanna, N. J. Central and New Haven Railroads, it was reported by Francis M. McMahon, URRWA district director.



Having no hands doesn't stop Lee Higginbotham, ex-paratrooper of Kellogg, Ida., from building his union. He's signed up more than 150 members for the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers in current membership drive. (FP Photo.)

STRIKERS FACE EVICTION

EVICTION proceedings were started this week in Rock Hill, S. C. courts to pressure 400 members of the CIO Textile Workers Union to end their six-month strike against the Industrial Cotton Mill.

Traditionally, in cotton mill strikes, the workers continue to live in mill villages until a settlement is reached. But if the workers are driven from their homes, the Industrial Cotton mill strikers plan to set up tent colonies until the strike is won.

The Industrial company refused, over six months ago, to live up to War Labor Board orders requiring a 55c minimum wage and maintenance of membership. The workers struck to enforce the Board order.

★ ★ ★

That rusty weapon of the union-busting sweat shop employer — the court injunction — was wielded last week against 600 CIO Textile Workers Union members on strike at the Gaffney, S. C., plant of the Deering-Milliken chain.

Attorney's for the mill, formerly known as the Gaffney Mfg. Co., applied for a restraining order against TWUA business agent C. D. Puckett and 62 of the strikers. In close to seven months the workers have been on strike, no violence has occurred.

HIT WIRE 'RUNAWAY' PLOT

CHARGES that the Western Union Telegraph Co. has adopted a "runaway shop" policy in N. Y. City to punish and intimidate CIO American Communication Assn. members were made this week by Joseph Kehoe, ACA director of organization.

In a statement to the Federal Communications Commission, the union declared that large telegraph centers throughout the country have been advised to "route only city and cable business to N. Y." All other messages normally routed through the city have been diverted through a system of "joy-ride circuits" to avoid the nation's largest telegraph center.

These diversions, the union told FCC, result in adding as much as 500 miles to the distance normally traversed by messages and required numerous relays. Hundreds of thousands of messages are delayed as much as 12 hours.

The union urged FCC "to force Western Union to restore normal routing methods . . . and cease the malpractices which wreak such havoc on the service."

★ ★ ★

Exposing the "refusal" of the giant meat packers to buy livestock as an attempt to wreck OPA price controls and raise prices, the CIO Packinghouse Workers this week charged packers with "dereliction of their public responsiblity and of our country's obligation to the starving peoples of the world."

The union asked Agriculture Secretary Anderson to call a conference of union, packing and government representatives to solve the present crisis.

★ ★ ★

CIO Oil Workers Union Pres. O. A. Knight charged this week that oil producers in Texas are "on strike" against the Navy.

Knight said "the producers are trying to cut crude oil production to create a shortage, break OPA price controls and thus increase prices. The Navy says it needs 150,000 barrels of fuel oil daily and can't get it."

SHIP FIRMS STALL BOARD VOTE

Three thousand seamen aboard 100 Isthmian Steamship Co. vessels can't vote for a union to represent them because Natl. Labor Relations Board officials can't get aboard the ships to hold elections, the CIO Natl. Maritime Union told the NLRB this week.

In a telegram to the Board, the union declared that "Isthmian dock guards are informing NLRB officials that they have orders from the company prohibiting them to go aboard vessels to carry out the NLRB directive on voting." This action prevented voting on seven ships in N. Y. harbor.

Wage Bill Vote

TO REMEMBER NEXT NOVEMBER

Here's how the Senators voted on the Pace Amendment to the Minimum Wage Bill.

The vote was of crucial importance, since passage of the amendment weighted the bill down with a rider not related to the minimum wage problem. Many of those voting for the Pace Amendment knew that Pres. Truman had warned of a veto if it were passed; and they saw the bill as an easy means of expressing opposition to the boost in minimum pay.

The Pace Amendment would change the means for figuring parity prices on farm products. The Dept. of Agriculture and OPA were strongly opposed to it, and predicted it would lead to an inflationary 4½ billion dollar increase in farm prices. National farmer organizations were similarly opposed.

Keep your Senator's vote on the Pace amendment in mind when he appeals for your vote next November.

ALABAMA
Bankhead, John H. 2d (D).....W
Hill, Lister (D).....R

ARIZONA
Hayden, Carl (D).....W
McFarland, Ernest W. (D).....W

ARKANSAS
McClellan, John L. (D).....W
Fulbright, J. William (D).....W

CALIFORNIA
Downey, Sheridan (D).....NV
Knowland, Thomas J. (R).....R

COLORADO
Johnson, Edwin C. (D).....W
Milliken, Eugene D. (R).....W

CONNECTICUT
Hart, Thomas C. (R).....R
McMahon, Brian (D).....NV

DELAWARE
Tunnell, James M. (D).....R
Buck, C. Douglass (R).....NV

FLORIDA
Andrews, Charles D. (D).....NV
Pepper, Claude (D).....R

GEORGIA
George, Walter F. (D).....W
Russell, Richard B. (D).....W

IDAHO
Gossett, Charles C. (D).....W
Taylor, Glenn H. (D).....R

ILLINOIS
Brooks, C. Wayland (R).....NV
Lucas, Scott W. (D).....R

INDIANA
Willis, Raymond E. (R).....NV
Capehart, Homer E. (R).....W

IOWA
Hickenlooper, Bourke M. (R)....W
Wilson, George A. (R).....W

KANSAS
Capper, Arthur (R).....W
Reed, Clyde M. (R).....W

KENTUCKY
Barkley, Alben W. (D).....R
Stanfill, William A. (R).....W

LOUISIANA
Ellender, Allen J. (D).....W
Overton, John H. (D).....W

MAINE
Brewster, Owen (R).....W
White, Wallace H., Jr. (R).....W

MARYLAND
Radcliffe, George L. (D).....W
Tydings, Millard E. (D).....NV

MASSACHUSETTS
Saltonstall, Leverett (R).....NV
Walsh, David I. (D).....R

MICHIGAN
Ferguson, Homer (R).....R
Vandenberg, Arthur H. (R).....R

MINNESOTA
Ball, Joseph H. (R).....W
Shipstead, Henrik (R).....W

MISSISSIPPI
Bilbo, Theodore G. (D).....W
Eastland, James O. (D).....W

MISSOURI
Briggs, Frank P. (D).....R
Donnell, Forrest (R).....R

MONTANA
Murray, James E. (D).....R
Wheeler, Burton K. (D).....R

NEBRASKA
Butler, Hugh (R).....NV
Wherry, Kenneth S. (R).....NV

NEVADA
McCarran, Pat (D).....NV
Carville, Edward P. (D).....W

NEW HAMPSHIRE
Bridges, Styles (R).....NV
Tobey, Charles W. (R).....NV

NEW JERSEY
Hawkes, Albert W. (R).....NV
Smith, H. Alexander (R).....R

NEW MEXICO
Chavez, Dennis (D).....NV
Hatch, Carl A. (D).....R

NEW YORK
Mead, James M. (D).....R
Wagner, Robert F. (D).....NV

NORTH CAROLINA
Bailey, Joseph W. (D).....W
Hoey, Clyde R. (D).....W

NORTH DAKOTA
Langer, William (R).....W
Young, Milton R. (R).....W

OHIO
Huffman, James (D).....R
Taft, Robert A. (R).....R

OKLAHOMA
Moore, E. H. (R).....W
Thomas, Elmer (D).....W

OREGON
Cordon, Guy (R).....W
Morse, Wayne (R).....R

PENNSYLVANIA
Guffey, Joseph F. (D).....R
Myers, Francis J. (D).....NV

RHODE ISLAND
Gerry, Peter G. (D).....R
Green, Theodore Francis (D).....R

SOUTH CAROLINA
Johnston, Olin D. (D).....W
Maybank Burnet (D).....W

SOUTH DAKOTA
Bushfield, Harlan J. (R).....W
Gurney, Chan (R).....W

TENNESSEE
McKellar, Kenneth (D).....W
Stewart, Tom (D).....W

TEXAS
Connally, Tom (D).....NV
O'Daniel, W. Lee (D).....W

UTAH
Murdock, Abe (D).....R
Thomas, Elbert B. (D).....R

VERMONT
Aiken, George D. (R).....R
Austin, Warren (R).....NV

VIRGINIA
Byrd, Harry Flood (D).....W
Glass, Carter (D).....NV

WASHINGTON
Magnuson, Warren G. (D).....NV
Mitchell, Hugh B. (D).....R

WEST VIRGINIA
Kilgore, Harley M. (D).....R
Revercomb, Chapman (R).....W

WISCONSIN
LaFollette, Rob. M. (Prog.).....R
Wiley, Alexander (R).....W

WYOMING
O'Mahoney, Joseph C. (D).....R
Robertson, Edward V. (R).....NV

EDUCATORS STRESS PAC ACTION

SUCCESS of CIO's dual program of educating its members and the public on strike issues was analyzed by CIO educational directors in an Eastern Regional Educational Conference last week in N. Y. City.

The conference, sponsored by the CIO Dept. of Research & Education, brought together 80 representatives of CIO unions and councils. George Guernsey, assistant director of the CIO department, led the two-day discussion of educational techniques and programs.

A dinner address by Cornell University Pres. Edmund S. Day highlighted a discussion of schools and institutes developed by CIO unions and some universities.

Dr. Day described the labor-management school operated at Cornell and told the CIO representatives, "I think of you as representing one of the great constituencies in partnership with the university in the promotion of a great educational enterprise."

Principal speaker at CIO education conference was Cornell University's Pres. Edmund S. Day, who described the university's labor-management school.

More attention to PAC organizing by staff CIO members as part of their organizing and servicing duties was urged by Palmer Weber, research director of the CIO Political Action Committee.

Weber said that wage increases won by the CIO in recent months could be lost without effective and intensive political activity.

Visiting strikers described educational techniques which took the form of classes, forums, mass meetings, printed bulletins, radio programs and newspaper stories and ads.

In Bloomfield, N. J., where CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers were on strike for weeks, committees were established to visit local merchants and clergymen and a speakers' bureau developed neighborhood rallies and meetings. A PAC headquarters, to rally the public and "to put heat on local politicians," was opened and later was placed on a permanent basis.

Jay Collins, Bloomfield UE striker, explains the techniques used by his union's publicity committee in building community support. He spoke at an educational conference, sponsored by CIO Research & Education Dept.

Back from Japan

EBY SAYS CIO IS NEWS

KERMIT EBY, director of the CIO Research & Education Dept., returned from Japan this week after a five-week study of Japan's educational system.

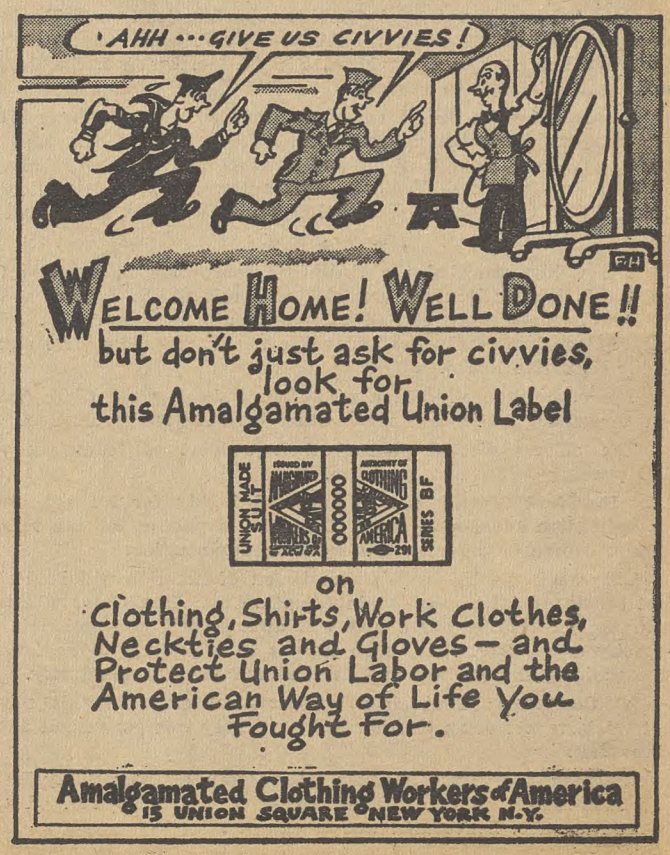
The only labor member of a government Advisory Committee for the Organization of Japanese Education, Eby said a committee report to be issued soon, will be used by Gen. Douglas MacArthur and the State Dept. to decide on the form and program for education of the Japanese people.

Eby said he was "surprised and pleased" to discover that the CIO "was on the tongue" of hundreds of Japanese workers to whom he spoke.

Eby was impressed by the sociological impact of the American soldier on the Japanese people. "The GI's," Eby said, "have created a great cultural revolution in Japan by their contact and friendliness with the people."

Another impressive feature of U. S. conduct in Japan is the development of fundamental decisions on a world framework, not merely along the lines of American interests, he declared

He praised the cooperation of the Army's Civic, Information and Education Section and Lt. Wyman Hicks of that section for his guidance in reaching Japanese labor officials and organizations. Theodore Cohen of the American Military Government labor section staff, provided Eby with technical information to be presented in a report to the CIO.



the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by Mert Meskin and Cole Green

The story, characters, incidents and scenes mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

FOR REASONS OF HIS OWN... MICKEY HAS JOINED THE ANTI-UNION FORCES AT THE ROTOR PLANT, AND ASSUMED LEADERSHIP BUT AFTER A MEETING WITH THE SECRET HEAD OF THE PLOT TO DESTROY THE UNION — STEVE DENTON, SON OF THE OWNER — MICKEY DECIDES TO HAVE A TALK WITH BROTHER JIM AND SUSIE, ONLY TO FIND—

THE DAMN FOOLS! I WANT TO EXPLAIN THE WHOLE ANTI-UNION SET-UP — AND THEY WON'T LISTEN TO ME! FIRST JIM AND WOODY... AND NOW EVEN SUSIE!

MICKEY'S ABOUT READY TO BLOW HIS TOP! LET'S FOLLOW HIM...

I SMELLED STEVE DENTON AS A RAT WHEN HE STARTED GIVING SUSIE A RUSH AND NOW I'VE GOT THE PROOF — BUT IT DOESN'T DO ME ANY GOOD! I'VE BEEN MARKED LOUSY BY THIS TIME... STILL, THERE'S A CHANCE!

HEY, HE'S GOING INTO DENTON'S HOUSE!

I'M BEGINNING TO GET IDEAS, WOODY. THAT KID BROTHER OF MINE MAY NOT BE THE DOPE I THINK HE IS...

WHAT D'YOU MEAN, JIM?

IT'S JUST A HUNCH, WOODY. COME ON, WE'RE GOING TO DO SOME LISTENING UNDER DENTON'S WINDOW...

I DON'T LIKE TO SEE MY ORDERS DISOBEYED — NOT EVEN BY A WOULD-BE BIG SHOT LIKE YOU, MICKEY.

I DON'T GIVE A DAMN ABOUT YOUR ORDERS, STEVE DENTON! I CAME TO TELL YOU THAT I'M BLOWING YOUR DIRTY SCHEME SKY HIGH!

WHY YOU... SO YOU'RE A SPY FOR THE UNION... I'LL...

NOT SO FAST, DENTON — IT WAS MY OWN IDEA TO GET THE GOODS ON YOU! YOU DIDN'T THINK I'D STAND BY AND WATCH YOU GIVE MY GIRL FRIEND A RUSH SO YOU COULD PUMP HER ABOUT UNION AFFAIRS...

AND BESIDES, YOU'VE SENT PLENTY OF RATS INTO THE UNION IN ORDER TO SPLIT US UP. I'M GIVING YOU BACK SOME OF YOUR OWN MEDICINE.

I WILL SUCCEED, MICKEY BARRY. BUT YOU WON'T GET OUT OF HERE ALIVE!

AT A SIGNAL FROM DENTON...

ALL RIGHT, BOYS. TAKE CARE OF HIM!

A PLEASURE, BOSS!

WHA—! HEY... JIM... JIM...

THE KID'S STRAIGHT, JIM! COME ON — WE GOTTA HELP HIM BEFORE THEM BUMS MURDER...

GET DOWN AND SHUT UP, WOODY!

MESKIN

BUT JIM! — YOU CAN'T DO THIS! IT'S YOUR OWN BROTHER — AND HE'S ON THE LEVEL! YOU CAN'T RUN OUT ON HIM...

KEEP QUIET UNTIL WE GET OUT OF HERE... THEY MIGHT HEAR US!

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Your Home Is In The Senate

Brighter prospects for homes for vets and workers developed this week, thanks to action of the Senate Banking & Currency Committee. Acting to counter the damage done in the House, the Senate group reported out a version of the Patman bill (HR 4761) which paves the way for a real housing program.

Into the Senate Committee's version of the bill went such necessary items for a successful home construction program as: price ceilings on old houses, a $600,000,000 subsidy program on building materials, price control over land, and guarantees that the government will buy any available pre-fabricated homes.

At the same time, the same committee gave a favorable vote to the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill (S. 1592), an over-all housing measure which must be passed along with the Senate version of the Patman bill to give the nation the kind of housing program it sorely needs.

CIO is actively supporting these two bills. With the bills coming up for vote in the Senate, it's important that members of the Upper House be reminded of the need for speedy legislation.

Testifying before the committee shortly prior to its okay of the two home-building proposals, John Edelman of the CIO Housing Committee pointed out that America can't be housed on a horse-and-buggy program.

"The Congress, the government and the country must face the fact that the very big job that must be done cannot be accomplished unless new ways of homebuilding are applied," the CIO spokesman said.

"We propose that private contractors, trained for large-scale jobs, apply themselves to small home building and that the kind of manufacturers who broke so many war-time bottlenecks be given contracts or financial assistance to help smash the building materials bottleneck."

Further, Edelman warned, government controls will be needed to squeeze out some of the profits that ordinarily go hand-in-hand with speculative homebuilding. "Otherwise," the Senate Committee was told, "the bulk of the shelter cannot be sold at prices ranging from $5,000 per unit to $6,000, or to rent for $40 a month, or less."

The Senate Committee, by restoring to the Patman bill many of the features advocated by Housing Expediter Wyatt and by the CIO, makes possible a successful program. But Sen. Capehart (R., Ind.) fought many of these provisions in Committee, and he and his friends will be ready to do a knifing job on the Senate floor.

Let the Senators know that the Senate version of the Patman bill and the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill must be passed.

On Both Sides Of The Fence

Distrust, hate and fear of America's organized workers aren't a monopoly of any one party. There are plenty of foes of labor in the Democratic party—particularly in the southern polltax bloc—just as they dominate the ranks of the Republicans.

This week the forces of reaction moved a step closer together, and party barriers didn't mean a thing. On the GOP side, the National Committee elected Rep. Carroll Reece of Tennessee, as new chairman of the party. He has a long record of votes against labor and for isolationism.

Mr. Reece is out to get the labor vote, he says, but he sees no conflict between his goal and his strong support of the Case Bill, which would rob unions of much of their strength.

On the Democratic side, the southern polltaxers in Congress have tightened their already tough organization into an even firmer group, the so-called "Committee for Harmony and Cooperation."

The spark that set off the explosive activity of the "harmony" group was a statement in the Democrats' official women's publication that passage by the House of the Case bill was a "vote against the American people." This tory outburst occurred despite the fact that President Truman opposed the bill; that there was nothing in the Democratic campaign platform in 1944 calling for such an anti-labor bill; and that millions of workers organized in unions, in PAC and in other organizations, rallied to elect President Roosevelt and a Democratic national legislature.

What to do about this mounting attack on labor's rights and liberal legislation?

1 For one thing, increased pressure to secure quick Senate passage of the anti-poll tax bill (H.R. 7), which would give the vote to millions and help to remove some of the more hidebound Democrats from Congress. Tell your Senators to vote for a cloture rule, which would prevent a filibuster; and to vote for the bill when it reaches the Senate.

2 For another thing, register now or at the first opportunity so that you'll be able to vote in the crucial November elections. Get your local PAC established on a solid basis, so that it can help to elect decent, democratic people to state and national positions.

3 Lastly, keep track of what your Congressmen and Senators are doing on every important bill. Let them know how you want them to vote.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Minimum Wage S 1349	Lifts legal base pay from 40c to 65c, widens coverage to millions more workers.	Senate tories forcing concessions and compromises: cut pay to 60c, may trim coverage, added Pace inflationary rider.	Start campaign with House members for 65c, full coverage and no Pace rider.
Price Control HR 5270	Extends price control act to June 1947.	House Banking Committee added amendment paving way for weakening OPA still further.	Wire your Representative to vote for bill without amendments.
Housing HR 4761 S 1592	Provide basis for big housing program for vets and workers, in line with Wyatt proposals.	Senate committee version of HR 4761 repaired damage done in House, where subsidies, price ceilings removed. Both bills up for Senate vote soon.	Write, wire Senators to approve committee version of HR 4761 and S 1592.
Wagner-Murray-Dingell Health Bill S 1606	Establishes national health program aimed at providing adequate low-cost medical service to all.	Hearings before Senate Labor Committee; CIO to testify in mid-April.	Tell your Senators you're for it 100%
Case Bill HR 5262	Throws book at unions—all sorts of anti-labor restrictive clauses.	Awaits Senate vote; Senate Labor Comm. eliminated many of worst features of bill okayed by House, but let a few remain.	Write, wire Senators to vote against it.
FEPC HR 2232	Sets up permanent govt. agency to fight discrimination.	Supporters seeking to bring bill on House floor via discharge petition.	Ask your Congressmen to sign discharge petition.

HAVE YOU REGISTERED TO VOTE IN NOVEMBER?

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

FEPC: Efforts to force the Fair Employment Practices Bill (H. R. 2232) onto the floor of the House for a vote are showing progress. Some 171 Congressmen have already signed a petition to take the bill out of the hands of the powerful House Rules Committee and bring it onto the calendar for action.

Support of the bill has come from a number of labor, civic and Negro organizations. Last week, CIO Pres. Murray urged Pres. Truman to make funds available to maintain the temporary Presidential Fair Employment Practices Committee pending definite action on Capitol Hill.

Noting that Congress had refused to authorize even $30,000 to keep the temporary committee in operation, Murray told Truman that such a lapse in the fight against racial prejudice "would represent a tremendous step backward in the struggle to extend and strengthen our democracy."

Best method for getting action: Wire your Congressman to sign the discharge petition on H. R. 2232 at once. Forty-seven more names on the list will push the bill through the polltax bloc's first line of defense.

POLL TAX: H. R. 7, to remove the polltax in seven southern states, still awaits action in the Senate. Meanwhile CIO and liberal organizations are urging speediest possible action.

Speaking on the CIO's "Labor-USA" program on the ABC Network March 30, Clark Foreman of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare contradicted polltaxers' claims that the problem is a local one.

The tax, he said, has delivered the most important posts in Congress to a group of southern reactionaries who are re-elected year after year by a small percentage of the people in their districts.

"The only hope for reaction is a filibuster," Foreman declared. "Every Senator who believes in democracy will vote for cloture. A vote against cloture is a vote for the polltax. How does your Senator stand on this crucial issue?"

HERE AND THERE: U. S. Supreme Court has upheld the right of Negroes to vote in the Georgia Democratic primaries . . . Britain's Labor Party has finally won repeal of the infamous Trade Disputes Act of 1927, which outlawed general strikes and limited many types of union activity . . . U. S. federal workers are having a hard fight for an 18.5% pay boost through Congressional action. Government employes, on flat salaries, have been badly hit by rising prices.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
Henry C. Fleisher, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 16 Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS $1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

April 15, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

65c BILL LIMPS TO HOUSE

You can't buy beef steak on 65c or less an hour. Typical of millions of other workers, this Webber Falls, Okla. couple eats a staple diet of beans. The U. S. Govt. reports that there are 10 million workers in manufacturing, mining and service businesses making less than 65c an hour, and several million more in agriculture, government and domestic employment. The 65c minimum wage bill would go a long way in helping to provide these people with more adequate diets. Most of their pay raises would go for the No. 1 budget item—food. (For news and comments on the wage bill's progress, see pages 2 and 4).

65c BILL LIMPS TO HOUSE

MAULED by the usual coalition of northern Republicans and polltax Democrats, the 65c Minimum Wage Bill limped over to the House side of Capitol Hill this week. Determined efforts by Senate progressive to remove the inflationary Pace farm-parity rider ended in failure and underscored the need for an intensive campaign among Congressmen to put the bill into presentable shape.

By reaffirming their insistence that the inflationary rider stay in the bill, Senate conservatives on both parties left the bill open to probable veto by Pres. Truman on grounds that the Pace amendment would upset farm parity and boost food prices by 15 or 20%.

Angered by the shape of the bill as it passed the Senate, CIO Pres. Philip Murray charged that the upper house had "scored a decisive triumph over millions of the lowly-paid workers in this country."

Murray accused "a reactionary cabal of both Democrats and Republicans" of insisting upon passage of the Pace amendment against the advice of Truman, OPA, the Dept. of Agriculture and the big farm organizations. The reason, Murray said, is clear —"they acted to kill this bill by threatening to hurl this country into the quicksand of inflation, to bring about a situation where dollars would be as pennies and sky-high prices could be paid in wagon-loads of dollars rather than in dimes and quarters."

Having passed the Senate, the 65c bill now goes to the House for study by the Labor Committee during the next several weeks. CIO legislative leaders strongly recommended this week that unions write and wire to members of the committee and to their Congressmen demanding elimination of the Pace amendment and speedy passage of the 65c bill without crippling amendments.

SENATOR BULLHEAD

"When I was a young man, I was glad to work for $2 a week..."
The Advance

TRUMAN SOLID FOR POLLTAX REPEAL

THE ANTI-polltax bill, to give votes to millions of low income citizens in seven southern states, this week received President Truman's support.

Permitting himself to be quoted directly, the President declared:

"I have not changed my position on federal polltax legislation."

Indicating his support of moves for a cloture vote to avoid a filibuster, Truman added: "I am still in favor of federal legislation. I voted for cloture on this issue in the Senate and I would do so again if I were a Senator."

The President's statements during his press conference encouraged supporters of the bill (H.R. 7) who are hopeful they can override last-ditch opposition during this session of Congress. The President had been quoted earlier in the week as telling a Chicago high school editors' meeting that he favored state action. At the White House confab, however, Truman said he saw no contradiction in his position, and emphasized that he supported both federal and state action against the tax.

Another favorable development occurred in Massachusetts, where the state legislature memorialized Congress to speed passage of the bill.

The governments of the seven polltax states "have done nothing to alleviate this undemocratic situation," the Massachusetts legislature charged, and demanded that Congress take adequate action to "remove forever the vicious polltax system."

Not to be outdone by the President, Chairman Reese of the Republican Natl. Committee sprang into the attack on the voting tax.

"We favor repeal of the polltax anywhere and everywhere, now," the GOP leader declared.

With heads of both parties now favoring the bill, officials of the Natl. Committee to Abolish the Polltax expressed hope that the measure may soon come up for action—and that it will be passed despite filibuster efforts of some southern Democrats.

PEOPLE'S HEALTH—U.S. WEALTH

A nation is as wealthy as its people are healthy" was the keynote of testimony before the Senate Labor Committee this week as hearings contined on the CIO-supported Wagner-Murray-Dingell health bill.

Union witnesses are expected to begin appearing soon in behalf of the proposal, which would establish a federal health insurance program covering all the nation's population and which would drastically cut medical costs, particularly for low income groups.

Among the first witnesses to appear were Dr. Allan Butler of Harvard Medical School, and Harold L. Ickies, ex-Cabinet member turned newspaper columnist. Under sharp questioning by Sen. Donnell (R., Mo.), Dr. Butler explained opposition of the American Medical Assn. to the bill on grounds that the AMA has been "wrong every time they expressed an opinion" on legislation, and that "they are always at least five years behind the times." He said that AMA executives "have a vested interest in doing what pleases manufacturers" of medicines and drugs.

Ickes, questioned about provisions of the bill providing for compulsory deductions from pay, explained it in terms easily understandable to Sen. Johnson (D., S. C.), a polltax committee member. "The right to insurance," Ickes said, "is like the right to vote, which may be completely cut off by a polltax-inability to pay."

RALLY TO SAVE PRICE CONTROL LAW

PRICE controls lasting until June 30, 1947, come up for approval within the next two weeks in the House of Representatives, while a variety of consumer, labor and civic organizations massed for a dramatic defense against inflationary wolves in Washington and throughout the country.

Approved with several weakening amendments by the House Banking Committee, the bill will be forced to run the gauntlet of even more drastic changes proposed by some members of Congress.

As it came out of commitee, the bill carried provisions for a 25% cut in OPA's food subsidies after October 1, and a plan for preserving automobile dealers' profit margins, which may raise car prices about $60. Defeated was one Republican proposal to limit OPA to only nine more months of existence.

One of the amendments facing the bill as it reaches the House for action bears the approval of the House Agriculture Committee. It calls for elimination of federal subsidies to hold meat prices down, and will, it is estimated, add at least 6c a pound to the price of meat paid by the consumer.

Meanwhile, a report by a group of government stabilization officials warned that the danger of inflation looms as large today as on V-J Day, and that current inflationary pressures are "many times greater" than after World War I, when prices spurted up in 18 months to more than 100% over the pre-war level.

OPA, however, gave grounds for belief that it doesn't always practice what it preaches. In a sweeping order, it lifted price controls from hundreds of consumer and industrial items. In N. Y. City, the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, whose members produce many of the industrial products from which government price supervision has been lifted, warned that "OPA should be strictly enforcing existing price controls."

CIO, meanwhile, was arranging to bring representatives of workers in a half dozen eastern states to Washington to emphasize through personal meetings with Congressmen the intense need for fast action on an effective bill before the price situation goes out of control.

The Natl. Conference for Jobs and Security, bringing together leaders of many local civic and consumers groups, met in Washington during the week. After a luncheon meeting with Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles, delegates visited a number of Congressmen.

FAIR WARNING

If Congress yields to the numerous special-interest groups seeking special exemptions from the Price Control Act, the cost of living is going to move higher up.

That was the warning sounded this week by Jack Thornton, chairman of the CIO Cost of Living Committee, in a special message to union affiliates.

"Every amendment which is adopted will weaken the hold on prices," Thornton said, "and the standard of living of the American worker will suffer accordingly. Even though the amendments aren't adopted, the attempt to put them over may cost you plenty."

Taking Price Control to the People: CIO Office & Professional Workers in Chicago this week sold to pedestrians post cards addressed to Illinois Senators urging them to vote for continuing OPA. Aiding the drive to keep ceilings on prices were (l. to r.) Esther Nix, Olga Prince and Marsha Raleigh, with a "typical consumer."

HARVESTER PACT WINS $25 MILLION A YEAR

THE 84-day-old strike of CIO Farm Equipment Workers was expected to come to an end Monday as union officials expressed confidence that 30,000 Harvester workers would ratify a contract reached late last week.

Hailing the contract as "the best in the farm equipment industry," union officials said "contract gains will give the Harvester workers the highest wages and best working conditions" in the industry. Annual gains were estimated at $25 million.

The contract was first ratified at a meeting of 27 Harvester Council members and is being submitted for ratification to members in Farm Equipment locals at meetings over the weekend.

The contract includes: an 18c an hour increase, with 10% of the average wage previously paid to all Harvester workers retroactive to Oct. 1, 1945; liberalized allowance rules for piece work and production interruptions; arbitration of all grievances including those in existence at the time of strike; checkoff; automatic grievance machinery and pay for union representatives when investigating and settling grievances; promotions on seniority basis; liberalized vacations; and time and a half for Sunday work on continuous production.

A strong clause prohibiting anti-union activities on the part of the company, and maintenance of job descriptions and classifications unless changed by mutual agreement, and the reopening of wage negotiations without notice were other features of the contract.

The contract was reached in Washington where union and company officials were closeted with Department of Conciliation representatives for close to two weeks to end the long strike.

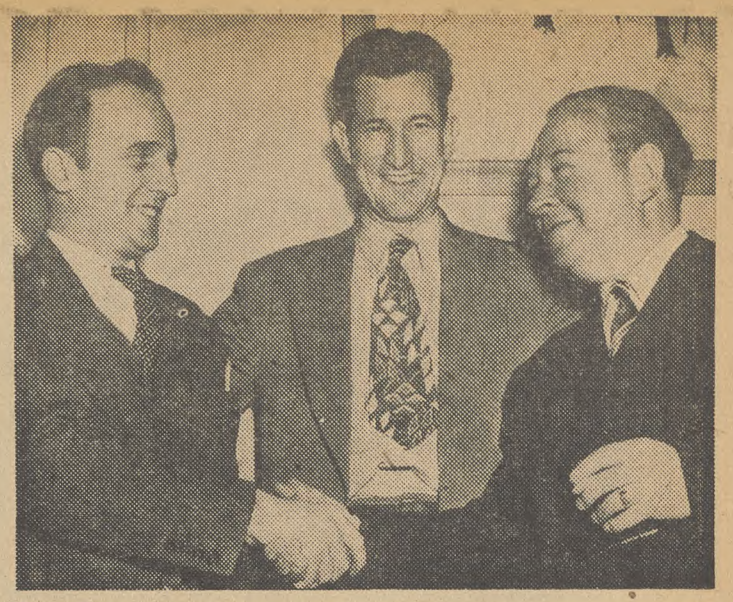
The Harvester Council, after its ratification of the contract, announced that it sets a "new standard in the industry and it is only secure if the rest of the industry is up to it."

The Council proposed that "other CIO unions in the farm equipment industry join to form a CIO Farm Equipment Council to launch a drive in the rest of the industry and to better wage and working conditions."

"Such a council," the union board said, "would unify and coordinate the wage and contract struggles of the farm equipment workers; end jurisdictional disputes in the industry; and make it possible for CIO farm equipment workers to render each other mutual assistance in their campaigns for betterment of their conditions."

The invitation was directed to the CIO Auto Workers and the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, both of whom have locals in Allis-Chalmers and J. I. Case Co., two large farm equipment manufacturing concerns.

The Harvester Council also proposed to the union's executive board that an organizing drive be started among Harvester foremen.



Happy at end of three-months-old Harvester strike were l. to r.: Sec-Treas. Gerald Fielde, CIO Farm Equipment Workers, Asst. Sec. of Labor John Gibson; and George Hodge, Harvester labor relations manager. The settlement was reached in Washington.

Westinghouse at Work

RANKIN GROUP USED IN STRIKE-BREAK TRY

The CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers this week accused the Westinghouse Electric Corp. of "seeking to make use of the discredited Rankin Committee on Un-American Activities, formerly the Dies Committee, to confuse the public on the issues of the strike," which has been in progress 13 weeks.

"In addition to seeking to utilize the Rankin Committee and its agent, Ernie Adamson, as a means of spreading confusion," the UE-CIO charged, "the Westinghouse Corp., rather than entering into direct negotiations to reach a settlement, seeks to fight the efforts of its employes to win a living wage by use of other vehicles of anti-labor propaganda to spread confusion."

Among the organizations and individuals accused by the union of being subjected to the influence of the Westinghouse Corp. "in its all-out, last-ditch campaign to keep from following the national pattern of wage increases," are Gov. Martin of Pennsylvania, the Research Institute of America and the Hearst press.

"Particularly in Pittsburgh, but extending throughout the nation," said UE Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald, "the discredited use of 'red-baiting' as a means of spreading a smokescreen around the central issues in the strike is being practiced."

Ernie Adamson, chief counsel of the Rankin Committee on Un-American Activities, has been in Pittsburgh for the past week, the UE-CIO stated. "Taxpayers will be amazed to learn that this public official, whose salary is paid by public funds, is spending his time assisting the Westinghouse Corp. in its national campaign to deprive 75,000 employes from urgently needed wage increases and thus delay settlement of the strike."

Meanwhile, in Springfield, Mass., Mayor Daniel B. Brunton urged Westinghouse to settle the strike of its 75,000 employes.

Also, in Congress, Rep. Herman P. Eberharter of the Pittsburgh, Pa., area denounced low wages paid by Westinghouse and declared that the company "attempted to camouflage" low rates "by using figures based on incentive earnings."

These public statements are the latest in a series by officials in major industrial centers in which Westinghouse has large production units. The officials have demanded a rapid settlement of the strike and the payment of a living wage to the Westinghouse employes, according to Edward Matthews, UE international representative.

MD. PAC SETS SIGHTS BY FDR

The memory of the late Pres. Franklin D. Roosevelt dominated the action of Md. and D. C. workers who last week formed a permanent state CIO Political Action Committee.

Accepting the "solemn responsibility to see to it that FDR's unfinished battle for the Economic Bill of Rights is carred on to victory," the Md. PAC took steps to rally workers for the political fight to maintain and extend their economic gains.

More than 200 representatives of 22 CIO unions and councils throughout the state attended.

PAC MEETING

The groundwork for activity in the 1946 congressional elections will be laid April 16, when the Natl. CIO Political Action Committee meets in Washington, D. C.

A complete review of the forthcoming congressional contests will feature the session. Reports from PAC officials and staff people will also be heard and the 1946 PAC election program also discussed.

Members of the committee include Sidney Hillman, Van A. Bittner, Sherman Dalrymple, Albert J. Fitzgerald, John Green, David J. McDonald, Emil Rieve and R. J. Thomas.

PAC WINS IN TENN.

The Chattanooga, Tenn., area PAC chalked up a total victory in the Hamilton County Democratic primaries. All seven PAC-endorsed candidates for county posts won nominations despite the fact that ballots in one precinct, 700 of them Negro votes, were discounted because officials had failed to make a list of the voters.

SUGAR STRIKE D-DAY SET AS BOSSES STALL

EIGHT thousand CIO and AFL sugar workers, operating jointly to get wage increases sought in some cases since May, 1945, were prepared as The CIO NEWS went to press to strike against three large East Coast sugar refinery firms unless they drop their "obstinate refusal to bargain."

CIO Vice-Pres. Allan S. Haywood asked Agriculture Sec. Clinton P. Anderson to "call upon sugar refiners to grant to their workers the reasonable requests that have been made for wage increases, or at the very least, in view of the naitonal sugar emergency, to avoid a strike by agreeing to submit the wage issue to arbitration or to a Fact-Finding panel which has been designated by the Secreary of Labor."

Haywood said that sugar refiners have by law been protected against competition and have received other special aids from the government. "Yet," he added, "these refiners stand obstinately firm in refusing to give to their workers even moderate increases far below those being given in other industries."

The strike call, set for April 13, was recommended by leaders of seven CIO and AFL locals representing workers in Revere, American and National sugar refining plants at Boston, N. Y., Philadelphia and Baltimore.

3RD TOBACCO STRIKE WON

The last of the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers' strikes against the American Tobacco Co. came to an end this week with the signing of a contract providing a 12c an hour increase for 700 workers.

Two other strikes were ended two weeks ago in the company's plants in Trenton, N. J. and Charleston, S. C.

The new contract provided for 12c increases for workers receiving under $1 an hour, and 15% for those earning more than $1, maintenance of membership, six paid holidays and a differential for cigar makers.

Westinghouse Electric's chiseling offer of a 9.7c an hour raise was appropriately "buried" last week by Cleveland members of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, on strike for 13 weeks. The UE-CIO is holding out for 18½c an hour, already granted by Westinghouse's competitors in the industry.

UNWELCOME RIDER

Like the Old Man of the Sea, who clamped himself on Sinbad's back and tried to throttle him, is the Russell-Pace amendment.

This vile rider has been clamped to the back of the 65c minimum wage bill in the Senate by a sweatshop bloc of tory Republicans and polltax Democrats.

Its purpose is to strangle the bill, by inviting a veto, and thus to deny a living wage to the lowest-paid workers in the land.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray has served notice that, if the House does not reject this vicious amendment and if the 65c minimum bill leaves Congress with it still attached, the CIO will ask Truman to veto the legislation.

The Russell-Pace amendment to change the basis of farm parity prices is out-and-out inflationary. By raising food prices from 15 to 20%, it would deprive the low-paid of benefit from a higher minimum wage, would slash deeply into the purchasing power of all wages, and would hurl the whole country into the quicksands of inflation.

The specious claim that this amendment is designed to aid farmers is exposed by the fact that the big farm organizations failed to support it and the Dept. of Agriculture was actively opposed. Furthermore, farmers would be among the first to suffer from the inflation which it invites.

The real issue is still whether or not Congress will act to raise the living standards of sweated workers. This can only be done by enacting the 65c minimum bill without any amendments that would defeat its purpose.

Urge your Congressman to vote for raising the minimum wage from 40c to 65c, resisting all attempts to attach the Russell-Pace amendment in the House and working for its complete elimination in House-Senate conference.

CIO MEANS WHAT IT SAYS

When the CIO first began to organize steel, auto, rubber, electrical and other unorganized workers, can you remember the fantastic propaganda that was directed against it?

Probably not. The stories about sinister ulterior motives, about violent and revolutionary intent, the predictions of community and national disaster, were so far fetched and have been so completely disproved by subsequent events that they have long-since been forgotten; and their authors would blush to be reminded of them.

The CIO asserted from the start that its sole purpose was to enroll workers in effective unions to better their wages and conditions through collective bargaining; and that the results could not fail to benefit the whole community and to advance democratic progress.

But there are none so blind as those who won't see. Once again the CIO is launching a big organizing drive, this time in the South; and once again, every kind of fantastic story is spread around about its alleged motives.

Once more, the CIO is pointing out that its sole purpose is to make available the benefits of union organization, for higher wages and better conditions, to workers who are crying out for it; and that the results cannot fail to be beneficial to the community and to democratic progress.

And once more, as union organization spreads to new thousands, the results will prove as they have in the past, that the CIO means exactly what it says, and that not only the workers but the whole community will benefit from its constructive activities.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

THE CIO's fight for higher living standards does not end with the winning of wage increases; it merely shifts to another arena.

In a wage movement or strike, the issues are clear. The workers know how much it means to them in dollars and cents, and their opponent is out in the open.

But when the fight shifts to Congress, the issues become more confused. The immediate opponent is no longer an employer refusing to pay higher wages, but a smooth-tongued politician professing to act in the public interest.

Yet it is essentially the same fight.

★ ★ ★

This is most clearly shown in the Senate's handling of the 65c minimum wage bill.

This measure faced the determined opposition of a sweatshop bloc of polltax Democrats and tory Republicans.

Their purpose, like that of any union-fighting employer, was to keep wages down. But they had devious and deceptive ways of doing this.

The method they finally adopted was to tack on the Russell-Pace amendment, changing the basis of farm parity to jack up food prices by 15-20 per cent, and then to pass the bill.

This maneuver served their purposes admirably. The increased living costs caused by the Russell-Pace amendment would not only nullify the benefits of an increased minimum wage, but would also cut one-third off the real-wage increases of higher-paid workers.

At the same time, the wage-cutting politicians could make a formal record, for election purposes, of voting for a wage increase—knowing it would not take effect, since Truman would veto the measure if it included the Russell-Pace amendment.

★ ★ ★

This tactic of nullifying wage increases by increasing living costs is followed by the same gang in regard to price control.

They will tell the voters, with a straight face, that they have favored higher wages and price control, although they are now putting on the biggest drive to cut real wages, through amendments to the Price Control Act.

The House banking committee, for instance, has recommended the following amendments:

Abolition of Maximum Average Price Regulation, which channels low and medium price clothing to consumers. This will result in almost exclusive production of high-priced clothes, such as $83 men's suits, $27 cotton dresses and $7 shirts.

Denial of power to OPA to reduce dealers' margins for autos, radios, etc.—which will add some $50 to the price of automobiles.

An amendment raising the prices of cotton and wool goods by requiring OPA to base ceilings on speculative levels well above parity.

Reduction of food subsidies to 75% of those paid this year—which will markedly increase basic food prices.

Other price-raising amendments will doubtless be introduced on the floor, and attempts made to cripple price control by shortening its duration and denying OPA adequate funds.

The result of all such amendments would be to cut the purchasing power of wages. The politicians favoring them are out to reduce living standards just as surely as any wage-cutting employer.

★ ★ ★

But the wage-cutters of Congress also hope to achieve their purposes through anti-union measures such as the Case bill. These would weaken the unions' power to resist wage-cutting employers.

The power of the wage-cutters is based on a close alliance between polltax Democrats and tory Republicans. The former filibuster and the latter sabotage whenever the anti-polltax bill comes near enactment, knowing its passage would break up this unholy alliance.

★ ★ ★

Anyone can see the CIO is fighting in his direct interest when it demands and wins higher wages for him.

But it should be equally clear that the CIO is carrying on the same fight when it demands renewal of the Price Control Act without amendments; passage of the 65c minimum wage without the Russell-Pace amendment; rejection of anti-labor legislation, and abolition of the polltax.

Workers should organize for the defeat of wage-cutting politicians with the same enthusiasm and solidarity as they organize against employers who resist their wage demands.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, L. S. Buckmaster, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 April 15, 1946 No. 16

Cancer Cure Scandal

'BIG BIZ' AT WORK

By BETTY GOLDSTEIN

Federated Press

THE story of how General Electric Co. suppressed for four years a revolutionary scientific invention, the atom-smashing betatron, possibly preventing the cure of hundreds of thousands of cancer victims, was uncovered this week by Federated Press. The betatron is a machine similar to the cyclotron, the atom smasher used on the atom bomb project. It produces high energy rays capable of breaking up the nucleus of the atom.

Scientists charge that suppression of the betatron, has blocked atomic medical research and possibly withheld cure from many of the 500,000 persons who died of cancer in the four-year period. Scientists believe the betatron will definitely help cancer cases not curable at present.

Details of Suppression

FP pieced together details of how GE suppressed the machine from Prof. Donald Kerst, its inventor, and atomic physicists, GE employes and eminent cancer specialists. First hint of the story came during the recent strike against GE when the Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago was suddenly offered a betatron by the Allis Chalmers Co., after it had previously refused to build one unless the hospital assumed responsibility for possible patent infringement.

The offer, without strings attached, for the first time lifted the lid GE clamped down on all production of betatrons for hospitals or commercial use. GE is believed to have given Allis Chalmers the go-ahead sign because it feared the betatron's suppression would be made public during strike-provoked charges and counter-charges as to who was responsible for interferring with cancer research.

Kerst invented the betatron at the University of Illinois in 1940. He took his invention to GE because the corporation produced high-voltage x-ray machines for medical use. After spending two years developing a working model in a GE laboratory, he discovered the firm had patented his invention on the technicality that anything produced in the laboratory was theirs.

Monopoly Control

During the war GE stubbornly refused to produce betatrons and refused to license its patent so that other companies could build the machines. Under pressure from the Office of Scientific Research & Development and Kerst, Allis Chalmers was finally given patent immunity to build five 20-million-volt machines for the government. The machines were used to test shells and on the atom bomb project.

Meanwhile GE poured thousands of tons of iron into a $300,000 100-million-volt betatron, which it unveiled with great fanfare after VJ-Day. Tests have shown that the 20-million-volt machine, which the government wanted and which costs only $75,000, is the more practical instrument. While GE was demonstrating its uncooperative attitude, Germany began building betatrons in 1944, FP learned.

At the same time cancer specialists and radio-therapists in New York and Chicago until as late as February, 1946—six years after the betatron's invention and four years after a working model had been built—were still trying unsuccessfully to get betatrons to carry on their work.

With the betatron it may be possible to concentrate a greater amount of cancer-destroying energy than is possible today with the best x-ray apparatus and to aid treatment of cancers deep within the body. Dr. Erich M. Uhlman, director of the Tumor Clinic at Michael Reese, told FP that treatment could not be perfected without more research—which requires more betatrons.

FP's informants believe the clue to GE's suppression of the betatron lies in its desire for exclusive control of all possible developments from the machine and possibly because it would compete with GE's own high voltage x-ray equipment.

Scientists credit the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers with forcing GE to release its stranglehold on the betatron. When GE charged the strike was holding up cancer research, UE answered that the company knew what was holding it up—and it wasn't the picketlines. The offer to Michael Reese followed.

PACKERS AID BLACK MARKET, UNION SAYS

By MEL FISKE

THE cloak of indignation adopted by the meat packing trust in its attacks on the black market—and OPA price controls — was zipped off this week by the CIO Packinghouse Workers, who charged packers with promoting and conspiring with black marketeers.

The union cited unshakable evidence that big meat packers have been making huge profits on by-products of cattle, sheep and hogs slaughtered by black market operators.

The packers make more money selling by-products than they can by slaughtering cattle and selling meats, union representatives said.

But the packers are also interested in smashing OPA price controls on meats so they can match the by-products profits, union officials asserted.

That's why they have fostered the growth of the black market by refusing to buy and slaughter millions of available cattle, sheep and hogs.

Union figures, supporting the claim that big packers refused to buy, revealed that only 200 head of cattle were slaughtered in Chicago last week as compared with 5,000 head eight months ago. In N. Y. at one plant, 400 head of cattle were slaughtered last week as against 1,200 a year ago. The drop is nation-wide, the union said.

Meanwhile, the House Agricultural Committee in Washington proposed to end meat subsidies on July 1, and give meat producers compensatory price increases which would raise consumer prices about 6c a pound.

How the giant meat packers have operated to develop a meat shortage, a black market and their attack on OPA price ceilings was explained by the union:

1. They cut down on cattle purchases for shipment to their slaughter houses. That gave small hole-in-the-wall slaughterers greater opportunities on the buying and selling market than when the big packers controled both markets.

2. The big packers maintained control over the by-product market and purchased hides, bones, tallow, grease and other by-products from black marketeers for resale at big profits.

3. Then, turning on their own creation, the big packers screamed about the black market and exaggerated black market operations to take the heat off their own refusal to buy and their own conspiracy with black marketeers.

4. They wailed against OPA price controls which they blamed for creating the black market.

5. Meanwhile, the big packers laid off 20,000 workers, saving millions in payrolls, and pocketed more millions in government subsidies "to cover increased costs."

The union called the underhand operations of the big packers "an act of unforgivable and monstrous greed." "It is incredible" that the situation should be allowed to exist while the Government is running the industry, the union said.

Meat packing plants were taken over by the Secretary of Agriculture on January 26. The Government is still operating agent.

"Throughout all this situation the Dept. of Agriculture remains silent," the union said. "At the time of the seizure of the industry by the government the department was charged by law with the responsibility to maintain the same conditions of work as existed prior to the strike.

"This they are failing to do and it is clear that the representatives of the large packing interests in the department are quite content to sit idly by while the attacks against the union, the OPA and the public continue."

The union offered three suggestions to government officials:

- To break the black market, the union proposed that cattle, hogs and sheep be allocated to slaughterers on the basis of their 1945 purchases.
- To open up slaughtering in the big plants and place the 20,000 workers back on their jobs, the union suggested that a conference of government, labor and management be called.
- And to protect the farmers, workers, consumers and entire public "against the depredations of the Meat Trust," the Union proposed that the Administration "consider seriously making the industry a public utility."

STEEL JOB LOSS LAID TO CPA

FULL responsibility for unemployment due to steel shortages among small fabricators will rest with the Civilian Production Agency. That was the warning issued this week by Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO Steelworkers.

In a letter to CPA Administrator John D. Small, Murray pointed out that on Feb. 21 the Steelworkers had urged CPA to reinstitute the allocation of semi-finished steel to non-integrated steel producers.

Murray cited facts on loss of production and resulting unemployment to prove that CPA's twice affirmed decision to rely on a "voluntary quota steel distribution plan" is wrong.

Murray said that:

1. For lack of 6,000 tons of pig iron a month, 2,000 steelworkers are idle in Newport, Ky., at the Andrews Steel Co., and the firm may be forced out of business unless it can secure supplies.

2. Workers in stove and refrigerator plants are being laid off or are suffering from curtailed operations for lack of steel.

3. A small steel consumer in New England employing 250 workers will have to lay off 150 for lack of steel.

"The iron and steel shortage is severe and will continue so for many months," Murray warned Small. "To protect small companies and to assure an orderly distribution of the short supply, allocations are essential."

CIO HAILS LATIN AMERICAN LABOR

"The CIO will continue to stand by the side of Latin-American labor in its struggle for economic and social freedom and for tangible recognition of its essential rights."

In these words, the CIO, through Chairman Joseph Potofsky of the Latin-American Affairs Committee, sent greetings to the workers of the country's southern neighbors on Pan-American Day, April 14.

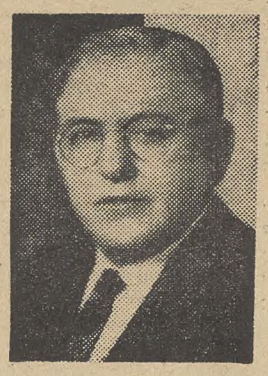
ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

USA Dist. 38 Dir. James G. Thimmes in California announces: O'Keefe & Merritt Co., CIO 177, AFL Metal Trades 114.

Richard G. Davidson, Acting Dir., USA Dist. 1, reports: SKF Industries, Philadelphia, CIO 1,733, against 872. The union scored the victory "in the face of many obstacles and every trick that the company was able to pull out of the bag."

USA Dist. Dir. William H. Crawford, Atlanta, reports: Scripto Manufacturing Co., Atlanta, Ga., CIO 139, against 124.



Geo. Medrick, USA Dist. Dir., reports: Textile Machine Works, Foundry Division Reading, Pa., CIO 297, against 26; Parish Pressed Steel employees, Reading, Pa. CIO 408, against 337.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., A. R. Hardesty, Dallas, Tex., advises: Two National Lead plants, Dallas, USA-CIO 14 to 0; 17 to 3. USA Rep. Stephen J. Gall did the organizing.

John B. Easton, CIO Reg. Dir., Charleston, W. Va., reports: Charleston Clay Products Co. in Charleston, CIO 21, no union 6.

Wm. B. Taylor, Dir. Org. UGCCWA-CIO, reports: Arctic Ice, Memphis, Tenn., CIO 66, against 5. UGCCWA Organizer Helen McClurg was in charge.

★ ★ ★

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Sylvester Graham, Montana, advises: Lovell Clay Products Co., Lovell, Wyoming, CIO 15, no union 12.

UOPWA-CIO, Social Service Employees' Union Local 19, New York City, advises: Clerical workers at the National Board of the YWCA, New York City, voted almost four to one for the CIO. A total of 149 clerical employes are eligible.

Edward Chevlin, URWADEA Intl. Rep., reports: Industrial Paper Stock Co., Kansas City, Mo., CIO 584, no union 5. This plant had been under AFL contract for five years.

CIO Reg. Dir. Joseph D. Cannon, Louisville, Ky., advises: Louisville Street Railway, CIO 529, company union 394. The campaign to organize these workers began about three years ago, finally culminating in this fine victory. Field Rep. Paris of the Transport Workers helped most effectively and TWUA Vice-President McMahon spent time here and assisted materially.

E. L. Sandefur, CIO Reg. Dir., Carolinas, reports: Armour Fertilizer Co., Wilmington, N. C., IUMSWA-CIO 126, against 21. Rep. B. E. Davis was in charge.

Nathan Spero, Reg. Dir., UERMWA-CIO, reports the following election victories: General Cable Co., Rome, N. Y., CIO defeated the IBEW in election involving 2,550 workers in the bargaining unit; Ingersoll-Rand, Painted Post, N. Y., 1,000 workers in bargaining unit; Canada Wire & Cable Co., Leaside, Ontario, Canada, 1,154 workers in bargaining unit; Vickers Inc., Detroit, Mich., 2,300 workers in bargaining unit; Sylvania Electric Products, Salem, Mass., 526 workers in bargaining unit.

★ ★ ★

Morris Muster, Intl. Pres., CIO Furniture Workers, reports following election victories: Peter De Witt Barrel Co., Grand Rapids, Mich. (cross-check), CIO 17, no union 7; Hoosier Desk Co., Jasper, Ind., CIO 85, no union 31; Northern Wood Products, Holland, Mich. (cross-check), CIO 140, no union 60; Jasper Wood Products, Jasper, Ind., CIO 111, no union 98; Sheboygan Desk Co., Sheboygan, Wis., CIO 54, no union 8.

UFW Rep. W. L. Carson, Memphis, Tenn., reports: Limeberry Cabinet Co., Memphis, CIO 28, no union 8.

E. L. Sandefur, CIO Reg. Dir., Carolinas, advises: Marsh Furniture Co., High Point, N. C., CIO 76, against 49; and Thomasville Chair Co., Thomasville, N. C., CIO 817, against 335. UFWA Intl. Rep. A. William Bell was in charge of this fine victory, ably assisted by Reps. Helms, Woodall, Pike, Hiatt and the CIO Regional Director. Congratulations to all participating in this real victory in face of the vicious publicity resorted to by the opposition.

★ ★ ★

The writer had the pleasure of attending and addressing the First Constitutional Convention of the Utility Workers Union of America, in session at the Breakers Hotel, Atlantic City, N. J. They had a splendid convention attended by about 387 delegates and laid plans for an intensified organizing drive. This union made its contribution to CIO's Southern Organizing Campaign.

Joseph A. Fisher was elected president; William Pachler, secretary-treasurer; Harold J. Straub, vice-president and director of organization, and William Munger, vice-president. In addition the following were elected board members from their respective regions: Irving Koons, Patrick McGrath, Reginald Brown, James Dougherty, and Garland Sanders. Three board members-at-large were elected, as follows: Edward T. Shedlock, Martin O'Dell and Edward Marsine.

The writer was elected by the convention as advisor to the Utility Workers Union of America.

FURRIERS WIN 17 TO 40c

An average hourly increase of 21c was negotiated for 11,000 N. Y. City fur workers in an agreement reached by the CIO Fur & Leather Workers and the Associated Fur & Coat Trimmers Mfrs. last week.

Ben Gold, president of the union, and Irving Potash, manager of the Furriers Joint Council of N. Y., said that in addition to the wage increases the fur manufacturers agreed to pay 2½% of their weekly payroll for a health and retirement fund.

The hourly increases of 8½% range from 17c to 40c and over while the 2½% payment will amount to about $1 million annually, the union officials said.

WINS SPARK CIO DRIVE

NATL. Labor Relations Board election victories in Southern towns sparked CIO's organizing drive this week.

In Thomasville, N. C., the CIO Furniture Workers won bargaining rights at the Thomasville Chair Co. with an 817-335 victory.

In High Point, N. C., Marsh Furniture Co. workers chose the Furniture Workers to represent them by 76-49.

Sugar workers in the Franklin, La., plant of Sterling Sugars, Inc., selected CIO as bargaining agent by 143-54.

In Wilmington, N. C., a 126-21 victory was scored by the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers at the Armour Fertilizer Co., and in Henderson, N. C., the CIO Stone Workers won at Tungsten Mining Corp. by 98-36.

A 139-124 victory was achieved by the CIO Steelworkers in the Scripto Manufacturing Co. plant, Atlanta. Ga.

A three-year organizational struggle in Louisville, Ky., ended last week when the CIO Transport Workers were chosen by Louisville Street Railway Workers in a 529-394 victory over a company union.

In Memphis, Tenn., two CIO victories were chalked up: a 28-8 win at the Lineberry Cabinet Co., and, by the CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, a 66-5 score at Arctic Ice Co.

In Dallas, Tex., workers at two National Lead Co. plants selected the Steelworkers as bargaining representatives.

Charleston Clay Products Co. workers in Charleston, W. Va., chose the CIO, 21-6.

The CIO prepared, at the same time, to aid the organizing drive with the scheduling of three educational conferences.

On April 27-28, the CIO Dept. of Research & Education will sponsor a conference in Fort Worth, Tex., for workers in La., Okla., Ark., Colo., and Tex. On May 3-4, another conference in Chapel Hill, N. C., will be held for workers in Va., Tenn., N. C., S. C., Ga., Fla., Ala., and Miss.

CIO Packinghouse Workers will confer in a district meeting in Moultrie, Ga., on April 20-21. Delegates will be from Ga., Ala., and Tenn.

HIT SHIPYARD PAY WELSHING

A strike of 75,000 shipbuilding workers loomed in 18 shipyards this week after the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers filed strike notices following government refusal to force the shipyards to pay a wage award already agreed upon.

Pres. John Green of the union laid responsibility for the strike on the companies' refusal to put into effect an 18c hourly increase retroactive to Dec. 4, 1945, already approved by 46 other shipyards.

The increase was written into four zone standard agreements which government procurement agencies, management and labor signed.

"While we do not desire to be forced by the employers into an industrial strike, our members refuse to be stalled any further in obtaining the wage increases to which they are entitled," the union said.

IT'S A 'CRUSADE'—MURRAY

CIO's Southern organizing campaign, to begin early in May, "will be a straight, clean-cut, pure, unadulterated campaign to organize that territory, to establish collective bargaining and to elevate the standard of living," CIO Pres. Philip Murray emphasized in Detroit this week.

He referred to the hundreds of thousands of unorganized textile, lumber, chemical, white-collar and agricultural workers as groups that would benefit from CIO union organization, and said that one of the aims of the drive would be to equalize workers earnings without regard to the part of the country in which they are employed.

Speaking at dedicatory ceremonies in the new $70,000 Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial Hall built by Local 1299 of the CIO Steelworkers, Murray described the drive as "almost a holy crusade." He said it would lead to the "economic emancipation" of a million workers in the South and have many by-products in advancing democracy and equality of opportunity.

NAME ATLANTA DRIVE HDQ.

PLANS FOR CIO's biggest organizing campaign, to unionize unorganized workers throughout the South, were whipped into shape at a meeting of the advisory committee in Washington this week.

Headquarters for what will be known as the CIO Organizing Committee are to be opened in Atlanta, Ga., it was decided, and the organizing work will begin without delay under the direction of Van A. Bittner, who will coordinate the activities of CIO organizers already working in the South and add to his staff new organizers drawn primarily from among the Southern workers.

The appointment of Jack Kroll, vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, as an assistant director of the drive was announced.

Bittner, who has headed many successful organizing campaigns in the past in the steel, packinghouse and mining industries and has had much experience in Southern organizing work, emphasized that the campaign will concentrate on straight union organization, to enroll workers in CIO ranks and to better their wages and conditions through collective bargaining.

Assisting Bittner in the direction of the drive, in addition to Kroll, will be Sherman Dalrymple, former president of the Rubber Workers, as secretary-treasurer of the CIO Organizing Committee, and Vice-Pres. George Baldanzi of the Textile Workers, as assistant director—whose appointments were announced earlier.

A third assistant director, to be named by the Auto Workers, will be appointed later.

The advisory committee which prepared the general plans for the drive is headed by CIO Vice-Pres. Allan S. Haywood, chairman, and David J. McDonald, secretary, and includes leaders of CIO's major international unions.

BREWERS VOTE ON JOINING CIO

ONE OF the oldest industrial unions in the country, the United Brewery Workers, this week ordered a membership referendum on affiliating with CIO.

The Union bolted the AFL a few years ago after three other AFL unions began extensive raids against the industrial organization.

Over 225 delegates to a conference voted the referendum after hearing the terms of CIO and AFL proposals made to the executive board of the Brewery Workers.

The CIO proposal, made by CIO Vice-Pres. Allen S. Haywood, gave the Brewery Workers organizational aid, complete autonomy and full jurisdiction, except in commercial alcohol which would be subject to negotiations with the CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers.

The AFL said the union could return under terms of a 1933 convention decision which split the union up among three other AFL affiliates.

WHITE COLLARS ARE HOT

WHITE collar workers throughout the nation were getting hot under the collar in their organizing, electioneering and negotiating activities this week.

In California and Washington, members of the CIO Office & Professional Workers put the finishing touches to an organizing drive among 800 Metropolitan industrial insurance agents. The Natl. Labor Relations Board will conduct an election among the agents beginning April 17.

At the same time, the union is negotiating contracts for Metropolitan agents in 11 states and Canada.

The Technical and Scientific division of UOPWA also signed two agreements covering technical workers at the Midvale Co. in Philadelphia, and Radio Corp. of America at Camden, N. J.

An 18½c hourly increase across the board, featured the Midvale contract and followed $6 to $7 weekly increases gained last November and retroactive to 1944. A 17½c increase plus retroactive pay that brings the increase total to 21½c was gained for the 600 engineers and draftsmen at RCA.

CIO Conventions

UTILITY UNION FORMED

THE CIO Utility Workers Union, with a membership of 50,000, held its first convention at Atlantic City last week and laid plans to organize the estimated half-million unaffiliated workers in the light, heat, power, gas, steam, water and related industries. Over 270 delegates attended.

The newest CIO international union was formed by merging the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee and the former affiliates of the independent Utility Workers Union throughout the nation.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice president and director of organization, who directed the activities of the organizing committee and served as adviser to the new union, set the keynote of the convention when he expressed the hope that within a few years the union would have 500,000 members.

Thanking the Utility Workers for pledging $5,000 to the CIO Organizing Campaign, Sec. Treas. David J. McDonald of the CIO Steelworkers declared, "We are going into the South with the same determination as we went into utilities and with the spirit of the early days of the CIO. We must first get the workers into the unions before we can destroy the citadel of reaction in the South."

CIO Sec. - Treas. James B. Carey said that to lead the people of this nation and the world to peace and prosperity and avoid another depression, the UWUA should join with the rest of the CIO in organizing the unorganized, particularly in the South.

All top officers of the union, which CIO Pres. Philip Murray named until a convention could be held, were elected. They are: Joseph A. Fisher, president; William J. Pachler, secretary-treasurer; Harold J. Straub, vice-president and director of organization (all of N. Y.); and William Munger, Dayton, Ohio, vice-president.

In addition to the officers, the executive board—enlarged by two members—now consists of Patrick McGrath, Reginald Brown, Irving Koons, Garland Sanders, James Daugherty, Martin O'Dell, Edward T. Shedlock, and Edward Marsine.

Haywood was elected as adviser of the union, in which capacity he has been serving.

The Convention voted, after discussion, to retain a clause in the constitution barring from membership Communists, and Nazis and Fascists.

Resolutions branded the action of Governor Tuck of Virginia for threatening to enroll striking utility workers in the State militia as "characteristic of Fascist dictators," and urged election or appointment of UWUA members to public service commissions.

A resolution urging cancellation of plans to move the Army Hospital from Atlantic City was adopted after Peter Sikora, N. Y. City UWUA member suffering leg wounds, was wheeled to the front of the auditorium to make a stirring appeal.

The Consolidated Edison employes, largest group in UWUA, have passed through all forms of unionism, and in the words of Pres. Fisher and Sec.-Treas. Pachler are convinced that "the CIO is the only organization that can give the utility workers the kind of representation they deserve."

The Consolidated Edison workers first formed a company union, which became part of the AFL Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in July, 1937, when the company signed a contract with that organization without the consent of the workers.

During the whole period that the union was in the AFL union, the intl. executive board invariably decided in favor of Local 3 —the biggest unit in the AFL union—in jurisdictional disputes. Tiring of seeing their local decimated, the Consolidated Edison employes withdrew from the Brotherhood in January, 1940, setting up an independent union.

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey administers the oath of office to leaders of the CIO Utility Workers Union at its first convention at Atlantic City. L. to r.: Harold J. Straub, vice-president and director of organization; Sec.-Treas. William J. Pachler; Pres. Joseph A. Fisher; Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice-president and director of organization and adviser to UWUA, and Carey. William Munger, UWUA vice-president, and other members of the union's executive board, were sworn in at the same time.

WIN 65c BASE FOR 50,000 IN TEXTILE

Minimum wages for 50,000 Southern textile workers have been raised from 55c to 65c in wage increases negotiated by the CIO Textile Workers Union.

The fourth regional Wage Stabilization Board approved the 65c minimum, a 10c across-the-board increase and varying increases up to 10c above the 65c rate for approximately 30,000 workers of 22 companies in Ga., Ala., Tenn., N. C., and S. C.

The 65c minimum and a 15c hourly increase will add about $4 million to the pay of 10,000 workers at Dan River and Riverdale Mills in Danville, Va., largest cotton mill in the South. They also won $700,000 in back pay.

Similar increases were won at Cotton Textile and duPont mills in Va.

500,000 GOAL SET BY BARBERS

THE CIO Barbers & Beauty Culturists Union set the machinery in motion this week to organize a half a million workers after Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice-president and director of organization, promised CIO cooperation.

To carry out the program the convention voted to boost per capita payments to its national office from 40 to 50c and increase the union's share of the initiation fees from $1 to $2.

New top officers were chosen to lead the union. John Tartamella, president since its foundation, and Sec.-Treas. P. Charles Di Neri declined to seek office again. Elected to office were: Ernest Hebert, N. Y., president; William Elchesen, Cleveland, vice-president, replacing Joseph Gugliotta, Brooklyn; and Lilyan Moscowitz, Brooklyn, secretary-treasurer.

Board members are: Adolph Rosenbaum and Joseph Gugliotta, new members; Malvina Freedman, Abraham Greenwald, Edward W. Holden and Peter A. Sessa, incumbents.

Resolutions called for severance of relations with the Franco government, condemned the House Wood Committee for its persecution of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee,urged the U. S. to take the lead in expulsion of Argentina from the UN, voted support of the Wagner-Murray Dingell health bill and pledged to fight for Negro rights, condemning the lynch terror in Columbia, Tenn.

Speakers included Sec,-Treas. Saul Mills of the N. Y. City CIO Council; Peter Moselle, N. Y. State CIO regional director, and Benjamin Fielding, N. Y. City License Commissioner.

ASK 5-DAY WEEK

CIO State, County & Municipal Workers in N. Y. last week urged Governor Dewey to re-establish the four-week vacation and adopt a five-day week for state workers.

ACA PLANS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

THE CIO American Communications Assn. at its eighth convention, held this week in Brooklyn approved a program for extending its organization based on a campaign for better wages and working conditions throughout the communications industry.

In proposing the program ACA Pres. Joseph P. Selly called for higher wages, the 30-hour week, pension and benefit plans, health insurance, hospitalization, longer vacations, improved disability and sick benefits.

The 150 delegates included representatives from Western Union in N. Y. City, Int. Radio & Cables Co., merchant marine radio officers and employes of independent broadcasting stations, and the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. and commercial airlines.

The convention heard Dr. Hugh C. Wolfe, professor of physics, City College, N. Y., warn of the threat of the atomic bomb to world peace.

Delegates demanded, in a resolution, that atomic energy be placed under civilian control in the U. S. and under United Nations control for the world. They branded the recent Canadian spy scare as a "political move intended to provide the basis for full control of atomic energy by the military."

Declaring fallacious the idea that the U. S. could keep the bomb a secret, Dr. Wolfe attacked the May-Johnson Bill because it was based on that false assumption and praised the McMahon Bill as a contribution to the "development of atomic energy for peacetime uses."

Resolutions called for the "rededication to the progressive legacy of President Roosevelt"; for severance of relations by the State Dept. with Franco Spain, and for placing the Spanish issue on the agenda of the United Nations Security Council.

The convention also protested the murder of 10 outstanding Republican leaders by the Franco government.

It's Awful, Says Boss

PAY WON'T RISE UNTIL CLERKS ORGANIZE

FOR two bucks a month, Prentice-Hall, Inc., this week offered to hold (by mail) the hand of any employer "threatened" with organization of his white collar employes.

The N. Y. City firm, specializing in labor-management advice, warned that "we've seldom seen surer signs of a brewing storm."

"You'll see that this attempt to organize salaried employes was bound to come," P-H added.

"The ability of the unions to obtain substantial increases for factory labor has made a profound impression on clerical personnel. The latter are now highly receptive to the propaganda that 'salaries won't rise until clerks organize'."

The P-H letter, signed by Pres. Richard P. Ettinger, told the bosses that they should swap a few ideas on their common problems . . . "what they did when they first detected organizing . . . when to discuss it with employes . . . how to modify wage and hour demands . . . etc."

Getting in plugs for a couple of P-H publications guaranteed to take the curse off employe demands, Ettinger wrote:

"In this 'arsenal' in print you will find such ammunition as:

- "What to do when a labor organizer approaches your employes.
- "How department heads and their assistants can help keep labor peace.
- "How to prove a salary demand excessive.
- "Four new ways to dispel personnel grievances.
- "Three economical ways to boost employe morale (CIO NEWS emphasis!).
- "Three successful methods of collective bargaining.
- "What proposals and concessions to bring to the bargaining table.

"I'm glad," said Ettinger, "to invite you to join us in this mutual defense of management's rights. As wise old Ben Franklin said: 'We must all hang together, or assuredly, we'll all hang separately'."

This week, the union that Ettinger is worried about—the CIO Office & Professional Workers—took time out to wish him good hanging.

It's not all work and no play during the month term at Highlander. Here some UAW-CIO members battle it out on the volley ball court.

[illegible] problems class meets on Highlander School lawn to discuss a study of discrimination in the South. They found that their union locals were one of the best answers to Jim Crow.

ADDING THE HOW-TO-DO-IT

THE "know-how" of translating the CIO's organization and political action program into action is the keynote of the annual leadership training school sponsored by Southern CIO Regional Directors at Highlander Folk School in Monteagle, Tenn.

Local union leaders from Virginia to Texas will spend a month at the Third Southern CIO School from May 6 to June 2.

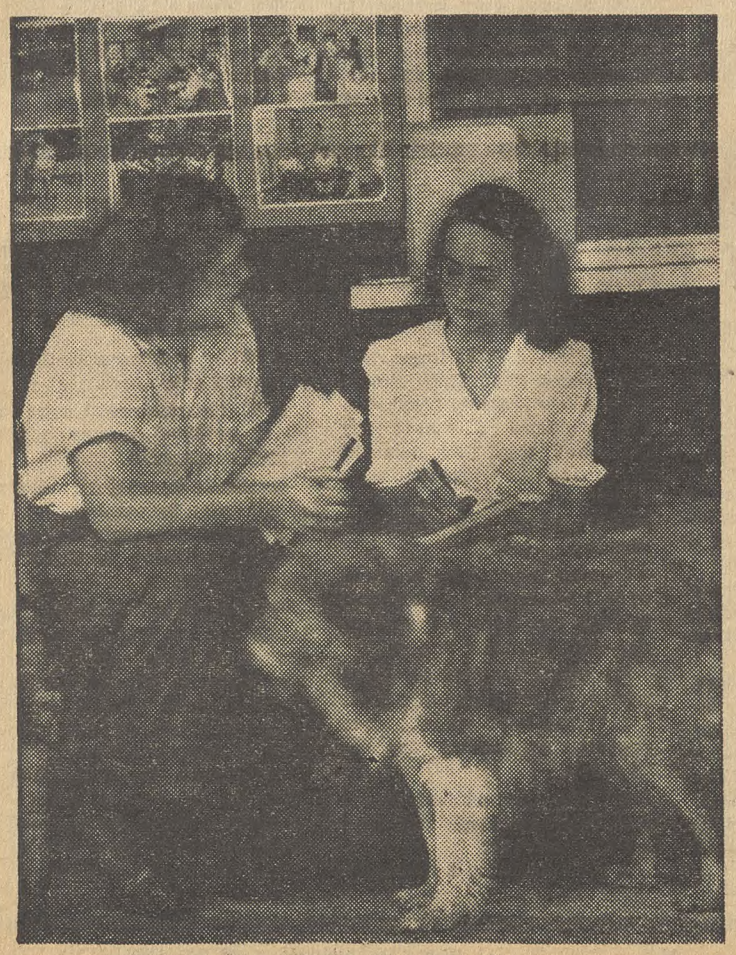
Organizing techniques, contract negotiations, development of strong steward systems, history of the CIO, CIO non-discrimination policy and political action are subjects to be studied.

Practice in parliamentary law, public speaking, chairing meetings and working through committees is gained in the student council, which directs the day-to-day program.

The Executive Board of the Tennessee State CIO Council has contributed four scholarships to the 1946 school. Other Industrial Union Councils and National and International Unions are contributing to the overhead cost of the term.

Board, room and tuition for the month is $50 for each student.

Two Highlander students relax on the school terrace to swap lecture notes and opinions.



Movie Writers Ask:

LET'S HAVE LESS FAIRY TALES

HOLLYWOOD motion picture writers last week tossed a challenge into the laps of organized workers. The Hollywood Writers Mobilization asked unionists to demand mature motion pictures that would not insult the adult mind and that would deal honestly with the problems of the common man.

The challenge was made at a Hollywood movie clinic organized to diagnose technical and social problems of American motion pictures.

Film colony personalities and box office public at the clinic decided that:

1. Techniques of slickness and glamor in American movies do not compensate for the loss of more honest values.

2. Escapism may have its place in motion pictures, as in literature, but the American movie public is forced to escape too often into a much too contrived never-never land of prettily enameled fairy tales.

3. A huge potential demand exists in America for mature, courageous movies that coincide with the experience of the American people—and that when this demand becomes articulate and organized, it will upgrade American movie standards.

ON THE AIR

Give vets a break in frequency modulation (FM) broadcasting, a Senate Small Business Committee report urged this week.

Addressed to the Federal Communications Commission, the report warned that if present practices are continued, all the desirable FM frequencies may be given out before veterans get a chance to compete with other applicants.

The report, which was signed by Sen. James E. Murray, said that FM "makes it possible to correct tendencies toward concentration of control which were manifesting themselves in the broadcasting industry."

★ ★ ★

CIO will be on the air with farmers and veterans at 1:15 EST, Sunday, April 21, on NBC's America United program.

Giving views on compulsory military training in peace will be: CIO Education & Research Dir. Kermit Eby, Legislative Rep. Fred Bailey of the Natl. Grange and an official from the American Legion.

MOVIES WORTH SEEING

NEW PICTURES

FROM THIS DAY FORWARD with Joan Fontaine and Mark Stevens is about a vet on a job hunt. The whole setting takes place in a U. S. Employment Office, where the vet waits in line for an interview. Flashing back to the vet are previous job hunts and jobs, and all the hopes and plans and heartbreaks that come with a job or joblessness.

JOURNEY TOGETHER is a British film about the Royal Air Force. It is semi-documentary in character and was produced, acted, written and directed by members of the RAF.

TOMORROW IS FOREVER with Claudette Colbert and Orson Welles is unbelievable and sentimental, despite some excellent touches. It talks a good bit about anti-fascism.

A SCANDAL IN PARIS with George Sanders and Signe Hasso is a period satire on the story of Vidocq, the one-time police commissioner of Paris, who had an intimate and personal knowledge of every kind of crime and intrigue.

THE BRIDE WORE BOOTS with Barbara Stanwyck is a nonsense piece about horses and husbands.

VACATION FROM MARRIAGE, also British, uncovers the drab lives of a clerk and his wife in their metamorphosis during the war.

ROAD TO UTOPIA is frankly out for laughs. With Bob Hope and Bing Crosby, it does come across.

BEST BETS

OPEN CITY, an Italian production, produced the day after Rome was liberated, about the heroic Italian underground. One of the best pictures to come out of the war.

THE LAST CHANCE, semi-documentary and multilingual, is the dramatic story of refugees who fled before Hitler. The Frenchman, the Pole, the Yugoslav, the Dutchman, and the German. Chief characters are an English officer and an American Sergeant, who speak English and carry along the dialogue of the many nationalities they come in contact with.

MARIE LOUISE tells of French children who are given a brief furlough from war in the Swiss Alps.

LOVE ON THE DOLE, an English production dealing with the blighted areas and periods of prewar England.

A WALK IN THE SUN, about our boys from the Texas infantry who took a brief walk in the sun to blow up a bridge and take a farmhouse, and the thoughts and hopes and dreams that went through their minds on that morning walk. Beautifully done.

THE LOST WEEKEND, the story of a dypso, and what happened to him one sopping weekend. Ray Milland does a superb acting job.

SPELLBOUND, a murder mystery plus a psychoanalytical angle, with Ingrid Bergman as the analyst, and Gregory Peck as her lover-amnesia victim. Good mystery melodrama.

FDR'S FOREIGN POLICY URGED TO WIN PEACE

MEETING during a period of tense international relations, 700 delegates attending a Win-The-Peace Conference in Washington April 12-15 urged adoption by this country of domestic and foreign relations policies in line with those of the late Pres. Roosevelt.

The delegates represented civic, labor and liberal organizations in all parts of the country. They spent a busy weekend hearing addresses by government and labor leaders, passing resolutions and interviewing Congressmen.

From Sen. Glen Taylor (D., Ida.) the delegates heard that "we are not here to dream up a new foreign policy capable of assuring the nation's security and the peace of the world. We have such a policy ready at hand. It is the legacy left to the American people by Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Sen. Pepper (D., Fla.) talked frankly: "There is war talk, or we wouldn't be here. It is in the papers, it comes from the mouths of high officials, it comes from the people themselves." Big Three unity, molded during the hot pressure of war, must not be lost or the peace of the world will be sacrificed, Pepper warned.

Rep. John Coffee (D., Wash.) told the meeting that "the time has come for definite, positive, democratic action on Spain," and he advocated an end to "diplomatic and commercial relations" with the "Axis-created, Nazi-Falange regime" of Francisco Franco.

Col. Evans Carlson, USMC, former chief of a famed raider outfit, and Paul Robeson, noted singer, were elected co-chairman of the permanent organization. Elected among 73 members of a national committee were Leo Krzycki, Amalgamated Clothing Workers official and head of the American Slav Congress; Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak, CIO Electrical Workers; Elmer Benson, head of Natl. Citizens PAC; Bishop Edward L. Parsons of San Francisco; and Rev. Guy E. Shipler, editor of the Churchman.

Soldiers and a representative of the CIO Auto Workers this week call on Reps. Price (D. Ill.), Huber (D. Ohio) and McGlinchey (D. Pa.) to urge that special cars be built for amputees. They are, left to right: Price, Huber; Irving Richter, national legislative representative of the CIO Auto Workers; Pfc. Donald J. Murray, Boston, Mass.; Cpl. Walter Bernstein and S/Sgt. John Georgopulus, both of New York City; Pfc. Frank Monico, chairman of the War Amputees Car Commission, New York City, and McGlinchey.

CIO BACKS LEAVE BILL

WITH 160 signatures out of a necessary 218 on a petition to get the Rogers bill (HR 4051) on the floor of the house, prospects were bright this weekend for getting House action on the measure to give terminal leave pay to enlisted men.

At present, commissioned officers are paid for accumulated leave on their discharge, but enlisted men do not receive such consideration. Under the Rogers bill, each enlisted man would be credited with two and a half days for each month in service, provided he did not receive a furlough.

The bill has not been reported out by the Home Military Affairs Committee because the Budget Bureau, disregarding the present outlay for officers' terminal leave pay, says the cost would be prohibitive.

The CIO Veterans Committee this week wrote Congressmen urging them to sign the petition and received favorable replies from approximately 75 of them.

More pressure is needed to get the measure on the floor and passed. CIO members, whether they are veterans or not, should write or wire their Representatives.

* * *

The Army board to study the caste system, which last week recessed after hearing witnesses behind closed doors, this week finally replied to a letter from Meyer Bernstein, representative of the CIO Veterans Committee, asking that he be allowed to testify.

The board's reply can be classified as a brush-off. Although the CIO request to testify was made March 19, the day announcement of appointment of the board by Sec. of War Patterson appeared in the newspapers, the board's letter said that it had arrived after the "schedule of witnesses" was completed.

GI AMPUTEES ASK FOR SPECIAL CARS

WAVING his empty pants leg, Pfc. Frank Monico of Walter Reed Hospital in Washington this week told Reps. Price (D. Ill.), Huber (D. Ohio) and McGlinchey (D. Pa.): "Congressmen, all you gotta do is wave your stump and you get an artificial leg. But that ain't enough for us."

Monico had lost his leg in Germany. He and his three buddies were part of a War Amputees Car Committee from Walter Reed and England General Hospital in Atlantic City, and were demanding specially built cars for amputees. They were fighting also to keep the Atlantic City hospital open for a few more months. They were polite but firm, and plenty militant.

Here were your "typical Americans"—Pfc. Don Murray, Cpl. Walter Bernstein, a garment worker; Pfc. Frank Monico, a machine operator "about to join the CIO when I was inducted"; and Sgt. John Georgopulos.

The men had come to the UAW-CIO office in Washington for help. As the servicemen moved through the corridors of the Capitol, talking to Representatives and Senators, Army and Veterans Administration officials, they all joined in praises for CIO—"the best friend we got," said Murray, as the others nodded their heads.

UE-CIO BOARD WARNS OF WAR

A sharp warning that American foreign policy is directed against the suppression of common peoples' liberties and is a threat to world peace was issued this week by the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Executive Board, meeting in N. Y. City.

The Board urged CIO President Murray to initiate a meeting of the World Federation of Trade Unions, in the U. S., to take action on the threat to peace.

Lashing out at "the polltax-Republican big business alliance," the UE Board said:

"Their policy is directed to protect the cartellists of Germany, the emperor and ruling class of Japan, to maintain the colonial slavery of nearly half the world's peoples and to suppress or harass every effort of any people, anywhere, to set up their own peoples' governments in their fight for liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

LET VA RUN HOSPITAL—CIO

Acting together with leading veterans' organizations, including the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Disabled American Veterans, the Greater N. Y. CIO Council this week passed a resolution demanding that Governor Dewey transfer the military hospital in Staten Island to the Veterans Administration.

Council delegates unanimously passed a resolution pointing out that veterans are now suffering widespread distress because of their inability to obtain medical and surgical treatment in the N. Y. area. The N. Y. CIO Veterans Committee will present the Governor with petitions signed by 200,000 persons, demanding that the request of Veterans Administrator Bradley for the use of the Halloran General Hospital for a period of at least two years, be granted.

Under present plans of the State, the hospital, which is about to be abandoned by the U. S. Army & Navy, would be turned back for civilian psychiatric use.

CALL CANNERY MEET

To find a basis on which the Northern California cannery dispute may be settled, Labor Sec. Lewis Schwellenbach this week called parties involved in the dispute to a meeting in Washington April 17.

Aside from representatives of the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers and the AFL Teamsters, the conference will include attorneys for the CIO, AFL, California growers, NLRB, and Sen. Sheridan Downey (D, Cal.).

The dispute involves jurisdiction over the state's cannery workers, both CIO and AFL unions claiming recognition as bargaining agents.

URGES LOANS TO AID EUROPE

Loans to the hard-pressed nations of Europe, fullest possible support of UNRRA, and the emigration of 100,000 Jewish refugees were recommended this week by Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers as a step towards clearing up some of the worst problems of the Old World.

Speaking at a United Jewish Appeal fund-raising confab, Hillman told of his experiences as a member of the world labor mission to Germany. Of the Jewish refugees, he said, "almost without exception they were living from day to day with a single thought, a single hope —to emigrate to Palestine."

The CIO union official called upon the British Labor Government to "abrogate the infamous White Paper of its Tory predecessor" and permit immediate entry of 100,000 Jews into Palestine now living in displaced person camps throughout the Reich.

Concerning UNRRA, Hillman urged the acceptance, if necessary, of the "minor inconveniences of food rationing again, in order to supply the world with the food that may spell the difference between life and death for millions."

Tomorrow's Citizens — By Rose H. Alschuler

HOW FUSSY ARE YOU?

Some parents, themselves unhappy, would like to live their children's lives instead of their own. They want their children to be and to have everything of which they feel they've been deprived. They over-emphasize their children's food, clothes and manners and they run the children ragged fussing over them. Their children tend to be babyish, selfish, uncooperative and to get along badly with other people. As the children go on in school, they become ever more careless, disinterested, withdrawn and unfriendly.

Lib. of Congress—Rothstein for OWI

SEES SOVIET PLAN FOR CHILDREN AS CHALLENGE

Throwing out as a challenge to this country the effort the Soviet Union is making for its youth under its new five-year plan, Katharine F. Lenroot, Chief of the Children's Bureau, U. S. Labor Dept., this week called for "adoption of measures on behalf of our own children that will prepare them for living in tomorrow's world in line with democracy's needs."

She spoke before the Georgia Conference of Social Welfare and the Tri-state Confrence of Orphanage Workers at Macon.

"Under Russia's new five-year plan," Miss Lenroot said, "technical schools will be expanded to accommodate 1,200,000 students, and expenditures for education and culture will be increased to two and one-quarter times the prewar total. Cannot the U. S. make a comparable effort?"

The Children's Bureau Chief stressed in particular the need for:

Federal aid for education, including some form of student aid and scholarships, to the end that "democracy's need for universal access to an education can be fulfilled."

LITTLE HELP GIVEN DEAF CHILDREN

One million children in the U. S., it is estimated, have impaired hearing, yet compared with the widespread need for case finding, diagnosis and treatment, relatively little is being done to enable these children to overcome a "very real life handicap," the Children's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor, reported this week.

Seven states — California, Indiana, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania and Washington — have effected laws requiring hearing tests for school children.

BIOLOGY MADE REAL

A longer but more definitive book for 7-8-year-old children, Egg to Chick (Intl. Publishers) would be the first lesson in biology. That would not excite the imagination of the children as does this book, written by Millicent E. Selsam and illustrated by Frances Wells.

The story tells what happens from the time an egg is laid until the chick pecks its way out of the shell. Each change in the embryo is an event which reaches a climax when the chick begins to run around the barnyard for its food.

15 OF 100 PAY TOO MUCH RENT

The OPA Labor Office this week reported that about 15 out of every 100 union members are paying higher than OPA rent ceilings.

OPA gives the following tips for seeing that you are not paying more rent than you should:

Find out OPA legal rent from your OPA Area Rent Office and pay no more.

Report any overcharges to OPA. A tenant cannot be evicted for refusing to pay higher than legal rent.

Consult OPA Area Rent Office when threatened with eviction.

BEG PARDON!

The mouse that "won't cross a picket line" is a creature of the UE News, artist Fred Wright informed The CIO NEWS this week. The gag drawing appeared in the April 1 issue, erroneously credited to FE News. Sorry!

ARE YOU LISTENING?

Labor - USA programs, sponsored by CIO, on timely issues of the day

Polltax, Atomic Energy, Minimum Wages

Keep An Ear Tuned For Coming Programs

- PAC, April 20
- Housing
- Farm-Labor Relations
- The Nation's Health
- CIO in the South

You'll Hear— Good Music, Fast-Moving Dramatic Sketches

LABOR-USA

Sponsored by CIO

ABC Network

EVERY SATURDAY

6:45 P.M., EST

EQUAL PAY IS LAW IN BRAZIL

WHILE CIO and other progressive organizations are seeking to pass the equal-pay-for-equal-work bill, Brazilian women can point to the Natl. Labor Code requiring that "equal wages shall be paid for all work of equal value without discrimination because of sex."

This fact is contained in a new pamphlet, "Women Workers in Brazil," which contains the results of a three-month survey made in 1942-43 by Miss Mary M. Cannon, chief of the Inter-American Division of the Women's Bureau, U. S. Labor Dept.

Neither marriage nor pregnancy can be a basis for discharging a woman worker in Brazil. She is not allowed to work during six weeks before and six weeks after childbirth, and in her absence, she must be paid her full salary based on her average earnings in the last six months. The right to return to her old job after childbirth is guaranteed.

"Women's organizations in Brazil, like those of other South American countries, have been largely charitable and educational," the bulletin says.

An outstanding example of another type, though, is the Brazilian Federation for the Advancement of Women, which was started in 1922 and was most active in securing women's civil and political rights.

ACTION PROTECTS VOTE

Swift and militant action by the CIO Natl. Maritime Union last week forced the Isthmian Steamship Co. to rescind orders preventing Labor Board officials from posting election notices aboard its ships, and the poll has been proceeding according to schedule.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

SEALS - STAMPS

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS

UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES · MEMBERSHIP · EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS · ADVERTISING · LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1639-49 W. Evergreen Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C. I. O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 4600 West Parker Ave., Chicago 39, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

FOLLOWING IN SECRET, JIM AND WOODY SEE MICKEY VISIT STEVE DENTON, SON OF THE OWNER OF THE ROTOR CONSTRUCTION PLANT. THEY OVERHEAR MICKEY CHARGE DENTON WITH BEING THE HEAD OF THE UNION-WRECKING GANG, AND THEN PROMISE THAT HE WILL EXPOSE THE PLOT. BUT JUST THEN DENTON SIGNALS HIS HENCHMEN WHO ATTACK MICKEY...

YOU WON'T GET OUT OF HERE ALIVE, MICKEY!

HEY... HEY... JIM...OOF!

TAKE HIM DOWN TO THE BASEMENT, BOYS. I WANT HIM KEPT HERE FOR A WHILE--- THEN WE'LL GET RID OF JIM BARRY'S KID BROTHER... AND BLAME THE UNION FOR HIS DEATH!

OKAY, BOSS.

MEANWHILE, OUTSIDE IN DENTON'S GARDEN...

BUT JIM---! MICKEY NEEDS HELP... HE... HE EVEN CALLED OUT YOUR NAME AND--- KEEP QUIET UNTIL WE GET AWAY FROM HERE...

ULP! HOW DID MICKEY KNOW YOU WERE NEAR...

I TOLD YOU I WAS BEGINNING TO GET SOME IDEAS... WE WOULDN'T LISTEN TO HIM WHEN HE CAME TO MY OFFICE SO MICKEY HAD TO FIND ANOTHER WAY OF TELLING US WHAT HE HAD TO SAY!

YOU MEAN--- HE KNEW WE WERE FOLLOWING HIM AND PURPOSELY LED US TO DENTON'S HOUSE?

MICKEY WAS HOPING WE'D BE LISTENING OUTSIDE THE WINDOW... THAT'S WHY HE GAVE SO MANY DETALLS OF STEVE DENTON'S PLOT...

WOW! THAT KID IS HOT STUFF! AND WE'VE GOT THE GOODS TO BLOW DENTON SKY-HIGH---

NOT SO FAST, WOODY. WE'VE GOT A LOT OF WORK TO DO BEFORE WE CAN EXPOSE DENTON-- AND DON'T FORGET... MICKEY IS BEING HELD BY DENTON'S THUGS...

YEH... AND THEY'RE GOING TO KNOCK HIM OFF...

UNITED LABOR PRESS

GEE... WE GOTTA GET MICKEY FREE BEFORE THEY DO SOMETHING TO HIM... BUT HOW?

THAT'S WHAT I'M GOING TO TAKE CARE OF RIGHT NOW... I'M CALLING FRED COLLINS OVER FOR A CONFERENCE...

NOT LONG AFTER...

HYA, JIM... WHAT'S THE HURRY CALL FOR? YOU SOUNDED LIKE SOMEBODY WAS GETTING MURDERED, AND—

SOMEBODY IS GOING TO BE, FRED! UNLESS WE STOP IT!

UNITED LABOR PRESS

MESKIN

MY BROTHER MICKEY IS SCHEDULED TO BE TAKEN FOR A RIDE...

MY HEART BLEEDS LIKE A ROCK FOR HIM, JIM... BUT IF WE KNOW ABOUT IT, WE'VE GOT TO PREVENT THE MURDER —EVEN OF A RAT LIKE YOUR KID BROTHER.

Produced by ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Rankin Rides A Broomstick

"Why waste time worrying about Rep. Rankin? He's merely a ranting old man to whom nobody, least of all his Congressional colleagues, pays any attention."

That's been one school of thought concerning the man from Mississippi, who has probably established a new record for loose talk concerning labor unions, race hatred and civil liberties.

But in the last couple of weeks the House Committee on Un-American Activities, headed by Rankin, has moved from talk to action.

First, the Committee instituted contempt proceedings against 17 leaders of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee for declining to turn over their books, lists of names and financial records to the Rankin group.

The Natl. Federation of Constitutional Liberties—which has played a conspicuous role in defending labor unions in cases involving injunctions, arrests of union leaders and restrictive bills—bought an ad in the N. Y. Times to protest the case. That demonstrated to the Rankin group that the NFCL must also be "subversive."

Now that organization has been asked to produce all its records for the committee. The NFCL refuses. The civil liberties group admits that Congress, of course, has the right to investigate, and that this right is important and valuable.

"But this power, like all power, may be abused," says George Marshall, NFCL chairman. "When abused, it must be resisted."

The Un-American Committee's demands, he points out, exceed the Committee's functions, are unconstitutional and have as their sole purpose the disruption of the fight to protect civil liberties.

The Committee, he adds, "engages in fishing expeditions, it pillories labor and progressive organizations, and gives immunity and protection to the fascists and fascist groups which are the greatest menace to our democracy."

Democracy is a horrid word to some of the Committee's staff. A strange character named Adamson has waged a campaign to have radio commentators refer to the U.S.A. only as a "republic." The Committee has subpoenaed the scripts of radio speakers and engaged in a number of other activities far removed from its assigned purpose of probing "un-American propaganda activities" and of "subversive propaganda activities designed to attack the principle of our form of government."

Today the Committee is after civil rights and refugee groups; tomorrow it may crack down on unions. Before it's too late—wire your Congressman to sign Petition No. 12, aimed at dissolving the Rankin Committee.

A Visit to Your Congressman

It's more than likely that a high proportion of the Senate and House will take time off around Easter to visit their home districts.

There's no better time for them to hear the voice of their constituents. Unions ought to do some planning now to arrange conferences with their Congressman in order to give a clear and balanced picture of what's on people's minds back home.

You can bet your bottom dollar (if you haven't lost it in higher prices) that many local bankers and local businessmen will be on the job to influence the Representatives. And it's equally certain that they'll paint a rosy picture of the state of the nation—with emphasis on so-called free enterprise, particularly as it applies to hamstringing OPA.

But a lot of hard facts can and should be mobilized by union delegations for the benefit of the visiting Representatives.

Let the housewives tell what price rises have meant to them. Let the union men and women from the factories and shops explain in their own words what the Case Bill would do to wreck their unions. Let the union members who have come back from the war tell some first-hand stories about how hard it is to find the right house at the right price.

There's plenty more to tell: the need for an FEPC; for the improved medical service that would come with passage of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill; for a 65c Minimum Wage Bill free from vicious riders.

Washington, in some ways, is badly cut off from the country. Many a good Congressman may be falling for the patter of the smooth lobbyists of big business who flutter around the nation's capital.

This month is the best possible time to tell him what's on the minds of Mr. and Mrs. Homefolks.

What They Did

A voting record on many of the important issues of the present Congressional session is being distributed by PAC. Write to CIO-PAC, 205 East 42nd St., N. Y. 17, N. Y., for Pamphlet No. 7, entitled "Elections: 1946."

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Minimum Wage S 1349	Lifts minimum pay to 65c. Senate added inflationary Pace rider, endangering value of bill	Passed by Senate; now ready for House Labor Committee	Ask Representatives to kill Pace rider and add coverage for seamen, retail and martime workers
Price Control HR 6042	Extends price control act to June, 1947	Approved by House Banking Committee, but with many amendments	Wire Congressmen to stay on the floor and pass bill quickly and without any amendments
Housing HR 4761 S 1592	Provide basis for big homes program for vets and workers in line with Wyatt program	HR 4761 going into joint conference with some good features of Senate Committee being removed	Wire Senators to stand fast by Committee versions of both bills
Wagner-Murray-Dingel Health Bill S 1606	Establishes national health program aimed at providing adequate low-cost medical service	Hearings before Senate Labor Committee; CIO to testify in early May	Write your Senators that you want the bill passed
Case Bill HR 4908	Would harass unions with many new restrictions and anti-labor devices	Senate Labor Committee version milder than House bill, but labor foes hope to make it tougher	Write, wire your Senators that you don't want any version of the Case bill
Terminal pay for enlisted men HR 4051	Would give enlisted men same army terminal pay benefits as officers now receive	Bottled by House Rules Committee. Approx. 170 names now on Petition 23 to force action; 218 names are needed	Ask your Congressman to sign Petition 23 and vote for the bill

YOUR CONGRESSMAN MAY BE HOME FOR EASTER—IF HE IS, PAY HIM A VISIT!

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

BREAK FOR GI's: When an officer is discharged from the army, he gets paid for furlough time he never used. Thus, at the rate of close to 30 days a year, an officer can accumulate up to 90 days of extra pay from the army when he goes back to civvies.

The enlisted man, whose pay is lower, gets no such break. CIO is trying to do something about this inequality.

This week, Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee called on all members of the House to sign Petition No. 23. There are about 170 names on the petition now; when 218 sign, HR 4051 can by-pass the House Rules Committee and come up for vote.

"The discrimination between officers and enlisted men in the matter of terminal leave is one of the least justifiable practices of our military establishment," the CIO official reminded Congress.

HOUSING: It looks as though the vets may get some homes. By 63-14 vote, the Senate okayed HR 4761, a program for 2,700,000 homes by '47, in line with proposals of Housing Expediter Wyatt—but not before the southern bloc had succeeded in removing an essential part of the bill.

With the alliance of polltaxers and Republicans in full array, the Senate defeated by 41-33 a plan for price ceilings on existing dwellings and on land. But the pro-housing people were able to retain plans for a $600 million subsidy to help speed construction.

Neither of these features was included in the version of the bill passed by the House. Urge your Congressman to support a strong stand in the conference committee meetings, where differences in the two versions of the bill will be ironed out.

ON THE CALENDAR: Consumers groups, mostly women, from a dozen major cities are converging on Washington to underline their demands for retention of price control . . . The British loan, supported by CIO, won a 14-5 vote in the Senate Banking Committee. It's due for a vote within the week . . . The Cooley bill, to extend Farm Security help to small farmers, passed the House. It was a "must" on the legislative program of the Natl. Farmers Union . . . A trio of anti-union Republicans, Senators Ball, Taft and H. A. Smith, have filed a minority Labor Committee report on the Case bill. Their proposals, if adopted, would put your union in a strait-jacket.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President
NATHAN COWAN, Chairman
ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb
Henry C. Fleisher, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 17

Copyright, 1946 The CIO NEWS

$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

April 22, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

600 women from 30 organizations in 48 states stormed Capitol Hill this week to tell Congress to keep OPA. Rep. Sabath (D., Ill.) receives petitions with 500,000 signatures from Mrs. Howard Hunter, left, and Mrs. Beverly St. George Tucker.

SCAN RECORDS BY FDR GOALS—PAC

See Pages 3 & 4

Warning to U. S.

HOUSE BUTCHERS OPA; PEOPLE MUST RALLY

THIS is the week in which the threat of disastrous, home-destroying inflation hangs over America. Only militant action by the Senate can prevent what amounts to annulment of price control and the gagging of OPA.

The danger of violent price rises that will upset the whole economic scene, debase the value of the dollar, and help to wipe out the savings of America's little people, was brought about by a majority of the House of Representatives. In the course of a session that lasted until 10 at night, the House tacked on sufficient amendments to bog down any vestige of effective price control.

Alert to the danger facing the entire population, CIO Pres.

People Vs. Inflation

The crisis confronting America as a result of House action on the price control bill will be discussed by two CIO officials on the radio this week. Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and Jack Thornton, acting chairman of the CIO Cost of Living Committee, will speak on "The People Against Inflation" on the Mutual Network at 7:15 pm., EST, Tuesday, April 23.

Philip Murray called for immediate, nation-wide action to rouse the Senate to the dangers.

In a telegram to every CIO union, Murray declared:

"The House of Representatives has just killed price control and destroyed the wage increases we are winning through painful struggle. If the Senate and the President cannot check this drive, the country is faced with dangerous inflation.

"The House majority betrayed the American people by passing a series of crippling amendments which will send the cost of living sky-high.

"Drastic measures are called for. We must act at once.

"Congressmen will be home in their districts next week and the people must mobilize to protest their action and demand the passage of a strong price control act in the Senate and when the bill comes back to the House.

"I call upon every CIO member, through his local union and his industrial union council, to rally the people of his community in a mass expression of support for price control and of those Congressmen who voted to maintain it. Reach your Senator in Washington and your Congressman at home with this appeal to protect us from disastrous inflation."

Murray's wire was dispatched only a few hours after House votes gave OPA only nine months of life, guaranteed "reasonable profits" to producers and distributors on every item they handle—a tricky clause which will send profits spiralling upwards; removed all food subsidies at the end of 1946, with an interim liquidation program; pressured OPA and the President into facilitating price increases; and paved the way for wholesale lifting of controls by the end of this year, etc.

Paul Porter, OPA administrator, warned that the House vote on the amendments "amounts to the repeal of price control."

"The bill has been loaded down with inflationary amendments which would make the law completely ineffective and impossible to administer," he said.

From the House, the price control bill goes to the Senate Banking Committee, which has already started hearings on the subject. It is probable that the bill will reach the Senate for a vote within the next fortnight.

As passed by the House, the bill carries everything demanded by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, which has been agitating for almost complete abandonment of price ceilings and the return of unrestrained "free enterprise" to the American postwar scene. NAM claims that big profit incentives to business men will allegedly bring forth a flood of goods to the market and balance the factors of supply and demand.

The week before the House took its action against the price control measure was one of intense activity for a variety of consumers' groups which converged upon Washington with demands for retaining government "big sticks" against the inflationists.

One of the most effective demonstrations was a 200-car caravan organized by women members of many civic and consumer organizations. They drove to the Capitol, where special police sought to interfere with their right to visit legislators. The women nevertheless persisted—and in groups of five were able to see many of their Representatives.

At CIO-PAC Meeting: PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman, left, and CIO Pres. Philip Murray examine a PAC poster dramatizing Philadelphia police violence and pointing out that "a buck for PAC" is the best concrete contribution that workers can make toward electing public officials sympathetic to the people's needs.

WESTINGHOUSE STILL TALKING

The 14-week-old strike of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Union against Westinghouse Electric apparently was nearer settlement this week as conferences continued in Pittsburgh between management and UE representatives.

"Exploratory" talks regarding the UE's 18½c demand an hour in connection with 10,000 workers in the corporation's lamp division were scheduled to include all of the firm's 75,000 employes as the CIO NEWS went to press.

Meanwhile, UE hailed "official recognition of 18½c an hour wage increases for the electrical industry by the Natl. Wage Stabilization Board as further proof that UE-CIO's demands are just."

Pointing out that Westinghouse made $152 million war profits after taxes, UE Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald called on all UE locals to observe the week of April 22-28 as "Make Westinghouse Settle" week.

The week will feature mass demonstrations, numerous radio programs, special leaflets and the enlistment of further community support that already has proved a major aid in winning the demanded wage increase from other large electrical and radio firms.

CIO Backs

100% CIVILIAN ATOM RULE

CIO affiliates were advised this week by Pres. Philip Murray to support a program of complete public control of atomic energy, with no veto power remaining in the hands of the military.

In a letter to international unions and councils, Murray also voiced support for the principles of the Acheson Report, which was recently made public by the State Dept. and calls for growing international cooperation on atomic problems.

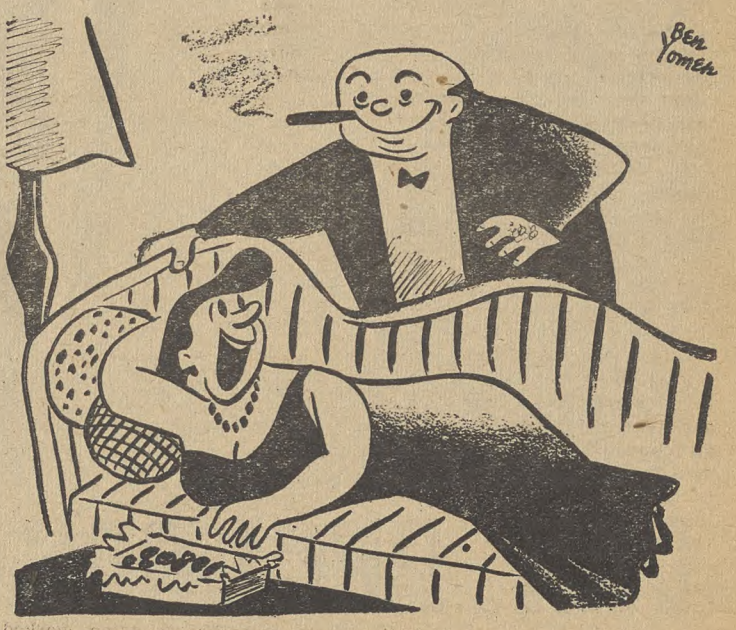
"We must continue to be on' our guard against attempts of the military authorities to control the development of atomic energy and turn it to destructive ends," Murray wrote. At the same time he criticized the imposition of "such drastic secrecy regulations as would hamper the work of the scientists who want to discover new civilian uses for atomic energy in industry and medicine."

"Above all, this great source of power developed at the expense of the American people must remain their property through democratic control and be developed for their welfare," the CIO president added.

He urged unions to send letters and wires to Congress backing such a democratic atomic program as one way of averting military control and sharp limitation on the development of atomic energy for civilian use.

A majority of the House Military Affairs Committee and of the special Senate Committee on Atomic Energy are aiding the military in their campaign to gain control over the new energy producer.

Unless the present trend towards military control is sharply reversed, "the entire world may be plunged into an atomic armaments race," the CIO affiliates were warned.



"Another war would put us in the Morgan bracket!"

SUGAR TIEUP PAYS OFF

THE unity of CIO and AFL sugar workers paid off last week with the gaining of a 15c an hour increase from two sugar refining companies in six East Coast plants.

The first coast-wide settlement in the sugar industry was reached after 8,000 CIO and AFL members in seven refineries went out on their threatened strike for a few hours. Dept. of Labor Conciliation Service officials brought the unions and companies together to end the strike.

Only one plant, the Revere Sugar Refining Co., in Boston, remained adamant, and conciliation officials were meeting with company and union representatives late last week in negotiations for a wage increase.

Seven CIO and AFL unions that had negotiated individually until an impasse on the wage increase was reached, formed the Amalgamated Sugar Conferees to press for agreement of the wage issue. Now the group is regarded as a permanent organization.

USA HITS ORE CO. PAY STALL

Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO United Steelworkers this week called upon the Cleveland Cliffs Co., Cleveland, Ohio, to participate in an immediate wage conference with the USA-CIO and to abandon "an approach based upon anti-union policies that have been so thoroughly condemned by public opinion and which are illegal under existing national law."

Approximately 8,000 employes of the firm have been on strike since February 8 for wage increases of 18½c an hour.

PAC CARRIES FIGHT FOR FDR GOALS

PEOPLE URGED TO SCAN VOTE RECORDS

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

Full Text—Pages 12, 13

CIO tossed its hat into the political ring this week with a thorough, outspoken "program for peace and plenty" based on the long-range goals of ex-Pres. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Made public by Pres. Philip Murray and Chairman Sidney Hillman of the CIO Political Action Committee following a PAC session in Washington, the CIO statement described its program as one designed to provide a "firm foundation for stable peace, full employment, greater security and wider democracy for our nation."

"The CIO Political Action Committee calls upon the people to measure the record of every candidate for office against this program," the statement said, "to give their support to those whose records carry the assurance that they will work with courage and vigor for its fulfillment, and to oppose those who have forfeited the people's confidence by their failure to act in the people's interest."

In line with meeting the demands of the people for peace, jobs and security, the CIO-PAC program embraced 17 points covering every major problem now facing the country.

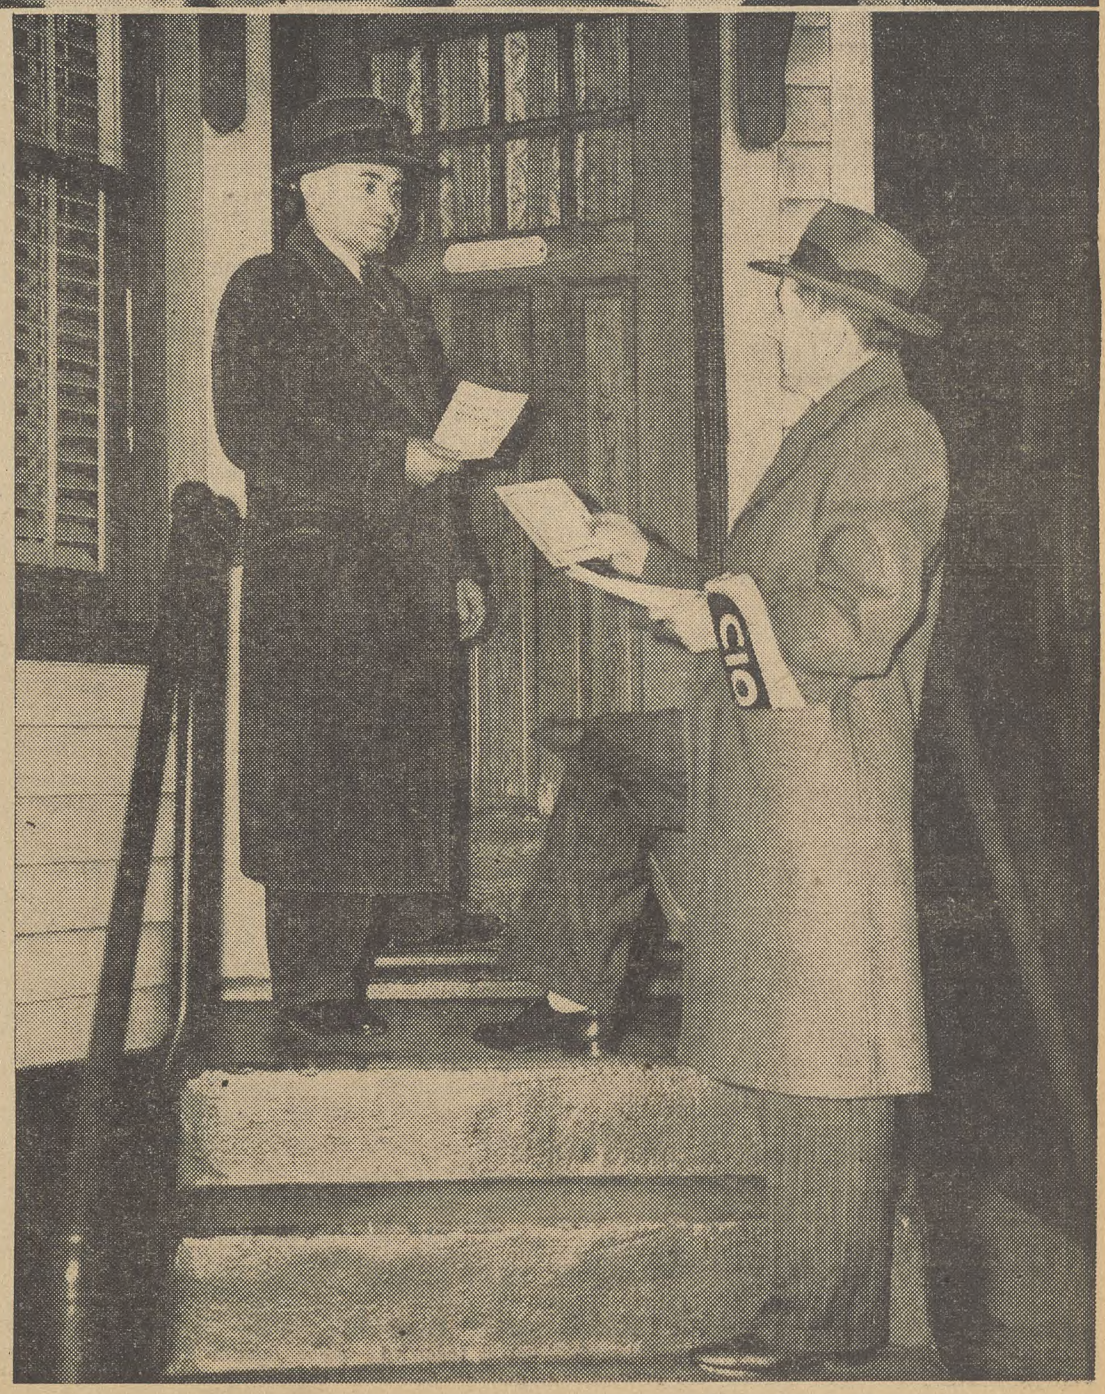
At a press conference which followed the all-day PAC meeting, Hillman forecast "an active and successful campaign" in at least 100 key Congressional districts to unseat reactionaries and elect or return to office proven progressives pledged to fight for the people's interests.

Hillman, who with Murray presided at an unusually large turnout of Washington correspondents, emphasized that PAC has no intention of forming a third party, but will campaign as an independent force to elect progressive candidates, be they Republican or Democrat.

Six of CIO-PAC planks were devoted to foreign affairs. The platform strongly underscored the need for preserving the wartime unity of the Big Three, through which it saw the only hope for complete eradication of fascism, the development of freedom for all democratic peoples to choose their own forms of government, and development of world trade and access to raw materials.

The section on domestic policy opened, significantly, with a recital of the late President Roosevelt's Economic Bill of Rights; and, after reviewing CIO struggles to achieve the goals set forth in that Bill, called for continued activity to bring them within the reach of the people.

PAC favors continued OPA and price control laws, elimination of sub-standard wages, and construction of three million homes as a means of raisng the American standard of living, the platform continued. Other sections urged an expanded medical care program for the nation, improved benefits for veterans, a vastly better educational system, and assistance to farmers and small business men.



Political action on the precinct level is what packs the punch. Passaic, N. J., CIO-PAC members already are at work on 1946 elections. (Top) a county committee discusses policy, l. to r.: Ben Manney, county PAC chairman; Louis Kristoff, Daniel Friedman, Ferdinand Fischer, Joseph Smith (standing) and Roy Ambrose. (Right) Kristoff talks PAC with neighbor Andrew Janesko. Note the CIO NEWS in Kristoff's pocket.

IT'S LOCAL JOB THAT COUNTS

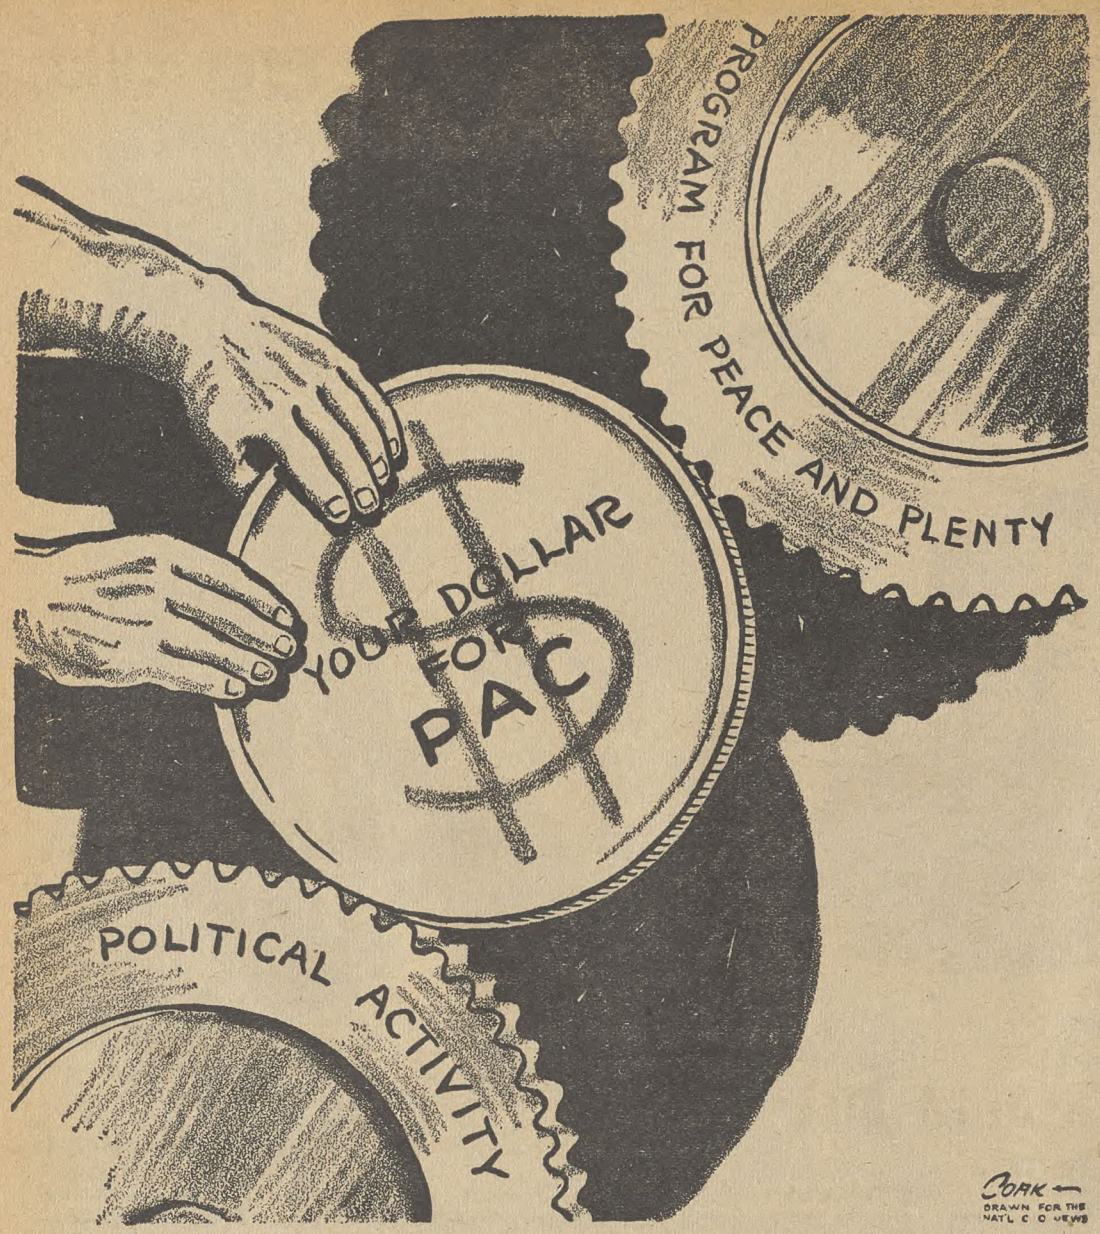
The last letter that Louis Kristoff got from Rep. Gordon Canfield (R., N. J.) asked Kristoff to believe in him.

Kristoff, who is a member of the CIO Textile Workers Union and a rank and file worker in the CIO Political Action Committee, thinks that it is encouraging the way that Canfield's record has improved since the CIO became strong in Passaic County. He thinks that Canfield, however, still has some way to go.

Kristoff and other CIO members have organized PAC work on a county basis, according to Raye Hudson, education director of the TWU's Passaic County Joint Board.

The County PAC is now mobilizing for action in the 1946 elections, is dividing the county into wards and districts, and is doing educational work on Congressmen's records.

The County PAC takes credit for "a terrific job" in the town of Passaic in the 1944 elections. The job in the rest of the County was not effective enough, however, and that is being worked on.



FOR PEACE AND PLENTY

"Enduring peace in the world and an economy of plenty at home" are the twin goals set forth in the 1946 program of the CIO Political Action Committee.

The Congress we elect this November will largely determine whether or not we shall make progress to the goals, it points out.

With the greatest resources of the world in food, industrial, financial and atomic power, the United States can do more than any other country for world recovery and enduring peace.

But the keystone of United Nations effectiveness for peace is the unity of the world's three greatest powers, the United States, the Soviet Union and Great Britain, just as it was the keystone of United Nations victory in war.

The CIO therefore warns sharply against current efforts to weaken or destroy this unity. It firmly rejects any proposals for American participation in any bloc or alliance inimical to Big Three unity.

The PAC program calls for resistance to those forces which would "use the great power of America to win world domination for themselves"; for progressive universal disarmament through the United Nations; for United Nations regulation of all phases of atomic energy.

It also calls for resumption of food rationing to make American food available for the starving; for loans to our needy allies; for a United Nations quarantine of the "centers of fascist infection" in Spain and Argentina; for self-determination and self-government for colonial peoples; and for effective participation of the World Federation of Trade Unions in the work of the United Nations.

For an economy of plenty at home, the CIO demands implementation of Roosevelt's Economic Bill of Rights through greater mass purchasing power; continuance of the Price Control Act, without loopholes or amendments; adequate minimum wage legislation; expanded social security and health protection; federal legislation for low-cost housing on a mass scale; and progressive taxation of large incomes, with reduced taxes on low income groups.

The PAC program has many other special provisions for veterans, white-collar workers, farmers, and businessmen, besides calling for greater and more equal educational opportunities for all Americans.

It demands stern action against all forms of racial, religious and other discrimination, urging a permanent FEPC, abolition of the Wood-Rankin un-American committee, and an end to the infamous polltax as well as resistance to all anti-labor legislation.

If most of this program sounds familiar, it is because the CIO has been campaigning for it for years; because it is associated with President Roosevelt's New Deal and has been endorsed by the voters in election after election; and because it represents the obvious needs of the whole American people.

It is a people's program on which the CIO has no copyright. In thwarting this program, the reactionary coalition of polltax Democrats and tory Republicans has been defying the people's will.

The CIO merely seeks to play its part, along with all other progressive and like-minded Americans, in securing the election of political candidates who can be counted on to enact this people's program for peace and plenty.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

THE MATURITY that comes with one's sixth birthday has not diminished Shirley's candor.

With carefully chosen words, and with the calm and reasonable approach advocated by the best child-care experts, her mother was explaining and reproving some misdoing.

Shirley listened calmly, too, until she got a chance to sum up and cut short the lecture.

"I'm a stinker, aren't I," she piped up cheerfully.

★ ★ ★

Such candid self-criticism is less common in Congress.

But if actions speak louder than words, the coalition of polltax Democrats and reactionary Republicans has just made the frankest and bluntest admission of CIO's charges.

Hardly was the mimeograph ink dry on PAC's 1946 program than this gruesome twosome of toryism proceeded to prove and even overemphasize the worst said about it.

The PAC charged that in "thwarting the people's program," the tory coalition "threatens to cancel wage increases by price increases, leading to a disastrous inflation."

The Congressional cabal did not stop at threats. Riding roughshod over the people's will, it proceeded to massacre price control and command inflation.

One after another, it forced through the House the most outrageous imaginable amendments to the Price Control Act—to guarantee profits, to end food subsidies, to lift prices in all directions and to end all price control by March 31—amendments calculated to add billions to the cost of living.

Paul Porter, OPA chief, illustrated the effects of such inflation by pointing out that an "average family" now spending $2,500 a year would have to pay $3,450 for its food, clothing, rent and other regular items, if prices went up 40%.

In the year after the first World War, with no price control, living costs rose 46%. Payrolls declined 44%. The 1921 depression followed, bankrupting 106,000 businesses, causing 450,000 farm foreclosures and making 5½ million jobless.

★ ★ ★

Who wants the inflation for which the tory coalition voted?

Not the workers, who will be robbed of their wages by skyscraping living costs.

Not the farmers, who will have to pay more for everything they buy and risk loss of their farms in ensuing depression.

Not the businessmen who will face bankruptcy from boom-and-bust inflation.

Certainly not the veterans, pensioners, folks with fixed incomes, nor anyone else who will see the purchasing power of his savings or income cut in half.

The tail that wagged the Congressional dog was a minority of speculators and profiteers, hoping to line their pockets at the cost of national disaster.

★ ★ ★

This is but one example of how the tories of both parties, usurping control of Congress, have thwarted the program voted for by the majority of the American people in the reelection of Roosevelt in 1944.

The tory coalition has also blocked adequate housing, public health, increased social security, full employment, minimum wage legislation, a permanent FEPC and abolition of the polltax.

As shown by the price control issue, the PAC program is not exclusively labor's but a people's program. It also points the way to end misrule and misrepresentation in Congress.

The present thwarting of the people's will is possible only because many Congressmen do not represent an informed majority.

In the polltax states only a minority is allowed to vote. In other states, tories could have been defeated if more voters had gone to the polls and if the real issues had been clearly brought home to them.

The PAC program of action is simple, obvious and democratic. It calls for labor and all other progressive-minded Americans to organize politically for two purposes:

(1) To carry on a campaign of information and education on major political issues and the voting records of our Congressmen.

(2) To increase the number of voters, not only by abolishing the polltax and other restrictions, but also by getting all possible citizens to register and vote.

This program is based on the democratic proposition that if the American people are given the facts and turn out to the polls in sufficient numbers, they will elect a Congress that more truly reflects the people's will.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, L. S. Buckmaster, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 April 22, 1946 No. 17

4 MILLION IN NATION JOBLESS

THE spectre of unemployment this week lurked in the background of America's reconversion to full production.

Four million workers, equal to the population of Chicago, are walking the streets today looking for jobs or working less than 15 hours a week.

In the midst of the country's effort to replenish consumer's goods not produced during the war, the problem of unemployment assumed alarming prospects.

Bureau of Census figures reveal that more than 2,710,000 workers are unemployed and that more than 1,500,000 workers are employed less than 15 hours a week.

Millions of veterans are on the unemployment rolls and the Veterans Administration reported that readjustment allowance checks went to 1,574,440 ex-servicemen in the last week in March.

The nationwide unemployment picture was reflected in two former war boom cities—San Diego, Calif., and Baltimore, Md.—where thousands of ex-war workers have been unable to find jobs calling for their skills.

San Diego has been called the most critical unemployment area in California since 20,000 are drawing unemployment insurance and an estimated 7,000 more are jobless. The figure is still rising and is expected to reach 33,000 in a few months.

More veterans than non-veterans are drawing unemployment benefits in Baltimore and the number of unemployed in the former big shipbuilding center is close to 40,000.

CIO-PAC Asks Ouster of Franco: The Spanish dictator, right, in palmier days, shaking hands with Hitler. CIO-PAC said: "The existence of fascism in Spain and Argentina is by no means exclusively an internal question for the oppressed people of these nations. We urge the United Nations Security Council to take concerted action to quarantine these centers of fascist infection and to assist the people of Spain and Argentina to restore democratic rights and self-government."

DOCTORS BACK HEALTH BILL

SIXTY-SIX prominent doctors from every section of the country this week lent strong support to the Wagner-Murray - Dingell National health bill, now being studied by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

In a telegram to Dr. Channing Frothingham, chairman of the Committee for the Nation's Health, the physicians took issue with the conservative American Medical Association, which has spearheaded opposition to the bill (S. 1606).

"We believe from available experience that voluntary health insurance plans will be too costly to give satisfactory medical services for the urgent needs of the American people," the doctors' wire said. "Therefore we favor a National health program financed by compulsory insurance and delivered by decentralized administration with utilization also of voluntary medical care plans meeting approved standards."

The Committee, which will hear CIO witnesses supporting the bill during the next few weeks, studied pros and cons of the measure presented by spokesmen of the AMA and by independent doctors.

Dr. Ernest Boas, chairman of the Physicians Forum, a strong supporter of the bill, attacked AMA opposition. He charged that the AMA "is in fact serving as a guild battling to retain the economic privileges of the medical profession" and that many opponents of the health program are trying to defend their own "dictatorial control of the medical policies of the country."

"So they send us a man who believes in depressions!"

CIVIL RIGHTS MEET

A national "Congress on Civil Rights" to unify the many campaigns now being waged on national and community level will be held April 27 and 28 in Detroit. The Detroit conference, whose purpose is to provide a new center for national coordination, has obtained the sponsorship of more than 600 national and community leaders in civic, labor and religious fields.

RELIEF FOR HAWAII

The CIO Longshoremen's Union natl. headquarters have sent a check for $10,000 to Hawaii for relief of the union's victims of the April 1 tidal wave. ILWU has opened a campaign to raise rehabilitation funds.

CIO Victory

LEAVE PAY ACTION SURE

SIGNATURES of a majority of the House members to a petition requiring action on HR 4051 for giving terminal leave pay to enlisted men is a victory for the CIO Veterans Committee, which for several months has been pressing for a fair break for non-commissioned service personnel. House passage of the measure is virtually assured.

Officers can accumulate up to 90 days' terminal leave, which because of their higher pay frequently reaches sizeable sums. Under HR 4051 enlisted personnel would get terminal leave pay of up to 120 days, on the basis of credit for of two and a half days' leave for each month of service.

Prospects for the House passage of the measure were poor until a few weeks ago when a petition began to circulate to dislodge the bill from the House Military Affairs Committee, where it was bottled after the Budget Bureau reported that the cost of payment of terminal leave pay would be prohibitive.

Meyer Bernstein, representative of the CIO Veterans Committee, last week wrote all House members asking them to sign the petition and received 75 favorable replies.

Because of its rules and the intervention of the Easter holidays, the House will be unable to vote on the bill until May 13. Congressmen should be deluged with letters asking for passage of the measure.

PRESENT AMPUTEES' CAR BILL

THE Rogers-Kelley bill (HR. 6114) to require the Veterans Administration to provide cars for veteran amputees, whose legs were severed or paralyzed—was introduced this week and referred to the House Veterans Committee.

This measure embodies a recommendation of the recent CIO Auto Workers convention and was presented after members of the War Amputees committee and Irving Richter, national legislative representative of the UAW, called on several Congressmen to ask for action. Members of the committee were from Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, D. C., and the England General Hospital, Atlantic City.

Rep. Rankin (Miss. polltaxer), is committee chairman, and in view of his record, considerable pressure will be needed to get the bill out of committee. To get action letters should be sent to your Congressman, particularly if he is a member of the committee, which consists also of the following:

Democrats: Peterson (Fla.), Allen (La.), Gibson (Ga.), Domengeaux (La.), Engle (Calif.), Stigler (Okla.), Ervin (N. C.), Carnahan (Mo.), Pickett (Tex.), Green (Pa.), Rayfiel (N. Y.), and Huber (Ohio).

Republicans: Edith Nourse Rogers (Mass.), Cunningham (Ia.), Kearney (N. Y.), Bennett (Mo.), Scivner (Kans.), Auchinloss (N.-J.), Vursell (Ill.), and Ramey (Ohio).

CIO OK'S ON-THE-JOB TRAINING PLAN

The CIO this week endorsed recommendations for on-the-job training for veterans, issued by a committee representing Federal agencies working under the direction of Maj. Gen. G. B. Erskine, Retraining and Reemployment Administrator.

States must approve on-the-job training programs before veterans receive subsistence allowances with minimums of $65 a month if they have no dependents, and $90 a month with dependents. The recommendations are, therefore, addressed to States.

The standards would safeguard the veteran from exploitation at the hands of unscrupulous employers seeking cheap labor. To protect the veteran from such bosses, the committee recommended that wages should not be less than those customarily paid in the establishment and the community to a non-veteran learner in the same job and shall be in conformity with State and Federal laws, and union agreements.

A minimum of 500 hours is placed on the training by the committee, which stated that the training should not continue longer than is customarily required to fit him for the job.

SUPER-SENIORITY ADVOCATES PANICKY

Selective Service is attempting to palm off the decision of the 6th U. S. Circuit Court in the Whirls case as favoring super-seniority, even though the court held that super-seniority was not the issue in the case, the CIO Veterans Committee reports. Selective Service's idea is that a veteran is entitled to a job from his former employer even at the expense of a non-veteran with greater seniority.

Lawrence Whirls, the veteran involved in the circuit court decision, simply demanded that he be credited with seniority beginning from the time he started to work for the Trailmobile Co.—simple, accumulated seniority. That is what the court gave him.

But Selective Service is not content to let the courts speak for themselves, as Major General Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, told the American Legion employment conference he was willing to do.

Apparently Selective Service's panic rises from fear of an adverse decision on super-seniority by the U. S. Supreme Court which is scheduled to hear arguments in the Abram Fishgold case April 26. The CIO Shipbuilding Workers Union is fighting Fishgold's claim to super-seniority and has been upheld by the 2nd U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Two U. S. District courts also have ruled against super-seniority.

LIGHT FOR JAPAN

Key to Democracy Is Education of the Children

By FRED d'AVILA

HUNDREDS of thousands of corpses scattered over bloody Pacific islands testify to the fact that the banzai-charging Japanese soldier was a fanatic fighter thoroughly "sold" on the Shinto principle of sacrificing everything for the state.

Seventy-three million Japanese today constitute one of the biggest educational problems in the world.

Will they learn the fundamentals of democracy? Will they elect a government dedicated to peace and to cooperation among the United Nations?

FEW people have had the chance to form a first-hand opinion. One of them is Kermit Eby, director of CIO's Education & Research Dept., who has just returned from a one-month visit to Japan and who worked and taught there during six months in 1933.

Eby, who traveled by plane with 26 other carefully chosen American educators, submitted with them a report to General MacArthur which called for revision of the educational system along more democratic, decentralized lines, and for introduction of the Roman alphabet as an aid in bringing information on economics and politics to the millions of Japanese denied the chance to learn enough of their language characters for the mastery of such complicated subjects.

But—and Eby stressed the word—the fate of the educational reforms is intimately associated with the economic and political development of Japan. "The word must become flesh."

What's to be done?

- "If democracy becomes associated with hunger, with collapse, with mass unemployment, there will be no possibility of 'the word becoming flesh'," Eby said.
- "I do not think that Japan can afford the luxury of a capitalist society. She must nationalize her basic industries. She must stimulate the growth of cooperatives.
- "Japan cannot be developed as a buffer state and still serve the interests of her people. She must not become a tool of American imperialism. She must become a member of the family of the United Nations, and must develop peacefully within that framework."

THE difficulty of the problem is pointed up by two facts:

1. The Zaibatsu (dominant industrial class) has not been thrown out of power, and the recent elections recorded the uninformed but popular support for the conservative parties which further the Zaibatsu's interests.

"It's like what happened to Standard Oil," said Eby. "The Sherman Anti-Trust Act didn't break up control—it dispersed it."

2. While 96% of the Japanese are "literate," the complications of their alphabet make it possible for them to deal only with common, everyday problems. Complicated economic and political theories are beyond the scope of the average Japanese who knows only 500 to 600 language characters. Newspaper writers, for instance, must know about 10,000, and scholars about 40,000.

While stressing the need of adult education, the report prepared by Eby and his colleagues said:

"Our greatest hope is in the children. Sustaining, as they do, the weight of the future, they must not be pressed down by the heritage of a heavy past."

EBY was given the rank of Brigadier General on his trip with the U. S. Education Mission to Japan, but it didn't keep him from talking to a lot of rank and file people—all the way from hungry scholars who sold textbooks to pay for train fare to GIs who are members of CIO unions.

Conversations ranged from those with General MacArthur and Baron Mitsui (who is said to own 18% of Japanese industry) to leaders of all wings of the trade union movement.

Some of the facts he gleaned about the educational system are startling. Its centralized control and dictatorial policies oppressed both pupils and teachers.

The average teacher today is near literal starvation. Salaries are 130 yen a month. It costs 1,000 yen a month to live.

More than 5,000 teachers were jailed during the war. "Thought police" and classroom spies haunted them.

The educational system has been based on a 19th century pattern which is highly centralized, providing one type of instruction for the masses and another for the privileged few.

The system, according to the educators' report, "held that at each level of instruction there is a fixed quantum of knowledge to be absorbed, and tended to disregard differences in the ability and interests of pupils."

Such a system, the educators said, "controlled by an intrenched bureaucracy recruited from a narrow group, which reduces the chances of promotion on merit, which provides little opportunity for investigation and research, and which refuses to tolerate criticism, deprives itself automatically of the means of progres."

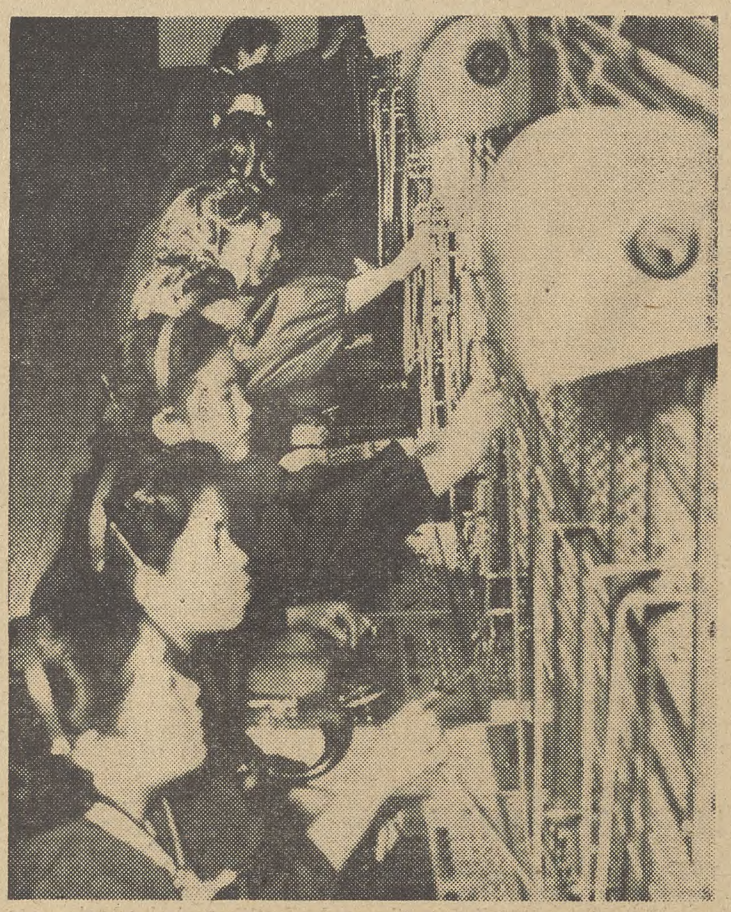
THE report, in discussing its recommendaiton for adoption of the Roman alphabet, said:

"The Japanese language in its written form constitutes a formidable obstacle to learning . . . the memorizing of the Kanji, in which the Japanese language is largely written, places an excessive burden on the pupils.

"During the elementary years they are required to give a very great part of their study time to the sheer task of learning to recognize and to write the language characters."

Attacking one of the strongest bases of the Japanese fascist state, the report recommended:

"We approve the discontinuance, in the public schools, of partisan teaching, political or religious." Abolition of the ceremonial reading of imperial rescripts was advocated.



Postwar inflation and low wages have caused many Japanese strikes. One technique for winning demands has been to stay on the job but give free service to the public. Tokyo telephone operators tried the method, found it worked.

Kermit Eby, left, director of CIO's Education & Research Dept., takes time out for tea in Japan during a month's visit with 26 other American educators who studied conditions and made recommendations for aiding the development of democracy.

Criticizing centralized control of the schools and lack of democratic participation on the part of parents, the educators said:

"Whenever feasible, experienced educators qualified to assist the teachers and principal of a school to begin newer practices should select an ordinary school and, working with its staff, the parents and the pupils, help to evolve new methods appropriate to the given school."

The report also called for the extension of co-education, for more free schools, colleges and libraries, for the development of adult educational programs and for courses in international relations, leading to the exchange of students with other countries.

MUCH of the burden for insuring real democracy in education will rest with the developing trade unions, Eby pointed out.

The unions, in 1930, had an estimated 8% of industrial workers organized, but in 1937 the government cracked down, jailed thousands of union leaders, destroyed the organizations, and substituted "Sampo," a phoney labor front.

Today, there are an estimated 1,000,000 to 1,500,000 union members in Japan, Eby reported. On paper, they have won some important rights. The constitution, scheduled for adoption by the Diet, says:

"All persons have the right to work. Standards for working conditions, wages and hours shall be fixed by law. The exploitation of children shall be prohibited.

"The right of workers to organize and to bargain and act collectively is guaranteed.

"The right to own property is inviolable, but property rights shall be defined by law, in conformity with the public welfare. Private property may be taken for public use upon just compensation therefor."

But a "trade union law" requires that "representatives of trade unions shall submit to the administrative authorities within the week after formation of the trade union its statute and the list of names and addresses of its officers" and the statute requires the union to keep a membership list—a handy weapon for the police to use.

The law says, also: "When a trade union frequently violates laws and ordinances and disturbs peace and order, the Court may order dissolution of the union at the request of the Labor Relations Committee."

On the other hand, MacArthur has issued an order which provides a hands-off policy on the part of police. It says:

"Japanese police shall not participate in labor relations activities or intervene in labor disputes unless such intervention is necessary to preserve public order."

WHAT, in capsule form, does the situation add up to? As two labor observers in Japan put it to Eby, it is this:

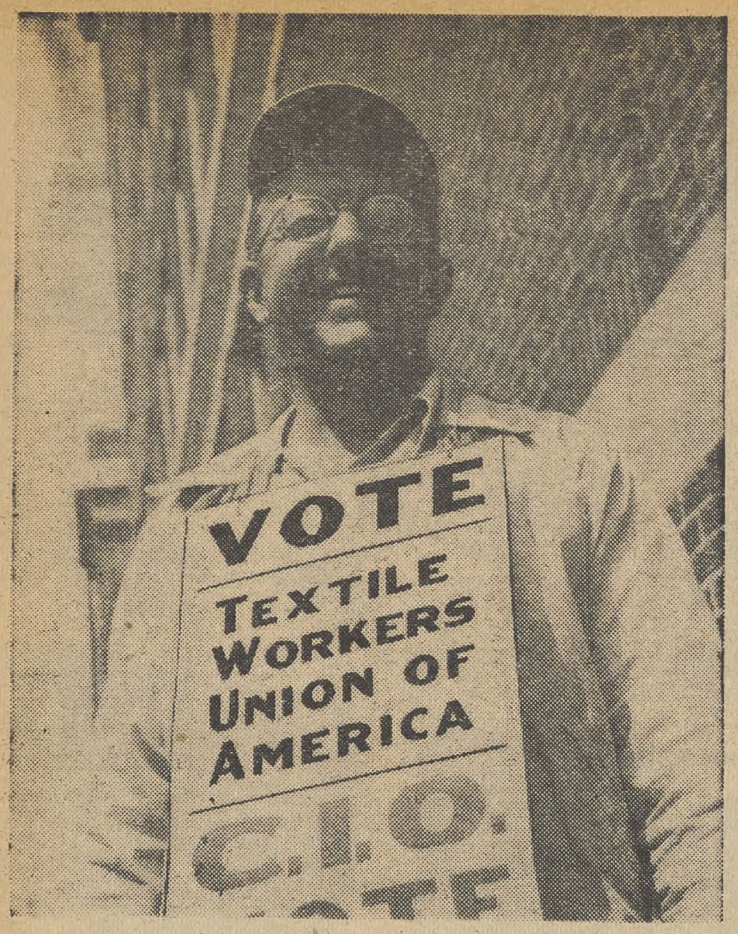
Japanese labor must be given help—preferably through the medium of the United Nations. It must be made to feel that it is part of world democracy. Since, during the days of repression, it has lost familiarity with the basic tools of working trade unionism, it must have the technical assistance it needs to do a job.

Japan is still ruled, owned, managed and taught by the same people and forces which were in control before and during the war. Just enough of the war-guilty have been skimmed off to make a fairly good publicity show.

The reactionary forces remaining, aided by certain anti-union officers in the American Army, are taking steps toward controlling and curbing the growth of the Japanese labor movement. This must be combatted not only by the people, but by labor representatives on MacArthur's staff who will counter the work done by the American industrial interests who are openly represented on it.

If Japanese labor gets the proper support from labor elsewhere in the world, it may be expected to form the first line of defense and surveillance against resurgent militarism.

If a sound and powerful labor movement can be built, the Japanese trade unionists may successfully fight the battle at home that will help to make World War an impossibility in our generation.



A New Bedford, Mass., cotton mill worker turns human billboard to advertise that he's for TWUA-CIO, which won a city-wide election last summer.

Biggest Textile Parley

REPORTS HIGHEST PAY GAINS

By E. M. SCHOFFSTALL

IT'S a long and rugged road that stretches from Lawrence and Marion to Atlantic City. The graves of many a textile worker lie beside it and the shadows of militiamen and deputy sheriffs lie across it.

The textile workers of the U. S. will have completed that troubled journey this week, when 1,400 delegates to the fourth biennial convention of the CIO Textile Workers Union of America meet in Atlantic City April 24 for what will be the biggest convention of textile unionists in the history of that ancient industry.

From 34 states they will come, and from 1,500 mills. From the cotton mills of New England and the Piedmont Plateau, from the woolen and worsted mills of Rhode Island and the Passaic Valley of N. J., from the synthetic yarn mills and the cordage mills and the knit goods mills and all the rest of the sprawling industry from Maine to Alabama and west to Portland.

Their convention will have no fancy slogan. If it had, their slogan might be, "Out of the mists." For this convention will mark the emergence of American textile workers from the mists of starvation wages, substandard ways of life, fear and insecurity.

Although they are still far from being the highest paid workers in American industry, the textile workers are no longer the most poorly paid, thanks to TWUA. Convention reports will show that some of them have more than doubled their wages since the CIO Textile Workers Organizing Committee first started organizing in 1937.

For example, on a straight-time average hourly basis, southern cotton-rayon textile workers' wages increased 106% between 1937 and 1946 (from 36.9c an hour to 76c an hour) and have risen 38% since TWUA's last previous convention in 1943.

Wages in other divisions of the industry have been less phenomenal but they have risen substantially within the economic pattern of each division. Thus, today, the straight-time average hourly earnings of textile workers in all branches of the industry are 86% higher than they were in 1937 and 34% higher than in 1943.

These wages do not reflect only increases for the more highly skilled textile workers. Almost wholly through negotiations between TWUA and textile mill owners, the present "going" minimum wage in the cotton industry, both North and South, is 65c an hour. In the synthetic yarn industry it is 70c an hour, in the woolen and worsted industry 75c. Only a few years ago the legal minimum of 40c an hour was also the going minimum in a large section of textiles.

It was because of TWUA's "Big Cotton Case" before the Natl. War Labor Board in 1944 and 1945 that the effective minimum wage was increased from 50c an hour to 55c an hour, first for textile workers, then for all substandard workers in the nation. TWUA again led the way a few months ago when it negotiated a 65c minimum for northern cotton textile workers.

THERE'S much the same picture of progress in the worker's security in his job and in the union's security as an instrument of the workers.

Today, one form or another of the union shop protects the workers in 71% of all cotton mills under contract, 81% of the workers in all woolen and worsted mills under contract, and 91% of the workers in carpet and rug mills. Individual workers' seniority rights have iron-bound protection in every mill, and grievance machinery has been highly developed.

It has not been necessary to re-enact Lawrence and Marion's bloody scenes to achieve these gains. During the war, of course, the strike was banned. Since V-J Day, the preponderant majority of union advances have been made across the collective bargaining table, without recourse to strikes.

The prime example of the way collective bargaining is working in the textile industry was given late in January, 1946, when out of 102 negotiations with woolen and worsted mills, only two strikes were necessary to win the union shop, a 75c minimum wage, and a general wage increase of 15c an hour for 80,000 workers.

TWUA moved ahead in spite of wartime obstacles. Organization, which continues to be the top job, brought 400-odd new mills under contract between 1943 and 1946, and more than 100,000 new workers.

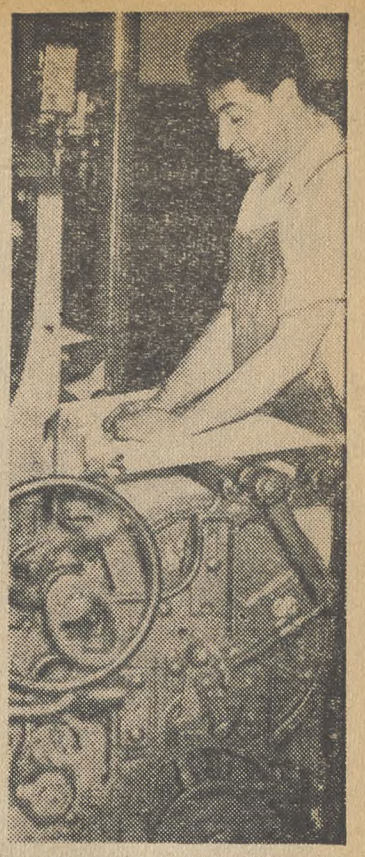
TWUA became an international union in the literal sense of the word in 1945, when it spread into Canada. The union has a nucleus of more than 12,000 workers from which to spread CIO textile unionism among Canada's 200,000 textile workers.

AS THE convention meets, TWUA has under contract 85% of all U. S. northern cotton-rayon textile workers, 80% of all carpet and rug workers, 75% of all synthetic yarn workers, 60% of all dyeing and finishing workers, 60% of all woolen and worsted workers, 30% of all hosiery workers.

The need for the CIO's and TWUA's imminent organization drive in the South is indicated by TWUA's representation of 20% of the workers in southern cotton textile mills.

Although most of TWUA's gains in the last three years were made without the necessity of strikes, textile mills have by no means been untouched by strikes. A score of New England cotton mills were "down" for several weeks when they refused to follow the contract pattern developed by the union in the rest of the industry in that area.

There were scattered other strikes, with the biggest concentration and the most reactionary opposition in the South. In the Carolinas and Georgia a segment of textile mill owners launched upon a campaign of union-busting. Spearheaded by the Gaffney Manufacturing Co. at Gaffney, S. C., one of the many properties of the intrenched Deering-Milliken chain, these mill owners fought the union at every turn in an attempt to break it.



TWUA member Jesse Rego, a weaver in Fall River, Mass., great textile center now entirely organized by the union.

Some of these strikes continue as this is written, with TWUA picket lines holding firmly at every mill and the previously untried Southern unionists determined to hold out until their demands are met.

But the strike has been used sparely, because in most situations peaceful negotiations won demands. This has been true in the South as well as in the North, for the most part.

At the mammoth Riverside and Dan River Cotton Mills in Danville, Va., for example, the union negotiated a 65c minimum and an average increase of 15c an hour for 10,000 workers, without even the hint of a strike threat. None was needed to win the workers a $3,500,000 wage boost annually and $700,000 in back pay.

This is currently the wage picture through the South. After TWUA made its demands early this year, even non-union mills began to announce wage increases that met the union pattern, so that today a 65c minimum is rapidly becoming general through Dixie.

Workers casting ballots in an NLRB election at Gosnold Mill, New Bedford, Mass., one of nine mills in the New Bedford Cotton Mfg. Assn. under contract with TWUA. With over 10,000 workers in the city eligible to vote, the CIO union won by more than 2-1 over an AFL textile union trying to make a comeback.

WAGE gains, union shop gains, and other advances are only part of the TWUA picture these last three years. At present approximately 230,000 members of the union are protected by group insurance paid for entirely by their employers and negotiated, as part of union contracts, by TWUA.

This insurance generally provides death benefits, hospitalization costs, doctors' visits to the home, care after accidents, and maternity care. The program, in which TWUA pioneered, has been almost wholly developed since 1943.

It is a long road that stretches from Lawrence and Marion to Atlantic City. And the road doesn't end there. It stretches far ahead, up hill and down dale until every last one of America's 1,250,000 textile workers are enjoying the decent wages, high standards of living, and job security that only TWUA and CIO can give them.

1 Front line fighters against the threat to fair enforcement of the Wagner Act are these CIO Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers members picketing the Libby-McNeil cannery at Sacramento. The blockade referred to is that organized by AFL Teamster union officials to "force" canneries to continue their exclusive contract with the Teamsters in defiance of NLRB orders. and despite the fact that FTA-CIO had won a plurality in an NLRB election. The phoney nature of the blockade was exposed when, a few days after it was instituted, cannery managements announced they'd sign solely with the Teamsters, although spinach had been brought freely into canneries by growers.

3 Typical FTA-CIO leaders scan reports from the field: l. to r., seated: Intl. Rep. Roberta Montgomery and FTA Pres. Donald Henderson; standing: Mrs. Peggy Emmick, secretary, Modesto, Calif. FTA Local 8 and Intl. Rep. R. L. Warren, who was beaten by Teamster goons recently at Modesto.

THEY FIGHT FO

By HERBERT A. KLEIN

ORGANIZED labor's Magna Charta, the Wagner Act, today faces the toughest attack in its life in the big California cannery industry.

That area produces about a third of the nation's canned fruit and about a fourth of its canned vegetables.

It also is where cannery workers, the majority of whom are strong for the CIO Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers Union, are looking hopefully to the rest of the CIO and to all other honest labor unions to help defeat the anti-Wagner Act scheme cooked up by cannery managements with the collusion of AFL Teamster officials.

This scheme is an open defiance of the Natl. Labor Relations Board and the Wagner Act that set it up. It is also intended to stack the cards to prevent an FTA-CIO victory in an NLRB industry-wide bargaining election slated to be held this coming summer when cannery employment is near a peak.

Principals in the scheme are the California Processors & Growers Assn., known throughout this part of the state as "CP&G," plus the strange synthetic creation of AFL officialdom that calls itself "the California Council of Cannery Unions, affiliated with the International Brotherhood of Teamsters of the AFL."

The CP&G, representing some 63 leading canneries of northern and central California, has publicly extended exclusive bargaining recognition to this AFL setup.

It did so in open and deliberate defiance of the Wagner Act and the orders of the NLRB. Early this month "negotiations" began between CP&G and the Teamster officials on behalf of the workers they do not represent—workers who total some 60,000, mostly women, during the peak period of the canning season.

The fact is that last October in an industry-wide NLRB election a clear plurality of eligible workers voted for FTA-CIO. There is ample reason to believe the CIO union won a clear majority too, but political pressure exerted in high places on behalf of the Teamsters prevented the counting of a substantial proportion of challenged ballots.

Instead, while these ballots still lay unopened, two of the three Board members voted to invalidate the entire election and hold another, which is expected to be set for July or August of this year.

The Board ordered that mean-

FOR ALL OF CIO

time neither FTA nor Teamsters was to be granted exclusive recognition or bargaining rights by the cannery industry.

That order came through on February 15.

Barely half a dozen weeks later, after a spell of bad acting and phony thretas by Teamser officials with the CP&G officials furnishing good acoustics, the cat was let out of the bag.

It was a wildcat, rarin' and rampagin' to tear labor's rights. The CP&G announced that its canneries were recognizing and dealing with the Teamsters exclusively, despite what the NLRB had said.

No such deliberate and open defiance of the Board and the Wagner Act has taken place before.

LEADERS of the CIO nationally and in this state have rallied to the defense of the law and the agency that assures workers the opportunity to pick and build their own unions.

Messages from CIO officials have converged on Board members, asking that they move at once to halt the CP&G-Teamster collusion, by obtaining injunctions against it in Federal court.

If the collusive deal is permitted to stand, the door will be opened to backdoor contract maneuvers by managements in all industries. CIO as a whole would be desperately injured by such a state of affairs. So would every union that relies on the free choice of the workers it represents, and that defends their interests.

That is why the case of the California cannery workers has become the case of all free labor.

IN capsuled form, here is a review of the situation and how it got that way:

This is no "jurisdictional beef" between the FTA and the Teamsters. The Teamsters represent only a minority of the men and women who annually work in the California canneries. Without the collusive backing of the cannery managements, the Teamsters would be out of the picture already. Behind this lies a long, sordid history of AFL backdoor deals—miscalled "contracts"—with management.

Nearly 10 years ago the CIO was organizing California cannery workers. Managements became worried. They signed backdoor contracts with AFL representatives.

The workers who found the AFL suddenly installed as their spokesman, had neither choice nor voice. Miserable contracts were "negotiated" in their name. Cannery wages and conditions remained sub-standard, though the industry expanded and profited hugely, especially during the war.

In April, 1945, the AFL executive council awarded jurisdiction over the cannery workers to the Teamsters union.

Leaders of unions in the Modesto, Stockton, Sacramento, and Oroville areas cast about to find some support in resisting this award.

During the spring and summer, two AFL unions, Teamsters and Seafarers, struggled for control of the cannery workers, and their dues payments.

The workers themselves had other wishes. In growing groups they called on the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers Union to give them real representation. FTA filed with the NLRB seeking designation as the bargaining agent for workers in California canneries as a whole.

NLRB scheduled an election covering some 75 northern California canneries last October. After a short campaign, FTA won a plurality of 1,200 votes. Challenging of some 1290 ballots prevented this from becoming a clear majority.

Teamsters filed objections to the election, and while those objections were being considered they demanded that cannery managements deal with them exclusively. Teamster goons used violence to keep known CIO workers from their jobs in many plants.

The NLRB had allowed the previous AFL cannery contract to stay in force until March 1, 1946. Under that contract AFL membership had not been a condition of cannery employment; but the Teamsters demanded that it become so. They began blockading important canneries to enforce this demand.

The regional NLRB, after investigating Teamster objections to the October election, dismissed them and in effect recommended FTA be certified. However, giving way before heavy AFL political pressure, two members of the national board voted to void the entire election and to hold another at a time and under conditions that would assure a "more representative" and a larger vote.

John Houston, third Board member, held that the October election had been representative.

The Board ruled also, in line with the Wagner Act, that neither FTA nor Teamsters should be recognized by management as exclusive bargaining agent until the second election had been held and the winner certified. Meantime, each might represent its own members and the industry was to deal equally with each.

FTA wholly accepted this order, though it had previously expected prompt certification as winner in the first election.

FROM the start, however, Teamster officials defied the Board order. They demanded the canneries recognize them only, and at once.

To stage a show of pressure behind this demand they announced a "blockade" of the canneries by their truck driver members.

FTA, supported by the CIO, urged President Truman ask that the Teamsters give up their illegal blockade attempts, and that he name a presidential committee to determine adequate wage increases for the cannery workers. FTA asked 18½c hourly increase at once, with an additional 6½c to be arbitrated by such a committee.

Spinach was the only crop canned during March. The Teamster blockade rapidly lost effectiveness. Growers hauled their spinach to canneries in their own trucks. Many Teamster truck drivers privately showed their dissatisfaction with the blockade order. By the end of March the blockade had lost effectiveness, except in the misleading statements given out by Teamster and CP&G officials.

2 Cannery workers are quick to discover which union best represents their interests. FTA-CIO is asking 18½c an hour raise immediately, with another 6½c to be arbitrated by a Presidential board, while only 10c an hour raise has been proposed by AFL Teamster officials. Rosalie Norton, right, of the CIO Fisherman's Union, pickets with two Contra Costa County cannery workers before the Oakland, Calif. headquarters of the cannery managements.

Indications of Teamsters—CP&G collusion grew stronger every day.

Meantime CP&G, during the first month after receiving the NLRB order, refused to negotiate with either union but recognized committees of both at the top level.

Reactionary congressmen, some grower groups, and a number of newspapers launched a drive to get the NLRB order amended to allow the canneries to continue the exclusive Teamster contract.

On the CIO side the Steelworkers (USA-CIO) and Warehousemen (LW-CIO), whose members work in the plants that supply the cans to the canneries, voted FTA full support and pledged to stand by for any necessary action.

FTA members and supporters worked on in the canneries, despite the "blockade." Repeatedly during March FTA sought aid from government agencies and offered to sit down with Teamster representatives to work out an interim agreement for the benefit of cannery workers until the NLRB election could be held. Teamsters turned this down. Canneries likewise. Their position was that they couldn't deal with both unions at once, despite the NLRB order.

FULL support was voted by President Philip Murray and the CIO executive board at its latest session. They sent a delegation to NLRB demanding it warn the canneries against signing any illegal agreement with the Teamsters.

Next day NLRB ordered its San Francisco office to proceed against half a dozen individual canneries who had signed with the Teamsters in defiance of the NLRB order of February.

By the end of March the "blockade" was clearly ineffective. Any spinach grower who wanted to get his crop to the cannery could do so. Teamsters reached into the bag to pull out another trick. They called a strike vote in San Jose, their strongest local. Just how they were going to strike spinach canning, with the majority of workers behind the FTA, wasn't clear. It didn't have to be, because it was a collusive stall.

This was revealed when on March 30 the CP&G suddenly announced that "to prevent the loss of California's . . . crops," they were going to "resume . . . regular and customary labor relations with the AFL" and announced they were "convinced that at this time the AFL is the bargaining agent for a majority of the workers now in the CP&G bargaining unit."

Moreover they said they would open negotiations with Teamsters for a new contract in a few days, and did so.

THE CP&G move was promptly branded as a deliberate and flagrant violation of the Wagner Act and the Board's order by the NLRB regional director, J. B. Watson.

The FTA cannery council unanimously declared to the rest of organized labor that " the canners by their action have attempted to strip . . . cannery workers of their legal rights and reduce them to a condition of servitude under a union which is not of their choosing."

The council delegates stated "the purpose of this illegal contract is not to re-open the canneries— which are already operating—(but) to enable the Teamsters to dominate and dictate to cannery workers and thus to force them to vote for the Teamsters in an industry-wide election next summer."

This unprecedented attack on the Wagner Act can be stopped. Action is needed at once.

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

WALTER H. HARRIS, CIO Reg. Dir., reports: San-Equip. Inc., Chicago, USA-CIO 59, against 5; Cudahy Packing Co., E. Chicago, Ind., CIO Packinghouse Workers 15, against 7.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. John J. Maurillo, Syracuse, N. Y., advises: Lennox Furnace Co., Syracuse, USA-CIO 157, AFL 57, no union 24. This plant was organized by USA Reps. Bert Danquer and John Kowalski, assisted by the CIO office and staff.

Geo. Craig, CIO Reg. Dir., Phiadelphia, reports: Warner Bros., Philadelphia, USA-CIO 132, AFL 3; Penna. Lawn-Mower Co., Camden, N. J., USA-CIO 68, against 0; Jacobs Aircraft Co., Pottstown, Pa., USA-CIO 82, against 13.

Wm. B. Taylor, Dir. Org. UGCCWA-CIO, reports: National Carbon Co., Clarksburg, W. Va., CIO 267, no union 216. Rep. Elwood Swisher handled the drive, assisted by Org. Bill Wimmer, Reg. Dir. Wendell Ringholz and V. Pres. Wm. Ross; Reilly Tar and Chemical Corp., Chattanooga, Tenn., CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers scored a 100 per cent victory.

★ ★ ★

C. H. Gillman, CIO Reg. Dir., Atlanta, advises: Aldora Mills, Barnesville, Ga., CIO Textile Workers 281, against 135. This work was under direction of Reps. Frank Barker and Clara Kanum of the TWUA-CIO.

Geo. Craig, CIO Reg. Dir., Philadelphia, advises: Tuscan Silks, Allentown, Pa., CIO Textile Workers 67, against 5.

W. A. Copeland, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Memphis, reports: International Cellucotton Co., Memphis, CIO Textile Workers 123, no union 2. TWA Rep. Grant Williams was in charge. Moss Devoy Brick, Memphis, CIO 51, no union 0. CIO Rep. Henry White handled this one.

CIO Reg. Dir. Jos. M. Walsh, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., advises: U. S. Textile Machinery Co., CIO 67, against 20; Tudor Industries, Inc., CIO 134, against 92. CIO Rep. Frank Vrataric did a splendid job. Rep. Peter Besch of the UERMWA assisted in the Tudor victory.

Walter Harris, CIO Reg. Dir., Chicago, reports: Solar Mfg. Corp., Chicago, UERMWA-CIO, received three out of four votes cast. Only one vote was cast against.

★ ★ ★

Geo. Craig, CIO Reg. Dir., Philadelphia, advises: Jordon Refrigerator Co., Philadelphia, CIO Furniture Workers 46, against 8; P. Lorillard Co., Lancaster, Pa., FTA-CIO 56, AFL 6, against 26; American Engineer Co., Philadelphia, CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers 53, against 18; Precision Plastics Co., Philadelphia, CIO Furniture Workers 54, against 2; Philadelphia Toboggan Co., Philadelphia, UERMWA-CIO 16, against 15; Paper Products Mfg. Co., Swarthmore, Pa., CIO Paperworkers 55, against 36. Congratulations to Rep. Bill Sheer and others participating in this victory in paper.

R. J. Davidson, CIO Reg. Dir., Cincinnati, reports: Inland Container Co., Middletown, Ohio, CIO Paperworkers 63, AFL 1.

W A. Copeland, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Memphis, advises that the CIO Paperworkers were recognized at the Dixie Paper Co., in Memphis, without going to election.

Jos. D. Cannon, CIO Reg. Dir., Louisville, Ky., reports: Machine Products, USA-CIO 14, no union 5, AFL 2.

★ ★ ★

CIO Reg. Dir. John B. Easton, Charleston, W. Va., announces: United Fuel Workers, Charleston, CIO Workers 644, independent union 426, no union 33. OWIU Rep. Harry Drenner was in charge, assisted by Oil Workers locals, CIO Reps. Singleton, Colbank, Wolford and the CIO Regional Office.

CIO Reg. Dir. Ben Henry, Des Moines, Iowa, advises: New Method Equipment Co., Indianola, Iowa, CIO Farm Equipment Workers 35, against 2.

G. Geo. DeNucci, CIO Reg. Dir., Columbus, reports: All municipal employes of Portsmouth were signed up for the SCWMA-CIO under direction of SCWMA Rep. Edw. Kelly. Organizational work was completed by Hap Jordan of the Portsmouth CIO Council and Gilbert Foster.

Hugh Thompson, CIO Reg. Dir., Buffalo, reports: Ford Gum Machine Co., Akron, N. Y., CIO PJ&NWA 18, against 8.

The UOPWA Intl. Office reports: Ebasco Service Co. (engineers and draftsmen), FAECT Chap. No. 231, UOPWA-CIO 131, AFL 86, no union 32.

TO PUT IT BRIEFLY

CIO AUTO WORKERS signed an "outstanding" contract with Bendix Aviation Corp., providing 18½ an hour increases and 10c equalization increases to boost the average hourly pay to $1.36. Shift workers receive a premium, and 7-day operation workers get time and a half for sixth day and double time for seventh day.

ALL CIO LOCALS in the Des Moines, Iowa, area have set up organizing committees to aid the Des Moines CIO Council's organizing campaign.

CIO FARM EQUIPMENT workers in 10 Intl. Harvester plants voted to accept terms of a new contract (reported in last week's CIO NEWS) and end an 84-day strike. The contract, called the "best in the industry," gave 30,000 FE workers an 18c an hour increase.

AN AFL UNION was charged with "unfair labor practices" last week by the Hospital Employes Union of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers. The Intl. Ladies Garment Workers Union negotiated a secret agreement covering nurses and technicians at its Union Health Center with an AFL union, against the wishes of a majority of the Center's workers who are CIO members.

PROTEST PACKING LAYOFFS

MIDWEST packinghouse workers almost took over Washington this week, to carry on a people's lobby protesting lay-offs in the meat packing industry, attacking the packers' refusal to buy meat, and fighting for OPA and price control extension.

Consisting of 27 rank and file workers, the lobby systematically combed government offices, seeing their representatives in Congress and high Federal officials. They followed the tracks of packing trust lobbyists attempting to break OPA controls.

Chief on the list of people seen by the lobby was Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson, who has been in nominal charge of operating the packing plants since the strike of last January.

In their hour-long interview with Anderson, the packinghouse workers pointed out that about 25,000 workers have been laid off from the packing plants since the government has been running the plants. These lay-offs, the workers claimed, are caused by the big packers refusing to buy livestock in an effort to knock out OPA.

The packinghouse delegates told Anderson that the big packers are deliberately encouraging stories of a black market in meat in order to bring more pressure against price control. The lobby noted that the packers tried the same stunt last year when the OPA was up for extension by Congress. "This is open season against the OPA," the delegation said.

As evidence of the big packers' vicious program, the workers told Anderson that livestock buyers out in the ranges are not buying cattle or making any offer of a fair price to the farmers. Anderson admitted that he had not investigated this angle and promised the delegation that he would start an investigation immediately.

The Secretary also flatly told the delegation that the "packers would do everything in their power to eliminate the OPA."

Other officials seen by the packinghouse workers' lobby included OPA Administrator Paul A. Porter and members of his staff, and James F. Brownlee, deputy administrator of the Office of Economic Stabilization and assistant to Chester Bowles.

In New York, packinghouse workers called for a Federal grand jury investigation of tie-ups between the big meet packers and black market operators. The New York OPA said an investigation of the CIO union's charges was being made.

For Umpires, Too?

"If baseball players want to form a union, I think it's a good thing," CIO Vice-Pres. Allan S. Haywood declared last week. Asked at a press conference about the newly-formed American Baseball Guild, Haywood said that he had heard no talk about possible affiliation with the CIO.

ORGANIZING DRIVE ALL CIO—BITTNER

Van A. Bittner, director of the CIO Organizing Committee, this week emphasized that the CIO is conducting and directing all work in connection with its Southern organizing drive and does not want any "interference" from organizations outside CIO.

In a letter to a New York committee to "help organize the South," Bittner pointed out that "the unions affiliated with CIO have pledged the funds to carry on this work" and "we do not need any money to carry on the organizational activities."

"We take this position," he said, "because we are deadly in earnest in our campaign to bring all unorganized workers into unions affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations."

PM FIRES GUILD PRESIDENT

THE newspaper PM, millionaire Marshall Field's labor-conscious New York tabloid, has fired Pres. Milton Murray of the CIO Newspaper Guild and two other Guild veterans from the Washington bureau of the adless newspaper on alleged grounds of "economy."

Having given the management until 7 p.m., April 22 to withdraw the dismissal notices, the PM Guild unit will meet at 4 p.m., that day to prepare for any development.

Victims of the "economy" purge in addition to the ANG chief were John T. Moutoux, past president of Washington and Knoxville (Tenn.) locals of the CIO union who has been PM's principal labor reporter, and Elizabeth Donahue, member of the Washington Guild's executive committee and Capitol Hill reporter for PM.

Washington and New York locals of the Guild joined at once in fighting for reinstatement of the three. PM Editor Ralph Ingersoll first offered them "transfers" to New York for undesignated work at the same pay—and then dismissed the three for "economy" when they declined transfers from their homes and work in Washington.

A week earlier James A. Wechsler, PM's Washington bureau chief, resigned his executive functions rather than give Murray, Moutoux and Miss Donahue the dismissal notices ordered by Ingersoll.

MILTON MURRAY

VIRGINIA CIO GAINS 100%

MORE than 180 delegates to the Virginia State Industrial Union Council Convention affirmed their support of the CIO's organization drive last week.

The three-day convention reflected the growth in membership and vigor which has characterized the CIO in Virginia in the last two years. Since the last state convention, according to a report by retiring president Boyd E. Payton, CIO membership in the state more than doubled.

Charles C. Webber, of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, was unanimously elected president of the state council to succeed Payton, who had announced that he was not a candidate for re-election because of his responsibilities as regional director for the CIO Textile Workers Union.

Webber set the Council's aims: "First, to organize the unorganized workers of Virginia; second, an intensive campaign of workers' education to develop the rank and file of our membership; and finally, to replace the Byrd political machine with representatives who serve the welfare of Virginia's wage earners."

Lloyd Vaughn, CIO general organizer, was chosen secretary-treasurer of the State Council, a post he held before his Army service.

News of the forthcoming CIO organizing drive was given to the delegates first-hand by National CIO leaders. Among the speakers were Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice president and director of organization; John Brophy, director of CIO councils, and Jack Kroll, assistant director of the organizing drive.

To develop political activity, the convention voted to increase the present per capita assessment from 3c to 5c per member per month. The additional 2c will be earmarked for political action.

Resolutions called for intensified workers education activity; for protection of the rights of the Negro and other minority groups; for wholehearted support of the CIO southern drive; for condemnation of the anti-labor acts of the Virginia Legislature; for greater allocation of State funds to adult education, and for support of United Nations unity.

FORT WORTH PARLEY SPEAKERS LISTED

Announcement was made this week by the CIO Dept. of Research and Education of a list of speakers who have accepted invitations to speak at the Southwestern Educational Conference to be held April 27-28 at Fort Worth, Tex. They are:

Pres. Jack Knight of the CIO Oil Workers; Leo Huberman, author of The Truth About Unions; Palmer Weber, PAC research director; Noble Combs of the CIO Auto Workers' educational dept.; Harvey O'Connor editor of the Oil Worker; Latane Lambert of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Sec. Morris Aiken of the Texas CIO Council, Robert Oliver, Texas regional CIO director; Director Kermit Eby and Assistant Director of Education George T. Guernsey of the CIO Dept. of Research and Education.

FEDERAL worker, (above) a Navy Yard coppersmith, is one of thousands of CIO Federal Workers members.

CITY fireman, (left) is a member of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers. Both federal and city workers will be united in one CIO union at convention of the two organizations.

UNION OF GOVERNMENT WORKERS

TWO unions of government workers will meet in Atlantic City this week—and when the week is up one big CIO union is scheduled to emerge.

The two unions, the CIO Federal Workers and the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers, will vote on a merger approved by their executive boards and then consider their greater task of utilizing new, consolidated strength to secure the peace and the promise of prosperity.

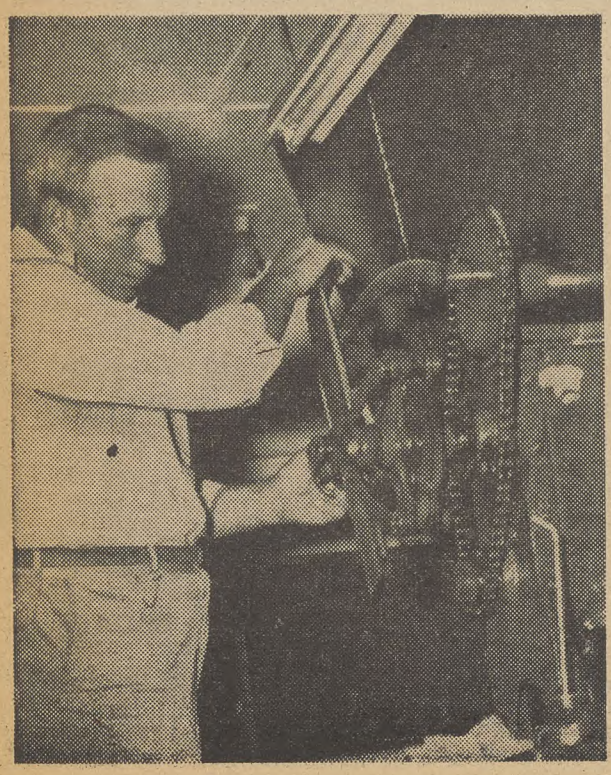
Setting the sights for government workers, SCMWA Pres. Abram Flaxner said, "high wages, collective bargaining, full participation in social and progressive legislation, first class citizenship; these are the four walls of a solid structure the government workers will build through their union."

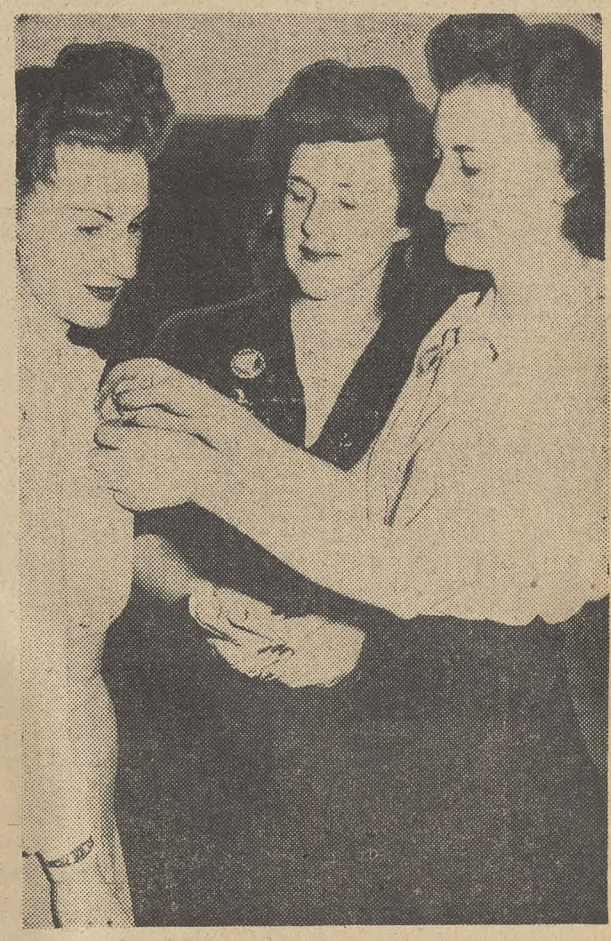
"The first and greatest problem is one we share with the whole American people: how to maintain and deepen the victory won only nine short months ago by winning the peace. Today we see the promises made during war cynically repudiated in instance after instance," he added.

"Congress has watered down the post-war bill of economic rights outlined by former President Roosevelt until the concept of full employment and the more abundant life is little more than a dim dream."

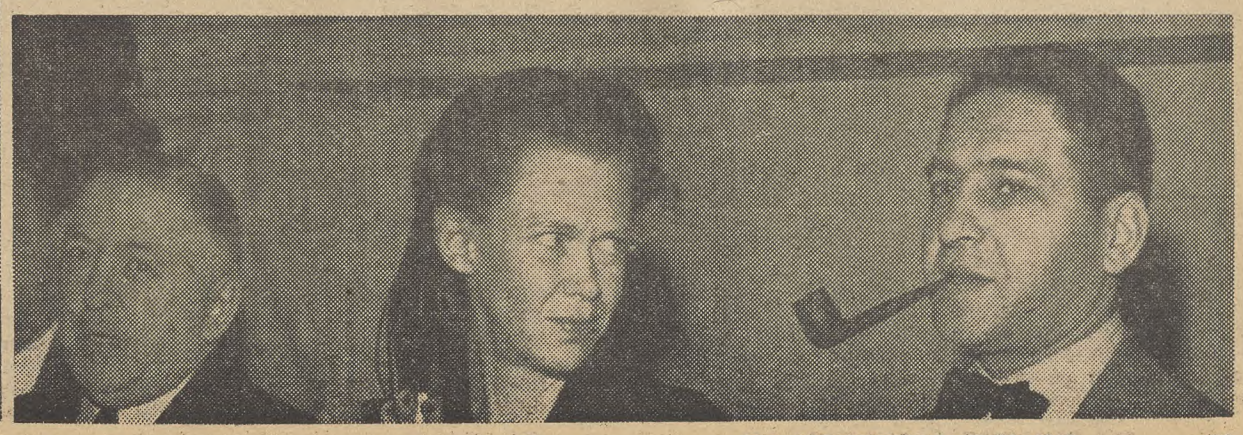
The new union, President Nelson of the Federal Workers said, will start off with greater strength and wider influence than any other single organization of government workers which the country has ever seen. In the new union, she continued, "lies the promise of a better future for American public employes and better government services for all the people."

Union-made water is turned on by Hackensack, N. J., SCMWA member.





(Above) Three beauties, Federal white collar workers in Chicago, get hostess badges at their Labor Canteen.



(Below) Eleanor Nelson, Federal Workers president, is flanked by CIO Vice-Pres. Allan S. Haywood, (left) and SCMWA Pres. Abram Flaxner.

1946 POLITICAL

The CIO Political Action Committee this week unanimously adopted a program designed to provide a "firm foundation for stable peace, full employment, greater security and wider democracy for our nation." On these two pages, the program is printed in full.

UNDER the leadership of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, our nation, together with our great allies, have won conclusive victory in the long war against the fascist powers.

Today we face the tasks of peace. They are no less difficult than those of war. They demand from the common people of America the utmost in understanding, devotion and effort, and the full and intelligent exercise of their rights of citizenship.

In November 1946 we will elect a House of Representatives and one-third of the members of the Senate. The actions of this new Congress will largely determine whether or not our nation shall embark on a firm course of enduring peace in the world and an economy of plenty at home.

The CIO Political Action Committee submits herewith its program for 1946. It is a program which provides a firm foundation for stable peace, full employment, greater security and wider democracy for our nation. It is a program around which labor, together with Americans in all walks of life, can unite.

The CIO Political Action Committee calls upon the people to measure the record of every candidate for office against this program; to give their support to those whose records carry the assurance that they will work with courage and vigor for its fulfillment, and to oppose those who have forfeited the people's confidence by their failure to act in the people's interest.

FOREIGN POLICY

Our nation possesses the food reserves of the world.

Our nation possesses half of the industrial facilities of the world.

Our nation possesses tens of billions of dollars of liquid capital.

Our nation possesses atomic power.

Food, industrial, financial and atomic power: The way in which America uses its power will determine the future peace and security of the world.

1. The Path of Peace

The will of all peoples is peace. The United Nations is the expression and the instrument of their will. The United Nations must command the full support of our nation and its people so that it may grow strong in the battle for peace.

The war-born unity of Great Britain, the Soviet Union and the United States was the key to our victory over the enemy. Their unity is no less essential if the United Nations is to be the sure guardian of the peace.

We repudiate all efforts calculated to weaken or destroy friendship and close collaboration among the Big Three. We reject proposals for American participation in any bloc or alliance which is inimical to their unity.

The partnership of Great Britain, the Soviet Union and the United States is founded upon and draws its strength from agreement to take common action in support of these fundamental principles:

1. The destruction of the economic and social roots of fascism in Germany and Japan through the full implementation of the Potsdam decisions.

2. Respect for the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live and absolute opposition to any form of aggression by any power.

3. Restoration of sovereign rights and self-government to those who have been forcibly deprived of them.

4. Furtherance of the enjoyment by all states of access on equal terms to the trade and to the raw materials of the world.

These principles must be the guideposts to American foreign policy. Firm adherence to these principles by all nations—not atomic weapons and armaments—is the path of peace. We recognize that there are reactionary forces in our country which want to pursue a different path. They do not want the roots of fascism destroyed. They seek to use the great power of America to win world domination for themselves. These forces must be isolated and defeated. Their path is the path to war.

We urge early consideration by the United Nations of measures for progressive universal disarmament to implement the declaration of the Atlantic Charter that "all of the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons must come to the abandonment of the use of force."

2. Atomic Energy

We urge that regulation of all phases of atomic energy be promptly lodged in the United Nations, with full power of inspection and control over atomic weapons, and that all atomic weapons be delivered to it. Pending the exercise of these powers by the Security Council, we urge legislation by the Congress vesting control of atomic energy in a civilian commission.

3. Relief, Rehabilitation and Reconstruction

The people of the war-devastated lands look to us for assistance in the tremendous tasks of rehabilitation and reconstruction. We cannot fail in our simple human responsibility to millions of suffering fellowmen. Nor can we hope for a peaceful world or a prosperous America so long as any great number of the people of the earth remain in dire need.

We urge full and unstinting support to UNRRA as the essential agency to alleviate starvation and undertake the first immediate steps toward rehabilitation. We support the immediate resumption of food rationing to make American food available to the starving of other lands.

PHILIP MURRAY

President of CIO

We urge the prompt extension of loans to our needy allies to permit them to buy the raw materials and equipment necessary to set the wheels of their industries turning again. Long-term credits at low interest rates will pay substantial dividends, both in international good will and in the stream of foreign trade that is vital to a healthy American economy.

Assistance for relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction must be extended on the basis of need alone. The power of the American dollar must not be used to coerce or influence free peoples in the exercises of their inalienable right of self-government.

4. Spain and Argentina

The existence of fascism in Spain and Argentina is by no means exclusively an internal question for the oppressed people of these nations. As long as fascism exists anywhere, it constitutes a source of infections and a danger to the peace of free people and free nations everywhere. We urge the United Nations Security Council to take concerted action to quarantine these centers of fascist infection and to assist the people of Spain and Argentina to restore democratic rights and self-government.

5. Colonial Countries

We urge full American support of the just demands of the Colonial peoples for the rights of self-determination and self-government.

6. The World Federation of Trade Unions

We urge American support for effective participation by the World Federation of Trade Unions in the work of the United Nations. The active assistance and support of world labor is essential to the task of building an enduring peace.

DOMESTIC AFFAIRS

The Roosevelt Economic Bill of Rights embodies the hopes of all America. His vision remains for our efforts to fulfill:

"The right to a useful and remunerative job in the industries, or shops or farms, or mines of the Nations;

"The right to earn enough to provide adequate food and clothing and recreation;

"The right of every farmer to raise and sell his products at a return which will give him and his family a decent living;

"The right of every businessman, large and small, to trade in an atomosphere of freedom from unfair competition and domination by monopolies at home or abroad;

"The right of every family to a decent home;

"The right to adequate medical care and the opportunity to achieve and enjoy good health;

"The right to a good education;

"The right to adequate protection from the economic fears of old age, sickness, accident and unemployment;

"All of these rights spell security. And after this war is won, we must be prepared to move forward, in the implementation of these rights, to new goals of human happiness and well-being."

1. "We Must Be Prepared to Move Forward"

Americans can make the Economic Bill of Rights a living reality.

We emerged from the war with a national income of two hundred billion dollars, a vastly expanded industry, a sharp increase in labor productivity and with our liquid reserves at an all-time peak. We have all the requisites for an economy of abundance: the natural and human resources, the industrial plant, the technical know-how, and the financial capital.

These great riches must be made to serve the whole people. They can do so only if our economy generates the mass purchasing power which will enable all Americans to enjoy the abundance our farms and factories are geared to produce. The program of CIO is directed to this end. It is directed against the forces of reaction whose program is abundance for a privileged few and want of the many.

At the war's end, living costs had risen more than double the increase in basic wage rates. Reconversion to peace-time employment carried with it a sharp decline in the purchasing power of the American worker.

In November, 1945, the CIO presented its proposal for maintaining the national purchasing power to the President's Labor-Management Conference. It was a simple proposal: substantial wage increases to be agreed upon through collective bargaining.

The captains of America's basic industries gave a curt answer: No. That answer revealed their program: to smash our labor organizations, destroy the workingman's only source of strength, depress wages, and shrink up mass purchasing power.

The CIO had no recourse but to the picket lines. The common people, farmers, veterans, small businessmen, rallied behind its struggle to preserve the nation's pay envelope. Through the strength of its organizations and with the support of the people, CIO won the first round in the battle for American abundance.

Now the fight shifts from the picket line to Capitol Hill and to the ballot box. Our victories on the economic front will be swept away if the people meet defeat on the political front.

The economic royalists who said "No" to CIO's wage proposal have their counterparts in the Congress who are serving them well.

The coalition of poll-tax Democats and reactionary Republicans thwarts the peoples' program. It blocks the Roosevelt legislative proposals which are being carried forward by President Truman in his messages to the Congress.

It threatens to cancel wage increases by price increases, leading to a disastrous inflation. It blocks action for adequate housing to veterans as well as workers, for a public health program, for adequate social security, for job and educational opportunities.

It opposes jobs for all and refuses to subscribe to the principle of full employment—even as a goal toward which we should strive. It sabotages minimum wage legislation. It denies full citizenship to the Negro people by filibustering the Fair Employment Practices and Anti-Poll Tax Acts. It attempts to smash the power of labor by legislation to destroy the trade unions.

This coalition of reaction fought Franklin Roosevelt while he lived. Now, it seeks to rob the people of the heritage he left us. His answer remains our watchword: "For all these things, we have just begun to fight."

2. "The Right to a Useful and Remunerative Job"

A. Maximum Prices.

In the year that followed World War I, the cost of living rose 46%. Payrolls declined 44%. The depression of 1921 followed. It claimed these victims: 106,000 bankrupt business; 450,000 farm foreclosures; 5½ million jobless workers.

The National Association of (Continued on Next Page)

ACTION PROGRAM

(Continued from preceding page)

Manufacturers wants another 1921 and demands the termination of all price controls. Hundreds of lobbyists swarm Capitol Hill for special privilege amendments on behalf of the National Real Estate Board, the Meat Packing Trust and other selfish interests.

We demand the continuance of the Price Control Act, without loopholes or amendments.

We oppose any policy of appeasement in the administration of OPA or the removal or relaxation of price ceilings. We urge vigorous enforcement and the elimination of the black market.

B. Minimum Wages

Sub-standard wages must be eliminated from American industry. The existing minimum is inadequate and obsolete, both for the human needs of the workers and for the economic needs of the nation.

We urge the immediate enactment of the 65-75 cent minimum wage amendments, including the extension of benefits to seamen, food processing workers and employees of large retail stores and chains. We denounce the maneuver of attaching the highly inflationary Pace amendment to this legislation in order to kill it.

C. White Collar and Professional Workers

Full employment and the achievement of CIO's Jobs for All program is the only assurance of security for the white collar worker. The wages and living standards of white collar workers must be improved along with those of industrial workers.

White collar workers must also be given the benefit of social security and health protection. Their budgets cannot stand the strain of long illness and hospitalization.

The future of the teacher and professional worker is dependent upon the wage of those he serves.

3. "The Right to a Decent Home"

America is three million homes short of immediate minimum requirements.

Veterans return from fox-holes to park benches. Workers are doubled and tripled up in cramped and crowded tenments.

Yet the Congress dallies while the real estate lobby plays the tune.

Further delay in housing the homeless is intolerable.

We demand immediate enactment of the Patman-Wyatt emergency housing bill including the essential provisions for 600 million dollars in subsidies and for ceiling prices on new and old homes.

America is fifteen million homes short of its basic needs. The satisfaction of those needs requires a long-range Federal housing program. Such a program has long been languishing in the Congress.

We ask the prompt enactment of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill providing an integrated Federal program for slum clearance and low-cost housing.

4. "The Right to Adequate Medical Care"

The national health is not good. Over 40% of our selectees were found physically unfit for military duty.

More than 23 million Americans have chronic diseas.

Yet some 15 million people, living in 40% of our counties, are without full-time public health officers or general hospitals.

For other millions, adequate medical care is beyond their means.

The American Medical Association brands a minimum public health program as "socialism." And Congress fails to act.

We demand the immediate enactment of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Health Bill to make adequate medical care and hospitalization available to the people.

We also urge the enactment of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell proposals for more adequate old-age benefits and unemployment insurance.

5. Veterans

We owe the greatest obligation to our men and women who fought Fascism on all the war fronts of the world. By building an economy of plenty, we must assure them of jobs and security.

In addition, consideration must be accorded to their special need.

We ask that Congress amend the present G.I. bill of rights to provide more liberal allotments for education and easier terms for loans to purchase homes, businesses and farms. Congress should also provide for veteran priorities in the purchase of surplus properties and make provision for their sale in smaller units.

Special provisions are needed to expedite the placing of veterans in jobs for which they are qualified. Increased benefits should be granted to disabled veterans and their dependents. Federal unemployment insurance should be fixed at a minimum of $25 a week and paid as long as unemployment continues, coverage to commence four weeks after demobilization and continue for two years.

The CIO has and will fight for accumulated service seniority for all time spent in the services by veterans. We pledge to protect the job rights of our men and women who fought Fascism. We welcome their support in the fight for a prosperous America.

6. "The Right to a Good Education"

Of seventy-five million adult Americans, 36 million did not finish elementary school. Sixty per cent of all adult Americans did not finish first year high school. Our nation has six million illiterates; three million adults never attended school.

We must guarantee equality of educational opportunity to every American.

We propose that the Federal Government establish minimum educational standards, based on the principle that every boy and girl is entitled to free education through the high school level, with advanced study for those of demonstrated ability.

The average annual salary of all teachers, principals and supervisors in 1942 was $1,500; the average for rural teachers was about $900. We urge the establishment of an adequate minimum wage scale for teachers.

We urge federal grants in aid to assist in financing this program and to eliminate the existing inequalities between (1) rural and urban education and (2) between education for Negro and education for white children, without interference with private educational institutions or local control.

SIDNEY HILLMAN

Chairman of CIO-PAC

We also advocate a program of Federal aid to make hot meals available to every school child without cost.

In ten critical war centers in October 1943, even with federal assistance, there were facilities for day-care of only 12,000 children against a need of almost 200,000.

We urge adequate appropriations to support a Federal-State nursery school program which will assure every working mother proper day-time care of her preschool children.

7. "The Right of Every Farmer"

Five hundred million people will go hungry this year.

The world is 17 million tons short of weat; four million tons short of sugar; 3 billion pounds short of fats and oils; six million tons short of rice.

Millions will starve, even with every effort to meet their needs.

We need full farm production.

We advocate the continuance of price guarantees to farmers at levels which will encourage full production and assure them a fair return for their product.

We demand that Federal subsidies on meat and other foods be continued as essential to assure a fair price to the farmer and encourage production, without increasing the cost of living or contributing to inflation.

All agricultural programs and planning should be designed to push production, eliminate discrimination against rural areas and give farm people the same social and economic benefits enjoyed by city dwellers.

All farm programs, including the Farm Tenant Purchase Program, rehabilitation program and soil conservation program, should be directed toward the protection of the family owned and operated farm.

8. "The Right of Every Business Man"

Between 1900 and 1939, 16,000,000 businesses opened their doors. 14,000,000 of those businesses closed their doors Small business has been and is now being destroyed by monopoly.

Opportunity for small business to grow is essential to the attainment of full employment. We urge an adequate program of government credits to small business to finance its purchase of surplus government property and facilitate reconversion We favor the Department of Commerce program to give small businesses access to expert research, engineering and marketing services.

We urge vigorous action under the Anti-Trust laws against monopolies and international cartels which restrict production, stifle fair competition, hamper the full development of domestic and foreign trade and endanger world peace.

9. Taxation

We need a national fiscal policy based on progressive taxation of large incomes, with a reduction of taxes on low income groups and the exemption of all incomes below the level required for a minimum standard of decent living. Tax policy should be directed toward maintaining the national purchasing power at a maximum.

The flagrant manner in which corporations, swollen with war profits, have employed the carry-back and carry-forward provisions of the 1942 Revenue Act to avoid collective bargaining and restrict production dictates its repeal.

10. Freedom From Fear —Freedom of Religion

Fascism thrives on prejudice. Fascism organizes prejudice.

Fascist, subversive movements, destructive of the civil liberties of minority groups in American life, are flourishing openly. The Ku Klux Klan is being revived. Numerous anti-Semitic organizations are spreading their poison.

Attacks on Jews, Catholic, Negroes, Italian-Americans and other minorities have been made even on the floor of the Congress by a few members of the Tory coalition.

The outrageous action of the State militia in Columbia, Tennessee, against an entire Negro community must not become America's post-war pattern in race relations.

The hateful practice of discrimination because of race, religion or national origin must be stamped out. Full economic, political and civil equality must be guaranteed to every American, regardless of his race, creed or national origin.

1. We condemn the vicious filibuster against the FEPC in the Senate. We demand that Congress demonstrate that it is the Congress of all the American people by enacting a permament Fair Employment appropriations and enforcement powers.

2. We urge Congress to abolish the Wood-Rankin Committee, whose activities against freedom of the air, freedom of the press, freedom of assembly and freedom of association have brought the dignity of the Congress into disgrace and threaten to make its powers the instrument of Nazi-minded groups in American life.

3. The simple right to vote is still denied to whole sections of our population through poll tax and other voting restrictions. Full political democracy has not yet been won. We call upon the Senate of the United States to enact H.R. 7 to abolish the poll tax and grant full rights of Federal citizenship to ten million disfranchised Southerners.

4. The revival of the use of illegal injunctions and police violence to destroy the rights of labor are part and parcel of the same reactionary drive to divide and confuse the common people of America and to set at naught our long cherished and hard-won civil liberties.

Free, strong and responsible labor organizations are the bulwark of democracy. Their growth, and the extension of the process of collective bargaining throughout American industry must be encouraged as an objective of national policy. The right to join labor unions of their own choosing must be guaranteed and protected for all wage earners, including federal, state and local government employes. Legislation such as the Case Bill and Ball-Burton-Hatch Bill, designed to destroy labor unions must be defeated.

11. "Hawaii"

We urge the Congress to grant statehood to the territory of Hawaii.

"ALL OF THESE RIGHTS SPELL SECURITY"

The program of Franklin Roosevelt embodies the hopes and aspirations of the common people of America. It was for this program that they voted in 1944.

The reactionary coalition in Congress defies the will of the people as they expressed it at the polls.

The 1946 elections must witness a tremendous reaffirmation of their will by the election of candidates committed, in word and deed, to the realization of this program.

To such a reaffirmation, the CIO dedicates itself. It calls upon all like-minded individuals and groups to join forces with it in the great endeavor to build a peaceful and a plentiful America.

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS — By Rose H. Alschuler

LET'S GO!

Children like to go exploring by themselves, with other children or with parents. One of the best ways to establish satisfying relationships is to go places and do things with children. They trail us so often that we should as frequently as possible go at their pace to places they especially enjoy. Given all of our attention, the simplest jaunts make them happy. Three year olds enjoy watching trains, buses, boats, a cement mixer, a visit to a florist. Four year olds enjoy an airport or a zoo almost as much as their fathers. For five year olds, a visit to a post office, Daddy's office, a bridge, a water tower or a shoemaker's is full of interest. Go their way at their pace whenever you can.

Lib. of Congress—Jack Delano for OWI

NEGRO CONGRESS MEET

The Natl. Negro Congress this week announced that five additional prominent individuals would be among the speakers at the 10th anniversary convention of the congress in Detroit, beginning Memorial Day, May 30. They are: Reps. DeLacy (D., Wash.) and Powell (ALP, N. Y.), New York Councilman Davis; Ken. Eckert, national chairman, die casting division, CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, and Sec. Walter Frisbie of the Indiana IUC.

CALIF. KLAN RAIDED

Revival of the Ku Klux Klan in Southern California was dramatized recently at Big Bear when Klansmen ran seven Negroes out of the resort town. Raiding the former Klan headquarters in Los Angeles, Atty. Gen. Robert W. Kenny and investigators found an electrically-lighted cross, thousands of anti-Jewish pamphlets and evidence which they said linked the local Klan with Gerald L. K. Smith.

ONLY THIRD OF PEOPLE IN HEALTH PLANS

VOLUNTARY health programs such as are advocated by the American Medical Assn. would not protect so many people so well as would the National Health Bill (S. 1606), now being considered by the Senate Labor and Education Committee, declares the current CIO Economic Outlook, issued this week.

"Less than a third of our total population now have any kind of protection against medical or hospital cost under voluntary prepayment plans or through commercial insurance," states the Outlook. "Of the 40 million people who have some kind of medical or hospital insurance, about 22 million are members of the Blue Cross or other plans which provide only hospitalization.

"Many of the prepayment plans which provide physicians' services are very limited. For instance, most of the plans give you only surgical care in a hospital. If you have pneumonia, you have to bear the doctor's costs yourself."

The Outlook points out that under the National Health Bill, for a cent or a cent and a half out of every dollar earned by the worker, plus a like amount contributed by employers and appropriations by the government, virtually all of the population would receive complete medical care, including examinations, hospitalization and specialists' services.

CSC ASKS GREATER SHARE IN RED CROSS

The Natl. CIO Community Services Committee this week served notice that it would not renew its fund-raising agreement with the American Red Cross, scheduled to expire April 30, unless provision is made for labor's "democratic participation" in the volunteer work and services of the Red Cross on a nation-wide community level.

Pointing out that under the wartime arrangement CIO-CSC helped raise more than $50,000,000 in three Red Cross campaigns through thousands of volunteers in CIO ranks, Irving Abramson, CSC national chairman, notified Basil O'Connor, Red Cross chairman, that "during peacetime there can be no excuse for any agreement that is only of unilateral benefit to the Red Cross for fund-raising without any provision for full particpation in the work of your organization."

Abramson said that throughout the war the CIO group had vainly sought an opportunity to take part in Red Cross activities and services, adding that "our efforts to create a more wholesome understanding between Red Cross chapters and local labor groups were discouraged at every turn."

Specifically, he said the present agreement "does not provide for, nor does the Red Cross indicate any interest in, our efforts to promote volunteer participation in home nursing, first aid and other essential Red Cross volunteer work on a community basis."

ARE YOU LISTENING?

Labor - USA programs, sponsored by CIO, on timely issues of the day

Polltax, Atomic Energy, Minimum Wages

Keep An Ear Tuned For Coming Programs

- Housing
- Farm-Labor Relations
- The Nation's Health
- CIO in the South

You'll Hear—
Good Music, Fast-Moving Dramatic Sketches

LABOR-USA

Sponsored by CIO
ABC Network

EVERY SATURDAY
6:45 P.M., EST

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

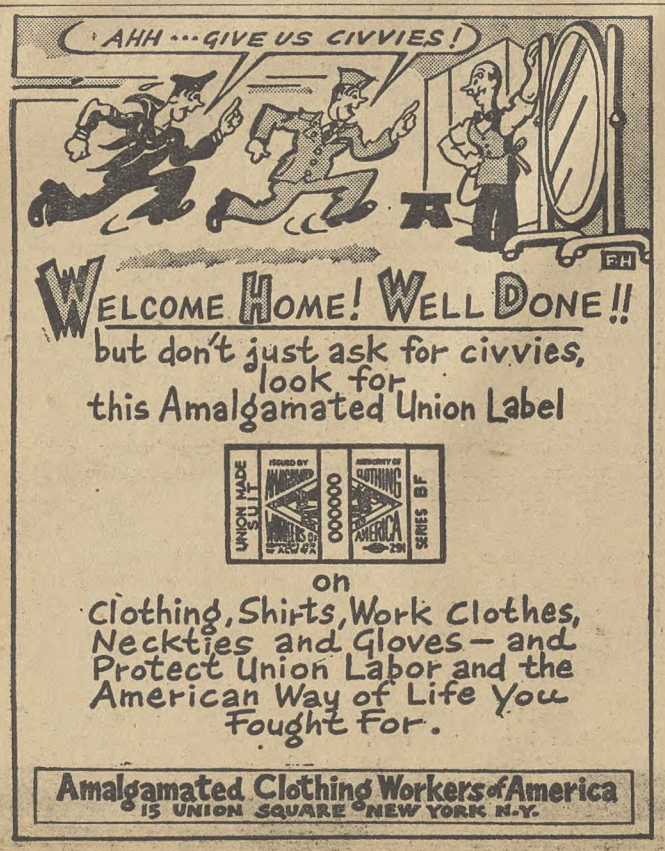
NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges · Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
District 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO. QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS
UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES · MEMBERSHIP · EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS · ADVERTISING · LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1639-49 W. Evergreen Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815



44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C. I. O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 4600 West Parker Ave., Chicago 39, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

the ADVENTURES of
JIM BARRY
by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

FOLLOWING MICKEY TO STEVE DENTON'S HOUSE, JIM DISCOVERS THAT MICKEY HAD JOINED THE ANTI-UNION CLIQUE IN ORDER TO EXPOSE IT. WITH MICKEY HELD A PRISONER BY DENTON'S MEN — JIM CALLS IN HELP...

YOU MEAN THAT KID BROTHER OF YOURS IS NOT A RAT?

THAT'S RIGHT... DENTON'S MEN ARE HOLDING HIM PRISONER — AND PLAN TO KILL HIM!

I OVERHEARD DENTON'S PLOT, FRED. HE'S GOING TO KILL MICKEY TO SHUT HIM UP — AND AT THE SAME TIME START A FRAME-UP AGAINST THE UNION!

WOW! MICKEY IS THE LEADER OF THE ANTI-UNION MOVEMENT... HE'S KNOCKED OFF... LOGICAL SUSPECT — THE UNION!

TONIGHT AT THE UNION MEETING... DENTON IS GOING TO PULL SOMETHING... DON'T KNOW WHAT, BUT I'M SURE OF IT!

I'LL BET HE'S GOING TO SET THE STAGE... MAKE SOME KIND OF STATEMENT THAT WILL PREPARE FOR THE FRAME-UP...

WE GOTTA DO SOME-THING... BUT FAST!

RIGHT! WE'LL GET SOME OF THE BOYS FROM THE UNION AND RESCUE MICKEY!

LET'S GO...

LATER THAT EVENING...

UNION MEETING IS ABOUT STARTING... DENTON IS PROBABLY THERE... SO THE COAST IS CLEAR FOR US TO PAY HIS HOUSE A VISIT...

THE BOYS ARE ALL AROUND THE PLACE... JUST GIVE US THE SIGNAL.

THEY'LL SEE US FROM THE HOUSE...

I WANT THEM TO SEE US, FRED. WE'RE NOT BREAKING IN — JUST DROPPING IN FOR A VISIT...

YEAH... THIS IS THE DENTON HOUSE. WHADAYA WANT?

I'D LIKE TO SEE MR. DENTON... OR MICKEY BARRY...

MR. DENTON AIN'T HOME AND I NEVER HOID OF THIS PUNK BARRY — HEY! WHAT'S DA IDEA?

YOU'LL SEE IN A MINUTE, RAT!

OKAY, WISEGUYS! GET 'EM UP!

YOU ARE A WELCOME SIGHT... ESPECIALLY WHEN YOU THREATEN PEACE-FUL CITIZENS WITH A GUN... IN FACT I WAS HOPING FOR THIS!

NOW WE CAN GO TO TOWN — AND HAND YOU BOYS AN EDUCATIONAL LECTURE!

ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, INC.

MESKIN

WASHINGTON GUIDE

The Case Bill—A Threat to Labor

New proposals for curbing labor's rights are now before the Senate in the form of the Case bill (H. R. 4908). When it comes up for debate, various polltaxers and conservative Republicans are going to enjoy a Roman feast of union-baiting.

More important than oratory is the danger that passage of the bill in the Senate will clamp on new handcuffs on labor's freedom of action. The Case bill has already been passed in the House; the Senate remains the last place to fight it.

In reporting out the bill, the Senate Committee on Education and Labor amputated many of the worst provisions inserted by the House reactionary bloc. The committee recommended creation of a new U. S. Mediation Board to foster conciliation and arbitration—an agency which CIO feels unnecessary; and a provision for criminal penalties against those who use "violence, coercion, intimidation and extortion" in preventing the transportation of perishable farm products by farmers or their employes.

That latter clause is intended to apply to the AFL Teamsters Union—but any student of labor history knows that such laws have a tendency to be used by all sorts of union-busters.

The committee's version of the bill doesn't contain sufficient vinegar for Senate anti-union groups, which are already laying plans to insure a war against labor.

Spearheading this drive are three Senators: Joseph Ball of Minnesota, who blandly protests that he's a "liberal"; Robert Taft of Ohio, who's always in there pitching on any bill to curb the people's freedom, and H. A. Smith of New Jersey, a rank-and-file conservative.

Their six-point program will be backed with amendments to the Case bill and the voices and votes of many polltax and northern Republican Senators.

It calls for: (1) permitting employers to sue unions for alleged contract violations; (2) withdrawal of Wagner Act protection from workers accused of engaging in a "wildcat strike"; (3) a forced 60-day cooling off period; (4) prohibition of unionization of foremen or supervisors; (5) use of injunction against secondary boycotts; (6) elimination of "violence or threats" to prevent scabs from crossing picket lines.

You can figure out for yourself the wonderful time the country's corps of corporation lawyers are going to have with any such provisions.

To head them off, wire or write your Senator today to vote against any version of the Case bill.

Less Draft—A Better Army

CIO's position on the continuation of the draft (the House subsequently voted for a five-month "moratorium") was expressed by Legislative Director Nathan Cowan last week in a letter to Congressional leaders, shortly before the House approved a five-month "moratorium."

Highlights of his statement:

1. "We believe the U. S. should maintain sufficient forces to fulfill our occupation duties in former enemy territory, and to discharge our obligations under the charter of the United Nations."

2. Sufficient men for this task can be obtained through enlistments—providing the Army removes such obstacles as the caste system; low pay of enlisted men and discrimination in the matter of privileges, terminal pay, etc.; and inefficiencies and personnel-padding at military posts.

3. Indueted GIs who have been serving at home or abroad should be discharged as soon as possible.

4. "We oppose compulsory military service in peace time."

Let Them Hear From You!

The following Senators, members of the Senate Banking & Currency Committee, are studying the Price Control Extension Bill (HR 6042). Send them a deluge of wires urging removal of all crippling amendments, so that OPA can do a job of warding off inflation.

Robert Wagner (D., N. Y.), chairman; Carter Glass (D., Va.); Alben Barkley (D., Ky.); John H. Bankhead (D., Ala.); George Radcliffe (D., Md.); Sheridan Downey (D., Calif.); Abe Murdock (D., Utah); James Scrugham (D., Nev.); Ernest McFarland (D., Ariz.); Glen Taylor (D., Ida.); J. W. Fulbright (D., Ark); Hugh Mitchell (D., Wash.); E. Carville (D., Nev.); Charles Tobey (R., N. H.); Robert Taft (R., O.); John Thomas (R., Ida.); Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.); Arthur Capper (R., Kans.); C. D. Buck (R., Del.); Eugene Millikin (R., Col.); Bourke Hickenlooper (R., Ia.); Homer Capehart (R., Ind.).

And—while you're about it—telegraph to your own Senator that you stand four-square against killing OPA and bringing on wild inflation.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price Control HR 6042	Extends price control act to June 1947.	Passed by House with flock of death-dealing amendments; Senate Banking Committee has opened hearings.	Wire your Senators and members of Banking Committee to pass bill without amendments. Strong action is needed to save OPA and price control.
Patman Housing Bill HR 4761	Provides basis for big housing program for vets.	In Senate-House Conference Committee. At issue: restoration of subsidies and govt. guarantee to buy prefabricated housing.	Wire conferees to re-insert subsidy, pre-fabricated housing purchases. Ask Senators to pass bill.
Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill S 1592	Provides long range housing and slum clearance program.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee hearings to open soon.	Ask support of your Congressman and members of House Banking Committee.
Minimum Wage S 1349	Lifts minimum pay to 65c. Senate added inflationary Pace rider, despite Pres. Truman's threat to veto, and thus kill bill.	Passed by Senate; now ready for House Labor Committee.	Ask Representatives to kill Pace rider and add coverage for seamen, retail, food and communications workers.
Wagner-Murray-Dingell Health Bill S 1606	Establishes national health program aimed at providing adequate low-cost medical service.	Hearings being conducted by Senate Labor Committee; CIO to testify in early May.	Write your Senator that you want bill passed.
Case Bill HR 4908	Would harass unions with many new restrictions and anti-labor devices.	Passed by House; Senate Labor Committee passed milder version, but Tories hope to load it with tough amendments.	Wire, write your Senators that you don't want the Case bill in any form.

YOUR CONGRESSMAN MAY BE HOME FOR EASTER—IF HE IS, PAY HIM A VISIT!

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

PRICE CONTROL: It's now or never, so far as price control is concerned.

The bill (H. R. 6042) to extend price control must have its crippling amendments removed. There are lots of them, some simple, some complicated.

You don't have to worry too much about what they say—they're all bad. They all represent the effort of one special group or another to pave the way for huge and sinister profit-making.

Taken singly, the amendments are bad. Added together, they spell one word—INFLATION.

What to do about it? First, wire members of the Senate Banking Committee (see names in adjoining column) to approve a Senate version without amendments. Wire your Senators to do likewise. And if your Congressman comes home for Easter, pledge him to vote against amendments when the bill comes out of House-Senate conference committee.

If the bill passes Congress as it passed the House, we're in for trouble.

HOUSING: Patman Housing Bill (HR 4761) has been passed by House and Senate, is now in conference committee to square away the two versions. The bill aims at making possible construction of 2,500,000 homes in the next couple of years.

Two features must be retained in the final version: $600,000,000 subsidies on building materials, and a guarantee by the government to purchase all available prefabricated homes.

Get your wires on this subject to the following members of the conference committee today, for bill is now under consideration: Rep. Brent Spence (D., Ky); Rep. Wright Patman (D., Tex); Rep. Paul Brown (D., Ga.); Rep. William Barry (D., N. Y.); Rep. Jesse Wolcott (R., Mich.); Rep. Fred L. Crawford (R., Mich.); Rep. Ralph Gamble (R., N. Y.); Sen. Alben Barkley (D., Ky.); Sen. Abe Murdock (D., Utah); Sen. Hugh Mitchell (D., Wash); Sen. Clayton Buck (R., Del.); Sen. Homer Capehart (R., Ind.).

MISCELLANY: HR 4051, to provide terminal pay for discharged soldiers, is due for debate soon. Bill was bottled in committee, was forced on calendar by a discharge petition. . . . CIO asked Senate approval for Cooley bill, which provides assistance to small farmers.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President

NATHAN COWAN, Chairman

ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 18

Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS
$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

April 29, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

GRASS ROOTS WARNING—SAVE OPA!

"God help us if they wreck OPA," the Senate heard this week from UE-CIO member John C. Saccocio and his wife. More teeth for price control, not less —jail instead of only fines— were recommended for ceiling violators. Full details on Page 3.

HEARST, WINCHELL PAY $19,000 LIBEL TO NMU

PRES. Joseph Curran of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union announced this week that a check for $10,000 has been received from the Hearst Corp., thus climaxing a six-year court fight by the union against Walter Winchell, the Hearst press and the Andrew Jergens Co. for statements defaming the NMU and its members.

The Hearst check brings the total damages won by the NMU in this libel action to $19,000. Its suit was the first ever filed and won by an American union against a broadcaster and columnist, and the $19,000 was the largest sum ever collected by an American union in a libel case.

The suit was filed following a broadcast by Winchell on June 9, 1940 and subsequent publication in the N. Y. Daily Mirror of baseless allegations that the NMU and its members were engaged in subversive fifth column activities and were actively conspiring and engaging in the sabotage of American vessels.

During the six years the case was being fought the union appeared in Supreme Court more than 15 times and before the Appellate Division three times.

The defendants were unsuccessful in their attempts to have the court dismiss the action. Justice Peter J. Schmuck of the New York Supreme Court ruled on September 20, 1940 that the union had a right to sue for libel in its own name. Attorneys for the defendents argued that at no time in the past had unions been permitted to bring libel suits in their own name. Twice the Appellate Court upheld the ruling by Justice Schmuck.

UAW MAY STRIKE CHRYSLER

ANGERED at the Chrysler Corporation's policy of firing workers who have become 65 years old, the CIO United Automobile Workers executive board this week authorized a strike unless an "adequate" retirement plan is established.

In a resolution adopted unanimously by the union's executive board, the union said Chrysler "has unilaterally and arbitrarily imposed a policy of discharging employes who have reached 65 years of age."

Such a policy would cause undue hardship and suffering for the men and their families because the "benefits under the present social security fund are grossly inadequate to insure a decent standard of living," the resolution stated.

The union called upon the corporation to negotiate for "an adequate and model retirement plan to meet this problem." The company, in previous negotiations had refused to consider the problem.

The union's executive board also authorized an intensive campaign to liberalize and broaden the present social security program "to insure a decent standard of living for old employes."

"I think I'm being followed . . ."

CRACKDOWN ON MEAT BLACK MARKET

EXPOSED as conspirators against the government and public by the CIO Packinghouse Workers, the giant meat packers this week scurried for cover when the government acted to end the packers' "sitdown strike."

An investigation of the meat packing industry was asked by Rep. Sabath (D., Ill.) in a resolution presented to the House. The resolution accused the meat packers of deliberately creating the meat shortage "to discredit" the OPA and government operation of the industry, and "perhaps to defeat the entire Administration program for fair and equal distribution of the world's food."

At the same time, Agricultural Secretary Clinton A. Anderson accepted a proposal offered by the CIO Packinghouse Workers and reinstated livestock quotas to curb the black market and improve meat distribution through legitimate channels.

OPA enforcement agents throughout the country, meanwhile, launched a drive against black market operators, and preliminary steps chased many undercover operators out of the market and enabled cattle to be sold at below ceiling prices in Chicago for the first time in two months.

In demands for a grand jury investigation in N. Y. City, packinghouse workers charged that big meat packers were channeling meat into the black market by refusing to buy livestock. They have created a meat shortage in order to smash OPA price controls, the union said.

By-products of meat slaughtered by black marketeers have been sold to the big packers, the union asserted, and have, in turn, been resold by the packers at a big profit.

Rep. Sabath's resolution called for a House Banking and Currency Committee investigation to determine whether the packers' refusal to buy is due to the protection against loss given them "through guaranty of refund of 1945 excess profits taxes covering any losses incurred in 1946."

The resolution also called for an investigation of the anti-OPA campaign carried on by the meat packers through their American Meat Institute, and the amount of money spent to spread its "misleading information."

Squads of OPA enforcement officers, bolstered by hundreds of packinghouse workers, consumers, police and market department inspectors, covered N. Y. City to dig out black market operators.

CAREY BROADCAST

"How Can We Channel More Food to War-Torn Countries" will be the subject of the America United Program over NBC stations at 1:15 p.m., EST, Sun., May 5, with CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey participating. Broadcasting with him will be Delos James of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and Albert S. Goss, Master, the Natl. Grange.

CONGRESS MAIL HEAVY FOR 100% PRICE CONTROL

SENATORS and Congressmen this week were receiving stacks of mail urging continuance of OPA without crippling amendments, following appeals to CIO affiliates and the public by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey.

Wires and letters should be sent in greater volume to members of Congress, particularly to the members of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, to halt the drive against the OPA by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, the Chamber of Commerce and the Natl. Retail Dry Goods Assn.

Carey joined this week with Jack Thornton, acting chairman of the CIO Cost of Living Committee, and Mrs. Elizabeth Rohr, Washington representative of Consumers Union, in an appeal to the public over the Mutual network.

A member of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, Sen. Tobey (R., N. H.) this week declared that his mail favoring continuance of OPA uncrippled was "at least 50 to 1." Sen. Wagner (D., N. Y.) and a secretary to Sen. Glen Taylor (D., Ida.) also reported that mail favored passage of unadulterated price control bill by lopsided majorities.

Even Jack Martin, secretary to Sen. Taft (R., Ohio) declared that "almost everybody is for continuing OPA," but blamed it on a "propaganda campaign" organized by Stabilization Director Bowles.

In a widely distributed letter the Congressional Committee to Protect the Consumer this week declared:

"It is not at all to late to translate the will of 95% of the American people who are for price control into 51% of the Senate and the House.

"This committee calls on all the people to keep up the fight. There are two rounds yet to go—one in the Senate and one more in the House. Price control can still be salvaged. But only you, the people, can do it by continuing to make your will known to your Senators and Congressmen."

MURRAY AWARD FOR VET AID

The Natl. CIO Community Services Committee this week announced that the Philip Murray Award will be presented to the American making the most outstanding contribution to the welfare of the veteran. The rules are:

Any CIO member or unit may nominate any individual for the award. Nominations should be based upon the accomplishments of the individual in aiding the veteran to find his rightful place in the community, and in impressing the community with its responsibility to the veteran.

Nominations should be made in writing, listing the qualifications of the candidate. Nominations and statements should be mailed before July 4, 1946, to the Philip Murray Award, Natl. CIO Community Services Committee, 1776 Broadway, New York 19, N. Y.

IT'S 'PEEPER' RANKIN NOW

Shhhhh. Don't breath it to a soul! Did you know that the CIO Political Action Committee is "Getting instructions from behind the 'Iron Curtain'?"

Authority for this sensational revelation is none other than Rep. "The Mouth" Rankin (D., Miss.), who sounded off this week after being stung by remarks of Sec. of Commerce Henry A. Wallace. Wallace said Democrats who voted against President Truman's major proposals should not be entitled to Party support.

Polltaxer Rankin called for removal of Wallace, erroneously said the CIO-PAC "claims to have raised six million dollars from questionable sources to try to control elections," and asked for a Congressional investigation of the organization by the Committee on Un-American Activities.

The "Iron Curtain" statement was coupled with an announcement that "our investigators are checking up on them now."

In N. Y. City, PAC officials declined to dignify the attack with a reply.

REPRESENTATIVE RANKIN

'GOD HELP US IF THEY WRECK OPA'

By FRED d'AVILA

(See House Voting Record—Page 12)

CIO SEC.-TREAS. JAMES B. CAREY

"Some business organizations are willing to gamble with our economic welfare to gain additional profits at the expense of the whole nation."

BERNARD GORSICA

"All of the fellows I work with are 100% for the OPA."

"GOD help us if they wreck OPA.

"I plead with you, gentlemen. You are supposed to represent me, my wife, those gentlemen. I believe that if voting machines were set up over the country today, there would be an overwhelming vote to give OPA more power.

"Today, it's too easy. A merchant is caught selling goods over ceiling price. He's fined $5. It pays him to be caught once if he makes $500 or $1,000 profit.

"But if you put teeth in the act instead of weakening it, if you send him to jail instead of just fining him, he'll think twice about a violation."

Where would you get the jails?

"Build more of them!"

It was the people vs. the profiteers this week in the ornate hearing room of the Senate Banking & Currency Committee. The issue was renewal of the price control act without crippling amendments passed by the House.

Carrying the ball for the people were five rank and file CIO members like John C. Saccocio, whose testimony is quoted above, and CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey.

(Below) Grass roots testimony from Iowa interested Sen. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa). L. to r.: Lloyd Achenbach, CIO Packinghouse Worker from Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. John C. Saccocio, Richard, 2, and Fred Saccocio, 11, and Sen. Hickenlooper.

The rank and filers spoke from the belly, and the comments of some of them were so frank that the polished, well-fed Senators maintained a silence that could have been preserved in cans.

Saccocio, who's a member of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers from Schenectady, N. Y., swallowed with some suspicion a kindly statement by Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) about "how fine it was to have you people come down here."

"Well," said Saccocio, "I hope that's so. It happens that so many times a man runs for election and makes all sorts of promises and then forgets all about them when he gets elected."

The Senator was indignant. He said the country was "in a bad way" if the people have lost faith in their representatives.

"Well, gentlemen," said Saccocio, girding for battle, "since we're speaking frankly I might as well tell you about my Representative (Bernard W. Kearney, R., N. Y.), That man is vicious against labor. He voted for the Case bill. The only time he changed his mind was when thousands of others like myself sent him hundreds of petitions.

"Most of you do not represent the people," the grass roots lecturer continued to his substantial audience. "You represent the manufacturers. That's why the people lose faith in government.

"You people talk good about democracy. It sounds grand when you're making campaign speeches, but once you are elected, where is this democracy? It disappears."

The rank and file testimony included these points:

● "One item that a lot of Italian people in Schenectady buy is cotton seed oil," said Saccocio, who brought along his pretty wife and two young boys.

"The ceiling price is $2.50 a gallon. I walked into a store and asked for oil, and the man put a gallon on the counter. I laid down $2.50 and started to walk out.

" 'Where are you going'?," he asked.

" 'Look,' I said, 'I want that oil. The ceiling price is $2.50. Now either you call a cop or I'll call one'."

"I got the oil, but if it hadn't been for OPA, I wouldn't have got it for $10 a gallon!"

● Bernard Gorsica, member of CIO Steelworkers Local 1272, Pittsburgh, whipped out three pay envelopes, said his weekly take-home wages had dropped over $10 since before V-J Day.

"I've already begun to cash war bonds, one or two every pay day. I'm still buying them, but it's only taking money out of one hand and putting it into another.

"A sample take-home check was $50.20 a week last March. My wife's a pretty good manager. That's the only way we get by. And I'm one of the fortunate ones in the steel industry—75% of the workers are worse off."

Similar testimony was presented by:

● Mrs. Louise Grod, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Redbank, N. J., who said she has to work because her truck driver husband isn't making enough to support the family. "We're living with my folks. Unless OPA is made stronger, it may be a long time before we can live like an American family."

● Lloyd Achenbach, CIO Packinghouse Workers Local 3, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, said packers can still buy meat and sell for OPA ceiling prices. He cited an advertisement in a Kansas City, Mo., paper of a chain store, operating its own meat slaughtering plant, which sells at from 3-5c below OPA ceilings.

● John Prodoehl, CIO Auto Workers Local 918, Chester, Pa., sometimes works as few as three days a week, earns $27, has a weekly net budget "trimmed as close as possible" of $50.20 for his wife and five kids. "Without OPA, we'd be lost."

In contrast to the quiet acceptance by the Senators of the rank and file testimony, there was paragraph by paragraph heckling of Carey as he explained the official CIO position. It boiled down to this:

● Attempts to sabotage OPA and price control stem from certain greedy business interests willing to gamble with the national welfare to gain additional profits. They want either to hamstring or eliminate controls, or, failing that, to cause Congressional pressure on OPA to achieve the result by weakening of OPA's administration.

● Price control is not holding up production. More goods are being produced today than ever before in the nation's peacetime history—estimated at a record $150 billion worth a year.

● Most of the pressure against price control argues that rising wages force rising prices. But the wage increases granted since V-J Day amount to only ⅓ of 1% of the $150 billion annual production level. What then becomes of the theory that wage increases in this microscopic amount should be the basis for price increases that are forecast in many quarters at approximately 50%?

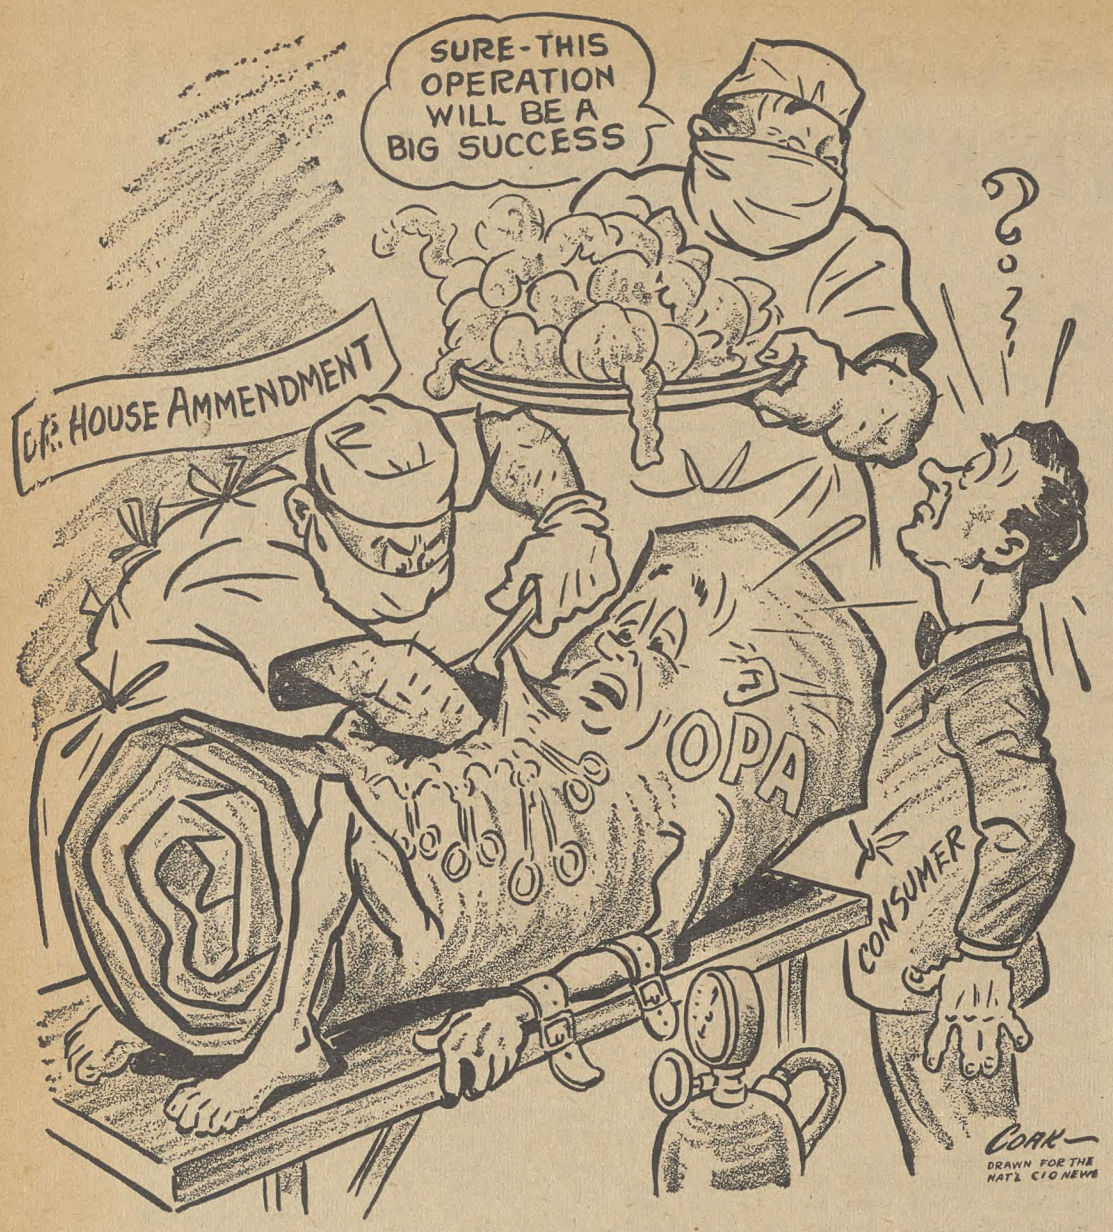
● Corporation profits have risen from $3.8 billion in 1936 to $9.3 billion in 1945. During six war years American corporations made profits after taxes of over $52 billion. $25.9 billion were paid to stockholders and $26.1 billion remained undistributed in corporation treasurers. For every dollar thus idle, a worker is cheated out of the chance of one hour's labor.

● With such profits and reserves, it is obvious that price controls need not be relaxed to insure industry a good return on money invested. OPA must be preserved without amendments, and also without hidden, weakening deals within the agency.

PRAISE CIO PUBLICITY

"I have made a study of CIO publicity," said Sen. Millikin (R., Col.) at the price control hearings, "and I understand that it is without parallel in skill and extent."

"I agree," said CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey. "We do a better job per dollar spent than the NAM does, but we just don't have as many dollars to spend."



DISEMBOWELING PRICE CONTROL

Few actions of Congress have so shocked so many Americans as have the House amendments to the Price Control Act.

These amendments—to end food subsidies, to guarantee profits, to shorten OPA's life, and to lift prices in all directions—would reduce the Price Control Act to a lifeless shell.

In adopting them, the House voted in effect to end price control, to raise living costs and to invite inflation.

The public reacted immediately and flooded Congress with a record number of wires and letters, nearly all protesting against the House action and demanding real price control.

Faced with this and many other indications of public indignation, many Congressmen have taken refuge in the threadbare claim that they favor continuance of OPA and price control even though they voted for the amendments.

The matter is now before the Senate, which can refuse to accept the House amendments. Price control can still be saved if this is done, and if the House will accept rejection of these amendments in conference between the two houses.

It is therefore urgent that all Senators and Representatives be told by all citizens, in increasing volume, to save price control.

But don't let any of them kid you that price control can be saved, if price-raising amendments are passed. Ask them to vote for price-control extension WITHOUT AMENDMENTS.

FEED THE STARVING

America is a land of plenty in a hungry world. Hardly anywhere else is food so plentiful. In most other countries people must live on the barest of subsistence rations, and in many parts face literal starvation.

Who can be so inhuman as not to heed the cries of these hungry millions or to give some share of his food to the starving?

American working people, who have known hunger, in the midst of plenty, and seen at first-hand the dire effects of undernourishment, have always been the first and most generous in their response to humanitarian appeals.

The CIO and its members can be counted on to comply wholeheartedly with every proposal for reducing food consumption and avoiding waste to increase American relief shipments abroad.

But this is not enough.

America must realize that countless lives might have been saved and endless misery averted, if rationing and food controls had not been so prematurely scrapped after the war, and if adequate plans had been made in advance to relieve the approaching famine.

We cannot bring to life the dead or undo the misery that has been suffered. But we can take decisive steps now to end this tragedy of too little and too late.

That is why the CIO is demanding the immediate resumption of food rationing to make American food available to the starving of other lands. Voluntary plans are not enough. They can be sabotaged by selfish hoarders and profiteers. The burden should be fairly shared by all the American people.

Nor are food shipments enough for any more than temporary relief.

Besides demanding rationing, the CIO calls for unstinting support to UNRRA for the rehabilitation of war-devastated lands; and for prompt extension of loans to our needy allies, so they may buy the raw materials and equipment to supply their needs in the future.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

THE American people's battle against inflation has been called the Battle of the Bulge.

But after what the House has done to destroy price control, it's more reminiscent of the story of Algy:

"Algy met a bear. The bear was bulgy. The bulge was Algy."

★ ★ ★

Who's Algy? We hate to be personal, but we do mean you—and you—and everyone else who has to buy what he needs.

As to the bear, well, it could just as well be a tiger. If you think it'd be fun to ride on the tiger of inflation, remember what happened to the young lady who took a tiger-ride:

"They returned from that ride, with the lady inside, and a smile on the face of the tiger."

★ ★ ★

The propaganda against price control suggests another name—the Battle of the Bilge.

The bilge has been chiefly supplied by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, at a cost of $395,850—which they expect us consumers to repay them, plus several thousand percent interest, in higher prices.

★ ★ ★

The "line" of the NAM runs something like this:

"So you can't buy a shirt, or a car, or a radio? Know why? It's because of price control; because we-uns can't make enough profit out of selling to you-uns.

"The remedy? Abolish OPA and take the lid off prices.

"What will happen then? Well, of course, prices and living costs will go up. But don't worry, suckers. We-all will then make such big profits out of you-all that we'll want more and more—and eventually there will be so many goods on the market that prices will come down.

"So, in the long run, everything will be hunky-dory."

★ ★ ★

What's wrong with this NAM "line"?

Chiefly the hook at the end of it, for any poor fish who swallow it.

★ ★ ★

In the first place, we don't live in the long run, we've got to live in the short run.

And it's going to be a mighty short run for our money, if price control is destroyed.

If prices go up as they did after the first world war (without price control), we'll have to pay $1.34 for five pounds of sugar, now selling for 35c; a pound of bacon will jump from 41c to 58c, a dozen eggs from 50c to 92c, and a gallon of gas from 20c to 34c.

Without price control, a family now living on $2,500 a year will probably have to pay $250 more for food, $150 more for clothes, $250 more for rent, and $300 more for other goods and services, to maintain the same standard of living.

★ ★ ★

So, in the short run—if the NAM and the House have their way—increased living costs will cancel all wage increases and turn them into cuts in real wages.

Like Alice in Wonderland, we'll have to run as fast as we can—after higher wages—just to stay in the same place. And the value of our savings will be cut in half.

★ ★ ★

In the second place, even if we manage to survive the short run, the long run won't be any more rosy.

A hectic inflationary "boom" has always been followed by a deflationary "bust."

So, after higher prices have stolen our wages and savings, we won't have much left—if we have a job at all—to benefit from the lower prices of deflation, depression and unemployment.

★ ★ ★

In the third, fourth, fifth and all other places, the NAM "line" is as screwy as the hook at the end of it.

The lack of goods on the market is not due to lack of civilian production and profits, both of which are at record high levels.

Goods are being kept from the market, in a squeeze-play to end price control and to make a killing through higher prices.

If price control is abolished, corporations will still keep goods off the market waiting for higher and yet higher prices.

★ ★ ★

There's only one way to avoid being hooked on the NAM line. Urge the Senate to reject the inflationary amendments passed by the House, and Congress to renew the Price Control Act without any amendments.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran — John Green — Reid Robinson
L. S. Buckmaster — Allan S. Haywood — Frank Rosenblum
Albert Fitzgerald — Emil Rieve — R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Published and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C.
Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 April 29, 1946 No. 18

ASK TRUMAN ENTER LUMBER DISPUTE

PERSONAL intervention by President Truman in the snarled-up lumber industry was asked this week by J. E. Fadling, president of the CIO Intl. Woodworkers Union.

Fadling said in a letter to the President that lumber prices are too high, and that management is stalling on wage negotiations, knowing that profits are guaranteed under the carry-back, carry-forward provisions of the tax law even if the industry does not produce.

Calling on Truman to utilize his knowledge of the industry gained when he headed the Senate investigating committee bearing his name, Fadling said:

"Prices of lumber are completely out of line and have been increased far in excess of wage increases to the workers of the industry.

"Now in negotiations, the IWA is demanding a just share of the profits created by the workers' labor. Last fall we made it clear that we were seeking wage increases that could then be paid out of existing profits and refused to join the employers in pressuring the government for price increases."

"We believe," Fadling stated, "that while wage increases alone are not a panacea to the lumber problem, they are needed to help recruit and hold an adequate labor force throughout the industry, particularly in the low wage forest regions of the south central and southeastern states."

He pointed out that productivity on the west coast was high. It takes less than 16 man-hours to produce 1,000 board feet, from standing trees to finished lumber (figures from Washington State Planning Board). The average wholesale price of west coast lumber increased 80% from 1940 to November, 1945. During this period wages increased 37¼c or 56% in common labor, and smaller percentages in skilled brackets.

Fadling pointed out to President Truman that "it is our belief that the industry's incentive to produce is greatly reduced by the provisions of the carry-back-carry-forward tax law under which lumber operators can collect without producing and at the same time save their trees for the day when price ceilings will be lifted altogether or further modified."

"As evidence of the desire of a substantial sector of the industry not to produce," Fadling's letter stated, "we cite the obvious present maneuvers of douglas fir and western pine employers to provoke a strike." He stated the employers are "insisting on the elimination of virtually all contract provisions negotiated long before the war—provisions which 'have been' virtually standard for several years."

Fadling requested the President to study the IWA's recent analysis of a comprehensive production, which called for:

1. Government assistance—technical advice and economic aids—similar to the assistance provided farmers to be given to the millions of forest owners and the many thousands of small logging and sawmill operators.

2. Use of the government's police powers to protect forests from cut-out-and-get-out logging, to bring about sustained timber yields.

3. Government aids in the development of plants for conversion of waste wood into building materials to supplement ordinary lumber.

50 YEARS UNION EXPERIENCE WILL AID BITTNER IN ORGANIZING DRIVE

VAN A. BITTNER, director of the new CIO Organizing Committee, will draw upon 50 years of trade union organizing experience when he opens the CIO's drive in the South next month.

Fifty years ago, when he was 11 years old, Bittner went to work in the mines near his home in Bridgeport, Pa., and joined the United Mine Workers after getting his first pay envelope.

Five years later, at 16, he was president of his Mine Workers local. That was at the turn of the century when the mine operators kept their spies and company men busy trying to ferret out and fire unionists and the miners held their meetings in the hills and hollows near their homes.

Bittner turned his experience to advantage later when he became an organizer for the Mine Workers in the South and West, and when he directed two big CIO drives in the Mid-West and West 10 years ago.

His fire and vigor as a unionist was recognized by his fellow miners when he was 23 years old and he was elected a vice-president of UMW District 5, centering around Pittsburgh.

Three years later he was elevated to the presidency of the district, one of the largest coal mining areas in the nation.

VAN A. BITTNER
Heads Organizing Drive

Thirty years ago, when he was 31 years old, Bittner went South for the first time to organize. As an international representative of the Mine Workers he organized in Tennessee, Alabama and Kansas for eight years.

Then he moved to West Virginia and brought thousands of miners into the union.

The West Virginia miners selected Bittner as president of the state's District 17. He served from 1933 to 1942.

In between, during the CIO's first campaign to organize the nation's mass industries, Bittner became director of the CIO's drive in the Great Lakes-Western area.

Mass campaigns that carried the CIO's message of better wages and working conditions swept into the imagination and hopes of workers in the steel plants, farm equipment factories and meat packing houses in and around Chicago. They joined CIO in hundreds of thousands.

In 1942, Bittner was elected assistant to Pres. Philip Murray at the first constitutional convention of the CIO Steelworkers. As a representative of the steel workers, he became a member of the CIO Executive Board.

When war struck, Bittner was recommended by Murray to represent CIO on the Natl. War Labor Board and was appointed by President Roosevelt in 1942. He served until December, 1945.

Peace opened the way for the CIO's new organizing campaign which, Bittner says, will be carried on in the South just as it was carried on when the steel workers flocked into CIO.

"This campaign is a single-minded organizing drive," he explains. "We will organize the workers so that they can get the same good wages and working conditions that the CIO has secured for all of its members."

RALLY TO 'MAKE WESTINGHOUSE SETTLE'

TAKING its case to the people by means of "roving picket lines" in Washington, D. C., New York, Chicago, and other metropolitan centers, the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers this week marked the 100th day of its strike against the Westinghouse Electric Corp.

The demonstration in New York City featured eight busloads of children carrying empty milk bottles and signs saying I Need Shoes in a family picketline around the corporation's Wall Street offices.

Thousands of spectators from the financial district's bustling lunch hour crowds stopped to watch the colorful picketline, which was headed by two men made up as Hitler and Mussolini carrying signs: Me And Westinghouse Are Buddies.

The older children helped hand out leaflets, the younger ones held their mothers' hands and some of the fathers carried the ones too little to walk. Two-year-olds held on tight to babies' bottles with signs around their necks which said My Bottle Is Empty. Little boys wore signs saying: I'm Backing My Daddy and Me Too.

How is it after 100 days on strike? "Not too good," admitted Elizabeth Dronke, tall, spunky-looking blonde whose husband, Arthur, was a truck driver before the war and still hasn't been able to find a job since he left the army.

"There's no money coming in, it's all going out. The baby needs things." She looked down at Butch, 3½, who marched along beside her in soldierly style. "I'm picketing," he explained. "I wish they'd settle so we could go back," his mother said. "It's a darn shame. We worked all through the war, did everything we could. They made plenty. (Westinghouse wartime profits were $154 million.) All we're asking is 18½c like the other companies gave. You can't raise a family on what we're getting now."

The strike of 75,000 Westinghouse employes in 31 plants from Los Angeles, California, to Springfield, Mass., started on January 15. Since that date the strike has completely stopped production in all Westinghouse plants.

Negotiations are continuing in Pittsburgh, but no reports of progress have been issued. The Union is demanding an 18½c an hour increase. The company has offered a 9.7c increase with no wage increase for 10,000 Westinghouse lamp workers.

Westinghouse employes from Baltimore, aided by CIO members in Washington, D. C., picket corporation offices in the nation's capital in protest against the firm's refusal to settle for the 18½c an hour raise granted by other firms in the electrical and radio industry.

TO ARBITRATE PM DISMISSALS

Pres. Milton Murray of the CIO Newspaper Guild and two other PM staffers in the tabloid's Washington Bureau, scheduled for "economy" dismissal April 24, stayed on the payroll this week pending arbitration of the case.

PM management in N. Y. City refused to rescind firing notices given to Murray, John T. Moutoux and Elizabeth Donahue.

In the face of direct evidence that the "economy" firings were in violation of PM's contract with the N. Y. Guild, PM management refused to withdraw dismissal notices against the three. Instead, PM Editor Ralph Ingersoll proposed arbitration through the U. S. Conciliation Service, with the three kept on the payroll pending outcome of the binding arbitration proceedings.

RUN REGISTRATION ADS

Newspapers throughout Massachusetts are running "Register NOW" ads sponsored by the State CIO Council as part of a concerted drive to speed up PAC activity. PAC committees have been set up in all local unions, and a vigorous dollar contribution drive has been launched.

VETS' CARS 'MUST,' AMPUTEES SAY

By FRED ROSS

WAR amputees tell you in no uncertain terms that they need specially equipped cars to take their place in society. And a visit to Walter Reed Hospital and Forest Glen, where Walter Reed patients go to recuperate, should convince any impartial observer that Congress should pass the CIO-UAW-backed Rogers-Kelly Bill (HR 6114) which would require the Veterans Administration to provide them with specially equipped cars.

Let Pfc. Carl Kistel, Chicago, who lost both legs while fighting with the 86th Division in the Ruhr Pocket a year ago this month—and who had been a junior in Hyde Park High in Chicago—take over here:

"I have driven a car especially equipped for amputees. I have concluded that an amputee would be dependent on others to get him to his place of employment if he did not have such a car."

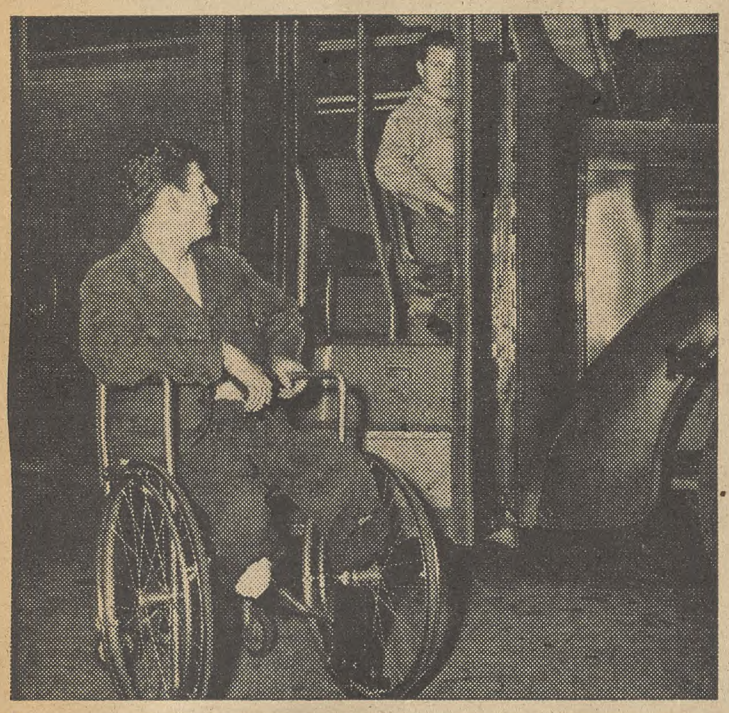
He is planning on joining the War Amputees Committee, which has been organized not only at Walter Reed but also at Percy Jones Army Hospital, Battle Creek, Mich., and Thomas England Army Hospital, Atlantic City, N. J.

Sgt. Milton Kornfeld, chairman of the committee at Walter Reed, spelled out Kistel's theme:

"We don't want charity. We want a fair chance to be on an equal basis with the able bodied and to take our place in society, and the only possible solution we see is the car with mechanical aids. Such cars are necessary since we lost our legs."

Kornfeld, who lost his left leg while fighting with Merrill's Marauders for the Burma Road—the life line for China—plans to go into business with the aid of relatives and a GI loan.

Want to see war amputees free of charity? Keep those letters pouring into the House World War Veterans Legislation Committee.



Pfc. Carl Kistel, Chicago, Ill., shows why CIO-UAW-backed Rogers-Kelley bill for specially equipped cars for war amputees should be enacted. Top, Kistel, waiting for strangers to carry him into bus. Below, Kistel, with friend, is at wheel of specially equipped car which could take him to work.

ALL WORKERS IN THE PUBLIC SERVICE UNITED FOR HIGHER WAGES & SALARIES ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL SECURITY

IT'S ONE BIG CIO UNION IN GOVERNMENT

A NEW union of public service workers, born of parents long skilled in protecting the rights of government employes, this week flexed its muscles and prepared to embark on a major organizing campaign.

The new union is the United Public Workers of America, CIO. It was formed during the course of a five-day convention in Atlantic City, N. J., of the CIO Federal Workers and the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers, both of which gave up their identity to found the new organization.

With a membership of close to 100,000, the new union directed an immediate campaign for tightening of the merged organization to pave the way for effective organizing in every corner of the country.

In a session filled with plans for the future of their new union, several hundred delegates had little time for Atlantic City sightseeing or for speeches from non-members.

The single exception was CIO President Philip Murray, who received a tumultous welcome from the delegates when he wished their new organization a bright future.

In his speech to the new government union CIO President Murray emphasized continually the point that public employes—like workers in private industry—will see many of their problems disappear when they have increased the size of their organization. The merger of UFWA and SCMWA is a step in the direction of creating 100% organization, he declared, "and will be a good thing for the public employes of the U. S."

"The answer to the problem of full collective bargaining rights," Murray continued, "is the organization of all the public employes. I have the idea that if all the public employes in New York State were organized, Tom Dewey would be glad to give you collective bargaining and social legislation."

Though public employes have some problems different from industrial workers, "the people employed by government are human beings and their hearts beat in unison" with the workers of private industry, Murray declared.

Turning to broad international questions, the CIO leader urged world-wide disarmament as a step to peace.

"If peace means anything to the peoples of the world," Murray asserted, "it means not only that the atom bomb must never again be used to kill human life, but that the production of all armaments for aggression shall be stopped. That would mean an end to all the armies that might threaten the peace of the world."

As one of its first actions, the convention of the new organization moved quickly to inform Congress of government workers' strong demands for continued price control and warned that the union would not sit back to watch its recent wage gains be nullified through higher prices.

Pointing out that rising prices are a particular burden on "the fixed income and low income groups, who are the vast majority of the American people," the convention's resolution attacked monopoly interests holding out for higher prices by creating an artificial scarcity of goods on the market.

In another strongly worded resolution, the convention declared that "friendship and cooperation between the U. S. and the Soviet Union is the essential basis for an enduring peace" and urged a four-point program to improve international relations.

Called for as a basis for peace and good will were: (1) the halting of present efforts to "isolate the Soviet Union in the UN world affairs"; (2) positive actions to re-establish friendly relations with the USSR; (3) withdrawal of American and British troops from all friendly countries; and (4) support of a policy for UN regulation and control "of all phases of atomic energy, including the immediate possession of all atomic energy in a civilian commission."

The officers' reports to the federal and local government workers' unions clearly indicated that during the past several years the nation's public agencies have been lagging behind, despite the increases won by the unions.

Federal workers' pay, which in 1937 was as low as $720 a year, has been pushed rapidly upwards through action of the CIO Federal Workers, the officers' report declared, and with the 1946 Pay Act the U. S. workers' minimum will be almost $1,800. Nevertheless, the report said, federal employees feel like "second class citizens" with regard to pay, security, civil and political rights and union status.

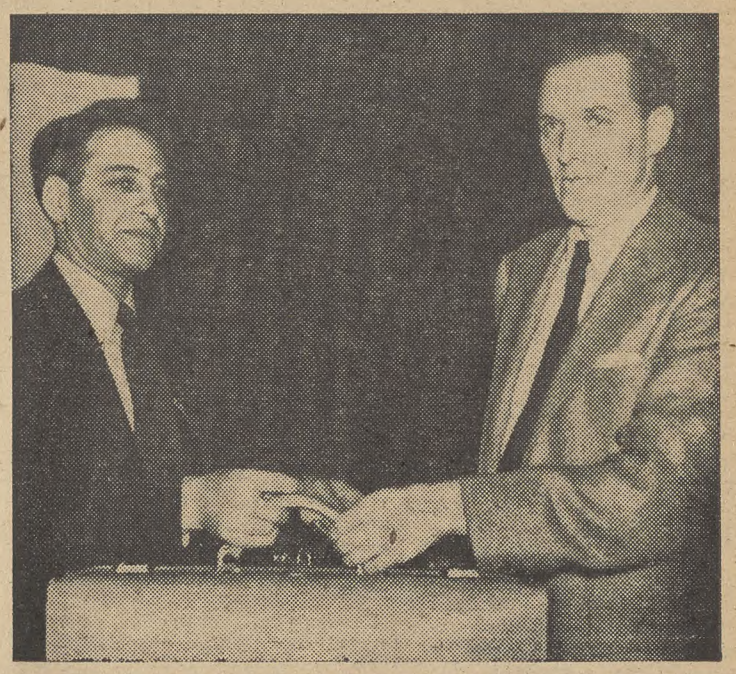
The UFWA officers reviewed their wartime cooperation with government agencies but noted with regret that there is a "wide gap" between the promises and performances of President Truman's pledge to carry out the Roosevelt policies.

Similar difficulties were noted in the report of President Flaxer and Secretary-Treasurer Robert Weinstein to the SCMWA convention. Rising living costs have bitten deeply into the $83,000,000 wage gains won by the union for members and non-members, and have made imperative an immediate drive for further increases.

Official figures show the strength of the newly-formed organization at approximately 74,000—26,000 from the UFWA and the balance from the SCMWA. Much of the convention discussion revolved around the question of how best to speed organizing plans, with a sizeable group in the SCMWA urging union financing of district councils. The officers' report suggested that such groups be financed on a voluntary basis in those areas in which the locals vote for their establishment.

In a series of resolutions, the UPWA voted confidence in Murray's leadership; urged government to set up a Wagner Act form of labor relations for its employes; endorsed the CIO organizing drive in the south and voiced support to organizations assisting the drive; and lashed out at all forms of racial and religious discrimination in government agencies.

Abram Flaxer of SCMWA was elected president of the new union. Eleanor Nelson, former head of the federal workers, was named secretary-treasurer. Robert Weinstein, former SCMWA secretary, was elected director of organization, while six persons—six from each of the merging unions, were elected to vice presidencies.



Good job, well done. Henry Wenning, former secretary-treasurer of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers (right) retired from office for reasons of health. Not forgotten by the union, he was presented with traveling bags by President Flaxer.

500,000 ORGANIZING GOAL SET BY TEXTILE

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

AMERICA'S CIO textile workers, 400,000 strong, this week charted a militant course of political action and organizing plans to bring into their union a half-million unorganized workers.

"Organize the unorganized" was clearly the theme of the fourth biennial convention of the CIO Textile Workers Union, meeting in the tremendous Atlantic City, N. J., convention hall. Close to 1,300 delegates from the U. S. and Canada applauded every mention of the union's "new worlds to conquer" and voted enthusiastic backing for the CIO's organizing drive in the south and the activities of the CIO Political Action Committee.

With Pres. Emil Rieve presiding, the delegates heard a detailed report of progress in lifting wages and improving conditions throughout the war; heard CIO Pres. Philip Murray outline plans for unionization of southern industrial centers; and, as The CIO NEWS went to press, were awaiting a report on PAC by Pres. Sidney Hilmman of the Clothing Workers; on OPA by Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles; and on general labor conditions by Sec. of Labor Lewis Schwellenbach.

In a speech heard by the delegates in attentive silence which erupted into a cheering ovation at its conclusion, Murray called upon the TWUA to participate in an energetic crusade to extend union benefits and break the strangle-hold of reaction in Congress.

The CIO drive in the south, Murray predicted, "will be a simple, pure, unadulterated campaign of organizing unions. If, in the next few years, the by-product of that campaign is the elimination from Congress of Rankin and Bilbo, that's all to the good, isn't it?" he asked the delegates, a sizeable proportion of whom come from the poll tax south.

Murray scoffed at an AFL announcement that it, too, contemplates a southern campaign, and referred to their leaders as "rusty-bottomed and parrot like." He recalled with bitterness that at the Labor-Management Conference in Washington last September, leaders of the AFL had joined with conservative employers to prevent discussion of a national wage policy.

The CIO President, emphasizing the need of political action, recalled that since 1937—"for nine long years"—there has been no advance in legislation to help the common people.

"In the course of those nine years, while Congress was defeating the aims of the people for social security legislation, employers have succeeded in having passed many bills calculated to guarantee their monetary profits," Murray charged. "There is no danger under existing legislation of any employer going over the hill to that old poor house."

That legislation, he said, accounted for the length of many of the recent strikes, since corporations have been able to raise their liquid assets during the war years to 50 billion dollars .

Earlier, he had attacked the "unholy alliance" of southern Democrats and northern Republicans who had exhibited "diabolic conduct" in killing proposals for a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission—a measure "aimed at ending race discrimination in America." Similarly he scored the bitter warfare of the tories against the polltax, minimum wages and veterans' housing.

Murray enumerated five major points of Pres. Roosevelt's economic bill of rights as goals for labor progress. He urged the allegiance of American workers to the "maintenance and sustenance and strengthening of the United Nations Organization" to help insure permanent world peace, and at the same time called upon the U. S. to take its place in the world family of nations without losing "faith in our own ethical attitudes" or permitting the country to slip into an "attitude of defeat . . . or moral laxity."

The convention was a cheerful one, proud of the improvements wrested by strikes and conference room negotiations with a traditionally low-pay industry.

Since 1943, the figures showed, the union has signed 436 new contracts for 101,976 workers and has expanded the total number of union-protected workers to 400,000 working in over 1,500 mills. The CIO-affiliated union is in a strong majority position in five major fields of its jurisdiction and hopes to make a clean sweep within the next 24 months.

And it was with genuine pride that Rieve, addressing the union's opening session, declared: "The TWUA is today the biggest, strongest, and the most respected union that textile workers ever have had, anywhere in the world."

Speaking at the opening session, Rieve traced in detail the union's struggles and accomplishments since the last convention in 1943.

Despite advances including 17½% increases for the entire industry since V-J day and raises that in some cases have lifted pay to 106% over 1937 levels—"working conditions in many mills are still medieval, and the employment practices of many textile manufacturers are still those of a half century ago," Rieve charged.

Gains made during the war through argument before government agencies and since V-J day by direct collective bargaining have brought 10 to 15c an hour improvement in wages.

"These gains are spreading rapidly into South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama and within a very short time minimum wages in the entire cotton industry, north and south, will be 65c an hour and average wages will be close to those in the North," Rieve announced with pride. Similar wage boosts are taking place in such varied sections of the union's jurisdiction as woolens, worsteds, synthetic yarns, carpets and rugs.

Between January 1937 and now, wages have been raised through constant union pressure in the following degrees:

Textiles—pay up 86%

Southern cotton—pay up 106%.

Northern cotton—pay up 91%.

Woolens and worsteds—pay up 91%.

Synthetic yarns—pay up 81%.

The strikes and wage struggles have given the textile union "a basic solidarity," Rieve said, but also proved that so long as 80% of southern textile workers remain unorganized, "we can have little security there."

"I have traveled through the South considerably in recent months," Rieve told the convention, "and I am convinced that textile workers there are eager for unionization. We must take advantage of these favorable signs of the times."

Giving full support to the CIO's forthcoming organizational campaign south of the Mason-Dixon line, Rieve predicted that "we have every reason to believe that out of this drive will come many thousands of new members of our union."

At the same time, Rieve warned that union organization without political action would be only 50% effective.

"Unless we purge the Congress of its labor-haters and labor-baiters", he declared, "its rank conservatives and enemies of the little people of our nation, we might as well pack up and go home, in the South and everywhere else."

He called for arousing the people "through PAC" to the "tragic, almost unbelievable story that is being enacted in Washington" and the need for organizing the voters to insure the nation a better Congress after 1946 elections.

Citing the reactionary campaigns for destruction of price controls, minium wage improvements and social welfare bills, Rieve reflected that "seldom in our generation have the pressure boys had such free rein or spent such fabulous sums in trying to put over a raw deal on the common people of our country."

Organization of security for unions and working people must be carried out on international scale, as well as at home, the TWUA president declared in a section of his speech reviewing the devlopment of CIO links with the World Federation of Trade Unions. He said that steps are now being taken for establishment of an Int. Textile Organization within the framework of the WFTU and indicated the TWUA will play a major part in its formation.

A concluding section of the speech dealt with the political affairs of the postwar world.

Rieve urged complete support of the United Nations as the only hope for building a permanent peace. He praised President Truman and Secretary of State Byrnes for the "current course" upon which they have launched in treating world problems.

Declaring that American relations with the Soviet Union and Great Britain, as well as the other countries of the world, can be handled only in the light of what the United Nations can be made to do," Rieve warned that UN must develop into something more than a mere "big stick" against any one country or groups of countries.

He reviewed American relations with the Soviet Union, pointing out that the people of neither country want war, but that lack of mutual knowledge and understanding have produced a situation in which the USSR is "playing a game of international poker with the seeds of war."

Textile union policy, Rieve declared, is simply this: "We are against imperialism and balance of power politics whether they are practised by England or Russia or any other nation; we place our faith unreservedly in the United Nations as the only hope of world peace and international amity."

If UN is to work satisfactorily as a factor for world peace, every country must demonstrate its faith in the new global organization. "It seems to me," Rieve concluded, "that this might well involve a willingness on our part to place Pacific bases under UN trusteeship, to give UN responsibility for the atomic bomb, and let UN solve in its own way such economic rivalries as are presented by the various nations' need for natural resources."

Such a course, he indicated, would restrain the U. S. from acting as "balance of power" between the British empire and the Soviet Union, and would restrain the Russians in their dealings with Iran or the UN Security Council.

Convention resolutions during the first two days called for: Passage of the 65c wage bill without the Pace inflationary rider; strong support of the World Federation of Trade Unions and TWUA participation in the world organization's forthcoming convention of textile unions; civilian control of atomic energy with eventual lodging of such control in the UN; support of higher taxes on corporate profits; elimination of the use of injunctions in labor disputes; and support of the current food-sharing campaign to help the starving peoples of Europe and Asia.

EMIL RIEVE
Textile President As He Addressed Convention

'BIGGEST TEXTILE UNION IN ALL THE WORLD'

Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union, speaking on his organization's accomplishments during recent years:

- "The Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, is today the biggest, the strongest, and the most respected union that textile workers ever have had, anywhere in the world.
- "We are now the fourth largest union in the CIO, and we are winning Natl. Labor Relations Board elections at the rate of more than one every two and a half days.
- "We have raised the wages of American textile workers more than half a billion dollars since our 1943 convention.
- "We are now in the process of insuring that nowhere in the textile industry of this country will a worker be required to work for less than 65c an hour, or $26 a week.
- "Phenomenal gains have been made in spreading the principle of the union shop.
- "Nearly a quarter of a million textile workers today enjoy the benefits of free group insurance, paid for by the employer.
- "Never in the history of the industry has the textile worker been so amply protected against insecurity and discrimination."

Fairbanks-Morse strikers, members of the CIO Steelworkers, parade through Beloit, Wis., when streets are crowded with Saturday shoppers coming in from the farms. Lincoln camped in Beloit as a captain of militia during the Black Hawk War, and returned later while stumping for the presidency to reiterate his "hatred of the institution of slavery." F-M strikers recalled his words against slavery as they stumped through town to get their strike message before the people.

98 DAYS AND STILL SOLID!

Checking picket cards is pretty Rose Schumacher, picket committee member. The cards are important because they indicate workers morale.

Story By Alfred H. Hirsch
Photos By E. F. Miller

CHANCES are, if you have the money to buy the best, that your baby is weighed in a Fairbanks-Morse Co. scale. The somewhat sturdier one that you watch at the grocery store or butcher's, keeping an eye on that itching thumb behind the counter, is probably made by the same company. So, in most cases, are the huge shipside or railroad loading scales all over the country, and in spots covering the world.

They, together with Diesel engines for locomotives as well as countless other industrial products are made by this company whose main plant sprawls over a large section of Beloit, Wisconsin.

Since January 21, however, none of these goods have been coming out for that was the day close to 4,000 production workers, members of Local 1533, CIO United Steelworkers of America, walked out of the shop. They haven't been back since.

They tell a lot of stories around Beloit, Wis., a sort of leisurely town, industrial in itself but a farm center for miles around as well. (You ought to see it on a Saturday afternoon with the farmers and their families in to see what's what and to go shopping.)

But the strike's the story and today it's the largest steel plant in the national union whose employers have refused to go along on the 18½ cents across the board settlement.

THAT'S no particular surprise to the union. When the members voted to strike, Charles Symmonds, local 1533 president said, they voted, at the same time "their full determination to see the strike through."

They knew what they were up against. They'd seen the company cut the union down to a mere skeleton in 1940 and 1941, seen it resist the union as it grew to full strength in 1942 and 1943. They'd watched while the company piled up grievance on grievance (with 300 prestrike ones awaiting settlement right now). Finally, they'd seen the company ignore, appeal or stall off the War Labor Board decisions since 1944.

But the union did more than watch. And taking a look at its strike organization today, you get an inkling of why it stood up, and of why it's standing up so staunchly right now, after 13 weeks on the line, starting when the snow was deep on the Wisconsin ground, and the Rock River, over which union headquarters hang, was frozen solid.

You turn off Grand Avenue, directly at the end of the bridge, and walk up one flight of outside stairs, watching the water flow slowly by. There's a porch running along the whole floor, protruding over the Rock and it's a nice sight, quiet, restful. You turn left into what, years back, was a second story apartment. But now it's union headquarters, where there are girls at the typewriters, one a union employe, the others, strikers.

BACK of the first room is the office of the Picket Committee, headed jointly by H. O. Van Vleck and E. F. Miller, Army veteran of World War II whose father is the mayor of Freeport, Illinois, not far away. Serving with them are Schumacher and Al Lovgas. team, each one of them is at quarters or touring the lines a 16 to 18 hours a day.

In front of them sit five filled with cards bearing the of all the strikers, the shift th on during the strike, their d And, though it may sound str keeping the information on cards up to par is the big j the strike because the inform reflected on the cards shows things are up to snuff.

The cards show that 40 per of the strikers have perfect re 78% close to it, and only a ha no records at all.

Picket duty is six hours a day days a week, from Mon thr Saturday, 4 shifts a day means those gates are covered minute.

SAY a man or woman miss shift. Within two days the card at the house informing striker of a $2 fine. At the time the notice says that the may be appealed by appearing fore the Excuse Committee. committee, headed by H Haughton and made up of strikers for whom picketing be a hardship, act as both and jury. They have the righ suspend or remit the fine an the excuse is good, that's just they do.

Working out of the picket mittee office too is the visiting mittee, chaired by Leo and Tabor. "A thankless job," both it, but necessary, just the They visit those who miss tw more tricks, to find out the re why, get them down to the ha explain.

Sharing the work are left to right: Elbert Stevens, cook; Al Boyd, chef; and Della Behling, doughnut maker. Ray Bunnell, chairman of the food procurement committee, brings in new supplies. (Below) Gene Turman and Eleanora Hass serve pickets in the union hall. Most of the food obtained for the pickets is donated by townspeople or brought in by farmers.

them are Rose l Lovsas. As a hem is at head-
the lines around ay.
sit five boxes,
aring the names
the shift they're te, their duties.
sould strange,
ation on those the big job of the information rds shows that uff.
hat 40 per cent
perfect records, only a handful hours a day, two Mond y through a day which re covered every oman misses a o days there's a informing the

e. At the same s that the fine
y appearing be-Committee. This by Harley de up of older picketing would as both judge
e the right to he fine and, if that's just what he picket com-

he visiting com-
Leo and Roy job," both call just the same.
no miss two or out the reason to the hall to

STEPPING into the hall, you smell cooking. And, right across. is the kitchen. Maybe it's cheese sandwiches, chili and coffee today. Maybe there's 25 pounds of beef in that pressure cooker donated by its manufacturer up-state in Eau Claire or perhaps it's soup, sandwiches, and crullers or cake. Sometimes it's a bit of everything, with not enough of any one dish to go around.

For, so Gene Turman, in charge of the kitchen, and grievance man for many years in the foundry, says, "we feed about 250 a day right here, not to mention as many more with light stuff out on the lines."

He's in general charge. With him works Eleanora Haase, who is in charge of the cooks.

The union's meeting room has been transformed. Borrowed tables were moved in, set around the hall. They fill up, three or four times a day for meals. Over in the corner there's usually a card game.

There aren't too many smiles around here. Faces look a bit strained, bored, hard. It's been a long time.

But to feed the pickets takes money and food. And there are active committees on both.

"If we go to a shopkeeper to ask for cigarettes and he gives us money, why, we take it," says Ray E. Bunnell, chairman of the Procurement Committee.

"If we ask a man for money and he give us doughnuts, we take it," says Pete Allen of the Finance Committee.

"I don't want to give you total figures." Pete says, "for a lot of reasons. But we're managing to stretch the funds and food so far. And we expect to continue."

Over 350 "Thank You" cards, mimeographed for that purpose, have gone out.

YET, in spite of what the union does, in spite of the fact that many of the strikers are now working elsewhere though they cover their regular picket duties just the same after 13 weeks there's bound to be hardship.

That's the job of the combined Community Services and Public Relations Committee, headed by Mervin Nelson. In a few limited cases the union has made emergency loans. In a good many others it has presented problems to the county relief on behalf of the strikers in both Rock and neighboring Winnebago. "We've gotten them to cooperate too," Nelson says. "They've raised the rent allowance from $20 to $30 at our insistence."

But this is only part of the job. Dozens of landlords and real estate offices have been prevailed upon, by the union, to declare "moratoriums" on rent, for a month or for the duration of the strike. There hasn't been a single eviction yet. Up to April 13 a total of 184 cases had been handled to the satisfaction of the strikers.

PUBLIC relations work included the holding of an open membership meeting, to which the public was invited and for which it turned out to see three reels of pictures of the strike and to hear reports

That's the story. It gives the laugh to rumors of "back to work" movements the company keeps circulating, in between slow, laborious negotiation sessions.

The company has been taking all it can out of the hides of the workers ever since the original plant site was donated to the firm in 1887.

It's bitten off too much this trip.

GM SALES DROP—BUT NOT THOSE PROFITS

NOTWITHSTANDING the reconversion shutdowns and the strike in the closing months of last year, General Motors Corp. made more profits in 1945 than in wartime 1944, as the company's annual report shows.

And, as CIO United Auto Workers members with a flair for figures observe, the U. S. treasury contributed $34,000,000 to the corporation which came in handy to offset strike losses.

Commenting on GM Chairman Alfred P. Sloan's message to stockholders, the UAW research department said:

"For American workers the year 1945 was a year of reconversion headaches and slashed take-home pay. For the duPonts and Sloans of GM there were no such ordeals. According to Mr. Sloan profits for the corporation in 1945 were actually higher than in 1944.

The profits were $170,995,865 in 1944 and $188,268,115 in 1945.

Profits mounted for GM although sales between 1944 and 1945 dropped by over one billion dollars. This neat trick of making more money for selling less products was not done with mirrors but with the tax laws passed by Congress. Here, according to the UAW, is how it was done:

"1. GM added $34,415,000 to profits out of the U. S. treasury through application of the notorious carryback provisions of the excess profit law.

"2. GM cut its income taxes by $17,664,600 as compensation to itself for war plants in addition to the 20% annual amortization already allowed on these properties. Altogether the government paid $85,000,000 for these plants—but GM owns them.

"3. GM sold its holdings in the Natl. Bank of Detroit at a profit to itself of $13,957,800."

Auto workers also figure out that GM made more profit in 1945 while paying its employes a lower average weekly rate than in 1944. The average weekly rate in '45 was $55.90 including overtime. In 1944 it was $56.70, according to Mr. Sloan.

OTHER ALLIS STRIKES LOOM

FAILURE of U. S. Conciliators, after 28 days of negotiations, to resolve major issues in dispute between the Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co. and Local 248, CIO United Auto Workers, has thrown the case into the laps of Washington labor department officials in the hope that an eleventh-hour settlement can be reached.

Unless government action can bring about an agreement before April 29, the deadline set by the union, the Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co., Wisconsin's largest manufacturing plant, currently employing 11,400 production workers, will be struck.

If forced to strike, the West Allis works will be the fifth Allis-Chalmers plant to join a national walkout of that company. Other struck plants are located at Pittsburgh, Pa., La Porte, Ind., Springfield and Norwood, Ohio. The La Crosse, Wis., and Boston, Mass., plants are expected to join the strike, barring agreement.

CIO UNION CONVENTION LIST

Forthcoming conventions of CIO international unions and state industrial union councils are:

April 30—Pennsylvania CIO Council, Pittsburgh.

May 6—Maritime Conference of several CIO Maritime unions, San Francisco, Cal.

May 6—Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Atlantic City, N. J.

May 14—United Steelworkers of America, Atlantic City.

May 14—United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes, Akron, Ohio.

May 19—International Fur & Leather Workers, Atlantic City.

May 22—Playthings, Jewelry & Novelty Workers, Atlantic City.

June 3 — United Packinghouse Workers, Montreal, Que.

June 3 — United Furniture Workers, Detroit.

June 4—United Transport Service Workers, Chicago.

June 10—Michgian CIO Council, Detroit.

June 17—American Newspaper Guild, Scranton, Pa.

July 15—Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers, Buffalo.

July 20—Tennessee CIO Council, Chattanooga.

August 12—Oil Workers International Union, Fort Worth, Tex.

Sept. 9—Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, Milwaukee.

THE BOSSES HAVE NO TROUBLE AT ALL

Wage increases of 40 to 60% were won by three officials of the American Rolling Mill Co. after negotiations with themselves.

For Mill Pres. Charles R. Hook, ex-president of the National Association of Manufacturers, the wage increase of 40% amounted to $47,493.

For vice-president Calvin Verity a 55% increase meant $42,614 more in the sock; and for another vice-president W. W. Sebald, a 60% boost added $32,993 to the family bank account.

The American Rolling Mills, a few months ago, bitterly fought the steelworkers demand for an 18c increase. They didn't have the heart to fight themselves, however.

VETS HIKE—TO ORGANIZE

A 30-mile hike in the night by two veterans this week brought a Southfields, N. Y. plant into the CIO.

The two veterans, Hampton Elwood and William Brown, workers at the Frank Hall & Sons plant, walked 30 miles to a CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers union meeting to ask that the CIO organize in their plant.

The CIO did, and last week the workers voted 43 to 6 for the CIO. Now an agreement is being negotiated.

WEBER HEADS VA. PAC

Charles Weber, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, has been named director of the Virginia state PAC and the State CIO Council.

ARE YOU UNFAIR to the Union Label?

PLAIN OR TIPPED

Union people who do not boost union label goods are unfair to their union and unfair to themselves . . . because union-made means well-made!

Raleigh Cigarettes are the most widely distributed union label product in the world . . . every time you say "A pack of Raleighs" you boost your union label!

Be fair to your label...be fair to yourself...

SMOKE Raleigh

THROAT PROTECTION ★ BETTER TASTE ★ LASTING FRESHNESS

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Frank J. Bender, CIO Reg. Dir., Baltimore, Md., reports: Kauffman Manufacturing & Supply Co., Hagerstown, Md., UAW-CIO 16, against 0. CIO Field Rep. Robert Brylke was in charge.

Carey E. Haigler, CIO Reg. Dir., Birmingham, advises: Rheem Mfg. Co., Birmingham, USA-CIO 4, no union 2. USA Director R. E. Farr was in charge. Krestex Corporation, Haleyville, Ala., CIO Textile Workers 238, no union 55. TWUA State Director Edmund F. Ryan was in charge, assisted by TWUA Rep. Lloyd Davis and a splendid organizing committee composed of workers in the Haleyville plant and members of the TWUA local at Russellville.

CIO Reg. Dir. Geo. Craig, of Philadelphia, reports: Link-Belt Co., Philadelphia, USA-CIO 878, against 91.

G. Geo. DeNucci, CIO Reg. Dir., Columbus, announces: Roseville Pottery Co., Zanesville, Ohio, CIO Glass Workers 193, against 77. Rep. Everett Kanatzer was in charge; Invincible Sweeper Co., Dover, Ohio, employes voted 100% for the USA-CIO. Rep. Bill Neal was in charge.

CIO Reg. Dir. Walter H. Harris, Chicago, reports: The Whitcomb Locomotive Co., Rochelle, Ill. (production and maintenance employes), USA-CIO 95, against 45.

Paul R. Christopher, CIO National Representative, reports: CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. W. A. Copeland, Memphis, announces: International Cellucotton, Memphis, CIO Textile Workers 123, against 2; TWUA Rep. Grant Williams was in charge; Moss Devoy Brick, Memphis, CIO 51, no union 0. CIO Rep. Henry White handled this one.

Carey Haigler, CIO Reg. Dir., Birmingham, announces: Saratoga-Victory Co., Albertville, Ala., CIO Textile Workers 219, no union 109. TWUA State Director Edmund F. Ryan informs that TWUA Reps. W. H. Price and Houston Troupe were in charge of the campaign. This marks the establishment of the first CIO local in Marshall County, home county of former Congressman Joe Starnes.

Wm. Mayo, CIO Reg. Dir., South Bend, Ind., reports: Hind & Dauch, Detroit, CIO Paperworkers 85, no union 7. UPA Rep. Neil Chesebro was in charge.

G. Geo. DeNucci, CIO Reg. Dir., Columbus, reports: Hinde & Dache, Sandusky, Ohio, CIO Paperworkers 193, against 77. UPA Rep. Elzy Bush was in charge.

★ ★ ★

CIO Reg. Dir. Hugh Thompson, Buffalo, advises: Enzinger Union Corp., Angola, N. Y., CIO 30, IAM 16; Ranburn Co., Inc., Tonawanda, N. Y., CIO Paperworkers 16, no union 10. CIO Rep. Jos. J. Lovas was in charge of both of these drives.

E. B. Pugh, CIO Reg. Dir., Richmond, Va., reports: Double Envelope Corp., Roanoke, Va., CIO 33, against 23. UPA Rep. Thomas Linn was in charge, assisted by CIO Rep. Lloyd P. Vaughan.

Ewald Sandner, CIO Reg. Dir., Newark, reports: Mutual Sunset Co., Trenton, N. J., CIO Playthings, Jewelry & Novelty Wkrs. 70, AFL 36. PJNW Rep. Morris Riger was in charge; Cities Service Oil Co., Linden, N. J., CIO Oil Wkrs. 16, no union 0. OWIU Rep. Paul Eaton was in charge.

Thomas E. Andert, Chairman, Optical & Instrument Workers Org. Comm., advises: American Optical Co., Evansville, Ind., CIO 11, no union 0. O&IW Rep. Arthur Alberstein was in charge; Buhl Optical Co., CIO 46, against 19. CIO Rep. Geo. Knezevich was in charge of the organizational work.

Thos. J. Gallagher, Dir. Org. IUM&SWA-CIO, reports: Frank A. Hall & Sons, CIO 43, no union 6.

★ ★ ★

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. Michael Livoda, Denver, Colorado, reports: Colorado Milling and Elevator Co., Hayes, Kansas, URWDSEA-CIO 25, against 11; Colorado Milling and Elevator Co., Claflin, Kansas, URWDSEA-CIO 30, against 2. Intl. Rep. Marion C. Frazier was in charge. Successful negotiations with Gates Rubber Co. and the CIO Rubber Workers resulted in a contract being concluded and accepted on a basis of 18½c increase across the board.

CIO Reg. Dir. Jos. D. Cannon, Louisville, Ky., reports: Midwest Industries, Louisville, signed a contract with the URWDSEA-CIO providing union shop, check-off and wage increases up to 2½c for highest paid workers and up to 30c per hour for lesser and lower paid workers, plus many other benefits.

Carey E. Haigler, CIO Reg. Dir., Birmingham, advises: Meadow Gold Creamery Co., Huntsville, Ala., recognized URWDSEA-CIO without resorting to NLRB. Involves approximately 35 people. Credit for this should go to URDWSEA Reg. Dir. John Schulter, State Dir. Frank Parker and Field Rep. Harvey Mayo as well as a splendid committee from the Huntsville IUC.

James Ritchie, CIO Reg. Dir., St. Louis, reports: John Arthur Shoe Co., St. Louis, CIO Shoe Workers 53, no union 26.

★ ★ ★

USWA Reg. Dir. Harry Jones, Endicott, N. Y., advises that negotiations have been completed for a wage increase in the Paracord and the Rubber plant of the Endicott-Johnson Corp. and according to the company they intend to pay the same wage increases to all employes of the Endicott-Johnson Corp. which will amount to better than $5,500,000 a year increase. The pay increase for Endicott-Johnson Corp. workers in Greater Endicott and the rest of the Triple Cities area will come to about 15c an hour for each worker. Agreement was negotiated by Harry E. Jones, Reg. Dir., CIO Shoe Workers, and the local committee of John McGivern, pres., Harry Barton, vice pres., and Roger Clouse, chief steward. These negotiations have been carried out without any work stoppage or strikes.

CIO Reg. Dir. I. L. DeShetler, Kansas City, reports: Midwest Packing Co., Kansas City, Mo., CIO Packinghouse Workers 19, against 6. Intl. Rep. Frank Brown was in charge.

In front rank of Pratt & Whitney picketline in Hartford, Conn., ex-GI's spearhead the drive of Local 251, CIO Electrical Workers, for an 18½c wage boost. Local manufacturers seek to establish a 10c raise as standard.

PLAN JOINT MARITIME ACTION

JOINT strike action by seven maritime unions will be recommended to the May 6 Maritime Unity Convention unless the "deadlock in negotiations between all of the maritime unions and the shipping industry is broken."

The recommendation was announced last week after a conference by officials of five of the seven unions.

If industry heads continue their "sitdown" on wage demands, a strike of the seven unions would involve 200,000 workers and 85% of the maritime industry, the union officials estimated.

Two proposals will be laid before the May 6 convention. They are:

1. "That the maritime unions will join together in support of wage increases and other improvements demanded by each of the participating unions;

2. "That any strike action against the shipping industry shall be joint strike action, with all maritime unions concerned starting the strike together and at the same time, and continuing to remain on strike until the demands of all the respective unions are met."

The unions involved are the National Maritime Union; the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union; Marine Cooks & Stewards; American Communications Assn.; Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn.; Inland Boatman's Union, all CIO affiliates, and the Pacific Coast Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders & Wipers, unaffiliated.

All of the unions have taken, or are now in the process of completing, strike referendums.

NLRB UPHOLDS FTA

THE CIO Food & Tobacco Workers position in its California cannery dispute with the AFL Teamsters was twice upheld last week by two Natl. Labor Relations Board examiners.

The two examiners, in a review of FTA charges against the AFL and two cannery plants, said the closed shop agreements reached between the Teamsters and cannery plants were "clearly illegal."

Recommendations that the NLRB withdraw recognition of the Teamsters and set aside the closed shop contracts were contained in the report which said that the companies "unlawfully assisted the AFL and interfered with FTA-CIO."

The two companies, the Lincoln Packing Co. and Flotill Products Co., had signed backdoor agreements with the Teamsters even though they knew that the NLRB had directed the firms not to enter into any exclusive agreements until a new election was held.

The recommendations were expected to set the pattern for further NLRB action against the California Processors & Growers Assn., which has signed contracts with the Teamsters.

TO PUT IT BRIEFLY

WORKERS in the Alaska canned salmon industry voted overwhelmingly to strike for their demands after owners of seven plants refused to negotiate. Minimum wage in the canneries is $144 a month for the two-month season, the CIO Food, Tobacco Workers, representing the workers, said.

The biggest organizing drive ever undertaken in New York's wholesale and warehouse industry is being planned by Local 65, CIO Wholesale and Warehouse Workers. An appropriation of $250,000 and a staff of 100 organizers has been voted.

Maintenance workers of the Detroit News, in addition to a $3 a week raise, will get 10% premium for all work done after midnight under a new contract gained by the Detroit Newspaper Guild.

CIO Fur and Leather Workers in two luggage plants in the Detroit area won 15 and 17½c hourly pay increases, and other contract gains. In Muskegon, Mich., the fur workers won a 18½c boost at the Muskegon Tannery Co. after a four-day strike.

CIO Steelworkers gained a 19c pay boost for workers in the Texarkana, Ark., Water Co. Wage adjustments were calculated on the basis of maintaining weekly take-home pay after a cut-back in the work week.

Two CIO Rubber Workers locals in Philadelphia and Trenton, N. J., negotiated 18½c increases for 800 workers in the Sloane Blabon Linoleum Corp.

Reid Robinson, pres. Intl. Union Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, reports: Settlements of 18½c per hour with retroactive pay of 9¼c back some six months has been made with the Anaconda Copper Mining Co. for all of its Montana properties covering 8,000 workers. Similar settlements have been made with the Miami Copper Co., Inspiration Consolidated Copper Co., and the Intl. Smelting & Refining Co., at Miami and Globe, Ariz. The back pay has been based on 18½c for a three-month period. The Triumph Mining Co., Hailey, Idaho, and 20 brass manufacturing plants have also settled on the basis of 18½c per hour. The brass plants are located in Connecticut, New Jersey and New York. Only one major brass company, the American Brass Co., remains unsettled with 8,000 workers on strike.

HOUSE VOTE TO KILL OPA

HERE is how the House of Representatives voted to destroy OPA and raise prices. There were seven crippling amendments which would make the price control act not worth the paper it is written on.

The amendment on which the vote is here recorded is the worst of the lot because it guarantees profits. Many of those who voted for these amendments are apostles of free enterprise, but apparently they think nothing is wrong with Government intervention as long as it underwrites profits already swollen by the war.

Remember these men who voted wrong (W)—for the amendment. They are enemies of the working people. The symbol (R) for right means a vote against the amendment. NV means not voting and includes paired votes.

ALABAMA

Boykin (D) ..... W
Grant (D) ..... W
Andrews (D) ..... W
Hobbs (D) ..... W
Rains (D) ..... NV
Jarman (D) ..... NV
Manasco (D) ..... W
Sparkman (D) ..... R
Patrick (D) ..... NV

ARIZONA

Harless (D) ..... W
Murdock (D) ..... R

ARKANSAS

Gathings (D) ..... W
Mills (D) ..... W
Trimble (D) ..... R
Cravens (D) ..... W
Hays (D) ..... R
Norrell (D) ..... W
Harris, Oren (D) ..... W

CALIFORNIA

Lea (D) ..... W
Engle (D) ..... W
Johnson, Leroy (R) ..... W
Havenner (D) ..... R
Welch (R) ..... R
Miller (D) ..... NV
Tolan (D) ..... R
Anderson (R) ..... W
Gearhart (R) ..... W
Elliott (D) ..... W
Outland (D) ..... R
Voorhis (D) ..... R
Healy (D) ..... R
Douglas (D) ..... R
McDonough (R) ..... W
Patterson (D) ..... R
King (D) ..... R
Doyle (D) ..... R
Holifield (D) ..... R
Hinshaw (R) ..... W
Sheppard (D) ..... NV
Phillips (R) ..... W
Izac (D) ..... NV

COLORADO

Gillespie (R) ..... W
Hill (R) ..... W
Chenoweth (R) ..... W
Rockwell (R) ..... W

CONNECTICUT

Ryter (D) ..... R
Kopplemann (D) ..... R
Woodhouse (D) ..... R
Geelan (D) ..... R
Luce (R) ..... NV
Talbot (R) ..... W

DELAWARE

Traynor (D) ..... R

FLORIDA

Peterson, J. Hardin (D) ..... NV
Price (D) ..... W
Sikes (D) ..... W
Cannon, Pat (D) ..... R
Hendricks (D) ..... W
Rogers (D) ..... W

GEORGIA

Peterson, Hugh (D) ..... W
Cox (D) ..... W
Pace (D) ..... W
Camp (D) ..... W
Vinson (D) ..... W
Tarver (D) ..... W
Gibson (D) ..... NV
Wood (D) ..... W
Brown (D) ..... W
Mankin (D) ..... R

IDAHO

White (D) ..... NV
Dworshak (R) ..... W

ILLINOIS

Douglas (D) ..... R
Dawson (D) ..... R
Rowan (D) ..... NV
Kelly (D) ..... W
Gorski (D) ..... R
Sabath (D) ..... NV
O'Brien (D) ..... R
Link (D) ..... R
Gordon (D) ..... R
Resa (D) ..... R
Church (R) ..... W
Reed, Chauncey W. (R) ..... W
Mason (R) ..... W
Allen (R) ..... W
Johnson, Anton J. (R) ..... W
Chiperfield (R) ..... W
Dirksen (R) ..... W
Arends (R) ..... W
Sumner (R) ..... W
McMillen (R) ..... NV
Simpson, Sid (R) ..... W
Howell (R) ..... W

(ILLINOIS—Continued)

Price (D) ..... R
Vursell (D) ..... W
Clippinger (R) ..... W
Bishop (R) ..... W

INDIANA

Madden (D) ..... R
Halleck (R) ..... W
Grant (R) ..... W
Gillie (R) ..... W
Harness (R) ..... W
Johnson, Noble J. (R) ..... W
Landis (R) ..... W
LaFollette (R) ..... R
Wilson (R) ..... NV
Springer (R) ..... W
Ludlow (D) ..... R

IOWA

Martin, Thomas E. (R) ..... W
Talle (R) ..... W
Gwynne (R) ..... W
LeCompte (R) ..... W
Cunningham (R) ..... W
Dolliver (R) ..... W
Jensen (R) ..... W
Hoeven (R) ..... W

KANSAS

Cole (R) ..... W
Scrivner (R) ..... W
Winter (R) ..... W
Rees (R) ..... W
Hope (R) ..... W
Carlson (R) ..... W

KENTUCKY

Gregory (D) ..... R
Clements (D) ..... W
O'Neal (D) ..... NV
Chelf (D) ..... W
Spence (D) ..... R
Chapman (D) ..... R
May (D) ..... R
Bates (D) ..... R
Robsion (R) ..... W

LOUISIANA

Hebert (D) ..... W
Maloney (D) ..... W
Domengeaux (D) ..... W
Brooks (D) ..... W
McKenzie (D) ..... W
Morrison (D) ..... R
Larcade (D) ..... W
Allen (D) ..... W

MAINE

Hale (R) ..... W
Smith, Margaret Chase (R) ..... R
Fellows (R) ..... W

MARYLAND

Roe (D) ..... W
Baldwin (D) ..... W
D'Alesandro (D) ..... R
Fallon (D) ..... R
Sasscer (D) ..... R
Beall (R) ..... W

MASSACHUSETTS

Heselton (R) ..... W
Clason (R) ..... W
Philbin (D) ..... W
Holmes, Pehr G. (R) ..... W
Rogers, Edith Nourse (R) ..... W
Bates (R) ..... W
Lane (D) ..... R
Goodwin (R) ..... W
Gifford (R) ..... W
Herter (R) ..... W
Curley (D) ..... NV
McCormack (D) ..... R
Wigglesworth (R) ..... W
Martin, Joseph W. (R) ..... W

MICHIGAN

Sadowski (D) ..... R
Michener (R) ..... W
Shafer (R) ..... R
Hoffman (R) ..... W
Jonkman (R) ..... W
Blackney (R) ..... W
Wolcott (R) ..... W
Crawford (R) ..... W
Engel (R) ..... W
Woodruff (R) ..... W
Hook (D) ..... R
O'Brien (D) ..... R
Rabaut (D) ..... R
Dingell (D) ..... R
Lesinski (D) ..... R
Dondero (R) ..... W

MINNESOTA

Andresen, August H. (R) ..... W
O'Hara (R) ..... W
Gallagher (D) ..... R
Starkey (D) ..... R
Judd (R) ..... W
Knutsen (R) ..... W
Andersen (R) ..... W
Pittenger (R) ..... W
Hagen (R) ..... W

MISSISSIPPI

Rankin (D) ..... W
Whitten (D) ..... W
Whittington (D) ..... W
Abernethy (D) ..... W
Winstead (D) ..... W
Colmer (D) ..... NV
McGehee (D) ..... W

MISSOURI

Arnold (R) ..... W
Schwabe (R) ..... W
Cole, William C. (R) ..... W
Bell (D) ..... W
Slaughter (D) ..... W
Bennett (R) ..... W
Short (R) ..... W
Carnahan (D) ..... R
Cannon, Clarence (D) ..... R
Zimmerman (D) ..... R
Sullivan (D) ..... R
Ploeser (R) ..... W
Cochran (D) ..... NV

MONTANA

Mansfield, Mike (D) ..... R
D'Ewart (R) ..... W

NEBRASKA

Curtis (R) ..... W
Buffett (R) ..... W
Stefan (R) ..... W
Miller, A. L. (R) ..... W

NEVADA

Bunker (D) ..... NV

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Merrow (R) ..... W
Adams (R) ..... W

NEW JERSEY

Wolverton (R) ..... R
Hand (R) ..... W
Auchincloss (R) ..... W
Mathews (R) ..... W
Eaton (R) ..... W
Case (R) ..... W
Thomas, J. Parnell (R) ..... W
Canfield (R) ..... R
Towe (R) ..... W
Hartley (R) ..... W
Sudstrom (R) ..... W
Kean (R) ..... R
Norton (D) ..... NV
Hart (D) ..... R

NEW MEXICO

Fernandez (D) ..... W

Philip Murray, James B. Carey and Allan S. Haywood, president, secretary-treasurer and vice-president respectively of the CIO, receive Treasury Dept. medals for their help in promoting War Bond sales. Shown here, l. to r., are: Haywood; G. Warren Morgan, associate chief, Labor Section, Treasury Saving Bonds Division; Murray, Carey, and Joe Swire, also of the Labor Section, Savings Bonds Division.

NEW YORK

Sharp (R) ..... NV
Hall, Edwin (R) ..... W
Latham (R) ..... W
Barry (D) ..... R
Roe (D) ..... NV
Delaney, James (D) ..... R
Delaney. John (D) ..... R
Pfeifer (D) ..... R
Keogh (D) ..... R
Somers (D) ..... R
Heffernan (D) ..... R
Rooney (D) ..... R
O'Toole (D) ..... R
Rayfiel (D) ..... R
Celler (D) ..... R
Buck (R) ..... W
Baldwin (R) ..... R
Marcantonio (ALP) ..... R
Bloom (D) ..... R
Torrens (D) ..... R
Powell (D) ..... R
Lynch (D) ..... R
Rabin (D) ..... R
Buckley (D) ..... R
Quinn (D) ..... R
Gwinn (R) ..... W
Gamble (R) ..... W
Bennet (D) ..... W
LeFevre (R) ..... W
Kearney (R) ..... W
Byrne (D) ..... R
Taylor (R) ..... W
Kilburn (R) ..... W
Fuller (R) ..... W
Hancock (R) ..... NV
Hall, Leonard (R) ..... W
Taber (R) ..... W
Cole, W. Sterling (R) ..... W
Rogers (D) ..... R
Wadsworth (R) ..... W
Andrews (R) ..... NV
Elsaesser (R) ..... W
Butler (R) ..... W
Reed, Daniel A. (R) ..... W
Klein (D) ..... R

NORTH CAROLINA

Bonner (D) ..... W
Kerr (D) ..... W
Barden (D) ..... W
Cooley (D) ..... W
Folger (D) ..... R
Durham (D) ..... W
Clark (D) ..... R
Doughton (D) ..... W
Ervin (D) ..... W
Bulwinkle (D) ..... R
Weaver (D) ..... NV

NORTH DAKOTA

Lemke (R) ..... W
Robertson (R) ..... W

OHIO

Bender (R) ..... W
Elston (R) ..... W
Hess (R) ..... W
Gardner (D) ..... W
Jones (R) ..... NV
Clevenger (R) ..... W
McCowen (R) ..... W
Brown (R) ..... W
Smith, Frederick (R) ..... W
Ramey (R) ..... W
Jenkins (R) ..... W
Brehm (R) ..... W
Vorys (R) ..... W
Weichel (R) ..... W
Huber (D) ..... R
Griffiths (R) ..... W
Thom (D) ..... R
McGregor (R) ..... W
Lewis (R) ..... W
Kirwin (D) ..... R
Feighan (D) ..... R
Crosser (D) ..... R
Bolton (R) ..... W

OKLAHOMA

Schwabe (R) ..... W
Stigler (D) ..... W
Stewart (D) ..... W
Boren (D) ..... W
Monroney (D) ..... R
Johnson (D) ..... W
Wickersham (D) ..... W
Rizley (R) ..... W

OREGON

Norblad (R) ..... W
Stockman (R) ..... W
Angell (R) ..... W
Ellsworth (R) ..... W

PENNSYLVANIA

Barrett (D) ..... R
Granahan (D) ..... R
Bradley (D) ..... R

(Continued on Page 13)

Book Review

'Storm' Against Franco

"THE wind is rising," pretty, young Eulalia slowly said.

They were sitting—she and her young husband fresh from a Spanish political prison, and Abel Plenn of the staff of the American Embassy — on a stately olive grove near a pleasant Spanish village, watching starved kids grab for breadcrusts with the frenzy that comes with near-starvation.

"All over Spain, the wind was rising," Plenn wrote in his penetrating study of the Franco regime, "Wind in the Olive Trees."* "For victors and vanquished alike, the civil war had never ended. There had been no armistice; and the unconditional surrender which Franco had finally choked out of gasping, prostrate Madrid on that April Fool's Day in 1939 with his false promise of leniency, had quickly come to mean nothing more than a truce between an armed minority of reactionaries and fascists who supported the Generalissimo, and the Republic's wall of men."

Veterans of the Loyalist army, teachers, taxi drivers and waiters —even priests—who express "disloyalty" by word or deed face prison dungeons and death in the regime of Francisco Franco, who now proclaims to the world that he has always been a democrat. But Abel Plenn, who was in Spain when the tide of Axis power was at its crest, knows better; Franco's groveling before the German Fuehrer and the Italian Duce, the anxiety with which Franco sought to cater to the big-shot fascists of Europe, don't spell democracy in any human vocabulary.

German technicians, German business men, Gestapo agents flourished in "neutral" Spain. "Volunteer" troops, most of them drafted, were sent by "neutral" Franco to fight the Russians. "Volunteer" groups of workers, dragooned by the uniformed, ruthless Falange into labor gangs, were sent to help the Nazis. And precious tungsten and wolfram moved by the ton out of Spain into the German war machine.

"Fascist Spain," concludes author Plenn, "is a sword . . . guided by Franco's fellow travelers in this country . . . pointed straight at the heart of America." It's time we did something about it.

With just a little help from us, the proud, brave Spanish people can substitute a government of the common man for the tin-hat dictator who flouts all the rules of human decency and who threatens our peace. H. F.

 Wind in the Olive Trees, by Abel Plenn. 350 pp. Boni & Gaer, N. Y. $3.00.

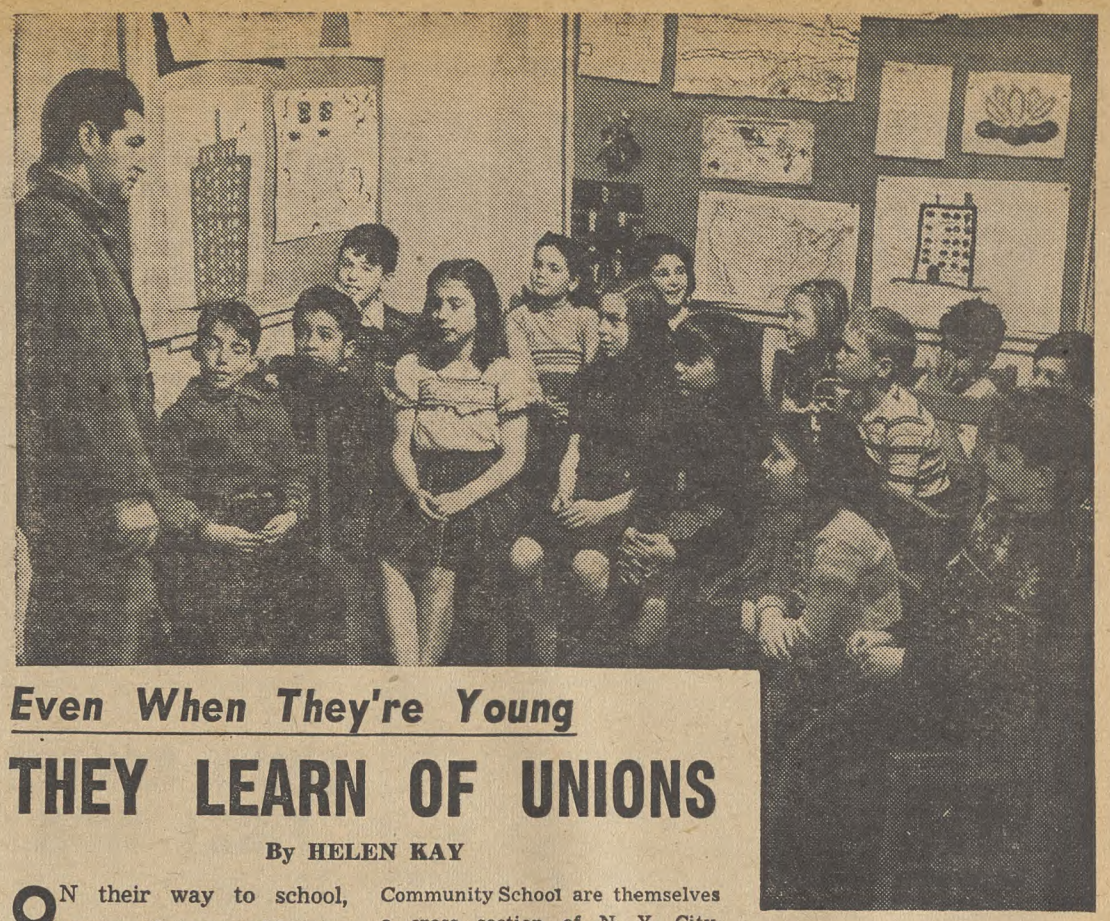
HOUSE VOTE TO KILL PRICE CONTROL

(Continued from Page 12)

(PENN.—Continued)
Sheridan (D)	NV
Green (D)	R
McGlinchey (D)	R
Wolfenden (R)	W
Gerlach (R)	W
Kinzer (R)	W
Murphy (D)	R
Flood (D)	R
Fenton (R)	W
Hoch (D)	R
Gillette (R)	W
Rich (R)	W
McConnell (R)	W
Simpson, Richard M. (R)	W
Kunkel (R)	R
Gavin (R)	W
Walter (D)	R
Gross (R)	W
Brumbaugh (R)	W
Morgan (D)	R
Graham (R)	NV
Tibbott (R)	W
Kelley (D)	R
Rodgers (R)	NV
Campbell (R)	W
Corbett (R)	W
Fulton (R)	R
Eberharter (D)	R
RHODE ISLAND
Forand (D)	R
Fogarty (D)	R
SOUTH CAROLINA
Rivers (D)	W
Riley (D)	W
Hare (D)	W
Bryson (D)	W
Richards (D)	W
McMillan (D)	W
SOUTH DAKOTA
Mundt (R)	W
Case (R)	W
TENNESSEE
Reece (R)	NV
Jennings (R)	W
Kefauver (D)	R
Gore (D)	R
Earthman (D)	W
Priest (D)	R
Courtney (D)	R
Murray (D)	W
Cooper (D)	R
Davis (D)	NV
TEXAS
Patman (D)	R
Combs (D)	R
Beckworth (D)	R
Rayburn (D)	SPKR.
Sumners (D)	W

(TEXAS—Continued)
Johnson, Luther (D)	R
Pickett (D)	W
Thomas, Albert (D)	W
Mansfield, Joseph J. (D)	NV
Johnson, Lyndon B. (D)	R
Poage (D)	W
Lanham (D)	W
Gossett (D)	W
Lyle (D)	R
West (D)	W
Thomason (D)	R
Russell (D)	W
Worley (D)	W
Mahon (D)	W
Kilday (D)	W
Fisher (D)	NV
UTAH
Granger (D)	R
Robinson (D)	R
VERMONT
Plumley (R)	W
VIRGINIA
Bland (D)	R
Daughton (D)	W
Gary (D)	W
Drewry (D)	R
Burch (D)	W
Almond (D)	W
Robertson (D)	R
Smith, Howard (D)	W
Flannagan (D)	W
WASHINGTON
DeLacey (D)	R
Jackson (D)	R
Savage (D)	R
Holmes, Hal (R)	W
Horan (R)	W
Coffee (D)	R
WEST VIRGINIA
Neely (D)	R
Randolph (D)	W
Bailey (D)	R
Ellis (R)	R
Kee (D)	R
Hedrick (D)	W
WISCONSIN
Smith, Lawrence (R)	W
Henry (R)	NV
Stevenson (R)	W
Wasieleswki (D)	R
Biemiller (D)	R
Keefe (R)	W
Murray (R)	W
Byrnes (R)	W
Hull (Prog)	R
O'Konski (R)	W
WYOMING
Barrett (R)	W



Even When They're Young

THEY LEARN OF UNIONS

By HELEN KAY

ON their way to school, some nine-year-olds saw picket lines, and that started questions, and the Downtown Community School, in N. Y. city, being the kind it is, set out to find out "why men strike," and "what are unions."

The kids talked about it amongst themselves, and they wrote about it. Then they suggested it for the next assembly subject.

And being a school "that faces life head-on" as the school director, Mrs. Ellen Reece, explained, they asked their nearest labor neighbors, the workers in the school itself, organized 100% into various CIO unions, to send shop stewards of each union to help them learn about unions.

Joe Gallardo, member of the CIO Maintenance & Building Service Union Local 670, Lillian Forman of the Teachers Union and Lillian Ryckoff of the Office Workers came. And they were amazed. These children from eight to eleven asked the whole gamut of questions involving the rights of unions, the fight for higher pay, even "will wage increases raise prices?" and about scabs and pickets.

The children had no personal experience with strikes. But the simple logic and their sense of fair play made them see things clearly.

Lillian Ryckoff, the office worker, remembered best the nine-year-old boy who kept pressing his point: "I can't see how a strike can succeed, if while workers are busy striking, other workers take their jobs."

Joe Gallardo, a marine worker during the war, was asked: "Why do you join a union? What does the union do for you?"

He said: "It took me quite a while to answer them because they caught me off guard. I didn't expect that kind of question from little kids. But I told them plain: 'I joined to get a better standard of living and that's what the union has done for me.' "

Children in the Downtown Community School are themselves a cross section of N. Y. City. Business men, working mothers, radio operators, publicity writers, artists, psychiatrists, social workers — these are the parents of children in school at 233 E. 11th St. These parents wanted a school where their children could learn about their own city and the give and take of community living . . . about democracy.

The charter of the school specifies that the school must reflect the multi-national population of their community, with representatives from as many cultures, nationalities, religons and races as possible. Forty per cent of the student body must be part scholarship. This insures a cross section of the community, as well as representatives of the many cultures.

The school believes firmly in educating not only the children, but the parents. For this reason, there's an adult workshop. Recognizing that the trouble with kids begins with their parents, the adult workshop launched a community education program. Some of their subjects are trade unions and the fight against discrimination; trade unions and progressive legislation, etc. The adult workshop has distributed quantities of CIO material on discrimination. The comic book on race relations was given out to neighborhood children, while the parents took many of the "Know Your Neighbor" pamplets.

Learning about the strikes and their reasons, the children set out to do something. They raised funds. Paula Lawrence, whose father is a mannequin decorator, explained: "And I even collected five pounds of sugar."

Peter Ryder, whose father is an Army medical officer at O'Halloran Hospital, declared: "The steel workers were not disloyal for striking, but were in fact loyal. Didn't they produce steel all through the war, and they waited to settle their personal question of more money for their families only when peace came."

That's kids, for you.

Joe Gallardo, shop steward for the CIO Building & Maintenance Workers at the Downtown Community School in N. Y. City, explains that he joined a union to better his working conditions, and that's just what the union did. The children decided to do something for CIO strikers.

FOOD FILMS

The U. S. Department of Agriculture is offering the use of either of two 16mm. sound films to educational, religious and civic groups cooperating in the national program for food conservation.

Both films, "Freedom and Famine" and "Suffer Little Children," show the urgent need for raising, saving, sharing, and shipping more food from the United States to help starving people overseas. Either of the films may be obtained from any one of 200 film libraries located throughout the United States, or State agricultural departments.

"Food—Secret of the Peace," a new film, and its discussion trailer, "Getting the Most Out of a Film," produced by the National Film Board of Canada and recently released in 16mm. by Brandon Films, 1600 Broadway, N. Y. C., approach the subject of food from the point of view of its economic and political significance in the world today.

UNION IN SOUTH TRAINS LEADERS

The American Federation of Hosiery Workers has laid groundwork for cooperating with the CIO organizing drive by sending several active members from unorganized mills to the AFHW Leadership Training Institute held at Highlander Folk School, Monteagle, Tenn.

Workers from Dalton and Lafayette, Ga., and Chattanooga, Tenn., attended the third weekend institute held by the Hosiery Workers in the South under the direction of AFHW Education Director William L. Rafsky.

Steps in an arbitration case were outlined by Andy Janaskie, AFHW representative from Chattanooga. Classes in union building techniques — parliamentary law, public speaking, how to get new union members to be active and how to handle grievances—rounded out the program.

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS — By Rose H. Alschuler

ALWAYS IMPORTANT
ESPECIALLY IF THERE'S A NEW BABY

Doing things together like playing games, reading, going to the store will help your child feel secure and happy in all his relationships. If he knows that sometime each day (maybe only 20 minutes) is his—just his and yours together—he is more apt to be contented, less likely to be jealous and demanding.

Copyright 1945 Natl. CIO NEWS

LOW-PAY CIGARETTE INDUSTRY GRANTED OPA PRICE 'RELIEF'

DESPITE the protest of Pres. Donald Henderson of the CIO Food & Tobacco Workers, OPA this week boosted the retail price of cigarettes five cents a carton to grant alleged necessary price relief to the manufacturers.

Henderson wrote OPA Administrator Paul Porter that the proposed increase "cannot be defended on the grounds of hardship or necessity" since the cigarette industry "is one of the most profitable in the nation" and also "one of the lowest paid."

The reported increase, plus tax relief already given, will hand the cigarette companies over $100 million in extra profits, Henderson's letter said.

The OPA order said that the increase may be passed on to the consumer in two-package and carton sales, but not on one package sales, and that there shall be no price increase on over-the-counter sales unless the retailer has a letter from the manufacturer stating that the cigarettes were bought under the new price schedule.

Henderson's letter also asserted:

"According to OPA's Division of Research, six of the largest tobacco firms making cigarettes are now returning 19.7% of their net worth in profits. Sales of the "big five" (American Tobacco, R. J. Reynolds, Liggett and Myers, P. Lorillard, Philip Morris) are up 83% over 1939. There is every indication that sales will increase substantially in 1946, and further indications are that new machinery will greatly cut production costs.

"As another example of huge profits in the cigarette industry, average 1936-39 profits before taxes were $100,000,000, and in 1944 $130,568,000 — an increase of 30.6%.

"The 'big five' will in addition receive tax relief this year of $21,500,000 through repeal of the excess profits tax, and another $2,000,000 in the 5% cut in income taxes, making a total of more than $23,000,000.

"An increase of one-half cent per package will, on a 1945 production of 330,000,000,000 packages (all manufacturers), provide around $82,500,000 of additional profit," FTA said.

"It is thus clear that cigarette manufacturers will receive more than $100,000,000 in additional profits through the combined operation of tax relief and price increases.

"Cigarette manufacturers cannot claim that wages are a factor of any importance in their costs of production, since they amount to only 2.5% of the total and are below standards in other industries.

"The reported increase in the price of cigarettes to the consumer cannot be defended on grounds of 'hardship' or necessity. It does not seem to us either reasonable or fair that such an industry, one of the most notoriously low paid in the nation, should be rewarded with an additional $100,000,000 in profits at this time."

OFFER SCHOLARSHIPS

Scholarships for a summer school for office workers, to be held in Lake Forest, Ill., from July 13 to 27, are available. Applications may be obtained from George Guernsey, assistant director, CIO Research and Education Dept., or from Summer School for Office Workers, 437 West 59th St., N. Y. C. 19.

BODY NEEDS LUNCH WITH PUNCH

Prepared by Nutrition Service, D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross

DO you get mid-afternoon sag? Here's a way to help prevent it! For better performance, make your mid-shift meal a high grade meal.

Your body is like an automobile engine. It needs fuel to make it "go," material for upkeep of muscle, blood, bone and organs, and regulators to protect body parts and keep them running smoothly. The right foods in three health-building meals each day will do this three-way job for you.

The husky man loading a truck or swinging a sledge hammer needs more energy building foods than the not-so-active guy or gal sitting at a desk or counter. The amount of food a person needs differs according to the type of work he does, but all workers need the same foods to keep strong, healthy and alert. Each of your three meals must carry its full quota of nourishing health building materials.

Because lunch comes in the middle of the working day when your body is using up the largest amount of energy, it is a very important meal. A hurriedly eaten sandwich and a cup of coffee or soft drink isn't enough for upkeep. So whether you are served in a lunchroom, or select your own from cafeteria, commissary or food truck or carry it home-packed style, the makings of a "good performance" lunch are the same.

It may be light for the desk-sitter or heavy for the muscle-mover, it may be hot or cold, but it must be nourishing—that is, supply at least one-third of your day's quota of minerals, vitamins, energy and muscle building foods. It ought to stick to the ribs and it should be appetizing.

A lunch with punch includes a substantial food for building such as meat, fish, cheese, eggs or dried beans and peas; milk, to drink or in soups, cocoa and desserts, or as cheese; a fruit and a vegetable, for minerals and vitamins.

Fruit can be fresh, canned or dried such as apple, orange, fruit cup or prunes, and the vegetable can be raw or cooked. A bread with a spread is needed for energy. If you're cutting down on wheat to help the starving world, use rye or corn bread, oatmeal muffins or substitute a potato for bread.

Use these foods first, then top off with any other foods you like to satisfy your appetite.

CHILD CENTER FIGHT WON

The persistent struggle of the organized working mothers of Washington, D. C., bore fruit this week when the D. C. Commissioners announced that the child care centers would be reopened in public school buildings April 29.

The centers were ousted from the schools after Lanham Act appropriations stopped Feb. 28, throwing the whole responsibility for the continuance of the centers on the mothers, who had to work to earn a livelihood for themselves and their children. The centers meanwhile were continued on the mothers' initiative in make-shift quarters in churches and homes.

The mothers incorporated as the Child Day Care Centers of D. C. to conduct a public campaign for funds to assure the D. C. Board of Education that they would bear the cost of the project, and also hiked the fees that they had been paying to cover more than 40% of the expenses. The women effectively used a feature story in the March 19 issue of The CIO NEWS to show D. C. Superintendent of Schools Corning the need for returning the centers to the schools.

PEOPLE'S SONGS, INC.

has been organized to "create, promote and distribute songs of labor and the American people."

Members receive monthly Bulletin of new songs, special discounts on books, records, concerts, etc.

For free literature about People's Songs send this ad and a 3c stamp to People's Songs, Inc., 130 West 42nd Street, New York City.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO. QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS
UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1639-49 W. Evergreen Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C. I. O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 4600 West Parker Ave., Chicago 39, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

MICKEY BARRY— JIM'S KID BROTHER— JOINED UP WITH STEVE DENTON'S ANTI-UNION GROUP IN ORDER TO EXPOSE IT. BUT WHEN DENTON DISCOVERS THE PLAN, HE ORDERS MICKEY KILLED AND THE UNION FRAMED FOR IT! WHILE A UNION MEETING IS TAKING PLACE... JIM AND SOME UNION MEMBERS VISIT DENTON'S HOUSE ...

I WAS HOPING YOU RATS WOULD START SHOOTING—

YEH... SHOOTING AT PEACEFUL CITIZENS!

WE GOTTA GET MICKEY DOWN TO THE UNION MEETING — FAST!

LOOK OUT, JIM. I DIDN'T MEAN THAT FAST!

JIM! I KNEW YOU'D GET HERE IN TIME!

I'LL HAVE YOU FREE IN A SECOND...

THAT'S NOT FAST ENOUGH TO SUIT ME, JIM. I'VE GOT A COUPLE OF SCORES TO SETTLE WITH THESE RATS!

HEY! YOU DIDN'T LEAVE ANY FOR ME!

SORRY MICKEY— WE HAD A COUPLE OF SCORES TO SETTLE WITH THIS BUNCH, TOO...

THESE ARE ONLY THE PUNKS... THE SMALL-FRY. WE'VE GOT THE BIG BOY TO DEAL WITH YET... AND HE'S DOWN AT THE UNION MEETING SETTING UP THE FRAME-UP!

WELL, WHAT ARE WE WAITING FOR? LET'S GET AFTER THE RAT.

STEVE DENTON IS SPEAKING... YOU GUYS WAIT OUT HERE UNTIL I GIVE YOU THE SIGNAL... YOU KNOW WHAT TO DO AFTER THAT.

PRESENTLY...

YOU BET, JIM.

UNION HALL

ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, INC.

JIM! OH, JIM— I'M GLAD YOU'RE HERE... HAVE YOU HEARD—

SUE! WHAT'S THE MATTER?

MESKIN

IT... IT'S ABOUT MICKEY! STEVE IS SAYING THAT... THAT... SOMEBODY HERE IS GOING TO... TO... HURT MICKEY. OH, JIM — YOU'VE GOT TO DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT...

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Housing Bill In Rough Water

Four of the country's most powerful special interests are moving in to knife the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Housing Bill (S. 1592). It's time for labor and veterans organizations to protect the legislation, or hopes for better housing may go by the board.

The Bill was passed by the Senate in mid-April. In addition to providing a five-year low-rent homes program, it contains a number of provisions vital to the success of Housing Expediter Wyatt's emergency job of building low-cost homes for vets.

If the real estate interests prevail, homes aren't going to be built in the tremendous numbers necessary, or at prices that the people who need those homes can possibly afford.

This week Chairman R. J. Thomas of the CIO Committee on Housing and Community Development called for immediate action by CIO unions to counter the threat to the bill being planned by the real estate lobby and "their monopoly minded friends."

"The Natl. Assn. of Home Builders, the Natl. Assn. of Real Estate Boards, the Producers Council and the U. S. Savings and Loan League are armed with large sums of money and a large skilled staff of lobbyists to descend on the members of Congress to defeat this bill," Thomas declared.

"They were relatively quiet during the Senate discussion because they felt their chances for success in the Senate were slim. They therefore plan to make an all-out last-ditch attempt to stop passage of this vital piece of legislaiton when hearings start in the House after Easter."

The bill is now ready for consideration by the House Banking & Currency Committee.

The CIO Housing Committee urges all unions to get this message to every Congressman—and especially to members of the House Banking & Currency Committee:

1. Pass S 1592 as it was voted by the Senate, but with these three amendments to strengthen it:

a. An amendment to restore the lapsed payment provisions — gives from a year to three years' moratorium on mortgage payments in the event of unemployment, illness, etc.

b. An amendment to restore the warranty provision—gives each homeowner a one-year FHA guarantee against bad workmanship or faulty materials.

c. An amendment to restore preference in new housing to former slum occupants.

Rankin Rantin' Lays an Egg

When Rep. Rankin goes off on an oratorical splurge, there may be some government employes who believe what he says. If so, they're not in the newly-formed United Public Workers of America, CIO.

Last week Rankin attacked Henry Wallace, Secretary of Commerce and one of the outstanding leaders of American liberalism.

The UPWA, meeting in Atlantic City, N. J., quickly sent Sec. Wallace a wire. It said:

"Our delegates congratulate you upon having won the enmity of Rankin, and we welcome you to the list of great Americans who have been red-baited, Jew-baited or Negro-baited by Rankin and his pro-fascist henchmen.

"Rankin's attack upon you will win you millions of new friends among the millions of Americans who respect decency, democracy and the principles upon which our nation was founded."

Let Them Hear From You!

The following Senators, members of the Senate Banking & Currency Committee, are studying the Price Control Extension Bill (HR 6042). Send them a deluge of wires urging removal of all crippling amendments, so that OPA can do a job of warding off inflation.

Robert Wagner (D., N. Y.), chairman; Carter Glass (D., Va.); Alben Barkley (D., Ky.); John H. Bankhead (D., Ala.); George Radcliffe (D., Md.); Sheridan Downey (D., Calif.); Abe Murdock (D., Utah); James Scrugham (D., Nev.); Ernest McFarland (D., Ariz.); Glen Taylor (D., Ida.); J. W. Fulbright (D., Ark.); Hugh Mitchell (D., Wash.); E. Carville (D., Nev.); Charles Tobey (R., N. H.); Robert Taft (R., O.); John Thomas (R., Ida.); Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.); Arthur Capper (R., Kans.); C. D. Buck (R., Del.); Eugene Millikin (R., Col.); Bourke Hickenlooper (R., Ia.); Homer Capehart (R., Ind.)

And—while you're about it—telegraph to your own Senator that you stand four-square against killing OPA and bringing on wild inflation.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price Control HR 6042	Extends price control act to June 1947.	Passed by House with flock of death-dealing amendments; Senate Banking Committee has opened hearings.	Wire your Senators and members of Banking Committee to pass bill without amendments. Strong action is needed to save OPA and price control.
Patman Housing Bill HR 4761	Provides basis for big housing program for vets.	In Senate-House Conference Committee. At issue: restoration of subsidies and govt. guarantee to buy prefabricated housing.	Wire conferees to re-insert subsidy, pre-fabricated housing purchases. Ask Senators to pass bill.
Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill S 1592	Provides long range housing and slum clearance program.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee hearings to open soon.	Ask support of your Congressman and members of House Banking Committee.
Minimum Wage S 1349	Lifts minimum pay to 65c. Senate added inflationary Pace rider, despite Pres. Truman's threat to veto, and thus kill bill.	Passed by Senate; now ready for House Labor Committee.	Ask Representatives to kill Pace rider and add coverage for seamen, retail, food and communications workers.
Wagner-Murray-Dingell Health Bill S 1606	Establishes national health program aimed at providing adequate low-cost medical service.	Hearings being conducted by Senate Labor Committee; CIO to testify in early May.	Write your Senator that you want bill passed.
Case Bill HR 4908	Would harass unions with many new restrictions and anti-labor devices.	Passed by House; Senate Labor Committee passed milder version, but Tories hope to load it with tough amendments.	Wire, write your Senators that you don't want the Case bill in any form.

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

PRICE CONTROL: Mailmen and telegraph company messenger boys are getting a work-out on Capitol Hill. Greatest deluge of mail and wires in years is flooding Washington on the question of extended price control.

Messages reaching the Senate Banking & Currency Committee are running at the rate of 25-1 for extension of the lid on prices without crippling amendments.

Keep up the good work!

HOUSING: The Patman Housing Bill (HR 4761) is still in joint Senate-House Conference Committee. Foes of the government's plan to build 2½ million homes in the next couple of years are fighting a rear-guard action in the committee to whittle down the $600,000,000 subsidy for building materials and the government's guarantee to purchase all prefabricated homes placed on the market.

Both these sections are vitally important if the program is going to work.

There's still time to get your wires on this subject to members of the conference committee:

Representatives: Brent Spence (D., Ky.); Wright Patman (D., Tex.); Paul Brown (D., Ga.); William Barry (D., N. Y.); Jesse Wolcott (R., Mich.); Fred Crawford (R., Mich.); Ralph Gamble (R., N. Y.). Senators: Alben Barkley (D., Ky.); Abe Murdock (D., Utah); Hugh Mitchell (D., Wash.); Clayton Buck (R., Del.); Homer Capehart (R., Ind.).

POLL TAX: Southern Senators may try to squeeze out any action on the poll tax before Congress adjourns for the election campaign, perhaps in midsummer. Bill (HR 7) awaits action by the Senate. Write your Senators today and get their pledge for cloture—a limit on debate—so that the filibuster crew will be unable to talk the poll tax bill to death when it reaches the Senate floor.

CIO Pres. Murray, addressing the textile workers convention last week, made it clear that the poll tax and the poll tax bloc of conservative Congressmen are largely responsible for the miserable failure of Congress to pass bills urgently needed by the American people.

Murray mentioned the FEPC, veterans housing, social security and the poll tax bill itself as prime examples of measures which have been sabotaged by the "unholy alliance" of poll-tax Democrats and reactionary northern Republicans.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President

NATHAN COWAN, Chairman

ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 19 | Copyright, The CIO NEWS | $1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA | May 6, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

They Mean It, Too! Parade for extension of OPA, without crippling amendments, by CIO Textile Workers, in convention at Atlantic City. See P. 3-4.

BIRMINGHAM HOT FOR PAC ACTION

By ALAN REITMAN

IT'S already become trite to use the phrase "The South is on the march" ever since the CIO opened its full-scale organizing drive. But after a ten-day sojourn below the Mason-Dixon line, that phrase best fits the situation.

In Birmingham, anti-labor stronghold before the CIO cracked the bottleneck several years ago, the people are looking past the straight organizational phase to the ultimate political repercussions. Although the two are being kept entirely separate, this polltax belt of reaction, which to a visitor offers some pleasant and surprising liberal spokesmen, openly fears the power of CIO Political Action in cleansing both state and national offices of reactionary legislators.

Behind the polltax scene the cause of worried discussion is the powerful Negro vote which is being mobilized following the recent Supreme Court decision permitting Negroes to vote in Democratic Party parties. While Negro registration has been blocked somewhat, by and large the southerners' respect for law has caused them, perhaps grudgingly, to abide by the court ruling.

Politically the CIO faces a real challenge in the 1946 elections with the first check slated for the May 7 primary. This is no Presidential election year and all political eyes are on the PAC's ability to repeat its '44 turnout. Three contests have aroused the greatest interest.

One is a scramble for the Alabama governor's seat, where big Jim Folsom, PAC-endorsed and running on a strong labor platform, seems certain to place second in a five-man race. Lt. Governor Handy Ellis is running first. This will put Folsom against the candidate of the Alabama Power Co. and other large corporate interests in a runoff which Folsom could take.

One of the two Congressional races shows Rep. Luther Patrick, a Hugo Black-school progressive whose voting record is tops, facing corporation-backed Laurie C. Battle and Hugh Dubose, a fable rouser campaigning on a hate-PAC program. Patrick will certainly lead these two, although Battles' appeal as a veteran may keep Patrick from a majority and force a runoff on June 4.

Being made to cringe at his remark, "There isn't a worker in Alabama worth more than 40c an hour," former Dies Committeeman Joe Starnes will trail the man who whipped him in 1944, Rep. Albert Rains.

The governor's race is attracting extra importance because one of the requisites for a successful organizing drive will be a friendly governor, ready to withstand employer pressure to use state militia in times of strife. Folsom, a colorful 6-foot, 7-inch giant, who stumped the state with a Hillbilly Band, has pledged not to use the militia and has further called for repeal of the polltax and the Bradford Act, Alabama's Case Bill.

Here in Birmingham the PAC has a functioning organization which is learning fast its political lessons and is anxious to put them into practice. A ward and precinct organization has been established and squads of telephone girls are reaching the voters, urging them to turn out for Patrick and Folsom. It's in such grass roots activity that you see PAC at work.

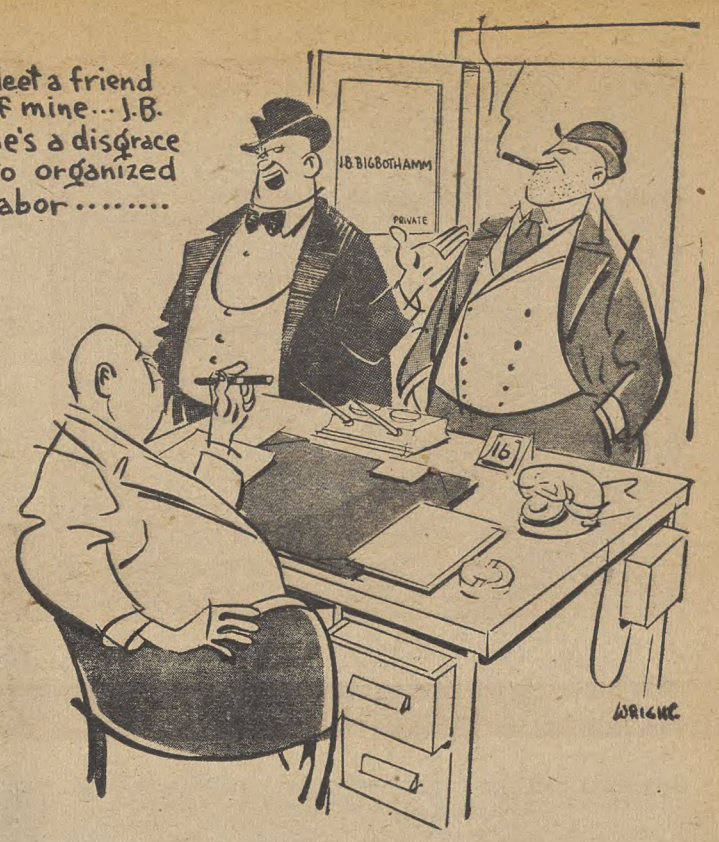
The question of time off from work for political action was a thorny one, with some workers sacrificing vacation periods to put in a solid week of PAC convassing.

The Political Action movement has taken such hold it extends past the workers to numerous merchants and store keepers contributing dollars to the PAC fund raising drive. "It's all part of the effort to keep purchasing power up," they tell PAC workers, in recognition that a strong PAC means strong unions, strong wages and good customers.

While the polltax continues to hamstring Negro voting—about 5,000 are registered in the state—Negro workers are heavy contributors to PAC. As PAC men put it, they feel they are deprived of the vote but they can aid the fight by contributing one dollar, thus strengthening PAC and hastening repeal of the polltax.

The same ground work is being laid in Georgia for the July primary. Abolition of the polltax and opening of Democratic primaries to Negro voters has spurred registration which Charles Gillman, state PAC chairman, predicts will top one million in the state—double the '44 figure. In Atlanta one week before the books closed, registration topped 100,000, a jump of 70%

The threat PAC poses to the entrenched political grouping is seen by the initial refusal of the Atlanta registrant to send registrators out to the plants. A joint CIO-AFL committee convinced the county registrar, and eight men were sent to the General Motors, Atlantic Steel, Cluett Peabody and Atlanta Woolen plants. The result? 80% of the 6,000 workers became eligible to vote. And 1,000 striking Textile Workers in Griffin signed up on the picket line!



SET UP CIVIL RIGHTS GROUP

A new national organization to defend civil liberties, with strong affiliates in various parts of the country, was set up at a two-day conference in Detroit last week under the name of Civil Rights Congress. Headquarters will be at 205 E. 42nd St., N. Y.

Chairman George Marshall of the Natl. Federation for Constitutional Liberties is board chairman of the new organization. Milton Kaufman, former executive vice-president of the CIO Newspaper Guild, is executive secretary. Honorary chairmen are Dr. Harry F. Ward and Pres. Benjamin Mays of Morehouse College.

The vice-chairmen and directors are representative of unions, churches, citizens' groups, nationality and minority groups in 23 states and the District of Columbia, including delegates from five AFL organizations and 14 from CIO. Civil rights organizations in 10 states sent delegations.

Principal target of speakers was the Wood-Rankin un-American committee of the House of Representatives. Congressman Hugh DeLacy of Washington termed Rep. Rankin "clever, unscrupulous, impudent, feared, facile in playing with the truth."

Reactionary bills in Congress like the Case anti-labor bill that has already passed the House were condemned in resolutions that also called for aggressive campaigns in the South and wherever the rights of workers, farmers and minorities are threatened or violated. Discrimination by unions was also opposed.

The program unanimously adopted by the 372 delegates calls on all members to "strive constantly to safeguard and extend all democratic rights, especially the rights of labor, and of racial, political, religious and national minorities; to combat all forms of discrimination against these groups; to defend and aid victims of the fight for these groups; to fight against domestic fascism and all of its forms—Jim Crow, anti-Semitism, redbaiting, discrimination against the foreign born."

"Did you sign a contract with the union too?"

Corporation Lesson In:

HOW TO TWIST FIGURES

THREE lessons in "How To Twist Figures and Influence People" were splashed over the financial pages of newspapers last week.

The lessons were attempted by three giant corporations, General Electric, General Motors and Chrysler Corp., when they reported on their quarterly earnings.

But no matter how much the corporations wailed about "losses," the lessons only showed that their "losses" through strikes were covered by government tax rebates.

General Electric got a $10,000,000 kickback; General Motors pocketed $52,864,000 in rebates, and Chrysler figured it was due $7,150,000 in returned taxes.

The three corporations did not operate their plants during the strikes against them, but the profits came in just the same, the figures reveal.

On top of the rebates, the corporations also saved more taxes by the mere shift of a few million from "post-war adjustments and contingencies reserve funds" to another bookkeeping column.

PUBLIC UNION IN BIG DRIVE

The CIO United Public Workers last week began developing its organizational plans.

Fresh from its convention which saw the merger of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers and the United Federal Workers, the new union mapped a drive in the South to tie in with the CIO's organizing campaign in that area.

Hooked up with renewed organizing drives throughout the country, Thomas Richardson, one of six vice-presidents of the union, said, is a campaign for "a clean and wholesome merit system" in public employment.

"We favor a policy of fair employment practice in all sections of government through creation of a national FEPC," and similar bodies on a local scale, Richardson added.

"Decent wages, job security and adequate retirement laws are the positive issues by which we will rally public workers into the union," Richardson explained.

TEXTILE GOAL: 100% UNION

EMPHASIZING the deep need of organizing the South, the CIO Textile Workers Union wound up its biennial convention at Atlantic City, N. J., last week with pledges from its 1,200 delegtaes to finish the job of unionization of the nation's big textile industry.

George Baldanzi, vice-president of the TWUA and an assistant director of the CIO campaign south of the Mason & Dixon line, warned the delegates that the job will not be easy.

But CIO will progress in the south, the TWUA official predicted, "regardless of the obstacles."

Emil Rieve, TWUA president, reaffirmed the union's plan to work 100% with CIO in organizing all unorganized areas of the country.

The convention heard reports on organizing plans from CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Clothing Workers, who heads PAC. Hillman urged election of candidates faithful to the principles of the late President Roosevelt, while Carey predicted that extension of CIO unionism in the south would encourage the forces of democracy and lead to the ultimate removal of racial prejudice and the polltax.

Rieve and Baldanzi were reelected to office, as was Sec.-Treas. William Pollock.

FORM BALTIMORE PAC

The Baltimore City CIO Political Action Committee was established this week at a conference of 100 delegates from local unions, held under the sponsorship of the National and State CIO-PAC and the Baltimore CIO Council.

The People Speak: Stacks of mail demanding extension of OPA without crippling amendments ring the desk of Rep. Aime Forand (D., R.I.). Forand and his assistant secretary, Miss Suzanne Kirwan, found that voters are 9-1 for strong price control.

Health Bill Urged

75% NEED CASH AID FOR MAJOR ILLNESS

IT WAS open season this week at the Senate Education & Labor Committee for heckling CIO representatives, as CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey presented CIO's viewpoint on national health bills for Pres. Philip Murray.

Two hours of intensive questioning of Carey and Robert K. Lamb, legislative director of the CIO Steelworkers, followed half an hour of testimony by Carey on the merits of S 1606, the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill to provide for a national health program. Financial plans include compulsory insurance to pay for medical and hospital care.

Sen. Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.), a corporation ferret grown round shouldered in defense of special interests, did most of the needling.

In an explosive bit of questioning and counter questioning, Carey told Donnell, "I think even you will agree with me that the American people want better medical care."

Carey told the committee, whose chairman is Senator Murray (D., Mont.), that 75% of American families need financial assistance to pay for serious illnesses.

The $4 billion paid yearly by the people for medical care, he pointed out, could be collected in equal amounts from employers and employes to set up a nationwide system which would provide care for everyone.

Features would include:

1. Choice of doctors, and specialists' care if needed.

2. Hospital care up to 60 days (120 days if funds permit).

3. Laboratory services.

4. Special appliances, including eyeglasses.

5. Dental and home nursing services (these may have to be limited at first because of shortage of dentists and nurses).

Carey pointed out that the program needs also the passage of other parts of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill (S 1050) to provide for hospital construction, cash disability benefits for families of sick or permanently disabled workers, and aid grants to states for maternal and child health service benefits.

"Under this legislation it is to be expected that U. S. death rates for mothers and babies would be the lowest in the world," Carey told the committee.

"We believe in a Federal system because under it our members and all working people can obtain for themselves and their families complete medical and hospital care by small, regular contributions, supplemented by employer contributions, and insofar as needed, by government. It will spread the risk, keep down the cost, and eliminate 'the financial barrier between the patient and doctor or hospital'."

Carey said the system also: will encourage preventive medicine, will raise the quality of medical care, will give people greater access to specialists and laboratories without excessive charges, and will make the medical profession more financially secure.

Carey pointed out that patients will be free to choose physicians and vice versa.

"Private medical practice and the doctor-patient relationship are carefully safeguarded," Carey declared. "Not only are doctors or groups of doctors free to choose whether or not they operate under the insurance system. They can freely choose their patients, and likewise choose how they shall be paid from the insurance fund, if they agree to operate under it.

"The bill specifically provides for public hearings and appeals if disputes arise."

TIDE STRONG FOR OPA

THE average person back home knows perfectly well that the country is headed for inflation if Congress breaks down price controls."

Rep. Aime Forand (D, RI) pushed a stack of papers and letters to one side of his desk, took a deep breath and warmed up to a subject about which he feels strongly.

"If price controls and OPA go out the window, people will wake up to the fact that prices are going sky-high," the Congressman said. Then, pointing his finger across the desk, he said slowly: "And the public will trace the cause directly to those people in Congress who voted for the bill to weaken price control."

Forand, chairman of the Congressional Committee to Protect the Consumer, spent several days in his home state of Rhode Island during the recent Congressional recess. Among the "average people" he spoke with, sentiment is practically unanimous for continued OPA operations.

And the mail shows the same strong support for price control.

PEOPLE RALLY TO SAVE OPA

THE American people, hit by House action against the OPA where it hurts the most—in the pocketbook—raised a national din last week that had Congressional OPA opponents ducking.

As plea after plea to "Save OPA" flooded Senatorial offices, opponents of OPA in the Senate Banking & Currency Committee now considering the bill began to dicker for terms with representatives of pro-price control groups.

While the first results of the spontaneous people's protest against inflationary measures had its effects in Congress, CIO leaders warned that the fight to save OPA must be intensified to insure adequate price control and a strong OPA.

In the full blown fight to save OPA, the people went into the halls of Congress, took to the air for speeches, held meetings and rallies all over the country and flooded Washington with letters, resolutions, postcards, and petitions.

All week long representatives of the CIO and its affiliates, with other organizations, appeared before members of the Senate Banking & Currency Committee at its hearing on the OPA bill.

Miss Caroline Ware, speaking for 23 organizations with a combined membership of 15 million, told the Senators that she would "be wary" of the House cost-plus-profit guarantee.

"I wouldn't want to buy production at the cost of price increases," she said.

Discussion over black marketing was highlighted by a call from Sen. Abe Murdock (D., Utah) for increased OPA enforcement personnel.

"If we would increase OPA personnel on the enforcement division," he said, "we might in some degree eliminate the black market. We should employ some of the veterans who are suffering from black market activities."

And veterans, led by the American Veterans Committee, scheduled "Save OPA Day," on May 4 and CIO and other labor organizations joined locally in the demonstrations.

Town Hall meetings, parades and rallies in Chicago, New York, San Francisco, and other cities were held to demonstrate the people's desire for an uncrippled OPA.

Women's auxiliaries throughout the country also took the lead in arousing public support of OPA and price control. In the State of Washington, the auxiliaries collected 12,000 signatures to petitions. In Washington, D. C., women's groups, led by delegates from the United Public Workers auxiliary, invaded Capitol Hill to speak to their Senators.

Even representatives of business organizations took up the fight to save OPA. Members of the Executive Council of American Business said, in a radio address, that:

"Business realizes, just as much as the consumer, that its prosperity depends on price control if it is to remain healthy."

IT'S LABOR 3-1

It's labor 3-1 over management when public relations jobs are added up. The opinion comes from Tide magazine's Leadership Survey. A panel queried about labor's and management's jobs in reaching the public voted 61% for labor as doing the better job, and 21% for business, with the rest voting for neither.

100% FOR STRONG OPA

Practically every tenant in the Greenway housing project, Washington, D. C., this week signed a petition bearing 800 names and urging extension of OPA, uncrippled. Signatures were collected by the CIO United Public Workers Auxiliary.

MIGHTY STRONG PULSE

It must have been a shaky week for the coalition in the House of Representatives—mostly Republicans and polltax Democrats—who voted to cripple OPA. The tear gas bomb that they threw at the American people was tossed right back again, with a few thousand brickbats for interest.

Never before in recent history has the public pulse reacted so strongly to a threat to its pocket book. Mail running as high as 50 to 1 for retention of the price control act without crippling amendments has swamped Congressional secretaries.

The fight against inflation is a people's fight. And the people are in there scrapping with both hands and feet. Keep up the work!

INSURING OUR HEALTH

Everybody favors good health, but not enough people do anything about it.

With all its wealth and medical resources, the United States suffers a condition to exist in which millions of its people become physically impaired through preventable or curable illness.

The high percentage of 4-F draft rejections during the war served sharp notice of the cost of this condition to the nation, not to mention the incalculable suffering for the individuals involved.

The chief reason for this condition is the inability of low-income families to pay for adequate medical care. Figures of the American Medical Assn. show that 75% of all American families need financial assistance to pay for any serious illness.

The remedy is as clear as the situation itself. It is to establish a comprehensive nationwide health insurance system, under which every American man, woman and child will be assured of proper medical care when he needs it.

The CIO is therefore wholeheartedly supporting the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill for a real national health program.

This bill is now before the Senate Education and Labor Committee, whose members should be urged to report it out favorably without delay.

MAKE WESTINGHOUSE SETTLE

The Westinghouse Electric Corp., one of America's richest, is out of step with the national procession.

The major corporations in its own industry, as well as in steel, autos, rubber and elsewhere have accepted the general national pattern of 18½c wage increases, won by the CIO. Their workers are on the job, and production is in full swing.

But 75,000 Westinghouse workers, organized in the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, are still locked out of their jobs by this corporation's adamant and anti-social refusal to pay a reasonable wage. They are now in the fourth month of one of labor's longest struggles.

The union has public-spiritedly proposed an immediate return to work on the basis of an 18½c increase, leaving all other issues to negotiation and arbitration. But still Westinghouse says, "No."

"All America has a direct stake in the CIO campaign for a living wage," says Pres. Philip Murray, in calling for national support for the Westinghouse strikers.

These workers are fighting our battle against any breach in the line of decent wage standards. We must back them to the limit, with every means at our disposal.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

SPRING does things to people. Women come out with the craziest hats. Oldsters act like love-struck youths, while youngsters wax precocious in the same direction. Housecleaning turns everything topsy-turvy. And quite a few politicians go ga-ga.

One of the most curious current spectacles is that of an "old Father William" of reaction like GOP Chairman Brazilla Carroll Reece trying to stand on his head and give a "liberal" wolf-call.

From that inverted position, Brazil-Nuts Reece sees his mossbacks as "liberals" and the CIO-PAC as the "entrenched forces of reaction."

We can only quote Brazilla's namesake, Lewis Carroll: "You are old, Father William . . . and your hair has become very white; and yet you incessantly stand on your head. Do you think at your age it is right?"

★ ★ ★

As part of the same topsy-turvydom, Brazilla's nutty publicity is now picturing the wealthy workers (with $1 voluntary contributions) as trying to "buy" the elections away from the numerous $5,000-a-head DuPonts, the millionaire press and the other poverty-stricken denizens of Wall Street.

It's all very confusing.

★ ★ ★

Another confused claimant to the title of "liberal" is Senator Joe Ball of Minnesota, who imagines himself a knight in shining armor riding to rescue the young lady of freedom from the dragon of tyranny.

Unfortunately, the Senator has misplaced his sense of direction. He is now engaged in breaking his lance against the lady—in this case, the freedom of workers to organize and defend themselves—in a gallant effort to rescue the dragon of union-busting tyranny and low-wage exploitation.

★ ★ ★

Ball's anti-labor legislation is supposed to have been drafted by Donald Richberg—whom the Scripps-Howard papers delight in describing as a "liberal" and a "friend of labor" every time he shoots off against the unions.

It is true Corporation Counsel Richberg was once attorney for some labor organizations. But was not Judas Iscariot one of the Apostles?

★ ★ ★

If Brazilla Reece's tory Republicans are "liberals," then so are their political bedfellows, the polltax Democrats.

Together, these unwed but unfailing partners now express their "liberalism" by seeking to free the profiteers from the bonds of price control, and to relieve the rest of us of our wages and savings.

By blocking action for adequate housing, they have liberated veterans and others from the confines of a roof above their heads.

By opposing public health and social security programs, they have kept the needy free to be sick and hungry.

By blocking the 65c minimum wage, they have preserved for sweatshop employers the freedom to exploit; and by preventing real full employment legislation, they have assured freedom from work and from wages for millions of future unemployed.

If being liberal to the profiteer and stingy to the poor be "liberalism," they have certainly made the most of it.

★ ★ ★

But puerile and ridiculous as are the present attempts to smear "liberal" whitewash over tory reaction, they are nevertheless significant.

Even the hidebound tories recognize that most of the American people want a liberal and progressive program such as is advocated by the CIO.

They, therefore, try to plaster a "liberal" label on their own poison, hoping this will confuse the voters into swallowing it by mistake.

★ ★ ★

In spring the sap begins to flow and the voice of the cuckoo is heard in the land.

Bill Green has stirred from his hibernation. He has rooted out of his dusty files the same old red-baiting anti-CIO speeches with which he has greeted every CIO organizing drive in the past.

Union-busting employers also feel the sap flowing. Their dope-sheets are full of their customary predictions about splitting the CIO, with Bill's aid, and getting it to fight itself instead of them.

But spring is also the time when the young and strong feel renewed vigor.

After a winter of successful struggle, the CIO is launching its greatest organizing campaign and girding for intensive political activity to rout the entrenched forces of reaction.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson
L. S. Buckmaster, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum
Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 May 6, 1946 No. 19

COURT TOLD 'SUPER' PLAN IS DISRUPTIVE

APPLICATION of Selective Service's memorandum on super-seniority would seriously disrupt established industrial relationships and harm the veteran as well as the non-veteran, Lee Pressman, general counsel for the CIO, told the Supreme Court in a brief presented this week.

"The veteran is afforded an overwhelmingly larger amount of protection under union agreements than under any interpretation of the Selective Service and Training Act," Pressman declared. He listed protection against discharge and assurances of seniority rights, grievance committee and arbitration procedures and contract provisions for disabled veterans.

Super-seniority means that any veteran is entitled to his old job, even though his reinstatement would mean firing a worker with greater seniority.

The case in which Pressman appeared on behalf of the CIO and a score of affiliated unions arose when Abraham Fishgold, veteran, claimed that he was illegally laid off by the Sullivan Drydock & Repair Corp., Brooklyn, while a worker with greater seniority was allowed to stay on the job during a slack period.

A brief was also filed in the case this week by M. H. Goldstein, attorney for Local 13, CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, named defendant in the case along with the Sullivan Corp. The U. S. Court for the Eastern District of N. Y. ruled for Fishgold, but the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit found for the company and the union.

Pressman declared that under super-seniority "older workers carrying family responsibilities are thus threatened with displacement despite long years of service. The displaced older workers include veterans of World War I, wives or parents of World War II veterans, and indeed even veterans of World War II who have exhausted their one year of special protection.

"Established industrial relations are threatened with disruption and confusion by the dropping of the entire staffs, including trained workers, in favor of a completely new and young body of employes, many with skills not yet developed to the point necessary for carrying on the work effectively.

"Veteran is pitted against non-veteran in a scramble for jobs. Basic protections essential in the long run to veteran and non-veteran alike are being seriously undermined.

"It is no small wonder, therefore, that there has been such unanimity of opinion on the part of employers and employes alike, as well as on the part of many veterans' groups, in opposition to the position of the Director of Selective Service."

Among those opposed to super-seniority are the Law Committee of the Assn. of American Railroads, the American Short Line Railroad Assn., the Journal of Commerce, the National Legislative Representative and Rehabilitation Director of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Veterans Committee and the American Veterans of World War II.

Goldstein argued that the contract between the Sullivan Corporation and the union had been made in accordance with the order of the Natl. Labor Relations Board providing that an employer enter into a written contract with the union designated as the exclusive bargaining agent by the employes. Fishgold was laid off under the contract which stipulated that lay-offs should occur in reverse order to the employe's seniority.

MURRAY OK'S LEGION CONTEST

CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week endorsed the American Legion's "Jobs for All" essay contest which offers prizes ranging from $50 to $1000. Murray wrote the Legion:

"I am glad to learn that the American Legion is sponsoring an essay contest on the subject, 'Jobs for All.' This, of course, is a program in which the CIO is vitally interested. Your contest will serve to focus attention upon this continuing national need."

"There was a time, not many months ago, when certain elements in American economic life ridiculed the suggestion that jobs for all was a possibility. Now with the experience of the post-war period, these same people are changing their minds."

Anyone not employed by the Legion may submit one essay in the contest which will close May 31. Essays must tell how best to put into effect the Legion's programs for Maximum Employment and Veterans' Employment, which with the rules of the contest may be obtained from the Legion's Employment Division, 1608 K St. N. W., Washington 6, D. C.; Legion Natl. Headquarters, Indianapolis, Ind., or any Legion post or State headquarters.

RULES ON VETS' RIGHTS IN STRIKES

A veteran need not scab to get his old job back if a strike is in progress during the 90-day period given him under the GI Bill to apply for his old job, Arbitrator Max Meyer ruled this week in N. Y. City.

Meyer ordered Western Union to reinstate Timothy Walsh, teleprint operator, with his full seniority of ten years. He reapplied for his old job the day after the CIO American Communication Assn. ended its strike against WU, but was hired as a new employe.

The arbitrator ruled that Walsh as a loyal member of the union could not return to work while the strike was in progress and concluded that "just as the strike had the effect of extending the time in which Walsh had to return to work, it had the effect of extending the time in which he had to notify the company of his intention to return to work."

Two members of Chicago CIO unions pitched a pup tent on the lawn of the Illinois Governor's Mansion at Springfield during demosntration by 400 vets to call attention to the housing crisis.

FEW BLOCK HOUSING — WAGNER

By SENATOR ROBERT F. WAGNER

IN January Wilson W. Wyatt became Natl. Housing Expediter. Shortly after that, he recommended an emergency housing program for veterans. This program required legislation.

Seldom has any program met with such widespread and enthusiactic popular acceptance. President Truman approved the veterans' emergency housing program, and recommended the necessary legislation to Congress.

But four long months have gone by since Mr. Wyatt became Housing Expeditor—and Congress has not yet approved the legislation which President Truman called the "very heart" of the veterans' housing program.

What are the reasons for this legislative delay?

The reason cannot be that the housing emergency has miraculously disappeared.

On the contrary, the emergency is becoming worse every day, as more and more veterans return to civilian life. And everybody knows that it is becoming worse every day.

The reason for legislative delay cannot be that the American people have reneged on their solemn obligation to be fair and square with those who fought and won our greatest war. The American people never reneg. Every public opinion poll shows that the people overwhelmingly support the veterans' emergency housing program.

The months of legislative delay have not occurred by accident. The delay has occurred by design. The delay has occurred through the deliberate efforts of those who do not want a veterans' emergency housing program. They do not want it for reasons that are selfish beyond description. They do not want it because some people and groups are profiting by the scarcity.

In the final analysis, the responsibility for this delay now rests with a relatively few members of the Congress.

These few persons, because of their strategic position on certain Congressional committees, have been able to wield an influence out of all proportion to the number of people whom they represent.

The only thing that has enabled these few obstructionists to persist in their course, is that it has been a concealed course. Through manipulation and subterfuge, the House of Representatives as a whole did not have a full opportunity, when the bill was before it, to study the facts carefully and come to a just conclusion. For this, most of the members of the House were not at fault.

Then the bill came up in the Senate, and the vital provisions for premium payments and guaranteed markets were inserted. Without these provisions to speed up production, the program cannot succeed. In this satisfactory form, the bill passed the Senate.

The situation now is that the veterans' housing bill is in conference between the Senate and the House. This means that representatives of both bodies have been designated, to decide between the inadequate bill passed by the House and the satisfactory bill passed by the Senate.

The life or death of the veterans' emergency housing program rests largely in the hands of the seven men, appointed by the House to represent them in conference.

But there are one or two of these seven House conferees—and they are a matter of public record—who did all they could to prevent the House from passing a satisfactory veterans' housing bill.

In this, they succeeded. The critical issue now is whether these same obstructionists can succeed again in conference this week—or whether public opinion and the righteousness of the veterans' cause can make them change their minds and alter their course.

The veterans and the people of this country, who want and need the veterans' emergency housing program, have just one first job to do. It is easy for them to find out who is standing in their way. It should not be difficult for them to take these obstructionists to task.

The bill about which I have been speaking is essential to expedite the production of materials and houses for veterans. But the veteran already knows that houses alone are not enough. There must be the kind of houses which can be bought or rented at a price the veteran can afford to pay.

The Senate recently passed another housing bill, sponsored by myself and two other senators. It is known as the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill. This bill is just as essential to the veterans' emergency housing program, as premium payments and guaranteed markets. For without the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill, there is every indication that most of the houses which get built will be far beyond the veterans' financial reach.

It is a matter of common sense that, if the housing bill now in conference is defeated, it will be just that much harder to enact the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill.

My message to every veteran and to every fair-minded American is that you should watch what is happening this week in Congress—and particularly what is happening in the conference on the veterans' housing bill.

By this kind of watching, you will be able to penetrate the secret of why the veterans emergency housing program has been delayed for so many months. By taking action, when your watching reveals the need for action, you will be able to assure satisfactory housing legislation. This alone will keep faith with the veterans of World War II who are looking for homes in which to live and rear their families.

What to Do About Housing Bills

Sen. Wagner in this article for The CIO NEWS expresses faith that the American people can get decent housing if they put their minds to it.

He declares that the record shows what members of the Senate-House Conference Committee on the Patman Housing Bill (HR 4761) have opposed the measure. The record shows Reps. Jesse Wolcott (R., Mich.), Fred Crawford (R., Mich.) and Paul Brown (D., Ga.) fighting the bill, and Rep. Ralph Gamble (R., N. Y.) an off-again-on-again supporter of the measure. Wire or write them that you want the bill passed including the $600 million subsidy for building materials and the government's guarantee to buy all prefabricated houses put on the market.

Latest word from the House Banking and Currency Committee is that the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill (S 1592), which Sen. Wagner says is also vital to the housing program, will not be considered until the British loan is disposed of. However, the British loan was being debated in the Senate, and to prevent the Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill from being sidetracked indefinitely, the committee should be urged to begin hearings on the measure.

AT WORK: CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Chicago at their sewing machines produce clothing for the people of Europe's war-torn countries. Besides contributing their time and labor, ACWA members also donated over a million dollars to war relief, charitable and civic causes.

15th Convention May 6

CLOTHING UNION AT PEAK

THE CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, meeting in Atlantic City on May 6 for their 15th biennial convention, have rung up new high marks in membership, organizing, wage and health benefits, political activity, and in establishing firmer friendship with workers throughout the world.

A report by the clothing union's executive board, meeting before the convention which is expected to draw 1,100 delegates, showed that more than 25,000 workers had been organized into the union since 1944. The union's membership is now 350,000, fifth largest in the CIO.

In the political field, ACWA local organizations have been in the forefront in the CIO Political Action Committee's activities, the board said and "the program of political activity developed in 1943 and 1944 remains at a high level.

Wage increases, ranging from 15 to 31% for the entire membership, were also reported. Direct pay increases were augmented by paid vacations, paid holidays and insurance benefits, including life, maternity and retirement.

The establishment of the World Federation of Trade Unions in which ACWA Pres. Sidney Hillman played a leading role, was extoled by the executive board.

The creation of the WFTU has welded together more than 60,000,000 organized workers from 59 union groupings in 35 countries concerned with elevating the wage and working standards of toilers everywhere and with effective participation in the peace, the executive board said.

PAC SUPPORT

The board urged continued and more extensive support of CIO-PAC to defeat reactionary Congressmen in 1946 and to elect liberals and progressives.

The board charged reactionary forces in Congress have blocked labor and other legislation essential to the "national prosperity."

"Congress has been quick to respond to the demands of big business for a repeal of the excess profits tax," the board continued. "Labor has been required to wage a vigorous defensive battle in order to prevent the enactment of a whole series of union-smashing proposals."

The work of the Dies Committee, "despite the people's repudiation," has been continued by the Wood-Rankin Committee in Congress, the board charged.

Congress, the Amalgamated board pointed out, has either scuttled or mangled measures which are essential to full employment, greater security and full democracy for the American people.

In the two years between conventions, the union chartered 55 new locals, bringing the organization's totals to 493 locals in 264 cities in 37 states. Local unions were established for the first time in Kansas, Alabama and Oklahoma.

Announcement of full ACW participation in the CIO's new organizing drive was made by the executive board. Two hundred thousand dollars toward the CIO campaign was voted earlier.

AT PLAY: Clothing Workers in N. Y. City get in a swim after work hours through a union-sponsored recreation program. A high school gymnasium was taken over for one night a week by the union. Other health programs extend to the shops under ACWA contract.

In Upper Michigan

'NEXT DEPRESSION' HERE; UNITY AIDS JOB FIGHT

THE "next depression" has already come to the Upper Peninsula of Michigan—and CIO and AFL workers are already fighting it!

Faced with thousands of unemployed and only hundreds of jobs, the workers have organized the Upper Peninsula Rehabilitation and Economic Council.

Wartime employment is gone. Idleness and hardship are left. But instead of waiting until their cash is gone and they are in breadlines, the workers, represented by the Dickinson County CIO Council, asked immediate action by all local labor organizations.

Result was a conference last week attended by 103 delegates representing 10,000 workers from more than a dozen unions, at Kingsford, Mich.

The Council they formed is demanding government work projects, but it is not another Workers Alliance. Instead it is a regional planning body determined to do a job—of reforestation, of utilization of low grade ores, of aid to marginal farmers, and of development of the St. Lawrence waterway.

To make certain that plans get action, the Council also set up a Political Action Committee. It is limited, however, to endorsement of legislation, because some AFL unions affiliated with the Council do not engage in "political activity."

The Council plans to spread this unity to include the whole community. At its next meeting, farmers, veterans and fraternal organization will be invited to participate.

Officers of the Council include: Ivan Brown, UAW-CIO, president; William Johnson, USA-CIO, vice-president; Harold Arnold, IWA-CIO, recording secretary, and Lawrence Bjorkquist, SCMW-AFL, financial secretary.

With unity and aggressiveness, they hope to lick their depression.

Pressman vs. Ball

COOL-OFF CLUB AGAINST LABOR

"ANTI-UNION employers should not be handed the cooling-off period before strikes for use as another club against organized labor," Lee Pressman, general counsel for CIO, declared in a debate this week with Sen. Ball (R. Minn.) before the American Veterans of World War II in Washington.

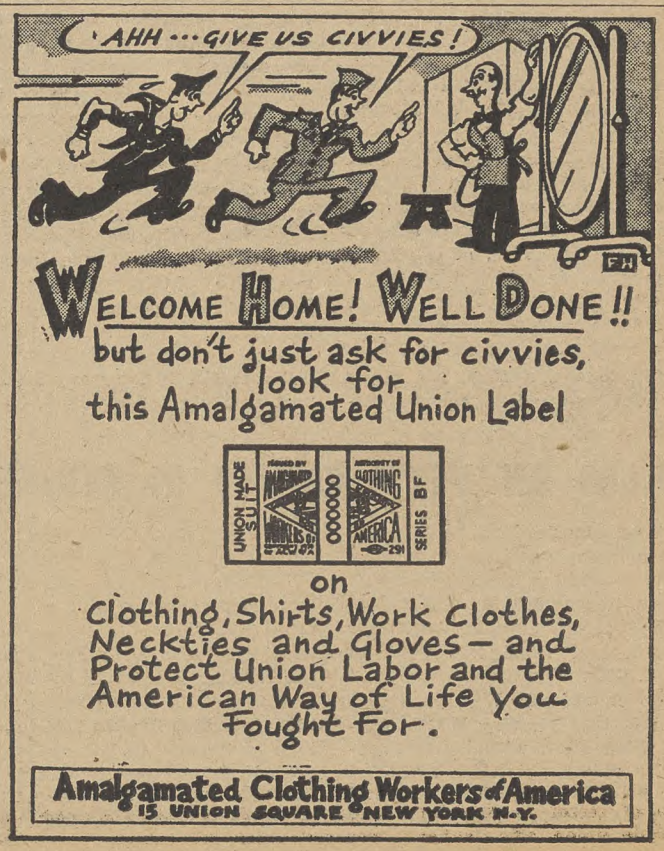
Ball, who was one of the authors of the Ball-Burton-Hatch Bill, first of the crop of anti-labor bills in this session of Congress, joined with a minority in the Senate Education & Labor Committee in calling for passage of the Case bill with provisions not only for cooling-off periods, but for authorizing suits against unions and for repeal of the Norris-La Guardia anti-injunction law.

Pressman declared that suits against unions for alleged contract violations "would be giving another club to anti-union employers to enable them to deplete union treasuries. Unions may now be sued in State courts if they break contracts.

"You were very zealous for the protection of States' rights when you voted against the federal ballot for servicemen, but in this instance you have lost your enthusiasm for that principle," he told Ball.

Pressman also declared that repeal of the Norris-LaGuardia Act would remove all judicial restraints now placed on the federal courts in labor disputes. Before the Norris-LaGuardia Bill became law in 1932, federal courts issued injunctions in wholesale lots to employers, Pressman pointed out.

Ball's only retort was that something should be done to halt strikes.



Aid to Unionism

LATIN-AMERICA MARCHES AHEAD

"WE'VE helped extend the principles of the Wagner Act to all the Americas."

That was the comment of Michael Ross, director of the Intl. Affairs Dept. of CIO, on the recent meeting of the Intl. Labor Organization in Mexico City. The "we" refers in large part to himself and to Pres. Willard Townsend of the CIO Transport Service Employes, the two CIO advisors on the American delegation. As part of a 15-man U. S. delegation to the inter-continent meeting during the first three weeks in April, they pressed forward the viewpoint of progressive American labor.

Out of it came a policy statement on collective bargaining which, if adopted by the member countries, will help spread unions through the industrial and semi-industrial sections of Latin and South America.

Of equal importance was the decision of the meeting to call for increasing industrialization on the part of all the nations of the western hemisphere. Many of the employer representatives, both from the U. S. and from south of the Rio Grande, wanted to block any such move. The CTAL, to which almost every important labor group in Latin-America is affiliated and with which CIO maintains close fraternal relations, has long maintained that only the growth of home industries will lift the Latin-American standard of living.

The ILO, originally created by the Peace Conference in 1919, has as its goal the establishment of improved labor, safety and health standards among the countries of the world. The inter-American meeting is held every three years. On each delegation are government, industry and labor representatives, together with advisors.

During recent years CIO has been fighting for equal status with the AFL in ILO circles, and it is possible that within the next few months CIO will reach that objective. Meanwhile, CIO officials serve only as "advisors" to the labor delegation. George Meany, AFL secretary-treasurer, was the official representative of American labor at Mexico City—but, regardless of their title as "advisors," Townsend and Ross demonstrated to the labor representatives of all Latin-America that CIO is fighting for their interests.

Townsend, the first Negro member of the U. S. ILO delegation, took the floor during the discussion of industrialization of the backward countries to speak on the CIO position.

"During my visit in Mexico," he said, "I have seen quite sufficient evidence to lead me to express here a deep feeling of sympathy for the desire of the Latin-American people to industrialize themselves. There is certainly a great lack of the necessary articles for comfortable living.

"The history of foreign trade of the U. S. shows that we need have no fear of other countries industrializing themselves. We do much more business with industrialized countries than with the so-called backward countries. In fact, our self-interest should lead us to aid in the process.

"But—and this is important—there is no need for the industrialization to be chaotic and unplanned as it was in the past. There is no reason why the industrial growth of Latin-America should not be co-ordinated with the productive potentialities of the rest of the world."

Ross spoke vigorously on labor's rights at the full session of the conference, where certain Latin-American employers — like their northern brothers—tried to hedge the ILO collective bargaining resolution with sniping amendments.

The U. S. labor delegation worked in close harmony with the CTAL—the federation of most bona fide unions in Latin-America—and with the various workers' delegations from the various countries to exclude the representatives of the fascist Argentine government from the workers' sessions. As a result the representatives of President Peron's phony unions were not allowed to attend the labor meetings, but they did participate in the general sessions of the conference.

LABOR'S WORLD

Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the British Trades Union Congress, is due to arrive in the U. S. on May 10 as a guest of the CIO. He will be accompanied by his wife and three members of the TUC staff.

The British labor leader, who is chairman of the executive committee of the World Federation of Trades Unions, will come to Washington immediately after reaching American shores. He will proceed to Atlantic City, N. J., with CIO Pres. Philip Murray to attend sessions of the convention of the CIO Steelworkers, which opens on May 14.

Part of Citrine's mission will be to arrange for an exchange of fraternal delegates between CIO and British unions.

★ ★ ★

A reign of terror in Ecuador against trade union officials has brought strong protest from the CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee. Jacob Potofsky, clothing union official who heads the committee, called for an immediate restoration of labor's rights in the South American country, and reminded the Ecuadorean government that it has frequently approved international agreements protecting labor rights.

★ ★ ★

Adolf Staal, well known to labor officials throughout the world, has retired as chief of the workers' organization service of the Intl. Labor Office, a post which he has held for the past 17 years. He has been succeeded by Jan Schuil, a former official of the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions and later connected with the wood workers' union in Europe.

U. N. Votes Compromise Probe of Franco Spain: With Soviet Delegate Andrei Gromyko abstaining because he wanted an immediate crackdown on Franco, 10 United Nations Security Council members this week voted for a compromise resolution setting up a sub-committee of five to investigate charges against the Franco government.

UNITED NATION'S vs FRANCO

By LOUIS FALSTEIN

AMONG the 45 lucky ones to be admitted as visitors to the day's session of the Security Council were two CIO unionists, a shipyard worker and a merchant seaman. They had stood in line since early dawn at the gates of Hunter College, in N. Y. City, for a look at the big show. The shipyard worker was happy and excited: "It's worth it, just to see Franco get hell."

A first glance at the impressively draped and deep-carpeted Council Chamber always awes the visitor. He stares at the 11 men at the semi-circular table, and their batteries of experts and advisors. There is the feeling of being in on history in the making. Even newspapermen grown cynical over U. N. still retain that feeling of hope that today, perhaps, the Council will abandon bickering and "power politics" and will act like the United Nations.

AMBASSADOR LANGE, the delegate from Poland, seemed a little nervous when he started reading his speech in a soft, gentle voice. "I wish to draw the attention of the Security Council to a situation which is causing international friction and which presents a serious danger to peace and security. This situation arises out of the existence and activities of the fascist Franco regime in Spain. . . ." Dr. Lange quoted facts and figures; he offered documents and maps showing Franco's military preparations on the French border. . . .

Former Spanish Ambassador to the U. S., Fernandos De Los Rios, nodded approvingly as the Polish delegate built his pyramid of indictments.

"Under the Franco regime, Spain served and serves as a center of Nazi propaganda and activities in Latin America," Dr. Lange continued. "A special council of HISPANIDAD was established for this purpose. Most of this activity was directed against the U. S. . . . at a moment when American soldiers were giving their lives for the preservation of the freedom of their country. . . . "

Lange spoke of German financial and physical penetration into Spanish industry, banking insurance, mining, electrical equipment; of German scientists and engineers who were doing research in "devising new means of warfare." Tens of thousands of Nazis, among them "many prominent war criminals and political leaders," were carrying on in that country, unmolested.

The little, soft-spoken man who had been a professor at the University of Chicago before becoming Polish Ambassador to the U. S., talked for an hour. In the end he asked the Security Council to call upon all members of the United Nations who maintain diplomatic relations with the Franco Government to sever such relations immediately . . ."

Louis Falstein writes for the New Republic. Before the war he was a member of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers. He flew as a tail gunner with the 15th Air Force, and was decorated with the Purple Heart.

Then debate started. No acrimony; no name-calling. Each delegate vied with his "esteemed colleague" in denouncing Franco as a fascist who was on the side of our enemies and deserved to be kicked out.

"This question of Spain seems to be a very disturbing one," said Eeclo Van Kleffens of the Netherlands. He advised the body that although "it arouses considerable passion . . . we must judge the question . . . coolly and dispassionately . . . Let me say, by way of introduction, that I have no sympathy whatever" . . . for Franco. However, he urged the Council "to be very careful not to be instrumental in unleashing another civil war . . ."

Fernandos De Los Rios, the former Spanish Ambassador, moved uncomfortably in his chair while the high-domed, fleshless delegate from the Netherlands concluded by saying he was opposed to any action because of lack of "evidence."

From the first day of debate on Spain, words like "evidence" and "facts" have been bandied around in the Council Chamber. Australia's delegation, dubbed as "middle of the road," proposed the formation of a committee to gather more facts and evidence. Britain, which insisted that the Council could not "presume" Franco's guilt as a menace to the world, went along. Stettinius liked the idea, too, with slight modifications, and so did China, Egypt, the Netherlands and Brazil. Andrei Gromyko of the Soviet Union said there was sufficient evidence to act now; delay would only aid Franco.

The final resolution is a compromise. It empowers a subcommittee of five "to make further studies in order to determine whether the situation in Spain has led to international friction and does endanger international peace and security, and if it so finds then to determine what practical measures the United Nations may take."

It is not clear how the subcommittee proposes to gather new facts. Nor is it clear how many more additional "facts" are necessary before the Council takes action.

The WFTU has spoken out against Franco, so has the CIO. "Maybe if we speak out louder," a trade unionist said, "some people will be convinced that action is needed—soon."

PAMPHLET READY

The Report of the CIO Delegation to the Soviet Union—latest CIO pamphlet—is off the press. The Report, which gained wide publicity when it was submitted to the CIO Executive Board in March by Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, has a smart three-color cover, an introduction by President Murray, and numerous photographs.

With CIO playing an increasingly important role in world labor affairs, the Report should be on every union bookshelf.

Prices: 15c a copy; 100 for $10; 500 for $40. Send your orders to CIO Publicity Dept. 718 Jackson Place N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS By Rose H. Alschuler

HE'S A DETERMINED LITTLE CUSS

Good for this Johnny! He knows what he wants—and he's going to see that he gets it. Every child feels the need to be independent, to grow up and to achieve something. Our job as parents is to strengthen and not break our children's ego and spirit. Our love and understanding of their needs and rights will help them to grow to their own full stature. It's better to have them cast their own shadows than walk in ours.

Library of Congress—Parks for OWI.

CWA HEAD CALLS FOR CHILD HEALTH DAY EVERY DAY

Faye Stephenson, president of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, this week suggested that if the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill (S 1606) becomes law every day will be Child Health Day and urged Auxiliary members to write their Senators to vote for the measure. President Truman set aside May 1 as Child Health Day.

Mrs. Stephenson also called on CWA members to find out during May the answer to such questions as: Can mothers who cannot pay get medical and hospital care during pregnancy and childbirth? Such care would be assured all mothers by the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill.

She also urged auxiliaries to plan to achieve at least one improvement in the health services offered by the community during the year and pointed out:

Maternal and infant mortality rates are still too high.

Three-fourths of all our school children have dental defects.

A startlingly large number of children go through life with physical handicaps, many of them remediable.

Large numbers suffer from deficiency diseases and general malnutrition.

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C. I. O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 4600 West Parker Ave., Chicago 39, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS
UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1639-49 W. Evergreen Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

Just the kiss of the hops... not the harsh bitterness

Copr. 1946, Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

THE BEER THAT MADE MILWAUKEE FAMOUS

YOU MUST REGISTER TO VOTE

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

From the South! Here are some samples of what can be done even before the drive gets underway. Look for many more of these from now on!

One for Mississippi! George Brown, Dir. of Orgn., IWA-CIO, reports: Message General Box Company, Natchez, Mississippi, IWA-CIO 240; no union 20. IWA Representative Doyle Dorsey was in charge.

C. H. Gillman Reg. Dir., Atlanta, Ga., reports: Rittenbaum Brothers Co., Atlanta, Ga., CIO 56; no union 37. This work was under the direction of URWDSEA representative James R. Cochran.

Carey E. Haigler, CIO Reg. Dir., Birmingham, Ala., reports: Saratoga-Victory Co., Guntersville, Ala., TWUA-CIO, 231; no union 100. TWUA Representative W. H. Price and Houston Troupe, along with Louis Hathcock and James Wilson of the Gadsden Joint Board of the Textile Workers are due the credit for this splendid job. That was the second TWUA victory in Marshall County in two days.

★ ★ ★

Morris Muster, President, United Furniture Workers of America, reports: Marsh Furniture Co., High Point, N. C., UFWA-CIO 76; no union 49 Representatives Helms and Hiatt were in charge. J. L. Anderson Veneer Co., Cheraw, S. C., UFWA-CIO 98; no union 30. Representative Woodall conducted the campaign.

Irwin L. DeShetler, CIO Reg. Dir., Kansas City, Mo., reports: Missouri National Co., USA-CIO 20; no union 6. International Representative James Baker was in charge of the campaign. Nice work!

Wm. B. Taylor, Dir. of Orgn., UGCCWA, reports: Reilly Whiteman Walton Co., Conshohocken, Pa., UGCCWA-CIO 19; no union 8. Representative Joe Wright was in charge.

The United Office and Professional Workers of America, CIO announced the signing of two collective bargaining agreements in its Technical and Scientific Division. The agreements cover technical employes at the Midvale Co. in Philadelphia and Radio Corporation of America (RCA) in Camden, N. J. Both agreements were negotiated and signed by Martin M. Cooper.

★ ★ ★

Powers Hapgood, CIO Reg. Dir., Indianapolis, Ind., reports: Thomas Skinner, Indianapolis, Indiana, USA-CIO 82; against 31. Enock Mfg. Co., Indianapolis, Indiana, United Furniture Workers of America 32; against 5. Both plants struck to gain recognition. Hethington Burner, Indianapolis, Indiana, USA-CIO 31; AFL 19,Representative Pete Markunas was in charge of all three victories. Inland Container, Evansville, Indiana, CIO 67; AFL 49.

Walter Harris, CIO Reg. Dir., Chicago, Ill., reports: Eclipse Fuel Engineering Co., Rockford, Illinois (production and maintenance employes), UERMWA-CIO 26; Appliance Industries Union 19; no union 1. Consolidated Paper Co., Aurora, Illinois, UPA-CIO 87; Independent Union 60; neither 3.

Morris Muster, President, UFWA-CIO, further reports: Kay Line Industries, South Bend, Indiana, UFWA-CIO 59; no union 28. Representative Fulford was in charge. Jasper Desk Company, Jasper, Indiana, UFWA-CIO 59; no union 39. Representatives Douthitt, Jerger and Marks handled the campaign. L. Berman Co. Evansville, Indiana, UFWA-CIO 24; no union 8. Representative Douthitt was in charge.

G. Geo. DeNucci, CIO Reg. Dir., Columbus, Ohio, reports: Chase Foundry, Columbus, Ohio, USA-CIO 47; against 11. USA Representative Archie Casanto was in charge under the direction of USA District Director Howard Porter.

TO PUT IT BRIEFLY

For the first time in the history of the American labor movement, strikers were awarded back pay for time spent on the picket line. Three days pay out of five days on strike were won by 20 drivers in CIO Auto Workers Local 867, Austin, Minn.

A "block-by-block" campaign to organize N. Y. City's food stores, concentrating principally on the giant A&P chain, was voted by 400 delegates to the 5th annual conference of Local 338, CIO Retail, Wholesale & Chain Store Food Employes Union.

The conference also urged a break in diplomatic and trade ties with Spain and the expulsion of Argentina from the UNO. Guaranteed annual wage, backing of emergency famine relief, labor unity, and renewed support for FEPC and against all discrimination were also resolved in the meeting.

The CIO turned movie producer last week and started work on a 12-minute short telling the story of the guaranteed annual wage. A new technique of mingling entertainment with information will be used to show how the yearly earning plan works.

Eight thousand CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers on strike at four American Brass Co. plants in New York and Connecticut stood firm at the end of their 12-week fight for better wages. The union charged that the company "stands convicted of the most reckless and irresponsible conduct toward its workers." The company is holding out for more than twice the amount of price relief already granted it, while other brass companies which have granted the 18½c increase to their workers have not made reference to OPA, the union said.

An unprecedented protest against N. Y. City's budget by CIO city workers last week forced an $8 million increase for wage raises. Five thousand CIO city workers a day went to budget hearings and demanded a pay boost from a contemplated 5% increase to 15%.

LITHOGRAPHERS JOIN CIO

THE Amalgamated Lithographers of America this week became the 41st affiliate of the CIO.

The union, with a membership of close to 20,000 workers in the U. S. and Canada, broke away from the AFL six months ago after long jurisdictional disputes with other AFL unions.

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, in announcing the CIO's acceptance of the union's application, said:

"The affiliation of the Amalgamated Lithographers will add substantially to the strength of the CIO, and we are sure that the Lithographers for their part will benefit from the assistance they will recive from our national labor movement."

The union has 55 locals in the U. S. and seven in Canada. All major lithographic plants in the country are under contract with ALA.

Membership in ALA jumped from 6,000 in 1934 to its present 20,000. Recently the Chicago local signed a contract with R. R. Donnelley & Sons and became the first union since 1906 to enter into a contract with the company.

ALA's largest local of 6,000 members in New York recently completed a city-wide agreement for a 36¼-hour week, two weeks' vacation after one year, 10 paid holidays without work and the highest wage scale in its history.

The ALA will be represented on the CIO's national executive board by a member to be designated by the union.

Founded in 1882 as the Lithographers Intl. Protective and Beneficial Assn., the union became affiliated with the AFL in 1906. In 1915 and 1916 it amalgamated with four other craft lithographic unions to form the Amalgamated Lithographers of America, and in 1943 the last small remaining craft union was absorbed, resulting in one industrial union within the lithographic process in the U. S. and Canada.

The international offices of the Amalgamated Lithographers are located at 450 7th Ave., N. Y. 1, N. Y., and 1737 Howard St., Chicago 26, Ill.

Its principal officers are William J. Riehl, New York, president; Robert Bruck, Chicago, vice-president and secretary-treasurer; Fred W. Rose, St. Louis, Mo., second vice-president; Arthur W. Brown, Toronto, Canada, third vice-president; Francis P. Slater, San Francisco, fourth vice-president.

William J. Riehl, left, is president, and Robert Bruck, right, is vice-president and secretary-treasurer of the CIO's newest affiliate, the Amalgamated Lithographers of America.

20,000 OUT AT ALLIS

Workers in seven out of eight Allis-Chalmers plants throughout the nation were out on strike this week after company officials refused to meet with federal conciliators.

Strikes were called at A-C plants in West Allis, and La Crosse, Wis., and Boston, Mass. April 30 to join A-C workers already on strike in Springfield, Ill., La Porte, Ind., Norwood, Ohio, and Pittsburgh.

Close to 20,000 workers were involved in the strike in which three CIO unions figure. The CIO Farm Equipment Workers, United Electrical Workers and United Auto Workers all have Allis-Chalmers locals. They met jointly with Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach to attempt a last-minute settlement.

PENN. IUC PRESIDENT RETIRES

HARRY Boyer was elected president of the Pennsylvania IUC at its ninth annual convention in Pittsburgh this week, suceceding John A. Phillips, who held the position since the inception of the council and who has been identified with the labor movement in the Keystone state for half a century.

The convention instructed the incoming executive board to provide an ample retirement remuneration for Phillips, who has sought to retire for some time, and had announced he would not be a candidate for re-election. Befor the formation of the IUC, Phillips was president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor from 1930 to 1938.

Boyer, CIO Steelworkers staff representative, has been secretary-treasurer of the IUC and is secretary-treasurer of the Reading IUC. Harry Block, president of the Philadelphia IUC and a CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers representative, was elected secretary-treasurer.

Mayor David L. Lawrence, who welcomed the delegates to Pittsburgh, stressed the necessity of electing men to Congress who will support President Truman.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, declared that the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers will win its strike against the Westinghouse Electric Co., and John Brophy, director of CIO IUCs, said that the CIO organizing campaign in the South would eliminate the differentials between the North and the South and in the South itself.

UAW NAMES DIVISION HEADS

DIRECTORS of important CIO United Auto Workers Union divisions were appointed by the union's international executive board last week.

Walter Reuther, newly elected president, retained directorship of the General Motors division, and also became head of the aircraft division. Reuther is also in charge of the full employment, veterans and time-study divisions and is co-chairman of the combined women's and employment practices division.

R. J. Thomas, ex-president and now vice-president, became director of the competitive shops division and airline mechanics division, in addition to retaining his post as chairman of the housing committee. With Joseph Mattson, Thomas will also handle the union's farm equipment workers' problems.

George Addes, secretary-treasurer of the union, retained his position as director of the Bendix division and chairman of the health and accident committee.

Richard Leonard, UAW vice-president, was reappointed director of the Ford division and also became Political Action Committee chairman.

Other appointments were:

Eaton Mfg. and the truck council, Richard Reisinger; Auto-Lite, Richard Gosser; Nash-Kelvinator and John Deere Corp., Joseph Mattson; Warner, Arnold Atwood; Mack Truck, Martin Gerber; Thompson Products, Paul Miley; McQuay-Norris, John W. Livingston.

Unemployment compensation, Clayton Johnson; legal, Maurice Sugar; skilled trades, Melvin Bishop; research, James Wishart; recreation, Melvin West; education, Victor Reuther; publications and publicity, Frank Winn.

LUMBERJACKS VOTE ON STRIKE

AFTER rejecting 33 employer proposals designed to set the clock back ten years for lumber workers, the CIO International Woodworkers negotiating committee this week called for a strike referendum among its members.

"A united stand must be taken against attempts of employers to take away those things that lumber workers have fought so hard to attain since they first began organizing ten years ago," IWA Pres. James Fadling urged.

Deadline for the strike vote was set for May 15 and coincides with the strike ballots now being taken by maritime unions. IWA officials plan to time strike action to enable joint action among workers in the northwest's largest industries.

EDUCATION—HOW IT WORKS

EDUCATION, delegates to the CIO Southwestern Educational Conference discovered last week, is learning by doing.

And they learned by participating in discussions that dug into the problems of building unionism from the ground up in locals, and then expanded into political and community action.

The educational conference, held in Fort Worth, Tex. brought delegates from oil, auto, agriculture, clothing and public worker's unions.

Divided into four sessions, the conference discussed grievance procedure, education committees and community political action.

Noble Combs, CIO Auto Workers regional educational director, in a discussion of union education said:

"The commonest complaint I hear is that union meetings aren't well attended.

"The answer is not to preach to the members, "Come to meetings," he said. "The answer is to make the meetings interesting so that the members will want to come without being preached at.

"Are your meetings dull? The executive board ought to call a meeting just to find out why they don't interest people. Outline the problem. Get every member to tell why he doesn't come.

"That's No. 1 in education. Get the facts. The second thing to do is analyze the facts. The third thing is to outline a program to meet the facts and solve the problem," he concluded.

Education is more than merely informing union members, Myrna Siegendorf, union counselor for the Chicago CIO Council, said. Education means getting at the heart of problems within each union and problems almost of every union member.

She told of a safety program set up by the packinghouse workers after a study of the accident rate at a packinghouse. She told of a counselling service established for union women after a study into the inactivity of a woman in the union.

The conference, sponsored by the CIO Research & Education Dept. was the first of two Southern education meetings called by the CIO. The second is to be held in Chapel Hill, N.C. on May 3-4 for workers in eight states.

Kermit Eby, director, and George Guernsey, assistant director, of the CIO department, led the discussions.

Singing as a method of drawing better attendance at union meetings was explained and demonstrated at the Southwestern CIO Education Conference. Here four union songbirds demonstrate (l. to r.): Myrna Siegendorf, union counsellor for the Chicago CIO Coucil; Rita Hinojas, Amalgamated Clothing Workers representative, El Paso, Tex.; Latane Lambert, ACW regional director, Texas; and Jessie Lloyd O'Connor, labor song composer.

Political action to insure pay raises won by CIO in negotiations was discussed for an afternoon at the education conference. And when three CIO men got together the PAC talk continued. L. to r.: Carl A. McPeak, Cushing, Okla. oil workers and CIO-PAC Southwest regional director; Joe Dernoncourt, Oklahoma-Arkansas CIO regional director; and Palmer Weber, CIO-PAC research director.

NEW PLAY FOR EQUALITY

A new play on race relationships, "On Whitman Avenue," opens in N. Y. City May 8 with the blessing of hundreds of Detroit and Buffalo workers who attended try-outs in both cities.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray called "On Whitman Avenue" a "deeply provocative play that must be seen by every American sincerely concerned with the preservation of democracy.

"The issue on racial tolerance must be of paramount importance to all thoughtful citizens," Murray said. "This play, in a most dramatic and eloquent fashion, presents the problem with remarkable clarity and compels a recognition that there can be but one answer—full and complete equality of economic opportunity and political freedom for all Americans."

The play develops the disintegration of a family when its members find that they must either risk something to maintain their ideals of decency and kindness to their fellow-man, or abandon those ideals forever.

Canada Lee and Will Geer star in the play written by Maxine Wood.

Canada Lee, noted Broadway actor, stars in "On Whitman Avenue," a new play dealing with race relationships. The play opens May 8 at the Cort Theatre, N. Y. City.

EVEN CHURCHES

You don't ordinarily think of CIO organizing churches. But that, in a way, is what happened in Port Neches, Tex.,

Three churches have been organized in CIO Oil Workers Local 288's hall, reported L. L. Crane, oil worker delegate to the Southwestern CIO Education Conference last week.

As one church grew in size and finally erected their own building, another new group would come along, using the union hall on Sundays.

"The minister of the third group," Crane said, "saw a CIO-PAC receipt book lying on the desk.

"Say, I need one of those receipts." said the minister. "Here's my buck for PAC."

"That's how church and labor can cooperate," Crane added.

TWU ASKS TRUMAN FIGHT FOR FDR POLICIES

Warning that the danger of a third world war stems from the greed of "big business monopolists whose profits swell to highest peaks through low wages and war," the CIO Transport Workers Union called on Pres. Truman to support "with vigorous deeds and not mere words" the policies of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt on peace and workers' living standards.

The TWU executive board asked Truman to work for peace "through continuation of the alliance that assured victory in the war" and urged him to oppose "the economic royalists who are attacking the legitimate wage demands of labor."

The board praised the efforts of CIO Pres. Philip Murray in helping to create the new World Federation of Trade Unions, which it called "the highest achievement toward the unity and cooperation of labor on a world scale."

YEARLY WAGE GETS ATTENTION

GUARANTEED annual wages for workers in several major industries is a problem that soon may be a strong factor in collective bargaining agreements, 20 research directors of CIO unions said last week.

The meeting of research directors was called by Kermit Eby, Director of the CIO Dept. of Education and Research, and Katherine Pollak Ellickson, CIO assistant director of research.

"Even in industries where employment has been highly irregular in the past, unions and companies are giving thoughful consideration to methods of assuring labor a steady income throughout the year," Mrs. Ellickson reported. "The matter, while of general interest, has received special attention from CIO unions in the steel, automobile, packinhouse, shoe and paper industries.

Research directors of those unions expressed hope that a forthcoming study by the Presidential Sub-Committee of the Advisory Board of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion will select their industries for study in a forthcoming survey of the question.

"Workers must eat and buy clothes and pay rent 52 weeks a year. If we are to secure a rising standard of living and a form of insurance against unemployment, instability and distress, we must immediately examine every phase of the guaranteed annual wage question with a view to the adoption of 52-week pay in those industries where it meets the needs of management and labor," Mrs. Ellickson declared.

SHOW THIS STIRRING FILM TO UNMASK AMERICA'S HATERS OF DEMOCRACY!

POWERFUL AND DRAMATIC—A GREAT FILM OF FAITH IN AMERICA!

NATIVE LAND

Produced by Frontier Films

Songs and Narration by

PAUL ROBESON

With

ART SMITH, HOWARD DA SYLVA, TOM CONNERS, MARY GEORGE

And A Thrilling Cast

Directed By Leo Hurwitz & Paul Strand

Music By Marc Blitzstein

Photography By Paul Strand

Now Available For Theatres, and in 16 mm Soundfilm for Trade Unions. Write For Details.

BRANDON FILMS

1600 BROADWAY, NEW YORK 19, N. Y.

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

JIM AND SEVERAL UNION MEMBERS RESCUE MICKEY BARRY WHO HAD BEEN KIDNAPPED BY STEVE DENTON'S THUGS WHEN HE THREATENED TO EXPOSE THE PLOT TO DESTROY THE UNION AT THE ROTOR CONSTRUCTION COMPANY. NOT KNOWING THAT MICKEY IS NO LONGER HIS PRISONER, DENTON SPEAKS AT THE UNION MEETING...

JIM! WHA—WHAT DOES STEVE DENTON MEAN? HE SAYS SOMEBODY IS... IS GOING TO HURT MICKEY...

NOBODY IS GOING TO HURT MICKEY, SUE. DON'T WORRY.

HOW CAN YOU SAY THAT? STEVE DENTON HAS JUST ANNOUNCED THAT THEY... SOMEONE...KIDNAPPED MICKEY! HE MIGHT BE HURT... AND, JIM... YOU'VE GOT TO DO SOMETHING!

JUST WAIT, SUE.

NOW AS A MAN WITH THE GOOD OF THE UNION IN MY HEART... I OBJECT TO THIS REPORT THAT MICKEY BARRY HAS BEEN KIDNAPPED BY CERTAIN MEMBERS OF THIS UNION...

...MICKEY BARRY IS A RAT AND AN ENEMY OF HONEST TRADE UNIONISM... BUT THAT'S NO REASON FOR MEMBERS OF OUR UNION TO TAKE THE LAW INTO THEIR OWN HANDS AND... ACCORDING TO CERTAIN RUMORS— PLAN TO KILL MICKEY BARRY!

UNLESS MICKEY BARRY IS FREED—UNHURT—I'M LEAVING THIS UNION... AND SO WILL EVERY HONEST MAN ——

JUST A MINUTE, DENTON!

YOU'VE SUGGESTED THAT CERTAIN MEMBERS OF THE UNION PLAN TO VIOLATE THE LAW... COMMIT MURDER— WHERE DID YOU GET THAT RUMOR?

WHY... I'VE HEARD REPORTS AND RUMORS, THAT'S ALL.

REPORTS LIKE THAT ARE SPREAD BY ENEMIES OF TRADE UNIONS... AND BROUGHT UP AT THIS MEETING TO PREPARE A FRAME-UP...

ARE THEY?

WE CAN EASILY DISPROVE THESE REPORTS ABOUT CERTAIN MEMBERS OF OUR UNION BY ASKING MICKEY BARRY HIMSELF... BUT I TRIED TO REACH HIM AT HOME BUT HIS MOTHER TOLD ME HE HASN'T BEEN HOME FOR—

WHY NOT ASK HIM NOW? HE'S HERE!

MESKIN

Orbit Feature Service, Inc.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Don't Forget The 65c Wage

The Minimum Wage Bill (S. 1349) with the Pace inflationary rider tied around its throat, is up for study by the House Labor Committee.

There are two easy alternatives for the Committee and for the House. Either it can pass a good bill that will bring increased protection and pay to millions of low income workers; or it can leave the inflation rider attached to the bill and insure a promised veto from the White House.

The Pace rider which has about as much connection with minimum wages as an Eskimo has with a hula hula costume, would lift the nation's food bill by four or five billion dollars a year, largely for the profit of speculators. The intention of the polltaxers and labor haters in inserting the rider was to kill any increase in the present legal 40c-an-hour wage rate.

Unless the bill can be improved in the House over the version passed by the Senate, there won't be any minimum wage legislation written on the books at this session of Congress.

The minimum wage bill doesn't concern only the low-paid workers, or those in certain industries. Its protection will be felt by every industrial worker in the country, since higher minimum pay rates for more people spell added protection for those in the upper wage brackets too.

Now, while the bill is in the House Labor Committee, is the best time to write your own Congressman.

Don't just ask him to support the 65c bill.

Get a definite written pledge from him to support this three-point program:

1. To restore to the bill the plan for lifting the minimum wage over a two-year period 65c to 75c.

2. To insure wage-hour protection to retail and wholesale employes, to telegraph company employes, and to seamen.

3. Most important of all, to vote against the Pace rider.

When you've gotten such a pledge from your Representative, pass the word along to your international union and to your union's Washington legislative representative.

You can help to get a minimum pay bill passed by Congress this year!

Organized Impatience

If you were a polltax Congressman, you'd be feeling these days that the people are making a pest of themselves.

Last week, for instance, several hundred women from a dozen civic and consumers organizations, came to Washington to tell Congress what they think about its progress—or lack of progress—on important needs of the people.

The name of the meeting was a tip-off on the rating Congress has earned; it was a "Conference on Unfinished Business in Social Legislation."

And as Helen Hall, prominent director of the Henry St. Settlement in N. Y. expressed it: "You might call our project a demonstration of organized impatience."

The agenda of the unfinished business conference was a roll call of the critically-needed bills upon which action hasn't yet been completed. That list touches practically every need of the American people in this first year of peace: housing, price control, extended social security coverage, health, minimum wage and FEPC.

"We seem to have won a war abroad but are losing one at home," Miss Hall commented. "Out of the whole social program staked out by President Truman eight months ago to provide for the human side of reconversion, only the GI bill of rights and the much amended Employment bill have been passed."

It's interesting to note, incidentally, that the program of the women's civic organization parallels that of CIO, particularly since stories have always liked to claim that unions don't speak for all the people.

But the Conference on Unfinished Business embraces a dozen organizations of varied membership: the national board of YWCA, American Assn. of Social Workers, Natl. Consumers League, Natl. Council of Negro Women and half a dozen others.

And, like CIO, the women's groups are thinking in terms of the elections.

"If Congress doesn't act on these measures," says Miss Hall, "we'll remember in November!"

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price Control HR 6042	Extends price control act to June 1947.	Passed by House with flock of death-dealing amendments; Senate Banking Committee now conducting hearings.	Wire your Senators and members of Banking Committee to pass bill without amendments. Strong action is needed to save OPA and price control.
Patman Housing Bill HR 4761	Provides basis for big housing program for vets.	In Senate-House Conference Committee. At issue: restoration of subsidies and govt. guarantee to buy prefabricated housing.	Wire conferees to re-insert subsidy, pre-fabricated housing purchases. Ask Senators to pass bill.
Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill S 1592	Provides long range housing and slum clearance program.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee hearings to open soon.	Ask support of your Congressman and members of House Banking Committee.
Minimum Wage S 1349	Lifts minimum pay to 65c. Senate added inflationary Pace rider, despite Pres. Truman's threat to veto, and thus kill bill.	Passed by Senate; now ready for House Labor Committee.	Ask Representatives to kill Pace rider and add coverage for seamen, retail, food and communications workers.
Wagner-Murray-Dingell Health Bill S 1606	Establishes national health program aimed at providing adequate low-cost medical service.	Hearings being conducted by Senate Labor Committee.	Write your Senator that you want bill passed.
Case Bill HR 4908	Would harass unions with many new restrictions and anti-labor devices.	Passed by House; Senate Labor Committee passed milder version, but Tories hope to load it with tough amendments.	Wire, write your Senators that you don't want the Case bill in any form.

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

TALK FEST: A filibuster, junior grade, is being staged in the Senate. For nearly a month, Senators have been talking about the $3,750,000,000 loan to Britain. As yet, they haven't voted on the subject.

Sen. Barkley has tried to speed the debate in hope of getting a decision in the next few days. But conservative Senators growl that America shouldn't be giving any aid to a labor government—and they keep saying it in a variety of ways.

CIO has endorsed the loan as necessary to help stabilize world economy; and the CIO-PAC platform calls for loans to our allies without political strings.

A wire to your Senator asking an immediate favorable vote on the loan will have a double result: to give our wartime ally badly needed assistance, and to pave the way for discussion of other important bills now gathering dust on the Senate calendar.

ANOTHER ONE: The polltax bloc has come up with a new anti-labor bill.

The latest is one offered in the House by Rep. A. W. Robertson (D. Va.), whose proposal (HR 6259) would ban any union from collecting any regular contributions from employers for any purpose. Only exception is for union dues.

What Polltaxer Robertson has in mind is to prevent free collective bargaining agreements in which unions might work out, in conjunction with their employers, methods of financing health or welfare programs based on contribution from employes in relation to the products they make.

Robertson is mad at the coal strike, and the bill is his way of showing it. But like the anti-Petrillo bill passed last month by Congress, HR 6259 may affect every union in the country.

The Virginia Congressman probably got his cue from Sen. Harry Byrd (D, Va), who is admitted boss of the Democratic machine in the polltax-dominated Old Dominion.

With his usual disregard of the facts, Byrd told the U. S. Chamber of Commerce convention this week that unions are irresponsible and have developed into "big business."

This is as good a time as any to write your Congressmen and Senators to tell them you're against Rep. Robertson's HR 6259!

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President

NATHAN COWAN, Chairman

ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 20

Copyright, 1946, The CIO NEWS
$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

May 13, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

SQUARE DEAL SOUGHT IN SOUTH

(See Page 3)

Compulsory rationing will be necessary to solve the hunger of this little Greek boy and millions of other people throughout the world, FTA-CIO Pres. Donald Henderson told President Truman this week. (See details on Page 2.)

FTA Tells Truman:

RATIONING VITAL TO FAMINE FIGHT

"Death and disease now looming on a massive scale unknown in human history" can be halted by planned production, just distribution and controlled consumption of world food through a World Food Board, Pres. Donald Henderson of the CIO Food and Tobacco Workers told President Truman.

In a letter to the President May 13, Henderson asked restoration of rationing of essential foods and said "we need to shift the emphasis from appeals to consumers to a program involving radical changes in the food policies of all the surplus countries, starting with our own."

Asserting that the food problem is of world scope and "will be one of many years duration," the FTA president maintained that "world food needs cannot be met without world cooperation."

Charging that the policies of the Combined Food Board, "dominated by the United States, the United Kingdom and Canada . . . show that they regard world food supplies as a monopoly they can use for exploiting political advantages," Henderson also asserted that advocates of the voluntary food control program now admit the program's "utter failure."

The union president proposed:

1. Abolition of the Combined Food Board and establishment of a World Food Board with representation for the Soviet Union and other democratic and friendly countries now excluded.

2. Establishment of production and supply goals by the World Food Board for countries now capable of producing a surplus beyond their own needs.

3. Supervision of distribution, without political, racial or national discrimination by the World Food Board, including distribution to colonial or dependent countries or areas.

4. Membership in policy making and supervisory positions on the World Food Board by representatives of the World Federation of Trade Unions.

On the domestic front, Henderson said farmers and food processors must be provided the same opportunities and incentives to produce that were provided for the manufacture of weapons of war from 1941 to V-J day.

"We must reconvert and add to existing facilities for food as we did for war," he wrote President Truman. Subsidies, production bonuses and other necessary aids must be used to involve "family-size farms in an all-out drive for top farm output."

The policy of encouraging big corporation farms while failing to extend aid to family farms must be corrected, the union president said. Expansion of existing farm agencies is also necessary to increase farm output, he added.

Immediate reinstatement of rationing of essential foods, particularly cereals, fats and oils, was urged by Henderson. Price control must be carried on without amendments, he told Truman.

To aid in assuring greater food production, Henderson wrote the President that food workers "must be secure in the normal rights of other American workers."

"Hundreds of thousands of food and agricultural workers receive sub-standard wages and live in sub-standard conditions," he explained. "It is well known that workers on a sub-standard scale of living cannot produce at top levels."

Though the union's program will go a long way to meet the present world crises, Henderson said, a longer term program requires a still deeper change in policies of this country and other food surplus nations.

Required are "a recognition of the right of liberated countries to carry out their own social and economic programs without interference from outside sources," and "the right of all countries to carry out land reforms" by a breakup of European and Asiatic feudal systems.

"We need to recognize the fact that food policy is a basic part of foreign policy, and to face the need for changes in both," the FTA president wrote.

"We must put an end to present policies of disunity and provocation pursued by the U. S., Britain and their satellites in the United Nations Organization and bring about a renewal of 'Big Three' unity as advocated by the late President Roosevelt," Henderson maintained.

He renewed his request to recall Herbert Hoover from the Famine Emergency Committee. "Mr. Hoover's hasty and luxurious airplane flights add nothing to the knowledge of the facts of the situation," he said.

In China, a child carries his mother, too starved and emaciated to walk.

CONCLAVE VOTES SEA UNIONS' UNION

A SINGLE, nation-wide federation of maritime workers was approved by 300 cheering delegates to the National Convention of Maritime Unions this week.

Singing and shouting union songs, the delegates broke into their third demonstration after unanimously voting a merger of six CIO unions and one independent.

Two other demonstrations were held in the San Francisco meeting hall a day earlier after the delegates had voted joint strike action for June 15.

The proposed amalgamation and strike are recommendations which will be submitted to union membership in all seven unions for ratification.

Plans proposed the preservation of autonomy of each of the seven unions. A committee was selected to work out the details.

Joseph Curran, CIO National Maritime Union president, who presented the strike proposal for the 33-man joint policy committee, said "the shipowners have been in the forefront of enslaving unions, in the forefront of war-making, of starving millions of people."

The convention instructed its national strike committee to notify the World Federation of Trade Unions of the impending strike and to "work out details for obtaining support from trade unions throughout the world." More than 75,000,000 trade unionists are affiliated with the WFTU.

The strike would bring out an estimated 300,000 waterfront and sea-going workers on the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coasts.

Three of the unions already have voted overwhelmingly to strike and a fourth, the Natl. Maritime Union, is now conducting a strike vote.

Troop ships will be exempted, as will relief ships if satisfactory agreements are obtained, the delegates noted.

Strike action and negotiations will be carried on jointly, the delegates resolved in adopting their policy statement.

The maritime unions have been in the front ranks of progressive forces in this country, the statement said. "The shipowners have always been among the leaders of reaction."

Participating in the unity convention are the NMU, Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, American Communications Assn., Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., Marine Cooks and Stewards, the Inland Boatman's Union, all CIO affiliates, and the Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders & Wipers, an independent union.

Defeats Westinghouse

UE WINS 18c PAY BOOST

ENDING the biggest current CIO strike, the CIO United Electrical Workers late this week reached an agreement with the Westinghouse Electric Corp. providing increases of 18c an hour.

The 115-day strike of 75,000 workers in 23 plants and 11 states ended May 9 but picketing continued until the settlement was ratified by local unions. Scores of spontaneous but orderly celebrations were held throughout the country.

A flat increase of 18c an hour was made to all UE members, and an additional cent was set aside in a fund "to be used towards narrowing differentials between men's and women's wage and salary rates."

Union representatives and company officials announced the strike settlement in a joint statement. The union and company agreed to make no further statements until local union ratification meetings were held.

The statement reported that day workers' bonuses will be guaranteed and fixed to represent between 42 and 75% of the bonus paid in December, 1945, and will be included in base rates.

"Equitable standards" and the general wage increase were gained for lamp division workers with changes in the division's incentive system, the statement added.

Maintenance of membership, and the payment of union stewards on a 50-50 basis were also in the agreement.

The settlement brought an end to one of the most bitter strikes in UE's history. UE members fought on picket lines, in the courts, and dramatized their struggle in a "Make Westinghouse Settle" week that brought their case before the public over the radio, in street demonstrations, motorcades, rallies and visits to Congressmen.

Support for the strike rolled in from every corner of the labor movement especially after Pennsylvania state police were turned on pickets at the Westinghouse plant in Pittsburgh.

The joint statement said in part:

"Some of the major points of the strike settlement agreement and the new contract are presented in this statement with a brief explanation of them. No additional statements on the strike settlement will be made by either the union or the company until local union ratification meetings are held.

"Wage increase. The company will make an increase of 18 cents an hour in the wages and salaries paid to employes represented by the union, with the following variations:

"A. The company, in accordance with its original proposal, will establish a fund consisting of one cent per hour per employe. This fund is to be used towards narrowing differentials between men's and women's wage and salary rates.

"B. In the place of fluctuating day workers' bonus, day workers will receive a guaranteed fixed amount of the bonus, to be included in their base rates. This fixed amount will represent between 42 and 75 per cent of the day workers' bonus which was paid in December, 1945.

"C. Changes in the incentive system of the lamp division were agreed to which will provide equitable standards for lamp division workers and at the same time enable the company to apply the general wage increase to employes of the lamp division.

"D. A number of procedures and adjustments have been worked out to insure the efficient operation of the incentive system in line with peacetime conditions and to safeguard standards of the incentive workers."

Conferring during a recess at the National Convention of Maritime Unions are Harry Bridges, CIO Longshoreman's Union president; Joseph Curran, CIO National Maritime Union president; Eugene Burke, CIO Marine Cooks & Stewards Union president, and Joseph Selly, CIO American Communications Assn. president.

SQUARE DEAL FOR WORKERS
CIO'S ONLY AIM IN SOUTH

Director Van A. Bittner of the CIO southern organizing drive tells a press conference in Atlanta that workers will be recruited "regardless of race, creed, color or national origin."

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

CIO's "holy crusade" to organize a million southern workers moved off to a flying start May 3 in Atlanta, Ga.

To a group of more than 50 key CIO officials from a dozen states, Van A. Bittner, director of the organizing campaign outlined plans to bring "economic justice" to workers and to build the strength of southern labor as a force for good in the community.

The meeting was held at CIO regional headquarters at 75 Ivy Street, N. E. Bittner announced that the neat two-story building is being taken over by the drive as its headquarters, with numerous unions now occupying the site moving to other locations in the city.

Attending the meeting were principal officials of the organizing campaign, as well as CIO regional directors from as far west as Texas.

To them, Bittner outlined in an impassioned speech the necessity of concentrating on the job of bringing workers into the union.

"We have one objective—just one," he said, "and that is to organize all the unorganized men and women of the south into unions of the CIO for collective bargaining for higher wages and better working conditions."

That organization drive, he said, will seek to bring the benefits of unionism to workers "regardless of race, creed, color or national origin."

"There's only one class of Americans," Bittner reminded the CIO officials, "and that class is double A. We are going to see that every southern worker is in that class."

Throughout his speech, the CIO leader stressed the fact that the big organizing drive is no "invasion" of the southern states. There are at present some 400,000 CIO union members in the region, and there'll be a million more before the campaign is over.

"The CIO is coming to the south with nothing mysterious, but dedicated to the sole purpose of bringing improved working conditions and economic liberty for the people in this part of the country," he said. "We're not organizing to free India, or to influence what's happening in Europe."

CIO's first major meeting of the southern drive was held in the hall of the regional office, just around the corner from the heart of downtown Atlanta. The conference had attracted wide attention in Atlanta and the South.

Both union officials and newspapermen predicted that the campaign would find a vast, receptive audience among southern workers who do not now enjoy the benefits of unionism.

During the next couple of weeks numerous appointments will be made to staff organizing positions, and the headquarters building will be renovated and adapted to suit the new functions of the drive. A number of veteran organizers have been named by Bittner to key staff positions, among them T. J. Starling of the Auto Workers, and John Riffo and Phil Clowes of the Steelworkers.

By the latter part of May the drive will be moving into high gear, it is expected, with organizers assigned to a variety of locations throughout the south. Here are the answers provided by Bittner to some frequently asked questions:

Where will they organize? In Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, southern West Virginia, and Virginia.

In what industries will major drives be started? At the outset, in textile, lumber, chemicals and oil.

Any special problems? Bittner told the conference he's not prepared to admit that a "greedy southern employer is any more greedy or any less greedy than a greedy northern employer." The answer to both the northern and southern varieties is to sit across the bargaining table with the strong backing of their unionized employes.

And, so far as the workers are concerned, southern men and women "will come to us because men and women here have the same ideas, desires, hopes and ambitions as labor in other sections of the country."

Bittner doesn't put much stock in the fancy publicity statements of the AFL, which belatedly announced a southern organizing campaign several weeks after the CIO.

"I expected this," he said. "The AFL has always followed in the tracks of the CIO." I've known George Googe (southern AFL director) for 30 years; and frankly, I don't know why they need an organizing drive if he's been on the job that long."

Bittner doesn't seem much concerned about Googe's recent statements that the CIO is "communistic." Googe, he recalled, predicted the steel industry would never be organized; CIO did that job. Now he's making similar predictions about the CIO in the south—and Bittner feels the answer will be the same.

"But I'm not talking any more about the AFL," he told the delegates to the meeting. "I came here to talk to the living, not to preach a funeral service."

People who claim that the south can't be organized base their ideas on the claim that there are "too many Negroes" who won't want to join the union.

"That's nonsense," Bittner concluded. "A Negro gets just as hungry as a white man. And from my experience, I can say that there's no better union men than the hundreds of thousands of Negro workers already in the CIO.

"We're organizing all the men and women of the south, because they are all God's own human beings. And this campaign means a better Georgia, a better south, and a better United States."

To which, judging from every report, a lot of southerners say "aye."

DIXIE WORKERS SAY ORGANIZE THE SOUTH

SOUTHERN workers who fought by the tens of thousands along with their northern brothers in the CIO's recent wage campaign to win the greatest wage gains in American industrial history are the real moving force behind the CIO's new southern drive, says the current issue of the Economic Outlook, monthly bulletin of the CIO Dept. of Education & Research.

"It is in response to the urgent request of many workers in the South that the CIO is making available to them special help in organizing," states the Outlook, the entire issue of which is devoted to "The CIO in the South."

"Even the very companies which deal with unions in the North all too often try to keep the people below the Mason-Dixon line from organizing and winning the right to bargain collectively," the CIO bulletin points out.

Importance to the whole nation of the CIO's efforts to raise the standard of living of southern workers is stressed by the Outlook, which asserts that "as long as the level of income in the South lags behind the rest of the nation, every important southern group will suffer. And not only the South, but the entire nation is the poorer, since low wage and poor markets in one region tend to depress wages and markets elsewhere in the country."

The Outlook discusses the causes of low community income in the South which has meant poor education, poor housing and poor health and shows that the excuses offered for lower wages on the basis of lower cost of living and lower efficiency of southern workers are not true.

Gains made by the CIO in the South to date, including the winning of a 65c minimum hourly wage in textiles, are briefly outlined, and a list of more than 50 important southern plants working under CIO agreements is given.

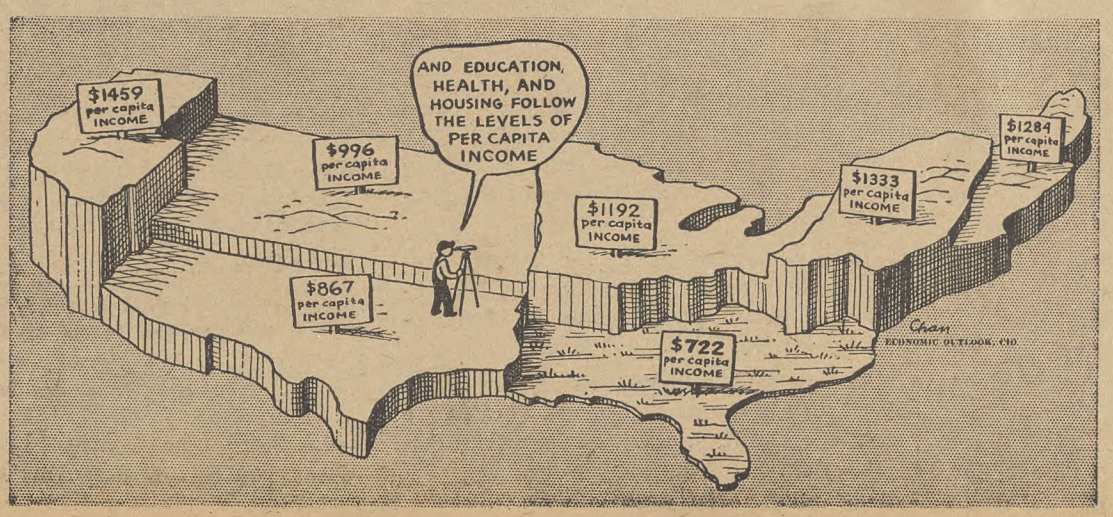
Anticipating the opposition the CIO expects to meet from anti-union groups, such as the stirring up of racial and other prejudices, the Outlook calls upon all believers in democracy to support the CIO's campaign in the South, "for experience has shown," it states, "that a strong labor movement is a necessary part of democracy."

GEAR VIRGINIA CIO FOR DRIVE

The drive to unionize Virginia will be handled by a greatly augmented staff of organizers and volunteer committees from each local union, a meeting of 65 state CIO officials heard this week.

Van A. Bittner, drive director, and Regional Director Ernest B. Pugh, who will supervise the Virginia campaign, outlined plans for the State after conferences with a number of officials in Richmond. Pugh declared that the goal for Virginia will be 100,000 new members.

Bittner told the meeting at the Amalgamated Clothing Workers hall that the only reason that Sen. Harry Byrd, Virginia poll-taxer, "is against the union is because there are so few union men in Virginia." When the labor organizations gain strength, politicians will change their tune, the CIO official predicted.



'MUST' BOOK FOR UNIONS

Here's a must for your union bookshelf—"The Report of the CIO Delegation to the Soviet Union."

Containing the observations of the 11-man CIO delegation which visited the USSR last October to study Russian trade unions, the pamphlet is a lively, well-illustrated account of what the CIO leaders saw and heard. It was prepared in behalf of the delegation by Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey.

Pres. Philip Murray, in an introduction to the booklet, declares:

"I consider this a document of first-rate importance, not only for American labor but for all who are interested in knowing the truth about the Soviet trade union movement, and in promoting friendship and understanding between the peoples of our two countries. Unfortunately, there are those who prefer to sow seeds of distrust and suspicion, who magnify the social aand cultural differences into unbridgeable gulfs, and who seek to divide rather than to unite the world.

"It is my hope that this report will help to prevent the division of the world into hostile blocs and to eliminate hostility against the great people whose cooperation was so essential to United Nations victory and whose continued friendship and cooperation is equally essential for lasting peace and world prosperity."

Copies of the Report (Phamphlet No. 128), can be ordered directly from the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Place N.W., Washington 6, D. C. Rates: 15c a copy; 100 for $10; 500 for $40.

TIME TO RE-TIRE

Southern workers need organization just as much as workers in other sections of the country need to have the south organized. The economy of the United States is as closely integrated as a delicate piece of machinery, and it can ill afford to maintain a large non-union area in which wages and working conditions are out of gear with the rest of the country. And it's particularly timely for the CIO to help do something about the situation.

Workers south of the Mason & Dixon line—and north of it—are deeply interested in the CIO southern organizing campaign which opened in Atlanta on May 3. Van A. Bittner, the CIO's drive director, wasn't exaggerating when he described the forthcoming union campaign as a "holy crusade" or when he predicted that southern workers by the hundreds of thousands would flock to the CIO.

In the south, as in the north, CIO will bring the benefits of unionism to workers "regardless of race, creed, color or national origin." As Bittner has pointed out, CIO's sole objective in the south is to organize workers into unions "for collective bargaining for higher wages and better working conditions."

For such a campaign the CIO has the support of millions of workers in every part of the country.

YOUNGER AND SMARTER

YOU GUESSED IT: CIO leaders are younger and better educated than the AFL brethren—and, incidentally, we may add, they're smarter and lower paid.

A study by C. Wright Mills, in the Public Opinion Quarterly, reveals that AFL leaders are, typically, between 45 and 70, with 25% over 60 and 7% over 70.

CIO leaders, on the other hand, are typically between 30 and 45, with only 3% over 60 and none over 70. The average CIO leader is 20 years younger than corporation executives and 14 years younger than AFL leaders.

Forty-six percent of CIO leaders are high school graduates, and 32% went to college, a higher percentage in both cases than in the AFL.

In national origin and religious affiliation, there is not much difference between the two groups. 83% of AFL and CIO leaders combined were born in the United States.

★ ★ ★

FOOD RATIONING: In advocating resumption of food rationing to feed the starving in other lands, the CIO reflects majority American opinion, judging from a recent poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion.

This poll showed 59% of Americans favoring rationing, if necessary. Incidentally, the percentage was higher among women, who have to do most of the shopping.

★ ★ ★

CRACK-WIDENERS: The Amalgamated Clothing Workers convention warned against current "cracks in Big Three unity." Driving a wedge into these cracks is most of the American daily press.

Last weekly report of the Twohey Analysis of Newspaper Opinion showed 53% taking a "belligerant or unfriendly position" toward the Soviet Union.

This, it said, reflected "much less antagonism" than in the past. The week before the percentage was 72%, and it's been much higher than that.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

THE CIO is not "invading" the South. It has long been growing there, as elsewhere, from roots planted deeply in American industrial life. It merely plans to grow some more—and fast.

Listen to some of the 100-odd Southerners who attended the CIO educational conference in Chapel Hill, N. C.

From Gadsden, Ala., where Sherman Dalrymple, now Secretary-Treasurer of the CIO Organizing Committee, was once beaten within an inch of his life:

"About the second meeting we held, in 1919, the entire bunch were arrested because Negroes and whites met together. Fifty-nine local workers were run out of town ("Invasion,, in reverse!)

"But Gadsden is now the best organized town in the United States. The entire industrial end (including big rubber, textile and steel plants) is organized in the CIO.

"All the 59 workers were reinstated and back pay collected. Wages have been more than doubled. The CIO helped defeat Congressman Starnes.

"Recently the CIO held a banquet in Gadsden, inviting the Mayor and 36 representatives of women's clubs, Rotary, Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations. We explained the PAC and other CIO activities, and they were much impressed."

* * *

CIO textile workers from Leeksville, Spray and Draper, N. C., speaking: "We now have seven locals in our joint board. The union has raised wages from $13 to $25 since 1937.

"At first we had to hold open-air meetings, because we couldn't get a meeting place. Now we have a $7,500 hall. We're trying to get extra ground for softball and tennis.

"The clubs and civic groups used to ignore us, even in the matter of parades, until we showed that we could hold the biggest parade. Now the antagonism is breaking down. The union has also been successful in getting better community housing."

* * *

From Winston-Salem, N. C., a Negro woman leader of the CIO Tobacco Workers:

"We have five or six different offices now. We're really in business. We've got baseball and softball clubs too.

"Before we got organized, we didn't know we had the right to vote. But now we have voting classes, with teachers from the schools. The professional people are really coming around.

In Winston-Salem 5,000 Negroes registered in the last election. Registration has been made easier. Instead of being required to spend hours reading the constitution, etc., a worker can now register in the time it takes to write his name. A union business agent is running for the state legislature.

* * *

From Birmingham, Ala., a member of a local of Negro warehouse and wholesale workers:

"The CIO is one of the greatest things that ever happened to Birmingham. Our local's been organized three years and we've more than doubled wages.

"At first we had to meet secretely. When the boss heard, he asked who started it. We told him, 'Everybody working in the plant.' Then he said, 'If you want a union, why didn't you join the AFL?' But we told him we wanted the CIO.

"Then the boss wanted to know, 'Who am I going to deal with? I can't deal across the table with a bunch of Negroes.' But that's just what he's doing now."

* * *

A CIO woodworker from Emporia, Va.: "We're organizing five woodworking plants. In one plant, the boss raised wages 2c when he heard organizing had started."

A Virginia textile worker, employed 47 years: "Since the CIO came in' we're free, we're not afraid. There's now a better feeling between colored and white."

A white shipyard worker from Wilmington, N. C.: "We're not letting the race problem divide us. We know we can't hold the colored down in the ditch without we stay down with them."

* * *

This is not a new story. The geography is incidental. With a few minor changes, the same story could be told of any community, North or South, where CIO unions have grown. Never once would you hear the word "invasion" used, it just wouldn't make sense.

Multiply incidents like these many times, and you will have the real inside story of CIO's Southern organizing drive.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, L. S. Buckmaster, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 May 13, 1946 No. 20

STORE WORKERS UNION TO HOLD 4TH CONCLAVE

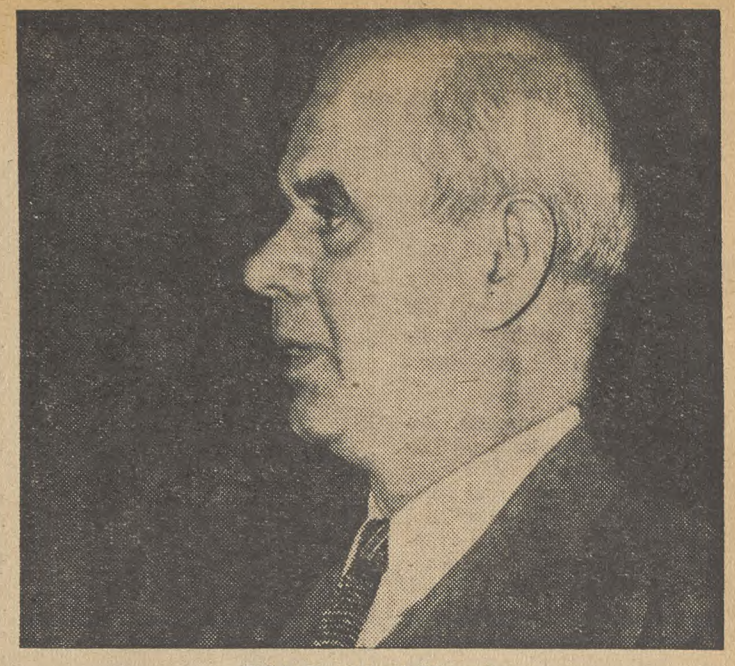
THE 4th convention, and the first since 1942, of the CIO United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes of America, will convene at Akron, O., May 14.

Over 800 delegates, guests and observers from over 200 locals in 32 states are expected to gather for the sessions which will be at the Mayflower Hotel in Akron and will last for five days, Pres. Samuel Wolchok reported.

Wolchok will open the convention Tuesday morning and one of the principal speakers, Pres. Walter Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers, is scheduled to speak Thursday. Pres. James Patton of the Farmers' Union will also speak.

Emphasis of the convention will be placed on a review of the organization gains, wartime activities and contributions of the International Union since 1942. In addition to the election of officers, the agenda includes formation of concrete plans for the future, and discussion of the union's position on national and international affairs.

USA Sec. Treas. McDonald



USA President Murray

TAX-FREE RESERVE COVERED U. S. STEEL'S STRIKE LOSSSES

The four weeks which U. S. Steel Corp. forced its workers out on strike last winter before granting their wage demands may have eaten up many a worker's savings, but the quarterly report of the corporation shows that fancy bookkeeping helped the firm come through with an uninterrupted flow of dividends and profits at the taxpayers' expense.

For the first quarter of 1946, Big Steel paid the regular $1.75 dividend on preferred stock and the usual $1 a share on common stock, according to the Federated Press. The corporation reported a net income of $10,238,271 for the first three months of 1946, compared to $15,379,171 for the same period last year, when wartime sales were $491,085,137. Sales in the three months this year amounted to only $265,856,787.

The profits and dividends were declared despite a cost of $27,887,000 for the strike. It was not done by mirrors, just a neat little bookkeeping trick. Cost of the strike was met not out of current profits but $16,737,000 of it out of a reserve piled up during the war for "abnormal costs arising out of the war" and $11,150,000 out of savings on 1946 income taxes, cost of the strike being deductible for tax purposes.

The $100 million which U. S. Steel set aside as reserve during the war would otherwise have swelled its huge wartime profit of $368 million, 276% higher than prewar, to embarrassing proportions. Set aside as reserves and taken as profit in 1946, they not only financed the strike but were completely deductible from taxes which normally apply to such profits.

Not only is no part of the quarterly net income of more than $10 million subject to income taxes but it actually includes a credit of $6,800,000 to be returned by the U. S. Treasury in cold cash because U. S. Steel will make less money this year than its wartime profit. This is the first portion of the carryback tax provisions which CIO Pres. Philip Murray warned would guarantee big business as much as $20 billion in the next two years to pay for a union-busting spree.

A Gala Convention:

STEEL UNION 10 YEARS OLD

Celebrating their tenth anniversary, the CIO Steelworkers will meet in convention May 14 at Atlantic City with 2500 delegates representing 815,000 workers in attendance.

The Steelworkers have much to celebrate. They have come through an orderly nation-wide strike with probably less than a dozen bloody noses and have won increases of 18½ cents an hour, an event that could only be dreamed of ten years ago when the union started life as the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Their president, Philip Murray, who has been with the union since its inception, put it this way in his speech at the convention of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Atlantic City this week:

"These 815,000 steelworkers had an average of 47 cents an hour in 1936, and they had no organization. They had poor housing. They, their wives and their children suffered from malnutrition.

"The Steelworkers union came along and in a ten-year period that average wage has gone from 47c to $1.39½. Their hours of employment have been shortened, and their conditions of employment and their standards of living have been improved.

"The experience of the Steelworkers symbolizes the kind of things that have been done for workers in almost every industry throughout the United States that CIO has organized in the past 10 years."

The union grew out of the committee of twelve, including Murray, who met June 17, 1936, in a Pittsburgh skyscraper.

The year 1937 looms big in the history of the union because it was then U. S. Steel signed its first union contract and that the bloody "Little Steel" strikes occurred and the first convention of the organization was held.

Murray presided at that convention and at the convention of the committee in 1940. And he was also in the chair when the committee became the United Steelworkers of America and adopted a constitution in 1942, and was again elected president at the Cleveland, Ohio, convention in 1942.

An interesting program has been prepared for the convention in the grand ballroom of the Atlantic City Convention Hall. Speakers will include Pres. Sidney Hillman, president of the Clothing Workers and PAC chairman; Labor Secretary Schwellenbach and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., chairman of the housing committee of the American Veterans Committee.

SQUELCH OPA ENEMIES WITH LETTERS TO CONGRESS

MAIL and wires to your Senators and Congress demanding continued price control are more necessary than ever. While the Senate Banking Committee continued hearings on the OPA bill, reports from the Capitol revealed that mail is beginning to fall off.

At the same time, the people who want OPA killed off and inflation ushered in are getting bolder and beginning to talk up once again. They were silent after the House loaded the price control bill with amendments.

The Senate Committee will probably bring in its report in the next week or two. The group was told by Chairman Marriner Eccles of the Federal Reserve Bank that the danger of inflation is "real." He charged that "prematurely reduced taxes"—in particular the excess profits tax—had helped bring about an inflationary situation.

The NAM came in for a scolding from Sen. Wayne Morse, liberal Oregon Republican. Attacking Robert Wason, NAM president who has led the fight against OPA, Morse declared:

"I have never seen greed ride so roughshod over our land nor have I ever heard such brazen defense of it as characterizes most of the utterances of the president of the NAM."

In Atlantic City, N. J., the Amalgamated Clothing Workers convention took strong action demanding continued price control, and delegates planned to flood Congress with messages. Mass meetings and demonstrations in behalf of continued effective OPA operations are being scheduled in many cities throughout the country.

Things are Different: This picture taken during the recent peaceful steel strike shows a member of the CIO Steelworkers on the picket line with his father, who recalls the bloody strike at Homestead in which he participated.

Clothing Union Declares:

BIG THREE UNITY=PEACE

By LEN DE CAUX

WHEREVER battles are to be fought for labor and the people's cause, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers will be found in the forefront.

This leader among unions, pioneer of industrial unionism, of labor political action, of world labor unity, and most generous supporter of every CIO organizing drive, fully lived up to its reputation at its 15th biennial convention in Atlantic City.

The 1250 delegates, representing a membership grown to 350,000, reviewed a record of substantial union progress in advancing the wages, security, health and social and cultural welfare of all clothing workers.

But they did not confine their deliberations to their own immediate interests--or rather, they recognized that their interests and welfare were dependent on the advancement of the whole labor and democratic cause, and they gave a progressive lead to millions outside their own ranks.

Political action, a foreign policy for peace, CIO's southern organizing drive, aid to veterans, world labor unity, price control and a legislative program to realize Roosevelt's "economic bill of rights" were among the major issues to which the ACW convention devoted its attention.

Pres. Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, sounded the keynote on labor political activity and foreign policy in his opening speech, and the convention unanimously followed his lead in the resolutions adopted on these subjects.

In his speech and in the resolution a sharp warning was served against the "cracks that have begun to appear in the war-born unity of the Big Three."

"With the military defeat of Germany and Japan," the convention declared, "only three nations are possessed of the industrial and economic power to wage war on a world scale: the United States, the Soviet Union and Great Britain.

"As long as they remain united, working in friendship and close collaboration, so long will the United Nations be an effective instrument to prevent war and remove its causes. But if Big Three unity fails, the United Nations, too, will fail.

"The American people demonstrated their recognition of this fact by the unanimity with which they rejected the Churchill proposal for an Anglo-American alliance, which could be directed only against the Soviet Union. While repudiating any formal alliance, we must be equally vigilant to avoid the creation of any blocs in practice."

The statement further noted that "there are reactionary forces in our country which oppose and work against this basic policy. They seek to use our nation's great strength, not for unity and peace, but to wrest world domination for themselves. These forces must be isolated and defeated, for their path is the path to war."

The convention also called for the "complete destruction of the economic and social roots of fascism;" for self-determination and self-government for colonial peoples; for a quarantine of Franco Spain and expulsion of Argentina from the League of Nations; for loans to our needy allies, unstinting support for UNRRA, and resumption of food rationing to make American food available to other lands.

Hillman warned that reactionary industrialists and "their wrecking crew in Congress" are advocating policies which would bring about national economic collapse, with 25 to 30 million unemployed.

SIDNEY HILLMAN

Reviewing CIO's wage struggles, he said: "The gains won on the picket line can be dissipated and swept away by the Congress. We must win on the political as well as on the economic front if final victory is to go to the people."

Hillman accused the Congressional "wrecking crew" of rejecting full employment, for the benefit of "the privileged few, who do not want jobs for all but demand a reserve army of unemployed as a bargaining weapon to beat down wages and living standards"; of "making a shambles of the Price Control Act"; of dallying on housing and public health. of sabotaging minimum wage amendments, and of "callously denying full citizenship to the Negro people by filibustering the FEPC and anti-polltax acts."

The resolution adopted on political action declared that "the open and avowed coalition of reactionary Republicans and polltax Democrats is responsible for the dismal legislative record since V-J Day."

Declaring that "the course of Congress must be sharply reversed," it pledged "full and unqualified support to the CIO Political Action Committee and the American Labor Party as labor's political arms," and outlined a program for getting out the vote and educating the voters on the issues and the records of all candidates.

The convention enthusiastically approved the contribution of $200,000 by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers to the CIO Southern organizing drive, which it described as "the Number One organizing task of the Amalgamated in the coming year."

Speaking on the resolution, Sec.-Treas. Jacob Potofsky declared that "the sweatshop, driven from the cities of the North, has found its last haven in the South. Labor is exploited economically, and does not enjoy political equality. Labor in the South must be set free.

"Over and above our own immediate interests is the great task of bringing enlightened trade unionism and full political and economic democracy to the people of the Southern states."

"Southern workers," he said, "feel they are part of the nation, a great, rich nation. We have the hands that built the South, the hands that tilled the soil of the South, that created its wealth.

"We workers in the South are ready. We want to walk with dignity, walk with our heads up."

Eule McGill of LaFollette, Tenn., said she worked six weeks without pay in a shirt factory "to learn," and that after that her first pay was $6.40 for 60 hours' work. "They don't do that any more," she said, "because some Southern plants have become organized."

"The workers are hungry for unions to help them," said Mrs. Alda Mae Cornaud of Dallas, Tex. "You-all must help them."

The union showed its practical concern for the welfare of war veterans by enthusiastically backing up a delegation of amputees in their demand that the Thomas England hospital be kept open in Atlantic City; and by announcing an ambitious program for training and absorbing into the men's clothing industry 100,000 ex-servicemen, including many disabled men, who never worked in it before.

Hillman said this program was part of a CIO campaign to give veterans "more than the lip service the fighters got after World War I." He declared his union was prepared to give 30% of its jobs to ex-servicemen.

Besides calling for legislation to grant terminal leave to enlisted men, to increase grants and benefits to veterans, and to improve their unemployment insurance, the convention decided, in cooperation with employers, "to establish projects for the training of veterans, with particular consideration for those who are disabled," for jobs in its industry.

Louis Hollander, manager of the New York Joint Board, reported on one such project in that city where 1000 veterans are taking training for skilled jobs and immediate vacancies exist for 5000 more.

Murray Weinstein, manager of New York Cutters Local 4, said his local has 118 veterans, some of them disabled, in training now, and that 35 have finished training and are drawing $72 for a 36-hour week.

In other actions, the ACW convention denounced the Wood-Rankin committee, calling for its abolition and demanding a "real inquiry into the activities of the forces of native fascism"; urged the admission into Palestine of 100,000 homeless Jewish people, and freer immigration into the U. S. for victims of Nazi terror; hailed the World Federation of Trade Unions; urged that Italy be "treated without vengeance" and granted long-term loans and credits; demanded continuation of strict price controls, and called for passage of 65c minimum wage, housing, health, expanded social security and anti-polltax legislation.

The convention criticized the Natl. Labor Relations Board for "retreating from the principles which it originally established," showing "bias against the CIO and in favor of rival labor organizations," attempting "to appease recationary employers," and engaging in many cases in "undue delays."

MURRAY CALLS LEWIS WEAK BY OWN STANDARDS

CIO Pres. Philip Murray in a fighting and loudly applauded speech at the convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Atlantic City lit into CIO's enemies as "corroded in their thinking, rusty and becoming fossilized. They are reactionary in the sense that they live in the ancient days.

"When a young, energetic, strong, intelligent movement like the CIO moves forward and pushes these corroded thinkers aside in the process," he said, "then they wail and they lament."

Murray particularly ridiculed John L. Lewis, who, he said, "was taken by the seat of the trousers and thrown out of the AFL. He was given the bum's rush."

He reminded his audience that Lewis had accused those who left the CIO of traitorous and treasonous conduct. "He said they were weak and vacillating and they sat by the side of the road and wept as the parade passed by, because they were not strong," Murray said.

"A considerable amount of water has poured under all these bridges during recent years. This man who accused others of treason one day decided to take a seat by the side of the road and he wept and lamented. Perhaps he was weak, but he left."

"And the CIO kept going and it became stronger and it became the greatest force for good in America."

Murray said that he, unlike Lewis, was not "a penitent soul. I am not a damn little bit penitent. I feel today like my predecessor, Mr. Lewis, felt back in 1936. I felt that way then, and I happen to feel that way now."

The existence of two big labor movements may be a good thing for the workers, the CIO president declared. "Oft times a leader, if he has too much of his way, will get rusty," he said. "The spirit of indifference manifests itself. A little competition will help, even in the labor movement."

Murray stated that he anticipated no greater difficulty in organizing in the South than in the North, and that the CIO would do the job. He ridiculed AFL Pres. Green for parrot-like imitation.

"Always trailing, always imitating, always waiting until somebody tries to do something," he said. "Old Willie rushes parrot-like into print, two months after the CIO decision to organize the South, and says the AFL is going to organize the South.

"Well, the field is big and it is open, but the CIO is the institution in the end which is going to organize the South."

Calling for real full employment legislation and adequate social security to implement Roosevelt's economic bill of rights, Murray said there are now "some 3,500,000 idle people in this country who want jobs and cannot get jobs and the number of idle is growing from month to month."

The CIO President praised the World Federation of Trade Unions as a great force to prevent military aggression and to preserve the peace.

"The atomic bomb must be obliterated from the face of the earth," he said. "It must never be used to destroy human beings."

ACW AIDS AMPUTEES

AMERICA's disabled war heroes are fighting another battle today in Atlantic City, this time against selfish real estate interests and official apathy, for the right to remain in this resort city and not be shunted away to make room for rich pleasure-seekers. They are finding in the CIO their most vigorous ally.

A dozen veterans from the Thomas M. England Army hospital, on crutches and in wheel chairs, put their case before the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' convention.

They were immediately voted wholehearted support in an indignant resolution denouncing the city's real estate interests for seeking the removal of Army recuperation and hospital centers. Pres. Sidney Hillman pledged to carry their case to the White House, if necessary.

Pfc. Al Nahan denounced the Chamber of Commerce for "putting hotel profits ahead of amputee veterans' interests." He asked Hillman to take their case to the War Dept. so that their hospital may remain open during the summer, instead of closing on June 30.

"It is a hell of a thing they are doing to us," Nahan said. "They will isolate us to some wilderness without sunshine and the facilities of Atlantic City so that people with a lot of money can live luxuriously."

The amputees said they enjoyed Atlantic City and their "everyday meetings with civilians on the boardwalk"; that all they got from the War Dept. was sympathy and insistence on closing the hospital; and that the Atlantic City Chamber of Commerce had refused to go on record to keep the hospital open.

WAGE BILL IS TOPIC AT SOCIAL WORK PARLEY

Leon G. Henderson, former Price Administrator, will address a meeting sponsored by the National Consumers League at the National Conference of Social Work in Buffalo, N. Y., May 22, discussing public interest in passage of minimum wage legislation.

Solomon Barkin, director of research of the Textile Workers' Union of America, will explain the relationship of the minimum wage to collective bargaining at the same session. The 65-Cent Minimum Wage Bill, which passed the Senate last month, is now being considered by the House Labor Committee.

NEW NCPAC HEAD

Dr. Frank Kingdon was elected chairman of the National Citizens Political Action Committee by the organization's national executive board this week. The chairmanship has been vacant since the resignation of Sidney Hillman in March, 1945.

LEAVE BILL REPORTED OUT

PRESSURE from the CIO helped to force out of House Military Affairs Committee a bill to give terminal leave to enlisted personnel of the armed forces—a privilege now only granted commissioned officers.

The committee acted to save face. Before the House went on Easter vacation, 218 members of the House signed a petition to force the committee to discharge HR 4051, the majority being obtained after Meyer Bernstein, chairman of the CIO Veterans Committee, wrote a letter to all Congressmen urging such action on the terminal leave measure. He received 75 favorable replies.

Although the bill reported out of the committee is not identical with the CIO-backed measure, HR 4051, which under the rules of the House would have been reported out May 13, it provides terminal leave allowances computed on the basis of two-and a-half days for each month of service, up to a top of 120 days.

The committee's bill is also retroactive, applying to anyone who served since Sept. 8, 1939, and who makes application within a year.

In an apparent spite move, the committee recommended that in a future emergency terminal leave payments be eliminated for enlisted personnel as well as commissioned officers.

War amputees tell of CIO aid in their fight to retain the Thomas M. England General Hospital at Atlantic City. Pictured here are: Irving Richter, UAW legislative representative; Corp. Ernie Saardo, Pfc. Donald Murray, Corp. Walter Bernstein; Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee; Pfc. Frank F. Baraccini and Pfc. Wallace W. Daczkowski.

AMPUTEE CAR BILLS TO BE AIRED

YIELDING to pressure from war amputees and members of Congress, Rep. Rankin (Miss. polltaxer), chairman of the House Veterans Committee, said this week that hearings would be held on bills providing for specially equipped cars for war amputees.

Nathan E. Cowan, CIO legislative director, lent further support to the move for action on the bills by writing to authors of four measures that not only do the war amputees need the specially equipped cars but "that without the aid of the Federal government the manufacturers in this period or scarcity are unwilling to provide the necessary cars."

The CIO-UAW has been active in seeking action on the proposal, advising amputees calling on Congressmen.

"Legislation is also needed because the spokesmen for the Veterans Administration have stated that they do not feel free to make available this equipment without Congressional authorization," Cowan also wrote.

"The number of servicemen affected by this legislation is limited. There were less than twenty thousand GI's suffering amputation or from spinal wounds during the war. This measure, so helpful to the restoration of morale and the reintegraiton into community life, seems a small recompense indeed to the men who, next to our dead, have made the greatest sacrifice for our country," the letter continued.

The letter was sent to Reps. Kelley (D., Pa.), Patterson (D., Calif.), Rogers (R., Mass.) and Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.), all of whom introduced bills for the special vehicles.

CIO SUES IN U. S. COURT FOR VETS' VACATION

MEYER Bernstein, representative of the CIO Veterans Committee announced this week that the CIO had brought the first suit under the Selective Service and Training Act to force a company to recognize time spent by a veteran in the armed forces in computing vacation pay.

The suit was brought in the office of U. S. District Attorney Charles F. Uhl, Pittsburgh, by Joseph Kolcynzki and William Wisniewski, veterans employed by Seyler Manufacturing Company, Etna, Pa.

It is charged that Kolcynzki received only one week's vacation, although he had ten years' seniority including almost five years in the armed forces. The CIO further charged that Kolcynzki should have received two weeks' vacation under the contract of the CIO Steelworkers of America with the company which provides that any employe with five or more years' service with the company is entitled to two weeks' vacation.

Wisniewski was entitled to a week's vacation under the contract, although he had not one year of continuous employment on the job, Bernstein declared. He pointed out that Wisniewski had seniority dating from April 7, 1942, when he was first hired by the company, and including almost three years in the Marine Corps.

The union contract, Bernstein said, also provided that a veteran shall be entitled to a week's vacation for the calendar year in which he is reinstated even though he was not actually on the job continuously for a year.

Bernstein, Kolcynzki and Wisniewski charged the company "with violating the Selective Service and Training Act of 1940 by refusing to consider time spent in the military services for the purposes of seniority in computing vacation pay."

To better coordinate the protection of labor's rights, 372 delegates met in Detroit and formed the Congress on Civil Rights. L to r: Frank Donner, CIO associate counsel, Louis Jones, facing prison term under Pappy O'Daniel's anti-violence act, Rep. Hugh DeLacy (D, Wash.), Chris Bates, charged with contempt of court for criticizing conviction of Jones, and Laurent Franz, Natl. Federation for Constitutional Liberties.

WAR DEPT. MAY HEED PLEA FOR HOSPITAL

INDICATIONS this week are that war amputees—aided by the CIO and several of its affiliates—may succeed in preventing abandonment of the Thomas M. England General Hospital, Atlantic City, N. J. Organizations that have helped the amputees include the Auto Workers, United Public Workers, Textile Workers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Utility Workers and the CIO Veterans Committee.

The Army's present plan is to close the hospital June 30. Pfc. Don Murray, Boston, Mass., spokesman for the amputees at a press conference at CIO headquarters following an interview with President Truman and Brig. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the President's military aide, told of the fight that the amputees have made to keep the hospital.

Learning that the Army planned to close the hospital June 30, they appealed to Auto Workers, Textile Workers, Utility Workers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and the United Public Workers who passed resolutions at their conventions asking that the Army abandon its plans to close the hospital June 30.

Murray charged that hospital interests have been seeking to have the hospital closed because it is located in Haddon Hall and Chalfonte Hotel, which could be profitably operated now that vacationing is being revived.

Appealing to Gen. Omar Bradley, Veterans Administrator, the amputees were told that the VA would need until Sept. 30 to take over the hospital. They got 60,000 signtures to a petition asking that the hospital be retained. This they presented when they called at the White House to tell Gen. Vaughan that the hospital was equipped with ramps carrying their wheelchairs to the boardwalk of the beach.

Gen. Vaughan told them that he planned to visit the hospital within a few days, which is the first sign that the amputees have had that the War Dept. was reconsidering its intention to close the hospital. They also said that President Truman assured them that his military aide was keeping him informed of developments.

One of the delegation, Cpl. Walter Bernstein, Brooklyn, N. Y., a member of Local 10, AFL Ladies Garment Workers, said that when he told his union president, David Dubinsky, that the UAW had passed a resolution on the retention of the hospital, Dubinsky told him that ILGWU, which was currently in convention, would take no such action. When Bernstein asked for a five-minute interview, Dubinsky told him to write him a letter, the corporal said.

RIGHT ABOUT FACE IN HOUSING

AN ADEQUATE housing program for veterans finally received the green light from Congress this week, as the House of Representatives voted for $400,000,000 in subsidies for purchasing scarce and high-cost building materials.

The subsidy issue had tied the bill up in knots for weeks. The Senate had approved subsidies, the House had refused them until May 9. By a 187-158 vote which cut across party lines, the House finally approved financial backing for the building program.

It is now expected that the joint Senate-House conference committee will bring out the bill in the next few days for final approval by each branch of Congress. CIO and veterans organizations had been pushing hard for inclusion of the substitutes, without which the Wyatt housing program might have died a premature death.

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS — By Rose H. Alschuler

TOGETHER THEY STAND

These youngsters are obviously more interested in the world about them than in the fact that one happens to be Negro and the other white. Together they're learning that in our United States there are innumerable varieties of people and that as we come to know and understand them, our own lives become broadened and enriched. IF we're to have One World and IF we're to survive, we'd better start to understand and to love our neighbors as ourselves. Library of Congress—Parks for OWI.

GOLDEN ACTIVE IN ILO PARLEY

A SPOKESMAN for the CIO United Steelworkers took a leading part in the recent iron and steel conference of the Intl. Labor Office at Cleveland, and helped push through resolutions on collective bargaining and full employment.

Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the USA-CIO president, helped effect passage of a resolution pointing to the desirability of collective bargaining as a proper method of handling industrial relations.

At the same time, he argued successfully for a resolution to protect workers from unemployment brought about by the introduction of new machinery. The resolution, as finally adopted, advocated timing the introduction of such new equipment to "cushion its impact" upon employment; training workers displaced by such new machinery for other jobs, and the planning of new jobs for these displaced employes.

Golden noted that the U. S. steel industry plans expansion and improvements costing $327,000,000 within the next year and warned that the effects of this program wil be "profound . . . on employment and the national well-being."

Attending the conference were employer and worker delegates from Australia, Belgium, France, the United Kingdom and India.

CIO AUXILIARY HELPS AROUSE CITY ON OPA

AN EXAMPLE of what can be done by CIO Women's Auxiliaries to help arouse support for OPA is this story from Cleveland telling how the heads of six women's groups led by Mrs. Faye Stephenson, national CWA president, had Mayor Burke proclaim the week of May 4 as "Save Price Control Week."

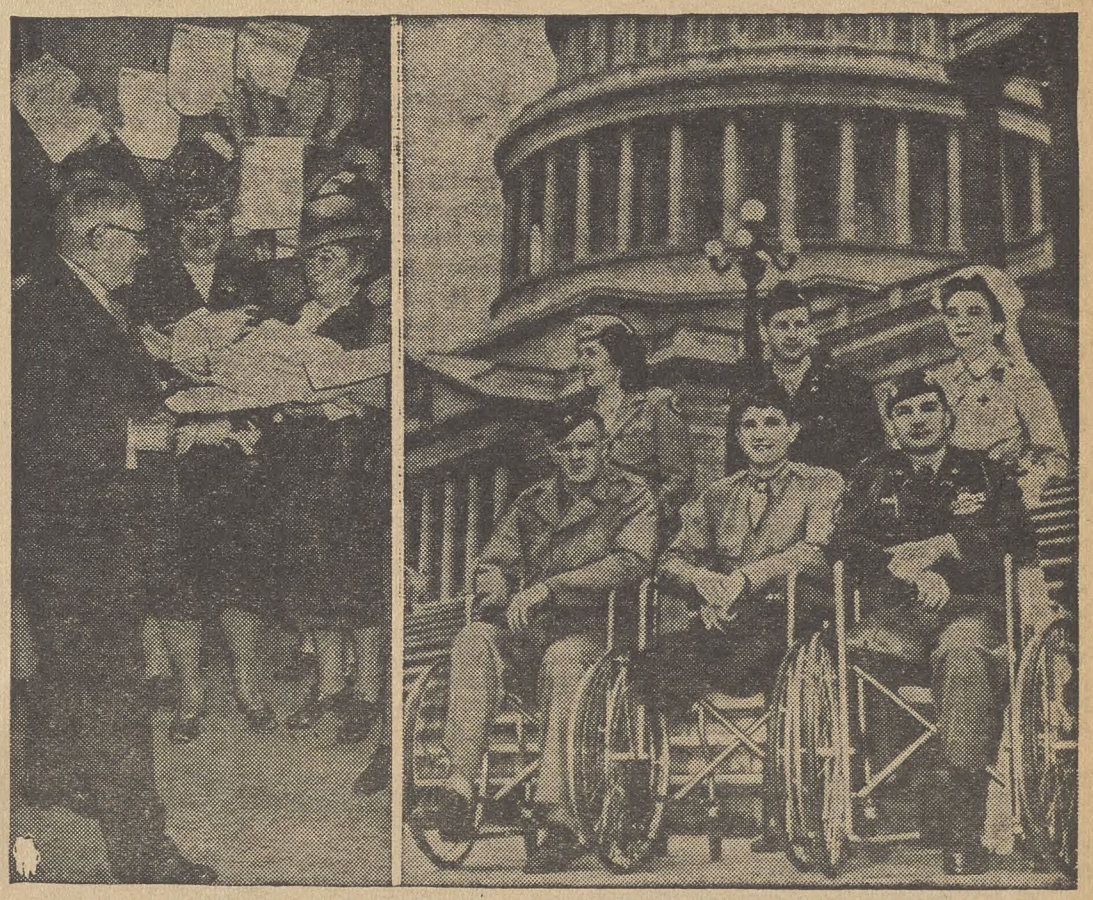
In complying with this request, the mayor also agreed to participate in a discussion on the "OPA Today" radio program but was unable to be present and sent a representative to speak.

The committee obtained permission to use the Council chambers for a meeting when signed petitions, urging extension of OPA without crippling amendments, will be collected and given to a delegation headed for Washington for presentation to Congress.

Participating in the radio program were representatives of the Catholic Federation of Women's Clubs, of the Consumers' League and Mrs. Stephenson. The discussion brought out the fact that thanks to OPA prices were lower during and after World War II than they were during and after World War I.

BRIGGS STRIKE VOTED

Protesting arbitrary production standards set by the Briggs Manufacturing Co., Detroit, 12,000 CIO United Auto Workers this week served 30-day strike notice. At a mass meeting, called after 450 auto workers walked out over the firing of four union men, the vote to strike was unanimous.



Wounded vets and housewives descend on Washington to save OPA. (Left) Sen. Robert F. Wagner (D, N. Y.) receives petitions bearing thousands of signatures. (Right) Men who fought for their country are ready to fight for price control.

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS
UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman New York, N. Y. 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig Detroit, Mich. 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1639-49 W. Evergreen Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

44 Years of Know-how
in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C. I. O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 4600 West Parker Ave., Chicago 39, Illinois
20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

Register Now To Vote!

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

I. L. DeShelter, CIO Reg. Dir. Kansas City, Mo., reports: Regal Plastic Co., Kansas City (card check) about 50 employes involved chose UAW-CIO as bargaining agent; Dart Truck Co., Kansas City (card check), about 75 employes involved and UAW-CIO certified. UAW-CIO Rep. Pete Rinkenbaugh was in charge of both victories.

United Steelworkers of America announce the following election victories: Keystone Lamp Mfg. Corp., Slatington, Pa., 79 out of the 89 employes voted for CIO. USA Rep. Erwin Leppert and C. B. Newell were in charge; Mechanical Mold & Machine Co., Akron, Ohio (card-check), 115 out of the 118 employes designated the CIO; Continental Can Co., Inc. (plastic division), Cambridge, Ohio, CIO 271, AFL 80; Lennox Furnace Co., Syracuse, N. Y., USA-CIO shellacked the AFL by an almost three-to-one margin, as announced by USA Acting Dir. Jos. T. McNichols, Utica, N. Y.

Dir. McNichols also announces: Hynes & Cox Electric Corp., Albany, N. Y., CIO 25, against 7; plant protection employes at Aluminum Co. of America, New Kensington, Pa., CIO 63, Natl. Fed. Salaried Unions 1; Bridgewater Mfg. Co., Akron, Ohio, a 45-to-14 majority was rolled up by the USA-CIO; Acting USA Dist. Dir. R. G. Davidson reports: Warner Co., Cedar Hollow Lime Plant, Devault, Pa., CIO 132, AFL 3; Pennsylvania Lawn Mower Div. of American Chain & Cable Co., Camden, N. J., CIO 68, against 0; Jacobs Aircraft Engine Co., Pottstown, Pa., CIO 87, against 13.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Ralph W. Tillotson, Erie, Pa., advises: Sylvania Corp., Emporium, Pa., UERMWA-CIO 668, no union 513. UE Rep. Ruth Allen was in charge.

* * * *

W. A. Copeland, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Memphis, Tenn., reports: Firestone Retread plant, Memphis, CIO Rubber Workers 19, no union 0; Memphis Paper Co., CIO Paperworkers 57, no union 1; Tennessee Paper Co., CIO Paperworkers 31, no union 0. Rep. L. E. McGurty did a fine job in both cases. Pigeon-Thomas Iron Works, USA-CIO 55, AFL 8. USA Rep. Earl Crowder was in charge.

CIO Reg. Dir. C. H. Gillman, Atlanta, Ga., reports: Carmichael Furniture Co., Atlanta, CIO 47, no union 25. UFWA Rep. H. J. Pike was in charge. Swift Fertilizer Co., Atlanta, CIO Packinghouse Workers 22, no union 0. UPWA Rep. J. H. Hall was in charge.

Thos. J. Gallagher, Dir. Org. IUM&SWA-CIO, advises: Camden Forge Plant, Camden, N. J., CIO 325, no union 96; Bethlehem-San Pedro Plant (timekeepers div.), CIO 11, no union 2.

CIO Reg. Dir. Walter H. Harris, Chicago, advises: Intl. Harvester Co., Canton, Ill., CIO Farm Equipment & Metal Workers 95, against 64; Richardson Co., Melrose Park, Ill., CIO Rubber Workers 585, Co. Union 364, no union 27.

R. J. Davidson, CIO Reg. Dir., Cincinnati, reports: Loomis Broom & Mop Co., Covington, Ky., CIO 15, no union 9.

Frank J. Bender, CIO Reg. Dir., Baltimore, reports: Linen Thread Co., Baltimore, CIO Textile Workers 332, against 187. Textile Rep. Sam Firore was in charge, assisted by the CIO Regional Office.

E. L. Sandefur, CIO Reg. Dir., for the Carolinas, advises: American Agricultural Chemical Co., Henderson, N. C., CIO Stone & Allied Workers 15, no union 0. Rep. Sam H. Scott was in charge.

* * * *

CIO Reg. Dir. Geo. Craig, Philadelphia, reports following elect' victories: Prizer Painter Stove Works, Reading, Pa., USA-CIO against 24; Wiedmann Machine Co., Philadelphia, UERMWA-CIO 46, against 41; Edwin & Lewis Bry, Inc., Norristown, Pa., CIO Textile Workers 182, against 87; Independent Pier Co., Philadelphia, CIO Natl. Maritime Union 6, Dist. 50 received 5; Reilly, Whiteman & Walton Co., Conshohocken, CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Wkrs., 19, against 8; New Jersey Wood Finishing Co., Woodridge, N. J., CIO Marine & Shipbldg. Wkrs., 48, AFL 29.

Helen Kingery, Dir. Pub. UOPWA-CIO, advises: YWCA National Board, N. Y. (clerical workers), voted 96 to 28 for CIO; RKO Service (service & distribution branch), CIO 141, against 101.

CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Carmichael, Boston, announces: Peter Gray Corp., Cambridge, Mass., USA-CIO 91, no union 7. Organizational activities were in charge of CIO Rep. Robert W. Davis.

Nat Spero, Reg. Dir. UERMWA-CIO, reports following election victories: Hurley Machine Co., Chicago, 833 workers in bargaining unit; Singer Mfg. Co., Elizabethport, N. J., 385 employes in bargaining unit; Inland Container Corp., Evansville, Ind., 116 workers in bargaining unit; G. E. Mahoning Glass Works, Niles, Ohio, 139 workers in bargaining unit; Paasch Air Brush, Chicago, 162 in bargaining unit, and Tudor Industries, Inc., Scranton, Pa., 200 workers in bargaining unit. CIO Reg. Dir. Jos. Walsh and his staff assisted materially in the Tudor Industries election victory.

TO PUT IT BRIEFLY

ABOUT 15,000 shop craft workers on the Pennsylvania Railroad, members of the CIO United Railroad Workers, voted to reject a company offer of 16c hourly increase and some changes in working rules, A. B. Martin, national director of the union, announced last week in Chicago. The union is asking a $2.50 daily increase.

A roar of protest that may lead to government questioning of American Red Cross labor policy was aroused last week when the St. Louis ARC chapter fired 11 staff members for union activity. The 11 are members of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers.

CIO United Steelworkers Local 2103 in Charleston, W. Va., won a union shop and 18½c an hour increase after a strike against the Kelly Axe Co. The local adopted a resolution praising the aid of USA representatives.

SHIPYARDS KICK IN WITH 18c

A strike of 45,000 workers in nine Bethlehem Steel east coast shipyards was narrowly averted last week as the company agreed to a master contract with the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers granting an 18c hourly wage increase.

Issue of a master agreement was won by the union with 14,000 workers at the Fore River yard in Quincy, Mass., brought under the contract for the first time. Union demand that the 18c increase be retroactive to Dec. 4 was won at Fore River, Baltimore, Fairfield and Staten Island yards, which work on government contracts.

Retroactivity at the other yards, where question of who would pay the back wages is still undetermined, is to March 11 with the union's claim for full back pay reserved without prejudice.

A union spokesman said procedure on obtaining the full claim was being worked out and expressed confidence that the Dec. 4 date would be won for all the workers.

Other highlights of the agreement, which runs to June 23, 1947, are:

Maintenance of membership and checkoff are retained; automatic upgrading; supervisory employes are brought under the contract; greatly strengthened seniority provisions; payment of a 50% premium to workers doing burning or welding; improved grievance procedure; improved division of work and full vacations for 1945 to veterans who returned to work between Oct. 1 and Dec. 31, 1945.

Outstanding feature is company agreement to pay retroactive wages to June 23, 1943, for all new classifications set up as a result of War Labor Board directives. Cost of this provision, which includes workers who have been laid off, is incalculable, a union spokesman said.

The contract, approved by the union's Bethlehem-Atlantic coast committee, goes to local unions for ratification. Negotiations are still underway with the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. in Kearny, N. J., Maryland Drydock and Defoe Shipyard in Maryland and the Alabama Drydock Co., where strike notices have been filed.

BIG HAUL

Virginia textile workers spearheaded a "pay your polltax" drive that brought close to a 1,000 new voters on voting rolls.

Members of the CIO Textile Workers Union local 371 at the Front Royal, Va., rayon mill, developed a transportation pool that hauled workers and their families from their homes to the county seat to register and pay the $1.50 voting tax.

Now the textile union is planning a drive to make those CIO-PAC votes count.

35,000 IN STEEL STILL OUT

Close to 35,000 steel workers and iron ore miners, members of the CIO United Steelworkers, were matching the stubbornness of 65 fabrication and iron ore companies who last week were still holding out on the workers' demands for 18½c raises.

Out since January 21, about 00 iron ore miners in Northern chigan received renewed assurces of "moral and financial support" from USA Pres. Philip Murray after iron ore companies balked at the raise in negotiations last week.

Negotiations are still continuing at large fabricating plants in Beloit, Wis., and Buffalo, N. Y.

Only one basic steel producer is still holding out.

AID CANNERY PICKETS

The all-CIO nature of the CIO cannery workers fight against management lockout coordinated with AFL Teamster goon terror, was emphasized last week in Northern California.

Picket lines of the locked out workers around the Richmond-Chase cannery in Stockton and the Libby-McNeil plant in Sacramento were swelled by members of other CIO unions in the area.

Meanwhile donations and pledges from sister-CIO locals and independent unions were coming to the CIO Food, Tobacco Workers.

Contributions were from ILWU Warehousemen's Local 17, CIO American Communications Association locals, Steelworkers unions and Brewery Workers unions.

FTA pickets were resisting Teamster goon attacks at the Libby-McNeil plant.

ASK SECURITY IN NAVY YARDS

MASS layoffs in naval shipyards brought 700 CIO, AFL and independent union delegates to Congress this week to present a united program on navy yard employes' security.

In the delegation were the CIO United Public Workers, CIO Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians, independent and AFL groups from navy yards in Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Norfolk, Charleston, S. C., and Washington.

Visits to Congressmen stressed a four-point program:

1. Increase in the naval appropriation for 1947 to enable the yards to do adequate maintenance work on naval vessels.

2. Passage of the Magnuson-DeLacy seniority bill, ending superseniority practices by establishing veteran seniority at double time for war service, triple time for wounded veterans.

3. Passage of the Green-Forand bill allowing retirement on pension after 25 years' service.

4. Inclusion of federal employes in the unemployment compensation program.

The union members also spoke for legislation to replace the efficiency rating system with a seniority system and urged steps to end pitting veterans against non-veterans.

MMSW PRESSES DEMANDS

DELEGATES of 30,000 striking members of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers expressed agreement with the main features of a government fact-finding board's recommendations for ending their 3-month walkout but criticized several aspects of the report as "unrealistic in view of the intense nature of the strike struggle now going on."

Delegates last week voted that the union insist on the findings being applied as follows:

1. The 18½c increase must take effect as soon as the strikers return to work.

2. Increase in the Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, mining area must be retroactive to May 1.

3. In those plants not returned to the 40-hour week, 50% of the boost must be retroactive. In cases of interim wage negotiations, retroactivity must date to the day the wage demand was made or the date the former contract expired.

To back up these demands, the union said, it will, if necessary, "intensify its strike effort with every resource at its disposal and will even further extend the scope of its strike program to embrace other major sections of the industry not now involved."

Delegates represented workers on strike against American Smelting & Refining Co., Phelps Dodge, Kennecott and U. S. Smelting Mining & Refining, as well as miners in the Coeur d'Alene district.

SHAPE FARMER-LABOR FRONT

A COMMON front between farmers and industrial workers to restore the long lost liberalism of the midwest was proposed at a two-day conference of workers and farmers last week.

Held in Des Moines, Iowa, in the heart of the corn belt, the conference was attended by CIO Packinghouse Workers' delegates from locals in Iowa, Nebraska and Colorado and representatives of the National Farmer's Union.

Pres. Lewis J. Clark of the CIO meat packers, said "the welfare of the city worker is irrevocably linked with the welfare of the farmer. A coalition of these two groups expressed in political action would result in a truly democratic liberalism which would speak for the common man from all occupations."

The political action program proposed by the conference calls for the formation of Farmer-Labor Community Councils in all counties and congressional districts. Councils will include members from local labor unions, farm organizations, local business men and individuals.

This Disney creature cuts a mean towel to Benny Goodman's bobby-sockeroo tunes in the jazz interlude of "Make Mine Music."

PLAYING AROUND

GILDA—Rita Hayworth throws her charms and songs around South America in this lavish production of murder and intrigue. Glenn Ford and George Macready turn in excellent performances.

A STOLEN LIFE—The sum of the parts doesn't equal the whole as Bette Davis portrays twin sisters in her latest. Kate, the good one, and Pat, the woman of the world, vie for Glenn Ford.

THE KID FROM BROOKLYN—Remarkable Danny Kaye, as Burleigh Sullivan, the battling milkman, repeats his fine comedy routines in Harold Lloyd's old role.

THE VIRGINIAN — The old Wild-West formula with too much goo and not enough action. Virginian Joel McCrea does everything expected of a sheriff, including getting shot at, wounded and wooed.

A YANK IN LONDON—A slow-paced comedy designed to cement Anglo-American friendship. An American flyer and a British major love the same gal, but international amity wins out in the end.

HER KIND OF MAN—A pictorial hangover from bootlegging days. Tough Zachary Scott blasts his way to the ranks of the top-notch racketeers, with sweet-singing Janis Paige as his moll.

BEDLAM—A better than usual horror picture that isn't far off base in describing mental institutions, 18th century and modern. Karloff continues as ace bogeyman of the B movies even if he was sued for divorce recently on the grounds of "cruelty."

IN OLD SACRAMENTO—An exciting Western with Wild Bill Elliott (Red Ryder of the serials) as slick with cards as with guns. Sparked by Lionel Stander, Connie Moore and Ruth Donnelly.

THE GREEN YEARS—The tender story of an Irish lad brought up in a Scottish household. The boy, Dean Stockwell, and his grandfather, Charles Coburn, win out over the family of misfits.

Despite the gown, Rita Hayworth gives no one the cold shoulder in "Gilda."

Flicker Front

SEX, MUSIC AND TYRANTS

THERE are increasing numbers of movie-goers who wail to the heavens that movies produced for the American public are about as good as management's contract proposals. The recent drop in theatre attendance proves that the wails have reverberated to the box office.

But fortunately, or perhaps unfortunately, I am a veteran of the GI school that went to the movies, come hell or an air raid. The only interference in our movie schedule overseas was (1) lack of a film, any kind (2) five-minute intermissions to change reels and (3) one hell of a battle.

Under those conditions, one could not help but develop a rugged attitude towards movies. We saw pictures that would not get third position on a double feature program. Except for rare occasions, my shipmates forgot about MGM, Columbia, Warners, RKO and Paramount. Monogram, Republic, PRC (ugh), pictures that are second features to the major studios' Grade C productions, were the major proportion of GI entertainment.

We developed immunity to the point where any cowboy-chases-Indian or girl-chases-guy picture seemed enjoyable. Call it escape if you will, but the fact is that I acquired enough of the essential "what the hell attitude" to stand the present crop of movies hitting the neighborhood houses.

In "The Postman Always Rings Twice," Lana Turner leads off with a sexy, if not very good, portrayal of a tough hash-slinger who connives to murder her husband so she can marry a stumble-bum tramp. John Garfield's performance as the home-breaker and Hume Cronyn's acting as the cynical criminal attorney give the picture the same savage and lusty quality that characterized James M. Cain's book. It's not for Sunday School audiences.

On the other side of the fence is Walt Disney's new ten-in-one bargain, "Make Mine Music." It will delight kids from six to sixty, if they are Disney fans and like his imaginative wanderings into fantasy with colored crayons and fancy-free music.

Willie the Whale steals the show with renditions from "shortenin' bread" to Wagner. Nelson Eddy, who sings Willie's role, never looked better on the screen. Peter, his silly duck, Sonja, and his other friends of the forest caper entertainingly as Sterling Holloway relates Prokofieff's fable, "Peter and the Wolf." "The Martins and the Coys," "Casey at the Bat," and "Johnny Fedora" are amusing cartoons. For the hot-lick fans, Benny Goodman gives out in "After You've Gone."

It's too bad some of those Hollywood scouts, who are always discovering starlettes behind drug store counters, cannot uncover good stories about tyrants and oppressors in America this day and age without having to revert to ancient history. Any union man south of the Mason-Dixon line (and a good many North of it) can feed them enough stories for a full-length picture once a week.

A case in point is Columbia's "Bandit Of Sherwood Forest." Robin Hood has aged a bit, acquired a son and his band still fights the people's oppressors. Cornel Wilde, as Robert, the son of Robin Hood, steps into the old man's shoes, getting the bad men as well as Anita Louise. Wielding a flashing blade, Wilde manages to save the little King and restore peace to beautiful Southern Cal.—oops, Sherwood Forest.

On the serious side, RKO presents "From This Day Forward," which deals with the effects of hunger and unemployment on love and marriage. As war vet Bill Cummings fills out a USES form for a job, the picture flashes back to the troubles he and his wife had in the periods of lay-offs. In true Hollywood style, fate always steps in to give them a helping hand and love conquers all.

Fate doesn't deal so kindly, however, with Vincent Price, the aristocratic, half-mad landlord of Hudson Valley where "Dragonwyck" had its locale a hundred years ago. His tenant farmers revolt against unjust taxation, exorbitant rentals and his peonage system. Unfortunately, this concession by Hollywood to the public's desire for social significance is deadened by romantic and psychological melodramatics. Pretty Gene Tierney, as the country girl who marries the rich patroon, does a better acting job than usual. But it is not good enough to save the picture from being one of those "there's nothing else doing, let's see it" productions.

A comedy that's as light as the head on a third beer is "So Goes My Love." Don Ameche is back at inventing, with Myrna Loy providing domesticity. This time Ameche is Hiram Maxim, who invented everything from a curling iron to a machine gun, but the picture tries so hard at being a domestic comedy that you hardly find it out.

George Weissman.

Tramp mechanic, John Garfield, prepares to put Lana Turner's husband (Cecil Kellaway) out of the way. The District Attorney later builds up enough evidence to put Garfield away in "The Postman Always Rings Twice."

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and scenes mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

BELIEVING HIS MEN ARE STILL HOLDING MICKEY BARRY PRISONER—AND PLANNING TO KILL HIM—STEVE DENTON ACCUSES THE UNION OF THE CRIME WHICH HE HIMSELF HAS ORGANIZED! BUT JIM HAS FREED MICKEY..AND STARTLED DENTON WHEN HE CHALLENGES HIM TO—

WHY DON'T YOU ASK MICKEY BARRY TO TELL US WHO PLANNED TO KILL HIM ?

I DON'T HAVE TO BE ASKED! I'VE BEEN WORKING A LONG TIME TO CRACK THIS ATTEMPT TO BREAK UP OUR UNION...

THE FLOOR'S ALL YOURS, MICKEY!

WHEN I GOT MY ARMY DISCHARGE AND WENT BACK TO MY OLD JOB... THE FIRST THING THAT HAPPENED WAS THAT A STOOL-PIGEON ASKED ME HOW I FELT ABOUT UNIONS...

WELL, WHILE WE WERE FIGHTING A WAR.. THE WORKERS BACK HOME TOOK A BEATING WORKING LONG HOURS .. TRYING TO MEET HIGHER PRICES WITHOUT ANY REAL WAGE RAISES ..

...AND AT THE SAME TIME PROTECTING THE JOBS AND SECURITY OF THE BOYS IN THE ARMY SO THAT WE WOULD NOT HAVE TO SELL APPLES ON STREET CORNERS AFTER WE CAME HOME FROM THE WAR...

AND A RAT HAS THE NERVE TO COME UP AND ASK HOW I FELT ABOUT UNIONS! I FOUND OUT SOMEBODY WAS ORGANIZING A GROUP TO BREAK OUR UNION... AND I MADE UP MY MIND TO FIND OUT WHO WAS THE BRAINS BEHIND THEM...

I FOUND OUT, ALL RIGHT. THERE'S THE RAT! AND WHEN I THREATENED TO EXPOSE HIM .. HIS THUGS GRABBED ME. STEVE DENTON PLANNED TO KILL ME AND HAVE THE UNION BLAMED FOR IT!

GET THAT RAT!

DON'T LET HIM OUT!

TURN HIM OVER TO THE COPS!

STAND BACK, EVERYBODY! I HAVE A CHARGE OF ATTEMPTED MURDER AGAINST ME ALREADY—SO I WON'T STOP AT KILLING THE FIRST ONE WHO TRIES TO STOP ME!

I'M GETTING OUT OF HERE AND NOBODY—

NO YOU'RE NOT! I WON'T LET YOU PASS!

Orbit Feature Service, Inc.

72

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Silly Talk

Pres. William Green of the AFL occasionally makes a little sense when he speaks in public. But that wasn't the case when Green addressed the Pennsylvania AFL convention last week and spun out a curious theory on why Congress sometimes behaves as badly as it does.

The Green theory is this: the coalition of reactionary Democrats and Republicans "is for anything the CIO is against and it is against anything the CIO is for."

That's not particularly true.

Even if it were, the answer that would occur to most labor people and progressives is to break up the coalition by defeating its members of reelection. But Green wants to do things the hard way—by breaking up the CIO.

The CIO has no intention of committing suicide to test his silly theory. But if such advice were to be followed, the happiest people in Washington would be the members of the reactionary coalition, who always tend to side with employers against unions, be they CIO or AFL.

PAC Victory

Backed by CIO-PAC endorsement and votes, James E. Folsom appeared likely this week to be Alabama's next governor. In the May 7 primaries he defeated Lt. Gov. Handy Ellis in the race for governor, but a run-off primary between the two seemed likely as a result of Folsom's failure to corral a majority of the vote.

Another feature of the Alabama primary balloting was the unsuccessful effort of Joe Starnes, one-time member of the Dies Committee, to return to the House of Representatives. Defeated two years ago, Starnes lost in his comeback try to Albert Rains, who had CIO-PAC endorsement.

Help Food Workers

Several hundred thousand packing and food processing workers have been excluded from the full protection of the Wage-Hour Act, thanks to high-pressure lobbying by big corporations.

One clause bars both wage and overtime provisions to workers employed "in the area of production"—an area which nobody yet has been able to define. Other exemptions bar or limit overtime provisions to workers in "first processing" units and in seasonal industries, and workers in the fish canning industry get no protection at all.

The Pepper-Hook 65c Minimum Wage Bill originally removed all but the seasonal exemptions. The Senate put them all back into the bill.

Write your Congressman and members of the House Labor Committee. Tell them you want the House to pass the bill (S 1349) without exemptions and without the Pace inflation rider.

Assistance for the Needy

CIO support to the Public Welfare Act of 1946 (H.R. 5686) was pledged this week in order that "no person in the country need go hungry for want of public aid."

In a statement submitted by Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey in behalf of Chairman Van Bittner of the CIO Social Security Committee, the House Ways and Means Committee was told that labor fully supports passage of the bill pending the adoption of a well-rounded security and assistance program.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Forand (D, RI), would provide federal help to the states in taking care of physically handicapped persons, people unsuited for employment, and families whose bread-winner is temporarily ill.

In taking its stand, CIO made clear that the best answer to the whole problem would be passage of S. 1050, the Wagner-Murray-Dingell social security bill. In that measure every aspect of protection is provided for.

However, "the CIO reluctantly concludes that the protection which S. 1050 would afford will not be forthcoming immediately. Congress has not seen fit to hasten the passage of this much-needed legislation."

Passage of H.R. 5686, Bittner's statement added, is a vote for care of people otherwise neglected, and would recognize that the present system of state, or state and federal assistance "for the needy, aged, the blind and for dependent children, is inadequate."

Present federal contributions for assistance to the blind or the aged reach a maximum of $20 a month, but the amount varies widely from state to state.

The bill, Bittner pointed out, is squarely in line with the platforms of the Republican and Democratic parties in 1944. It's time for them both to act.

Do It Today!

Wire or write your Congressmen and Senators:

1. To vote for price control without amendments.
2. To vote against ANY anti-labor bill.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price Control HR 6042	Extends price control act to June 1947.	Passed by House with flock of death-dealing amendments; Senate Banking Committee now conducting hearings.	Wire your Senators and members of Banking Committee to pass bill without amendments. Strong action is needed to save OPA and price control.
Patman Housing Bill HR 4761	Provides basis for big housing program for vets.	In Senate-House Conference Committee. $400 million subsidy for materials approved.	Wire Senators, Congressmen to vote for bill.
Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill S 1592	Provides long range housing and slum clearance program.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee hearings to open soon.	Send wires to your Congressman and members of House Banking Committee. to support this bill.
Minimum Wage S 1349	Lifts minimum pay to 65c. Senate added inflationary Pace rider, despite Pres. Truman's threat to veto, and thus kill bill.	Passed by Senate; now ready for House Labor Committee.	Ask Representatives to kill Pace rider and add coverage for seamen, retail, food and communications workers.
Wagner-Murray-Dingell Health Bill S 1606	Establishes national health program aimed at providing adequate low - cost medical service.	Hearings being conducted by Senate Labor Committee.	Write your Senator that you want bill passed.
Case Bill HR 4908	Would harass unions with many new restrictions and anti-labor devices.	Passed by House; Senate may vote this week.	Wire your Senators that you don't want the Case bill in any form or any other anti-labor bill.

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

ANTI-LABOR BILLS: Polltaxers from the south and reactionaries from the north are taking advantage of the coal strike to push through labor legislation that may effect every union in the country.

The Case bill (HR 4908), which has been awaiting action by the Senate for several weeks, will probably come up for action in the next few days if the conservative alliance can stampede the rest of the upper house.

In the House, Rep. Smith (D, Va.), an old foe of labor from way back, has filed one bill that would outlaw royalty payments for welfare programs, and another polltaxer from Virginia, Rep. Robertson, has taken similar action.

All these bills are badly conceived and dangerous to the basic principles of free collective bargaining. Even if you've already written your Congressmen and Senators, telegraph them again that you don't want passage of the Case bill or any other anti-labor bill in any form whatever.

Without a mass protest from labor, the Congressional conservatives may slip in a damaging rabbit punch.

SQUEEZE PLAY? Your letters and wires can avert a possible hush-hush maneuver to deny Wagner Act benefits to several hundred thousand packing and food processing workers.

A year ago, some foes of labor almost succeeded in preventing the Natl. Labor Relations Board from using any of its appropriation for cases involving agricultural or food workers. Their plan failed then—but it may succeed again unless unions are alert to the danger.

The NLRB appropriation is included in the Labor & Federal Security Appropriation Bill, now being studied by the Labor & Federal Security sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee. The bill is being studied behind closed doors.

If the maneuver succeeds, it would bar Wagner Act benefits to some 225,000 fruit and cannery workers, as well as employes of cotton gins, packing sheds, etc. And it would be an opening wedge for future limitations on the NLRB's jurisdiction.

Sent a letter or wire today to members of the sub-committee and demand that they put no strings on the NLRB appropriation.

Members of the committee are Reps. Tarver (D, Ga.); Hare (D, S.C.); Rooney (D, N. Y.); Neely (D, W. Va.); Engel (R, Mich.); Keefe (R, Wis.); and Anderson (R, Minn.)

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President

NATHAN COWAN, Chairman

ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

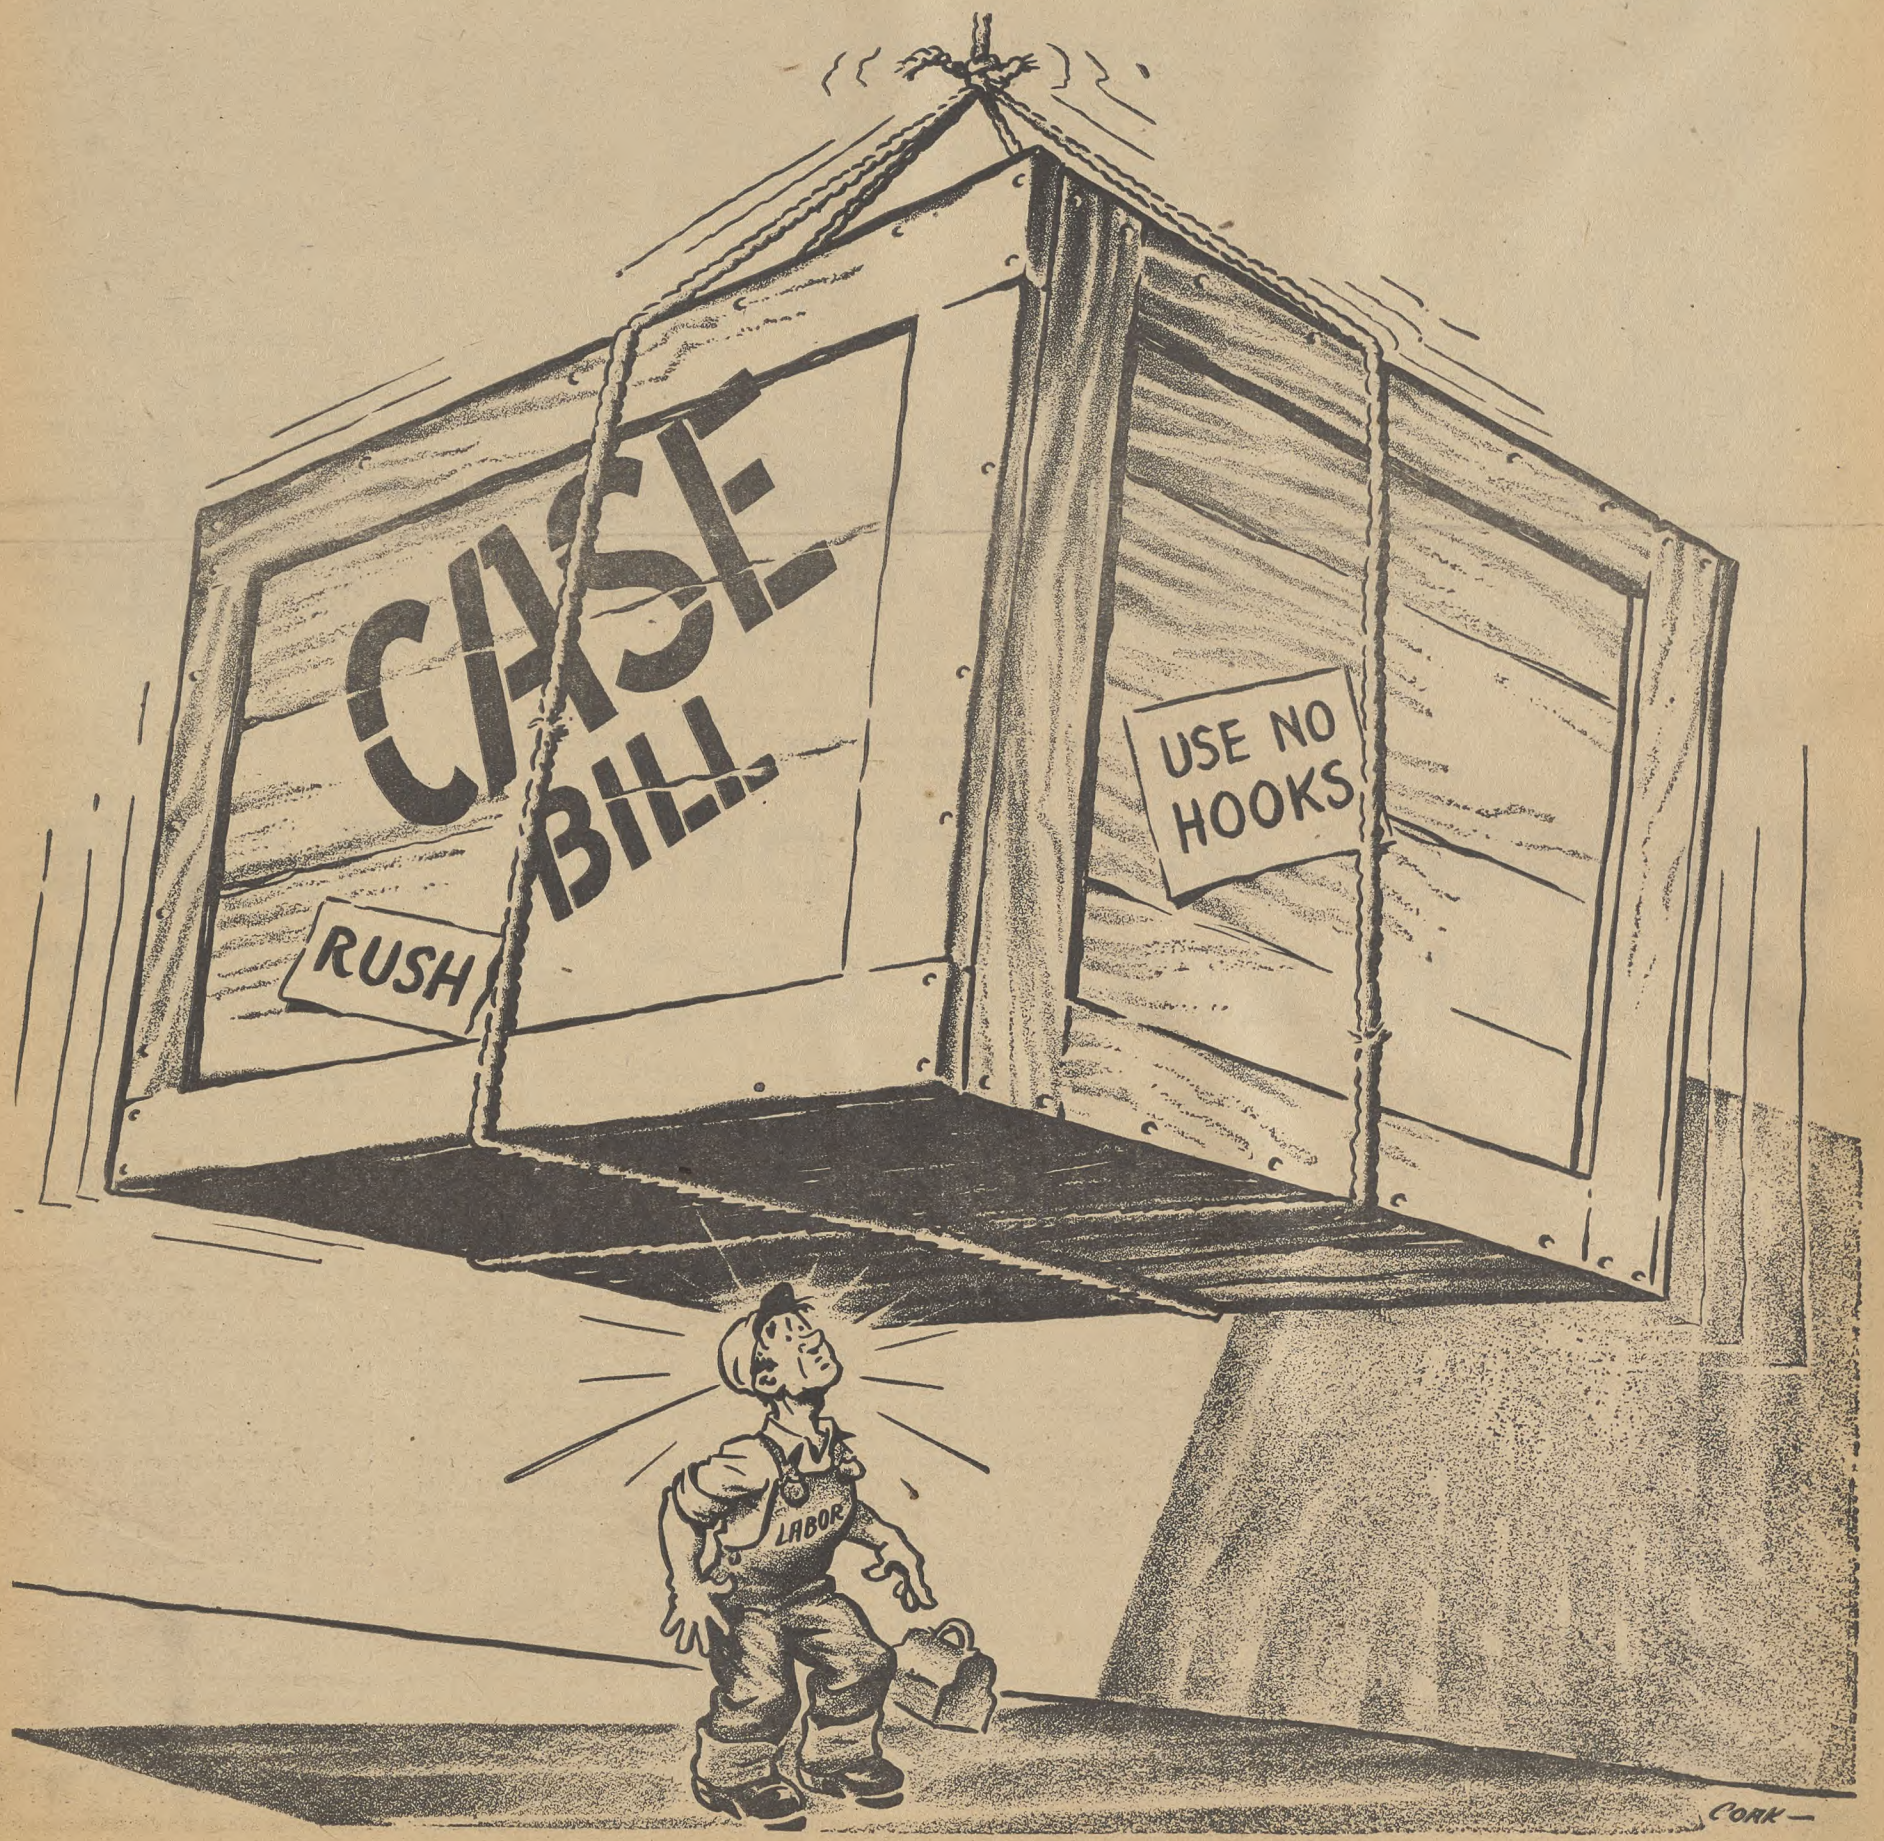
5 Cents A COPY

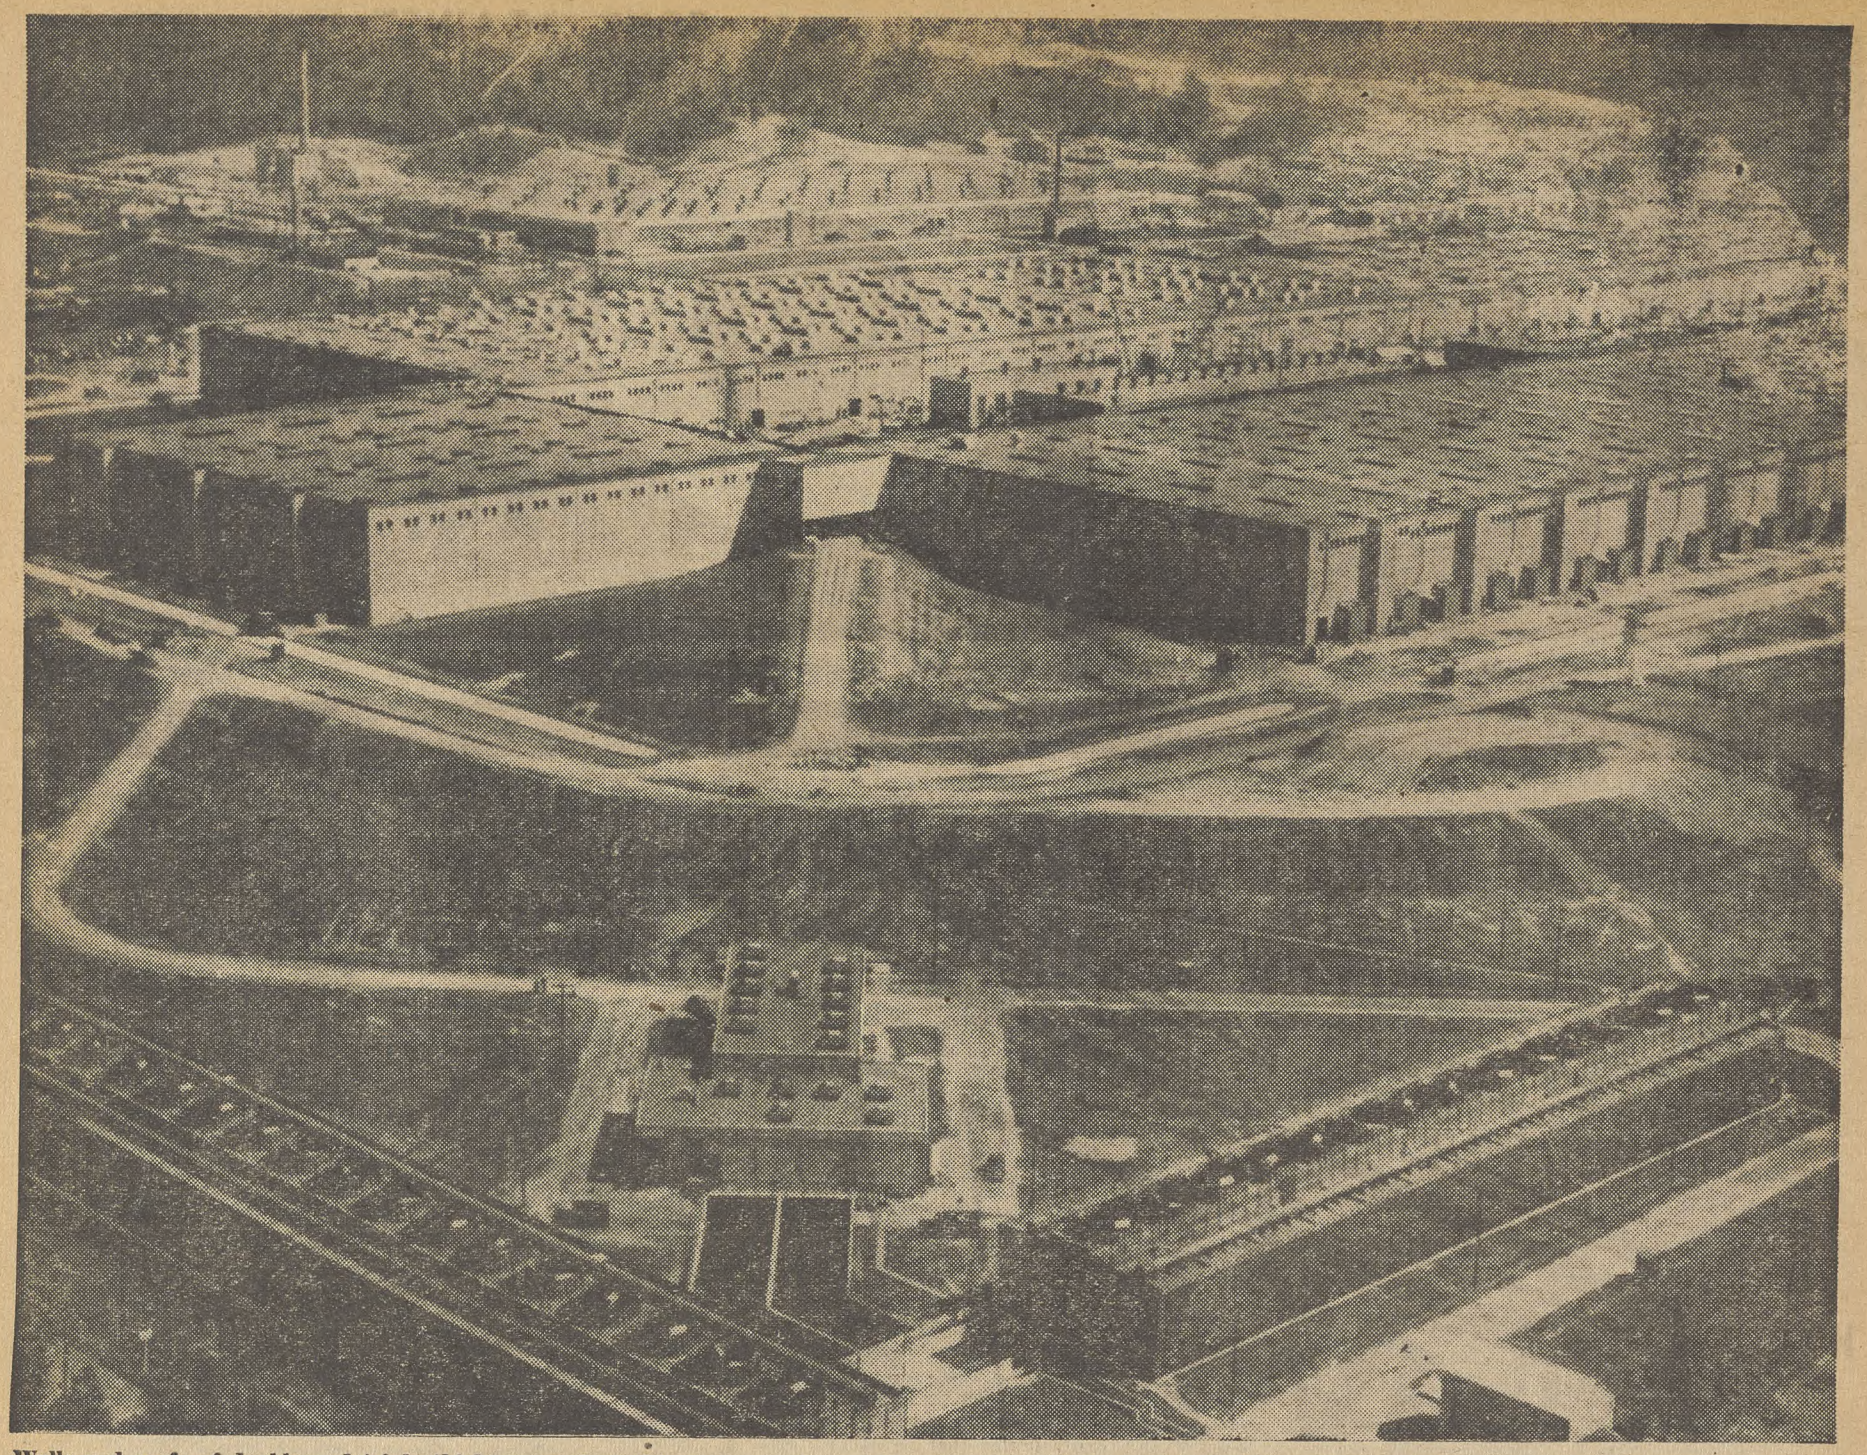
Vol. 9, No. 21

Copyright, 1946 The CIO NEWS
$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY—$1.50 IN CANADA

May 20, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS





Walls and roofs of double and triple thickness enclose this major section of the atomic bomb plant at Oak Ridge, Tenn., where the CIO is now concentrating its first organizing drive in its current southern organizing campaign. Spaced around a 59,000-acre government reservation are 424 other buildings, some larger than the one shown above. Close to 40,000 workers are employed at the three plants comprising the Clinton Engineer Works. The size of the buildings can be compared to the size of the autos seen on the roads to the left, and in the center of the photo. (U. S. Army Signal Corps photo.)

CIO ORGANIZING DRIVE STARTS AT OAK RIDGE ATOM PLANT

By MEL FISKE

OAK RIDGE, Tenn., the city that grew as if by magic to produce the even greater magic of the atomic bomb, is now the first major concentration point in the CIO's southern organizing campaign.

The atomic workers themselves came to the CIO. They wrote and talked to Tennessee CIO leaders before the drive was planned and set into motion by Van A. Bittner, director of the CIO's southern campaign.

A corps of CIO organizers, veterans of both World War II and other CIO organizing drives, are already in the city, operating from 128 Galesburg St., West Village, Oak Ridge.

Hidden among the hills and hollows of Tennessee, the $2 billion atomic bomb project, owned and operated by the government, harnessed atomic energy into the most devastating weapon in history.

The giant project, employing more than 40,000 workers, is in the heart of the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) country, 20 miles from Norris Dam.

More than 425 thickly-walled buildings are spaced around the 59,000-acre government reservation. In those buildings, atomic energy is drawn from raw materials by three different methods.

In those buildings, too the workers learned that their problems are no different from the problems of other workers. They came to the CIO when they found differences in pay rates for the same work and when they began to see that they had no security, no seniority, no real grievance machinery, no voice in their jobs.

They approached CIO Regional Director Paul Christopher and C. W. Danenburg, executive board members of the CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, both of Chattanooga. The two CIO representatives are now directing the drive.

Martin Wagner, president of the CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, said the atomic workers "are right in coming to an honest, democratic union to gain the security and good wages and working conditions they so sorely need."

Oak Ridge is the residential center for the 40,000 atomic workers. In three years it became the fifth largest city in the state.

Workers from every state in the union live in the trailers, homes, dormitories and barracks that make up the city. Schools, shopping centers, a hospital, library, theatres, recreation centers and dental clinic were built by the government as the project went up.

The city is the administrative center of the Clinton Engineer Works, the Tennessee sub-division of the Manhattan Engineering District, which also includes the 631-square-mile Hanford Engineer Works near Pasco, Washington.

The Clinton Works are bounded on three sides by the tortuously-winding Clinch River. The site was selected late in 1942 for its accessibility to power and water, its remoteness from the Coast and its isolation.

During the war, while construction on the project was going on around the clock, the area was isolated even more.

The Army clamped down a tight security lid and very few people outside of that immediate section of the South knew anything about the feverish construction then in progress.

When the first bomb hit and reverberated around the world, the atomic workers at Oak Ridge first learned what they had been producing. The reasons behind the secrecy, the elaborate security system, and the fantastically thickened walls and roofs in every building on the atomic project became apparent.

Proud of the part they played in producing the weapon that brought a swift end to the war, the atomic workers rejoiced with all believers in democracy in the death of the third member of the fascist axis.

But with the war's end, it also became apparent to the workers that their rights within the giant plants were being reduced almost as swiftly as the atomic bomb had reduced the two Japanese cities.

Workers began to get fired without cause. They couldn't get any reasons or explanations for the firings. They had no one to appeal to. Hundreds of men were laid-off without any regard to seniority and length of service in the works.

After comparing pay envelopes, they also learned that men working side by side on the same machines were not getting the same pay. In one building, some workers earned 72c an hour and other workers on the same machines made $1.02 an hour. In other buildings, the wage range was just as great.

Calling the Oak Ridge organizing campaign "the most important single drive in the South," CIO Regional Director Christopher said "there is no doubt about the CIO's ability to complete the organization of the atomic workers.

"After all," he added, "they wanted the CIO in the first place."

HATE-LABOR BILLS UP FOR ACTION!

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

IT WAS hate-labor week in Washington. In the halls of Congress and in some government offices, every man with a pet idea for tying chains on American labor, trotted out his proposals for the benefit of press and radio.

The forces of progressive thought were mobilizing throughout the country against this outburst of reaction. Whether they can move quickly enough will probably be determined during the coming week when the Case Bill and other pieces of anti-union legislation are apt to come up for vote.

Immediate butt of the anti-union onslaught was the coal strike, but the bills and the statements revealed a deep hatred for every type and form of labor organization.

In the Senate, the Case bill—passed by the House several months ago—was called up for debate. The bill, as ushered out of the Senate Labor Committee, calls only for creation of a national mediation authority and for restrictions on certain types of picketing against farmers. But a line-up of amendments is on the docket, and they contain a dozen varieties of weapons for strangling labor unions.

Spearheads of the Senate fight against labor are Joseph Ball (R. Minn.)—who votes reactionary and describes himself as a "new type of liberal"—and two old stand-by anti-union wheelhorses, Robert Taft (R. O.) and Harry Byrd (D. Va.) Their first propaganda attack was to scream "filibuster" because opponents of the bill had control of the debate.

Against this reactionary junta in the Senate, Senators Claude Pepper (D. Fla.), Glenn Taylor (D. Ida.) and James Murray (D. Mont.) did yeoman service in warning that passage of the amendments would be a major body-blow at American industrial democracy.

In the House, Rep. Howard Smith (D. Va.) and Rep. A. W. Robertson (D. Va.) pooled their bills to illegalize the development of royalty plans as a means of financing health and welfare programs. Then, in a move that showed their desire to fight labor's demands, they switched the bill to outlaw health and welfare programs based on payroll taxes. Such programs have been adopted in the past by a number of CIO and AFL unions—among them the clothing workers, the electrical and radio workers, the paper workers and a dozen others.

Off Capitol Hill, meanwhile, John Small—head of the Civilion Production Administration—tossed in his 25c worth of opinion with a suggestion that all strikes, for whatever reason, be outlawed for six months.

Three House members—Rep. Frank Hook (D. Mich), Augustine Kelley (D. Pa.) and Vito Marcantonio (ALP N. Y.)—immediately called for Small's removal from office.

But most of the fireworks took place in the Senate, where Pepper accused the conservative bloc of seeking "to undermine and emasculate the power of labor unions." He referred to the proposed amendments to the Case bill, and in particular to the offering of Sen. Byrd of Virginia.

The Byrd amendment would flatly outlaw payment by employers of union-administered health and welfare funds, and carries a $10,000 fine and six-month jail term as punishment for violation.

In their haste to attack the coal union leadership, the Senate is "hitting not only hundreds of thousands but millions of the honest and patriotic working men and women of America," Pepper declared. He pointed out that Byrd offered his amendment with little study of the situation and even less knowledge of it.

"No," Pepper concluded, "the pending amendment is not really aimed at the protection of the employes against the misuse of a health fund.

"The purpose of it is to emasculate the power of labor unions in the U.S.A. because there are some Senators, as there are employers, who want the workingman to come, not as a dignified equal to demand his due, not as an American to insist upon his rights, not as a citizen of the U.S., to say to them, 'I want what the Bible says I am entitled to—the laborer's hire.'

"No, Mr. President, some Senators and some employers and some trade associations would really prefer that he come groveling like a slave upon his hands and knees to take the pittance he can get from the employer's beneficence."

WIRE TODAY

Today—right now—send a wire to your Senators demanding defeat of the Case Bill and all other anti-union bills.

If these bills pass, the power of your union to fight your battles against rich corporations will be severely limited.

Address your Senators at Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

There's not a minute to lose!

HOW THEY PLAN TO DO THE JOB

Here's the history of the Case bill (HR. 4908):

It was introduced in the House by Rep. Francis Case (R, N. Dak.) and was passed early this year by a 258-114 vote.

It is now up for debate and possible vote in the Senate. Here's what the House version of the bill would do, according to a CIO Legal Dept. analysis:

1. Makes illegal strikes for up to 35 days of so-called "cooling off" period.

2. Makes illegal any form of assistance to a strike.

3. Makes illegal any picketing with use of so-called "force and violence"—and the local police know how to interpret that one.

4. Makes illegal types of boycots now within the law.

5. Repeals, to all practical purposes, the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction law.

6. Cuts severely the realm of Wagner Act protection of striking workers.

7. Denies Wagner Act protection not only to supervisory employes but to large groups of clerical workers.

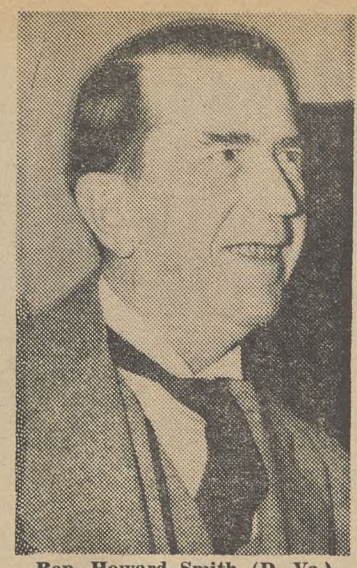
8. Makes employes and unions subject to "breach of contract" suits in the federal courts, although it says nothing about employers who have flouted all sorts of governmental labor directives.

The Senate Labor Committee removed most of these bad amendments and suggested instead a mediation set-up. But anti-labor Senators want the House version of the bill—plus a clause suggested by Sen. Byrd of Virginia, to outlaw employer contributions, through any means at all, for union-conducted health, insurance or social-welfare funds.

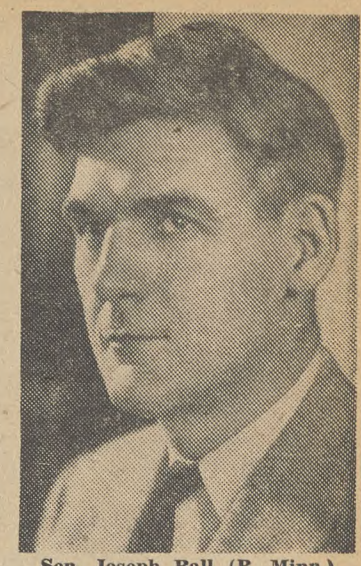
Two Vets Lobby Against Case Bill

Corp. Walter Bernstein and Pfc. Don Murray, each of whom lost a leg fighting to rid the world of fascism, are two veterans who believe that unions should not be hamstrung in the U. S. as they were in Germany. Matching their actions to their beliefs, they came to Washington May 27 from the Thomas M. England Hospital, Atlantic City, to tell Senators why they should oppose the Case Bill.

FOUR AGAINST THE PEOPLE



Rep. Howard Smith (D. Va.)



Sen. Joseph Ball (R. Minn.)

Rep. Francis Case (R. S. D.)

Sen. R. A. Taft (R. O.)

CIO RALLIES UNIONS TO FIGHT ANTI-LABOR LAW HYSTERIA

CIO moved quickly last week to avert the threat of hate-ridden anti-union legislation.

Shortly after the Case bill was given a place on the Senate debate schedule, leaders of the CIO called for quick protest from unions throughout the nation. In telegrams to industrial union councils and regional officers, John Brophy, council director, and Allan S. Haywood, organization director, called upon every CIO union to voice labor's sentiments to members of Congress as quickly as possible, and to call for action by friends of labor in each community.

From Atlantic City, N. J., Pres. Philip Murray and Sec.-Treas. David McDonald of the United Steelworkers sent wires to Senate leaders of the two parties warning against their being "stampeded into hasty and ill-conceived legislation."

"Congress has had previous ill-fated experience with legislating anti-labor laws in haste and leaving the country to repent at leisure," the wire said, in a reference to the Smith-Connally act.

In Washington, CIO Legislative Representative Nathan Cowan called on Congress to reject proposed anti-labor laws "as injurious to the entire fabric of collectvie bargaining in the major industries of the U. S."

Cowan said that the Case bill and its amendments would impose restrictions upon unions to no effect "but to give already powerful corporations sitll further advantages in their bargaining relationships with their employes."

Cowan lashed out at "hasty, hysterical, will-o'-the-wisp" legislation whose only effect would be to destroy long-developed patterns of collective bargaining. The Case measure, as it passed the House and which the anti-labor Senators wish to duplicate, "is a whip-lash bill," he added, which is "ill-considered from the standpoint of the nation's welfare, disruptive of good labor relations, and injurious to the living standards of American workers."

In N. Y., the newly-formed coordinating committee of the CIO and Natl. Citizens' Political Action Committee and the Independent Citizens' Committee, warned Congress that "anti-labor legislation will be the first step toward the restriction and ultimate destruction of democratic privileges of all the people."

Meanwhile Sen. James Murray (D. Mont.) presided at a meeting of 40 opponents of the anti-labor bills, who represented some 25 organizations. Represented were CIO, AFL, the Railroad Brotherhoods, church groups, veterans and civic organizations. They drew up plans for a coordinated campaign of attack against the proposals, and urged all citizens to write and wire their Senators to vote against the measure.

Russ Nixon, Washington representative of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, and Irving Richter, who holds a similar position with the CIO Auto Workers, attended for CIO. Afterward they declared, "We will fight this thing through in the Senate, and if they should pass the Case bill we will fight for a Presidential veto. We aren't going to let up on this battle."

PROFITS GO UP AND UP

SUBSTANTIAL evidence that peak wartime profits will be maintained or exceeded by corporations during the postwar boom was offered this week in reports by the N. Y. Times and Business Week magazine.

"Corporate profits in 1945 of industrial companies representing virtually every field of manufacture were only slightly below those of the previous year, despite cancellations of huge war contracts, reconversion to peacetime business and strikes," said the Times, which noted that of 92 industries covered by a survey, the net incomes of 44 were better than the year before.

And Business Week, reporting on first quarter gains in 1946 as compared with that period in 1945, said:

"Earnings reports are unveiling many spectacular year-to year gains due to the absence now of the excess profits tax, the need no longer to confine production almost solely to small-profit-margin war items, and because of today's civilian goods 'sellers' markets'."

KEEP 'EM COMING

Once there was a fighter who knocked his opponent so groggy in the first round that he decided to let down his guard and take it easy. He had to be carried out of the ring on a stretcher.

When the House voted to massacre price control, the American people rallied splendidly against this menace. An avalanche of wires and letters descended on Congress demanding OPA continuance without any price-raising amendments.

Great protest demonstrations were held, and delegations visited Congress from every part of the country. Seldom was there so much convincing evidence that the people were aroused, and every member of Congress was deeply impressed.

But since then there have been signs that the people are letting down their guard, and underestimating the power and cunning of the profiteers who are hell-bent on higher prices and inflation.

Senators who must soon act on this issue, and who have the power to save price control, report a tapering-off in pro-OPA mail.

The Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and the rest of the profit-thirsty pack of monopolists, who hope to make a killing out of the national disaster of inflation, are beginning to get results out of huge propaganda expenditures.

If the American people let down their guard at this critical juncture, they will be knocked out by the profiteers and robbed of their wages and savings.

Wire or write your Senators at once, demanding renewal of the Price Control Act without amendments. Get everyone else you can to do likewise. Increase the volume of protests against the House action, and keep 'em coming, until price control is saved.

ANTI-LABOR STAMPEDE

A determined effort is being made at this moment to stampede the Senate into passing legislation to cripple labor unions.

The House has already passed the notorious Case bill, to revive the worst evils of the anti-labor injunction, virtually repeal the Norris-LaGuardia act, restrict the right to strike, and deny collective bargaining to many employes.

A Senate committee has reported out a modified version of the Case bill, and attempts are being made to add every type of amendment to weaken the unions and strengthen the power of union-fighting corporations.

Every one of these proposals would have the effect of making it harder for working people to get justice, of robbing them of the gains they have made in wages, conditions and industrial democracy.

None of them touch the real roots of labor disputes. They are simply vindictive measures to punish labor and favor exploiting employers.

If the Senate really wishes to know what it can do about such disputes, let it pass the Kilgore resolution for a Senate investigating committee.

This would reveal the low wages and miserable conditions of workers who lack labor organization. It would also show how Congress has made it profitable for employers to engage in production sitdowns, through carry-back and carry-forward provisions of the tax laws.

Urge your Senators to refuse to be stampeded into a witch-hunt against labor, and the passage of any repressive legislation whatever; and to turn instead to action on the many sorely needed measures for the social welfare of the people, on which Congress has so long been delinquent.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

"THIS union has never permitted itself to be beset with fear, prejudice, bigotry or hatred. It has never permitted itself to be torn asunder with dissension."

It was Philip Murray speaking. His speech might well have been entitled, "What Makes a Union Strong." It dealt with the amazing achievements of the United Steelworkers of America and the union principles that made them possible.

If ever a union was strong and successful, it is the CIO United Steelworkers. It has more than 850,000 members, net assets of about $5,000,000 and nearly 100 per cent organization.

It has just won the biggest strike in American history, gaining the largest wage increase for the greatest number of workers, and setting a wage pattern which has added billions to American pay envelopes.

Yet 10 brief years ago, this union was not even a name.

★ ★ ★

The Steelworkers had no easy task. Earlier union drives had been ruthlessly crushed by the mightiest corporations in the land.

The fear in the workers' hearts was the first enemy the CIO had to overcome.

It took brave and clearsighted men and women to risk their jobs, to defy the labor spies, to see through the deceptions of company unionism, and to strike against companies that had armies of thugs and huge arsenals of weapons of destruction.

In the Little Steel strike of 1937, scores of steelworkers were killed or wounded.

But this union was never "beset with fear."

★ ★ ★

The union became strong, too, because it was never beset with "prejudice, bigotry or hatred."

In an industry employing workers of nearly every craft, national origin, race, creed, color and political belief, the corporations had long known how to divide and rule.

AFL attempts to organize had broken on the rocks of craft division. Unskilled had been played off against skilled, foreign-born against native-born, Negro against white.

But under Murray's wise and experienced leadership, and CIO industrial union principles, the steelworkers built one union for all the workers, without discrimination—a union that was not "beset with prejudice, bigotry or hatred."

★ ★ ★

But labor's enemies never give up hope that even the strongest unions may be "torn asunder with dissension."

Every aggressive union organizing campaign has been red-baited from the word go. Lies, slanders, half-truths have been used to imply ulterior or subversive motives in the union organization of workers to improve their conditions through collective bargaining.

These propaganda campaigns are designed not only to prejudice public opinion, but also to work on the fears and prejudices of the workers themselves—to make them fight each other instead of the common enemy, to create factions and splits, so the union may be "torn asunder with dissension."

★ ★ ★

Recently the papers have again been full of rumors and gossip that the CIO was going to dissipate its energies in purges and witch-hunts and internal dissension.

In a statement unanimously adopted by the Steelworkers' convention, Murray made a full and forthright reply, setting forth basic principles that make a union strong, free, democratic and united.

Asserting the "true Americanism" of his organization and its "sound and wholesome" trade union aims, he declared:

"Ours is a democratic organization, run by its members and for its members. We ask no man his national origin, his color, his religion or his beliefs. It is enough for us that he is a steelworker and that he believes in trade unionism."

Because it is run solely by its members, he added, the union will not permit outsiders, of any kind, to "infiltrate, dictate or meddle" in its affairs.

"As a democratic institution," Murray concluded, "we engage in no purges, no witch-hunts. We do not dictate a man's thoughts or beliefs.

"Most important of all, we do not permit ourselves to be stampeded into courses of action which create division among our members and sow the disunity which is sought by those false prophets and hypocritical advisers from without who mean us no good."

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, L. S. Buckmaster, Albert Fitzgerald, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 May 20, 1946 No. 21

Victory Convention

USA BANS WITCH-HUNTS AND OUTSIDE CONTROL; URGES 'BIG THREE' UNITY

By LEN DE CAUX

"THIS is a victory convention of the United Steelworkers of America."

With that triumphant note, Pres. Philip Murray opened the third constitutional convention of "the mightiest, single labor organization in the world."

Meeting in Atlantic City, the 2700 delegates, representing a membership of 853,408, celebrated the tenth anniversary of CIO organization in the steel industry, and the winning of the biggest strike in American history.

Big, strong and self-confident, the union which broke the back of anti-unionism in the country's most basic industry, and which had just set a new high in wage patterns for all American labor, was in no mood to be stampeded into purges and witch-hunts among its members to satisfy the shrill clamor of scandal-mongers, false friends and open enemies.

Asserting their patriotic Americanism and their "sound and wholesome" trade union aims, the delegates made monkeys of those press gossips who had been predicting orgies of red-baiting, heresy-hunts, and internal factionalism and dissension that would split the whole CIO.

By unanimous action, at the very opening of the convention, the delegates adopted as official union policy a statement of President Murray which constitutes a regular charter of the rights of union members to their own beliefs in a free and democratic labor organization. (See full text of statement, page 12).

Having thus disposed of the issue, the convention proceeded, in a spirit of harmony, tolerance and unity, to hammer out a progresive program dealing not only with the steelworkers' problems and interests but also giving a lead to all of labor on national issues.

Murray's policy statement, which he submitted on behalf of the international officers and executive board, asserted that the United Steelworkers, as a democratic organization, is run by and for its members and is not concerned with their national origin, color, religion or beliefs, provided only they are steelworkers and believe in trade unionism.

Because it is run solely by its members, Murray said, "this union will not tolerate efforts by outsiders — individuals, organizations or groups—whether they be Communist, Socialist or any other group, to infiltrate, dictate or meddle in our affairs.

"I do not direct that remark to any one person or group," he emphasized. "I have in mind any attempt by any force outside our own membership to interfere in the functioning of our union."

Murray declared that the union "will not permit any limitation on the free and democratic right of full discussion of trade union problems in our ranks," will not interfere with a member's rights to harbor such views as he chooses, and will not be "an instrument of repression."

He heaped scorn on the "wishful thinkers, the rumor-mongers, the purveyors of half-truths and fictions," who have gone to the gossip columns, ever since the CIO was founded, "with tales of division in our ranks, of purges and splits and factions and conflicts.

"As a democratic organization," Murray said, "we engage in no purges, no witch-hunts." Nor, he added, will the union allow itself to "be stampeded" into courses of division and disunity sought by "false prophets and hypocritical advisers from without who mean us no good."

CIO PRES. PHILIP MURRAY
Head of United Steelworkers Chairing Convention

In his keynote speech Murry dwelt on the rifts which have arisen between the United Nations and emphasized "the powerful influence" which the World Federation of trade Unions can bring to bear to keep the United Nations united and "to prevent the recurrance of another world blood-bath."

He said that the diplomats of all nations are "susceptible to error" and that "no one nation can be right all the time. America may have made mistakes, Britain may have made mistakes, and Russia is making her mistakes.

"It is the bounden responsibility of these people representing the United Nations to . . . keep working together for the common good, without bigorty, prejudice, treachery or deciet."

In the foreign policy resolution adopted, the United Steelworkers placed major stress on Big Three unity as essential to enduring peace and the effectiveness of the United Nations. "We do not seek security in an alliance with the Soviet Union against Great Britain or an alliance with Great Britain against the Soviet Union," it said.

The resolution also urged "early consideration by the United Nations of measures for progressive universal disarmament."

A similar note was struck in a resolution opposing peacetime military conscription and in the Officers' Report, which criticized American foreign policy as having "become more and more of a negative thing" since Roosevelt's death.

President Truman was also criticized for having "confused the issues before the Steelworkers' strike by calling on Congress to pass "his so-called fact-finding legislation, which would have deprived labor of the right to strike for at least a 30-day cooling-off period.

"This was the signal for the reactionaries in Congress to take the wraps off all the anti-labor legislation they had been cooking up since the passage of the Natl. Labor Relations Act."

In a special resolution, the convention called on the Senate to "stand firm against the concerted drive to attack the fundamental rights of American labor."

It asked Congress not to turn aside from badly needed social legislation "to indulge in a witch-hunt against labor."

"If Congress wishes to investigate the causes of labor-management disputes," the Steelworkers declared, "let the Senate pass the Kilgore resolution establishing an

(Continued on Page 12)

Top Leaders in Steel: L. to r.: Pres. Philip Murray, Sec.-Treas. David J. McDonald, and Clinton S. Golden and Van A. Bittner, assistants to the president, at the Atlantic City convention.

Unions on the March

INSIDE KOREA

By HAROLD ZEPELIN

AMID the shambles of a country ruled and exploited for 40 years by the Japanese, Korean trade unionists are leading the fight for a new, independent and democratic Korea.

It is a big surprise to find a vigorous trade union movement at all in a country so long under fascist dominion, let alone to discovering that an estimated 800,000 Korean workers are organized and united in the Korean Federation of Trade Unions.

Even under the Japanese, and as long ago as 1919, Korean workers organized to fight for their economic and political rights, with the key demand one for Korean independence. The underground unions met with severe police suppression and terrorist attacks. Strikes were always illegal; going on strike meant losing a job and landing in prison. But the Koreans never gave up. Till the day of Japanese surrender, strikes, demonstrations, and acts of sabotage were taking place in defiance of Japanese police. Numerous Korean workers also escaped from Korea to China and fought as partisans against the Japanese armies.

The history of Korean labor — interminable working days and a starvation living standard — is symbolized by one of the common sights in the U. S. zone: that of Korean porters carrying huge loads of up to 500 pounds on their backs.

The Koreans are determined not to return to the past. Today, even in the smallest towns, amost all workers wear colored or white arm-bands that signify union membership.

By the time American occupation forces arrived in southern Korea on September 2, organized labor unions were on hand to greet them with parades and demonstrastrations. In the two months following, unions were formed with a combined membership of 500,000.

On November 6 in Seoul (the capital of Korea), 650 trade union delegates convened to establish the Korean Federation of Trade Unions.

Since November 6, Korean unions have grown larger and stronger. Present membership is estimated at 800,000 in 17 industrial unions, with the largest numbers in the Miners, Metalworkers and Railroad unions. Membership is split about equally between the American occupation zone and the Soviet zone north of the 38th parallel. Each union has its own branch councils and locals.

In its program the KFTU calls for the establishment of an eight-hour day and six-day week, with minimum wages guaranteed by law; social security measures; elimination of child labor and unequal treatment of women; measures to prevent unemployment; abolition of feudal labor practices; a guarantee of the right to strike, etc. The unity of Korean labor and peasantry is expressed by the KFTU's demand for the free distribution of land to the millions of landless peasants.

The victory of the United Nations has restored to life labor union movements in oppressed countries all over the globe. Nowhere is this revival more dramatic than in Korea, a peninsula off the Asiatic mainland which had been under brutal Japanese domination since the turn of the century. The story of Korean unions and the analysis of their problems are described by Harold Zepelin, a young American soldier, in the light of his experiences in the U. S. zone of that country.

There is nothing backward about Korean trade unionism. In a bare room next to union offices in Seoul, I found a makeshift theatrical workship, with young men and women rehearsing a play and music to be presented to union audiences. The KFTU issues a weekly paper. Bright-colored organizing posters are to be found on billboards and in buildings everywhere. KFTU research, education, unemployment and other departments are hard at work.

ECONOMICALLY, the KFTU and Korean workers generally are confronted with serious problems; a major one today is unemployment. The KFTU estimates that between 60% and 70% of Koreans in the American occupation zone are unemployed, with the figures swelling daily as more than a million and a half repatriates return from Japan and elsewhere. Equally serious are a severe rice shortage and wild inflation.

American Military Government in southern Korea stepped into a situation more favorable for smooth economic functioning than in any other occupation area. There was no war destruction in southern Korea, and huge stockpiles of commodities and raw materials were confiscated.

Factory production suffered some dislocation when Japanese managers and technicians were removed from their posts, and relatively unskilled Koreans had to take their place. Korean workers in many factories organized their own committees in order to keep the factories producing. But AMG declared that workers' committees were "anarchical," and the number of functioning committees is now greatly reduced. As a result, AMG has restored only about 50% of the factories to production.

Korean workers are receiving on the average 600 yen a month, as compared with a monthly living cost for a single worker of 1,000 yen.

The KFTU throughout has displayed willingness to cooperate with AMG to ease the economic situation. It has urged the use of workers' committees, and follows a virtual no-strike policy both to prevent stoppages in the production of scarce commodities and because of the hardship strikes would cause to workers at this time.

AMG has regarded the unions with disdain, and its policies are viciously anti-labor. Last October, an open shop regulation was put into effect. Strikes are illegal, and arbitration of labor disputes is compulsory. The unions are without representation on "labor mediation boards," nor are union leaders consulted on labor and economic policy.

Most flagrant of all is AMG's interference with union meetings and organizing in direct efforts to break the unions and prevent further labor organization. Most meetings are considered "unauthorized" by AMG, and American C. I. C. (Counter-intelligence corps) agents or MP's have broken into even small meetings of 10 or 20 trade unionists with demands such as "who gave you permission to hold a meeting?" An order has been issued by AMG police inspectors that meetings of more than four Koreans are not to be held without special authorization.

In many formerly Japanese-owned factories, AMG has appointed violently anti-labor plant managers who have organized terrorist groups to beat up workers who protest about working conditions or seek to organize shop committees. The managers have the protection of Military Government police and American MP's, who are also used to break strikes. Leading militant workers invariably lose their jobs.

Hoa Sung Taik, the 38-year-old handsome and genial chairman of the KFTU, and Pak Se Yong, the slim, methodical vice-chairman, look to two main points for fraternal help in their fight: the Soviet trade unions, and the CIO. Hoa and Pak have spent eight and 12 years, respectively, in Japanese prisons. Neither of them can speak English, but they show their good will for Americans with energetic handshaking and back-slapping.

Both express an earnest conviction that an unrelenting struggle for the complete destruction of fascism must be waged. They eagerly await the day when Korean workers can take places beside their brothers in the World Federation of Trade Unions.

SHIP PAY SCALES ON ILO AGENDA

AN opportunity to develop a Magna Charta for hundreds of thousands of maritime workers throughout the world lies before the meeting of the Intl. Labor Organization's Maritime Conference, which opens in Seattle on June 6.

Bringing together some 500 representatives of the world's shipping nations and of maritime industry and labor in each of those countries, the Seattle confab will be set to act on such key questions as an international minimum wage, hours, manning, food, training, social security and recognition of labor unions.

Adoption by the conference of planks on any of these questions will place the matters squarely before the legislative bodies of the ILO's member countries. Behind the Seattle meeting is a lot of heavy spade work accomplished at preliminary get-togethers in London and Copenhagen, Denmark, during 1945. At the Copenhagen session, the CIO was represented through Vice-Pres. Frederick Myers and Sec.-Treas. Hedley Stone of the Natl. Maritime Union.

A major issue will be the proposed agreement for an international minimum pay rate for seamen of 16 British pounds ($64) a month. While low by American standards, it will be of tremendous help to workers in other countries.

As ILO explains it, "an international labor convention is not intended to lay down exactly the highest standards that already exist in one or two countries. If it did, only very few countries would agree to it, and that would be of little value. The idea is to set up an international minimum, which may fall short of the standard of the best countries but is well ahead of the standard in the more backward countries . . . "

Success of the conference will be jeopardized, however, if appointment of American representatives isn't soon announced, the CIO Maritime Committee wrote to Sec. of Labor Schwellenbach last week. To be appointed are a government representative and one from labor and from industry, as well as a staff of two advisors to each delegate for each of the nine points on the confab's agenda.

The Dept. of Labor has on many past occasions awarded the labor delegate's place to a representative of the AFL. "The CIO Maritime Committee has again demanded that the CIO receive the American labor delegateship and a sizeable number of the labor advisorships," the committee said. "The CIO is the majority representative of American seamen."

ILO URGES WORLD STEEL BARGAINING

Nations participating in the Int. Labor Organization "should give full and unstinted support, both in law and policy," to the development of collective bargaining in the world-wide steel industry.

This statement of policy, adopted at the ILO's recent steel conference in Cleveland, was hammered through the meeting of government, industry and labor representatives with the strong support of two CIO spokesmen, Clinton S. Golden and David J. McDonald, assistant to the president, and secretary-treasurer of the United Steelworkers.

LABOR'S WORLD

GEORGE Messersmith, new U. S. Ambassador to Argentina, is planning to give careful attention to the question of freedom of action under the Peron government for the country's "bona fide" labor organization.

The April-May issue of the Bulletin, published by the CIO Latin American Affairs Committee, reveals that a committee representative discussed the Argentine situation at great length with the ambassador prior to his departure for Buenos Aires.

The Argentine government, the bulletin adds, had made repeated efforts to convince the CIO group that Argentine's labor policies are on the level. "The CIO attitude on this has been and will continue to be a cool and realistic one designed to extend all moral support to Argentina's workers and their demands for real and concrete economic and political adjustments," it noted.

Part of the government's interest in the attitude of the CIO and of labor unions throughout the western hemisphere is attributed by the committee to the Argentine regime's policy of always leaving "the door a little open for a possible reconciliation with labor groups who opposed it during the election, but whose world-wide ties and international standing it could not afford to ignore."

★ ★ ★

Brazilian labor this week called for international help against a new government campaign of arrests and union busting. Leaders of the Labor Unity Movement (MUT) were tossed into jail on May Day by national cops who suddenly launched a drive to enforce certain sections of the 1937 Constitution. That document, based on the fascist labor character of Mussolini's fascist Italy bars international ties for Brazilian unions. Basis for the arrests was the fact that MUT leaders attended the World Trade Union Congress last autumn and have affiliated with the CTAL, big Latin-American labor organization.

Not very far in the background of the situation is a seven-month wage struggle of employes of the Canadian Light & Power Co., a big international firm operating in Brazil. Brazilian liberals charge the corporation, with headquarters in Canada, has close financial ties to Sofia, a Nazi-financed cartel. The workers have been seeking $10 a month increases, which would give them a little protection against 400% price increases.

Help Needed!

OPA BATTLE STILL RAGING

IF YOU haven't yet written to your Congressmen and Senators to demand continuance of OPA without crippling amendments, do it today. If you've already written, do it again.

CIO legislative representatives warned this week that the volume of mail from OPA supporters has fallen off in the past fortnight, while lobbyists of the big corporations are increasing their efforts.

The bill (HR 6042), has been passed in the House with a series of amendments that will break the spine of price control. It is hoped that the Senate Banking Committee, whose report on the measure is expected shortly, will shear off the crippling amendments.

Optimism that the committee would heed public demands for a strengthened OPA to fight the menace of inflation was felt in Washington with the announcement that the Senate group had voted 11-5 to extend price control for a year, until June 30, 1947. House inflation-supporters had previously voted for only a nine-month continuation of the price agency.

Meanwhile, "Save OPA Day" celebrations continued throughout the country. In Washington the American Veterans Committee staged a mass meeting to bring home to the people how high prices would rise with governmental controls. Several thousand men and women, from the ranks of unions and civic organization, paraded through San Francisco streets and wound up at a mass meeting outside the City Hall.

In New York, 5,000 persons braved rainy weather to turn out for an open air meeting at the Lewisohn Stadium. Mayor William O'Dwyer, head of the city's Committee to Save OPA, told the throng: "You have the votes. You must watch the propaganda of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers 10 times over. We insist on having price control."

A resolution introduced by Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., an official of the Independent Citizens' Committee, demanding continued price controls, was unanimously approved.

At New Orleans, a drive for a "mile of signatures" to save OPA petitions was a howling success. Four booths established at key downtown locations by the city's CIO council collected 10,000 John Hancocks in a few hours.

TRADE MAG HITS NAM

When a business magazine raps the knuckles of the Natl. Ass'n. of Manufacturers, that's a man-bites-dog story. Modern Industry, an industrial magazine, did just that this week. The issue: NAM's opposition to the OPA and to price control.

The charges: NAM has used poor public relations sense in fighting OPA; NAM's top leaders are undemocratic.

Acknowledging NAM's right to take any position it wants, the magazine declared: "We do not object to the way NAM arrived at its position."

NAM failed to poll its members on the price control issue, the magazine says. Instead it surveyed only 10% of its members on the question: "Do you believe that price controls hamper the production of manufactured goods?" The reply was overwhelmingly in the affirmative. But, Modern Industry points out, "it is improper to assume, as NAM's leaders apparently did, that every management man who knows that price controls have been hampering production also feels that the solution is to throw all controls out the window."

PENN., N. C. VOTE MAY 25

HEARTENED by the heavy turnout of voters in Florida and Alabama primary elections, labor shifts the political spotlight to North Carolina and Pennsylvania this week for May 25 primary tests.

Chief interests rests in the Pennsylvania race where 33 Congressional seats and the re-election of Sen. Joseph Guffey, veteran labor spokesman, are at stake. Guffey, backed by the state CIO Political Action Committee, is not expected to face stiff opposition and will pit himself against Gov. Edward Martin, Republican senatorial choice, in the November general elections.

At this writing congressional endorsements have not been revealed and they will be decided, in accordance with CIO Political Action Committee policy, strictly on the local level.

North Carolina's main tussles will pit Ray Scarborough, progressive candidate, against Carl Durham, labor foe, and Henry Chatham, a vice-president of the National Association of Manufacturers and big businessman, against Rep. John Folger.

Folger has won the backing of labor groups, and recent reports indicate a growing sympathy to his candidacy among small businessmen and professional groups.

NO PAC BLACKLIST—HILLMAN

Don't write to CIO headquarters or to PAC for a national "blacklist" of Congressional candidates. It doesn't exist. Furthermore, says Chairman Sidney Hillman of PAC, there won't be any.

His statement, made at a Washington press conference, followed somewhat garbled news stories from Atlantic City, N. J., reporting the convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Confusion over the list arose from a discussion of the PAC resolution at the clothing workers convention, where a number of delegates reported on the political situation in their home districts. Some reporters interpreted these talks, together with a report by Thomas Burns, executive chairman of CIO-PAC, on the PAC decisions in some states, as constituting a formal list.

At his press confab, Hillman carefully emphasized that all PAC endorsements are made in the states and Congressional districts, with national PAC headquarters concentrating on publicity and educational work.

What Counts With Congress: Hundreds of signatures supporting continuation of OPA without crippling amendments were gathered by the CIO United Public Workers Auxiliary at Greenbelt, Md. L. to r.: E. M. Faulcaner, signing one of two huge postcards; Mrs. Lee Fink and Mrs. Rose Rothchild of UPW, and Robert Fink, an early starter in politics.

THREE LIBERAL GROUPS UNITE FOR JOINT POLITICAL ACTION

There'll be no confusion or stepping on each other's toes in the coming campaign among the principal organizations supporting liberal candidates and a program based on President Roosevelt's policies.

Representatives from three of the biggest groups got together in Washington May 11 to blueprint their cooperation and plans for the next six months. Sitting around the conference table were about 30 leaders of CIO-PAC, the Natl. Citizen's PAC, and the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions.

They constituted a diverse group —Philip Murray, Sidney Hillman, James B. Carey and a number of other CIO leaders; Harold Ickes, who resigned as Secretary of the Interior a few months ago; ironbearded sculptor Jo Davidson, and young Franklin Roosevelt, Jr., all from the ICC; Frank Kingdon, ex-Sen. Elmer Benson of Minnesota and Mrs. Marshall Field among the Natl. Citizens PAC spokesmen.

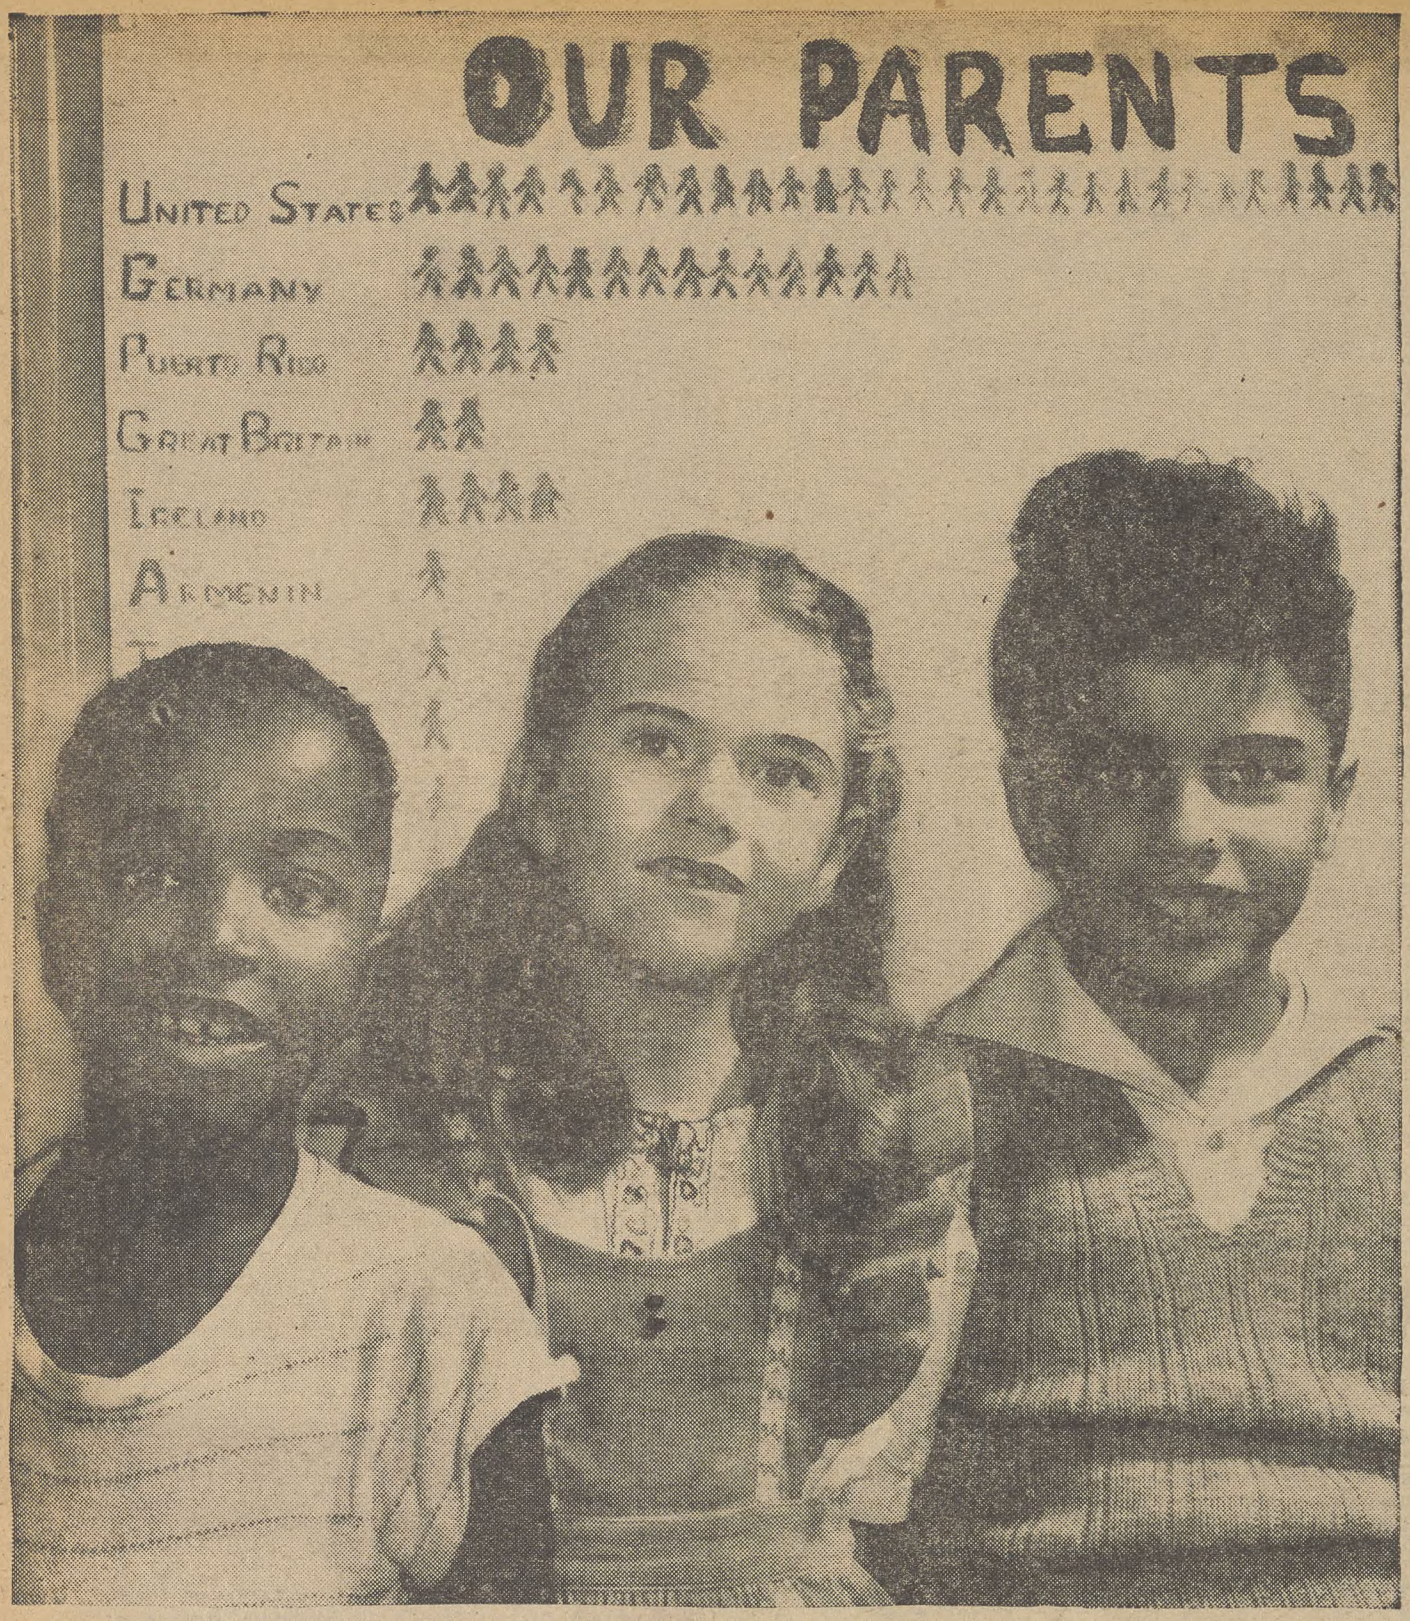
Despite the variety of background and career, the leaders of the three groups had no difficulty working out a common program of action. On foreign affairs, the statement called for full support of the United Nations, for increasing Big Three unity, for destruction of every remnant of fascism and for consideration by UN of universal disarmament.

On the home front, the policy statement urged mobilization of "our independent political strength for the election of candidates, regardless of party, who are committed to the attainment of the Economic Bill of Rights." It demanded abolition of the poll-tax, support for the FEPC, abolition of the Wood-Rankin un-American activities committee and an end to discrimination of all kinds.

"We call upon every American who supports these principles to participate in the political campaigns of the next six months," the statement concluded.

"A big vote will be a progressive vote. We cannot afford the political lethargy which keeps as many as two out of every three potential voters from the polls. A strong America demands the active and earnest political interest of every citizen."

Unity for a Progressive Congress: Meeting in Washington last week with other CIO and liberal leaders to discuss the primaries and Fall elections were, l. to r.: CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Chairman Frank Kingdon of Citizens PAC, Executive Chairman Harold Ickes of the Independent Citizens' Committee of Arts, Sciences & Professions, and Chairman Sidney Hillman of CIO-PAC.



1 One of the outstanding schools of the New York City Public School system is P. S. 169, located at 168th St. and Audobon Ave. P. S. 169 can well be compared with the United Nations, for children of 39 nationalities groups and various races attend. The system of teaching is similar to but not the same as that used in the Springfield, Mass., racial-religious tolerance plan. Here sixth grade pupils work on a national origin chart as part of their Social Studies class.

←

2 "Learning to live in a democracy" is the theme of the school. Children are taught not just to tolerate each other but to admire and appreciate the different cultural heritatges of their friends and neighbors. Music, which is fundamental to all cultures, is used even to help teach first graders arithmetic.

→

3 The children from 39 different nationality groups have learned to work in harmony. This little boy and girl are learning through playing house together. All students, on arrival each morning, say silent prayers in their own religions. Among their studies are social problems, arts and crafts.

4 Pupils in the 6-A class give a play, "An Arab in New Arab, are taken off by a policeman because they h rab in New York." In the concluding scene the two bullies, who have persecuted the use they have violated the principles of democracy.

SCHOOL FO

5 Healthy bodies are as necessary as healthy minds. Regular weighing by the school nurse is routine. Cooperation of parents is encouraged to bring about closer relations.

6 (Below) Mrs. Paul Mills, P. S. 169 principal, with some of her children. She's assisted by Mrs. Elizabeth Hirsh, human relations counsellor, who handles community problems. (Photos by Skippy Adelman—Black Star.)

FOR DEMOCRACY

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Walter Harris, CIO Reg. Dir., Chicago, Ill., reports: Rockford Metal Products Co., Rockford, Ill. (Production and maintenance employes). UAWCIO 39; against 29. William H. Welsh Co., Chicago, Ill., (Production & maintenance employes) UERMWA-CIO 86; against 42.

John C. Lawson, Secy-Treas., United Stone & Allied Prod. Workers, reports: USAPWA-CIO was recognized by Vermont Structural Slate Co., Fair Haven, Vt., by a card-check, as bargaining agent for its 50 production and maintenance employes. Representatives Ralph Broadwell and Ernest Allard organized the job.

George Craig, CIO Reg. Dir., Philadelphia, Pa., reports: Alloy Metal Co., Prospect Park, Pa., USA-CIO 98; against 87.

Victor Ulivitch, Acting Reg. Dir., Philadelphia, Pa., reports: Rico & Holman, Merchantville, N. J., UAW-CIO 34; against 28. Williamsport Battery Co., Williamsport, Pa., UERMWA-CIO 208; against 8. North Transitads, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., UOPWA-CIO 17; against 8. William H. Horn & Bros., Phila., Pa., Textile Workers 70; against 34.

A. R. Hardesty, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Dallas, Texas, reports: Wright-Patterson Packing Co., Dallas, Texas, UPWA-CIO 44; AFL Butchers Union 14; no union 13. W. L. McMahon, Representative of UPWA conducted the campaign.

William Mayo, Sub-Reg. Dir., South Bend, Ind., reports: Muskegon Paper Box Plant, Muskegon, Mich., UPA-CIO 30; against 2. Darrel King & Fred Weber, Secretary and President of Local 1015 conducted campaign with Field Representative Robert Clark assisting.

Paul E. Miley, UAW-CIO Reg., Dir., reports: Deco Products, voted 2 to 1 in favor of the UAW-CIO and Kelly Reamer employes voted 4 to 1 for UAW-CIO. These plants become units of Local 217. Organization was handled by Stanley Kwiat International Representative.

Carey E. Haigler, CIO Reg. Dir., Birmingham, Ala., reports: American Bakeries Co., Gadsden, Alabama, production and maintenance workers, URWDSEA-CIO 50; no union 3; salesmen unit, URWDSEA-CIO 15; no union 9. Credit for this splendid showing should be given to Frank Parker, State Director, URWDSEA; Int. Rep. Harvey Mayo, and John J. Tippins, Chairman of URCP&LWA LU 12 Orgn. Committee in Gadsden, Ala. Winter Paper Stock Co. employing 20 men has recognized CIO as the collective bargaining agent and is now negotiating an agreement.

John B. Easton, CIO Reg. Dir., Charleston, W. Va., reports: Huntington Boiler Works, USA-CIO 16; no union 0. Carnation Milk, Clarksburg, W. Va., UGCCWA-CIO 66; Dist. No. 50, 27; no union 8. Elwood Swisher of UGGCWA and Al Viller, State CIO, did the organizing, the CIO regional office assisted.

Martin Wagner, Pres., United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers reports: Boyer Chemical Lab., Chicago, Ill., recognizes the union by a card check involving 70 workers. Chester Walczak, UG board member, was in charge.

Thos. J. Gallagher, Dir. of Orgn., IUMSWA, reports: Carpenter & Paterson, Inc. East Boston, Mass., IUMSWA 30; IAM 19; no union 1.

John J. Maurillo, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., reports: General Electric Plant, Utica, N. Y., UERMWA-CIO 151; no union 47. Organizing work was conducted by Michael Gimenez and Daniel Fitzgerald. General Press Metal Victory, Syracuse, N. Y., USA-CIO 31; no union 10. This plant was organized by Bert Danquer and John Kowalski.

Powers Hapgood, CIO Reg. Dir., Indianapolis, Ind., reports: Jersey Creamery Division of Beatrice Co., at New Castle, Ind., (cross-check) 31 for FTA-CIO; which is 100% of the employes in the plant. Brother Pete Markunas has been working on this campaign.

Michael Livoda, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Denver, Col., reports: Riggs Optical Co., Denver, Colo., UOPWA 29; AFL 0; no union 10.

The United Steelworkers of America convention is now in session in Atlantic City, New Jersey, with some 2700 delegates attending. It is one of the best and most constructive conventions ever held in the CIO. The delegates are in full support of the CIO program, including PAC and the Southern Organizing Drive. The officers of the organization have the full confidence of all the delegates. It is a well-disciplined union. The eyes of the country are upon its deliberations.

TO PUT IT BRIEFLY

A FEW DAYS after announcement of an 18c wage increase for Westinghouse employes, the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers this week signed a national agreement with the General Cable Corp. granting an 18½c general wage increase, other gains include complete elimination of a differential between women's and men's wages. The agreement covers over 3,000 in New York and California.

★ ★ ★

Brewery Workers are voting overwhelmingly throughout the country for affiliation with the CIO, members of locals in such widely separated cities as Louisville and Buffalo this week deciding the question affirmatively by lop-sided tallies. Formerly with the AFL, the Brewery Workers have been independent for several years.

★ ★ ★

Editor Robert L. Cruden, of the CIO United Rubber Workers, back from Okinawa and other far Pacific points, is editing the next issue after two years in the army. Research and Education Director A. L. Lewis of the URW handled the paper during Cruden's absence.

FUR WORKERS WILL 'MOP UP' OPEN SHOPS

PLANS for organizing the unorganized, winning higher standards of living for workers and for mobilizing political action to defeat the reactionaries in the 1946 elections are expected to highlight the 16th biennial convention of the CIO Intl. Fur & Leather Workers which opened at Atlantic City May 19.

The convention marking the 33rd anniversary of the union will continue at the Hotel President until May 25. Pres. Ben Gold delivered the keynote speech May 19.

Over 400 fur and leather worker delegates from Canada to Louisiana and from the Atlantic to the Pacific are representing more than 100,000 members.

Over 95% of the fur workers in the United States have been organized and over 85% of the leather workers have been unionized. Organizational plans are expected to center on the few remaining open shop hold-outs in the north and completing organization of the South.

One of the achievements to be reviewed at the convention will be the recent settlement of the Furriers Joint Council which won wage increases ranging from 17c to 40c an hour, representing an 8½% raise; a health insurance and an old age retirement fund. The Joint Council agreement sets the pattern for fur workers throughout country.

SOUTHERN DRIVE PRESS DIRECTOR

Active in the CIO since it entered Memphis, A. L. (Pete) Swim this week assumed his duties as public relations director of the CIO Southern organizing campaign.

A crusading journalist, Swim recently did a series on the annual wage for the Scripps-Howard chain. Besides writing special articles for Scripps-Howard, he was also on the staff of one of the papers of the chain, the Memphis Press-Scimitar, for 17 years.

In addition to being president of the Memphis Guild, Swim is also vice-president of the Tennessee CIO Council.

SEA UNIONS NAME LEADERS

Delegates of seven unions, voting to form one industrial organization of maritime workers, brought their week-long convention to an end May 11 by electing Pres. Joseph Curran of Natl. Maritime Union and Pres. Harry Bridges of Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, both CIO, as co-chairmen of a temporary committee for maritime unity pending ratification of the move by the memberships of the seven unions.

The committee will serve also to coordinate the activities of the unions during a nationwide maritime strike, set earlier by the convention for June 15.

Pres. Eugene Burke of CIO Marine Cook & Stewards was elected honorary committee chairman.

Store Union Demands

JUSTICE FOR CLERKS

THE fourth convention of the CIO Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes at Akron, Ohio, this week changed its name, streamlined its own organizational set-up, laid plans to organize store and warehouse workers, and re-elected Samuel Wolchok and John B. Cooney as president and secretary-treasurer, respectively.

The new name of the union is the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union. Under the new organizational plan, offices of three executive vice-presidents are abolished, and four full time vice-presidents and an executive secretary, who will be direct assistant to the president were elected. With the president and the secretary-treasurer, these officers constitute the action committee and will function between board meetings.

Six hundred delegates from 32 locals adopted a resolution to organize the organized, and Wolchok served notice on all employers under the union's jurisdiction that they should be prepared to deal fairly with the union.

Wolchok, who has headed RWDSU since its inception in 1937, also declared that a third party should be formed by labor and progressive forces, but not until "the vast majority of labor is ready."

Showing that the delegates agreed that the time for a third party had not arrived, a resolution endorsing PAC policy was unanimously adopted.

John Brophy, CIO-IUC director, called for 100% cooperation of the union in the CIO southern organizing campaign and for defeat of the Case bill which he said "would force cooling off periods, subject labor organizations to scrutiny by hostile government organizations, limit the benefits of the Wagner Act, and pave the way for the use of injunctions."

Following his speech the delegates adopted a resolution condemning all anti-labor laws pending in Congress.

CIO BLASTS NLRB BILL RIDER

EFFORTS to exclude so-called "agricultural workers" from the protections of the Wagner Act through a discrimnatory rider on the appropriation for the Nat'l. Labor Relations Board, were condemned this week by Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative director, in a letter to members of the House Appropriations Committee.

"This rider will seek to deprive 'agricultural workers' as defined by the Social Security Act, of the protection of the Natl. Labor Relations Act by denying use of Board funds for cases involving such workers 'in whole or in part'," Cowan charged. "As defined in the Social Security Act, 'agricultural workers' include some 500,000 workers employed in industrial operations of food packing and processing. They are in no sense farm workers, and are employed not by farmers but by private industrial corporations.

"To exclude such workers from the protection of the Wagner Act is a gross discrimination against them and one that further gives certain corporations an unfair competitive advantage over other enterprises."

Recalling that Congress has "repeatedly refused to amend the Wagner Act directly," Cowan urged the Appropriations Committees to reject "undesirable amendments" in the form of riders to the appropriation bill.

IT'S 1 STRIKE FOR 3 UNIONS

THREE CIO unions, the Farm Equipment Workers, the Auto Workers and the Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers are cooperating in the strike of 30,000 workers against Allis-Chalmers throughout the country.

Main issues are a general increase of 18½ cents an hour, arbitration of grievances instead of "company determination"; upgrading of most A-C workers from low-rate ranges, and vacations.

The strike was started at LaPorte, Ind., plant which was organized by FE, and spread to Springfield, Ill., Norwood, Ohio; Pittsburg, Pa.; Boston, Mass. and West Allis and LaCrosse, Wis., workers at the latter factory belonging to a local industrial union council affiliated directly with the CIO.

The arrogant attitude of the company is exemplified by A-C Pres. Griest, who called on Wisconsin authorities for militia, while he refused to meet with Labor Dept. officials, the union having accepted the offer.

Morale of the strikers was high, Local 248, UAW, reporting that only a jack rabbit crossed the picket line at West Allis despite the determined attempts of the company to provoke trouble.

UPW BUYS AD TO ANSWER LIE

"We are not only against strikes in the public service; we assume a responsibility for preventing them," CIO United Public Workers leadership declared in a paid ad in the Washington Post this week after the newspaper refused to print in its news columns a statement replying to stories misrepresenting the union's position on strikes.

Ever since the convention at which the Federal Workers and the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers were merged as the UPW at Atlantic City about a month ago, the new union has been the subject of abusive attacks particularly in the Post and the Washington Daily News (Scripps-Howard). The ad replied to stories representing the union as sanctioning strikes of government workers.

UE CONTRACT IS RATIFIED

THE strike of 75,000 Westinghouse workers was officially ended May 13, the 119th day, national officers of CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers announced, following ratification of the proposed strike agreement and new contract by locals throughout the nation.

Westinghouse workers were praised by their officers for "successfully repulsing an all-out attack against their wage and working conditions and their right to belong to a union."

The agreement provides an 18c hourly wage increase and a fund to narrow down wage differentials between men and women, averaging 4c an hour over the minimum. The company's highest previous offer, even after General Electric and General Motors settled with UE for 18½c, was 9.7c. The company had also demanded the right to wipe out any guarantees of earnings to incentive workers. The new contract safeguards against speedup and rate cutting.

TWUA STRIKE 9 MONTHS OLD

After nine months on the picket line, none of the 600 members of the CIO Textile Workers have gone back to work at the Deering-Milliken Co. plant at Gaffney, S. C. About 30 to 40 strike-breakers and some supervisory employes are making an unsuccessful effort to run the mill.

TWUA has now won clear-cut victories in all but two of the eight strikes which took place after the Natl. War Labor Board went out of business.

The pattern of violence set by Philadelphia police during the General Electric strike spread this week to Hartford, Conn., as is shown by this picture of state police pushing around strikers at the Pratt-Whitney plant where 800 members of the CIO Electrical Radio and Machine Workers were picketing. The attempt to break the picket line failed and backfired in the Connecticut House of Representatives where a resolution to condemn the Republican administration of Gov. Baldwin was introduced. Enraged by the action of the Republican-controlled House in declaring the resolution out of order, droves of union members are changing from Republican party enrollment.

CIO, Veterans' Victory

PATMAN BILL IS PASSED

THE one ray of sunshine in this cloudy legislative week in Congress, when members became hysterical about labor and sought drastic curbs, was the passage of the Patman Housing Bill. President Truman is expected to sign the measure.

The CIO joined with progressive veterans' organizations in seeking the enactment of the measure, which had been emasculated by the House before it agreed May 14 to accept a Senate-House conference committee report repairing some of the damage it had done to the measure. The Senate the same day also approved the conference report.

The bill provides $400 million for subsidies to manufacturers of buildings materials, guarantees markets for the manufacturers of prefabricated houses, and adds one billion to the amount of housing loans guaranteed by the government. Deleted, however, was a provision to control prices of old houses.

Natl. Housing Expediter Wyatt said that the measure provides some of the basic tools to permit the veterans' Emergency Housing Program "to move forward in high gear to its goal of 2,700,000 homes under construction by the end of next year."

BILL THREATENS WORKERS, VETS

No matter how the Supreme Court decides the super-seniority issue, the worker—be he veteran or non-veteran—will lose and the employer will gain if HR 6053 is enacted, Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee this week wrote House members.

The pet theory of Selective Service Director Hershey, super-seniority would give a veteran his old job even though it meant displacing another employe with greater seniority.

Under HR 6053, if super-seniority is not upheld, employers will not need to compensate workers for loss of pay when they were discharged to make room for veterans with less seniority, Bernstein's letter said.

The bill would work both sides of the street. If super-seniority is found legal by the high court, then veterans who were denied jobs because workers holding those positions had greater seniority would not be paid for loss of earnings, Bernstein wrote.

FE NAMES OWN FARM AGENT

The first farm representative of a national CIO union will be Homer L. Ayres, a South Dakota rancher, who this week was appointed by Pres. Grant Oakes of the Farm Equipment Workers as the union's farm relations director.

Ayres is a longtime member of the Natl. Farmers Union and once was candidate for Lt. Governor of South Dakota on a farmer-labor ticket.

Oakes said that Ayres' job will be to promote friendly relations between farmers and workers on matters of mutual interest.

HOMER L. AYRES

UAW BLASTS REILLY

PRESIDENT Truman this week was urged by the CIO Auto Workers Executive Board not to re-appoint Natl. Labor Relations Board member Gerard D. Reilly when his term expires next August.

The UAW said that there has developed within the NLRB a strong tendency to weaken the Natl. Labor Relations Act by decisions representing Reilly's point of view. Reilly, the UAW said, "appears to be determined to establish policies which reflect the thinking of employers who are bitterly opposed to basic objectives of the Act."

Noting several instances of Reilly's anti-labor decisions, the UAW urged Truman to appoint in Reilly's place someone who "is sympathetic with the policies set forth in the Act and who has the courage to carry out those policies in the face of the pressure of the anti-democratic and anti-labor forces of the country."

The UAW also asked the NLRB not to sanction collective bargaining contracts which contain clauses barring from the jurisdiction of unions certain classes of workers who were not organized originally—for instance, non-union office workers in a plant where production workers are organized.

The NLRB originally held that such agreements were void, but since has reversed its position.

MMSW PLANS D. C. MARCH

PLANS to speed the end of the three-month-old strike of 30,000 mining and refinery workers were adopted by the executive board of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, meeting in Chicago May 11.

The program calls for a legislative campaign to have the McFarland bill raising metal prices withdrawn from the Senate, extension of the strike to additional mines and mills, and a "March on Washington" by striking miners from all over the country.

Charging that the companies have refused to settle with their workers on the same basis as all other industries because they hope to get extraordinary increases if the bill passes, the union is asking western Senators who sponsored the McFarland bill (S1815) to withdraw their signatures.

The union is on strike against the Phelps Dodge Corp., the Kennecott Copper Corp., American Smelting and Refining Co., and the U. S. Smelting and Refining Co.

More About:

STEEL CONVENTION

(Continued From Page Five)

investigation committee. Hasty attempts to write labor legislation on the floor of either Senate or House are bound to produce the worst and most unworkable form of anti-labor bill."

The contribution of $200,000 to CIO's Southern organizing drive was heartily approved, and Murray announced that a total of $1,250,000 had been received from CIO affiliates, as "an initial contribution."

He took note of the "diatribe" of AFL President Green against the CIO's campaign and reminded the delegates that in the 1937 steel strike Green similarly denounced John L. Lewis (then head of the CIO) as representing "a vicious un-American force" and said the steelworkers would not join the CIO.

"But who cared about what Willie said in 1937," Murray said, "and who cares what Willie says in 1946? The workers of the South are going to join labor unions of their own choosing, and these will undoubtedly be CIO unions."

Murray declared that Green, in his Southern speech, was making a special plea to employers. "He wants the employers to come to them. Bill is more interested in the creation of a resistance movement to organization among the employers down there than he is in organization of the workers."

The CIO, on the other hand, Murray said, is not "double crossing or making special pleas to employers." But he predicted Southern employers "will come to recognize it is best to do business with an organization of this kind, that will maintain its commitments and indulge in no form of filthy racketeering."

The convention got behind the CIO Political Action Committee 100% after hearing an address by PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman.

"As an independent force, without commitment to any major party," it resolved, "we shall measure the record of every candidate for office against the domestic and foreign policies of the late F. D. Roosevelt, which provide a firm foundation for stable peace, full employment, greater security and wider democracy."

Declaring "there is a fine legislative program in Congress

WHY WORRY OVER WILLY?

Van A. Bittner, director of CIO's Southern organizing drive, isn't worried about the competition or fulminations of the AFL.

"In 1935," he told the convention of the 850,000-strong CIO Steelworkers, America's biggest and most powerful union, "we offered President Green of the AFL a check for $500,000 to organize the steelworkers, and told him there was another check of like amount where that came from.

"He threw up his hands and laughed, and said: 'You can easily offer me $500,000, because everyone knows you can't organise the steel industry'."

Bittner said he was sometimes asked, "But what if the AFL signs a lot of backdoor agreements?"

"I say: 'Fine. They'll have to sign at the wages the employer wants to pay, and I don't know of a better way to organize a million workers into unions affiliated with the CIO'."

—a fine program and nothing else," Hillman called for political action to get this progressive legislation passed and to get "leadership in foreign affairs that will insure that our influence is used for peace and plenty."

He said the only hope of the reactionaries is in the traditional small vote in an off-year election. "They cannot win when the American people are around, when the issues are really discussed.

"The DuPonts and the rest are terribly worried we'll buy the elections," Hillman scoffed. "But we know enough not to compete with them in that—they have the money. Fortunately, however, America is not for sale."

Other speakers addressing the convention included Sir Walter Citrine, president, and Walter Schevenels, assistant secretary, of the World Federation of Trade Unions, and Vice Pres. Patrick McHenry of the Austrailian steelworkers' union.

Citrine deplored the absence of the American Federation of Labor from the WFTU, whose 66 million members include all other major labor movements of the world.

"I hope that experience and the force of world events may change the attitude of the AFL," he said, pointing out that by its very nature a world federation "must allow for divergencies and differences" in many countries that are in different stages of development.

"We agreed to combine on the principles of trade unionism, which are wide enough for everyone to agree upon," he said. Citrine noted that there are "adequate safeguards" in the WFTU for national autonomy and independence of action, and that these safeguards are the same as were those of the former International Federation of Trade Unions, to which the AFL belonged.

The British labor leader, who was accompanied by four other leaders of the British Trade Union Congress invited by the CIO for a meeting of the Anglo-American Trade Union Committee, described his country's unions as "the cradle of social legislation." He said that all the progressive laws for the benefit of the common people "had their origin in discussions of the Trades Union Congress," and that trade unionists were now serving in all the important cabinet positions of the British Government.

Citrine decared that the British unions had started the Labor Party because they had found that "the practice of wearing out carpets in government offices, and getting only polite smiles, was not the best method."

Schevenels described the 14 international trade departments of the WFTU, which he is charged with setting up, and how they will function to represent unions along international industrial lines. The CIO Steelworkers, he said, will become part of a department representing all the metal workers of the world, and including machine, electrical and shipbuilding workers.

The union reported a current dues-paying membership of 725,308, and a total enrolled membership of 853,408, including ordinarily exonerated members and those still in the armed forces. Its net assets are $4,987,536, and 82% of its agreements now include a dues check-off.

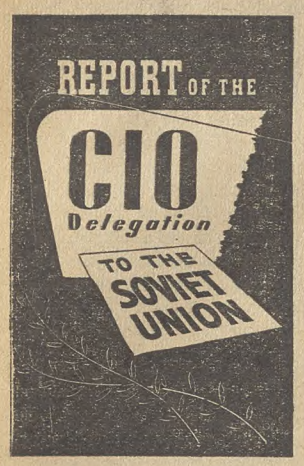
Only two major outposts of non-unionism exists in the industry, Weirton Steel and American Rolling Mills, and the union is planning to organize 100,000 clerical and technical employes.

The Natl. Labor Relations Board was vigorously criticized for retreats, favoritism, employer-mindedness and delays, and the President was asked not to reappoint Board Member Gerard D. Reilly, who was chiefly blamed for these delinquencies.

In a moving demonstration, the delegates pledged their wholehearted support to a delegation of crippled war veterans, several of them former steelworkers and members of the CIO union, who asked the USA to oppose the closing of the England Army Hospital in Atlantic City "under pressure of private interests."

"I make a personal plea to the President, the Secretary of War, yes, and to the Congress of the U. S. to prevent the eviction of these young men from their hospital in Atlantic City," Murray declared.

In other resolutions the convention called for a guaranteed annual wage, in which Murray said the steel industry "could well afford to pioneer"; denounced the Wood-Rankin committee; called for food rationing to feed the starving of other countries; demanded action against anti-labor injuctions; favored creation of womens' auxiliaries; and endorsed all major phases of the CIO legislative program.



READY NOW

"A document of first-rate importance."
—Philip Murray

32 pages of observations by 11 CIO leaders who visited the USSR last Oct. Reports on Soviet trade unions, social insurance, production methods and war damage. Foreword by President Murray.

15c a copy; 100 for $10; 500 for $40. Order from the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington 6, D.C.

USA BANS WITCH-HUNTS AND OUTSIDE CONTROL

Full text of statement by President Murray, adopted by CIO United Steelworkers as official policy of the Union.

There is one matter on which I wish to dwell with some emphasis right at the start of this convention. I do so because it is my strong desire that our discussions may be such that we may emerge from this convention firm, strong and united, moving forward shoulder to shoulder in the ever-growing strength of our organization.

The statement which I shall now make is being submitted on behalf of the international officers and executive board of the United Steelworkers of America.

Let me attempt to restate right now certain basic principles of our organization on which I am sure there can be no disagreement. These are principles on which there never has been any disagreement in our ranks.

Ours is a democratic organization. It is run by its members and for its members. We ask no man his national origin, his color, his religion or his beliefs. It is enough for us that he is a steel worker and that he believes in trade unionism.

I repeat—we are run solely by our membership. This union will not tolerate efforts by outsiders—individuals, organizations or groups—whether they be Communist, Socialist or any other group, to infiltrate, dictate or meddle in our affairs. I do not direct that remark to any one person or group. I have in mind any attempt by any force outside our own membership to interfere in the functioning of our union.

At the same time, however, we will not permit any limitation on the free and democratic right of full discussion of trade union problems in our own ranks. We must not and do not seek interference with the free and democratic right of each member to practice such religion as he chooses, harbor such views as he chooses, in his private life as a citizen. Our union has not been and will not be an instrument of repression. It is a vehicle for economic and social progress.

Why do I find it necessary at this time to repeat these basic truths?

Ever since the CIO was founded there have been wishful thinkers, seeking its destruction, who have gone to the gossip columns, the rumor mongers, the purveyors of half-truths and fictions, with tales of division in our ranks, of purges and splits and factions and conflcts. The volume and intensity of these emissions have risen and fallen from year to year, from month to month, and even from day to day, like the tides of the ocean.

Periodically I have found it necessary to redirect the attention of these scandal-seekers—and of our own members—to the clear principles of the constitution of CIO and of such affiliates as this mighty organization of steelworkers.

We are an organization of workers gathered together for collective bargaining and for the advancement of our well-being in sound and wholesome American ways. We have no ulterior or subversive aims and we will not tolerate any attempts to divert our activities into such channels. Our constitution provides democratic and orderly controls to assure adherence to the policies of our organization. That is clear and unmistakable to any individual or group with any contrary notions.

The United Steelworkers of America is a truly American institution, devoted to sound and constructive American objectives. We have only contempt and indignation for those who dare to impugn our patriotism and our Americanism. We give them the direct lie.

Our concrete policies are based upon the cherished principles of our historic Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, of the United States of America and true Americanism.

As a democratic institution, we engage in no purges, no witch-hunts. We do not dictate a man's thoughts or beliefs. Most important of all, we do not permit ourselves to be stampeded into courses of action which create division among our members and sow the disunity which is sought by those false prophets and hypocritical advisors from without who mean us no good.

I have spoken frankly. I have spoken bluntly. I have minced no words, because it is my sincere hope and desire that with the atmosphere thus cleared, this subject may be regarded as settled and set aside for the remainder of this convention. Our aims and our principles are clear. We have many important problems of organization, wage and contract policy, legislation and national developments to which we must address our full attention in complete unity.

FUR HEAD HAILS STEEL POLICY

Pres. Ben Gold of the CIO Fur & Leather Workers this week voiced "wholehearted endorsement" of the CIO Steelworkers' statement of policy on control of the union by its members and on rejection of witch-hunts. In a wire to Murray, Gold said:

"Your statement points the way for all labor to unite and render inestimable service to all people in their endeavor to realize their aspirations for peace, fuller democracy and security."

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS — By Rose H. Alschuler

THAT PLACE WHERE YOU WORK

Vacation Time is coming. That place where Dad or Mother works is sure to be full of interest and wonder to your child. Things that seem commonplace and unimportant to you as an adult will be interesting and exciting to your child. Through his eyes and ears you'll see and think about things you've not thought about for years, or perhaps not at all. But half a heart or half your attention is not enough. It will take all of both if both of you are to have a good time.

Library of Congress—Lee for FSA

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS
UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES — MEMBERSHIP — EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS — ADVERTISING — LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman, New York, N. Y., 37 E. 14th St., Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig, Detroit, Mich., 6432 Cass Ave., TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1639-49 W. Evergreen Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

REGISTER--and Follow Through

CSC Head Sees:

RATIONING ACCEPTABLE

THE government's voluntary program to feed hungry people abroad is "a pious dream of wishful thinkers," and the American people are willing to support a return to rationing to help prevent famine.

That statement was made this week by Leo Perlis, national director of the CIO Community Services Committee, who added:

"It stands to reason that voluntary measures are mere kindergarten play in the face of such emergencies. The people, we believe, are not only ready but want the government to allocate at the source or requisition essential available quantities of supplies, such as fats and oils, dairy products, wheat, rice and meats, for export abroad, and to provide for fair and equitable distribution of scarce foods at home by rationing."

Perlis also announced that CSC will purchase from the Cooperative for American Remittance to Europe $135,000 worth of food packages for shipment to Poland and France and that it will reallocate relief funds for other countries for food supplies.

BAN ATOM BOMB, SAY 7 OUT OF 10

More than seven out of ten people in this country think the United Nations should ban manufacture of atomic weapons in every country in the world, according to a recent nation-wide survey by the Natl. Opinion Research Center.

Out of every 100 citizens interviewed, 72 favor the passage of such a law with adequate provisions for enforcement by the UN. More than half—56—would still favor such a law even if it meant that the U. S. would have to destroy its present supply of atomic bombs.

NEGRO CONGRESS PARLEY MAY 30

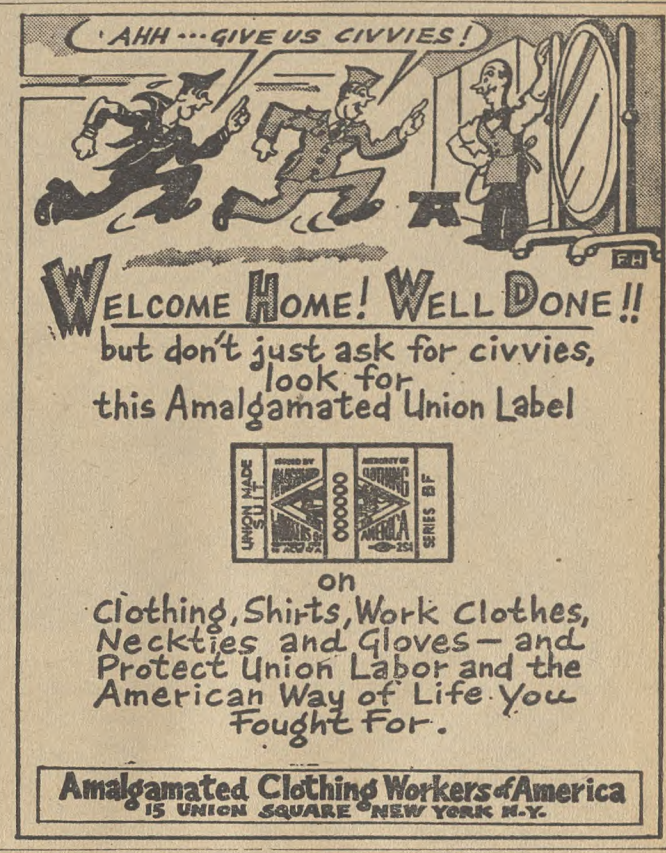
The 10th convention of the Natl. Negro Congress will meet in Detroit, May 30--June 2, with 1,000 delegates from all over the country slated to attend.

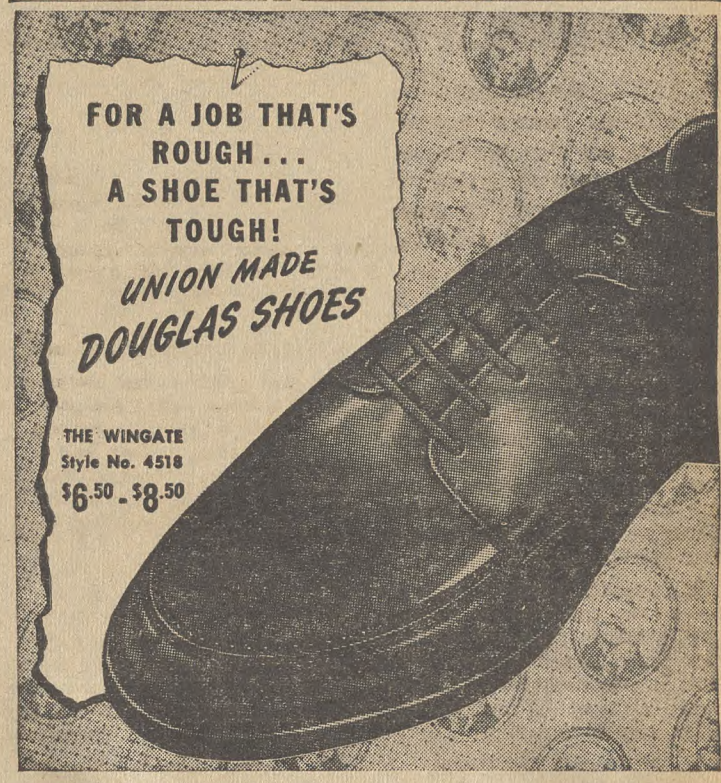
Greetings were sent this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray "with the hope that your important deliberations will represent a constructive contribution toward the goals we both believe in."

WOMEN SHOPPERS HONOR MRS. WOODHOUSE

Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse (D. Conn.) has been chosen this year's "Outstanding Congressional Spokesman for the American Consumer" by the Natl. League of Women Shoppers.

Mrs. Woodhouse is a member of the House Banking and Currency Committee and is also secretary of the Congressional Committee for the Protection of the Consumer.





W. L. Douglas Shoes
W. L. DOUGLAS SHOE CO., BROCKTON 15, MASS.
WASHINGTON
905 PENN. AVENUE N. W.
Stores in Principal Cities — Good Dealers Everywhere

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C. I. O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 4600 West Parker Ave., Chicago 39, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

"Paint the thing you like and someone else will like it too," Mrs. Alzira Peirce advises the merchant seamen who are in the informal art classes sponsored jointly by the CIO Natl. Maritime Union and the United Seamen's Service. The classes are held in the union's headquarters, 346 West 17th St., New York City. In the above picture, Mrs. Peirce, a well-known painter herself, is showing NMU members how to mix paint. Most of the seamen who attend her art classes never before touched a brush.

SUMMER SCHOOLS MAKE LEARNING EASY

MANY CIO members, combining learning with pleasure, are planning to spend their vacations again this year at summer schools sponsored by CIO unions and councils.

Coming up shortly is the school for the Greater New York CIO Council which opens a one-week session June 3 at the Hudson Shore Labor School at West Park on the Hudson across the river from Hyde Park. Classes in political action, organization, labor history and other current problems will be featured, as well as fun and relaxation, as Hudson Shore has many facilities for summer sports.

Midwest CIO State Councils are among the union groups sponsoring summer schools, including the Ohio Council whose second annual school will be held at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, July 29-Aug. 3.

Michigan's Big Camp

Largest of the State Council vacation education projects is the summer school of the Michigan CIO Council which will open Aug. 4 at a 210-acre camp on Lake Huron, 60 miles from Detroit. Some 1,000 students from 200 CIO locals are expected to attend this school for a four weeks' session. The camp has been leased by the Council with an option to buy later, according to Gus Scholle, the Council's acting president.

The camp has five dormitories, 40 cottages, and kitchen and dining facilities to accommodate 500 at a time, large enough to take care of a State CIO convention. An additional attraction is a fine sandy beach a half-mile long.

Students at the school will be active shop leaders chosen for their ability by locals in Michigan and other Midwest state. They will spend their four weeks at the camp studying the problems of industrial unionism in all its phases. The curriculum for this summer is being planned by Joseph Kowalski, Michigan CIO educational consultant, in conjunction with the United Auto Workers' education department, co-sponsor of the program.

Students will meet with instructors in the morning, most of the classes being held outdoors, and will spend the afternoon in the workshops, learning to transfer theory into actual practice. Teachers will be supplied by various unions, and the University of Michigan's Workers Education Service, with Government labor authorities also giving assistance.

Highlander

Down at Highlander Folk School, Monteagle, Tenn., the third annual Southern CIO School has been in session since May 6, with 23 southern CIO local union leaders registered for the month's training program sponsored by southern CIO Regional Directors.

Classes during the first week included a course given by Joseph Gaer, publications director for the CIO-PAC, in the use of publicity by local unions, and discussions led by Paul L. Styles, NLRB regional director and B. T. Judd, CIO field representative in Tennessee, who described the political situation in the state.

A Farmer-Labor conference to be held at Highlander May 25-26 will be attended by the students. Main speaker will be Aubrey Williams, editor of the Southern Farmer. Farm and labor leaders from all over the South will be at the conference.

In addition to CIO-sponsored summer schools, representatives from various CIO unions are also cooperating with other groups running schools for workers this summer.

Office Workers

The Summer School for Office Workers administered by Eleanor G. Coit, director of the American Labor Education Service, will be held this year on the campus at Lake Forest, Ill., July 13-27. Since 1933 this school has held two-week summer sessions on some college campus, usually in the Mid-West. Students include union members, both CIO and AFL, as well as office workers from other community organizations.

(For further information, write to the Summer School for Office Workers, 437 West 59th St., New York 19, N. Y.)

Co-op, Labor Institute

Under the sponsorship of the Rochdale Institute—national cooperative training school—and the University of Wisconsin School for Workers, a Co-op and Labor Institute will be held Aug. 4-17 at Madison, Wis.

The course is designed especially for business agents, educational directors, education committee members, consumer action directors and ladies auxiliaries' officers, to prepare them for the work of organizing and developing cooperatives in the labor community. Students will come from all parts of the country.

The Institute has the endorsement of various leaders, including CIO Pres. Philip Murray, who said that it "deserves the warmest support of all American working people."

For information about tuition, scholarships available and other details, write to School for Workers, 1214 W. Johnson St., Madison 5, Wis.

Other summer schools will be described in later issues of The CIO NEWS.

For Community Recreation

The CIO heartily endorses the bill (S. 2070) to create a Federal Security Administrator to assist the States in the development of community recreation programs, CIO Education & Research Director Kermit Eby told the Senate Committee on Education & Labor this week.

Describing the "creative leisure" activities developed at summer institutes held by the United Auto Workers and other CIO unions, Eby said that workers education groups need the resources they can get from national, state and other agencies to help with such programs.

Pamphlet Reviews

UNION REPORT ON INSURANCE

A group of union representatives who organized a conference workshop to inquire into the question of unemployment insurance and make recommendations has just issued a report that is a valuable and timely addition to material on the subject.

The workshop, organized in cooperation with the Industrial Relations Center of the University of Chicago, was held during August, 1945, with both CIO and AFL unionists taking part. CIO representatives participating were from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Auto, Farm Equipment, Packinghouse, Electrical, Steel, and State-County Workers and the Illinois CIO State Council.

The report explains briefly how the present system of unemployment compensation works; points out the shortcoming of its "crazy-quilt" federal-state set-up with its 51 different ways of operating and gives the essentials of an adequate system.

Pointing out that labor is represented on practically all advisory commissions on unemployment compensation, the report declares that "many of the reforms outlined in the report might be secured by more intelligent and active representation of labor on these bodies."

CIO unions and officials, particularly those active in legislative work, will find much of value in this excellent report. The National CIO Dept. of Education & Research has some copies on hand which my be obtained by CIO members at the reduced price of 60c each, 55c for 10 or more, and 50c each for 100 or more.

Labor Looks at Unemployment; Report of the Conference Workshop of Organized Labor on Employment Security; University of Chicago Press, Chicago 37, Ill. Price $1.

WHAT VOTERS SHOULD KNOW

REGISTRATION of every eligible voter is the first step toward the retirement of reactionary members of Congress and a progressive victory in the 1946 elections, CIO-PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman said this week in announcing the publication of a PAC handbook, "What Every Voter Should Know and Do in 1946."

The pamphlet, ninth in a monthly series devoted to issues of public importance, has a first printing of 200,000 copies and additional printings are expected.

Addressing PAC registration workers, the pamphlet lists the steps necessary for a successful registration drive, such as the use of complete lists of CIO members and their addresses broken down on a ward and precinct basis and checked against registration polls at election boards, followed by personal interviews with non-registered voters.

Registration can be facilitated by having election officials set up registration booths near work places, the handbooks states, and by inducing employers to let the men register during working hours in the plant.

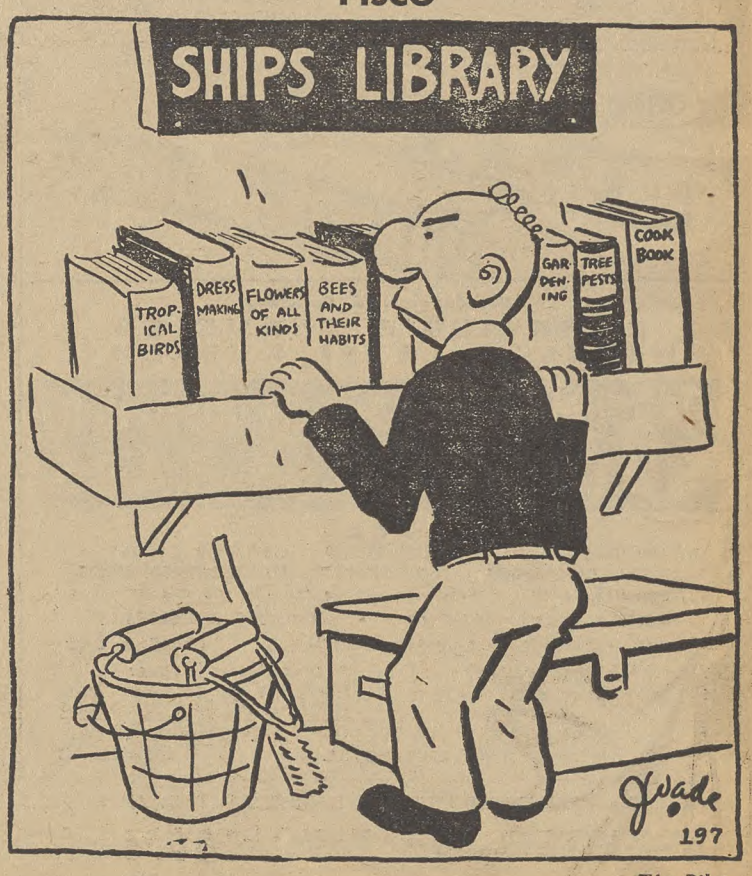
When special registration days or weeks are proclaimed, the pamphlet sugegsts "plenty of publicity at the plant, by handbills, loudspeakers, radio and newspaper announcements."

Calling attention to the fact that many states have eased voting for veterans by simplifying registration procedures, the handbook urges that every effort be made to register veterans.

Political action must extend past the shops into the community, the pamphlet says. "Union men and women are expert organizers. In the shops they use their organizing talents only on their fellow workers. In the communities they can and should organize not only workers but also non-labor groups."

Copies of the PAC political handbook may be obtained from the CIO Political Action Committee, 205 East 2nd St., New York 17, N. Y.

PISCO



The Pilot

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

AS STEVE DENTON PREPARES TO FRAME THE UNION ON THE CHARGE OF KILLING MICKEY BARRY — THE INTENDED VICTIM HIMSELF APPEARS AND EXPOSES DENTON AS THE LEADER OF THE PLOT TO DESTROY THE UNION! EXPOSED, DENTON TRIES TO GET AWAY, WHEN...

I WON'T LET YOU PASS, STEVE DENTON!

OUT OF MY WAY OR I'LL—

... SHOOT! WHA—!

AT THE SAME INSTANT!

I THINK SUSIE AND I WILL MAKE A GOOD TEAM...

HERE'S WHERE I PAY YOU BACK WHAT I OWE YOU...

HOLD IT!

PICK HIM UP, MICKEY. HE'LL GET ALL THAT'S COMING TO HIM... FROM THE POLICE.

AW, GEE, JIM! LEMME SLAM HIM JUST ONCE...

THE COPS ARE HERE TO TAKE OVER, MICKEY. ALL HIS FATHER'S MILLIONS AREN'T GOING TO HELP HIM NOW...

I'D STILL LOVE TO TAP HIS CHIN...

DENTON'S FINISHED, SUE... BUT WE STILL HAVE SOME UNFINISHED BUSINESS TO SETTLE... WHAT D'YOU SAY?

WILL YOU MA—

YES... UMMM...

WELL, LOOKS LIKE SUE AND I ARE GOING OFF TO GET MARRIED AND—

THAT'S WHAT YOU THINK!

WHA— WHAT DO YOU MEAN?

ME AND THE BOYS HAVE OTHER PLANS FOR YOU!

Orbit Feature Service, Inc.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Speak No Good, Do No Good...

Reactionaries in Congress who are now intent on slipping a noose around the neck of labor, are quite unlike the little man in the old children's story. Our Congressional contemporaries prefer to "hear no good, speak no good, and do no good."

While busy proclaiming the alleged virtues of a dozen anti-labor proposals, they are ducking three or four badly needed bills as though they were the plague.

The anti-polltax bill (HR 7), which southern conservatives avoid and seek to bury, keeps coming back from the grave. Passed by the House but buried in a Senate pigeonhole, the bill risks possible death as time runs out. The conservatives want to "do no good."

The FEPC, which existed for a time on temporary funds, has all but gone out of business. It's office is closed; its remaining few thousand dollars will be used to publish a history of our government's first real attempt to ban un-American discrimination.

Millions of people, white and Negro, Jew and Gentile, native citizen and foreign born, have appealed through their organizations for continuance of FEPC. The House Labor Committee has approved legislation to that effect.

But the Congressional tories want to "hear no good." This week, an attempt was made to bring the bill on the floor on "Calendar Wednesday"—the day when any committee can report out its findings. The "do-no-gooders" promptly adjourned the House after less than 30 minutes rather than discuss the matter.

The vote for adjournment was 99-81. Those who voted for adjournment voted against FEPC, anti-discrimination efforts and an extension of American democracy. They didn't want their names known—and they refused a demand by Rep. Marcantonio (ALP, NY) for a teller vote.

Another problem on which the House seems anxious to "do no good" is the Wagner-Ellender-Taft long-range slum clearance bill (S 1592). It has already been passed by the Senate, and favorable action in the House would spur the development of decent homes for millions of low income American families. But the bill has lain in the House Banking Committee for several weeks. If it's to pass this session, hearings must soon be held.

Wire Rep. Spence, chairman of the Banking Committee, and Rep. McCormack, majority leader in the House, to keep the current British loan hearings short, and to bring up the housing measure next.

Help for a Wartime Ally

The $3,750,000,000 loan to Great Britain will help develop international trade and provide more jobs for American labor. That was the gist of a statement made by CIO President Murray last March, when the loan first came up for examination in the Senate.

Last week, after beating down a one-man, last-ditch filibuster, the Senate approved the extension of nearly four billion dollars worth of credits to Britain, by a vote of 46-34.

The measure is now being studied by the House Banking Committee. The same arguments that supported the loan in the Senate are just as valid now, and support from labor is needed to help move the loan proposal through the House of Representatives. The same arguments heard in the Senate against the loan will be heard again on the other side of Capitol Hill. Largely they come from old-line isolationists and haters of labor; a background alibi of these codgers is that they'd rather die than say yes on any vote that might help the British Labor party. Reactionaries know no international boundaries.

The CIO has never been reticent about criticizing British imperialism nor has it ever withheld its support to colonial peoples seeking greater freedom and opportunity. But something more than opposition to imperialistic policies is involved in the loan.

As Murray pointed out, Britain "suffered war damage in her industry, used up her credits in other countries, sacrificed her foreign markets, and ended up with an adverse trade balance which, translated into terms of our currency, amounts to 14 billion dollars. . . . Since Britain's resources have been depleted and her economic future handicapped by the happenstance of her military position in our common battle, it is our part to see that something is done about her difficulties."

But more than moral obligations are involved. It's well recognized that world prosperity is based on good measure on abundant world trade. American productive capacity was increased 50% during the war. When temporary back-log demands at home subside, we'll be more anxious than ever for greater commerce with our world neighbors.

Refusal to grant the loan, Pres. Murray noted, will leave great sections of the globe in desperate economic condition; out of such desperation come the high tariff fences and economic nationalism. Out of these barriers come depression and war.

Approval of the loan to Britain can be a step towards an orderly world and a peaceful one.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Case Bill HR 4908	Would harass unions with many new restrictions and anti-labor devices.	Passed by House; Senate may vote this week.	Wire your Senators that you don't want the Case bill in any form or any other anti-labor bill.
Price Control HR 6042	Extends price control act to June 1947.	Passed by House with flock of death-dealing amendments; Senate Banking Committee now preparing report.	Wire your Senators to pass bill without amendments. Strong action is needed to save OPA and price control.
Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill S 1592	Provides long range housing and slum clearance program.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee hearings to open soon.	Send wires to your Congressman and members of House Banking Committee. to support this bill.
Minimum Wage S 1349	Lifts minimum pay to 65c. Senate added inflationary Pace rider, despite Pres. Truman's threat to veto, and thus kill bill.	Passed by Senate; now ready for House Labor Committee.	Ask Representatives to kill Pace rider and add coverage for seamen, retail, food and communications workers.
Wagner-Murray-Dingell Health Bill S 1606	Establishes national health program aimed at providing adequate low - cost medical service.	Hearings being conducted by Senate Labor Committee.	Write your Senator that you want bill passed.
British Loan S. J. Res. 138	Would extend $3,750,000,000 long - term credit to Great Britain.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee now holding hearings.	Write or wire your Congressman to vote for loan without amendments.

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

BACK DOOR ATTACKS: Anti-labor Congressmen are using every possible means to throw their spears at labor. A new favorite is the use of riders on appropriation bills barring government funds for normal activities of U. S. agencies working on union problems.

Current focus of attack is the Natl. Labor Relations Board. There are strong rumors that a group on the House Appropriations Committee will seek to ban the NLRB's spending money on any cases involving half a million workers in the food processing and packing industry.

In a letter to the committee, CIO Legislative Director Nathan Cowan charged that "to exclude such workers from the protection of the Wagner Act is a gross discrimination against them and one that further gives certain corporations an unfair competitive advantage over other enterprises."

Further, Cowan pointed out that since Congress has "repeatedly refused" to amend the Wagner Act, it would be unfair to tag on undesirable amendments to the act by a vicious rider on the NLRB's appropriation bill.

GOVT. EMPLOYES: An equally vicious rider was adopted by the Senate Appropriations Committee in what some members admitted was a direct slap at the newly-formed CIO Public Workers Union.

The committee tacked on to the appropriations bill for the Dept. of Agriculture a rider denying federal employment to any member of an organization claiming "the right to strike against the government."

This is a direct union-busting attack, which will provide governmental witch-hunters with the best weapon they have had in months. If adopted, the rider could be used to separate almost any union member from the government payrolls.

The fact that the UPWA has adopted a specific no-strike pledge so far as the federal government is concerned doesn't seem to interest the senators. The right to strike is contained in the UPWA constitution, since many of its members work in private agencies—such as cafeterias—under government supervision. There's no reason why they shouldn't strike if the need arises; equally there's no reason why other members of the union should be persecuted.

Write and state your views on the subject to members of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President

NATHAN COWAN, Chairman

ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 22

Copyright, 1946 The CIO NEWS
$1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY — $1.50 IN CANADA

May 27, 1946

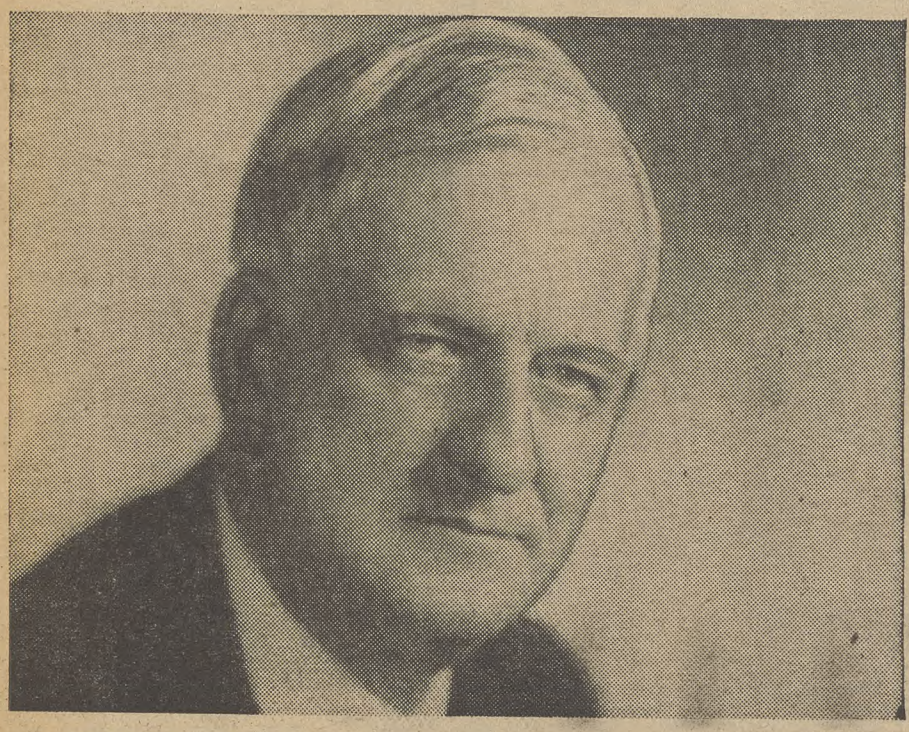
WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

FOR A FREE AMERICA!

(See Pages 3 and 4 For Stories On Fight Against Case Anti-Union Bill)

1 SENATOR JAMES E. MURRAY—"Those proposing the (Case anti-union) legislation . . . are undermining the democratic movement whose roots are deeply imbedded in American tradition and in the establishment and development of our economic and political democracy."

2 SENATOR CLAUDE E. PEPPER—"The amendments which are being proposed and pushed so fervently by members of the Senate whose record, generally speaking, has not been friendly to labor, are amendments . . . which will not stop a single strike."



3 SENATOR JAMES M. TUNNELL—"The great question of the relationship between labor and capital is not going to be determined by one law. . . . It is going to be determined by the common sense of the American people over a long period."

4 SENATOR GLEN H. TAYLOR—"We cannot have democracy and at the same time, by strait-jacket legislation, impose upon free men restrictions which they believe to be unjust and in violation of their right to seek a better standard of living . . . "

'TEAPOT DOME' SCANDAL SEEN IN SHIPPING INDUSTRY

FANTASTIC war profits of the shipping industry and a reported $5 billion discrepancy between records of the U. S. Maritime Commission and the U. S. War Shipping Administration brought demands this week from two Congressmen and CIO maritime unions for a complete investigation.

Rep. Richard B. Wigglesworth (R., Mass.) and Rep. Walter C. Ploesner (R., Mo.) charged that a probe would disclose a scandal that would dwarf the Teapot Dome affair, and that the House Appropriations Committee already has discovered that the WSA "simply did not keep books on its operations during the war.

Meanwhile, in N. Y. City, Pres. Joseph Curran of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union charged that the same shipowners who are refusing pay demands of maritime workers "fleeced the public Treasury of $21 billion during the war."

Shipowners' denials of pay demands, which are roughly at the 30% level asked by shoreside workers, have resulted in a strike call by six CIO maritime unions and one independent union. They are scheduled to "hit the bricks" June 15, and to stay out until demands of all are met.

Curran said that the average seaman is now making $55 a month less than he did during the war and that shipowners have not made a single proposal for raising wages or improving working conditions in six months of negotiations.

"The shipowners made billions during the war," Curran declared. "The only thing the seamen got was a wage cut or a trip to Davy Jones locker. The maritime unions demand an immediate Congressional investigation of all the financial manipulations and dissipations of taxpayers' funds in this shipping scandal."

Curran's charges were supported by a statement placed in the Congressional Record by Sen. George D. Aiken (R., Vt.). Reporting on facts gathered by Rep. Wigglesworth, Aiken said:

- During the war, the WSA allowed 758 ships, more than 20 years old, to earn $200 million in 18 months. Their book investment value was only $38 million!
- The government allowed insurance worth $477 million to be written on 690 vessels whose book value was only $34 million. Typical ships were insured for 10 to 20 times their prewar book values.
- The government paid five to 10 times what a typical ship was worth, and profits on voyages often were six to eight times the prewar price of ships.
- Despite the exorbitant profits of shipowners, the Maritime Commission re-negotiated less than 60% of their war contracts.

Meanwhile, the House Appropriations Committee, following an investigation of WSA practices, sharply censured Vice Admiral Emory S. Land for lax accounting procedure during his tenure as War Shipping Administrator.

Noting that Land had failed to acquire accurate cost accounting in order to determine comparative costs among various shipyards, the Committee described his failure to act as "inexcusable laxity."

Some samples of profits enjoyed by shipowners under Land's administration were submitted by the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, one of the six CIO affiliates scheduled to strike June 15. The ILWU said:

- Matson Line assets increased from $65 million in 1938 to $120 million in 1945.
- In the first quarter of 1946, American Hawaiian line profits were up 50% over the same quarter in 1945, and assets of $27,500,000 at the end of 1945 were double pre-war assets.
- Isthmian profits went up two and a half times over 1944—a 23% return on a $10 million investment. Their surplus rose from nine to 12 million dollars in 1945. They received $2,300,000 charter hire on 10 ships valued at less than $1 million.

OPA IN STIFF SENATE FIGHT

RUMBLINGS that spell danger and possible economic disaster for 140 million American consumers emanated this week from behind the closed doors of the Senate Banking Committee, where a report on the price control bill is being prepared.

It appeared that the committee has been paying little attention to the flood of letters and telegrams to save OPA—the largest public demonstration in years—and is preparing a series of amendments to hamper effective price control action. While less drastic than those passed by the House, the proposed amendments will knock a number of props out from under the Office of Price Administration.

On subsidies, the committee voted to provide for a fund of $900,000,000 to help keep food retail prices down to a level where the average consumer can afford to eat. But the figure is little more than half what OPA originally requested, although it is three hundred million more than that approved by the House last month.

Under the committee's proposals, the subsidies would have to end by May 1, 1947. A move by Sen. Capehart (R. Ind.) to end food subsidies on July 1 of this year was defeated by a committee vote of only 11-7.

In a second move that strikes directly at low-income clothes buyers, the committee eliminated the entire maximum average price plan, under which OPA has forced clothing manufacturers to produce a considerable number of low-price items.

Effect of this concession to profiteers — which had already been made in the House—is to permit manufacturers to turn more and more of their production to high-priced garments. Under these circumstances, price ceilings on low-cost clothes would be theoretical, since there would be few such garments available on the market.

CIO legislative officials predicted that when the question reaches the Senate, there may be considerable effort to strengthen the OPA. To make that fight effective, they called upon all unions and consumer groups to continue deluging Congress with demands for passage of the price control bill without any amendments.

Meanwhile Pres. Walter Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers voiced strong criticism of OPA's action in permitting higher prices on automobiles, including those made by the "Big Three," General Motors, Ford and Chrysler.

Calling for a Board of Review to examine the price rises, the UAW wrote to Congressmen that through a series of increases, "automobiles are rapidly being priced out of reach of millions of workers, farmers and professional people who require cars in their livelihood but will be unable to buy them."

The auto union charged that the increases had been permitted under an executive order authorizing price boosts when made necessary by higher wages. Operating through a loophole, the UAW said, OPA "has acted under it to grant more generous price relief than the order permits for any industry.

"We are sure that if the terms of the executive order were applied as written to the automobile industry, our wage increase would require no price increase whatever," the UAW stated.

Demonstrations in behalf of continued price control meanwhile occurred throughout the country. In Rochester, N. Y., 2,500 citizens jammed the city's convention hall to demand extension and strengthening of OPA. Leaders of CIO and AFL unions joined with housewives, veterans and small businessmen to voice their demands.

A day earlier 15 children paraded with tricycles down Main Street carrying such signs as: "My Daddy won't be able to buy me another tricycle if OPA is ruined."

EX-WAR-WORKERS BEAR BRUNT OF RECONVERSION; 25% JOBLESS

EX-WAR workers — mostly the older men and women —have borne the greatest shock of unemployment due to reconversion, the U. S. Dept. of Labor reported this week.

One out of every four former war workers was involuntarily unemployed five to seven months after V-J Day, and an even larger proportion had moved from communities where they had jobs. Those who still had work had taken sharp cuts in weekly earnings—31% below the level in the spring of 1945, thus reducing their purchasing power below what it was in 1941.

These figures—averages—were supported by a survey of 3,600 workers by the Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics. Two thousands of them formerly had been employed in war plants and 1,600 in essentially non-war business.

The BLS survey found that nearly one third of ex-war workers 45 years old and over were unemployed, as compared with 14% of younger men.

Among the ex-war workers seeking jobs were 52% of the women, only 21% of the men.

In contrast to the experience of war workers, non-war workers had held their jobs and maintained their earnings. Only 5% of them were unemployed and less than 7% had migrated. Over three-fourths continued to work at plants where they were employed last spring.

War workers who kept their jobs or found new ones were earning 31% less a week than on war work, while earnings of non-war workers were down only 10% over the same period.

1,200 signatures an hour to help save OPA was the record made last weekend by members of locals affiliated with the Washington, D. C., CIO Council. Saturday shoppers on downtown streets signed petitions eagerly.

WHERE CASE BILL STANDS

A vote on the Case Bill and its anti-labor amendments probably will be taken in the Senate during the coming week. The bill has already passed the House.

If the Senate passes the measure, it must go to conference, and a common version will then be submitted to both the Senate and the House for final approval. After that action, the bill goes to the White House for Presidential siagnature or veto.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT

Wire your Senators and Congressman that the Case Bill will destroy labor's hard-won gains while making no change in basic problems of high prices and insecurity that often make strikes necessary.

Ask them to vote against the Case Bill.

Write or wire President Truman to veto the bill if it is passed by Congress.

Do it today—and protect your union's rights!

TO STUDY CANADA JOB PAY LAW

A group of 20 CIO officials from 10 states, together with two independent experts on workmen's compensation laws, will travel to Toronto, Canada, on May 29 for a four-day study of the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Law, it was announced today by Ted Silvey, CIO reconversion officer.

"The proposal to study the Ontario law and its administration arose from the consideration that the law of this Canadian Province is in many ways one of the most advanced, and of greater benefit to injured and diseased workers than the laws of any American state," Silvey declared.

CIO officials comprising the group are for the most part representatives of international unions and state industrial union councils whose work is concerned with state labor legislation and compensation programs.

The Ontario Act, which is strongly supported by Canadian labor, has been widely copied throughout Canada and has been recommended for adoption in Great Britain by Sir William Beveridge and other authorities in the field of compensation procedure.

According to experts who have studied the Ontario legislation, its outstanding characteristic is simplicity of operation. The Board, established under the Act, has almost complete autonomy. Its decisions can be appealed to the Board for review, but—unlike the law in American states—cannot be appealed to the courts. It thus avoids extended litigation.

IT'S CIO AND NO 'INC.,' RULES JUDGE

An attempt to smear the Congress of Industrial Organizations by using its name, with "Inc." added, was halted dead this week by a Texas court.

Judge Bruce Young, at Fort Worth, permanently enjoined the so-called Congress of Industrial Organizations Inc., which was organized by the anti-union Fight for Free Enterprise Inc., from using the name or initials of the legitimate labor organization.

Judge Young, following three days of testimony, ruled that William Walker, head of the Enterprise organization, had obtained a state charter for CIO Inc. for the purpose of "smearing the name of the labor organization if not to destroy it, and to confuse the people of Texas with respect to the name of CIO."

VETS HIT CASE BILL

The Case bill and other current labor bills constitute "an hysterical response to the present industrial strife rather than a serious study of the weaknesses in labor-management relations," the American Veterans Committee charged last week.

Pointing to large numbers of union men in its own ranks, the AVC said the bills "must be defeated" since their passage would "greatly weaken organized labor."

Another of the many independent organizations opposing the bill was the Natl. Lawyers Guild, which charged that persons believing the cure for industrial ills is a resort to the use of police force "are living in a fools' paradise."

ONE CONSTRUCTIVE IDEA

One constructive suggestion for improving labor relations came out of the Senate this week.

The Senate Committee on Education and Labor recommended an investigation of the "underlying economic and other causes" which precipitated recent strike actions by American labor. The proposal must be approved by the Senate, and would operate on funds allotted by the Senate Audit & Control Committee.

Health Funds Restricted

PLAN GAG RULE TO SPEED SENATE ANTI-LABOR VOTES

BY HENRY C. FLEISHER

USING the coal and railroad labor disputes as their alibi, the Senate's block of conservative polltax Democrats and northern Republicans last week voted sharp restrictions on union health plans and were preparing for a "gag rule" to hasten a vote on the anti-union Case Bill.

The Senate voted 47-30 to support the amendment of Sen. Harry Byrd, head of Virginia's tightly-controlled polltax machine, after having previously brushed aside two substitute amendments offered by Sen. Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) and Sen. Theodore Green (D., R. I.). The decisive vote came close to midnight on May 23 as the Senate, under the spur of the anti-labor bloc, lengthened its sessions, to curb union functions while the rail and coal situations remain hot.

At the same time, objections of pro-labor Senators prevented an immediate vote on an unconsidered proposal of Sen. Capehart (R., Ind.) which would have given the President wide strike-breaking powers and subjected union leaders to heavy fines.

The Pepper-Green amendments suggested that in cases where health or welfare funds are administered solely by the employer or by employes, their operation be conducted under rules adopted by the Secretary of Commerce or by the Federal Security Administration. The first of these was tabled by a 43-34 vote, while the other was defeated 45-32.

The petition to limit debate on the controversial Case bill carried 27 signatures, most of them from the Republican side of the aisle. Supporters of the move to curb American labor had argued that the 10-day discussion of the proposals constituted a filibuster. But Sen. Pepper, who has conducted an admirable fight against ill-considered legislation, pointed out that a measure that might affect the whole course of American industrial relations, should not be adopted in a hurried race against the newspaper headlines.

Pepper, whose leadership of the forces fighting the anti-labor bill has been intelligent and courageous, quoted from a dozen sources to show the folly of hasty action. He pointed to an editorial from the Wall Street Journal which maintained that revision of federal labor law should be undertaken only in an "atmosphere of relative industrial peace." The Florida Senator also discussed at length a statement signed by 114 college economics professors who warned that the Case bill is "designed to impose punitive measures upon organized labor rather than to foster the adjustment of industrial disputes."

DOSE OF PEPPER FOR THE PRESS

The nation's press, which has been giving full details of every anti-labor proposal, was curiously silent when Sen. Pepper and other opponents of the Case Bill set forth their arguments against bust-union laws.

The stories on these speeches were short and buried in the inside columns.

Commented Sen. Pepper: "If one examines the character of the newspapers which have made such charges (of filibustering), he will find that it is justifiable to say that they have been and are anti-labor in their sentiment and attitude. They do not have the sympathy for the plight of the working man that proceeds out of a genuine feeling of humanitarianism or brotherhood. They are the kind of employers who would never give an employe anything except what he gets by force and by the coercion of collective bargaining.

Those newspapers have endeavored to stir up public prejudice based upon public confusion and misunderstanding of what is essentially involved in the controversy before the Senate today."

Sen. Pepper's fight against adoption of the Case Bill was backed up by the efforts of several other friends of labor, notably Senators Murray (D., Mont.), Taylor (D., Ida.), Mead (D., N. Y.), Tunnell (D., Del.), Guffey (D., Pa.), Magnuson (D., Wash.), Morse (R., Ore.) and Aiken (R., Vt.). However, many who proclaim themselves as friends of labor sat out the fight without taking the floor to argue against the crippling amendments.

The Case bill, sponsored by Rep. Francis Case (R., S. D.), was passed by the House during the steel strike early this year. The Senate Labor Committee's liberal majority trimmed it down severely and recommended only the establishment of a Federal Mediation Board and the prohibition of coercion in disputes involving the shipment of perishable foods.

A minority led by Senators Taft (R., Ohio) and Ball (R., Minn) have offered a number of amendments designed to make the Senate version correspond to the harassing weapon adopted in the House. The amendments would in effect repeal the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act, limit secondary boycotts, and make unions subject to hundreds of liability suits in the federal courts.

The Byrd amendment, which has not yet been acted upon in the House, was originally intended to curb union agreements for royalty payments based on production. When the coal miners abandoned that proposal and suggested a payroll tax, Byrd switched his tactics to conform to the new demands.

Hastily drawn to bar union suggestions for protection against unemployment and poor medical facilities, the original Byrd proposal was full of loopholes and unworkable clauses. Supporters of the anti-labor amendment were embarassed on several occasions to find that it meant many things it didn't say and said things it didn't mean. Numerous changes had to be made in its wording.

As finally adopted it would subject to $10,000 fine and six months imprisonment any person responsible for the establishment of a health or welfare fund financed by employer contributions unless such fund is administered jointly by employer and employes.

Originally directed against the miners' demands, the amendment was altered when its red-faced sponsors discovered that many CIO and AFL unions have such plans already in operation and that many of these are completely under union control. As it now reads, the amendment does not affect existing agreements.

WHAT FRIENDS OF LABOR SAID

SENATOR MEAD (D., N. Y.): "No one has yet come forward with a plan for the abolition of strikes which at the same times does not interfere with the free operation of collective bargaining. It is impossible to see how this miracle can be performed by this or any other legislative body. The gesture in that direction through the so-called Smith-Connally Act proved to be a mere gesture indeed, and it certainly disappointed its enthusiastic supporters and sponsors."

SEN. PEPPER (D., FLA.): "Let us take one of the amendments . . . an amendment requiring that labor unions shall register with the Securities and Exchange Commission and become incorporated . . . Every Senator knows it would accomplish nothing at all except to embitter labor . . . They would be further embittered because they would know that we had applied a rule to labor . . . that we had not applied to members of trade associations, the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, the United States Chamber of Commerce, the mine owners, the industries which might be associated in any other trade association."

SEN. TUNNELL (D., DEL.), talking on the Byrd amendment: "When we start to dig up anti-labor legislation, or anti-something else, we run into difficulties. If we were to start to write anti-employment legislation, for example, we would write some silly things. That is what has been done in this amendment, as I see it. A person is prohibited from giving away his own money . . ."

PLAN N.Y. CIO BUILDING

A central headquarters, costing about a million dollars, is reportedly being planned by the N. Y. City CIO Council for most of its affiliates. The move was dictated by the fact that many locals have found it impossible to retain sufficient space due to rising rents.

ALL EYES ON CONGRESS

The dignity and deliberation supposed to mark the United States Senate are being cast to the wind in the synthetic hysteria of one of the worst and phoniest anti-labor propaganda campaigns.

The less dignified House has repeatedly yielded to such hysterics. Only recently it passed the vicious union-busting Case bill.

But now many of the Senators are whipping themselves into a similar frenzy, and putting forth every conceivable proposal to destroy the rights and liberties of American working people.

The pretext for all this anti-labor hysteria is the public inconvenience suffered through strikes.

Anti-union manufacturers, big-business press and radio and reactionary members of Congress have long been whipping up excitement over such stoppages and seeking to direct resentment against the unions, instead of against the greedy, arrogant corporations which are primarily responsible.

This same gang had nothing to say about the public inconveniences caused by the mass sitdown of American industry awaiting repeal of the excess profits tax; about industry's sitdowns to force higher prices; about the kickbacks from the public treasury which have financed employers in locking out their workers.

The phony propaganda for anti-union legislation is based on these among other lies:

(1) That strikes are caused by workers rather than employers.

(2) That existing labor legislation is one-sided.

(3) That unions have unrestricted power which places corporations and the public at their mercy.

The truth is the very opposite.

The workers are the last to want strikes, because they suffer most from them. The records of labor disputes will show strike action is only taken as a last resort, when adjustment of intolerable grievances is not accorded through the normal and peaceful channels of collective bargaining.

The Wagner labor act is not one-sided. It was enacted to establish a fairer balance in collective bargaining by curbing the ruthless powers of corporations to crush union organization through discharges, denial of union recognition, etc.

The proposed amendments would destroy this balance and make the act a one-sided instrument of repression against labor.

As to labor being so powerful, that's a laugh! The overwhelming power in the United States resides with the owners of industry, the great financial monopolies.

Theirs is the life-and-death power to withhold jobs and goods from the people, at will, to hold up labor and the public until the most exorbitant profits are assured.

Their power extends so far that they can put over the present lying propaganda; make Congress jump to their every demand for greater profits; prevent passage of progressive social legislation; and now get Congress to act like a hired union-buster.

The eyes of the whole American people, and of labor voters in particular, must be kept on Congress. Watch how your representatives speak and act and vote.

Give encouragement and support to those who are fighting to keep America free; to defend labor's rights; and to remedy the real causes of industrial disputes, which arise from low wages, profiteering and special privilege for exploiting employers.

Study the records of those who are stooging for predatory wealth and voting to enchain labor and make it helpless to resist low wage exploitation. Let them know you will remember when you next go to the polls.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

NEWS ITEM: Chicago—Robt. R. Wason, president of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, today praised John L. Lewis for his record as a labor leader, etc., etc. Discussing the CIO organizing drive in the South, he said he preferred Lewis' record to that of CIO Chieftain Philip Murray. He praised the AFL, but predicted the CIO would succeed in its drive . . .

WHAT'S on, Mr. Wason? Your declaration of affection for John L. Lewis is confusing.

You're president of the NAM, spearhead of anti-unionism. For weeks your press and political stooges have been working up hysteria against the Big Bad Bogeyman with the Bushy Brows, to pass the union-busting Case bill.

Yet now you say Mr. Lewis is really a lovely man.

You're trying to cripple all unions. Yet you say you love the AFL.

What's on, Mr. Wason?

Is it possible to love Lewis, while you hate labor—to cherish your own bogeyman — to bust unions while you boost the AFL?

★ ★ ★

The blushing object of your affections must be wondering: "He loves me—he loves me not—he loves me."

At the Natl. Labor-Management Conference, the NAM joined hands with Lewis and the AFL against CIO efforts to pass a resolution for substantially higher wages.

The NAM loved Lewis then, particularly since he also called for a free-for-all on higher prices. So why has it since dissembled its love?

The tory Republicans also love Lewis—politically. But in their anti-labor drive in Congress, they have dissembled their love to the point of saying they want union-busting bills chiefly to bust Lewis.

★ ★ ★

These ups-and-downs in the love life of a labor leader seem confusing when looked at separately. But they can be fitted together like the parts of a jig-saw puzzle.

Back of both NAM and tory Republicans, and controlling most of the millionaire press, are the DuPonts and other reactionary big-business interests of their ilk.

Unlimited profiteering is their chief aim. The chief obstacles are price control, unions and political progressives. Their chief enemy is CIO, the best fighter for higher wages, lower prices and progressive political action.

For their purposes, they have found in Lewis a perfect tool—both to use and to abuse.

★ ★ ★

The DuPont and Pew families contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars to the Republican Party, helping among other things, to elect Rep. Francis Case, so he could introduce their union-busting bill.

To pass the Case bill, the DuPont-NAM crowd also needed a labor leader against whom they could build up public hysteria. Lewis was it. They set their press to work with a will.

But this did not diminish their affection for Lewis, nor their hopes of making other uses of him.

Was he not their political soulmate, sharing their hatred of all Roosevelt stood for? Did he not favor lifting the lid on prices? Did he not champion the NAM conception of "free enterprise?" Above all, was he not the bitter enemy of their chief enemy, the CIO.

So even while they made a bogeyman of Lewis, they sought to build him up—to paint a fictitious picture of a labor leader so fierce and powerful he always got results—though Lewis has never got results for the workers to compare with those won by Philip Murray and the CIO.

★ ★ ★

Wason's praise for the AFL in the South was another tip-off. It indicated NAM's hopes of using the AFL as a company-union offset to the CIO—a role the AFL seems more than willing to accept.

Ralph McGill of the Atlanta Constitution reports hearing AFL leaders, at Asheville, N.C., laughing as they told of printing and distributing phony "CIO handbills" in certain towns.

"Then we wait two or three days and come in," they said. "Every time, the mill-owners fall over themselves to help us organize. They don't want CIO."

But the workers do want CIO, for the same reason such employers don't, because it brings the best results in wages and conditions.

So, even while he praised the AFL and knocked the CIO, NAM's Wason also dolefully predicted CIO's success.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, L. S. Buckmaster, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 May 27, 1946 No. 22

FUR UNION PLANS SOUTHERN DRIVE

THE CIO Fur and Leather Workers at their 16th annual convention at Atlantic City, N. J., this week heard reports of unprecedented gains made by the union since the last convention and mapped plans for continued growth, particularly in the South.

Gains since the last convention include job security, health and old age retirement funds, paid all or part by employers, and average increases of from 15c to 22c an hour since V-J Day.

With 100,000 members in 140 locals in the U. S. and Canada, the union has organized over 95% of the fur workers and 85% of the leather workers.

The union's executive board called on the convention to press for improved health and old age retirement funds to be paid by employers, a veterans' aid program, a project for government-run fur ranches and a drive for wage increases in the event of inflation.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice-president and director of organization, told the story of the CIO's organizing drive and praised the union for paying promptly its contribution to the campaign.

Outlining the gains already made by IFLWU in the South, Hardy Scott, president of the union's southern sub-district council, said that the union had won a quarter of a million dollars in pay raises for approximately 500 workers in eight southern states since the last convention.

Both IFLWU Pres. Ben Gold and CIO Counsel Lee Pressman in speeches to the convention praised the policy statement expressed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray at the Steelworkers' convention. Referring to Murray's statement, Pressman said:

"That statement expressed for the United Steelworkers and for the CIO the principle on which the CIO was founded . . . to organize into our unions men and women regardless of their race, creed and political beliefs . . .

PRES. BEN GOLD

so that all of them shall enjoy their democratic rights in our organization . . .

"Your organization is one of those in the CIO which have lived up to the principles expressed by CIO President Murray."

Urging all-out political action, Pressman declared that "if we are to hold our gains and move forward to a democratic era the rank and file of the CIO must march out in November to make certain that only progressive candidates are elected."

Commenting on Murray's statement of policy adopted by the steelworkers' convention, Gold declared, "Murray smashed the hopes of those who sought to divide and weaken and undermine the unions by red-baiting, eliminating Communists and progressives and honest union members from office and from the unions themselves."

Referring to the Fur Workers' early bitter struggles against AFL-fostered dissension, Gold said: "If, during the years from 1921 to 1935, there had been a leader who had had the courage and understanding to take the position that Murray has taken—that trade unions shall not be made an instrument of repression and interference with their members' beliefs—our union would not have been forced to go through so many years of battles, starvation and misery."

In the report of the executive board, approved by the convention, the union took a strong position for close friendship between the U. S. and the Soviet Union to avert the possibility of a third world war.

It charged the Truman administration with deviating from "the Roosevelt policy expressed in the Teheran three-power declaration," and urged the CIO "to initiate a struggle for disarmament of all nations instead of the present armament race."

The report called for intensified struggle against "the greedy reactionary monopolistic forces whom the late President Roosevelt rightly termed 'economic royalists'."

It urged that consideration be given to the nationalization of the monopolies, declaring that failure to curb their "Frankenstein powers" would "spell disaster for the common man, inviting even greater chaos than the terrible years of Hoover and . . . the 2nd world war."

The union wired President Truman late this week, asking intervention in the coal and rail strikes to help the workers secure their wage demands.

CIO SIGNS UP FUR TRAPPERS

Union-made from the time the mink or muskrat is trapped until it adorns milady's neck is the aim of the CIO Fur & Leathers Workers. Delegates to the IFLWU convention at Atlantic City this week reported that four locals of fur trappers have already been organized in the South. Workers processing and finishing furs are now approaching 100% organization in the IFLWU.

Hilton Rink, Morgan City, Pa., himself a trapper, said that the previous attempts to organize the trappers during the past 20 years had failed, but that the CIO is the organization they have been looking for.

Pres. Ben Gold of the IFLWU declared that "these trappers catch alligators bigger than men. God help some of the politicians if men like Hilton Rink get after their skins."

SECRECY VEILS BILL AIDING BOSSES

By FRED ROSS

IT is an open but hitherto unpublished secret in Washington, D. C., that Management Planning, Inc., is responsible for the Andrews Bill (HR 6035) which would relieve employers from the necessity of paying back wages no matter how the Supreme Court rules on super-seniority.

The bill, which has been reported out by the House Military Affairs Committee and is now on the House calendar, provides that an employer would not have to give back pay to a non-veteran displaced by a veteran with less seniority—super-seniority — or to a veteran refused a job to which the court may find he was entitled.

Robert McMillian, Management Planning representative and former Senate Legislative office employe, is credited with being the man who persuaded his committee members that the bill should be given the "go" signal. Who Management Planning represents is not absolutely clear, although it is reported that it speaks for certain West Coast business interests.

That there is secrecy around the favorable report on the bill is not surprising in view of the fact that there were no hearings on the measure, but a letter was solicited by the committee from Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director.

Hershey surprisingly enough wrote there was "serious doubt" as to the validity of rulings by Selective Service and that he would not recommend that the ruling on super-seniority—issued by his own agency—should form the basis of any legislation.

Seeking to penetrate the veil of secrecy, Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Veterans Committee this week wrote Sen. Elbert Thomas (D., Utah), chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, asking an opportunity to testify against S 2040, which is similar to the Andrews Bill.

HIT GROVES' ATOM BOMB DICTATORSHIP

Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, the man who wants the Army named permanent stepfather of the atomic bomb, this week found a firecracker under his seat. It was placed there by the editor of Popular Science magazine.

The publication took a full page to criticize Groves' refusal to provide the magazine with pictures of the Oak Ridge atomic bomb project. The pictures were needed to illustrate a medical article.

Popular Science said:

"Ours is only one of many cases against General Groves. He has larger charges to answer to. In the name of military security, he has discouraged every effort to apply the lessons of atomic research to the improvement of the civilian economy. He has blocked every move toward civilian control of atomic processes."

Stop playing soldier and come to sleep like a civilian.....

'EVERY VET A VOTE'—AVC AIM

WITH the prediction that the veteran vote will swing elections in many key districts, the American Veterans Committee this week announced at Washington, D. C., the opening of a campaign "to make every veteran a voter."

As a first step in the campaign all AVC chapters are being sent an analysis of the voting records of members of Congress on key issues and an estimate of the number of votes necessary to swing close Congressional races.

The 500 AVC chapters from coast to coast are joining in an intensive canvass of veterans in their Congressional Districts urging all veterans to register and vote in both primary and general elections.

The AVC constitution prohibits the organization from backing political candidates but members are urged to form independent veterans' committees for this purpose.

Voting records of Representatives and Senators on nine key issues are now being distributed among AVC chapters. The analysis registers the vote on each issue but it is left up to the individual to decide the merits of his legislator's voting record.

BARE LEGION'S SECRET MINUTES

A CHARGE that the American Legion is seeking to squelch and if possible eliminate labor posts from its ranks was made this week at N. Y. City by officers of the Natl. Conference of Union Labor Legionnaires.

Maurice Frank, judge advocate of the labor legionnaires, made public a heretofore suppressed report of a secret star-chamber session of the Legion's Natl. executive committee weighing action against the unionists.

"The Legion," said NCULL Vice Pres. Henry Geisz, "is trying to find ways and means of doing away with both labor posts themselves or the individuals in them. They fear democracy since the present top leadership remains in power only by suppressing rank-and-file sentiment."

The NCULL is called an unauthorized and illegal group in the suppressed report, which the labor group obtained through independent means after being denied a copy by Legion officials. The report cites the opposition of the union veterans to Legion policy on these issues: Indorsement of Henry A. Wallace for Secretary of Commerce, support of the 65c minimum wage bill and opposition to military conscription.

"We are making the report public," Charles A. Vencill, conference president, said, "because we take exception to the arbitrary exercise of gag rule by high-ranking Legion officials." Vencill expressed his belief in the Legion as an organization for the public good, adding: "We want only an extension of the Bill of Rights and freedom of speech into Legion affairs."

Delegates from 138 posts affiliated with the labor legionnaires were scheduled to open their annual convention May 24 in Brooklyn.

SEN. PEPPER TELLS OF G' PROTESTS

Sen. Pepper (D. Fla.) last week called the attention of the Senate to a group of war amputees from Thomas M. England Hospital, Atlantic City, and Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, who came to the Capitol to protest against anti-union legislation.

He declared that "it was worthy of note" that "men who made almost the complete sacrifice for their country . . . feel that there is under attack the right of labor to organize and to bargain collectively."

Pepper later pointed out that not a word appeared in the press about the delegation, which brought a petition against anti-labor legislation signed by veterans from almost every state.

1 Double headache—to workers and the public—is the timber industry. Its pay is low, its accident rate highest in manufacturing, with logging leading and sawmill work running second. Its inefficiency and high prices (wholesale rates are 80% above the '39 average) are slowing up construction of badly needed homes. Most workers—like the high climber above—work for small producers, particularly in the South.

2 Major union in the industry is the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America, currently negotiating for wage increases for more than 40,000 workers in Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho and Montana. IWA-CIO points to Northwest Douglas fir lumber prices—up 80% since 1940. Wages there have risen only 56%. There's a $1.05 an hour current minimum in the fir industry, and 97½c to $1.02½ in pine. IWA-CIO charges big operators want to provoke a strike, lay the blame for shortages on the union, then pressure for still higher prices on scarce lumber. Logs are dumped from train, rafted and floated to mill.

3 Key man in the saw mill is the head sawyer. Herman Hartzell has been men in the mill can do his job. His weekly take-home is about $65 for m a day.

TIMBER—SNAF

Story by Polly Gladish and Fre

JOHN P. SMITH is in a bad way. He wants to build a home. About 10 million other people do too. The basic material they are bidding for is lumber. Its price is going up and its quantity and quality are going down.

Multiply John P. Smith's headache by 10. You'll get a product that, 20 years from now, will plague John Smith Jr.—unless Uncle Sam takes off the blinders and does something about the timber industry.

Current termite is the flat refusal of war-rich Northwest timber operators to grant wage demands of the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America. Big fir operators who set the wage pattern for the area have forced a strike vote by 40,000 workers who want better pay. Negotiations are stalemated.

The operators are offering 3½c an hour raise, and clauses that would break down working conditions that the union has fought hard to establish. The union is basing its demands, for a raise of 12½c an hour, sick leave and protection of existing contract clauses, chiefly on the extremely favorable price and profit structure of the industry and the hazardous, arduous and often seasonal character of the work.

The union cites Congressional testimony showing the low wage pattern of the industry, with 239,000 out of 443,000 lumber and timber workers receiving less than 65c an hour. Lumber is second only to tobacco in the proportion of employes under 65c an hour. "That," says the union, "is the record of an industry whose prices in 1945 were more than three times as high as in 1914."

IWA-CIO points out that wholesal lumber prices already are 80% abov the 1939 average, while the averag wholesale price of all commodities i ony 41% higher. "These fantasti prices," the union says, "are not cos of-production prices—they are holdu prices designed to exploit the lumbe shortage for the benefit of a few co porations. And the heat is on to pus the prices still higher."

Will prices boost production? Th last 10 years' record says no. Figure from the Bureau of Labor Statistic on prices, and the U. S. Forest Servic on production, show:

Year	Average Price 1926 equals 100	Production Billions of Board Feet
1925	100.6	41
1941	122.5	37.8
1944	153.3	32.6
1945	155.1	27.4

"Recent price increases have bee granted through pressure on the OP with the implication that such i creases would stimulate production says the union, "but the IWA wishe to point out that unless some of th present profits are passed along t the employes and a recruitment o skilled manpower is pushed by bot management and labor, lumber pro duction for our present and futur needs will not be forthcoming. You d not produce logs and lumber wit profits, but with highly skilled man power, sweat and satisfied labor, alon with a sound technical knowledge o the lumber industry."

The union says the governmen hopes to build a million houses i 1946, and meet all other needs a well, with 32 to 33 billion board fee But production the first seven week of this year was even less than i ll has been on the job 19 years at Weyerhaeuser Plant B, Everett, Wash. Only four or five other t $65 for manipulating the complicated head rig that slashes off a million board feet of lumber

4 "Sure I want to keep on in the mill if there's plenty work, but if it's irregular, then naturally I'll want to get out," says Sigfred Hansen, who has three sons and used to run a grocery before the war. IWA-CIO says the best way to keep workers in the industry is to pay better wages. The union is asking 12½c an hour raise. The industry is offering 3½c. "Lumber workers have always been paid low wages, worked long hours at strenuous and hazardous work with the lowest type of working and living conditions," says the union.

AFU FOR HOUSING

n and Fred d'Avila ● Pictures by Bud Harless at wholesale e 80% above the average mmodities is se fantastic are not cost-

y are holdup
t the lumber of a few cor-
s on to push luction? The no. Figures, or Statistics

orest Service

Production Billions of Board Feet
41
37.8
32.6
27.4

s have been on the OPA at such in-production," IWA wishes
some of the ed along to cruitment of hed by both lumber proand future ming. You do lumber with skilled man-labor, along knowledge of government n houses in er needs as board feet.

seven weeks less than in 1945, when only 27.4 billion feet of lumber was cut!

What's the answer? IWA-CIO has two of them. One's for now, the other's for the future.

The first calls for wages and working conditions which take into account the hazardous nature of the work and the favorable profit position of the industry. It urges government subsidies to low margin, small producers to keep them in business at least during the critical lumber shortage. It calls for stringent control of already inflated prices. It asks repeal of the carry-back, carry-forward provisions of the tax laws which allow some of the larger firms to idle at the expense of the U. S. Treasury.

The second part of the program is more ambitious. And yet just as necessary if we are going to save our fast dwindling forests from the black market and marginal producers' ruthless axes.

IWA-CIO points out that roughly 70% of U. S. timber lands are held in tracts of less than 5,000 acres by some five million different owners. And most of the logging over the nation is done by small operators.

The union says that such operators—like small farmers—are not financially able to pay for research and for scientific forestry, unless they get government assistance.

The union says that these operators—gram to aid them, the workers and the nation:

1. Government assistance to owners and operators to improve their efficiency, to increase production and to gear in current production with long range forest conservation. Until that is done, the union says, production will lag, lumber prices will be unnecessarily high and our timber reserves will shrink before the onslaught of destructive logging.

2. Use of government police powers to guarantee that scientific forestry is practiced on all come commercial logging jobs.

3. Vigorous action by industry and government to use waste wood for making building materials which can pinch-hit for ordinary lumber. Millions of tons of wood by-products are wasted each year, the union declares. Processes are available for making fiber board, plastic board and fabricated lumber from this waste wood. Yet only a few companies are doing anything about it, because many of the firms are hamstrung by the tradition of making only ordinary lumber, which means that 70% of the tree is wasted.

Much of what the union is asking for is contained in two bills now before Congress, HR 5973 introduced by Rep. Thom (D. O.) and HR 6221 by Rep. Hook (D. Mich.) The former tackles the immediate production job, and the latter gears it in with the long time conservation program.

Action now is necessary, the union warns, for generations of misuse and waste of forest resources are catching up with us. If we build millions of houses in the next 10 years, and pay no more attention to the problems of forest destruction and wood waste than we have in the past, thousands of our sawtimber stands will be wiped out.

And John P. Smith's headache today will be just about 10 times bigger 20 years from now for John Smith, Jr.

5 Buckers like Logan Dodson, who works for a small independent operator, each day saw up from 40 to 60 fallen trees into log lengths of 24 to 40 feet. Small operators are frequently inefficient. They are numerous in the South but are a minority in the Northwest. IWA-CIO says they need help and policing—to boost production by scientific lumbering and to prevent them from wasting natural resources. Recommended also are raised wages to keep manpower in the industry, control of already too inflated prices, and repeal of the carry-back, carry-forward provisions of the tax law to get big companies, idle at government expense, interested in production.

CIO GETS SEAT ON ILO

EQUAL representation for CIO and AFL in the Intl. Labor Organization — a goal long sought by CIO — was finally achieved last week. Sec. of Labor Lewis Schwellenbach informed CIO Pres. Philip Murray that all future appointments will be alternated between the two labor organizations.

"The Congress of Industrial Organizations is ready to accept the solution which you have offered," Murray wrote to Schwellenbach, "namely, that the designation of the labor delegate to each successive ILO Conference will be rotated between the AFL and CIO."

AFL leaders have long sought monopoly representation in the international body, which was formed after the Treaty of Versailles to promote and develop improved labor standards throughout the world. CIO representatives have served as "advisors" to the American labor delegate at recent general conferences of the ILO.

The next major confab is slated for Montreal, Canada, in September, and it is anticipated that the U. S. labor representative will be a CIO official.

In his letter to the Secretary of Labor, Murray noted that there is "some natural disappointment" over the appointment of Harry Lundeberg of the AFL Seafarers' Intl. Union, as the union delegate to the ILO maritime conference in Seattle early in June. However, there will be five advisors from CIO maritime union ranks.

Meanwhile the ILO, whose governing body meets in Montreal this month, has announced that conferences will be held in the near future with the United Nations to determine their future relationship.

Italians urge the overthrow of Umberto II, their new king. This denunciation of the monarch expresses the people's temper as they prepare for the June 2 elections. (Federated Pictures)

EDUCATION NEWS

Committee Seeks Funds

An appropriation to extend workers' education activities in the Dept. of Labor's Division of Labor Standards is being urged by the Committee for the Extension of Labor Education, a group composed of some 30 labor representatives and others interested in workers' education. Hilda Smith is chairman of the group.

Ultimate aim of the Committee is to obtain a Labor Extension Service in the Dept. of Labor similar to the Extension Service in the Dept. of Agriculture. Meanwhile it is pressing for funds to extend the labor education services of the Division of Labor Standards.

A request for $37,000 for this purpose, included in the Dept. of Labor's 1947 budget, has been approved by the Budget Bureau and will now have to be passed on by the Subcommittee on Labor & Federal Security of the House Appropriations Committee, before it can come before Congress for final action.

The Division of Labor Standards plans to use the funds to meet more adequate requests for pamphlets, class outlines, films and other teaching material sent in by unions, universities and other institutions engaged in labor education.

The present Committee for the Extension of Labor Education, which was set up in September 1945 at a two-day conference called for Sec. of Labor Schwellenbach, grew out of a committee started in 1937 under the name of Labor Advisory Council for the WPA Workers Service Program.

In 1942 a group of labor people met at the White House at the invitation of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and drew up recommendations for a proposed program, and the same year the plan for a Labor Extension Service was endorsed by both the CIO and AFL conventions.

After the WPA was discontinued in 1942, an interim committee kept the cause alive until the formation of the present committee last September.

CIO members of the Committee, all of whom serve as individuals, include Emory Bacon, United Steelworkers; Kermit Eby and George Guernsey, Natl. CIO Dept. of Education & Research; John Edelman and Laurence Rogin Textile Workers; and Alan Strachan and Jack Zeller, Auto Workers.

Steel Union Institutes

A series of one-week labor institutes sponsored by the United Steelworkers of America will be held this summer at Penn State College, University of Illinois and Antioch College, it was reported at the USA-CIO convention last week in Atlantic City.

The program planned for Penn State, a land grant college supported by public funds, will enable 400 officers and members to attend one of the four weekly institutions which will be held July 8 and Aug. 3. Similar conferences are scheduled at the University of Illinois and at Antioch College in Ohio, the report stated.

The possibility of extending to labor the facilities of other land grant colleges for programs similar to the experimental project at Penn State, was discussed by Clinton Golden, assistant to the USA-CIO President.

Pointing out that these land grant colleges which exist in nearly every state, are supported by all people within the state through taxation, Golden said that so far they have been concerned primarily with rendering service to business and agricultural interests, "and have not generally been thought of as institutions concerned with the training of people in the labor movement."

The USA-CIO institutes have the two-fold aim of providing courses dealing with subjects that will better equip local officers and staff men in performance of their jobs and also make available a week of recreation and sports.

School For Voters

Old-line politicians are in for another bad shock. Having long taken it for granted that voters know their place and wouldn't think of stepping out of it to stick their noses in the political arena, many politicians will snort indignantly when they learn that voters are going to be taught how the political game is played.

For that's what some 500 average voters will be taught at the new school which the National Citizens Political Action Committee has just announced. Called the School of Political Action Technique, this unique educational venture will be held at the Willard Hotel in Washington for four days beginning June 26. The school will be open to anyone but attendance will be limited to 500 students.

The roster of faculty and discussion leaders includes Dr. Elmo Roper, public opinion analyst; Pare Lorenz, motion picture director; Dr. Frank Kingdon, chairman of the NC-PAC; Allan Lomax, former librarian of the Archives of American Folk Songs, Library of Congress; Elmer Benson, former Governor of Minnesota; Thomas J. Brandon, pres., Public Affairs Films Production Co.; Sam O'Neil, public relations director, Democratic Natl. Committee; Verda Barnes, CIO-PAC Women's Division director; Dr. Hadley Cantril, Princeton Univ.; Robert Heller, Columbia Broadcasting director; and Clark Foreman, pres., Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

C. B. Baldwin, director of the school and exec. vice-chairman of the NC-PAC, said the school "is a natural outgrowth of a growing political consciousness on the part of the voters of America. We believe that it represents an important forward step in American political life. Politics has been too nearly monopolized by political machines. It is time that it becomes the business of every citizen."

A catalog describing courses, faculty, fees and other information may be obtained from the National Citizens PAC, 205 East 42nd St., New York, 17, N.Y.

Avoiding Atom War

Only a strong, democratic world government can avoid an atomic war in the near future, Dr. M. T. Kelley, representing the Association of Oak Ridge Scientists, told students at the Southern CIO Term in session at Highlander Folk School.

Speaking at a meeting held at the labor school last week, Dr. Kelley declared that rockets armed with atomic bombs could destroy half of the major cities in the United States in a single day. He warned of the danger involved in placing the control of atomic energy under a military commision.

CIO delegates to the meeting, representing nearly 17,000 organized workers in the South, made plans to urge their congressmen to place control of atomic energy in the hands of a civilian commission as provided in the McMahon Bill now before the Senate.

LABOR'S WORLD

Moscow will be the site of the next executive committee meeting of the World Federation of Trade Unions. Sessions will be held June 16-18, and will be concerned with a big agenda.

Slated to come before the meeting are such questions as the WFTU's investigation of the German union problem; the relations between the UN's Economic & Social Council and the world labor organization; and relations with the Greek labor federation. It is also expected that a strong statement concerning Franco Spain may be forthcoming.

The WFTU may set in motion plans for a delegation to visit Japan, as it has already done in Germany; devising methods of help to unions in colonial or mandated territorities; and for defending labor rights throughout the world.

CIO will be represented at the Moscow gathering.

* * *

The Brazilian government has taken violent action against 194 union longshoremen in the big port of Santos who refused to handle cargo from a ship flying the flag of fascist Spain. At the instigation of Labor Minister Negrao Lima, 700 sailors were brought into port to carry out arrests of the workers and the closing of their union hall.

Brazilian labor answered the government official's red-baiting charges with warnings that "Brazil's problems can't be settled with tanks and guns."

* * *

The CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee, representing over 6 million organized workers in the U. S. has called on the government of Brazil to cease immediately its anti-labor activity and to accord trade unions the essential rights of organization and affiliation on the basis of international commitments to which Brazil is a party.

The CIO Committee pointed out that recent moves of the Brazilian government were clearly designed and calculated to break up the labor movement in that country and noted that even such a conservative publication as "Time Magazine" was declaring this week that instead of resorting to "crude, soldierly" anti-labor moves, the Brazilian government had better do something about that country's "runaway inflation."

* * *

China's big wartime industrial base in the western part of the country is being paralyzed by a run-away shop technique used by both government and private employers, according to a Far Eastern dispatch to Allied Labor News.

At the beginning of the war, factories and workers were moved at great effort to the interior of the country to save them from the enemy. The story of that cross-country movement attracted world attention. Now, instead of continuing to operate in these rural areas which need industry, owners are taking their money back to the coast regions where higher profits are available. Workers in the interior are being left high and dry as the factories close, since the firms are refusing to pay expenses for moving them to their original homes.

In Shanghai, meanwhile, workers are rebelling at the maintenance of the same wage rates paid during the Japanese occupation. Officials figures show 10,000 walkouts among the city's two million industrial workers since V-J day. Government officials are using both troops and, as in pre-war days, gangsters to crush labor and seize control of the unions.

FEPC LAW PASSED IN MILWAUKEE

Determined pressure has forced the Milwaukee common council to pass a fair employment practices ordinance, making it the second city in the country to outlaw job discrimination. Chicago was the first to pass its own FEPC law.

The Milwaukee ordinance calls for a fine of $10 or five days in jail for discrimination because of race, color or creed. It was passed only after some 200 Milwaukee citizens went to a meeting of the judiciary committee, in whose hands the bill was languishing, and forced an open hearing.

ORGANIZING

BY ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

A. R. Hardesty, CIO Sub-Reg. Director, Dallas, Tex., reports: Fleming Mill, Dallas, Tex., CIO 103, against 78.

John Collins, Asst. Reg. Dir., Boston, Mass., reports: R & G Company, Attleboro, Mass., PJNWIU-CIO 44, no union 33.

G. George DeNucci, CIO Reg. Dir., Columbus, Ohio, reports: Moores & Ross Milk Co. (Borden), Newark, Ohio, CIO 25, independent 19, neither 1. Representative Al Carson was in charge.

Harvey O'Connor, Publicity Director, Oil Workers International Union, reports: Oil Workers Intl. Union won the CCMO election, Taft, Calif., Dist. Dir. J. Elro Brown reported. The vote was OWIU-CIO 180, AFL 120. Election covered field and production workers in California, who will become members of Taft Local 6, Bakersfield Local 19, Ventura Local 120 and Long Beach Local 128. This was a run-off election, OWIU having failed by one vote of receiving a majority in the first election.

G. George DeNucci, CIO Reg. Dir., Columbus, Ohio, reports: Prima Shoe Company, Columbus, Ohio, USWA-CIO 39, against 31. USWA Representative Emerson Pence was in charge.

Joe Dernoncourt, CIO Reg. Dir., Oklahoma City, Okla., reports: Big Chief Tailings Company voted for MMSW-CIO, 32 to 1. Organizing activities were directed by Howard Lee of the MMSW-CIO.

Walter H. Harris, CIO Reg. Dir., Chicago, Ill., reports: The Washburn Co., Andrews' Div., Rockford, Ill. (production and maintenance employes), UERMWA-CIO 38, against 34.

Gene Derrickson, CIO Field Rep., Wilmington, Del., reports: Phenolite Company, Kennett Square, UERMWA-CIO 129, no union 20.

George Brown, Dir. of Orgn., IWA-CIO, reports: Hanset Lumber Co., Tillamook, Ore., CIO 28, AFL 0. Leonard Simmons was in charge. Brewer Lumber Mills, Spokane, Wash., granted recognition to IWA-CIO. Election involved 25 men. R. Engleking, CIO Field Representative, and Orley Armstrong, Dist. President, were in charge.

Irwin L. DeShetler, CIO Reg. Dir., Kansas City, Mo., reports: Fisher Body Plant, General Motors, production clerks, UAW-CIO 6, against 3. Andy Clinton was in charge.

C. W. Fowler, Press and Publicity Director, FTA-CIO, reports: P. Lorillard Co., Lancaster, Pa., FTA-CIO 56, no union 26, AFL 6. FTA-CIO won bargaining rights in consent election at King-Cole Candy Co., Chicago, Ill.

John J. Maurillo, CIO Sub-Reg. Dir., Syracuse, N. Y., reports: Delavans Paper Box Company, Inc., Syracuse, N. Y., UPA-CIO 48, AFL 23, no union 1. This plant was organized by Harry Buckeye, assisted by the Sub-Regional Office.

Local 1981, USA-CIO, started the year with an ambitious organizing campaign which is now bearing fruit. Bond Crown of California, with 120 employes, has been organized, a contract signed up. Naco Mfg. Co., operating under a maintenance of membership contract, made their membership 100% with a "Dawn Patrol" card check which brought in 45 new members. Elections soon will be held in the following plants where the USA-CIO has a majority of the employes signed up: Colson Equipment and Supply Co.; Essex Wire Co., Anaheim; California Corrugated Culvert Co.; State Steel Co., Anaheim.

Pres. Reid Robinson, of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, reports employes in the following plants have voted for the IUMMSW: Aluminum Magnesium, Inc., Sandusky, Ohio; Baker & Co., Inc., Newark, N. J.; Birdseye Mills, Macon, Ga.; Burns Brick Co., Macon, Ga.; Calgary Iron Works, Calgary, Alberta; Canastota Die Moulding, Syracuse, N. Y.; Cherokee & Bibb Brick Co., Macon, Ga.; Columbia Compress Co., Columbia, Miss.; Darwin Lead Mine. Darwin, Calif.; Eagle-Shawmut Mine, Sonora, Calif.; Hinsdale Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill.; Lehigh Portland Cement Co., Metaline Falls, Wash.; Standard Feed Miling Co., Macon, Ga.; Magnus Metals Div. of National Lead Co., Los Angeles, Calif.; Middle Georgia Lumber Co., Macon, Ga.; Molybdenum Corp. of America, Empire, Colo.; National Lead Co., Atlantic Branch, Brooklyn, N. Y.; New Hilarity Mine, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho; Osburn Tailings Plant, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho; Southern States Iron & Roofing Co., Macon, Ga.

Correction: The victory at the Sylvania Corp., Emporium, Pa., was reported as UE-CIO 668; no union 513; and should have been UE-CIO 558; no union 513.

The United Steelworkers of America-CIO held the largest labor convention ever held in this country. It was a success in every way.

TO PUT IT BRIEFLY

Uniform agreements with eight Goodrich plants is the aim of negotiations begun this week by the CIO United Rubber Workers. Contract proposals drafted last week at a meeting of URWA local presidents at Akron, Ohio, included union shop plus check-off, wage reopening clause, sick leave and no reduction in the working force until the six-hour work day is instituted.

Plant negotiations for uniform contracts are planned with the other members of the Big Four—Firestone, U. S. Rubber and Goodyear, who with Goodrich recently agreed to increase wages 18½c an hour.

★ ★ ★

Fines of $10 to $100 or 30 to 90 days in jail imposed by a police court judge on 63 pickets of the CIO Auto Workers last week will be appealed to the Michigan supreme court and if necessary to the U. S. Supreme Court, the UAW announced this week. The pickets were arrested while in front of the home of an official of the Michigan Steel Products Co.

It Happened in Alabama

FARMERS, STRIKERS IGNORE TERROR

By TRAVIS K. HEDRICK
Federated Press

IN A beautifully wooded grove beside a lake 18 miles from Andalusia, Ala., May 18, 2,000 workers, farmers and their families gathered together in an all-day barbecue and singing to prove that southern terror cannot stop the fight of unionism against sweatshops.

The event was arranged by the farmers of Covington County on the Florida line with striking workers of Andalusia's three factories as guests. It was staged against a background of potential and actual terrorism instigated in behalf of this community's mayor, J. G. Scherf, who owns the three struck mills.

Andalusia businessmen 132 strong signed a full-page advertisement lauding the "loyal employes" who are scabbing in the shops and warning "out of town and out of state organizers" of their actions. It called organizers of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers "uninvited and unwanted visitors."

Earlier a vigilante mob of more than 50 men waylaid two automobiles driven by women in an effort to "get those agitators"—two strikers who had visited an injured friend in nearby Brantley, Ala. After being insulted and threatened by the mob, the women were permitted to proceed without further incident but were warned not to come back.

Gov. Chauncey Sparks, visited by a delegation of strikers, promised the state would not stand for violence and that "if industries are afforded protection certainly labor has the right to demand equal protection."

Pres. E. E. Alexander of the Commercial Bank at Andalusia doesn't feel that way. He told Striker Paul Godwin: "I'm going to do all in my power to see the CIO run out of Andalusia."

The workers however chartered their union, ACW Local 439, to see it stay in town. Continued low wages, sweatshop working conditions and an accumulation of unsettled grievances and misadjusted wage rates brought a strike March 20 when a worker was discharged on a super-seniority ruling of the management.

Mayor Scherf got an injunction almost immediately prohibiting more than five pickets at each of his three mills. His police gave the workers a pushing around. The weeklies he controlled printed threats and long, bitter attacks on the ACW, its officers and organizers.

The newspapers bragged the strike would be over shortly. But nine weeks have passed and the solidarity of the workers is continually increasing. The mills operate but at increasing loss of production.

DRIVE OFFICE'S NEW ADDRESS

Headquarters of the CIO's organizing drive in the South, originally slated to be in the Atlanta regional office, have been established at 79½ Poplar Street, N. W., Atlanta, it was announced by Van A. Bittner, director of the drive.

Phone number at the headquarters is Cyprus 5065.

Bittner also announced appointment of a number of regional directors for the campaign to unionize a million Southern workers. They include: Arkansas, Walter Harris; Georgia, C. H. Gilman; Kentucky, William Billingsley; Louisiana, Fred Peiper; North Carolina, William C. Smith; Texas, Robert Oliver, and Virginia, Ernest Pugh.

Steelworkers' Convention

DEMANDS OUSTER OF SMALL

PRESIDENT Truman was asked to request the resignation of Civilian Production Administrator John D. Small, in a blistering resolution adopted by the CIO United Steelworkers, during the closing sessions of their convention last week. Small has called for legislation outlawing strikes for six months.

Labor Sec. Lewis Schwellenbach received a hearty welcome from the delegates. He called for establishment of a permanent FEPC and passage of the 65c minimum wage bill, and praised CIO political activity.

"Whenever a labor union attempts to do something to better the conditions of the people of the country, that is called insidious political activity," Schwellenbach said.

"I don't know of any reason in the world why the organized workers of America haven't just as much right to take an interest in the results in a free election as any other part of our population."

In his concluding speech, Pres. Philip Murray urged the delegates to make political action their No. 1 project. "Labor has been fighting with its back to the wall," he said, to retain progressive legislation won from 1933 to 1935.

In other actions, the convention voted to raise monthly dues from $1 to $1.50, and changed the titles of Van A. Bittner and Clinton Golden from Assistant to the President to Vice-President.

41ST AFFILIATE GETS CHARTER

THE Amalgamated Lithographers of America this week became the 41st CIO affiliate when CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey presented the former AFL union with a charter at its eighth international convention at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Pres. William J. Riehl of the Lithographers received the charter on behalf of the organization's 20,000 members.

Expressing his pleasure, at being able to welcome this well-established union into the growing ranks of the CIO, Carey said that although this was the first graphic arts union to join the CIO, he was confident others would follow.

"You may be sure," Carey declared, "that the jurisdictional problems with which you have been faced for years under the AFL, will not plague you now. Your new parent body will give you every support in its power, and it has much strength."

Carey declared that the newest affiliate would aid the CIO in obtaining its great objectives of abolishing war and mass unemployment.

The Lithographers withdrew from the AFL several months ago because the AFL did not support their union label, or back them in jurisdictional disputes.

PJNW MEMBERSHIP UP 75%

MEMBERSHIP of the CIO Plaything, Jewelry & Novelty Workers Union has increased 75% since the previous convention two years ago, Pres. Anthony H. Esposito reported to the 170 delegates attending the union's fourth convention in Atlantic City this week.

Emphasizing the necessity for intensified organizational activity, Esposito pointed out that "the two great threats to the welfare of the American workers come from the open-shop anti-union employers on the one hand, and their reactionary collaborators in Congress on the other."

He declared that while it is necessary to preserve labor's gains against the attacks launched by poll-tax Democrats and the union-busting Republicans in Congress, workers should not align themselves with extremists, thus ignoring "the essential value of civil liberties and our way of life."

Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice-president and director of organization, predicted that the CIO southern organizing drive would prove successful, while the AFL efforts to organize the South would fail.

Turning to the World Federation of Trade Unions, Haywood asserted that the hope of the world's future depends on its success or failure. He pointed out that the only labor movements not belonging to WFTU are "those of Japan, Germany—and the AFL."

On behalf of the convention, Esposito presented Haywood with a wrist watch made entirely by PJNW members as a token of appreciation for his guidance of the union. Robert C. Edwards, director of the PJNW Organizing Committee, was presented by Esposito with a wrist watch in appreciation of his services to the union.

The officers and the executive board recommended that the per capita payments to the international be increased from 50c to 75c and the minimum monthly dues from $1 to $1.50, Sec.-Treas. Alex Bail told the convention.

TOMORROW'S CITIZENS — By Rose H. Alschuler

ARE YOU PROTECTING YOUR CHILD?

Children are apt to play in the street. Hooking a ride is fun, but if this youngster fell into the path of another car, his life might be ruined or lost. If you want to protect your child from danger, ask yourself: (1) Has my child a good, properly equipped playground where he can play at all times? (2) Have I taught my child how and when to cross streets? (3) Have I warned my child against the dangers of street play and hooking rides? We repeat—are you protecting your child?

Photo by Three Lions

ASKS REORGANIZATION PLAN CHANGE

The U. S. Childrens Bureau will be stripped of authority to promote better health and welfare programs for children under the Social Security Act, if the present plan to transfer the Bureau from the Labor Dept. to the Federal Security Administration goes through, warns CIO Legislation Representative Nathan Cowan.

In a letter sent to President Truman this week, Cowan urged that Reorganization Plan No. 2 be amended in order to protect the powers of the Childrens Bureau. He charged that as the working plan now stands, it "is an open invitation to the Federal Security Administrator to hand over the Bureau's programs to any office in his agency he fancies.

"Even if he permits the Bureau to continue its programs," the letter stated, "the loss of authority will tie the hands of the Bureau.

"In fairness to our children, the CIO requests you to recall your order immediately, reinstating the powers given to the Childrens Bureau in the Social Security Act, Title V, and insuring that the Bureau retain its power to set standards and make investigations in the field of child labor."

NAMED TO ILO BODY

Frieda S. Miller director Women's Bureau, Labor Dept., is attending the meeting of the Governing Body of the Intl. Labor Office at Montreal, May 23 to 28, as U. S. Representative. She was appointed this week by President Truman.

SENATOR PEPPER IS WOMEN'S CHAMPION TOO

By ESTHER PETERSON
Washington Representative CIO Clothing Workers

SOMETIMES we forget that a bill like the Case bill affects women—just as it affects every right-thinking person in the country. Women will be glad to hear that last week one man, valiant and unafraid, stood up in the United States Senate and pleaded the case of every working man and woman in America. He spoke up for them day after day in the face of one of the strongest barrages of opposition any Senator has ever had to face.

John L. Lewis had made America not just angry, but mad. And the unscrupulous employers, ever eager for an opportunity to club labor, started beating the drums for action. Senators and Representatives started receiving, almost hourly, telegrams craftily worded to inflame their anger.

The press jumped on and the misled public lent a hand, too. It looked hopeless and many pro-labor spokesmen, in government and the press, grew strangely silent or preoccupied with famine in Europe at this point.

But one man stood up, day after day, pleading for thoughtful, careful consideration — not "legislation by revenge." Sen. Claude Pepper (D. Fla.) was unmoved by the blasts bursting all around him. He spoke for us to a Senate riding a wave of blind hate:

"How long did the little boys and girls of the South have to work in the cotton mills? I used to see them in some of the cotton mills in the Southern States, with their little sallow faces, pallid, shrunken human beings coming out of the cotton mills, with lint in their eyes and in their hair and in their souls.

"Yet anyone who tried to better their working conditions was an agitator and many times those who tried to organize those workers were driven out of their quarters by deputy sheriffs and policemen, who were on the company pay roll, beating them over the head or applying to them some other kind of coercive force.

"No one can tell me that merely because he has learned that he and his fellow workers may get together, they have in mind wrecking management or wrecking private enterprise, or wrecking the American economy. They do not. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred the demands which they make are just."

This is our champion. He fought in vain this time, but he will go on if we show him we are behind him. Write him a letter or a card telling him how you appreciate his fight. After what he has had to take from his fellow Senators and the press, he needs encourgement.

CASE BILL AIMED ALSO AT WOMEN

Any bill that would hamstring labor—such as the Case bill—would hurt women wage earners. The extent of the damage is shown by an examination of "Women's Stake in Unions," pamphlet to be issued May 27 by the U. S. Labor Dept. A chart shows the following percentages of women in some CIO unions including Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, 40% — or 280,000; 66%, Clothing Workers; 60%, Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Union.

Good Listening!

CIO'S WEEKLY RADIO SHOW

Labor — USA

ABC Stations Coast to Coast

5:45 P. M. Eastern Daylight Saving Time

Secretary-Treasurers Buyers' Guide

NOTE: The firms listed in this Directory sell Union Made organizational materials and supplies.

BUTTONS - BADGES SEALS - STAMPS

UNION MADE BUTTONS
Manufacturers
Celluloid or Litho-Metal
For—
Union Dues
Advertising
Campaigns
Badges - Emblems
CHARLES M. GERAGHTY
INCORPORATED
500 Sherman St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BAUMGARTEN CO.
925 11th Street, N.W.
DIstrict 3933
"Rubber Stamp Headquarters"
SEALS, RUBBER STAMPS, DUES BUTTONS
BRONZE MEMORIALS AND TABLETS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
100% UNION MADE

Teddy's Union Made Supplies - For Unions

Union Dues Buttons
Litho Metal Buttons
Celluloid Buttons
Steward Buttons
Campaign Buttons
Gold Label Buttons
Parade Caps
Committee Badges
Convention Badges
Swiss Embroidered Emblems
American Flags
Union Flags
Union Banners
Baseball Uniforms
Bowling Shirts
Secretary Cases
Brief Cases
Billfolds
Union Card Cases
Gavels

All Merchandise 100% Union Made and Bears the Union Label

179 W. Washington Street — Room 503
Phone: Central 9868 CHICAGO 2, ILLINOIS Established 1905

L. J. IMBER CO.
QUALITY PRODUCTS
Manufacturers & Designers
EMBOSSED & ENAMELED BADGES • LAPEL EMBLEMS
UNION MADE METAL LITHOGRAPHED BUTTONS AND TABS
FOR
UNION DUES MEMBERSHIP EMPLOYEE BADGES
POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS ADVERTISING LITHOGRAPHED SIGNS
Recognized Union Labels—No charge for Designs and Sketches
LIGHT & HEAVY STAMPING • COINING & EMBOSSING
SMALL, INTRICATE & SPECIAL STAMPINGS • TOOLS & DIES
New York Representative: Herbert R. Lerman 37 E. 14th St., New York, N. Y. Algonquin 4-3356
Detroit Representative: Herbert E. Lennig 6432 Cass Ave., Detroit, Mich. TRinity 1-4600
L. J. IMBER CO. 1639-49 W. Evergreen Ave. CHICAGO, ILL. BRUnswick 7815

44 Years of Know-how

in producing comfortable, well-made, and long-wear gloves make 20th Century the accepted all purpose gloves for automotive and allied workers. C. I. O. Union Made; every pair backed by printed guarantee. 20th Century Glove Company, 4600 West Parker Ave., Chicago 39, Illinois

20TH CENTURY WORK GLOVES

the ADVENTURES of JIM BARRY

by MORT MESKIN and COLE GREENE

The story, characters, incidents and names mentioned here are entirely imaginary and fictitious, and have no identification with actual persons, living or dead.

WITH STEVE DENTON EXPOSED AND ARRESTED, MICKEY PROPOSES TO SUE RIGHT AT THE UNION MEETING! BUT AS THEY ANNOUNCE THEIR PLANS TO GO AWAY AND GET MARRIED — THERE IS A SUDDEN INTERRUPTION...

WHAT D'YOU MEAN WE CAN'T GO OFF AND GET MARRIED?

YOU HEARD ME, SQUIRT. ME AND THE BOYS HAVE-OTHER PLANS FOR YOU AND SUE...

WHEN A RETURNED VET LIKE YOU COMES BACK AND KEEPS ON FIGHTING FOR THE REST OF US... AND TAKES A BEATING LIKE THE ONE YOU TOOK... WELL I THINK ME AND THE REST OF US —

... SHOULD GIVE YOU KIDS A REAL UNION WEDDING! I MAKE A MOTION — RIGHT!

SECOND THE MOTION!

AYE!

AYE!

A UNION WEDDING!

SOMETHING NEW IS ADDED TO UNION ACTIVITY! PRESENTLY...

HERE'S THE CAKE THE WIFE BAKED FOR SUE AND MICKEY...

EVERYBODY'S BEEN SWELL... EVEN THE STOREKEEPERS AROUND HERE HAVE SENT CONTRIBUTIONS TO OUR WEDDING FEAST...

AND LATER THAT EVENING...

HERE'S THE BRIDE AND GROOM! HERE WE GO! START THE CELEBRATION!

GEE... SUE... THE UNION SURE DOES THINGS IN A GRAND WAY...

I'M SO HAPPY, JIM... NOW IF ONLY YOU'D FIND YOURSELF A NICE GIRL AND GET MARRIED...

HE HAS A NICE GIRL, MOTHER BARRY... ONLY THE BIG BABBOON DOESN'T ASK HER!

PEGGY ALLEN! WHERE'VE YOU BEEN?

WAITING FOR YOU TO CALL ME UP SOMETIME... AM I NOT SHAMELESS, MOTHER BARRY...?

NOT AT ALL, DEAR...

YOU TWO YOUNGSTERS ARE PUTTING ME ON THE SPOT... BUT I'M NOT RUSHING INTO MARRIED LIFE... WHAT D'YOU SAY TO SOME REFRESHMENTS?

FINE... BUT I'D RATHER HAVE A UNION WEDDING...

ORBIT FEATURE SERVICE, Inc.

74

WASHINGTON GUIDE

$$$ For Rankin

Over the opposition of the CIO and a host of other liberal organizations, the Committee on un-American Activities received $75,000 from the House last week.

Rankin—who has been vocal in his hate for workers, unions, farmers, Negroes, foreign-born, and anybody who can be classified as an enemy of fascism—is delighted at the opportunity to carry out his hate-propaganda.

He applauded when Rep. Vito Marcantonio (ALP N.Y.) warned that the funds would be used to smear PAC in the coming election.

"This is no longer an impartial committee," Marcantonio declared, "but a vehicle to strike down those groups with views opposed to his."

Supporters of the committee were hard put to explain its past, or predict its future. Rep. Sumners (D. Tex.) couldn't recall a single piece of legislation adopted at the committee's suggestion, nor how much of the $75,000 would be used to investigate the revived Ku Klux Klan.

The answer, in both cases, is nothing.

65c Minimum

In the next week or two the House may be ready to act on the 65c Minimum Wage Bill. It's time now to remind your Congressmen that they should vote for the bill without the inflationary rider tacked on by Senate reactionaries.

The Minimum Wage Bill will improve conditions for millions of the low income groups who most need government help. The inflationary rider would add several billion dollars to the already swollen coffers of the speculators, in whose hands are now concentrated the products of American farms.

The bill is vitally necessary; the rider is an open invitation to inflation and should be removed.

To help get the Minimum Wage past the anti-labor wolves, some 90 Congressmen — headed by Rep. George Outland (D. Calif.)—have set themselves up as co-sponsors of the bill. In a long, thorough speech to the House, Outland explained that the improved minimum wage is an economic necessity.

It would increase purchasing power, provide greater security, and in the long run help stabilize our nation's economy.

Scholarly arguments, however, won't get the bill adopted by the House. Your support is needed. Write or wire your Congressman today stating your strong support for S. 1349 and your determined opposition to the Pace inflationary rider.

Blunderbuss Legislation

Some Congressmen would pass a law to forbid the sale of chocolate ice cream soda on Saturday afternoon if they thought that such an act could remotely hurt labor unions.

To a man from Mars, the roundabout efforts of these foes of labor must appear amusing; but to American workers, who must struggle to maintain their standard of living in an area of rising prices and insecurity, these attacks on their unions are serious in the extreme.

The Case Bill, which has already passed the House, is up for debate and an early vote in the Senate. It would turn back the clock of labor legislation to the period before the Norris-LaGuardia Act, when injunctions and police violence were the common methods of "settling" a strike.

Now, thanks to the action of a little reactionary from the non-industrial state of South Dakota, this progressive legislation is menaced.

The Case Bill has support from two types of Congressmen -- those who know what they are doing, and those who don't. In the former category are the men who look with favor upon any stick with which to beat labor unions.

Others, less hostile, to the American workers, feel merely that "something has to be done." Like a bride experimenting with new recipes, they are eager to try anything once, although the results at worst may prove poisonous, or unusable at best.

Even the so-called "statesmen" among the hate-labor crew frequently get carried away by their enthusiasm to limit union activity. Sens. Russell (D. Ga.) and Ball (R. Minn.) have proposed an amendment to the Agriculture Appropriation and other agency bills to prohibit payment of federal funds to workers belonging to unions which permit strikes against the government.

The Ball-Russell fire was directed against the CIO Public Workers union, which they had hoped to cripple. Now they find their action would apply to hundreds of thousands of AFL and CIO unions and the rail brotherhoods employed in navy yards, arsenals, and other U. S. installations.

The answer to this sort of mess has long been known by American workers and liberals. A blow at any union is a blow at all labor. Even mildest anti-labor bill endangers every union. The only safe course is to fight—and fight hard—against each attempt to curb unions and economic democracy.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Case Bill HR 4908	Would harass unions with many new restrictions and anti-labor devices.	Passed by House; Senate may vote this week.	Wire your Senators that you don't want the Case Bill in any form or any other anti-labor bill.
Price Control HR 6042	Extends price control act to June 1947.	Passed by House with flock of death-dealing amendments; Senate Banking Committee now preparing report.	Wire your Senators to pass bill without amendments. Strong action is needed to save OPA and price control.
Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill S 1592	Provides long range housing and slum clearance program.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee hearings to open soon.	Send wires to your Congressman and members of House Banking Committee. to support this bill.
Minimum Wage S 1349	Lifts minimum pay to 65c. Senate added inflationary Pace rider, despite Pres. Truman's threat to veto, and thus kill bill.	Passed by Senate; now ready for House Labor Committee.	Ask Representatives to kill Pace rider and add coverage for seamen, retail, food and communications workers.
Wagner-Murray-Dingell Health Bill S 1606	Establishes national health program aimed at providing adequate low - cost medical service.	Hearings being conducted by Senate Labor Committee.	Write your Senator that you want bill passed.
British Loan S. J. Res. 138	Would extend $3,750,000,000 long - term credit to Great Britain.	Passed by Senate; House Banking Committee now holding hearings.	Write or wire your Congressman to vote for loan without amendments.
Anti-polltax Bill HR 7	Outlaws polltax in federal elections; would apply to seven southern states.	Passed by House; approved by Sen. Judiciary Committee and awaits action by Senate. Foes of bill are stalling.	Write Senators demanding debate and vote before recess.

(Address all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., all Representatives, House Office Bldg., Washington 25, D. C.)

Coming Up On Capitol Hill

FEPC: One bill that keeps coming up on Capitol Hill, to the discomfort of the conservatives, is the proposal for a permanent FEPC.

For the second week in a row, the House polltax crew voted to adjourn on Wednesday—this time by an 83-81 vote—rather than consider the measure. The prospect is that they'll either have to consider the bill, or face the facts that each Wednesday can be written off the calendar—this at a time when there are scores of important bills to be considered.

Foes of racial and religious discrimination in the House have been using the "Calendar Wednesday" technique to buffalo the tories. On Wednesday, under the rules, every committee can bring its proposed legislation to the floor, thus getting around the bottleneck House Rules Committee.

Rather than consider the FEPC bill, the polltax group demanded a roll call of the House four times in three hours. Having thus stymied action, they forced adjournment.

It's time to write your Congressman demanding an end to stalling tactics and quick action on the FEPC legislation.

POLLTAX: The Natl. Committee to Abolish the Polltax isn't impressed with arguments for burying the polltax in order to avoid a possible filibuster.

A committee statement takes issue with Sen. Barkley (D. Ky.), who complains that there isn't time for action or for filibuster.

The Senate majority leader is helping the polltax bloc "get what they want," the committee charges. "He knows and they know that a filibuster against the restoration of ten million votes would sound peculiarly disgraceful in an election year. It would sound wicked to a world that looks to America for democratic leadership."

For some eight months that anti-polltax bill has been ready for action. As the committee notes, there were weeks when the Senate met only briefly—but the polltax bill never was brought to the floor. Now, with time running short before the campaign recess, Sen. Barkley is worried about the possible anti-democratic filibuster of the southern bloc.

Action is long overdue to remove the polltax and permit the seven Southern states to have truly democratic elections. Wire your Senators and Majority Leader Barkley; demand action at this session to outlaw the antiquated levy on voting rights.

WASHINGTON GUIDE

Published by CIO Legislative Dept.

PHILIP MURRAY, President

NATHAN COWAN, Chairman

ROBERT K. LAMB, Secretary

Editorial Committee

John Edelman Robert K. Lamb

Henry C. Fleisher, Editor Irving Richter

THE CIO NEWS

5 Cents A COPY

Vol. 9, No. 23 Copyright, 1946 The CIO NEWS $1 A YEAR, 5c A COPY — $1.50 IN CANADA

June 3, 1946

WEEKLY PUBLICATION OF THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

HALT THE PLOT TO KILL LABOR!

By PHILIP MURRAY

Wire Sent by President of CIO to All Members of U. S. Senate

IN a moment of wild hysteria an attempt is being made to stampede through Congress legislation which has as its sole aim the destruction of the labor movement of this nation.

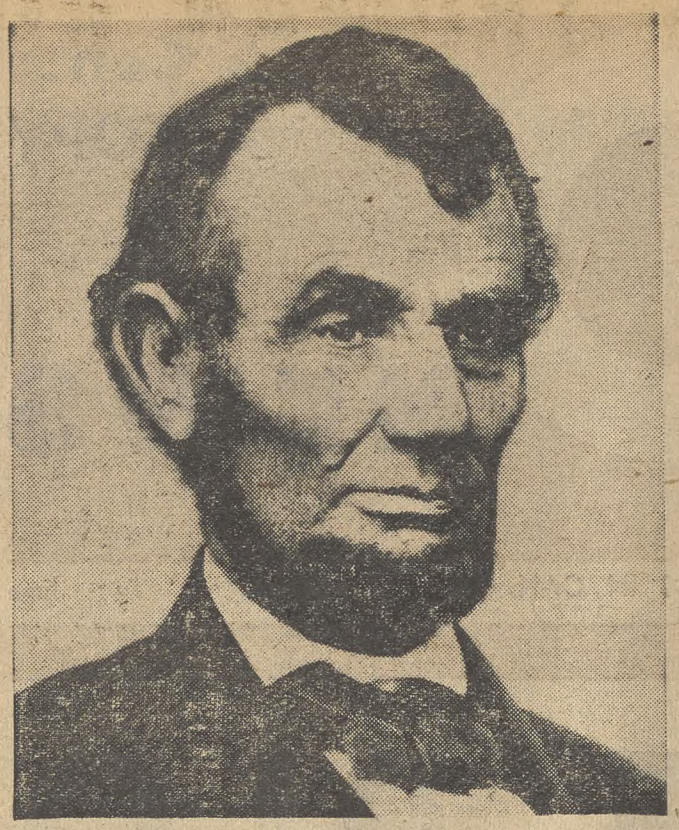
THE Case bill, which has passed both the House of Representatives and the Senate, and President Truman's recent proposal which has passed the House of Representatives, if finally enacted as law, would accomplish this most devastating end.

SINCE V-J Day powerful segments of American industry have been actively and deliberately seeking to provoke a crisis, to engineer a pretext for stampeding Congress into the passage of anti-labor legislation.

IT was not a labor organization but the powerful General Motors Corporation which rejected an award of the President's Fact-Finding Board. It was not a labor organization but the U. S. Steel Corporation and the steel industry which refused to accept a decision of the President of the U. S. to settle the labor controversy in that industry. It was not a labor organization but the powerful Westinghouse Corporation whose bad faith caused two U. S. Conciliators to withdraw in disgust. It was not a labor organization but the powerful oil industry which undermined and sabotaged all efforts to obtain a peaceful settlement of a wage dispute, thus provoking seizure by the government.

THE Case bill and the President's proposal repeal for all practical purposes the bene-

(See Page 16)



THEY FIGHT REACTION

"I am glad to see that a system of labor prevails under which laborers can strike when they want to, where they are not obliged to work under all circumstances, and are not tied down and obliged to labor whether you pay them or not. I like a system which lets a man quit when he wants to, and wish it might prevail elsewhere. One of the reasons why I am opposed to slavery is just here." -- Abraham Lincoln, 1860.

The spirit of Lincoln is not dead. There are still men in Congress with a love of freedom and a belief in democracy who will fight for the preservation of the 13th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution. That Amendment says: "Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the U. S., or any place subject to their jurisdiction." What some of these Congressmen said about legislation to smash labor is printed on this page.

REP. SAVAGE of Washington: "Those railroad workers should not be accused of striking against the government; they were throwing the ball at the employers, as they have a right to do, and the government ran in at the last minute and grabbed the ball and squawked because it hurt. That made it impossible for the workers to win their point . . . There are several things in the bill that we will be sorry for later on if we pass the bill in this condition. Let us not vote for militarism in the U. S. in peacetime. Let us not start another Japan."

●

REP. GREEN of Pennsylvania: "President Roosevelt went all through the war without requesting any legislation as drastic as this. The paramount issue here today, in my opinion, is the civil liberties and the individual rights of citizens, and I do not think that you can make any man work because you bring in a piece of legislation and pass it in this Congress . . . I think that more thought should be given to this matter, and I do not see how I, myself, can at any time vote for a bill that is going to put into the military service the people who are trying to get a higher standard of living for their families and themselves."

●

REP. DE LACY of Washington: "This bill contains points of vital consequence to all the people. These first two moves (repeal of the Norris-LaGuardia Act and of sections of the Wagner Act) deprive labor at once of its protection against court injunctions, and, second, of its protection against the old blacklist. I have actually experienced that blacklist in my own person. I know something of the pain that comes when a man is penalized and his family is penalized by being denied the right to earn his bread and butter."

●

REP. MARCANTONIO of New York: "Time and events will show after the fury and hysteria have passed away that these strikes were not provoked by workers or their leaders, but that they were promoted by profit-bloated corporations who have been seeking this very opportunity to continue the strikes and confuse the situation so as to bring about the very kind of legislation that we have before us today. They have won their round . . . I cannot help but remember that after the march on Rome by Benito Mussolini, one of the last edicts or laws that the last parliament of Italy passed was very, very similar to this legislation—the so-called labor syndicate law of Italy, based on the same proposition and under the same guise—that you cannot strike against the government.

"Again, I repeat, the government in this case . . . is merely acting as an agent of private monopolies . . . (Labor's rights) are being stripped away. You are stripping it away because the press wants it. The press wants it because monopoly finance wants it. God save the Congress of the U. S. from a repetition of what happened in the Italian parliament under Mussolini."

●

SEN. PEPPER of Florida: "I believe that this is going to be a moment to which we shall not look back with pride. It comes the nearest to being the indication of the willingness on the part of the duly constituted democratic body of this government to abandon democratic principles and protection that I have seen in my public career . . . I cannot believe that in peacetime, after victory, we shall yield up the democratic constitutional rights of the citizenry of this country because we have an unrestrained animosity against certain of the working men and women of the U. S.

"I venture with all kindliness to predict that the President of the U. S. has been imposed upon by his counselors, and that he will live to see the day when he will regret that he made to this Congress the recommendation for the passage of this measure. I would give my seat in the Senate before I would support such a measure."

●

SEN. DOWNEY of California: "I must admit, as I have heard here seriously debated the most dictatorial and harsh law of which human mind can conceive, that I am like a person in a dream. I cannot have a sense of reality that our President has proposed such a law, and in a wild hysteria of excitement, abandoning all consideration, in an hour or two the House of Representatives placed its approval upon it . . .

"No one can deny that if we once enact this bill, we will have given to the President of the U. S. and to the Army the power to shoot a man, after summary trial, in 24 hours, if the worker, under this bill, refuses to obey the call of the President and says 'I am unwilling to work in the coal mines under existing conditions.'"

●

SEN. MURRAY of Montana: "There are two courses ahead of the American people. One course is the road to an expanding economy of full employment and full production. If we take this course, it means legislation dealing with the many factors that affect disputes between labor and management. It means affirmative action with respect to price control, monopoly, taxation, health, housing, social security, mediation machinery and related matters. It means translating into reality the promise which Congress made to the American people in the Employment Act of 1946. This is the road to labor peace and harmony.

"But there is another course that lies ahead of us. That is the road of boom and bust, of feast and famine. That is the road that seems to be preferred by those who advocate a floating pool of unemployed in order to keep labor in its place. This is the road down which our country would travel if we followed the lead of the speculators, monopolists and profiteers . . . To those who look forward with glee to the prospect of boom-time profits and depression bargains, legislation to impair or destroy the rights of labor appear both desirable and necessary.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the overwhelming majority of the American people prefer the first course—the road to full employment, the road toward the enlargement and expansion of our social security program."

●

SEN. LAFOLLETTE of Wisconsin: "Although I think a large majority of the employers have accepted in good faith collective bargaining by representatives chosen by their workers, as conceived and legislated for in the Natl. Labor Relations Act, there still remains an intransigent but powerful minority of employers who have never accepted in good faith and at heart the principle of independent collective bargaining upon the part of unions organized and choosing their own independent representatives. I know that to be true as a result of my own experience and four years of investigation in this field . . ."

●

SEN. MORSE of Oregon: "Is the Senator from California (Mr. Downey) aware of the fact that before noon on Saturday the White House knew that the railroad workers were willing to go back on the basis of the report of the President's own Emergency Board. . . ? May I say that I think that was one of the cheapest exhibitions of ham acting I have ever seen, because he knew full well, before he went to the rostrum, what the position of the American railroad workers was."

UNITED LABOR HITS TRUMAN BILL

TURNS BACK CLOCK 50 YEARS!

CIO LATE last week called upon President Truman to veto the Case anti-labor bill on the grounds that "it presents exceedingly grave dangers to the public welfare."

In a long, detailed analysis of the bill and its effects, CIO Pres. Murray declared that "far from removing the causes of labor disputes, it will in fact encourage and increase labor disputes."

Murray charged that the Case Bill is merely the latest in a series of proposals offered in Congress during the past 10 years to alter the whole structure of government labor policy, and to "weaken labor and undermine its bargaining strength."

President Truman's call for anti-labor legislation and the speedy action of the House in passing the President's bill, touched off the fastest and biggest protest from organized labor in recent years.

Within a few hours of the President's address to the joint session of Congress, in which he proposed drastic curbs on the right to strike and urged drafting of workers and union leaders who disregard "back-to-work" orders, a tremendous surge of protest sprang from every section of the labor movement.

In Washington CIO Pres. Philip Murray telegraphed a long message to every Senator pointing to recent action by corporations in stalling off settlement of disputes, and demanded that the Senators disregard arificial hysteria created in the press for immediate passage of the Truman bill.

Simultaneously, in a wire to all CIO-affiliated international unions and state CIO councils, Murray declared that "the most serious crisis in the entire history of the labor movemen now confronts us.

"The vicious anti-labor legislation which Congress is now considering and may momentarily complete will turn the clock back 50 years and leave the labor movement powerless and defenseless against a sinister conspiracy of American industrialists and powerful corporations."

Murray urged the widest possible mobilization of union members and the general public to fight passage of the Truman bill in the Senate, and called for wires and letters to the President urging his veto of the Case bill, which would permanenly restrict many of labor's present rights.

In Detroit, top leaders of the UAW joined with Pres. Walter Reuther to urge defeat of the bill and the widest possible program of joint action with the AFL and brotherhoods to ensure killing the bill in Congress.

Commenting on the situation were:

Sidney Hillman, PAC Chairman: "It is inconceivable that our government should reward the devoted effort, the self-sacrifice and self-restraint that American workers displayed in winning the victory by depriving them of the very freedom which we fought a bitter war against fascism to preserve."

Reid Robinson, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers: "It is noteworthy that not once, either in his radio talk or his speech to Congress, did the President put the guilt where it really belongs—on the arrogant and selfish railroad companies, who made unprecedented profits during the war."

Harold Ickes, chairman Independent Citizens Committee: "Labor would not be the only victim of he proposed drastic legislation. The entire American citizenry, the the whole democratic system of government, has been attacked."

James Patton, president Natl. Farmers Union: "Sorrowfully . . . the Natl. Farmers Union must denounce President Truman's messages and speech in the settlement of the railroad strike, and the bill he has proposed, as naked, open fascism."

Indiana CIO Council: "American workers cannot be forced to break strikes. They cannot be forced into industrial slavery. They will fight Mr. Truman and his law in the Senate, in the courts and at the polls."

Robert Kenny, president, Natl. Lawyers Guild: "By sanctioning the proposed legislation, Congress would be taking a course which leads inexorably to the termina-

(Continued on Page 13)

Monday after President Truman's smash-labor proposal more than 250 CIO members from N. Y. City flocked to Washington to register sharp protests with their Congressmen. Talking to Sen. James M. Mead are representatives of the N. Y. City CIO Council and affiliated unions.

BLACK WEEK—BLOW BY BLOW

LAST week was one of the most disturbing—and confusing—in recent American legislative history.

Here's a summary of action taken by Congress between May 25 and May 31 on various proposals affecting organized labor.

CASE BILL (HR 4908)

This measure, which was passed by the House early in 1946, was approved by the Senate on May 25, a few hours after President Truman's speech to the joint session of Congress. The vote was 49-29.

The Case Bill, as reported out of the Senate Labor Committee, contained provisions only for establishment of a Natl. Mediation Board, and for restriction of picketing in cases where farmers haul their own products to market.

The Senate, however, tacked on numerous amendments:

1. The Byrd amendment, forbidding unions to maintain sole control over health and welfare funds set up under collective bargaining agreements.

2. The Ball 60-day cooling off amendment, providing loss of Wagner Act benefits when workers strike after less than 60 days' notice.

3. The Taft amendment, to create an additional 30-day cooling off period in disputes between labor and public utilities.

4. The Ellender amendment changing the Wagner Act to deny any of its benefits to supervisory employes.

5. The Taft amendment, to make labor unions liable in the U. S. courts to damage suits for violation of contracts.

6. The Ball amendment, to outlaw secondary boycotts of products made under unfair working conditions.

7. The Ellender amendment, to make illegal any obsrtuction or delay to commerce through robbery" or "extortion."

An eighth amendment, offered by Sen. Wiley of Wisconsin, to usher in compulsory arbitration, was defeated 74-2.

The House, to avoid further discussion of the bill in a joint conference committee, suspended its usual rules on May 29 and approved the Senate version of the Case measure by a 230-106 vote. The bill then went to the White House for Presidential action.

TRUMAN BILL (HR 6578; S. 2255)

The work-or-be-drafted bill proposed by Pres. Truman in his speech to a joint session of the House and Senate on May 25, was approved in the House within two hours by a vote of 306-13. The Bill provides that for the duration of the national emergency the President can seize industrial properties affected by strike, lockout or slowdown, and, as he sees fit, call upon the workers to return to their jobs. At the same time he can order officials of the company and union to demand that his order be carried out; and he can determine what wages will be paid in seized plants. Any person failing to carry out these orders would be liable to a year's imprisonment and/or a $5,000 fine. Workers failing to heed the order will lose their Wagner Act rights and seniority status. In addition, the President can order the drafting into the army at rates and conditions he decides, of all workers who disobey his order.

Friends of labor in the Senate, together with many frequently anti-union Republicans, attacked the Truman bill in the Senate throughout the week. Sen. Wayne Morse (R. Ore.) resigned from the Senate Labor Committee to protest the action of Majority Leader Barkley in referring the bill to the Interstate Commerce Committee.

PROBE LABOR RELATIONS

Rep. Howard Smith (D. Va.), a notorious foe of unions, proposed establishment of a joint Senate-House 14-man committee to investigate the entire subject of labor relations and offer recommendations for future legislation. The House approved the resolution, which would give the Speaker authority to appoint its seven members; under normal conditions, Smith, as the originator of the proposal, would be its chairman.

No action has yet been taken on the Smith proposal in the Senate.

The Senate Labor Committee, which has won wide praise for its studies of labor bills, has approved a request for funds to make its own special study of the labor-management problem. A study prepared by this committee would be preferable to the Smith-proposed joint committee.

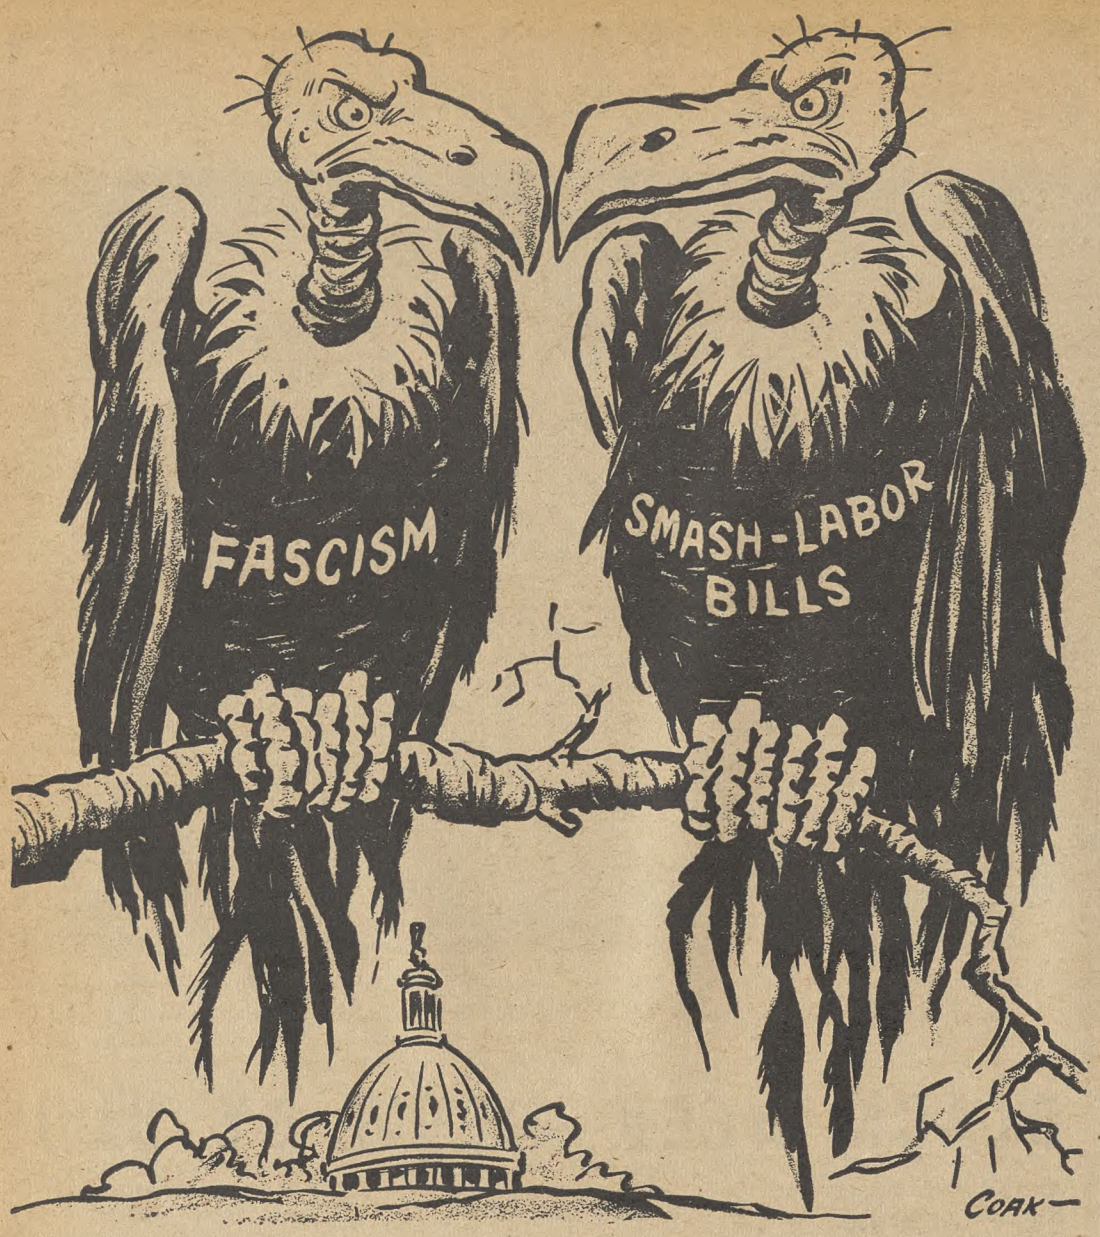
On May 28, the Senate removed the draft-labor section of the Truman bill. The vote was 70-13. The 13 votes came almost entirely from southern Democrats, with Sen. Lucas (D. Ill.) the only northern Senator to vote for retaining the work-or-fight clause in the bill.

'Even Society Quivered'

Gruesome sample of the kind of thinking by some people about the Truman "kill-labor" bill was contained in the Washington Daily News society pages this week.

"The weekend here and there was a wonderful thing!" wrote Evelyn Peyton Gordon. "Nobody would believe that the ending of a strike could have had an effect on society but it did. When Leslie Biffle walked into a cocktail party Sunday afternoon, half the guests said: 'Here comes our hero!' After all it was the dapper secretary of the Senate who brought the 'message to Garcia' Saturday afternoon, right in the middle of the President's fist-shaking speech.

"It was at the reception which the Morris Cafritz' gave for the Hungarian Minister and Mme. Szegedy—most Hungarian names seem to begin with a sneeze—and the town had really turned out. Mrs. Biffle, in turquoise blue and black, didn't seem to regard her husband in the light of a hero. But not so the other guests. Anybody who even touched that missive emerges popular."



TWO OF A KIND

The word "fascist" has often been too loosely used. But in the case of the present drive to smash the labor movement, the parallels with fascist procedure and thinking are so close as to make its use inevitable.

Wherever fascists have risen to power, their first purpose has been to destroy free labor unions.

They have gone about their dirty work by provoking national crises. They have whipped up hysteria through lying propaganda. Under cover of this hysteria, they have taken brutal steps for the suppression of labor.

Fascist procedures have also been marked by open use of government as the instrument of reactionary capital; by assumption of dictatorial powers to over-ride the people liberties; and by the installation of a slave labor system, in which workers are denied the right to strike and treated like conscripts.

Today, in America, we have seen the first steps taken along this disastrous path.

First, there has been a series of provocations by big-business interests, bloated with war profits and privileged to finance their shutdowns from the public treasury.

Each time these interests have forced their workers out on strike, their press and politicians have gone hog-wild in propaganda to whip up anti-labor hysteria. Each time they have been encouraged and made more arrogant by government failure to crack down on them.

Finally, these provocateurs achieved their "Reichstag fire" in the railroad strike. They induced the government to abandon all pretense of impartiality and to use its powers for the strikebreaking and union-busting purposes of reactionary big business.

President Truman actually went to Congress demanding dictatorial powers to abrogate the liberties of American working people. He asked legislation to jail, fine and outlaw workers for the mere act of striking, to deprive them of seniority rights and to force them to work at the point of the bayonet.

This Truman bill, to legalize involuntary servitude and to introduce the provisions of fascist labor codes, was actually passed forthwith by the House.

The Senate, at the same time, rushed through the Case bill, for the permanent destruction of many of labor's rights, and the House soon after accepted the Senate version of this bill.

The Case bill, like the Truman bill, would cut at the roots of the right to strike. It would force workers to work against their will during compulsory "cooling-off" periods, under penalty of loss of their rights under the Wagner act.

It would revive the hated anti-union injunction, compel unionists to handle scab material, and encourage employers to countless provocations so they might use the courts for union-breaking purposes. It is a one-sided instrument for the destruction of labor unions.

But the American people will not supinely let themselves be robbed of their liberties by such fascist techniques and proposals. Already many members of Congress are alarmed at what they have done. The whole labor movement has been united by this outrageous attack. Public-spirited citizens of all kinds are sounding the alarm.

President Truman must be swamped with demands that he veto the Case bill and withdraw his own atrocious proposals. Every member of Congress must be told to prevent the passage of the Truman bill in any form.

The American people must serve notice on their politicians that they will not tolerate any tampering with their liberties, and that they want nothing in this country that even smells of fascism.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY LEN DE CAUX

REMEMBER the war slogan, "Free Labor Will Win"?

Free labor did win. It outproduced by far the slave labor of the Axis. It fought and died for its freedom.

All through the war, labor's freedom was zealously guarded. The right to strike was preserved, and the unions' no-strike pledge was a voluntary one. Even the Smith-Connally act did not make the mere act of striking punishable by law.

But now, in peace-time, free labor is threatened with the very whip it wrested from the fascist slavemasters.

★ ★ ★

Under the dictatorial powers demanded by President Truman, free American workers may be forced to work against their will, like the slave labor of the Axis, subject to penalties modeled after the fascist labor codes.

Fines up to $5,000 and a year's imprisonment are threatened for the "crime" of striking, along with anti-labor injunctions, with all their attendant penalties.

The individual worker, who refuses to work under terms not to his liking, may be made an outlaw, deprived of all Wagner Act protection and robbed of his seniority rights.

Finally, under the Truman bill as passed by the House, he may be conscripted into the army, forced to work under military command, and courtmartialed if he refuses.

★ ★ ★

On Black Saturday, May 25, the President and Congress trampled like stampeding cattle on the people's liberties.

For the first time since 1865, when the Constitution was amended to forbid slavery or involuntary servitude, they acted . to reduce Americans to servitude.

Abraham Lincoln must have turned in his grave. For it was he who said:

"I am glad to see that a system of labor prevails under which laborers can strike when they want to. . . . I like a system which lets a man quit when he wants to, and wish it might prevail elsewhere."

★ ★ ★

On this Black Saturday, President Truman went before a frenzied Congress, demanding the power to compel Americans to work against their will, under threats of fines, jail, loss of legal rights, military discipline and court martial.

A few minutes later, without deliberation, investigation or understanding of the measure before it, an hysterical House voted all he asked, with only 13 members dissenting.

The Senate meanwhile stayed in session until it passed the Case bill, abrogating the right to strike for 60-day "cooling-off" periods; subjecting unions to endless lawsuits; compelling unionists to handle scab materials; denying Wagner act protection to supervisory employes; and reviving the strike-breaking anti-union injunction.

★ ★ ★

But Congress did not suddenly go crazy from the heat of public pressure generated by the railroad strike.

Its actions were the consummation of a long and carefully planned plot, aided by manufactured pressure and hysteria.

Ever since V-J Day, powerful sections of American monopoly capital have been provoking one industrial crisis after another, by rejecting the workers' demands, refusing to accept Presidential and fact-finding awards, and forcing their workers out on strike.

On each occasion, there has been no governmental crackdown on the strike-provoking employers; while the employers' press, radio and politicians have had free rein in working up anti-union hysteria.

On Black Saturday, the plotters achieved their greatest triumph, an almost complete identification of government with the demands of monopoly capital.

Not one word was said by the President or the majority of Congress against the employers. Not one step was proposed to remedy the workers' grievances and the real causes of industrial disputes. Unmeasured abuse was heaped on the workers, and all the powers of government were called upon to destroy their freedom.

But the politicians will yet learn that American public opnion is not represented by the propaganda of the big-business press. The American people, who fought like lions against enslavement by foreign fascists, will not easily be robbed of their liberties by domestic dictators.

Free labor will win. But it will have to mobilize all its union strength and political power, along with all other freedom-loving Americans, to do so.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray.....President James B. Carey.....Secretary-Treasurer

Vice-Presidents

Joseph Curran, John Green, Reid Robinson, L. S. Buckmaster, Allan S. Haywood, Frank Rosenblum, Albert Fitzgerald, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas

Len De Caux .....Editor and Publicity Director

Publication and Editorial Office:
718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. 9 June 3, 1946 No. 23

"Glad to see a man of your caliber fighting the OPA, Sir."

KNIFE OPA IN SENATE

THE heart of OPA and price control is being quietly and effectively cut out "with a dull knife," Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles warned the American public last week.

Bowles leveled his charges at the Senate Banking Committee, which has been tacking crippling amendments on to the price control bill. The bill had previously been mauled when it was voted in the House. The Senate committee has been working behind closed doors, but it was apparent this week that its amendments would be as destructive as those approved in the House.

The Senate committee's changes in the original OPA bill, Bowles declared, will affect not only food and clothing, but rent as well.

"The Senate recommendations are even worse than the bill passed by the House," he said, "and there is a promise of still more inflationary amendments to come.

"Here are the makings of an economic tragedy for every American family. The situation can still be saved, but only if the millions who go to make up our great country are awakened before it is too late."

The Senate committee has already announced sharp cuts in the amount of government funds it will recommend for food subsidies, and has voiced disapproval of the maximum average price plan—which forces clothing producers to devote a substantial section of their output to badly needed low-priced garments.

Meanwhile, in a brief submitted to the committee, OPA argued strongly against removing price controls on meat, a move frequently demanded by the powerful packing companies. Such a move would bring an immediate rise in meat prices, OPA declared, would affect indirectly the prices of 60% of all food costs, and would bring an end to all price control.

At the same time OPA announced a rise of a cent a quart in the retail ceiling price for milk, and rises of several cents in the butter ceiling.

Action on the price control extension bill must be taken before June 30 when the present law becomes ineffective. It is expected that the Senate will move to consider it immediately after the current debate on the anti-labor bills.

Analysis of Truman Bill

YOUR FREEDOM IS AT STAKE!

By LEE PRESSMAN

THE President's strike-breaking bill for the "settlement" of industrial disputes is the most repressive single labor proposal which ever has been advanced in the halls of Congress.

For the first time in the history of American life, either in war or in peace, the act of striking is made a crime. A strike is outlawed regardless of its purpose, regardless of whether the strike is conducted peaceably or not, regardless of the degree of employer provocation and regardless of the patience of the union in exhausting other available remedies prior to calling a strike.

The measure is unique in another and equally important respect. The bill rests exclusively upon war powers. Nearly one year after V-J Day and while the nation is at peace, a bill is proposed which relies exclusively upon the President's military powers to accomplish a purely peacetime objective.

The bill provides that the President, whenever he determines that a labor dispute curtails or impedes war production, may seize the affected plant, mine or facility. The President then determines that the continued operation of the plant, mine or facility is necessary for the maintenance of the national economy. He may issue a proclamation declaring the existence of an emergency. In his proclamation, the President is empowered:

1. To call upon the employes and the union officers to return to their posts of duty before a day fixed in the proclamation.
2. To then call upon the union and its members to take any affirmative action he deems necessary to terminate the strike and to restore full operation.
3. To establish whatever terms and conditions of employment he thinks proper.

The bill then explicitly states that after the issuance of the President's proclamation the officers of the union are obligated to act as strike-breakers and each individual worker is obligated to return to work whether he wants to or not. In short, it is made illegal for a union officer to refuse to break a strike and for an employe to refuse to return to work.

What happens if either the union officer or the employe insists upon his freedom? Four things may happen to such an individual:

1. He is subject to a fine of $5,000 or imprisonment or both.
2. He is subject to a federal injunction and, in case he refuses to obey the injunction, to punishment for contempt of court. The Norris - LaGuardia Act, which prohibits federal injunctions in labor matters is repealed.
3. He is automatically discharged; he loses his employe status both for purposes of the Natl. Labor Relations Act and the Railway Labor Act, and his seniority is wiped out.
4. He may be drafted on whatever terms and conditions the President sees fit to serve in the Army and is subject to military command to perform the work which he refused to do as a civilian. If he refuses to obey military command, he is then subject to the pains and penalties of court martial.

This is the essence of the President's bill. It is also the essence of human slavery.

The savage character of this legislation may be seen by contrasting it with the Smith-Connally Act. Everyone now realizes that the Smith-Connally Act was a mistake, that it was passed in the heat of passion and incited rather than prevented wartime strikes. But even under the Smith-Connally Act, a wartime measure, the act of striking was not regarded as punishable under law. Section 6 of the Smith-Connally Act is limited to prohibitions against inducing others to engage in strikes or aiding strikes by giving them guidance and direction or by providing funds for the conduct of their strikes. In short, even the anti-labor group which played upon wartime passions and stampeded Congress into passing the Smith-Connally Act did not dare go so far as to outlaw the right of workers to strike. Moreover, under the Smith-Connally Act, no attempt was made to repeal the Norris-LaGuardia Act, the Natl. Labor Relations Act or the Railway Labor Act.

Even at the height of the war, the attempt embodied in the May-Bailey bill to conscript labor for war purposes was defeated because many saw in such a proposal a form of involuntary servitude inconsistent with the ideals of the war. We are threatened with a strike-breaking system of regulations which are "justified" on the ground of "war necessity."

The bill violates at almost every point fundamental constitutional safeguards. Under the bill as it is written it could be made a crime to picket a seized plant, to speak over the radio in support of a strike, to hold a union meeting or to distribute handbills.

All of the rights for which labor has struggled through the years and which the Supreme Court has repeatedly decided are protected by the Constitution are trampled upon by this bill.

The bill is one of the clearest instances of a violation of the constitutional prohibition against involuntary servitude which could be found. The bill nakedly and unashamedly seeks to force individuals to work against their will and to send them to the penitentiary if they refuse.

Even the Smith-Connally Act expressly provides that nothing in the Act should be construed so as to prohibit an individual from refusing to work or to accept employment.

The purpose of the bill is to destroy the freedom of the individual and to coerce his labor.

The purpose of the bill is demonstrated by the provision which authorizes the President to draft strikers into the Army. Here we see resort to the most severe use of the military power for the purpose of breaking a strike. Such a use of the power to conscript during peacetime for purposes of labor relations is unprecedented in American history.

The cold disregard which is reflected in the bill for democratic rights is seen also in the fact that the power to put the bill into effect is vested exclusively in the President.

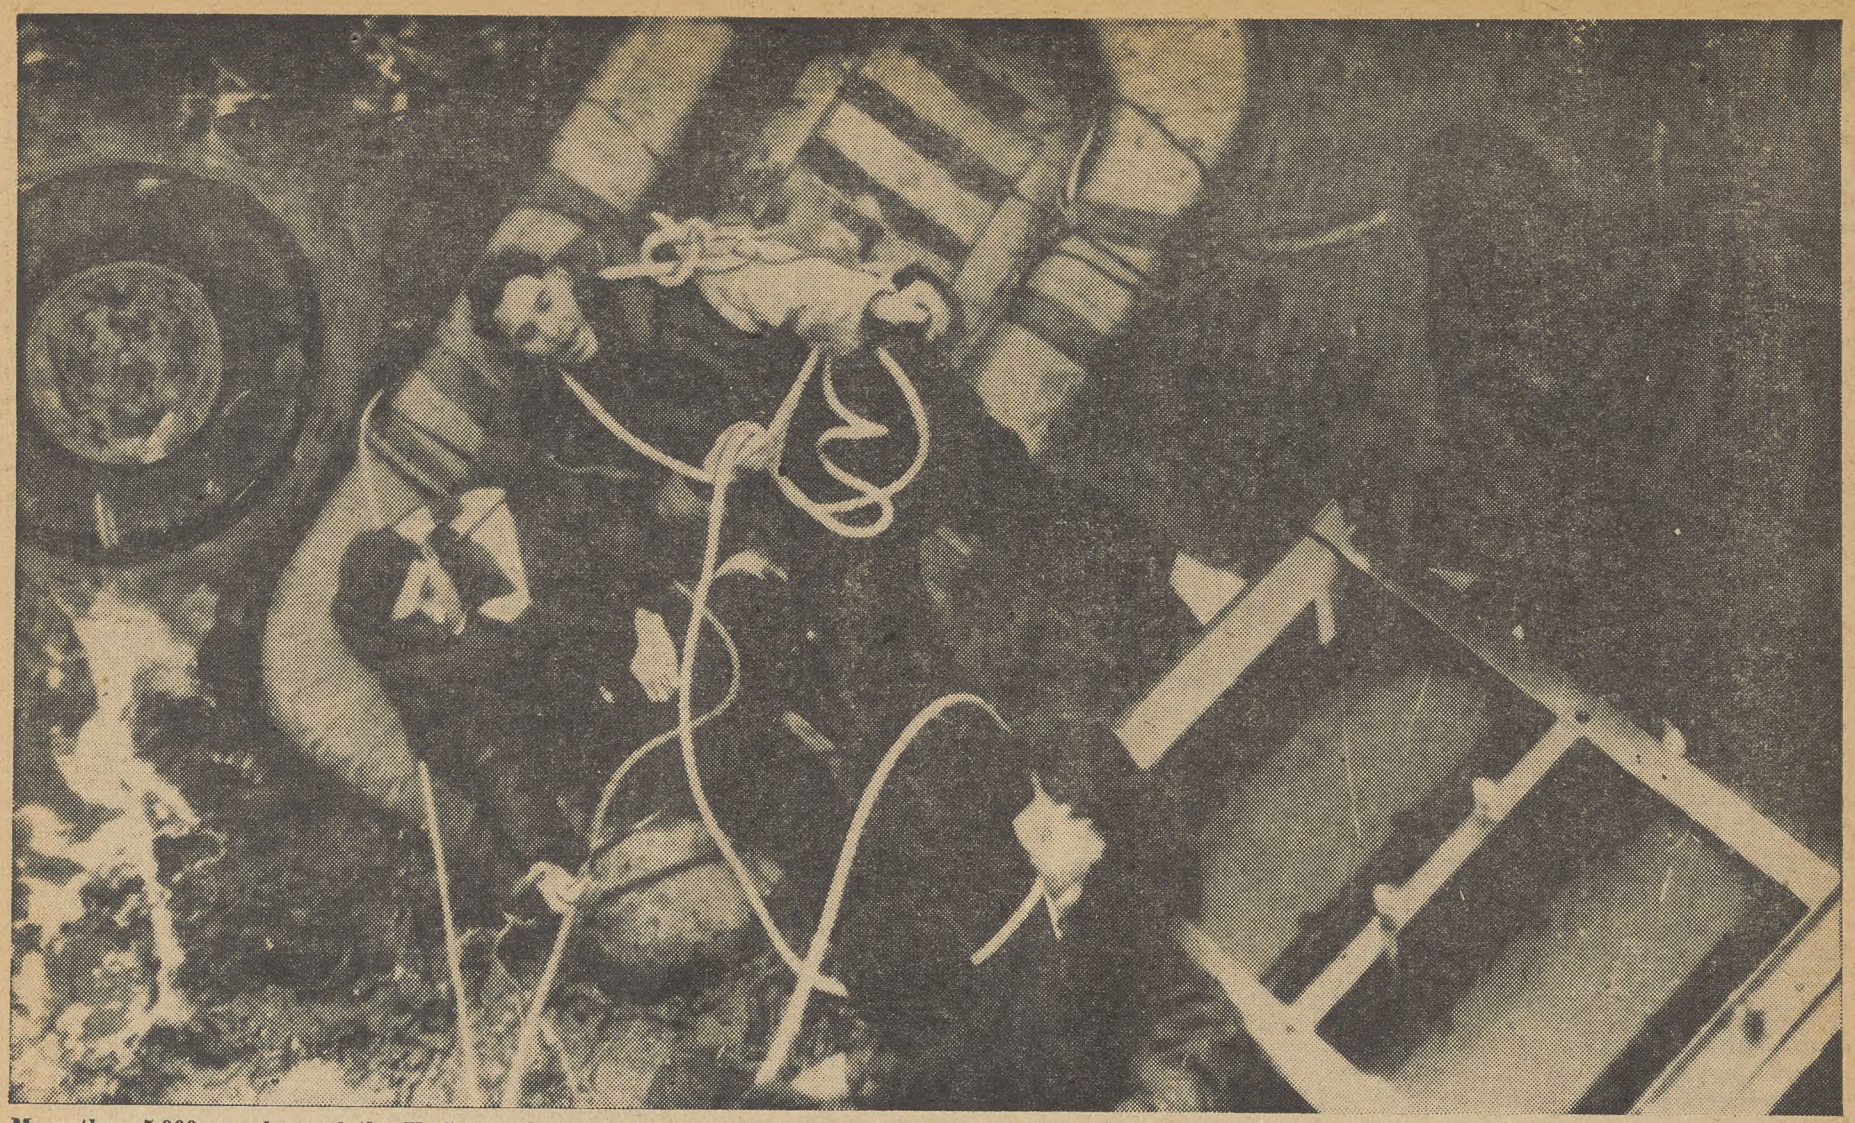
If the President decides that a plant should be seized under the bill, he may seize it for whatever reasons he sees fit.

If the President decides under the bill that a strike should be broken, he may break it for whatever reasons he sees fit. And he may break it on whatever terms he chooses.

A 50-year-old seaman with four children is not now subject to the draft but if the President should decide to draft him into the Navy for striking, the bill authorizes him to do so.

If he decides that workers should receive during the period of government seizure 5c an hour, he can force them to work for that amount. There are no standards in the bill to which the President must adhere and no provision is made for the courts to review his judgment.

We have just fought a bloody war to banish forever from the earth a system of slave labor operating under arbitrary military control. The President's proposal is a violation of the principles for which that war was fought.



More than 5,000 members of the U. S. merchant marine gave their lives to help win the war. Thousands of others were injured by bombs and torpedoes, by shock and exposure. Sample of what many had to endure is shown in this photo. Battered by mid-Atlantic wind, rain, waves, and haunted by the horror that perhaps they would never be found, two survivors of a torpedoed merchant ship strain the last bit of sheer nerve as they are helped aboard a Coast Guard cutter.

HEROES OF WAR ASK DECENT WAGES FOR FAMILIES IN PEACE

WORKERS in one of the most hazardous industries in America —who proved their patriotism in war—are negotiating with employers for the same standard of wage increases already won by millions of other organized workers.

In Washington this week, representatives of seven maritime unions—six of them CIO—laid joint demands of 200,000 members before shipowners and government.

The deadline for acceptance is June 15. On that day, if all unions have not negotiated satisfactory wage agreements, the maritime unions have voted to strike.

Some of the unions have been negotiating for more than seven months. They are fed up with delay. They do not want a strike, but they must protect their members' standard of living in a period of rapidly rising prices.

These are the unions (all CIO except the last): Natl. Maritime Union, Longshoremen & Warehousemen, Marine Cooks & Stewards, American Communications Assn., Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., Inland Boatmen, and Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders & Wipers.

WHAT is their war record? From the bitter run to Murmansk to the savage beaches of Iwo Jima, it is one of bloody sacrifice. Of them, General Douglas MacArthur said:

"I wish to commend to you the valor of the merchant seamen participating with us in the liberation of the Philippines. With us they have shared the heaviest enemy fire. On this island I have ordered them off their ships and into fox holes when their ships became untenable targets of attack.

"At our side they have suffered in bloodshed and in death. The high caliber of efficiency and the courage they displayed in their part of the invasion of the Philippines marked their conduct throughout the entire campaign in the southwest Pacific area.

"They have contributed tremendously to our success. I hold no branch in higher esteem than the Merchant Marine services."

Hazardous as their work was in war, it also is dangerous in peace. Longshore work, for instance, has by far the highest accident rate of any type outside manufacturing, even exceeding that for logging.

WHAT are these men asking for? Their basic demands, put forward by Joseph Curran and Harry Bridges, co-chairmen of the Committee for Maritime Unity, are:

1. A flat 22c an hour increase in pay for the lowest ratings and graduated increases up to 35c an hour for skilled ratings.

2. A 40-hour week and an eight-hour day at sea and in port, with overtime for all work in excess of eight hours.

3. Overtime payments ranging from $1.25 to $1.75 an hour.

4. Retroactivity to October 1, 1945.

The demands of the longshoremen, in addition to retroactivity, are:

1. An increase of 35c an hour and corresponding increase in the overtime rate.

2. Saturday an overtime day.

3. Elimination of carloading differential.

Other union questions governing working rules and conditions for the more than 200,000 maritime workers represented by the seven unions are to be negotiated after settlement is reached on the main issues.

Maritime leaders participating in the meetings with the U. S. Dept. of Labor and the shipping operators are Joseph Curran, president of the NMU; Harry Bridges, president of the ILWU; V. J. Malone, president of the Marine Firemen; Hugh Bryson, vice-president of the Marine Cooks & Stewards; Joseph P. Selly, president of the ACA; and Randolph Meriweather, business manager of the Marine Engineers. Representatives of the Inland Boatmen's Union are not present at the meetings.

THE Committee for Maritime Unity was established at a National Convention of Maritime Unions held at San Francisco from May 6 through May 11. The convention marked a highpoint in the long years of effort by maritime workers to achieve unity on a national basis behind their common demands.

A major decision reached by the 215 delegates to the San Francisco Convention committed all the unions, with the exception of the Inland Boatmen's Union, which is not now in negotiations with the operators, to take joint national strike action on June 15 unless the operators, with whom the unions have been negotiating individually for more than seven months, granted their just demands. The convention stipulated that all the unions were to go on strike and not to return to work until the main demands of each union were settled.

The convention set up a National Strike Coordinating Committee, which is composed of the members of the Executive Board of the Committee for Maritime Unity. This committee was instructed to apprise the World Federation of Trade Unions of the impending strike and work out details for obtaining world labor support in the event the strike is not averted.

In the event the strike takes place the convention decided that all ships will be struck with the exception of troop ships and relief ships, with agreement to be reached either with government or private employers to operate such ships under fair and equitable conditions.

SUPERSENIORITY KILLED

THE U. S. Supreme Court this week nailed down the coffin lid on superseniority, brain child of Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service Director, and the darling of union-busting employers who hoped to use the illegal memorandum to pit veteran against non-veteran and destroy unions.

The court's six to one ruling against superseniority ended CIO's two-year battle against the unlawful interpretation of the Selective Service Act during which the union took its story to the armed forces, veterans and the general public.

Clinton S. Golden, chairman of the CIO Veterans Committee, this week expressed the hope that "The Selective Service System will stick to the law and not attempt to lead into the Selective Service and Training Act meaning that does not exist there."

Superseniority would provide that an employer would have to give a veteran his old job back for a year, even though that means displacing a non-veteran with greater seniority.

The CIO first entered the legal arena to fight superseniority after Abraham Fishgold, veteran, brought suit in a Federal District Court in Brooklyn against CIO Marine and Shipbuilder Workers' Local 13 and the Sullivan Drydock and Repair Co., Brooklyn, claiming that he was illegally laid off while non-veterans with greater seniority remained on the job.

The District Court ruled in favor of Fishgold, but an appeal to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals brought a decision against him and for the union. The case then went to the Supreme Court, which in a ruling by Justice Douglas declared this week:

"We have searched the legislative history in vain for any statement of purpose that the protection accorded the veteran was the right to work when by operation of the seniority system there was none then available for him."

Lee Pressman, general counsel of the CIO, had told the court that superseniority would seriously disrupt industrial relationships and harm the veteran as well as the non-veteran.

M. H. Goldstein, Local 13's attorney, had argued that the contract under which Fishgold was laid off was made on the order of the Natl. Labor Relations Board and there was no evidence to show that Congress intended to amend the Natl. Labor Relations Act when it passed the Selective Service Act.

Hailing the decision Golden this week said:

"Ever since the superseniority theory was concocted by Selective Service in 1944, the CIO has fought it because it was contrary to the interests of veterans, organized labor and industry itself.

"It was contrary to the interests of the veterans because it would have benefited only a comparative handful of them for a year, whereas union contracts protect their seniority and job rights indefinitely.

